

Ehrlichman: President Ordered Ellsberg Investigation

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Grand jury transcripts revealed Monday that John Ehrlichman said President Nixon ordered the covert White House investigation of Daniel Ellsberg that led to the break-in at Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office.

There was no testimony from Ehrlichman to show that Nixon knew in advance, or approved, of the break-in.

Transcripts from Ehrlichman's June appearance before the grand jury were released under provisions of a court order that the testimony could be made public 10 days after the arraignment of the defendants indicted in connection with the break-in.

Gordon Liddy, the last to be arraigned, appeared in court two weeks ago. Also indicted were Ehrlichman and two other former White House officials: Egil Krogh and David Young.

Government Charges Two

The government charges that Krogh and Young directed the Ellsberg operation, including the break-in at the offices of Dr. Louis Fielding, acting in authorization from Ehrlichman. The operation was said to have been carried out by the "plumbers squad" under the command of Liddy, who is already serving a sentence for his role in the Watergate burglary.

The government charged Ellsberg, a former Defense Department researcher, with leaking the contents of the papers to the press.

According to the grand jury transcript, Ehrlichman replied "I think ultimately the President did" when he was asked who made the decision to investigate the leak of the Pentagon Papers.

Ehrlichman was asked whether he approved Krogh's recommendation that Hunt and Liddy be sent on such a mission after an FBI investigation proved unsatisfactory.

"I believe the recommendation was discussed specifically with the President before it was approved," he replied.

"By you?" Ehrlichman asked.
"No... as I say, I believe he (Nixon) specifically approved it and it's my recollection that he either discussed it with—well, I know he discussed it with Mr. Hoover," a reference to the late J. Edgar Hoover, director of the FBI.

Asked if he knew what methods Hunt and Liddy were told to use in the investigation, Ehrlichman said: "Only that they were to conduct themselves in such a fashion that it did not appear that the White House was directly involved in the act of investigation."

He said he did not know about the break-in until after it took place. He also said that Krogh told him the plumbers had rifled the psychiatrist's files, "had not found anything" and were "pressing to carry on further activities."

Ehrlichman said he told Krogh "the thing should be terminated, discontinued, finalized, stopped, and expressed my very strong disapproval."

Newsprint Going Up

TORONTO (UPI) — Abitibi Paper Co. Ltd. has announced an increase in the price of paper used by newspapers of $1.5 a ton, effective next Jan. 1. It is the biggest price increase for newsprint in 20 years.

Abitibi advised its customers of the price increase in a letter Monday. The price of newsprint in New York will jump from $175 to $190 a ton, and the Canadian price will jump from $166.75 a ton to $182.

In the past, when one company has announced a price increase the other companies have soon followed suit.

Industry sources had been speculating for a week that newsprint prices would be raised, in view of the massive labor disruptions in the paper industry and the high demand for newsprint.

Industry sources estimate that 400,000 tons of 1973's estimated 9.5 million ton production has been lost due to strikes. The daily loss is estimated at 7,500 tons.

Abitibi is the third largest newsprint producer in eastern Canada with a yearly output of more than a million tons. Its U.S. customers are mainly in the East and Pacific Northwest. "I wouldn't bet against its setting a pattern," said a spokesman for Consolidated Bathurst Ltd., another giant in the newsprint industry. "We certainly shall be giving it a great deal of study."

In 1952, the price for newsprint in New York was $121 a ton. In 1965, it rose to $134. Last January, there was a $5 per ton hike and another $5 per ton boost was made in August.

Pampa Distributors Not Yet Concerned

By TEX DEWEESE

Reports that the Amarillo area oil and gasoline shortage is expected to move into an additional pinch before long did not reflect serious concern today by wholesale distributors in Pampa.

Although Pampa service stations still are on the same monthly allotments of gasoline they received a year ago, indications are there is no further cutback anticipated in the immediate future.

One distributor said: "It's a new ball game every month, but right now we're not looking for further curtailment."

Some service stations reported they could sell more gasoline than they are getting but are closing on Sundays and at night in order to make their existing supplies last.

Under the allocation system now in force by major oil companies, a real serious shortage of gasoline has been avoided, although some service stations find themselves at the "bottom of the barrel" near the end of the month.

Wholesale dealers agree that currently there is no crisis in gasoline but the supply of diesel oil and propane is approaching the critical stage.

One local propane gas supplier said allocation had cut him to about half of the need to take care of customers.

Distributors were of the opinion that if the coming winter is a severe one the pinch in energy fuels will more than likely become worse.

President Nixon today ordered a mandatory allocation program for home heating oil and propane in an effort to soften the impact of threatened winter shortages.

The White House energy adviser, John E. Love, said the mandatory system of allocating propane gas under a priority program would become effective immediately.

Detailed regulations affecting heating oil will be announced and placed into effect in the near future, Love said. Other administration officials said it would take effect in a week or two.

The rationing programs will be administered by the Interior Department.

Love said it was clear the nation will experience some fuel shortages this winter and perhaps over the next few years.

The scarcity of home heating oil is likely to be most pronounced in the Northeast and the Midwest, while shortages of propane will be greatest in rural, food producing areas, Love said.

He said the purpose of the allocation system is to insure a more equal distribution of available fuels so that no single area of the country would suffer undue shortages.

The Greater Houston Service Station Association plans a meeting today to encourage more operators to close their stations to protest government price controls on gasoline.

Bill Newman, the association president, estimated 50 per cent of the city's 2,000 service stations closed Monday to start the planned three-day protest. He had earlier predicted up to 80 per cent would close.

Jail Escapees Arrested For Killing Six People

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — Six persons, including a minister and his two teen-aged children, were shot to death and two others wounded early today, and police said two escapees from a federal court jail had been arrested in connection with the slayings.

Police identified three of the victims, found in the bathroom of their home here, as the Rev. John K. Barnes, 47, his daughter Francine, 18, and his son John, 14.

Three men were shot to death and two men wounded at Fisher's Motel in Falmouth, Ky., about 80 miles from here in northern Kentucky across the Ohio River from Cincinnati.

Police said one of the victims was Wendell McKenzie of Hazard, Ky., who was treated at a hospital and released.

Police here said Barnes, his daughter and son were apparently shot in one section of their house and dragged into the bathroom where the bodies were stacked upon each other.

The girl was nude and may have been raped and the son was in a football uniform, apparently preparing for practice, police said.

Police at Fort Thomas, Ky., near Falmouth, arrested William Sloan, 24, Louisville, and Wilmer Scott, 35, Chattanooga, Tenn.

The two men, police said, were driving a car belonging to one of the shooting victims at the motel.

Police said they found two pistols and a shotgun in the car along with jewelry and $600 in cash which they said were taken from the motel.

All the guns had been fired recently, police said.

Authorities said the men told the night manager at the motel they were FBI agents looking for drugs and he apparently let them into one of the rooms. The occupants of that room and another room were robbed and shot, police said.

Sloan and Scott escaped from the court jail here Monday by sawing a bar from their cell.

A third escapee, Roy Collins, 24, of Lima, Ohio, broke his leg in a jump off the one-story roof of the federal building and was captured.

Police said after their escape, Sloan and Scott took Mrs. Robert Ewall as hostage, ransacked her home and took her car, after leaving her unharmed and tied to a chair.

The woman's car was found at the home of the Barnes family.

Kentucky State police said the men took a .22 caliber rifle, several kitchen knives and about $8 before leaving the Ewall residence.

Sloan and Scott were awaiting trial on kidnapping charges. They allegedly had taken a woman hostage when they broke out of the Fayette County jail last Nov. 20.

Defense Spending Approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Monday approved a $21 billion authorization bill for weapons after voting down 10 straight attempts to trim the total.

But the Senate did approve two amendments that the administration is dead set against. One demands a 110,000-man cutback in U.S. forces abroad and the other requires the European NATO states to make up the U.S. balance of payments loss or see some American troops pulled out of Europe.

Congressional sources said the State Department was fighting its hardest against the balance-of-payments amendment, as the bill goes to the House.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., introduced the amendment, which says that if the Europeans fail to cover 10 per cent of the U.S. balance of payments loss this year, the United States would withdraw 10 per cent of its troops. The percentage loss would dictate the percentage withdrawal.

On the floor, Jackson allowed his bill to be changed to direct the General Accounting Office, a branch of Congress, to make this calculation rather than the executive branch.

"That has them worried," one congressional source said, "because there are a lot of ways to define what goes into the balance of payments."

The Commerce Department says the United States spent $2.25 billion on its forces in Europe last year and that the Europeans only offset $460 million by arms purchases.

Mitchell And Kliendienst Interrogated On Charges

DALLAS (UPI) — Two former U.S. attorneys general and former acting FBI director L. Patrick Gray III today appeared in federal court to answer charges that the 1971 Texas stock fraud scandal was a Republican conspiracy to discredit state democratic office holders.

John Mitchell and Gray quickly brushed through a lobby crowded with newsmen and refused to answer questions about their pending testimony.

"Will you take the Fifth," a newsman asked as Mitchell slipped into the elevator.

"A fifth of what?" Mitchell replied. "A fifth of Scotch?"

Richard Kliendienst avoided the front entrances of the federal court house and quietly entered the courtroom through a back security elevator.

The three, all victims of the Watergate affair, were subpoenaed to answer charges that the Justice Department urged the Securities and Exchange Commission to file charges against Democrats in 1971 so the effect would be felt in the 1972 elections.

Six of the former Democratic officeholders named in the suit filed charges the stock fraud scandal was a Republican plot. The charges were filed in the court of U.S. District Judge William M. Taylor Jr. in reply to federal charges they were guilty of securities and mail fraud and conspiracy.

The defendants include Waggoner Carr, former Texas Attorney General, and John Osorio, former insurance commissioner. Others are Tom Mack, a Dallas attorney, Jarrell Ormand, a Dallas attorney, David Hoover, a Dallas businessman and Thano Dameris, a Houston attorney.

Also due in the court are Bradford Cook, former general counsel for the Securities and Exchange Commission; Henry Peterson, chief of the Justice Department's Criminal Division, and U.S. Attorneys Anthony J. P. Parisi and Charles Ruff.

The Justice Department Monday announced Peterson would appear to testify.

Carr last week requested that subpoenas be issued for tapes of White House discussions of the Texas stock fraud case.

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Two columns of rebel troops advanced on Phnom Penh in a broad arc south of the city today while west of the capital, 100 government troops reportedly refused to fight until they receive back pay and more food.

The insurgents inched toward the city after sealing off a siege ring around the refugee-swollen capital. Cambodian field commanders said the situation was "grave" and one officer said an estimated 1,000 rebels had massed on the south bank of the Prek Thnot River 11 miles south of Phnom Penh.

Commanders said government forces have lost four key outposts south of the city in the past four days during the rebel drive.

On Highway 4 about 33 miles west of Phnom Penh, field reports said a company of government soldiers refused to fight, claiming they were not receiving enough food and had not been paid in two months.

Church And State Issue Becoming More Emotional

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The general subject of schools—and the complex, emotional issues of church and state—is becoming a sticking point in interfaith relations among the America's three major organized religions.

The Roman Catholic Church's break with the rest of the mainline religious community over the issue of prayer in public schools widened a rift that has been growing for some time.

Since the Supreme Court banned state-prescribed prayer in public schools in 1962, the Protestant, Jewish and Catholic leadership had been united in opposing a constitutional change to permit voluntary prayers.

The board of the U.S. Catholic Conference, action arm of the church's American hierarchy, now has called for a constitutional amendment to allow both prayer and religious instruction in public schools and other public institutions.

Relations Strained
With Senate hearings in progress on a new prayer proposal, the Catholic shift could be crucial. In 1971, the last time Congress faced the issue, prayer proponents fell only 28 votes short of a two-thirds House majority needed for passage of the amendment.

Bishop James S. Rausch, general secretary of the USCC, said he did not believe the Catholic deflection would harm interfaith relations. But those relations are already strained over the issue of schools.

In May, Rausch quit the Interreligious Committee of General Secretaries over a rift that developed from a statement by the National Council of Churches opposing federal aid to parochial schools.

The Interreligious Committee is composed of representatives of the USCC, the NCC and the Synagogue Council of America and is a key instrument for interfaith communication.

The NCC statement argued in one portion that Catholics were unwilling rather than unable to provide support their parochial school system required.

Some Schools Closed
Although the NCC repudiated the section which was sharply critical of Catholic support of their school system, Rausch said the original statement "contained gratuitous and insulting assertions about the Catholic church."

Catholics have been pushing for federal aid to parochial schools to meet a tightening financial crunch on their religious education system. But so far, nearly all attempts to provide state or federal aid for either the schools or the parents of children in the schools have been rebuffed by courts as a violation of the constitutional provision on separation of church and state.

Many parochial schools have closed and more and more Catholic children are attending public schools. That may be a key reason for the Catholic shift on the prayer amendment.

The USCC's 28-bishop administrative board, in endorsing the concept of allowing prayer in school, also called for permitting religious instruction through such devices as "released time" in schools.

Rausch left open how vigorously the USCC would work for passage of the prayer amendment.

ment in absence of a provision for religious instruction.

If Catholics do push the amendment vigorously as an opening to an alternative to aid for parochial education—and Protestants and Jews maintain their adamant opposition—the always precarious state of inter-faith relations will be thrown even more off balance.

At the meeting, the group agreed to match Cabot employee's United Fund contributions dollar for dollar to the extent the contributions exceed the $8,000 pledge from the Cabot Foundation.

Bond said Cabot's local management's position was reached after considering the fine job local agencies supported by the United Fund are doing.

David Crystal, Inc. Is Wizard Of Seventh Ave.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Wizard of Seventh Avenue is David Crystal, Inc., the oldest survivor in an industry where the average life span of a dress manufacturer is only seven years.

In 1972, apparel manufacturers had a bankruptcy rate of 88 per 10,000 businesses, ranking fourth on Dun & Bradstreet's list of national manufacturing failures.

"You have to stay alert, move away from what once proved successful, and find something on the horizon to replace it," Vincent de Paul Draddy, chairman of the board of David Crystal, Inc., said. He has steered the company through the rise and fall of fashion since 1953 when he became president.

Founded in 1905, David Crystal has grown from a skirtmaker with 15 employees into a diversified coat and suit industry giant. With annual sales close to the $100 million mark, the house has 2,000 employees and six factories on the Eastern seaboard. Despite the apparel industry's reputation as a volatile business, General Mills acquired David Crystal in 1969.

Married Boss's Daughter
Having a grandfather like General Mills makes life very comfortable for his children, Draddy said. An Irish gnome of Seventh Avenue, the ebullient Draddy married David Crystal's daughter and joined the family business in 1933. He attributes his company's success to diversification within the apparel industry.

"Fashion is always going to change," Draddy said, "and diversification takes care of the peaks and valleys in our business."

Diversification has made David Crystal a pacesetter in fabric as well as fashion. In 1934, the company marketed the first synthetic, Cruisaline, a rayon developed by Du Pont. "Cruisaline was the turning point for David Crystal," according to Draddy. "We went straight up." The firm's most recent success with a fabric was double-knit dacron. Its spectator dress of this material is its biggest seller.

"Our strength has been with fabric rather than style," Draddy said. David Crystal makes exclusive fabrics for six or seven different customers and also sells materials in the open market.

Introduces Sports Shirt
David Crystal's willingness to try the untried resulted in several coups. In 1943, the firm became the first apparel manufacturer to go into women's separates under the Haymaker label. In 1947, David Crystal introduced the first men's sport shirts to the American scene. "President Truman's shirts were the result of what we did," Draddy said.

In 1950, Draddy agreed to market 2,000 La Coste tennis shirts brought to him from France by tennis star Billy Talbert. When the shirts failed to sell, Draddy gave them away to Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, and the Duke of Windsor. "Celebrities will wear anything," says Draddy. "They'll even take a hot stove."

Such stellar exposure finally intrigued the American public, and the La Coste shirt with its green alligator symbol became the base of the David Crystal sportswear empire. The company has 42 men who sell golf and tennis wear exclusively to U.S. pro shops.

Social Security Q & A

(Have you a question about social security? Address it to Howard L. Weatherly, Branch Manager, Social Security Administration, 1541 N. Hobart, Pampa, Texas 79065. You will receive an answer in this column of by mail.)

Q. I've heard that disabled people can now get Medicare at any age. Is this possible?

A. Disabled workers at any age, disabled widows between 50 and 65, and children who became disabled before age 22 can be covered by Medicare if the person is entitled to disability benefits under Social Security or Railroad Retirement. This Medicare coverage for the disabled person began either July 1973, or after a disabled person has been entitled to disability payments 24 consecutive months, whichever is later.

Q. I've raised my two grandchildren since their parents were killed in a car accident when the children were small. I've heard that when I retire next year, they can receive social security on my record. Is this correct?

A. A grandchild can become entitled on his grandparent's record if the child's parents are disabled or dead, and the child is living with and being supported by the grandparent when the grandparent retires, becomes disabled or dies.

Q. Is it true that Medicare coverage will now be extended to social security disability beneficiaries?

A. Yes. Individuals who have been receiving social security disability payments for 24 consecutive months will be entitled to hospital insurance benefits beginning July, 1973. They may also enroll in the doctor part (supplementary medical insurance) of Medicare for months beginning July, 1973.

Unskilled Able To Assemble Gas Turbines

ROUND ROCK, Tex. (UPI)—Ordinary unskilled laborers are assembling 135-ton gas turbines, thanks to a state-operated training program.

Manager Don J. Leonard of Westinghouse hopes when all his farmboys are trained, the newly-completed plant will manufacture the lowest cost turbine systems in the world.

Westinghouse knew the market for skilled labor would be scarce when it decided to locate its gas turbine plant at Round Rock three years ago.

"There isn't a great abundance of technical people that know a lot about gas turbines," Leonard said. "The only major disadvantage to the selection of this site was the absence of a trained labor force."

"It's one of the first times a company has moved a major facility requiring highly skilled people into an area where there is no source."

Leonard went to the state government and an agency called the Texas Industrial Commission with his problem.

"Their initial reaction was they didn't have enough money. And the state didn't have an organized training program."

Both parties felt it would be everyone's advantage to hire residents of the area. To make a long story short, the Industrial Commission brought in the Texas Education Agency, which planned curriculum for training the labor force. Central Texas College in Killeen agreed to develop the curriculum into a two-part, 17-week training program and Westinghouse happily obliged with tuition money for the trainees.

No Extra Pay For The Judge

AUSTIN (UPI)—Attorney General John L. Hill Monday ruled the county judge of Hill County cannot get extra pay as the county veterans service officer.

Hill said the state constitution prohibits a person from holding more than one "civil office of emolument" at the same time.

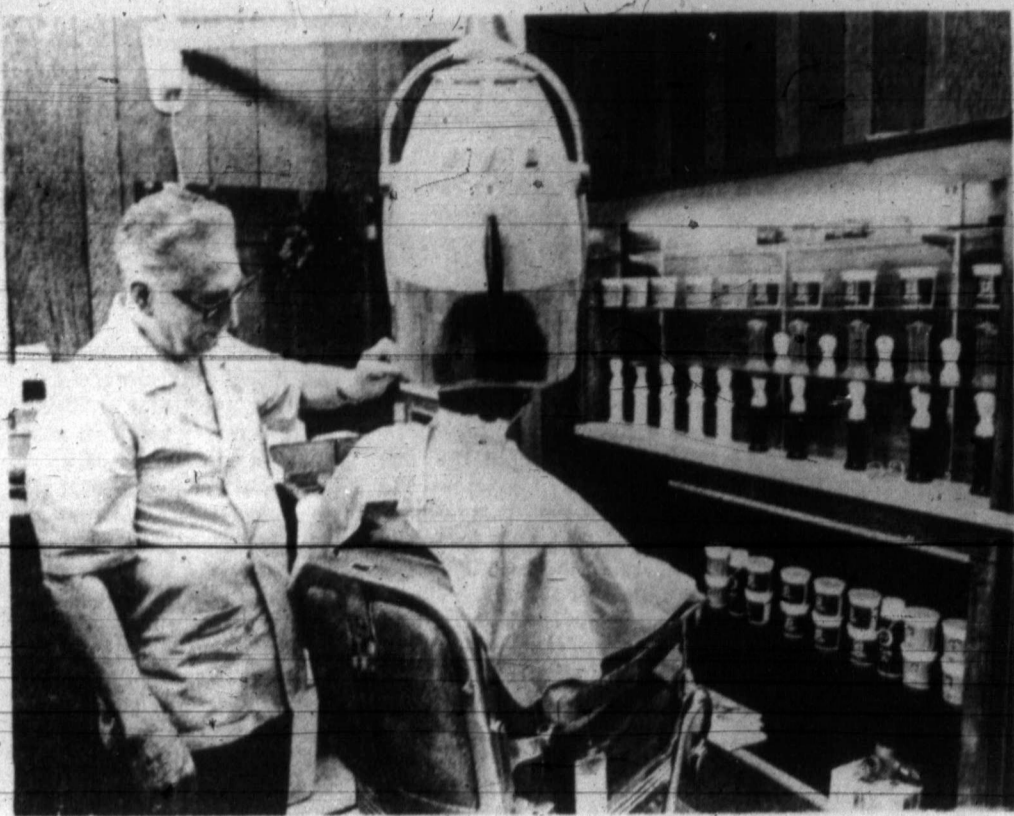

The attorney general said statutes providing for county commissioner to appoint the service officer to help veterans obtain benefits require that the officer be paid.

KEEPING IT TRIMMED—Bob Clements has learned the latest techniques in hair styling and cutting to aid his customers in maintaining a better appearance. The hair dryer shown above is part of the equipment in the shop to aid in better styling. Call Bob Clements for an appointment. 665-1231.

A NEW LOOK — Clements Barber Shop has been given a new look. Bob Clements remodeled the shop to enable his customers to enjoy their trip to the barber even more than they already do.

Clements Barber Has New Look

Bob Clements has remodeled his barber shop at 310 S. Cuyler in an effort to bring better things to his customers. A new appearance to the shop does not in itself improve the customer's appearance. But it can help.

Part of the remodeling includes a hair dryer installed in one of the two cubicles. Used in creative hair styling, the

Detroit Mayor Ticked Off At Film Company

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Hinzoner Roman S. Gribbs, mayor of Detroit, is angry with a movie company for advertising a new film in which the city is billed as "The Murder Capital of the World."

He fired off a telegram to General Film Corp. which read in part:

"I am appalled and strongly object to the national advertisement being done for 'Detroit 9000'... In discussion with my staff you specifically promised that the crime problem in Detroit would be presented truthfully and that there would be no inflammatory advertisements... I demand that you and your studio immediately stop such sordid (sic) ads."

Gottlieb Replies — Producer Don Gottlieb replied: "As long as murder rates second only to automobiles as your city's major industry, we will continue to quote Time magazine's line, calling it the Murder Capital of the World... We will also continue claiming that in Detroit, quote, honkies are in the minority, unquote. When you change the city we will change our copy."

Actually, Mayor Gribbs' annoyance has provided a windfall of publicity in Detroit and elsewhere for a movie that is otherwise undistinguished. Gottlieb, therefore, is not incensed. But he is firm, saying, "The mayor is objecting to the ads, not the picture. But he did say the picture was garbage, the company (General Film Corp.) is garbage and the ads are garbage. But we never discussed the ads with his people."

In keeping with the spirit of wholesale bloodshed, Gottlieb and his picture, "Detroit 9000", dispatches 20 individuals, most of them by shooting, in the adventure drama.

In a five weeks shooting schedule in Detroit they knocked off 20 characters, which Gottlieb claims is considerably below the Detroit average.

In five weeks time in that city they murder each other to the tune of 70 or 80," he said.

Since Mayor Gribbs' censure, business has been somewhat more brisk than previously. The movie has regained two thirds of its cost in Michigan alone.

Inasmuch as the picture cost considerably less than $1 million, Gottlieb must feel some small debt of gratitude to Mayor Gribbs for the plugs.

dryer can be pushed out of the way when not in use. More mirrors are present to enable the customer to better see the improvements that Clements has done to his hair.

With new paneling, carpeting and lighting, it's even more of a pleasure to be waited upon at Clements Barber Shop.

Clements also has a Capilloscope which he uses to analyze hair. It can't help to grow hair, but it can help to keep the hair healthy and to give it lustre.

A barber since 1946, Clements said he appreciates the help he received to make the remodeling possible — the carpenters, plumbers, electricians, bankers — and every customer for the past 27 years.

With training at Amarillo, Tyler and Dallas, Clements has become one of the most popular barbers in the area — with customers from Miami, Wheeler, McLean, Canadian, Pampa and other Panhandle points.

In an effort to provide better service for his customers, Clements has kept up with the latest trends and methods of haircutting and styling, always looking forward.

Clements doesn't claim to have a Fountain of Youth, but he does feel a styled haircut and a scalp massage can help one look and feel younger.

While he can't restore hair that has been lost, he does feel he can help a person to retain the hair he has.

Handling a line of Roffler's products, Clements has received an award for being the best Roffler salesman in the Lubbock — Amarillo — Pampa area.

The natural look is Clements' specialty, but he does regular barbering as well as styling. So if you're looking for aids to a more youthful appearance or if you're young and want to look your best, drop by Clements Barber Shop or call 665-1231 for an appointment in the new surroundings.

Is your insurance man sharp or flat?

By Carlton Smith

That old blues song, "A Good Man Is Hard to Find," has been revived by Pennsylvania's commissioner of insurance with a slight change in the title.

"A good insurance man is hard to find," he laments. So he's making it easier for the citizens of his state to find one by distributing "rate your agent" checklists, one for life and health agents, another for property-liability agents.

Most of the checklist questions apply equally to either kind of agent. And certainly it's true, as Commissioner Herbert S. Denenberg says, that "a good agent can be worth his weight in gold; a bad one can be a disaster."

So we'll pass along a condensed version of his checklists, hoping it will enable you to find one of those nuggets of gold.

Zero in first on the general professional qualifications of an agent or broker. As a very minimum, he should make it his full-time business. "Avoid part-timers and the incompetent brothers-in-law."

Is he well-established as an agent, or with a well-established agency? Does he have at least four years' experience in the insurance business? And finally, if he's a thorough professional, he'll have done the course work and passed the exams for a CLU designation (Chartered Life Underwriter) or CPCU (Chartered Property and Casualty Underwriter).

The agent or broker with such professional qualifications will in all likelihood meet the pragmatic tests of a good insurance man.

Can you reach him when you need him — or do you get just an answering service, or a phone that rings without answer? Does he return calls or answer correspondence promptly?

Does he do more than just send you bills every so often? Does he touch base, at least once a year, to see whether you need changes in your insurance program, changes of beneficiaries, etc.?

Does he explain your policies in such a way that you really understand them? Explain cost and coverage differences between companies. Does he compare the cost of life policies in terms of interest-adjusted cost?

Does he explain the use of deductibles, in property and auto policies, to reduce premium costs?

Has he ever made any suggestions that reduced the amount of your premiums?

When you have a claim, does he help to see that you're paid promptly and fairly?

For your agent to get a passing mark, says Commissioner Denenberg, you should be able to answer "yes" to at least 67 per cent of these questions. That's "not an acid test, of course," he says, "but it may give you a good idea of what you should expect from an agent."

Finally, there are a couple of negative indications that may, by themselves, constitute a test:

Does your agent make a habit of adding on service fees, or other extra charges, over and above the premium?

Does he require you to buy life insurance, or homeowners coverage, as a condition of getting auto insurance? "If an agent tries this," Denenberg suggests, "you probably have the wrong agent."

Is it realistic to expect an insurance man to give you the kind of personalized service stipulated by this checklist? Or is it simply a fact of life — as Denenberg admits that some will argue — that in this age of the computer and mass marketing, the sellers of insurance no longer render personal service?

"We're old-fashioned enough to think that they should," is the commissioner's position, "and that some still do."

Only "some," mind you. A good insurance man is still hard to find.

But, as torch singer Helen Morgan used to remind us, a good man of any kind is hard to find. That's life.

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Farmers Training To Assemble Gas Turbines

ROUND ROCK, Tex. (UPI) — The natural gas turbines manufactured by Westinghouse at its newly-completed plant weigh 135 tons, are blueprinted in a computer and are assembled by grocery clerks and farmhands.

Manager Don J. Leonard hopes when all his farmboys are trained the plant will manufacture the lowest-cost turbine systems in the world.

Westinghouse knew the market for skilled labor would be scarce when it decided to locate its gas turbine plant at Round Rock three years ago.

"There isn't a great abundance of technical people that know a lot about gas turbines," Leonard said. "The only major disadvantage to the selection of this site was the absence of a trained labor force."

"It's one of the first times that a company has moved a major facility requiring highly skilled people into an area where there is no source."

Leonard went to the state government and an agency called the Texas Industrial Commission with his problem.

"Their initial reaction was they didn't have enough money. And the state didn't have an organized training program."

Both parties felt it would be to everyone's advantage to hire residents of the area. To make a long story short, the Industrial Commission brought in the Texas Education Agency, which planned curriculum for training the labor force. Central Texas College in Killeen agreed to develop the curriculum into a two-part, 17-week training program and Westinghouse happily obliged with tuition money for the trainees.

"The amount of money that we've got in the pot compared to what the state put in is astronomical," Leonard said. "But of course we're the direct beneficiary."

Now, Edward J. Brosch, 21, who used to sack groceries for a living in Taylor, Tex., is operating a machine that cost millions to build, and Albert G. Walther, 31, born and raised on a farm at Wier, Tex., punches code into a computer to operate his giant boring mill.

"Christmas two years ago I was flat on my back in bed — sick. I decided then I needed to go to work for some company that was concerned about me," Walther said.

Walther heard about the Westinghouse program and enrolled. He now works 37½ hours a week at wages ranging between $3.63 to $5 an hour.

Brosch was one of several employees of the supermarket in Taylor who enrolled in the Westinghouse program.

"I had 50 to 60 hours of college credit from Temple Junior College and I got 16 hours credit out of this program. Now I've got a good job and I'm planning to get married. I've got a pretty good idea now where I'm going and why," Brosch said.

Leonard said the success of the program should encourage the state to find similar projects.

"We haven't had any disappointments in the trainability of any of our people from the Central Texas area. So it's been a mutually beneficial program."

Investment Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — "Evidence that a bull market is developing is growing daily," according to Merkin & Co., Inc.'s Technical Trends of the Market. Although the possibility of a moderate pullback still remains strong, "there are signs of group rotation which may keep the action alive for traders," the letter says. It advises investors to buy some stocks now and to add to holdings during dips.

The recent federal court decision holding IBM in clear violation of the Clayton Anti-Trust Act "must have made at least a small dent — and perhaps an eventually deep one — in the 'one decision stock' investment that has led more and more institutional portfolio managers to concentrate their investment preferences on large corporations," it adds.

Science Today

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Dr. Myron L. Fox stepped to the podium and, with a winning smile, began a one-hour lecture on "The Application of Mathematics to Human Behavior," spicing the subject with anecdotes and humor.

The University of Southern California audience was made up of educators with degrees ranging up to Ph.D. They nodded sage agreement as Fox went through the intricacies of his subject matter.

When the learned lecturer had concluded and gone through a question and answer period, his listeners filled out a questionnaire rating Fox on his performance. Almost all were glowing in praise.

"Excellent presentation... Extremely articulate... Good analysis of subject... Did not carry it out far enough for me... One educator disagreed... Too intellectual," he criticized.

It was a Hoax. It came as no satisfaction some week later for the educators to learn that Fox was a little-known Hollywood character actor with not the faintest knowledge of his topic who had been coached to deliver the lecture by two professional colleagues.

"The lecturer... had been coached to present his topic and conduct his question and answer period with an excessive use of double talk, neologisms, nonsequiturs and contradictory statements," said a treatise in the journal of the Association of American Medical Colleges.

"All this was to be interspersed with parenthetical humor and meaningless references to unrelated topics."

Two Conclusions Drawn. The experiment was carried out by Dr. Donald H. Natfulin, a USC associate professor of psychiatry. Dr. John E. Ware, assistant professor of medical education at the University of Illinois, and Frank A. Donnelly, an instructor in psychiatry at USC.

The experiment drew two conclusions: — Educators must guard against the danger that a personable presentation may result in satisfying students but not educating them.

— Study might be given to using actors as lecturers so long as they presented solid subject matter.

The treatise noted that even after some of the educators were made aware of the hoax their reactions "ranged from curiosity to disbelief" while some insisted "Dr. Fox" still "stimulated interest in the subject matter."

FUNNY BUSINESS

Dear Abby

Family thief is caught
—purple-handed

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote that a member of her family had been consistently stealing money out of her purse—fives, tens, twenties—but she had no way of knowing for sure who the guilty party was. You suggested that she keep her purse locked up.

I have a better idea, which I used when we had that problem in our house. I got some gentian violet crystals from a pharmacist. It's an invisible powder which when sprinkled on an object will leave dark purple stains on the hands of anyone who touches that object. The stains are impossible to wash off—they must wear off.

I carefully dusted some money with this powder. The next day the money was gone—but the culprit showed up with purple hands! If you use this letter, please omit my name. The thief in our house has learned his lesson. SHERLOCK

DEAR SHERLOCK: Thanks for the suggestion, but to catch a thief purple-handed, one needs the cooperation of a physician, because I'm advised that a prescription is required to obtain gentian violet crystals.

DEAR ABBY: I have this favorite Aunt Edna who lives out of town. Last Christmas she sent me a lovely personal gift, but she didn't send my husband Al anything. She is not an ignorant woman, so I can't understand her actions.

Al is very fond of her, and I knew he'd be hurt if he knew she forgot him, so I bought him a very expensive tie, had it gift-wrapped, and told him it was from Aunt Edna.

I write all the thank-you notes, so Al assumed I thanked Aunt Edna for the tie.

The few times during the year we saw Aunt Edna I was scared to death Al would say something about the "beautiful tie" she sent him, and she wouldn't know what he was talking about.

I don't want her to forget Al again this Christmas, but I haven't the nerve to tell her. Please help me.

DREADING CHRISTMAS

DEAR DREADING: Come right out and tell Aunt Edna how you covered for her last Christmas, and ask her please to remember Al this year because he is so fond of her he'd be hurt if he knew she forgot him.

DEAR ABBY: I am 74 years old and have been a widow since the age of 29. I raised 5 children and 12 grandchildren, and what a thankless job I had.

My biggest problem is loneliness. But the reason for my loneliness is the fact that I am poor. Young people today don't want us older folks around unless we are well fixed and can do for them.

I have a sister who married well. She is two years older than I am, and she has never known a lonely hour. Her children and grandchildren flock around her like bees. She is always handing out money and presents, and they treat her like she is some kind of queen.

I have nothing to give, so I am ignored. I am not helpless yet, and God forbid I ever should be, because I'd be dumped into a state home and forgotten. Money is power.

FASHIONETTES

By United Press International
Super new fashions for super-sized juniors— from Lane Bryant's new mail order catalog. The "Young Looks" fashion collection in the Bryant fall catalog includes:

—Eighteen pages offering short-and-long dresses, coats, sportswear, lingerie, shoes, accessories and pants. What's more, coats and dresses are offered in a new size range: LB Juniors 15 to 29.

— "Young Looks" encompasses what's current and stresses the soft, easy construction that's especially flattering to a fuller figure, say the Bryant fashion coordinators. A bottle green pantsuit, for example, is done in soft, shimmering satin with palazzo legs, a long jacket and an elegant blouse—very "30's" indeed and quite right for the not-so-small junior.

— A beautifully-tailored coat bears the unmistakably neat shirt look of Valentino—even to the V-detached pockets. In bright red, it validates the idea that any color is right for today's super-sized woman.

STITCHIN' TIME
Wrap up a great winter

By Judy Love

Big news for needleworkers! Sweaters are bigger and better than ever this season, particularly the bulkies.

You needleworkers have a jump on fashion's finest looks for the great outdoors. You can work your own versions of the great big, cuddly cardigans with more color, more texture and matching caps and knit hats.

This snugly shawl-collar sweater wraps up for a lean, loose and long silhouette that takes long walks in the winter snow, skis down a mountain or tops off a skirt or slacks for excursions to the city. The pull-down hat with ear-flap panels ties under the chin.

This big crochet features a roll shawl collar that softly shapes down into a V neckline. A four-color striped pattern bands the arms, bodice and bottom of the sweater and trims the snug little hat. There's lots of room for warming layers of clothes underneath. The full-fashioned raglan armhole shaping and self-belted wrapup front styling let you bundle up without that weighed-down feeling of being overdressed.

This sweater team works up quickly for sizes small (32-34), medium (36-38) and large (40-42) in Bernat's "Krysta" yarn for sturdy textured crochet with a handsome Scandinavian look. The wool colors are as rich and earthy as a native landscape and your finished sweater pops in the washing machine for easy, breezy care.

Needleworkers, kick off your winter games in sweater style. Easy-to-follow directions are available by just sending 50 cents to Stitchin' Time, c/o this newspaper, Radio City Station, Box 503, New York, N.Y. 10019. Ask for leaflet S378 and be sure to include

The with-it winter wrap-ups this season are sweaters that are bigger, bulkier and better than ever. This news item for needleworkers is a cozy-crochet shawl-collar textured bulky with a self-tie belt and matching, ear-warming hat.

of st st to the depth your pattern requires and knit as follows. Row 1 (right side): K 1 + w to make 1, k 2 tog, rep from + to end. Row 2: Purl. Continue in st st working same number of rows as the beginning of hem. Now fold at the picot row to create a serrated edge. To finish sew the cast on edge to the main work on the wrong side. Quite easy, but a lovely finishing touch. Happy knitting! Judy.

Dear Judy: Do you have any fancy finishing tricks up your sleeve you might pass along to me? Am looking for a decorative hem to finish a baby's sweater and bonnet for my niece's little one? Any suggestions?
Thanks so much. A. R. Concord, N.H.

Dear A. R.: Have just the trick you're looking for. It's called the picot hem, which is a simple scallop border that's easy-to-work but is delightfully decorative for a baby's clothes. It also can be used for garments that require an elastic edge, such as collars or knit hats.

Bridge game score table with columns for NORTH, WEST, EAST, SOUTH (D), and various card counts.

West opens the 10 of diamonds. East wins and returns the jack of spades. South rises with the ace; discards the two losing spades in dummy on his good diamonds and winds up losing just three tricks.

If North and South are not playing JTB; North will wind up in four hearts. East will make his normal opening of the spade jack and there will be no way to keep the defense from scoring tricks with the king of spades and the aces of the other three suits.

New York To Play Cincy For NL Title Following 6-4 Win Over Chicago's Cubs

CHICAGO (UPI) — Tug McGraw summarized it best. "We never gave up," he said. "We all felt that if we could have a healthy ball club, we could be a good ball club. But when you have all those injuries, it seemed to get worse with every one and it was very demoralizing."

But after the New York Mets' National League East Division championship-clinching 6-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs Monday, McGraw described the elation in the champagne-sprayed dressing room.

"It's a great feeling to have had to struggle," he said, "like climbing a glass mountain and finally to be able to find some pine tar and lay in on that mountain and get to the top."

The Mets' victory in the first game of a scheduled doubleheader gave New York 82 wins for the season, one more than St. Louis had attained and one more than Pittsburgh could attain. The Mets won the title, advancing to the National League playoffs in Cincinnati Saturday with the fewest victories ever achieved by a championship team in major league baseball.

The triumph represented a climb from last place, 12 games behind, in July to the pinnacle, and Manager Yogi Berra declared "we had to jump over everybody. The players wanted to win and they hung in there and bounced back. It was a team job."

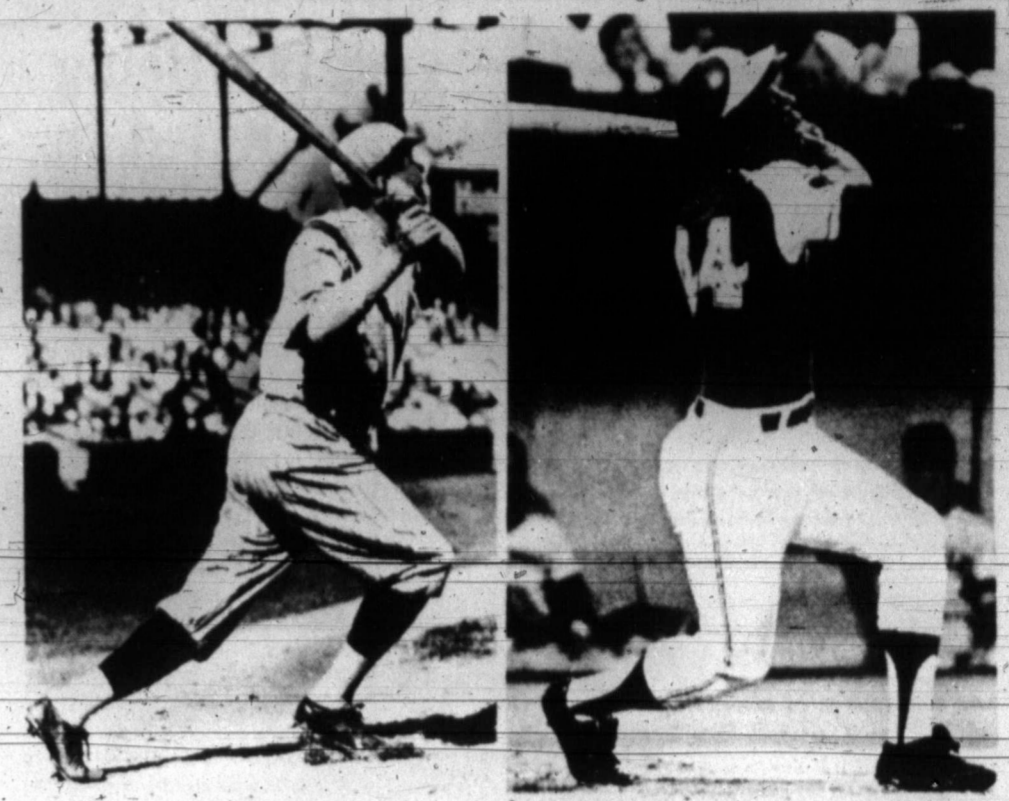

Berra particularly cited

McGraw, whose save Monday was his 25th of the season giving him 11 saves and 4 wins in his last 16 appearances. But Berra declared Felix Millan, his "only every day ball player." Rusty Staub, who had four hits in the pennant-clinching win, Wayne Garrett, Bud Harrelson and Cleon Jones as major factors.

"We're a team," Jones said. "That's in a nutshell. I never worried. The Cubs had it and couldn't stay there. St. Louis had it and couldn't stay there, but they've got a lot of heart and hung in there."

"I didn't want the Pirates to get up there, because they're an awesome hitting club, and if they get eight in front, you're dead."

"We do the little things," he added. "We've already proved to a lot of people that we're a good club, and now we've got to prove it to Cincinnati."

TWO OF A RARE KIND, Babe Ruth, left, and Hank Aaron are far and away the most prolific home run hitters in baseball history. Aaron appears certain to pass Ruth's career total but the Atlanta slugger will have to wait until next year to do it. Aaron has hit 713 homers, one short of tying the record; and Atlanta's season ended Sunday against the Houston Astros. (NEA Photo)

Lions Overwhelm Atlanta, 31-6

DETROIT (UPI) — The Detroit Lions hope to turn their season around with a reverse. A reverse, utilizing two wide receivers, is what Detroit pulled off for two Monday night touchdowns.

Meanwhile, the Lions' off-criticized defense was pulling a reverse of its own, bashing and battering the Atlanta Falcons into 31-6 submission.

The game was carried on local television as well as nationally since all of the 54,418 tickets were sold. However there were 8,819 "no-shows."

Wide receiver Larry Walton went 57 yards on a reverse the second time Detroit got the ball and that play set the pattern for the entire surprising evening.

The other surprising wide receiver, Ron Jessie, worked the same thing to get the Lions' final score from nine yards away.

"You usually do that when you get a turnover," Walton said. "Didn't we recover a fumble just before that?"

The answer is no, Atlanta had just converted a 28-yard punt by Herman Weaver into a 48-yard field goal by Nick Mike-Mayer and then kicked off. Walton worked the reverse on the sixth play.

Mel Farr took over at that point during the soggy evening. It began raining hard just before the half and kept it up until just before the game ended.

Farr was subbing for fullback Steve Owens, who suffered a

Lakers File Breach Suit To Retain Wilt

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Lakers, claiming breach of contract, filed a suit in Superior Court Monday to prevent Wilt Chamberlain from playing basketball with the ABA San Diego Conquistadors this season.

The action had been expected since last week when it was announced Chamberlain had been signed as a player-coach by the Conquistadors. He was still under contract as a player with the Lakers, via the option clause.

Later Monday, a suit was filed in San Diego on behalf of Chamberlain and the Conquistadors aimed at getting a quick decision on whether the 7-foot-1-inch giant will be able to play with the ABA club in 1973-74.

The Los Angeles suit filing was done on behalf of California Sports Inc., owner and operator of the Lakers.

The Lakers are not seeking any monetary damages in the suit. However, they asked for a court order barring the big center from playing with any other team than Los Angeles in the new season.

Chamberlain said the suit asks damages and declaratory relief and is based on the Cartwright Act, which is aimed at protecting the rights of players.

Robert Caplan, one of the attorneys involved in the action, said the Lakers had filed for a temporary restraining order in Los Angeles to stop Chamberlain from playing with the Cubs.

The suit was filed by the owners of the Conquistadors, who are a member of the American Basketball Association.

Chamberlain is expected to be in San Diego by the end of the week to begin training with the Conquistadors.

Dupree Named Most Valuable Dallas Cowboy

DALLAS (UPI) — Tight end Bill Joe Dupree, the first rookie to become a starter with the Dallas Cowboys since 1970, was named the team's most valuable player Monday for his performance in Dallas' romp over St. Louis last weekend.

Dupree caught six passes and scored three touchdowns in the Cowboys' 45-10 victory and was awarded the game ball.

Dupree was the Cowboys No. 1 draft choice last season out of Michigan State. He is the first Cowboy rookie to become a starter since 1960 when Cliff Harris and Duane Thomas turned the trick.

"He has a lot of work to do, a lot of hard work, but he can be a tight end, a great one," said former tight end Mike Ditka, now a Cowboy coach. "He has to improve his blocking and I think he will."

Dupree almost caught seven passes in the Cardinals game, but he dropped one throw.

"He had that one drop and as good hands as he has, this shouldn't happen," Ditka said. "I think he just took his eyes off the ball."

"But the kid really has potential. He needs a lot of work on his techniques. He also has a great ability to fight ends down — the ability to catch the ball in a crowd. Nothing disturbs him. He can also run when he gets the ball. When he started he'd get hit and go down but not now. He's hard to bring down."

Cues' owner Dr. Leonard Bloom said the suit asks damages and declaratory relief and is based on the Cartwright Act, which is aimed at protecting the rights of players.

Robert Caplan, one of the attorneys involved in the action, said the Lakers had filed for a temporary restraining order in Los Angeles to stop Chamberlain from playing with the Cubs.

Pirates Angry With 3rd Place

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The Pittsburgh Pirates were angry and disappointed about their third-place finish in the National League East. Young Gene Clines was perhaps the angriest and most disappointed of all.

The reason for the Pirates' October doldrums was a 4-3 loss Monday to the San Diego Padres, second worst team in baseball. That — coupled with the New York Mets' pennant-winning victory over Chicago — spoiled Pittsburgh's shot at a fourth consecutive NL East pennant.

San Diego rookie Randy Johnson threw a five-hitter before yielding to reliever Mike Corkins with one out in the ninth, and won the game with a sixth-inning double that scored Fred Kendall.

With the outcome of the New York-Chicago game already known, the smallest crowd ever to watch the Pirates in Three Rivers Stadium — 2,572 fans who sat through occasional rain — saw Pittsburgh blow a chance to tie St. Louis for second place. The loss cost each Pirate between $500 and $600 in post-season playoff and World Series earnings.

"It was the end of all my disappointments that began at the beginning of the season," said Clines, 26, who was denied a chance to start in center field early in the season because of former manager Bill Virdon's decision to send catcher Manny Sanguillen into right field.

A subbed Willie Stargell, who led both the National and American leagues with 44 home runs and 119 runs batted in, sat on a training table and talked quietly with newsmen.

"It's a strange and eerie feeling, losing," whispered Stargell. "All of a sudden, it's all over."

"We just blew it," said Sanguillen, whose wild throw in the fifth inning let Dwayne Anderson score and tie the game at 3-3.

Murtaugh had the final word. "There was not much we could do about it after the Mets won their game," he said. "But I'll be back next year with full enthusiasm."

Buster Record Best Cowboy At High School

Dumas' Buster Record won his second consecutive All-Around Cowboy title by scoring 22 points, winning calf roping and then teaming with Mickey Parsons of Dumas to win the team roping event in the annual Pampa High School Tri-State Rodeo, which concluded Saturday night at Recreation Park.

Tammy Cleveland of Dumas scored 13 points and won the All-Around Cowgirl trophy in the rodeo, which was won by the Dumas High School boys' and girls' teams.

Two Pampa entrants placed highly in their respective events. Debbie Baggett placed third in barrel racing with a time of 16.984 seconds. Miss Cleveland won the event with 16.877 seconds. Jimmy Baggett finished fourth in bull riding with 54 points. The event was won by Ross McKillip of Muleshoe with 58 points.

Leo Durocher Quits

HOUSTON (UPI) — Leo Durocher, a baseball fixture for almost half the history of the sport, bowed to the wishes of his wife Monday and resigned as manager of the Houston Astros.

He said he was leaving baseball for good.

"Baseball has been 45 years of a wonderful life," said Durocher, manager of four National League clubs and one of the most colorful figures the sport has ever known.

"But I have got a lot of things to do now. I'm going out to Palm Springs and I'm going to tee it up and play a lot of golf. I'll be back to visit the boys."

When pressed, however, as to whether his departure from the Astros could be looked upon as a retirement, he just said:

"Yes."

Houston General Manager H. B. "Spec" Richardson quickly filled the vacant managerial post with Preston Gomez, a coach for the Astros under Durocher and a former manager of the San Diego Padres.

"I tried to talk Leo out of it," said Richardson. "I regretted his decision."

Durocher, 67, had taken over the Houston job late in the 1972 season when Richardson fired Harry Walker. The Astros finished second in 1972 and this year had been expected to challenge for the National League West title.

Instead they wound up in fourth place with an 82-80 record, 17 games behind Cincinnati.

Twice during the season Durocher was hospitalized with an inflamed intestine, but he said his health was not a factor in his retiring.

"Hell, I feel fine," Durocher said. "My wife had been after me to resign, though. She did not want me to come back this year in the first place. She had a lot to do with it."

Gomez had no advance warning he would be chosen for the job. He was busy packing for a job hunting trip to Los Angeles when Richardson called him to ask Gomez if he wanted the job.

"I went to his office and Leo told me he had resigned," said Gomez, 50. "Spec asked me if I wanted the job and I accepted it. Then Leo walked out."

Gomez managed Houston during Durocher's hospitalization this season. The Astros had a 14-2 record under Gomez. At San Diego, Gomez' teams finished last all three full years he was there. He was fired 12 games deep into the 1972 season.

Durocher, a member of the famed "Gas House Gang" at St. Louis during his playing days, became player-manager for the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1939. He jumped to the New York Giants as manager in 1949 and 11 years after he left the Giants in 1965 he was hired to manage the Chicago Cubs.

Definition Of 'Amateur' Discussed By Olympians

VARNIA, Bulgaria (UPI) — The definition of amateurism, an issue which has always dogged the Olympic movement, today set up a head-on clash among delegates at the 10th Olympic Congress.

On the one side, were some international sports federations and their supporters on the International Olympic Committee who favor an almost semi-professional rule, and on the other the remaining sports federations and their supporters who believe a relaxation of the amateur code would spell the end of the Olympic movement.

The International Ski Federation (FIS) has brought matters to a head by submitting a proposal which would allow Olympic competitors to be paid for any loss of income incurred while they practice their sport.

The proposal sets down four basic principles to govern the Olympic rules:

—The right of the international federations to decide the duration of the training periods of their active competitors.

—The right of the international federations to establish the compensation for the loss of a competitor's income.

The lone right of the international federations to establish regulations under which any scholarships may be granted to competitors.

The lone right of the international federations to establish regulations for exploitation for advertising purposes of competitors' names, pictures and sports performances.

The proposals were expected to get a rough ride, according to several IOC sources who pointed out that both IOC President Lord Michael Killanin and his predecessor, Avery Brundage, considered the FIS in particular a bad example of the Olympic spirit.

Today's second working day of the congress—the first to be held for 43 years—also will tackle the question of the admission of China and the exclusion of South Africa and Rhodesia, according to the agenda.

The congress can pass no resolutions or even make recommendations, only discuss issues, however. Any concrete steps will have to be taken later this week when the IOC meets privately.

Ex-Harvester Back Aids Frosh Attack In Oklahoma Win

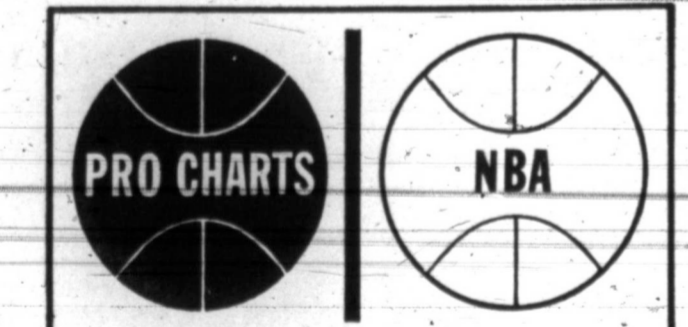

NORMAN, Okla. — Pampa's Richard McCampbell, in his first outing as a collegian, played a big role in the Oklahoma freshman team's 32-6 victory over the Arkansas Shoats Sept. 24.

A crowd of some 2,000 fans watched the Boogers of coach Don Jimerson roll up a total of 354 yards rushing. McCampbell added to that total with his 35 yards on the ground in only six carries. He was the Boogers' third-leading rusher.

McCampbell topped off a scoring drive of 82 yards in eight plays with a three-yard touchdown plunge giving Oklahoma a 25-6 lead with 7:98 left in the final quarter.

During that drive, McCampbell had runs of 7 and 11 yards to sustain the Boomer drive. He carried the ball four times on the OU 18-yard line.

The Boogers will meet the Tulsa Gales in their next game Oct. 22 at Tulsa.

6 — Capital Bullets

NBA — Central Division

1972-73 finish: W 52, L 30 — 1st place

PROSPECTUS: The Bullets may have moved downroad but they have not gone downhill. They shifted from Baltimore to Washington. But they still have the same outstanding personnel. Last year, Archie Clark, star guard, held out for a better contract for the first 40 games of the season. This early season disorganization may have resulted in the Bullets' losing 4-1 to the Knicks in the first round of the '72-'73 playoffs. Like trouble early this coming season. Again Clark. This time, though, he has suffered a shoulder separation and will be lost for the first eight weeks of the season. New coach K.C. Jones is worth watching. If they need an added impetus, it is the red-white-and-blue motif in uniforms, seating, stadium decorations and everything else concerning the new team. Someone said he didn't know whether he should guard a Bullet or salute him.

FORWARDS: Elvin Hayes, first-team All-Pro, has learned that passing is not as odious as he once thought. He tried it and liked it, somewhat, last season. His teammates liked it, too. He is still a great shot and great rebounder. Mike Riordan came on strong and is still improving. RATING: A

CENTER: Wes Unseld is one of the steadiest players in game and one of the best team players. But at 6-9 he is still too small to be a great offensive threat at center. RATING: B plus

GUARDS: Clark, a second-time All-Pro, and Phil Chenier provide a formidable backcourt. Early, though, Riordan may go to guard until Clark is healthy. Sometimes the Bullet guards lose their poise, as they did in playoffs vs. Knicks. Rich Rinaldi showed potential. Vet Flynn Robinson can still sink buckets in spurts. RATING: A-

PREDICTION: The Bullets will not be able to catch the fast-improving Hawks, despite some of the best personnel in the game. They will remain known as an individualistic team, and they will remain same, unless K.C. Jones can work some special magic, as his former Celtic teammate Bill Sharman (for whom Jones was once an assistant coach) did with the Lakers.

Man Being Tangled In His Success

By BRUCE BLOSSAT
WASHINGTON (NEA) — Deluged with crushing dilemmas which require a greater "coming together" than ever before within and among nations, the peoples of the earth are atomizing into steadily more useless fragments — as if blown to bits by some mammoth nuclear holocaust.

It is not really the peril of that holocaust which today most endangers man. It is of all things, man at peace — plunging at breakneck pace along the path of scientific advance, consuming the earth's life-support systems with more than his usual recklessness, baffled at the unlooked-for problems he finds on the great plateau of plenty called Affluence. Imagining most of the time that the plateau was flecked with gold, touched by the purest of gentle breezes, cleared of the rocks and brambles which made his long climb so much a struggle, modern man is tugged to discover that his rich reward carries with it the risk of destroying much that he strove for.

He was looking for personal peace and comfort, for time to rest from labor and enlarge the pursuits of leisure. He sought a widening of his satisfactions. He counted upon great new range for his freedoms.

Battling upward so frantically, competing so steadily (even unto war) with his fellow humans near and far, he never seemed to realize he was paying only part of the cost. He tore large parts of the earth bare of its support, seldom restoring, little realizing he often was setting in motion irreversibly destructive processes.

Though the unpaid cost of his wasteful gouging of the globe was accumulating relentlessly, it was with great suddenness that he felt the weight of his burden.

Awash in the marvels of the industrial and scientific revolutions, he can't believe it. The great cities, the crown jewels of the modern age, decay even as they thrust up defiant new glass towers — and bog down in congestion, a contagion of incompetence, an almost mindless chaos.

Television's electronic window shows the miracle of a man on the moon. Looking out of his real window, his earthbound cousin sees the debacle of uncollected garbage.

Power is short, and brownouts grade into black. Fuel, the wonderful engine of the affluent world, is threatened. Then even food, taken for granted in zones of plenty, begins to vanish from the table or soar space-high in price.

The affluent peoples, always a bit blind and deaf to the billions of poor for whom the miracle proved elusive, hear more insistent voices from the poverty zones. Even in well-off lands, rewards are grossly uneven and the clamor for governments to narrow or close the gap grows stronger.

Western society, made more rootless and freer by affluence and the disruptions of war, begins to fragment in ways the world has not seen for centuries. Atomizing becomes epidemic. The particles, individuals, groups, nations, fly apart. Disillusioned with governments and compacts, which promise much and deliver little, they move into strange, polarized separations just as their total mass makes the need for new, imaginative, common course of action highly imperative.

The outsider, from Mars, knowing our goals, might think, properly, that we've never had so much affluence and freedom. But he would quickly see we don't understand either one.

Capacity shortage hobbles economy

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Our economic problems stem in part from the failure of the federal government to recognize the problems of industry.

Officials have assumed that regardless of what pressures they put on farmers and businessmen — anti-pollution, price controls, huge overseas credit programs, production restrictions — the men and women who run these concerns could take up the slack.

We are now finding this is not so. The social desirability of some of these government measures does not ease the difficulties.

It is clear that the inflation, the weakness of the dollar and the scarcities of key agricultural, industrial and consumer goods come because there is a shortage of capacity and of the materials to fuel needed production.

A number of foods, including wheat, may be higher in price and more difficult to get in the future because of a shortage of fertilizer, which in turn is due to a shortage of gas which is because gas companies have found it unprofitable to expand exploration and production sufficiently.

The shortage of petroleum in part is a shortage of refining capacity, in some measure due to the low profitability of refineries, uncertainties over environmental regulations and the environmental fight over the Alaskan pipeline.

The shortage of electric power is to a degree a result of stiff new anti-pollution requirements and confusion over what the future holds. The shortage of low-pollution coal needed for power plants is intensified by a lack of knowledge as to what mining practices will be allowed, in view of the new emphasis on preserving the landscape.

Calculations by the research staff of the Federal Reserve Board indicate that in the first half of 1973 the rate of capacity utilization in plants producing steel, cement, aluminum, synthetic fibers, paper, paper board and in petroleum refining was at the highest level in more than two decades.

The board found that in many of these key materials producing industries there has been little growth in productive capacity of late. For several years, productive capacity in paper and petroleum refining has grown less than 2 per cent a year. Only one new petroleum refinery has opened since 1969. In five years, cement productive capacity has hardly grown at all. In the last one and one-half years, not one cement plant has been brought into production.

Officials producing new regulations with abandon have not paid attention to the problems some key industries face because environmental programs have caused shortages of many basic materials American industry needs to raise output.

Environmental controls have delayed the building of new factories, have caused the

Percy's Pollution Solution

We don't know what make of automobile Sen. Charles Percy of Illinois drives, but it's a good bet he's driving one of those little compacts or at least plans to switch to one.

Otherwise, his proposed legislation to place a big special tax on all automobiles getting less than 20 miles per gallon of gas wouldn't make much sense. He proposes to drive the makers of "luxury" autos out of business. By 1976, as Percy sees it, all autos which get five miles per gallon or less will be taxed a maximum of $381 per car.

But by 1981 — that's just eight years away, the autos which have a fuel efficiency rating of less than 25 miles per gallon will be taxed $1,090 per car.

Now this outlandish idea suggests to us that the good senator from Illinois has gone off the deep end. We realize of course that "ecology" is the "in thing" for politicians these days, but usually their "solutions" have some redeeming qualities. Sen. Percy, however, has flipped out on this one.

There probably are not a dozen automobiles available today whose gas mileage exceeds 25 per gallon, and most of these are imports. It is apparent that auto buyers are economy-conscious because sales of such cars are increasing.

But the bulk of the market remains with the "gas guzzlers." Sen. Percy's bill would price these out of the market and deal a severe blow to the auto industry which means jobs lost to thousands of workers.

Sen. Percy's proposal would help solve the air pollution and gasoline consumption problems, we suspect, because that would put the bulk of the people on bicycles or walking.

That's what they do in Red China, where, we are told air pollution isn't too much of a problem.

'Hands Off' - Fine Advice

Treasury Secretary Charles Shultz's suggestion that presidential adviser Melvin Laird "keep his cotton-picking hands off economic policy" is the best advice that we have ever heard from the lips of a government official. Now if Shultz would also keep his hands off economic policy, we would be getting somewhere.

For as long as this country has been in existence, there has been a popular notion that the government should arbitrate the transactions of the marketplace. Reduced to the village level (where you can see the principle better), this would mean that the policeman who directs traffic on the corner should occasionally stroll over and interfere in the negotiations between merchant and customer.

To be sure the policeman and the government have a role in the marketplace. That is the same role that anybody else has — as a buyer or as a seller. Properly speaking, the government is only a hired agency to keep down fraud and violence. As everyone else has his job, so the government has its job. The fact that the government packs a gun (which we allude to here as a symbol of ultimate authority) does not broaden its rightful jurisdiction.

The marketplace, an inclusive term that represents jobs, goods, services, and grade, does not function well when a third party butts in without invitation. Although Secretary Shultz's comment sounded a trifle irritable, he happened to be correct. Laird shouldn't butt in. Neither should Shultz.

Sure Weapon Overlooked

Human psychology being what it is, there's a fair probability President Nixon could take the wind out of the Edwin committee's sails, cut the ground from under his detractors and bury the subject of Watergate once and for all.

Instead of getting up on his high-horse of executive privilege in answer to the committee's request for tapes of White House conversations, and certainly instead of taking it as an attempt to "get" him personally or politically, he ought to commandeer three hours of prime time on all radio and television networks and proceed to play the darned tapes — unedited, just as they were recorded, with all the ums, ahs, ughs, harrumphs, coughs, false starts, pauses, background clatter of doors opening and closing, pencils drumming on desks and papers being shuffled.

To be sure, listening to a president's private conversations would be a fascinating thing — for a few minutes. But to endure the long stretches of dullness there must inevitably be, to attempt to make sense of cryptic references in White House verbal shorthand to people and things the average person never heard of in hopes of hearing something really exciting would require the stamina and dedication of a truly born eavesdropper.

Most Americans would be asleep before the first hour was up. And there would be no reruns of the "Watergate Tapes."

Volunteer Army Jeopardized By Fall Off in Enlistments

By ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON — Those alarmingly persistent sizable monthly lags in enlistments are giving rise to some serious second thoughts about an all-volunteer armed force.

Not that restoration of the draft is imminent. Far from it. Directly concerned congressional and Pentagon leaders aren't thinking in those terms — yet!

But they are decidedly worried about the markedly adverse volunteer enlistment record to date, and are uneasily pondering what to do about this critical national defense problem.

All are agreed something has to be done. The big question is — what?

Rep. F. Edward Hebert, D-La., forceful chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, is quietly undertaking to find a possible solution. He has directed the staff of his investigation subcommittee to compile a comprehensive study of the situation — as the basis for full-scale public hearings if the findings warrant.

The veteran legislator makes no bones of his long-standing misgivings about the feasibility of the volunteer concept. He readily concedes it's "desirable," but contends, "It's not practical, it's Utopian. The only way you can have a volunteer armed force is to draft it."

Alarming Showing
The enlistment record up to now definitely bears chairman Hebert out.

The Army has fallen short of its recruiting quota every month this year — by an average of around 10,000 a month. In April only half the quota was obtained, and in August it was 17,000 short. Authoritative word is that September recruiting results will be little, if any, better.

And that isn't all. In quality and racial mix, a considerable proportion of the Army's enlistments are below established "norms."

Instead of a minimum of 70 per cent being high school graduates, the Army has managed to get only around 58 per cent. And in the last three months more than 20 per cent of recruits have been black as against the overall black population of 12 per cent.

The Navy's record is slightly better — but far from anything to cheer about.

The service did make its quota in August — for the first time this year. Overall, the Navy has been able to recruit only five men of the six required. And even this was accomplished only by lowering standards — with subsequent costly and embarrassing personnel headaches.

In striking contrast, the Air Force and Marines have done exceedingly well.

Both have regularly met monthly enlistment goals — with the Air Force outdoing the Marines. By Sept. 15, not only had the Air Force attained the full quota for the month, but a large percentage of October's. Further, the service did this while rigidly adhering to all its quality requirements.

The Marines, however, gave some ground on that. Instead of 65 per cent high school graduates, it got only 54 per cent.

But even this spotty military manpower record has cost a lot of money.

In the defense budget, there is $3 billion solely for establishing an all-volunteer force. And of that huge sum, $2 billion is for the Army alone.

Incidentally, military manpower is now the single largest item in the defense budget — $44 billion (56 per cent). And it will be even more if a proposed pay raise goes through.

A recruit now gets $307 a month, as against $115 four years ago. A sergeant with four years' service is paid $458.10 a month, plus $9.90 a month clothing allowance, and a rental allowance of $81.50 if single and $121.50 if married. Four years ago, sergeants got $343 a month.

Also being spent by the Army is $303 million to "improve living conditions" for enlisted men, and another $800 million for "services" for them and their families. And the service is putting up more than $102 million for civilians to replace GIs in a number of housekeeping and other maintenance jobs — kitchens, garages, sanitation, utilities.

Still On Deck
While revival of the draft is wholly improbable in the foreseeable future, the legal basis for that is immediately at hand if and when "it becomes necessary."

Not generally realized is that the basic draft act is still on the statute books. It did not expire when the induction authority did — June 30. That died, but not the draft law itself.

And neither did the Selective Service System, which also remains intact.

It is part of the draft law and, like it, will continue operative but in a dormant state — in what is known technically as "preparedness posture." The Selective Service agency, the director and some personnel are still functioning.

Once a year, they will conduct a draft lottery in which numbers will be selected for possible call-up in the event of an emergency. However, for such an induction, Congress would have to enact a new induction statute — that is, in effect, reactivate the basic draft law.

In its present dormant status, the annual draft lottery will be limited to 50 numbers.

Those youths will be required to take physical exams and be classified. Should a national emergency arise and Congress authorize induction, they would be the first called up.

Itching Again
Former Sen. Eugene McCarthy, D-Minn., apparently is demonstrating that old saying, "Once a politician always a politician."

In 1970, the poetry-reading Minnesota voluntarily quit Congress saying that after 22 years in those marbled halls, he had had enough.

Not remarkably, McCarthy is dropping hints he is considering running for Congress again in his old home state of Minnesota.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The world's longest artificial seaway is the St. Lawrence Seaway which covers a distance of 189 miles from Montreal to Lake Ontario. The World Almanac notes. The project cost about $470,000,000, and was opened April 25, 1959. It was dedicated by President Dwight D. Eisenhower and Queen Elizabeth II on June 26, 1959.

Alcohol, first of all, does provide a lot of calories. If you are regulated to a given amount of insulin for a particular diet, remember it changes your calorie intake. Apparently it is not converted to glucose. It can be converted to fat in normal people, and often is in the person who drinks too much. In the absence of insulin it tends to go the metabolic energy route of fats, thus producing more ketone bodies. Besides that, it is potentially damaging to the liver — which also is a problem for diabetics anyway.

Cartoon Character, Creator Each Had Humble Beginnings

EDITOR'S NOTE — The cartoon character which this article describes became a regular feature of The News comic page yesterday. Around for over 35 years, he has been a favorite of millions.

A handsome profile, a pleasing personality or that indefinable something called sex appeal seemingly are the staples out of which are fashioned the stars of the entertainment world.

There's one exception, he's a raucous, irascible being whose voice is almost always raised in petulance or anger. Not only that, but his big belligerent eyes, big mouth and scrawny neck would scarcely endear him even to the most prejudiced mother. But he's loved by millions.

To pour salt on this tale and pin our bird down, he's none other than the terrible-tempered Donald Duck. Since his birth in the early 30s, the dour drake has become everybody's fine feathered friend.

Though he first appeared in motion pictures, Donald has reached his greatest height of popularity as a newspaper comic character.

Proof of this is that an estimated 30 million readers follow his adventures daily and Sunday on the comic pages of the papers of 37 different countries. To accomplish this latter feat, he's translated into 16 different languages. Ever try to say "quack, quack" in Yugoslavian?

Donald has come a long way from his humble beginnings just as did his creator, Walt Disney. Disney arrived in Hollywood at the age of 23 wearing a jacket and trousers that didn't match and with a scarcely more impressive bankroll of $40.

The willful web-footed one started out as an extra in a

Pampan Receives Scholarship

Miss Sylvia Grider, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R.C. Grider, 1620 Fir, has received a scholarship from Alpha Gamma Delta's Founders Memorial Foundation to complete course work for a Ph.D. degree from Indiana University at Bloomington.

Miss Grider received BA and MA degrees from the University of Texas where she was a member of Alpha Gamma Delta. With folklore and archeology as her major interests, she spent the last three summers on an archeological "dig" in Greece under the direction of the Indiana University Folklore Institute.

She taught in an inner-city elementary school in Dallas for three years following graduation from Texas and then was home in Pampa for several months following a serious illness before enrolling at Indiana.

Her interest in Texas history and folklore have been recorded in articles which have appeared in yearbooks, journal volumes and forums. She has read original papers at folklore conventions and meetings. In the spring of 1974 she will take qualifying examinations in five fields of proficiency and next year write her dissertation.

Mrs. Wallace Birkes, 2356 Aspen, is a member of the University of Texas chapter of Alpha Gamma Delta. She is a past undergraduate editor of the Fraternity's quarterly and currently Texas state chairman of the Fraternity's activities.

Alpha Gamma Delta was organized at Syracuse University in 1904 and has chapters on more than 100 college campuses in the United States and Canada, each with an Alumnae Chapter and there are more than 100 Alumnae Clubs in other cities.

Pilot Not Hurt

WICHITA FALLS, Tex. (UPI) — A jet trainer piloted by a German Air Force ensign crashed a mile north of Sheppard Air Force Base Monday. The pilot ejected and suffered only minor injuries.

Air Force spokesmen said the T38 trainer was being flown by Karl Fuchs and was on a routine exercise. Fuchs was admitted to the base hospital for observation.

The plane crashed in a field and there was no property damage. A board of officers will investigate the accident.

Earth fractures from the Mid-Atlantic Ridge cut across Iceland. The spreading ridge adds nearly an inch a year to the island's width.

picture and they hadn't planned on giving him another role after that.

It all started back in 1933 when Disney heard unemployed actor Clarence Nash on an amateur hour radio show imitating a girl duck reciting "Mary Had a Little Lamb."

The zaniness of it intrigued the master and he forthwith hired Nash. He was on the payroll for a year before Disney discovered how to use him.

They were making a cartoon about "The Wise Little Hen" who wanted someone to help her plant corn. Disney invented an uncooperative boy duck.

Thus, Donald was hatched and Nash found an outlet for his imitative talent. He was still unnamed at this point and his character hadn't formed.

Then he was tapped for a Mickey Mouse cartoon in which Mickey (then king of the Disney lot) was conducting an amateur show. Donald did a recitation in the short and was booted off the stage by the cartoon audience.

Squawking like a busted foghorn, Donald flew into a violent temper tantrum; and, apoplectic with rage, told off the non-appreciative audience.

He practically upstaged Mickey out of the picture and thus Donald became a regular of the Disney stock company. By 1937, he was a star in his own right and out-drawing the old champ in fan mail.

With the world his duck pond, it was only natural that he would expand his activities. So in 1938 he waddled his way to King Features Syndicate and signed a contract, quacking in a bellicose manner that he'd be sensational. He wasn't wrong.

Between Jan. 24th and Feb. 11th of that year, 96 clients signed up — an all-time record for a newly announced cartoon feature in that short period of time.

And he was increased at such a rate since then that you can follow his newspaper adventures whether you're in Finland, India, or Ceylon, provided, of course, you understand the local language.

The Gas House Gang-duck seems to appeal to something universal in all of us because of his child-like ability to brassily sound off at his frustrations in any situation. And who wouldn't like to do that?

Though still eccentric and raucous on the screen, in the daily and Sunday comic strip he has calmed down a bit. Oh, he still suffers frustration, but this is mostly at the hands of his nephews, Huey, Dewey and Louie.

Daisy, his fiancée, also has had a hand in simmering down the famed Duck temper but no matter how old Donald gets, he'll still be impetuous. And still be funny.

Publisher Says Baker Has Talent For Fiction

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., co-chairman of the Senate Watergate committee, is working on a novel and another book about his philosophy of government which Doubleday & Co. plans to publish. A Doubleday editor said today Baker "really does have the capacity to write fiction."

Baker has been working on the novel since the 1950s, senior editor Thomas B. Congdon Jr. said.

"The guy really does have the capacity. It may sound very surprising, but the guy really does have the capacity to write fiction," Congdon said.

"He has a gift for writing," Congdon said Baker shared with Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., chairman of the Watergate committee, the gift of telling a story to prove a point.

"I think it's particularly southern in phenomenon, storytelling, and that's all a novelist does."

Doubleday is negotiating with Baker for the two books to be published, with Baker to receive an advance payment of more than $100,000, Congdon confirmed. No contract has been signed, but the negotiations are at an "important" stage. "We're just ironing out details," the editor said.

The novel concerns a young Tennessee lawyer who is elected to the U.S. Senate, but Congdon said it had nothing to do with Watergate. Baker began work on the novel in the early 1950s "so obviously it does precede Watergate by a couple of decades," he said.

The nonfiction book still is in the planning phase.

"The senator says it deals with the whole range of the principle of government, the things he's interested in," Congdon said. "How he will do that we don't know exactly yet."

Skelly Oil Co. Employee Takes Early Retirement

SKELLYTOWN — Wilbur J. Spain, former Skelly Oil Company manufacturing department employee, has taken early retirement from the company.

Spain joined Skelly November 30, 1940, as a laborer at the Cunningham gasoline plant in Kansas. He held several other positions there before transferring to the Schafer gasoline plant in 1945. In 1960 he began working as an engineer at the Kingsmill gasoline plant and moved to Skellytown in 1963. He has been on disability leave since September 1971.

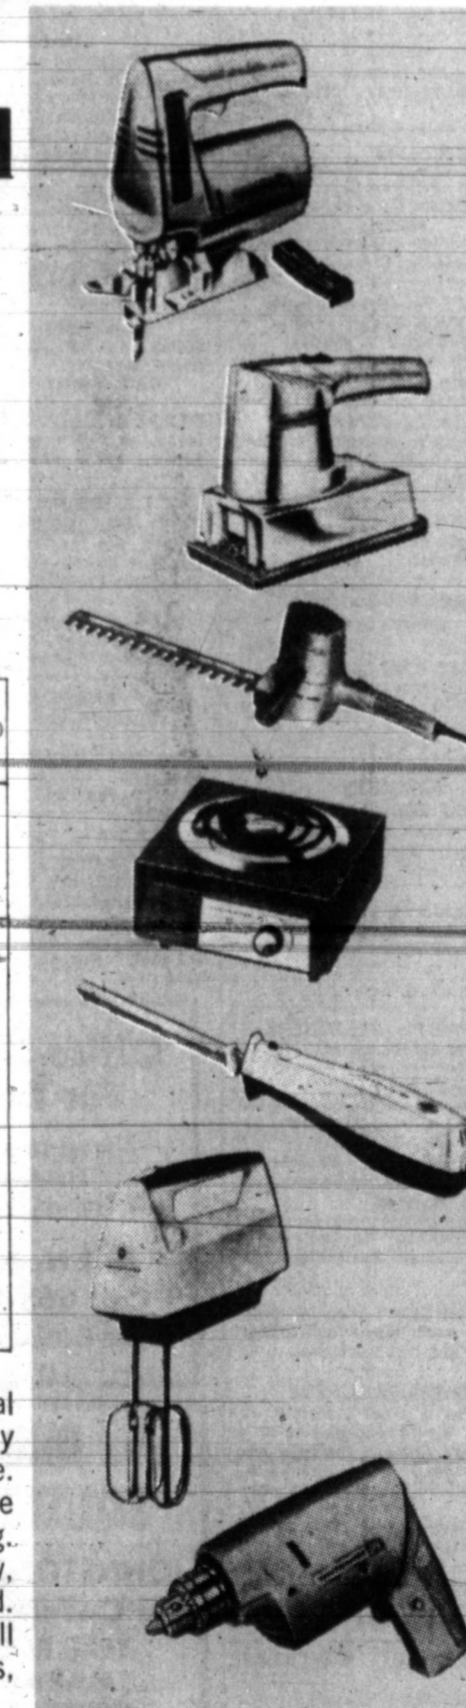

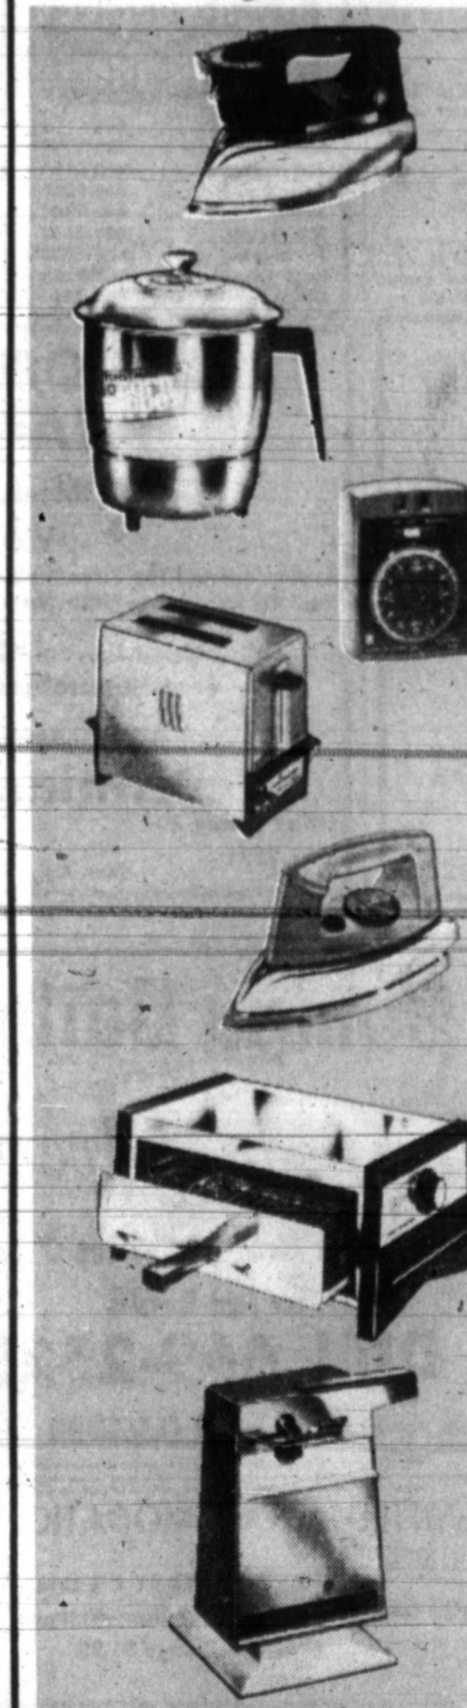

A member of the Baptist Church and the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Pampa, Spain is a U.S. Army veteran.

Spain and his wife, Dorothy, have four daughters, Sibyl Abbey, Janice Wesley, Sharon Were and Diane Pierce.

Winners' guests HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jonathan Winters lined up Bill Cosby, Donald O'Connor, Dr. Joyce Brothers, Robert Fuller and JoAnn Pflug for guests next season on his syndicated television show.
