Ike Reports On Berlin

By WALTER LOGAN
United Press International

President Eisenhower goes before the nation tonight with a radio-television report on the Berlin crisis which already has brought calls for withdrawal of U.S. military dependents from the threatened city.

The President was said to regard the speech as one of the most important he has delivered since entering the White House. He was not expected to unveil any new strategy but was certain to make it clear the West will not allow itself to be driven out of West Berlin.

Any discussion of strategy normally would await the arrival in Washington on Thursday of British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, after talks with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev in Moscow. Macmillan has reported so far to President Charles de Gaulle of France and Chancellor Konrad Adenauer of West Germany.

Macmillan leaves London Tuesday for Ottawa and talks with Prime Minister John Diefenbaker. Reports reaching London from Washington indicated many of Macmillan's ideas will form the basis for American thinking in the upcoming talks with the Soviet Union, especially his desire to hold a summit conference with Khrushchev as soon as possible.

London sources said Washington also may go along with the idea of having Communist Poland and Czechoslovakia present at such talks if only in the role of observers.

Macmillan was reported to have found some support in Paris and Bonn for his proposal there by some sort of "thinning out" of East-West troops in a specified zone along the Iron Curtain borders.

Eisenhower, who has discussed his speech with acting Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, was generally expected to reaffirm U.S. determination not to give an inch on its rights in West Berlin.

Western leaders in Berlin have greeted firm U.S. statements on Berlin with pleasure. They were reported to believe only firmness and determination to fight a war over West Berlin if necessary would convince Russia the U.S. meant business.

Fires Take 37 Lives Over Weekend

United Press International

Fires across the nation during the weekend left at least 37 persons dead, including 29 children. At Superior, Wis., a father burned to death today and his five children suffocated when fire destroyed their home. Authorities identified the victims as John Anderson, 35, and Margaret, 7, Rita, 6, Charles, 4, John, 3 and Dorothy, an infant.

Mrs. Anderson, 28, who came home as firemen were boarding up the front of the house, was hospitalized for shock. Firemen said the fire could have started from a smoldering cigarette or from a stove.

At Des Moines, Iowa, eight businesses were burned out Sunday night in a five-alarm fire that raged through a quarter block. No one was killed, but District Fire Chief Lee Williams was hurried 20 feet by an explosion. He was in satisfactory condition. Occupants of six second-floor apartments escaped without injury. They were able to salvage only their clothing.

In the Texas Panhandle, a firefighter died when he was trapped by vicious winds while in a giant prairie fire.

At Muncie, Ind., Mrs. Mabel Lancaster, 39, a mother of four children was killed by asphyxiation when fire swept her home.

Perryton Man Dies In Crash

CORDELL, Okla. (UPI)—Roy Cecil Mosier, 49, of Perryton, Tex., was killed Sunday near here when he lost control of his car, causing it to overturn three times.

Highway patrolman D. S. Goulet said Mosier's car, a side-swiped car driven by C. E. Cannon, 19, of Rocky, Okla.

Goulet said Mosier's car, and an auto driven by Emmett Nelson Bishop, also of Perryton, passed him at a high rate of speed.

The patrolman said he began chasing them at speeds up to 100 miles per hour, but could not catch them.

Bishop was cited for reckless driving after the accident. Cannon was not injured.

PROUD PLAYERS

New blue and white uniforms distinguish the Pampa Junior High Band, represented by these two players. The 58-piece band made its first appearance in its new uniforms at an assembly program last week. Resplendent in their new garb are Richard Rath, left; and Dwight Thompson.

Pampa Firemen Answer Four Sunday Alarms Here

United Press International

The tubes of a television set at the Harvester Bowl, 1401 S. Hobart, "blew up" and began to smolder Sunday morning. Pampa firemen reported. There was some light smoke damage, firemen said.

The bowling alley fire was one of four reported Sunday. At 12:16 p.m. worn wiring was blamed for a minor blaze in the residence of Jerry Daniels, 629 N. Yeager. Damages were light.

At 12:40 p.m. firemen answered a call four miles east of Pampa where about five acres of grass burned on property owned by the Santa Fe railroad.

No cause for the blaze was given.

Mrs. O. O. Fee, 619 N. Sumner, summoned firemen at 4:23 p.m. when a backyard grass fire got out of hand and spread to a fence. Damages were at a minimum.

New Blizzard Slugs Midwest

United Press International

The snow-weary Midwest staggered today in the wake of a new blizzard which stalled trains, marooned thousands of persons and cut communications.

The week-end storm, powered by 50 to 80 m.p.h. winds, piled up paralyzing snows from Nebraska, northeastward through Michigan.

It roared into eastern Canada during the night, but strong winds continued to batter the lower Great Lakes region and eastern Upper Michigan, where snow depths averaged 40 to 50 inches.

The storm, tornadoes and Texas prairie fires were blamed for at least nine deaths. Three persons were killed in Arkansas tornadoes at Opel, Mingo and Owensville. A fire fighter died of burns in Texas. Exertion or exposure claimed two lives in Iowa and one each in Illinois and Michigan. And an Ohio man was killed when blown from a second floor porch by 80-mile-an-hour winds.

Snow emergencies were declared in Milwaukee, Sheboygan, Appleton and Green Bay, Wis., and in 12 Wisconsin counties. Sheboygan County was isolated. Authorities were unable to state up with road conditions because many highways drifted shut again shortly after they were opened.

Snow, hail and rain fell in Texas today, succeeding a weekend of violent winds that drove brush fires across thousands of acres. Light rain and snow fell from the Pecos Valley westward over the El Paso area. It also snowed in San Antonio, one of the unlikely places in the state for a resurgence of winter.

The temperature was 50 degrees in San Antonio as the snow fell and it quickly melted. Some hail fell along with the snow.

It was cloudy over all of the state except the Panhandle and extreme northeast Texas. Forecasters expected the cloudiness to increase over the rest of the state.

Weather Warming Up

At the same time, they expected that any moisture worth mentioning would be confined to the far west and south portions of the state, with only a few sprinkles in other sections.

The weather was warming up. Winds died down and ranchers and farmers, along with firemen, reported victory over raging prairie fires in North Texas.

Damage to buildings, livestock losses and destruction of buildings may run as high as a million dollars from the weekend rampage of fire.

Law enforcement and fire authorities patrolled Montague county against a new outbreak of the giant fire that spread more than 25 miles long over the county and into adjoining Wise county Saturday night.

Homes, Barns Destroyed

The Montague county fire, actually two fires, was the worst of all. It burned over more than 10,000 acres of rangeland and killed at least 100 head of cattle.

The Department of Public Safety reported that it burned five houses and six barns.

Montague county Deputy Sheriff Howard Middleton estimated, on the basis of reports from the Panhandle and North Central Texas, that damage would run as much as a million dollars.

At its worst, the fire threatened the town of Forestburg but firemen managed to divert flames that were leaping 200 feet into the air.

Wind Blows 20 MPH

Premises Local Birchfield of St. 16 Tex., said the Montague county fire "roared along at 25-30 miles an hour at times and we had a hard time keeping up with it."

U.A.R. Citizens Asked To Vacate

By LARRY COLLINS

BEIRUT (UPI)—Steadily deteriorating relations between the United Arab Republic and Iraq plunged to a dangerous new low today.

The tense situation had become so acute, the Cairo Newspaper Al-Ahram reported from Damascus, that Iraqi authorities ordered all U.A.R. citizens in Iraq to get out of the country within 24 hours.

Relations between the two Arab nations, already strained, reached the breaking point last week with the abortive Iraqi revolt centered around Mosul, which Baghdad blamed on the U.A.R. Both nations have since traded vitriolic insults, and 12 U.A.R. diplomats were expelled from Baghdad last week.

The late-Iraq campaign of U.A.R. President Gamal Abdel Nasser reached a crescendo in Cairo today where tens of thousands of screaming demonstrators banged effigies of Iraqi Premier Abdel Karim Kassem alongside an insulting assortment of dead dogs, cats and mice.

The mammoth anti-Kassem demonstration started with a memorial procession through the streets of Cairo, honoring the Iraqis who died in the revolt in northern Iraq last week.

The marchers, caught up in hysteria, screamed "Enemy of God!" piously. Kassem's name was spoken. They called Nasser "hero of Arab nationalism."

In the latest demonstration in a massive anti-Kassem, anti-Iraq propaganda campaign, marchers carried red-painted coffins with pictures of Kassem plastered on the sides. The pictures were labelled "the Baghdad executioner" and "killer of women and children."

The demonstrations which have occurred in Damascus since Tuesday spread to Cairo for the first time Sunday when students offered prayers calling on God to "annihilate infidels in our land (Communists)."

Nasser, speaking Sunday in Damascus, predicted new revolutions would break out in Iraq against the "dictatorship, atheism and terrorism" of the Kassem regime.

Blames U.A.R., Nasser

In Baghdad Lt. Col. Majid Mohamed Amin, the people's court prosecutor, said Nasser would meet the same fate as Col. Abdel Wahab Shawaf, slain leader of the Mosul revolt who has been branded a traitor to the Iraqi government.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Dr. Hashem Jawad, in an interview with UPI Correspondent Zaki Salama, said in Baghdad the rebellion was organized and armed by the U.A.R.—and blamed Nasser for three anti-Kassem conspiracies in the last eight months.

The Montague county fire, actually two fires, was the worst of all. It burned over more than 10,000 acres of rangeland and killed at least 100 head of cattle.

The Department of Public Safety reported that it burned five houses and six barns.

Montague county Deputy Sheriff Howard Middleton estimated, on the basis of reports from the Panhandle and North Central Texas, that damage would run as much as a million dollars.

At its worst, the fire threatened the town of Forestburg but firemen managed to divert flames that were leaping 200 feet into the air.

DEAR ABBY...

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am married and have two beautiful teen-aged children. I have a good husband who provides me with a nice home, plenty to eat, a nice car and everything a woman could ask for—except what she wants the most. A little affection. I don't remember the last time he kissed me. Our friends think we are an ideal couple. We never argue and he is really sweet to me. But, Abby, you don't know how lonesome a feeling can be with her husband sleeping right beside her. I am going out of my mind. It would be heaven if only he would put his arms around me and say, "I love you, Honey."

Women who wear maternity dresses to work would rather be home and off their swollen ankles but cannot. A little more compassion, please.
DEAR ABBY: What is your opinion of mothers who humor their children by letting them answer the telephone every time it rings out? The youngsters are too young to be understood and are too young to listen properly or relay a message. After about five minutes of "WHO IS THIS?" from the child, the mother will finally take over. Why do mothers do this foolish and annoying thing?

HEART-BROKEN

DEAR HEART-BROKEN: Get a new hair-do. Rearrange the furniture. Buy a new negligee. Then put your arms around this insentient clod and say, "Honey, I love you—now what are you going to do about it?"

EXASPERATED

DEAR EXASPERATED: Because they don't realize how foolish and annoying it is.

SITTER-LESS

DEAR ABBY: If "CHEATED" (the baby sitter who complained of being underpaid) is the one who came to our house, smoked a carton of cigarettes, gained five pounds, accepted our twenty-dollar tip, plus a two-dollar tip and an eight-dollar Christmas gift, and then left with the grocery money, a new bed sheet and my curlers, please tell her we won't "cheat" her again. We can't afford her.

CONFIDENTIAL TO JIMMY

The husband who spends too many evenings "with the boys" shouldn't be surprised if his wife does likewise.

DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: Move over. I am also disgusted. With you!

The Easter ensemble shows two sides of the coin in jacket lengths this year. Branell does the brief jacket costume (left) in black silk-and-wool mixture. White chiffon blouse has huge bow; is dotted in pale gray. Another version of the ensemble has seven-eighths jacket (right) in bright red wool over fitted dress of red-and-white silk print. Dress has deep border of the red wool. Jacket is lined with the print in this design from the Samuel Winston spring collection.

Surts Of Color Spark Ensembles

By GAILE DUGAS
NEA Women's Editor

NEW YORK (NEA) — The ensemble will take a proud part in this year's Easter parade. It's the costume that American women love and find wearable long after the big parade is over.

This year, the jacket may be very brief or a slim dress or very nearly knee-length. Both are shown and both are chic. They have in common the narrow dress or skirt with which they keep company. And this important look always offers something extra in the way of fabric co-ordination, usually blouse matched to jacket lining. Sometimes the print of the dress is picked up for a hat, too, to complete the real costume look.

The softly slender skirt and blouse (or dress) which form part of the ensemble are planned to make an impression on their own when the jacket is removed, the balance of the costumes is distinctive.

Though the costume is done in discreet navy, gray and black, it also shows surts of color this year. Sometimes it's totally red, mated to a dashing print which picks up the red theme and carries ries to to a handsome conclusion. While the costume itself is wool, the print which is part of the plan is invariably a luscious pure silk. And this year, polka dots vie with prints for favor.

Good Manners Important Out-Of-Doors As Social Calendar

In Living Room: Mrs. J. B. Townsend

"Good Manners Can Keep America Beautiful" was the title and subject for the discussion given by Mrs. J. B. Townsend at the Tuesday afternoon Civic Culture Club meeting held in the home of Mrs. Louise Sewell.

"We have fallen heir to vast riches: the good earth and all its treasures, iron for automobiles, fuel for fires, wheat for food, wool for clothing, lakes and seashores for recreation, but seldom do we stop to consider the violence done this world of nature by our use of the abundant riches spread before us." Mrs. Townsend said in opening remarks.

Quoting from Walter Cronkite, Mrs. Townsend said, "Find a way to stop people from littering our highways, parks, beaches, and escape with trash and you'll see most dramatic transformation in the appearance of this country that you can imagine."

"Would you be surprised to learn just for cleaning up our primary highways, enough to pay the costs to run the United Nations for a year?" Mrs. Townsend asked. "The total bill every year is $50 million. Then there is another cost that cannot be reckoned in dollars and cents. Western insurance Service tells us between 750 and 1,000 people are needlessly killed and a "cool" 100,000 are seriously injured in accidents caused by cars swerving to avoid objects thoughtlessly thrown on the highways. In Chicago alone, last year, 11,000 fires were started because of rubbish."

"Good manners," Mrs. Townsend continued, "are just as important in parks, forests, and along our highways as they are in Mamie Eisenhower's living room. May we teach children and the public this by our own good outdoor manners?"

"Let us do our part to maintain for future generations the glorious heritage that is ours," laughing streams and rivers; the stately beautiful trees; the fish and wild life; the mines, the precious soil; all gifts from God's hands." Refreshments were served during the social hour to Mrs. Carl Axelson, Stanley Brandt, A. C. Houchin, Willis White, Ophelia Morris, W. D. Waters, Emmett Osborne, A. D. Hill, J. B. Townsend, Irvin Cole, R. E. Dauer, Vera Lard, C. F. Pennington, Kathleen Vincant, and Emmett Gee.

United States Has No Cash For International Loans

The Lighter Side
By FRANK ELEAZER
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The wit, ness looked like a banker about to say no. This was only partly right. He wanted the worst way to say yes. What put the frown lines in his face was the prospect that Congress won't let him hand out the money.

It was Treasury Secretary Robert B. Anderson, wearing dark blue suit, vest, white shirt and black tie, rimless glasses and with a white handkerchief precisely squared off in his breast pocket.

He was appearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in his role as United States director not of one bank but two, both of them international and both busy lending to people all over the world, money that tends to be mostly American.

Cash Running Low
What his testimony boiled down to was that both the International Monetary Fund and the International Bank are running low on cash, and that Uncle Sam right away must ante up $1,375,000,000 extra to keep the loan business humming.

The part the members couldn't understand though was that we want to do this right now, when we are about broke ourselves, instead of next year, when we will be better off.

Anderson explained that there may be an international crisis any time, and that "one can never tell which country might need help."

Chairman J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.) seemed to think this was right and that maybe it might be Uncle Sam himself next in line for a loan, especially if he has to put up this extra dough now.

Government In Hock
Fulbright called attention to the fact that our government this fiscal year is already in hock for about 13 billion dollars, whereas next fiscal year, which starts July 1, President Eisenhower claims he's prepared to operate in the black.

Fulbright is a gentleman and much too polite to say right out what he had in mind here. Other Democrats have contended that Anderson's two banks don't really need the money now, but that he wants it to show up on the current budget, which is already in the red, instead of next year's, when it would wipe out the small surplus he has promised.

So why, Fulbright asked ever so gently, can't we wait on this until sometime around the first of July?

Cites Berlin Problem
Anderson said well there is the Berlin problem ahead, and we wouldn't want the well to run dry at a time like that. Besides, he said, this country sponsored the increase and has been pressing the 67 other participating countries to get up their share. He said it wouldn't look good now if we dragged our feet.

Many Skiers Trapped
—Basketball fans, about 6,000 strong, also were stranded Saturday night by the storm at Lincoln, Nebraska after attending the state's high school tourney.

—Thousands of skiers were trapped by snow in hotels, tourist homes and motels in northern Michigan. Winds in the state reached 78 m.p.h., whipping up 25-foot drifts. Thousands of cars were abandoned in central and northern Michigan. At least 60 persons were injured in traffic accidents in western Michigan alone, with many of the accidents involving 10 or more vehicles.

—Telephone service was knocked out to thousands of rural homes in northwestern Illinois and about 1,500 residents north of Freeport, Ill., have been without power since Saturday night due to downed utility lines.

Tornadoes Kill Three
—Tornadoes which skipped across Arkansas and southern Illinois Saturday night killed three persons and injured nine persons, one critically, in Arkansas and injuring one person in Illinois.

—Prairie fires, spread by high winds, blackened thousands of acres of rangeland in a fire county section of north central Texas and killed scores of cattle before being brought under control Sunday. A volunteer fireman was trapped and burned fatally. Earlier, winds up to 70 miles an hour kicked up a dust storm in the Texas panhandle so thick it turned day into night. The dust was blamed for a 15-car accident near Shamrock, Tex.

Articles Upset Her
"I live alone now in a tiny house in Beverly Hills, but I see Cheryl almost as much as before the incident. She used to stay with her granny anyway when I went away — even when we had governesses."

"But what upsets me are articles in some of the magazines saying, will Lana ever get back her daughter? I haven't lost her, and the juvenile court people agree. They can't understand why there are such articles and I am as annoyed by them as I am."

Lana gave her position before leaving Sunday on a 12-day tour of five cities — Chicago, Cleveland, New York, Boston and Washington — to promote her new film, "Imitation of Life."

She wore a black suit, a white hat decorated with lilacs, white gloves and a string of pearls.

"The important thing for Cheryl," she said, "is keeping up her grades. And as a mother, I'm worried about the way all the kids run around in cars. Cheryl will be 16 soon, and already she's talking about a car. But I tell her she has to prove she has the capability of handling such a responsibility."

Lives Have Changed
"She's had a tremendous emotional shock — but with God's will and strength she will come out of it. All our lives have changed — admit it or not."

Cheryl has been seen more and more in public with her mother and father — separately — in the past few months.

A few days before the new year, Cheryl flew to New York for a three-day holiday with her father. They saw a couple of shows, dined in several night spots and were photographed together.

On Lana's birthday last Feb. 8, Cheryl and her grandmother threw a surprise party for her at Crane's restaurant, the Luau. Crane was out of town.

HARVESTER BASEBALL SEASON OPENS HERE TUESDAY

Basketball Banquet Scheduled Tonight

Several Hurlers Will See Action

By RED GRIGGS
Daily News Sports Editor

Pampa's Harvesters open their 1959 baseball season Tuesday at 4 p.m. in Harvester Park, against the Borger Bulldogs in a non-district contest.

Deck Woldt, Pampa coach, will not have a real starting hurler, since he expects to use each of his pitchers only three innings or less. Pampa's hurlers have had only a week of good weather to loosen up their arms.

Woldt said that Monday's game will probably go nine innings, if weather permits. This is to give as many pitchers as possible a chance to get some needed mound work.

"We'll probably use left-handers Kippy Williams and Keith Yager in the first few innings," the Pampa pilot said. "It will probably be either Mack Taylor or James Walker, both righthanders, in the final innings."

Starting Lineup

The rest of the starting lineup will be Wendell Ridgway, shortstop; Bob Stephens, left field; Larry Stroud, first base; DeWayne Glover, center field or third base; Gary Wills, right field.

Keith Gregory, third base, or Don Cross, center field (depending on which position Glover plays); Ruben Strickland, second base; and Terry Joe Haralson, catcher.

Seven of the possible starters are lettermen from the 1958 squad which finished third in District 3-A, with a 5-5 district mark, and had a 13-7 season record.

Taylor, Walker, Gregory, and Stroud have no previous experience, but Cross played at Monahans and Ridgway is a reserve letterman.

Pampa will play an intra-squad game here Friday, then travel to Vernon for a Saturday doubleheader. The first game of the Vernon doubleheader will start at 2 p.m.

Borger Squad

Borger, with only three returning regulars has been picked by the coaches to finish above Pampa in district play.

The Bulldogs' only lettermen are Isaac Robinson, shortstop; and Jim Deen and Dick Guthrie, pitchers. Robinson hit .357 last year, fourth in the district. Borger had a .64 district record, and a 10-6 overall mark. They were district runners-up.

Bobby Murry will be the Dogs' first baseman, and Joe Kidd will play third base, but the rest of the Borger lineup is indefinite, as squads and players with no previous experience are fighting for positions.

Coaching the Bulldogs is Roy Lee Dunn.

Bisons Take NHL Crown

United Press International

The Buffalo Bisons are the champions of the American Hockey League.

Although losing to the Springfield Indians Sunday night, 4-2, the Bisons clinched the title by beating the red-hot Rochester Americans, 3-1, Saturday.

The Bisons have two games left, one each with Cleveland and Rochester.

Rochester moved into second place Sunday night over the Hershey Bears. The Americans defeated the Bears, 3-1, after both teams had dropped their contests the night before. The Americans lost to the Bisons, 3-1, while Hershey had been blanked by the first loss in eight exhibition games.

The second-place Cleveland Barons edged the Providence Reds Sunday night, 5-4, after being held to a 3-3 tie Saturday night by the Springfield Indians.

Reading, Behrman's Lead Women's Bowling Tourney

With most of the sharpshooters on the sidelines awaiting action in this coming weekend, the Pampa Women's City Tourney, the Behrman's (with handicaps) spilled 2547 pins, 37 more than the second-place Coors.

Twenty-four more teams will bowl Friday and Saturday at Harvester. Ina Reading, a 154-average, rolled a super 562 Sunday to take the lead in singles competition, and Pat Elkins rolled a towering 544 for the Behrman's team Saturday night. Both scores were "scratch."

Sonny Myers Wins Over Tyro Myaki

By MARVIN OLSEN
Daily News Staff Writer

Taro Myaki, a slippery customer from the land of the rising sun discovered rules were not necessarily made to be broken at the Top O' Texas Sportsman's Club Saturday night.

Myaki, who had scored a bloody Thursday night Amarillo verdict over Sonny Myers, engaged the latter brawler in the main event here Saturday night and this time walked away with the loser's share of the purse.

Myers swung into action in the opening round with two quick body slams to pin the Jap, but Myaki roared back his defiance in the second go-round when he applied his infamous "caw hold" to Myers' midriff to even the match at one-fall apiece.

In the third round, Myers forced Myaki to flee for safety on the outside apron of the canvas and from there the sneaky Nip again got his "claw hold" on Myers' mid-section. However, any type of hold from outside the ring is considered illegal and naughty too, so referee Larry Wright bellowed at the "Yello One" to break his hold and return to the ring. Myaki, not the most co-operative anyhow, told the ref, Wright, to go get lost or take a bath or something else less gentle. Realizing Myaki was not going to release his illegal hold, Wright rushed between the two grapplers and raised a very loose arm belonging to Myers, signifying a win for him by "disqualification" of Myaki.

In a tamer semi-final match, newcomer Joe Hamilton, a 218-pound package of instant TNT from St. Jo, Mo., surprised veteran Dory Funk by baffling 30-minutes to a draw and messing Funk's blond curls in the process.

In the night's opening match a big bad snapping Bulldog Piches took advantage of a "slip" by Ray Hefferman to score a victory. In a scheduled 20-minute one-fall event, Piches had been mistreated plenty before Hefferman slipped once on the bottom rope and Piches moved in as he heard opportunity knocking loudly to body press Hefferman and win.

Promoter Bob Giegel stated after the matches he was working on a real thriller between the Bulldog and Myaki, two of the low-handedest sluggers in the game, for the main attraction this Saturday night in Pampa.

Advanced reserved seat and general admission tickets can be picked up at Levine's Department Store in downtown Pampa all this week.

United Press International
Coach Paul Seymour, whose Syracuse Nats have clinched a berth in the Eastern finals of the National Basketball Association playoffs, took a gloomy look ahead today toward a guy named Bill Russell and said, "You gotta get the ball before you can run."

Seymour issued this pungent comment after his Nats outran the New York Knicks, 121-115, in

Hustling Harvester Award To Be Given by McNeely

The Hustling Harvester award will be given tonight to the Harvester basketball player who showed the most hustle and determination during the season.

Coach Clifton McNeely will present the award as a feature of the Harvester Appreciation basketball banquet, which begins at 7:30 p.m. in the high school cafeteria.

Other features of the banquet honoring the '59 state champions are the crowning of the basketball queen by the co-captains of the team; introduction of the Harvesters, coaches, and other special guests, and an address by Bob Rogers, Texas A&M basketball coach.

The Rogers speech will be an example of one successful coach honoring another. Rogers took the helm of the Aggies last year, after they have been mired deep in the Southwest Conference second division for many years. He built them into a contender almost overnight.

McNeely's record has been one of unbroken success since coming to Pampa midway in the 1947-48 season. His total won-loss record is 303-34, and his teams have won four state championships. (Pampa is the first 4A team ever to turn that trick.)

McNeely's teams have been to the state meet six times in the last seven years, finishing second once and fourth once. In 1953, '54, and '55, the Harvesters won 72 straight, and their current winning streak is 44.

About 500 people are expected for tonight's banquet — about the same number of Pampanos who went to Austin for the state tournament.

The Program
Special music will be presented tonight by Ray C. Johnson Jr., Amarillo baritone. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Maxine Milliron. Providing dinner music will be the Pampa High School pep band, directed by Bill Tregoe.

Warren Hasse, president of the Chamber of Commerce, will act as master of ceremonies. Ralph McKinney, chairman of the sports committee, will introduce special guests.

Dr. Burgin Watkins, pastor of the St. Paul Methodist Church, will give the invocation; and Malcolm C. Douglass will introduce the speaker.

Decorations have been prepared by the basketball mothers, working with Aubrey Jones of the sports committee of the Chamber of Commerce. The sports committee is the banquet's sponsoring organization.

The Speaker
Rogers' tonight's speaker, came to A&M during the '57-'58 season, after five successful years at East

Texas State. In his first year, the Aggies up set the league leaders in three consecutive games near the end of the season, and ended SMU's 44-game home court winning streak. This year, the Aggies won the pre-season Southwest Conference tournament, and finished with a season record of 16-8. They completed conference play with 7-7 records both this year and last. Rogers' teams at East Texas had a total won-loss record of 113-32, as they averaged 78 points per game and won one NIAA championship.

Rogers played college ball for Hank Iba at Oklahoma A&M (now Oklahoma State) in '41, '42, '46, and '47. He adopted Iba's ball control tactics and defensive strategy when he went into coaching. The Aggie coach is a native of Stillwater, Okla. He is married and has two sons, Mike, 8, and Blake, 2.

Harney Wins Pensa. Open

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI)—Paul Harney trained his sights on the rich Las Vegas invitational tournament today as he picked up his first-place money for the Pensacola Open golf tournament.

Harney won the tournament Sunday with a 72-hole total of 269, a new record for the four-year-old tourney. The victory automatically qualified him for the Las Vegas match next summer.

The slender professional from Worcester, Mass., entered the second half of the tournament Sunday with a five stroke lead. He fired a seven-under-par 63 in the morning round and followed it up with a 70 to finish three strokes ahead of his closest challenger, Jay Hebert, Sanford, Fla.

Harney collected $2,600 and $1,500 went to Hebert. Bob Rosburg, Palo Alto, Calif., who went into the final round in second place, tied at 276 with Chandler Harper, Portsmouth, Va. Rosburg fired a record breaking 62 on the third round but carded a 72 on the last round.

Ken Venturi, Palo Alto, Calif., and Freddie Haas, New Orleans, tied at 277. They were followed by Art Wall Jr., Pocono Manor, Pa., and Arnold Palmer, Latrobe, Pa., with 278 each.

Bob Wallace of Pensacola won the amateur title after beating out Bob Conrad, Pensacola, in a one-hole, sudden death playoff. Both had tied at 295.

It is expected that standings in team events and doubles (and possibly singles) will get a thorough re-shuffling this coming weekend. Most of the city's high-average fem-keggers are slated to bowl Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Reading's 562 may stand up, but it faces strong competition. Following are team standings with 20 teams yet to bowl:

- 1 — Behrman's, 2547.
- 2 — Coor's, 2510.
- 3 — Garden Lanes, 2496.
- 4 — Crow Humble, 2468.
- 5 — Maxwell Bros., 2464.
- 6 — Panhandle Industrial, 2457.
- 7 — Frank Dial, 2432.
- 8 — G. W. James Mat., 2418.
- 9 — Smith Shoes, 2417.
- 10 — Hawkins Radio, 2414.

Standings in doubles events: Class A — Reading-Lander, 921. Class B — Jean Chisholm-Margelene Nachlinger, 896. Class C — Fay Cook-Lou Garrison, 866. Class D — Ketta Henricks-Pat Rallsback, 863.

Class E — Dorothy Francis-Marge Walker, 697. Association President Jean Chisholm and Secretary Eva Kitchens remarked Sunday night that interest in this year's tournament "has been at a record high."

Fifty-four teams are entered along with 592 individual bowlers. The City Association has 260 members. In comparison, Odessa has 315 women association members but could muster only 20 teams in its recent city tournament.

The women get back into action Friday and Saturday night with team events at Harvester, and then journey to Garden Lanes for the windup of singles and doubles Sunday.

Cincinnati, Bradley Picked in Tourneys

United Press International
Cincinnati and Bradley, who waged a bitter title fight in the Missouri Valley Conference race, were clearly stamped as favorites today in the two biggest post-season basketball tournaments—but look out for those upstart teams like Louisville.

The NCAA tourney champ will be crowned Saturday night in Louisville, Ky.—and right now the experts figure it will be national scoring king Oscar Robertson and his Cincinnati playmates.

The National Invitation Tournament will conclude with a nationally-televised game Saturday afternoon and top-seeded Bradley still is the pick to become champion for the second time in three years.

The four regional winners in the NCAA pair-off Friday night at Louisville this way: For eastern title—West Virginia (27-4) vs. Louisville (19-10). For western title — Cincinnati (25-3) vs. California (23-4). Only Top Team Alive Cincinnati, which handed nationally top-ranked Kansas State an 85-75 whipping in the Lawrence, Kan., regional Saturday night, is the highest-ranked team (No. 4) left alive in the competition. That, and Robertson, make them the choice.

Robertson was outscored by All-American Bob Boozer of K-State, 31-25, in their personal duel but State paid the penalty for concentrating on stopping "the big O"—Oscar's pass-offs set up teammates for 26 additional points. Louisville, conqueror of second-ranked Kentucky Friday night, was amazed again by blasting third-

Khrushchev's Ruse?

Is Premier Khrushchev's tooth-and-nail battle against NATO, via West Berlin merely a dodge to distract us from the subversive campaign he is waging against the United States in strategic areas in our hemisphere and the Pacific? All one has to do to get the answer is to look around us, for then we can clearly see it is the United States that is being circled—not the Soviet Union. And pretty close at hand too, for it is becoming increasingly evident that the communists are edging for control of Cuba, in line with a plan of Soviet subversion that has shown its head again and again these past several years.

Fair Enough

Murrow Disappearance Considered Trivial!

by WESTBROOK PEGLER

The total disappearance of Egbert Murrow, like a genie in a cloud of cigarette smoke, is trivial compared to the ominous fact that this empty fellow reigned so long as an oracle of political prophecy over people pretending to wise judgment. George Sokolsky, with his instinct for the jugular, pointed out a few days after Murrow crumbled like cigarette ash on his own vest, that Murrow had never been a newspaperman. He was a showman. Of all the types of showmen, Murrow's was the lowest. For he was, so to speak, a pitchman, spilling from his ladder to fascinate the yokels with laudations of miraculous ointments of tiger-marrow and pay-later luxuries. In the original version of this breed, at street fairs and carnivals, shy strangers lifted watches and screw-top purses as Mountebanks wrought spells of pronouncement on gaping innocents. Egbert's utmost was an appearance before a select company of cadets at West Point by an invitation so cagey that when all was said and done it appeared that some cadets had taken it on themselves to ask him up. No cadet has such authority. Yet Murrow got this forum for a political exultation over Joe McCarthy, who was then a rambunctious, living, kicking issue, and the Army was defendant in a disgraceful scandal. The West Point code of honor forbids evasion and equivocation. Be that as it may...

Employer Answer 15-Year Union Member's Questions On Economic And Moral Subjects No. 3

I am continuing to answer questions asked by a man who has been a member of the Carpenter's Union for 15 years. The purpose of the questions is to try to find a method of arriving at a fair wage to the employer, the employee and the customer, and a way that will permit real wages to increase as rapidly as possible. The questions and answers follow:

17. Buck: Now to get back to a point I already mentioned in a previous question: You contend, I believe, that there is a socially necessary economic reason for holding wages down to a purely competitive level—as low as help can be hired for without union collective bargaining. You contend that this extra portion now going to union workers should accumulate in the employers' hands for investment in tools for production. Is that your contention?

Holles: I do not so contend. It might go to other workers, if you pay one man more than he is worth, you have to pay some other man less than he's worth, or raise prices. Every worker ought to get all he produces, as measured on a free market. Part of it would go to the worker that was on a competitive basis, because his wages, of necessity, are lower because some workers are getting more than a free market wage. And production would go up if the union man was on a competitive basis. Then all workers would get more.

Buck: Well, the point of my question is, I'm trying to establish the fact that your reason for wanting the employer to have more money than he now gets from the fruits of labor is to reinvest in tools. Your reason for wanting the employer to have that is so that he can acquire more tools for more production. Isn't that your contention?

Holles: I want everybody to get all he produces. I don't know, and I do not believe anyone knows, of any way of telling what each party ought to get, other than having all people free to compete.

Buck: Well, then, to be perfectly clear on this point, it is your position, is it not, that it is better for the general welfare of society as a whole that the employer retain this "above-competition" portion of the returns from production?

Holles: No, it is not my contention. It is my contention that he must have a free market profit, and all workers must have a free market wage, and some union workers are not now getting a free market wage, because the union sets their maximum, and some workers are barred from joining a union or learning a trade.

Buck: Well, I think you misunderstand my question. My question is, that the returns from the fruits of labor which is above the competitive amount an employer has to pay in a free competitive market, you believe, belongs to the employer, don't you? Don't you contend that that's his portion?

Holles: I don't know whether it belongs to the employer or it belongs to the consumer. It might belong to the consumer. He undoubtedly would have to sell his product for less. But if he hired on a competitive basis, he would have to sell on a more competitive basis, and therefore the consumer would have his real wages raised, and a union, as well as a non-union, man would get more for his production. Part of it would go to the general public—the consumer. And I don't know how much profit is right to be. They ought to be just as high as a free market will permit. They might be 100 per cent or they might be 2 per cent or then it might be a loss.

Buck: But the point that I'm trying to establish is that you do contend that the employer should be able to receive more than he does under the union bargaining setup to enable the employer to buy tools so that he can expand and so that production can increase.

Holles: We ought to have more tools, but he might have to raise the price of things, and he might have the same profit. A lot of employers think they're having the same profit by signing a union contract because his capital won't be idle so much of the time and he won't be passing increased costs on to the consumers. I don't know how high profits ought to be. Profits and wages ought to be just as high as they can be so everybody's got a job who wants to work.

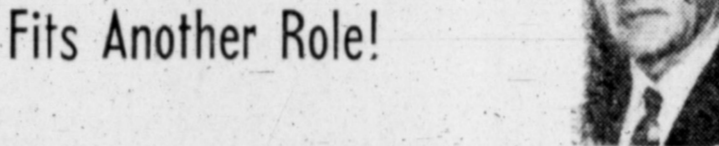

Buck: It doesn't necessarily follow then—your contention for objecting to union wages being high, and you have objected in many of your editorials about union wages being higher than the free market level. The thing I'm trying to establish is that the multiplication of tools is what you have recommended many times, and you have said that the only way we can multiply tools is for capital to accumulate, and the only way that capital can accumulate is for the employer to receive the capital to let it accumulate.

Holles: Oh, no, that's not the only way for capital to accumulate. The employer might save and put their savings in tools. And that's been the way it's been going on for generations. The employer accumulates capital, but if they get capital by threats of strikes they are not so likely to use it wisely than if they get it on a competitive basis. The employer can become employers and buy tools and that'll be all right. But the

Robert Allen Reports:

Clare Boothe Luce Fits Another Role!

WASHINGTON — Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce, who is still awaiting formal Senate confirmation of her recent appointment as Ambassador to Brazil, is being projected into yet another new role.

The playwright-diplomat wife of the publisher of TIME and LIFE magazines is being officially coupled with Vice President Nixon as a 1960 presidential team. This intriguing vice presidential boom for Mrs. Luce is being launched in Rhode Island, where a group, headed by a good friend of hers, has filed articles of incorporation for a "Nixon-Luce Club of Providence."

Leader of this ambitious movement is Mrs. Emma Lonardo, who in addition to being enthusiastic about Mrs. Luce is also a prominent supporter of Governor Christopher Del Sesto—one of the few Republicans who defeated an incumbent Democratic state executive last year.

Governor Del Sesto will head the Rhode Island delegation to the 1960 GOP convention. Mrs. Lonardo, who considered running for Mayor of Providence last year, also aspires to be a member of this presidential delegation. Other signers of the "original articles of association for a non-business corporation" she filed with the Secretary of State of Rhode Island are: Marie Iamelle, Albert V. Poll Jr., Larry G. Lonardo, Editti M. Duke and Matilda M. West, all of Providence.

Republican insiders are divided on the significance of this development. Some attach considerable importance to it as a carefully planned "trial balloon" from which a lot more may be heard. These party leaders base that viewpoint on the following: Mrs. Luce's long political record as a two-term member of the House of Representatives from Connecticut, Ambassador to Italy, an "original" backer of General Eisenhower for the presidential nomination in 1952, her latest appointment by him as Ambassador to Brazil and her TIME-LIFE publisher-husband's consistent support of the President and Nixon.

But other GOPers are inclined to dismiss the Nixon-Luce Club in Providence as of no real moment and largely a local affair. In support of this contention they cite the following: After the articles of incorporation were filed, Republican State Chairman William Broomhead sought to induce Mrs. Lonardo to withdraw them. When she refused, Broomhead tried to persuade other signers to do that. But he had no better luck with them.

Broomhead argued their plan was "premature and would look too much like a deal between Nixon and Mrs. Luce." The State GOP Chairman is credited with stressing that he was not opposed to a boom for a Nixon-Luce ticket. His objection was that it was "too early to start that now." He advised the Lonardo group to wait until later this year to launch a Nixon-Luce Club.

According to party insiders, Broomhead acted at the request of Nixon. Paragraph three of the articles of incorporation states, "Said corporation is constituted for the purpose of giving equal status to women seeking political office, and to induce greater participation in civic affairs by the women of Providence."

There was one vote against Mrs. Luce when the Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved her as Ambassador to Brazil at a closed-door meeting last week.

employs that gets his non-competitive wage by threats of strikes is not so likely to wisely use that money.

Looking Sideways

By WHITNEY BOLTON

NEW YORK — You can sit down here and there with 8,207 actors in succession, all as glossy as pigeons, and after all the yakking ended and you total the gain it comes out to about this: it was pleasant. You can sit down with one sensible book writer, just one, and the total gain comes out to a large plus. In a crescendo of candor, this means that actors are amusing for the moment, but authors are a steadily diverting class of human beings who lace large dollops of provocative thinking in with their idle chat.

On March 18, unless Simon B. Schuster can't read calendars, John D. MacDonald of a variety of places including Sarasota, Florida, and Cuernavaca, Mexico, will be able to sit back and look upon his new novel, "Please Write For Details," with relief. Up to now, it has been work. The book is receiving critical nip-ups from coast to coast; the movies, like a school of shad, are nibbling at the bait and one sagacious Broadway producer thinks highly of it in terms of a future musical comedy. Short of winning the Pulitzer Prize, which it hasn't, John's book has brought him just about all the rewards at hand.

We sat in The Playbill the other afternoon and John had the good taste to have Temple Texas in tow. Maybe she had him in tow, I'm not sure. But the three of us were still there when the dinner crowd began glowering because we were sprawled across a desirable table doing nothing more pertinent than talking. John's book is about a fugitive and slightly demented little art colony of Americans in Cuernavaca, and automatically this made it a Grads A item to me.

I love Mexico on any terms and hate art colonies on all terms, so his wise, witty and often-touching dissection in print reached me on all counts. But like any good author worth respect and time, John wasn't there to talk about "Please Write For Details." He was there just to talk because it pleases him to do so, and he talks with scouring frankness and comic malevolence. When he elected a moment of the silences, Temple was supplying words and soothing tones and it was an afternoon worth remembering.

John had had recently been delivered whole from the clutches of a radio interviewer (female) and was still a little pale about the gills. "She said: 'Now, tell me, should a girl marry for love or money, Mr. MacDonald?'" he revealed, "and all I said was: 'What kind of girl? How old is she. Is this her first marriage, what was her economic background, where does she live and what are her future economic and romantic chances?'" She almost fell over. She finally said: "Well, this girl is about 22, this is her first marriage, she is reasonably attractive and is not the victim of abject poverty," and I said: "In that case, she'd be a sucker to marry for anything but love. Later, maybe when she's 30 and has experienced the lovely hurly-burly of young wedded bliss, she can turn practical and chuck her boy Romeo for an older and better-beeled guy. You'd have thought I put a bomb under Lincoln's Memorial. She was furious at me."

Later, talking about a woman we both know, he jolly said: "She's the kind of hostess who still makes fudge for a cocktail party," and in our discussion of an actress of resounding beauty but never great stature in theater and the allied arts, he said: "She's the enlisted man's Ginger Rogers." This, probably, will give you the impression that Mr. MacDonald does not have to tussle with and sweat out a neat turn of phrase. You'd be right to suspect that. Nor does he entertain rigidly fixed ethics about lancing human beings who sorely need lancing. This put us on common ground and for an hour we coursed a mighty terrain from loud-mouthed tourists to living-room bores, sometimes generally speaking, and sometimes specifically speaking, with names intact. Temple a beautifully skilled girl with a lance, often rode side-saddle with us on these excursions.

What kind of book does a man like this create? A good book, sound in thought and strong in human estimations, a book of wit and charming invention, one in which acid and compassion, one about equally divided. I think you could read it with satisfaction. And, having read this one, you won't have too long to wait. John is no one-book author. His publishers have five more awaiting print. Books pour from him like waters from a gilded spring.

He is an alert, civilized and totally winning gent and I'm glad to have talked with him. Now, I can go back to yakking with actors with stouter heart.

a psychiatrist be attached to every penal institution; that a psychiatric report be made on every felon before he is released; and neither probation or parole be made without a psychiatric report.

"If we accept our responsibilities in our communities with relation to mental health," writes Judge Alverson, "and if we provide the necessary care and treatment and rehabilitation for the criminals, we will have a better community, a happier community, and crime will be less prevalent."

Mechanized Post Office Missed Boat!

By HENRY MCLEMORE

The post office is my home away from home. I frequent it the way some people do disjunctures, pool halls and bowling alleys.

The pictures on the walls of the WANTED folk are as familiar to me as the prints in my own home, and if you want to know what Civil Service jobs are open, just ask me. (Right now the government needs foresters, photo lab technicians and stenographers.)

To an old post office habitué like myself, just about the most exciting news in a long time was the grand opening of the world's most mechanized one in Washington, D. C. last week. I longed to be there, and would have made it, too, if friends hadn't dropped in for a call just when I was packing.

But you can be sure that I have read every word written about the gala occasion. And I hate to admit this—the more I read of the mechanization, the more I became convinced that the planners had missed the boat.

For one thing, there was no mention of mechanical baseball bat which would automatically smack the head of the man in front of you in the stamp line if he ordered $30 worth of stamps in every denomination from two to fifties. Such a device has long been a crying need, and we don't understand how Summerfield overlooked it.

I looked high and low for any reference to a mechanical gadget which would cut down from twenty minutes to ten or fifteen, the time it takes a clerk to find a parcel post package. Apparently the new post office doesn't have one, and clerks will continue to root around until Providence guides them.

It was as touching a story as I have ever heard of—a little, old lady appearing with her broken English in a courtroom for having tried to give away her two grandchildren "without going through legal channels."

She and her elderly husband had been brought to America by their daughter and son-in-law, and then the daughter and son-in-law had died in an accident. Unable to find work, the grandfather, also had disappeared and was presumed dead. In the desperation of her love for the children, the lonely grandmother advertised to have them adopted. After that, she planned to end her own life.

The judge did not hold her guilty as charged, but committed her to a psychiatrist. There the story ended and I have to protest.

"For a case like this is not for either law or psychiatry. It dramatizes, rather, the desperate need for recovery of something we are losing in America. The real need was for good, old-fashioned neighborliness, the helping hand from person to person, the Christian charity of individuals who felt responsibility for needs like this in the days before impersonal government took them over.

No provision of government and no professionalized psychiatry can be a substitute for the sincere and simple ministrations of people who care. The Welfare State can never take the place of loving one's neighbor!

National Council Takes Stand On Religion In Education

By LOUIS CASSELA
United Press International

Circulating among major Protestant denominations is a 32-page mimeographed "working paper" that may turn out to be one of the most significant documents of the year.

Drafted by a special committee of the National Council of Churches, it is the first step toward a united Protestant stand on the thorny question:

How should public schools deal with religion?

Catholics and Jews long ago took firm — and directly opposite — positions on this issue. Catholics say public schools should forthrightly teach faith in God and obedience to moral laws. Jews say tax-supported institutions must follow a strict hands-off policy toward religion.

Set Up Committee

Although Protestants constitute a large numerical majority in the United States, their influence in this debate has hitherto been negligible. When Protestantism spoke on the subject at all, it spoke in a babble of voices.

In an effort to remedy this situation, the National Council of Churches last year set up a Committee on Religion and Public Education, composed of representatives from 25 major Protestant bodies. This committee has taken on the formidable task of working out a policy statement that will be acceptable, if not to all Protestants, at least to a respectable number of them.

The "working paper" is the first fruit of the committee's labors. Comment is being invited from the participating denominations. It doubtless will undergo considerable revision before it is presented for official adoption by the National Council. But even in its present preliminary form, it is a noteworthy document.

Should Use Influence

It asserts that public schools should use their influence to sustain the "basic view of life" held by most Americans — that God is, and that He is the creator and sustainer of human life and of all its precious values.

The report recognizes that even this simple affirmation of God's existence would conflict with the beliefs of a small minority of Americans — about 4 per cent, according to census surveys — who classify themselves as atheists.

But it says that it is "practically impossible" for public schools to "maintain a strict neutrality" on the question of God's existence.

"The actual results of a studied neutrality is practical support for the view that God does not count."

Express Belief In God

It points out there is no historical justification for any argument that the U. S. Constitution requires such neutrality on the part of public institutions. The founding fathers did not hesitate to express their belief in God in the Declaration of Independence. And in every generation since, American government at all levels has professed belief in God — by opening courts and legislative sessions with prayer, by inspections on coins and currency, by providing chaplains for the armed forces, by exempting churches from taxation.

While calling for a forthright acknowledgment of God in public schools, the Protestant document warns that "it is probably not possible for the public schools to go much farther than this" without violating "our cherished American principles of separation of church and state."

"The public schools cannot corporately be committed to the Christian God," the report says.

"The Jewish child must in no way be embarrassed for his Judaism. No preference, overt or implied, of one religious establishment over another should be tolerated for a single school session."

Beer production of the United States amounts to 37.8 per cent of the world total.

McMahon Ready To Accept Federal Judgeship In NY

WASHINGTON (UPI)—For the consideration of Lloyd F. McMahon are suggested herewith two thoughts for the day.

McMahon is national chairman of Citizens - For - Eisenhower - Nixon. He has been chairman for a little more than a year and is ready now to accept the job he had believed the chairmanship would lead to—a federal judgeship, preferably in the southern district of New York.

The suggested thoughts for today are these:

—Nobody loves a loser.

—Gratitude and politics do not always mix.

McMahon has a powerhouse of support for his ambition to become a federal judge. His name was proposed to President Eisenhower by two pals, Gen. Lucius D. Clay and Clifford Roberts, a New York broker who also is an officer of Eisenhower's Georgia golf club. One version of the McMahon story is that he had reason to believe when he took the Citizens' chairmanship in January, 1958, that the reward would be the federal bench.

Leaders Refuse OK

Eisenhower is strong for McMahon. But there is a hitch. The political leaders of southern New York have refused to okay McMahon's nomination. So, likewise, have both of New York's Republican senators refused clearance. It looks like as dead a stymie as ever was laid on a putting green—but, maybe not.

United Press International was told that Clay and Roberts are urging the President to proceed without political clearance. Local political leaders have complained before this that the Eisenhower administration had a bad habit of nominating federal jobs persons who had not been created by the home folk.

It is not of immediate record, however, that the President rejected the negative advice of interested politicians once they have been asked to clear a nominee. That is what he is being urged to do now in behalf of McMahon. Such procedure would make McMahon's confirmation doubtful but not impossible. It would be stopped cold, however, if either of New York's senators informed the Senate Judiciary Committee of the Senate. If that the nominee was personally obnoxious.

Lame Duck Flouted

That is one of the unwritten rules of Senate procedure. Rarely does a senator feel so deeply about a nominee as to make such a public statement and there is no reason to believe that either of the New Yorkers would do so against McMahon.

It is a noble snafu, however a prime example of how the lower echelon of politicians dares to flout a President who cannot succeed himself. A real lame duck Republican regular will shed no tears if McMahon strikes out.

The Citizens' movement which he heads usually has been in the party regulars' doghouse. The outfit was enormously successful in 1952-54-56, raising money from independents and Democrats who for various reasons preferred not to contribute to a regular party organization.
