NEW YORK - Although I do not go around hand-in-hand with the tosspot set, holding that two martinis, are enough for any man generally speaking, it is true that a week does not pass but what some friend gets an advanced case of tanglefoot from trying to take a short cut to psychoanaly sis by gulping down too much alcohol. It seems to me that I know more unhappy people, frustrated people, seeking release in drink than any other kind. Some write, some act, some paint, some work for advertising agencies (a fast approach to neuroses), some run steel corporations and some make automobiles. Some even deal in stocks and bonds. The common bond of all seems to be that they go to the fount too often.

Whenever these otherwise ami-able and talented folk do recognize that they have looked too fondly at the glass while it was filled, they forthwith order a flagon of hot, black coffee and look to it for a cure. It now develops, alas, that they might as well be drinking hot ink or crankcase drainings. Science has proved them wrong. Dr. Leon A. Greenberg, savant director of the Yale Center of Alcoholic Studies, has told the Maine Medical Assn. that all that results from pouring black and hot coffee into a drunk is that you have a wide-awake drunk on your hands instead of a tractable and sleepy one. Dr. Greenberg also has discovered that taking a long walk won't do anything helpful. I am pleased to learn this because for years, when confronted

More information about the pollen count in various parts of the country - and other aspects of this allergic disorder - is presented in an excellent pamphlet, entitled "Hay Fever and What You Can De About It" available from the Allergy Foundation of America, 801 Second Avenue, New York 17, N. Ragweed, which pollinates about the middle of August in most places, is the most common and most severe cause of hay fever. I had it myself for many years and know only too well how miserable it makes one feel. Treatments include desensitization the year around, injections at the time, and drugs. But also there are many, who have only partial relief from treatment, who like to plan their vacations for the worst part of the hay fever season and go to a place where the ragweed pollen is absent or at least greatly reduced in quantity: For this purpose, several places on the North American Continent are available. There is for example, practically no ragweed in the Pacific Northwest and Northern California, and very little in Southern California, Arizona and New Mex-
