Middle East War May Last Awhile

BEIRUT (UPI) — With the fourth Arab-Israeli war now in its fourth day, all indications are that it is not going to be a swift walkover for either side.

It certainly will not be over in six days such as the war in June, 1967.

Whether either side cracks or can crush the other even in six weeks remains to be seen.

But out of the smoke clouds of conflicting claims and counterclaims monitored in this Middle East capital, these fairly well established facts appear to be emerging:

Situation Becomes Cloudy

Regardless of who actually fired the first shot, the Israelis were caught off balance, only partially mobilized and not yet ready to launch an overwhelming all-out offensive with all their forces as they did in June, 1967.

The Egyptians did succeed in crossing the Suez Canal at several points and made quite considerable initial advances through the thin Israeli covering forces in the Sinai desert.

The Syrians were able to score similar initial successes with their Soviet-equipped tank forces on the Golan Heights. However, they have not yet claimed to have captured Kuneitra, the only sizeable town in the area, which lies a bare five miles west of the 1967 cease-fire line.

At this point the situation becomes less clear.

Monday night, while Egypt and Syria still were talking of "fresh advances" in Sinai and on the Golan Heights, Israeli chief of staff Gen. David Elazar was telling a news conference that Israel had gone over to the counteroffensive and was driving back the Egyptians and Syrians everywhere.

He even hinted the Israelis might not stop at the Suez Canal and on the northern front might occupy Damascus. They stopped short of either such action in 1967.

But this morning the chief Israeli military commentator, Irish-born Gen. Haim Herzog, who once served as a British guards officer, spoke in much more cautious terms.

He warned against overconfidence and said the war might drag on longer than initially expected.

As he spoke, the Egyptians were claiming to have advanced nine miles into Sinai and to have captured East Qantara, second largest city in the peninsula.

No Blitz Walkover

The capture of East Qantara in itself did not mark any great Egyptian advance. It is a fly-blown town located directly on the east bank of the canal itself and its population was evacuated by the Egyptians in the 1967 debacle. The Israelis kept only a small holding garrison there.

But what could be more significant, if true, were Egyptian claims today to have smashed through Israeli positions and to be advancing all along the canal line.

This might mean a breakout from the bridgeheads in which the Israelis, said the Egyptians were surrounded.

The Golan Heights position is equally unclear, except that the Syrians have denied they were pushed back to their starting position and the Israelis have admitted a "substantial" Syrian penetration at one point.

Whatever the truth or untruth of these rival claims, it does not look like being a blitz walkover this time.

Nixon's personal diplomacy, in talks with the leader of a Moslem country that has diplomatic relations with Israel, followed disclosure that he was seeking broad international support — including the Soviet Union and mainland China — for a Middle East cease-fire.

The White House said Nixon soon after the outbreak of fighting had initiated an exchange of messages with Soviet Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev through diplomatic channels, and that Secretary of

Nixon Steps Up Efforts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon stepped up diplomatic efforts today to halt the Mideast fighting — "now going on at such terrible costs" — and to lay the groundwork to prevent the Arab-Israeli conflict from "breaking out over and over again."

Nixon made the observations in welcoming a West African leader, President Felix Houphouët-Boigny, to the White House for talks.

The President said that he hoped "that their discussions can contribute to the end of the fighting now going on at such terrible costs in the Middle East."

The problem, Nixon said, is not just to stop the fighting but to lay the groundwork for preventing conflict in the Middle East "from breaking out over and over again" as it has over the past 25 years.

Ending the present fighting is the first order but "building a permanent structure of peace" is the ultimate aim, the President said.

Nixon's personal diplomacy, in talks with the leader of a Moslem country that has diplomatic relations with Israel, followed disclosure that he was seeking broad international support — including the Soviet Union and mainland China — for a Middle East cease-fire.

The White House said Nixon soon after the outbreak of fighting had initiated an exchange of messages with Soviet Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev through diplomatic channels, and that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, conferred during the weekend with Huang Chen, chief of Peking's liaison mission here.

Resolution Introduced

The resolution was introduced by Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield and Republican Leader Hugh Scott. It took on significance beyond the handful of senators who pushed it through when Scott indicated to newsmen that the administration supported it. Scott said Kissinger told him he found "no fault" with the resolution.

"Good Time" Ruled Out By The Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today affirmed lower court rulings that said Texas was unconstitutional in rewarding prisoners with time off for good behavior while denying it to others.

The case that brought the matter to the Supreme Court was a two-year sentence given 18-year-old Johnnie Pruett in 1969 in a sodomy case in Coryell County, Tex.

He appealed his conviction unsuccessfully to the Supreme Court. Then he petitioned the state district court for credit for the time of his appeal.

The district judge subtracted 19 months and 14 days from his sentence for the appeal time. Then the judge gave him a "good time" credit of 6 months, 24 days. Because the two credits added up to more than his sentence, he was ordered freed.

Credit Wiped Out

The prosecutor asked the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals to erase the "good time" credit. The state did so.

saying the Texas states offer time off for good behavior only to those whose sentences are final—that is, those who are not pursuing appeals, and to persons serving misdemeanor sentences.

Pruett turned to the federal district court in Austin to free him on grounds the Texas statutes unconstitutionally treated some convicted persons one way and the others another way.

The federal court agreed Judge D. W. Suttle said "the result of the statutory scheme, which denies petitioner consideration for good-time credit available to other prisoners because he appealed his conviction, creates both an unjustified classification an unreasonable impediment to appellate review of criminal convictions, and hence violates petitioner's rights under the 14th amendment to the United States Constitution."

The 5th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals agreed

Politicians Blamed For Energy Crisis

DALLAS (UPI) — Robert A. Buschman, outgoing president of the Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association, said today politicians in Congress are to blame for the nation's energy crisis.

Buschman was particularly critical of Sen. Adlai Stevenson III, D-Ill., and his father, the late Adlai Stevenson who was, in 1952 and 1956, the Democratic nominee for President.

Buschman also criticized Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., for disagreeing with President Nixon's energy proposals.

"With... competition for scarce energy a harsh reality, you would think that any nation with recoverable energy resources would be doing its darndest to produce them," Buschman said in the annual president's report to the association's 54th annual meeting.

Yet, here in the United States, we have elected officials — almost all of them from non oil producing states — who have based their political careers on thwarting the best efforts of our industry to produce oil and gas for the American people.

"Our industry's critics have been so successful with their demagoguery—their lies, distortions of fact and false allegations—that they have severely crippled our domestic petroleum industry. In so doing, they have threatened the energy base on which our national economy literally rests.

"The present energy crunch in this country is a monument to these critics' success," Buschman said.

Buschman said Congress should be passing legislation to induce the development of domestic sources of crude oil and natural gas. But he said, Congress has actually done "hardly anything of substance" in this area.

"This is a little short of criminal negligence," he said. "The American people's elected representatives should stop playing games with the American people's pocketbooks and, most of all, with their security."

Buschman criticized Stevenson's bill which would place interstate gas under price regulations set by the Federal Power Commission. He called it "virtual confiscation of our gas" and said it was reminiscent of his father's attempt "to rob the state of its tidelands" during the 1952 campaign.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, already running for president while chairman of the powerful Interior Committee, also is playing games," Buschman said. "His partisan bickering over a Republican President over who is really to blame for a lack of positive energy legislation is doing nothing to help the energy problem facing us."

Members Of All Texas Air Tour Enjoy Overnight Pampa Stopover

By TEX DEWESE

Twenty-nine stops covering 2,700 miles up, down and across Texas were scheduled during the week.

The group was headed by E.M. (Tex) Anderson of Medina, Tex., president of the All Texas Air Tour.

Don Lane, a past president of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, emceed the dinner program. Mayor R.D. Wilkerson welcomed the guests and Air Tour President Anderson responded, stating Pampa was always one of the most enjoyable stops on the tour.

Two distinguished members of the tour were introduced. They were Marian Burke of San Antonio and Ruth Hildebrand of Houston, pilot and co-pilot, who flew the winning plane in the 1973 national Powder Puff Derby.

One hundred and forty members of the All Texas Air Tour who arrived at Perry Lefors Airfield last yesterday afternoon had a ball last night in the Heritage Room of the M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium.

They were dined and entertained during their overnight stop by the Aviation Committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

Pilots, co-pilots and passengers in the 60 planes that brought the air tourists from 20 states were met at the airport at 5 p.m. by Pampans who transported them to their hotel.

They were next greeted with a reception at 7 p.m. and a barbecue dinner and dance at 7:30 p.m.

The air tour started last Saturday morning from Temple and will end Saturday night at Kerrville.

D. Clayton Arnold, 73, of Tulsa, Okla., is the oldest pilot on the tour and Thomas W. Hornyan, 22, of Aurora, Ill., the youngest.

Mr. and Mrs. Ken Glick of San Luis Obispo, Calif., flew the longest distance to join the tour.

Entertainment was provided by Red Wedgworth's Band of Dixieland and vocalist Predetta Chambliss.

The air tour planes took off at 8:30 a.m. today for stops at Plainview, Levelland, Wink and Alpine.

State Insurance Board Recommends Reduction

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — State Insurance Board actuaries today recommended a 23 percent reduction in credit life insurance rates.

Board Chairman Joe Christie, who has charged insurance companies have been profiteering on the coverage, suggested a cut of 25 per cent, instead.

Several hundred representatives of banks, credit unions, small loan firms and sales finance companies crowded into the three-man insurance board's hearing on rates and proposals for new regulations to protect consumers.

Jim Boyle of Austin, president of the Texas Consumer Association, urged the board to tighten rules to make sure creditors who handle sales of credit life insurance provide full disclosure of the kind, terms, nature and cost of policies to debtors.

Boyle said insurance companies have been greedy.

"Supposedly, credit life is for the benefit of the debtor but the individuals who benefit most from the sale of the insurance are banks, finance companies, mobile home dealers and others who realize huge profits from the sale of such insurance," Boyle said.

Senate Committee Told About Muskie Spy Plan

By Former Agent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A former FBI agent told the Senate Watergate committee today how he arranged last year, while on the federal government payroll, to spy on Sen. Edmund S. Muskie's presidential campaign headquarters.

John R. Buckley, 53, testified that he was director of the inspection division of the Office of Economic Opportunity when he hired a cab driver to volunteer as a courier for Muskie and then arranged to photograph documents the cab driver carried from Muskie's downtown Washington headquarters to his Senate office.

Buckley said his superiors at the OEO knew nothing of his clandestine activities. He said he was recruited for the job by Ken Rietz, who headed the Young Voters For Nixon division of the Committee to Reelect the President (CRP).

Buckley said he personally developed the film and turned it over every nine or 10 days at street corner meetings first with Rietz and later with a man known to him as "Ed Warren."

Buckley said he subsequently learned "Ed Warren" was E. Howard Hunt, an organizer of the CRP campaign of political espionage.

Buckley said he spent $8,000 on the Muskie spy operation, most of it paid to the cabbie, Elmer Wyatt. Buckley asked that he not be required to mention Wyatt's name because "he is of advanced age and has been ill," but the request was refused.

At a closed meeting prior to this morning's public session, the committee voted to hear testimony from Frank Mankiewicz, a top official of George S. McGovern's campaign, and the manager of Muskie's campaign, Berl I. Bernhard, on Thursday.

Newsman's Requests Rejected

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Judge Walter E. Hoffman, determined to resist further delays in a federal investigation of Spiro T. Agnew, rejected a request Monday by newsmen for postponement of their replies to newswalk subpoenas, federal court sources said today.

Hoffman wasted no time turning down a petition by a group of reporters who asked that they be allowed an extra week, until Oct. 18, to respond to subpoenas to tell the vice president's lawyers sources of news leaks about the investigation.

Court sources said Hoffman was insistent on the grand jury pressing ahead with its inquiry of charges involving kickbacks, with only 17 days remaining before the statutory limit expires on some of the allegations.

There was no word on who the grand jury would be hearing when it resumes its investigation. Security continued tight at the federal courthouse where it meets. The Justice Department argued Friday that Agnew was subject to indictment while in office, contrary to his contention of immunity.

Commissioners Okay Presentation Of Plan

City commissioners today authorized the Merriman and Barber consultant engineering firm to present a preliminary plan to the Texas Water Quality Board for the chlorination of Pampa's sewage treatment plant.

The TWQB has ordered Pampa to chlorinate its effluent because the plant is presently providing less than an 8-day retention time with its oxidation ponds.

The board pointed out that state and federal requirements call for chlorination unless the domestic plant dischargers provide a 25-day retention time in the ponds.

Gene Barber, of the consultant engineering firm, told commissioners the oxidation plan to be presented would be a temporary proposal pending outcome of the city's application for a federal grant to modify the local plant and bring it up to state standards.

The city already has applied for $550,000 federal aid to provide 75 per cent of the cost of the new plant construction.

In other business today, Commissioners set Nov. 13 to receive bids for the purchase of city equipment with federal revenue sharing funds.

Contemplated purchases would include a pumper fire engine, engineering department equipment, three trucks for the water and sewer department, a sedan, four trucks and a motor grader for the public works department and four trucks and three packer bodies for the sanitation department.

The city also took under study a recommendation of the City Traffic Commission that the traffic light at W. Francis and N. Frost streets be changed for a 30-day test period from a stop and go signal to a blinking amber signal on Francis and a blinking red signal on Frost.

Approval was given for the payment of September bills totaling $33,924.50.

Chamber Officers Installation Is Set

Don Hileman, executive vice president and general manager of the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce, will install new officers and directors of the Pampa chamber at a directors' meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Crown and Shield Room of the Pampa Club.

New officers to be installed are Rex McAnely, president; C.E. Steel, vice president, and Melvin Kunkel, finance director.

Newly elected directors to be installed are Artie Aftergut, Al Bassett, E.L. Green, Jr., Benny Kirksey, David McDaniel, Aubrey Steele, Gary Stevens, F.E. Imel, Henry Newman and J.C. Roberts.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — One of the first things you learn in the newspaper business is to beware of absolutes.
 Report that something unprecedented has happened and you almost certainly will find yourself writing a correction for the next edition.
 For someone surely will discover that the same thing happened in East Iota, Iowa, back in 1903.
 Due primarily to inexperience, most physicians lack this cautionary bent. When a doctor commits himself to the public prints, he is likely to toss in a few categorical statements, figuring, perhaps, that nobody will bother to check them out.
 Which may be what happened in an article on insomnia in the current issue of McCall's magazine.
 The author, Dr. William Nolen, wrote that "no one ever died of insomnia." When I read this, I said to myself "Aha! I'll bet my last bottle of barbiturates he wrote that off the top of his head without consulting his medical library."
 Since insomnia is not normally considered a terminal condition, I'll bet he just assumed nobody had ever died of it, I said.
 So saying, I picked up my copy of the Guinness Book of World Records and turned to the section on "Sleeplessness."
 11 Days, Plus
 There I was informed that the longest recorded period a human being had gone without sleep under medical supervision was the 11 days, 18 hours and 55 minutes of wakefulness logged by Mrs. Bertha Van Der Merwe of Cape Town, South Africa, in 1968.

 I also was informed that a certain Toimi Artturiinpoika Silvo of Hamina, Finland, was reputed to have stayed awake from March 1 to April 2 in 1967.
 Both apparently survived, although Silvo lost 33 pounds.
 On the surface, these records appear to support Nolen's reference to zero fatalities among insomnia victims. But bear in mind both were cases of voluntary sleeplessness. Insomnia, of course, is anything but voluntary.
 Guinness curiously fails to include the record for involuntary sleeplessness. Nevertheless, it contains grounds for impugning Nolen.
 It reports that a certain Eustace Rushworth Burnett of Hove, Leicestershire, England, "claimed to have lost all desire to sleep in 1907, and that he never again went to bed." He finally died in 1965 at the age of 85.
 Since Guinness does not list the cause of death, it must be assumed that Burnett died from lack of sleep. It took 58 years, but insomnia finally killed him.
 In his next article, I trust that Nolen will acknowledge the lethal potential of insomnia. If something else doesn't get you first, sooner or later insomnia will.

Dallas Bus System May Help Fuel Crisis

By FRANK GRIFFIS
DALLAS (UPI) — Leaning forward, glaring at the car in front of him, the businessman pounded on his horn — as if the noise would blast the long line of cars off the jammed freeway and let him get to work on time.
 Before the end of 1973, that businessman and hundreds like him may be able to park their cars at a terminal in north Dallas and ride buses the nine miles to downtown office buildings, according to Rod Kelly, 34, assistant director of the Dallas city traffic department.
 "I don't think this could be considered the ultimate answer, but it could help minimize a number of problems," Kelly said. "It could reduce the energy requirement. I have the potential to reduce pollution as well as just concentrating on the movement of people instead of vehicles."
 The express buses will leave the "park and ride" station, station, which closely resembles an airport terminal, every five minutes and will travel nonstop to the downtown Dallas business district.
 The terminal area initially will accommodate from 300 to 500 cars, with plans for a 10-acre parking lot for up to 2,000 vehicles.
 "It shouldn't require a large scale capital expenditure because the service will utilize existing bus equipment," Kelly said. "It won't require construction of buildings since the major requirement will be the paved parking area for autos."
 Kelly said the service can be provided at a relatively low cost, with one charge for parking and riding to add to the convenience.
 The service could substantially reduce the number of autos traveling on Dallas' major freeway corridors, Kelly said, figuring on an average auto occupancy of 1.5 persons, compared to 50 passengers per bus.

 Long range plans call for a fixed-guideway transit system, which has forced city planners to look at railroad right-of-way properties, Kelly said, to facilitate rapid rail transportation.
 "We're shooting to have some form of park and ride service in operation this fall," he said. "It won't be cross-town, but there's nothing to prevent us at some future date from offering cross-town service."
 To speed up the movement of express buses on arterial streets, the vehicles will be equipped with electronic devices to enable drivers to extend green traffic signals until the bus is through the intersection.
 "We're also attempting to do some other things that would expedite the operation of buses and other traffic such as ramp metering," Kelly said. "We have already placed signals on some entrance ramps to control the volume of traffic which can enter a freeway."
 The ramp signals keep the level of traffic at a satisfactory volume to prevent "stop-and-go" flows, Kelly said.
 The city also plans to install traffic signals at major freeway interchanges, he said, and to coordinate signals along service roads to allow some traffic to travel the feeders instead of the freeways.
 "Then there is the urban corridor demonstration project which will provide separate entrance ramps for buses to the freeway to allow them to bypass any line of traffic onto the freeway to prevent delays," Kelly said.
 Although service will be aimed primarily at the worker, it will be available to shoppers, according to Kelly.
 "The service will be scaled down to meet demand; so naturally there will be lighter service during off-peak hours," he said. "There probably will be some late night or early morning shut down of the facility."
 Kelly is optimistic about the proposed transit system. He said Minneapolis has a system identical to that planned by Dallas, and it has effectively cleared some of the automobile traffic from the freeway.
 "Seattle and Milwaukee use existing parking available in shopping centers in six or eight locations with six or eight routes," Kelly said. "It works quite well."

Some Owners Are Charging For Road Maps

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The things motorists once took for granted as they wheeled into their service stations now carry a price tag in some areas.
 Irritated by inflation and lower profits, some gas station dealers are installing pay toilets, charging a dime or even a quarter for road maps and even demanding a fee for cleaning windshields and checking the oil.
 "Over the years, it's been a million-dollar giveaway," said Chevron owner Bill Fleep. "Some people look at them (road maps) once, crumple them up like Kleenex and throw them away."
 Gulf dealer Paul Allen said, "Maybe they'll appreciate the maps if they pay for them. Anyway, if we were allowed to make money on our (gasoline) products, we could keep the free services."
 Gulf and Chevron dealers, who pay nine cents for the road maps, are selling them for a dime or a quarter.
 Standard Oil, Arco, Union 76, Texaco, Exxon, Shell, Phillips and Mobile dealers still do not charge for maps "but it sure sounds like a good idea," said one Texaco station manager.

PLAGER SUSPENDED
MONTREAL (UPI) — Bob Plager of the St. Louis Blues is under indefinite suspension by the National Hockey League until the club can provide league President Clarence Campbell with a suitable guarantee that the rugged defenseman will avoid further misconduct.
 Plager was suspended "for physically interfering with the game officials in carrying out their duties and threatening physical violence to the referee" during an exhibition game at Brantford, Ont., between the Blues and the Pittsburgh Penguins Sept. 29. Plager shoved Referee Andy Van Hellemond during a bench-clearing incident.

TV In Review

By DICK DU BROW
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Notes to watch television by The Headliners: Flip Wilson will be host of the noncommercial video network's Oct. 29 special about old age. "Wrinkles, Birthdays and Other Fables," which uses an entertainment format to explore problems of the elderly. Other show business names scheduled to appear in the special include Rose Marie, Barbara Feldon, Art Linkletter and Sue Anne Langdon. ABC-TV's Bobby Riggs-Billie Jean King tennis match finished third among all programs in the national ratings for the week ending Sept. 23, trailing only the movie "Bonnie and Clyde" and the series "All in the Family."
 One of the astounding things about the Riggs-King rating is that the match, transmitted live, ended before network prime time in the Far West even began.
 Britain's royal wedding of Princess Anne to Capt. Mark Phillips will get lengthy coverage on CBS-TV and NBC-TV the morning of Nov. 14. Lee Remick is reported set to star in the life story of the American-born mother of Winston Churchill—Jennie Jerome—in a British television miniseries, "Jennie, Lady Randolph Churchill," aimed at broadcast on U.S. home screens next season. David Brinkley marks his 30th anniversary with NBC late this month.

 NBC-TV says its Oct. 28 special, "Peggy Fleming Visits the Soviet Union," filmed entirely in the U.S.S.R. with the internationally-known ice skater, will be broadcast on Russian television the same day.
 The network adds that the hour, which also features Russian performers, is "the first co-production of an entertainment special by an American company (Bob Banner Associates) and the U.S.S.R."
 The first time U.S. and Soviet cameramen worked jointly on an entertainment production ever scored in the U.S.S.R. under the direction of an American conductor and using the Soviet Television and Radio Symphony Orchestra.
 A two-hour dramatization of the story of baseball's Roy Campanella, the great Dodger catcher whose career was cut short by a 1958 auto accident that crippled him, will be broadcast by CBS-TV Feb. 22, and entitled "It's Good To Be Alive." Based on Campanella's autobiography of the same title, the teleplay will be directed by former "Bonanza" star Michael Landon, who has written and directed numerous video stories. As previously announced, NBC-TV is planning a 90-minute dramatization of the life of baseball's Roberto Clemente, the great Pittsburgh Pirate outfielder who was killed last Dec. 31 in a plane crash off Puerto Rico while attempting to take relief supplies to earthquake victims in Nicaragua.

 Commission officials singled out improper illumination as the most serious hazard facing bike riders. Bike-car collisions account for only about 38,000 of the estimated one million-plus bicycle-related injuries that occur each year. But these are the ones most likely to cause death and serious injury.
 To make bikes more visible to a car approaching from the side, officials are looking at reflectors which ring the tire sidewalls or which cover the wheel spokes.
 The commission's recent listing of bicycles as perhaps the most hazardous product on the American market will prompt other revisions as well.
 One of them, an official said, involves the distance between the seat and the gear shift level in multi-speed bikes where the gear control is placed between the rider's legs.

Veteran Of 24 Years Attains Highest Rank

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Thomas N. Barnes was just 18 when he entered Air Force boot camp at Lackland AFB. This week, 24 years later, Barnes departs San Antonio to assume duties in Washington as the highest-ranked of more than 500,000 enlisted men and women in the Air Force.
 He is the fourth man in history and the first black to assume the rank of chief master sergeant of the Air Force, the enlisted right-hand man of the secretary of Air Force and Air Force chief of staff.
 Barnes, father of four daughters and two sons ages 10 to 18, worked his way through the ranks beginning in April, 1949, as an airman recruit.

 "I'll travel around the United States and overseas, wherever we have personnel stationed," Barnes said. "I'll be observing their conditions overall. I'll be concerned primarily with health, welfare and morale, and of course that covers a very broad spectrum."
Recognizes Need
 He said the Air Force has recognized the need for an enlisted man to keep contact with non-officer members of the service.
 "I think the idea of having an enlisted representative is that having come up through the ranks we would have an understanding of those problems experienced by enlisted people. And of course we would have rapport and relationships with all grades, ages and sexes of enlisted people, more than any other medium we know."
 Barnes showed his acumen for handling touchy situations a year ago when a group of black airmen took over a dining hall at Laredo AFB, Tex., demanding to air a list of grievances. Barnes was one of the troubleshooters sent by Air Training Command to look at the situation, which was resolved without use of any discipline.

No Violence

Requirement For Reflectors

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government may soon require bicycles to carry reflectors on their sides as well as front and back to reduce nighttime accidents, the most serious hazard facing bike riders.
 Requirements for quality of brakes and strength of frames also are part of proposed regulations now being put in final form by the Consumer Product Safety Commission and expected to be issued before the year is out.

A Little More Subtle
 "The things you see today are not so much in public places, rather they're a little more subtle than that. There are rentals of houses for families who can't live on base for one reason or another and have to depend on the surrounding community for housing," Barnes said.
 "But these are the types of problems this command (Air Training Command) has surely been working hard on that have diminished tremendously. I'm not saying it's all gone at all. We still have some problems, but there sure has been a diminishing of that type of problem."

Business Today

By LEONARD CURRY
UPI Business Writer
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The scenario is pure James Bond: A manicured, staffed country mansion replete with Rolls Royces and Jaguars in Britain, banks in Switzerland, million-dollar cattle ranches in Panama, rendezvous in Luxembourg, Miami and Las Vegas.

Behind the expensive props, however, stands a Telex rented for $160 a month, a woman who answers the telephone with a crisp "Bank of Sark, Limited" and transfers calls to a man who plays the role of the moment—whether it be Bank of Sark president, director or chief financial officer.

The game being played, allegedly by a syndicate of criminals including members of the Mafia, is designed to convert an estimated $50 billion in stolen and counterfeit securities into dollars, francs, marks, pounds and other legitimate currencies.

The targets of fraudulent schemes to market or otherwise make the bogus securities negotiable are stockbrokers, bankers, businessmen and even government officials in some developing nations.

A complicated network of criminals posing as legitimate businessmen is being exposed in a series of hearings by the Senate Permanent Investigations subcommittee, chaired by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash.

The subcommittee has been probing stolen securities since facts began emerging that during the Wall Street "paper crunch" of 1969-70 they disappeared in wholesale lots. An inside look at the way mobsters converted bogus securities into hard cash has begun shaping up recently. Evidence presented by subcommittee investigator Philip R. Manuel and Louis Pasquale "The Doctor" Mastriana, a convicted con artist who bilked banks, brokers and businessmen for more than $1 million in three years, has been illuminating.

The Bank of Sark existed only on paper, but had a cast of about 20 characters, now in jails or awaiting trials in Europe, Africa, North and South America.

They worked "rather openly," subcommittee investigator Manuel said. "Each promoted the fraudulent schemes of the other for mutual benefit and profit."

Mastriana and other "outside" men would deposit stolen securities with the Bank of Sark in exchange for letters of credit and Bank of Sark checks—gray for business use, pink for personal.

Armed with these paper documents of alleged value, outside men would move into a small city or a suburb of a large city.

Mastriana, alternately smiling and wiping his bald head and brow with a white linen handkerchief, told how he posed as a shopping center developer in Texas. After looking over multimillion-dollar sites, he asked the realtor to guide him to a bank. There, Mastriana testified, he opened an account with a worthless $100,000 Bank of Sark check.

WITH SERVICE IN MIND — The people at both locations of Dixie Parts and Supply are always ready to aid Pampa-area customers to find the parts and accessories needed for repair and customizing of vehicles. Peggy Cannon, shown here, is Dixie Parts and Supply's bookkeeper. The two locations are at 417 S. Cuyler and 1421 N. Hobart. (Staff Photo)

Dixie Parts Carries Full Line Auto Parts, Accessories

Dixie Parts and Supply, with two convenient locations, provides Pampa and the surrounding area with an automobile supply center that is unequalled in the trade zone.

Complete lines of brand names and factory guaranteed parts are kept in complete stock at both store locations, 417 S. Cuyler and 1421 N. Hobart.

Many years of experience in the supply field by the Dixie personnel insure sound purchases for the customer. Parts for all trucks and cars are in supply and can be obtained by fast individual order.

Auto air conditioning is another feature of the stores. Operating with the slogan, "complete stock auto parts," Dixie has in the stores such items as mufflers and tailpipes, starters, generators, shock absorbers, fuel pumps and brake shoes.

All automobile accessories are available. Professional and backyard mechanics are reminded that for the best replacement parts on any model of any make of automobile, they can give Dixie a call.

If they don't have the part or accessory in stock, they will be happy to make quick and special orders. Years of successful business and many satisfied customers in the Pampa area testify to the quality of merchandise and service offered by the stores.

Business Briefs

AUSTIN (UPI) — Texas capital chatter:

New Railroad Commission member Mack Wallace, who declined to sign a controversial order granting Lo-Vaca gathering company permission to raise its natural gas rates to a number of Texas cities, is wading into the red tape that engulfs much of the commission's business.

"I've been sitting in that chair reading more rules and regulations than I ever knew existed on the face of this earth," said Wallace, who joined the commission Sept. 15 following the resignation of Commissioner Byron Tunnell.

The Texas Republican Citizen, published monthly by the state GOP headquarters, chides Speaker Price Daniel Jr. strongly for appointing veteran Rep. W. S. Healy, D-Paducah, to the Legislative Budget Board.

The magazine says "considering Healy's record as a pork barrel specialist, this was considered either (1) stupid, or (2) a political payoff due for Healy's support in the speaker's race and possibly for upcoming races."

Daniel has denied he made any deals to get Healy's support in the speaker's race.

The same issue of the Republican Citizen gives an indication of the stature of former Gov. John Connally in the Texas GOP rank. The magazine has six pictures of Connally, and only two of Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., one of George Bush and none of President Nixon or Vice President Agnew.

ARKANSAS TRAVELER
LITTLE ROCK (UPI) — The government made its first attempt to build roads in Arkansas in 1824. A road from Little Rock to Memphis, Tenn., was opened in 1828, but only for limited traffic.

Law, Business Finish Second In 1972 DCN

By ARNOLD B. SAWISLAK
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite the grumbling of George Meany and the other Old Bulls of organized labor, it was lawyers and businessmen rather than unionists who lost influence at the 1972 Democratic National Convention.

A survey of last year's delegates conducted for the Democratic Delegate Selection Commission by Prof. Robert A. Hittin of Georgetown University indicated that there actually was a larger percentage of labor officials holding delegate seats in 1972 than in 1968.

Hittin's survey, using questionnaires sent out this year and CBS statistics compiled for the last two conventions, showed sharp drops in the percentages of both businessmen and lawyers as delegates.

CBS showed 30 per cent of the delegates in 1968 were lawyers, compared to 12 per cent in 1972. Hittin's figures showed 10.9 per cent lawyers in 1972.

chase or sale, plus a fixed sum, each varying with the size of the order:

Stock costs	%	Plus
$100-799	2.0	$ 6.40
800-2,499	1.3	12.00
2,500 up	0.9	22.00

Except that on stocks priced at 47-7/8 or higher, the maximum commission per round lot is $65. To the commissions produced by this formula, you now add 10 per cent on transactions up to $5,000, 15 per cent from $5,001 to $300,000.

Commissions on odd lots, fewer than 100 shares, are figured on the same percentage for the same dollar-amount ranges as above, but the fixed "plus" is $2 less, while there is an additional odd-lot charge, per share, of 12-1/2 cents, which brokers quaintly call "an eighth."

Thus the commission on buying 20 shares of a $30 stock works out to $20.79, or 3.5 per cent of the investment. But twice as many shares, 40, carry a commission not twice as large, but $33.66, or 2.8 per cent.

CHRYSLER FULL-LINE—Pampa Chrysler-Dodge Inc., 821 W. Wilks, now offers the complete line of Chrysler products—Chrysler, Plymouth, Dodge and Dodge Trucks. If you are in need of a new automobile or pickup, the place to go is Pampa Chrysler-Dodge.

Doug Boyd Is Now Offering Full-Line Chrysler Products

Since the first of this year, Doug Boyd, car dealer in Pampa for over 13 years, has had the Chrysler Products dealership for Pampa.

Pampa Chrysler Dodge Inc. is the first dealership in Pampa to offer the entire line of Chrysler automobiles and trucks — Chrysler, Plymouth, Dodge and Dodge trucks.

Located at 821 W. Wilks, the motor company features a four-car showroom and a half-block area completely full of cars for your selection.

Chrysler now offers an electronic ignition system as standard equipment on all its vehicles. It is a feature only available on Chrysler products.

Eliminated as an area of concern in a Chrysler vehicle is the replacement of points and the condenser — they have been eliminated from the system.

With no points to replace the car needs no distributor timing adjustments.

Also, in a Chrysler product automobile, or pickup there are fewer spark plug replacements. Chrysler recommends replacement at 18,000 miles.

Most other manufacturers recommend that the plugs be changed after 12,000 miles.

Seek And You Will Find Says Land Educator

By MICHAEL O. WESTER
LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — National alarm over total depletion of domestic natural gas reserves may be premature by as much as a generation, and can best be overcome by a return to simple philosophy, a land studies educator believes.

Dr. Frank B. Conselman, president of the American Institute of Professional Geologists and a Texas Tech university professor, suggests a return by the industry to the simple philosophy of "seek and ye shall find."

"If we do not drill exploratory wells, we get no more discoveries," he said. "Or, as has happened, if we decrease our drilling, we decrease our discoveries and our reserves must inevitably decline as withdrawals continue."

"If we don't seek, we won't find," said Conselman, director of the International Center for Arid and Semi-arid Land Studies.

Consumption Jumps
In recent decades natural gas has become a most popular commodity—so popular, in fact, that an excess of demand over supply has resulted in reserves being far outdistanced by consumption.

Conselman said there is adequate time for effective future planning on the position of natural gas in this country's national policy "before our present energy structure crashes about our ears, as some anticipate."

Many economic and political philosophers appear to forget that we are talking about known reserves when the numbers are quoted. Conselman said: "It is a simple arithmetical exercise to divide our known reserves by annual consumption and arrive at the number of years until doomsday."

Reserves Unknown
He said, however, that no one knows how much natural gas actually underlies the United States or any other region and that it is not humanly possible to know.

"All that is known with any degree of assurance is how much gas we have already found," he said.

Conselman said many of the country's decision makers apparently are convinced that when present U.S. proved reserves are exhausted, the nation will be entirely out of domestic gas and will have to look to imports or substitutes.

PERSONAL FINANCE

A soak-the-poor market scheme?

By Carlton Smith
Brokerage commissions are up again. With what effect on the small investor — or "little guy," as they like to call him on Wall Street?

At first blush it sounds as if the little guy is getting a break, for a change. In the lower ranges (the dollar amount of a purchase or sale), present commissions will be increased by 10 per cent. When the amount involved is above $5,000, the increase is 15 per cent.

If that sounds like a soak-the-rich plan, though, you need only get out your pocket calculator, and work out what actually happens in terms of the percentage of your profits going to brokerage fees under the new schedules.

(And don't ask "what profits?" That is not considered good taste in today's market.)

The small investor, as it turns out, is required to fork over a larger percentage of his investment, in commissions, than his more affluent colleagues. Costs are calculated on the basis of a "round trip" — that is, buying the stock, and eventually selling it, since one has to sell to realize a profit.

Those who buy and sell "odd lots" — less than 100 shares at a clip — have always paid relatively high commissions. Buying 20 shares of a stock priced at $10 a share, for example, under the former fee schedule you paid $21.80. Now it's $23.98 — a big enough slice of the $200 investment, no doubt, to make many a little guy wonder if he shouldn't just keep his money in the bank.

More interesting is the contrast between the size of the bite on this little guy, and that on the more affluent investor who gives his broker a $5,000 order, for a round lot of a $50 stock.

The little guy's fee has been increased by 1.1 percentage points, while the $5,000 customer pays only one-quarter of a point more than he previously did.

Commissions for the round trip eat up less than 3 per cent of the $5,000 investment. They chop 12 per cent off the odd-lotter's $200.

With fees taking that much, stock and eventually selling it, since one has to sell to realize a profit.

Dear Abby

Fatherly love OK, but beware of intimacy

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Would you please write something in your column about overly affectionate fathers who encourage intimate body contact...

This horseplay between my son in law and his 13-year-old daughter involves a lot of wrestling and touching...

Abby, this grandchild is just coming into young womanhood, and it's possible for her to become sexually stimulated and aroused by this sort of thing...

I don't want to hurt my daughter by even suggesting that her husband keep his hands off his daughter. She might even be offended.

Frankly, I am ashamed to be writing this letter. I don't think I'm evil-minded, and I'm no prude...

WORRIED GRANNY

DEAR WORRIED: Touching and hugging is a normal healthy expression of affection between fathers and daughters. But you make a good point...

DEAR ABBY: To "Camille," who wrote to you of her involvement in remembering lonely patients in a nursing home...

I can add to the story by telling you that in Columbus, Ohio, there is a "Remembered Patient Program" of 15 years standing...

It is a beautiful sight for the three of us who work on the committee and for the dedicated staff employed by the hospital...

If you know of any who would be interested in this kind of program, we will be happy to provide material.

THE REMEMBERED PATIENT COMMITTEE

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 10

Your birthday today: MARKS a transition—the reshaping of your life and the clarifying of your spiritual nature...

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Nearby, familiar people are less helpful than those from distant places. Progress depends on your patience and continued effort.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Out of the center of attention, suits your needs and welfare best. Very little goes easily for those who depend on direct public response.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Staying out of the middle promises to be a problem as your closest associates develop conflicting enterprises.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Communications are the crux of today's success—not just words, but feelings and the sharing of opportunity.

mechanical or inflammable is vital.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Older people tend to disagree in your way, particularly if you neglect to develop open cooperation.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Today your natural hope for explicit conditions and exact results may get out of hand.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: You'll be doing very well indeed if you only manage to maintain a steady pace and hold your ground thru the complications of the day.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 22]: Be prepared for a change of course midday and to make the best of mixed conditions afternoon and evening.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Bickering of the morning needn't find you supporting either side. In later hours you can bring everything into harmony.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Once you have solved the puzzle of the day, you can then move to assert and improve your position, claim attention and reward.

Miss Merle Angela McCrea and Jacky Lynn Peoples were united in marriage at 7 p.m. Friday, Sept. 14 in the Trinity United Methodist Church of Ruston, La.

Mr. and Mrs. Edsel W. McCrea, 1916 Fir, Pampa, are parents of the bride and Mr. and Mrs. Melvin J. Peoples, Franklin, La., are parents of the bridegroom.

CEREMONY

The Rev. Merlin Merrill officiated for the double-ring ceremony. Dr. Bretz provided traditional wedding music.

BRIDE

The bride was given in marriage by her father with the "her mother and I" avowal. She wore a formal gown of satin crystalline over soft peau de soie with a fitted empire bodice and long sheer full sleeves.

Her headpiece was the demicup style with rows of lace across it. The veil of crystalline draped to the floor. She carried an arrangement of white roses and daisies.

The bride carried out the tradition of something old, something new, something borrowed, and something blue.

ATTENDANTS

Mrs. Judy Hogan of Ruston served as matron of honor. She wore a floor length dress of light blue with small flowers. She wore a white hat trimmed with a blue ribbon.

MOTHERS

The bride's mother wore a street length dress - jacket ensemble of blue and white knit. She wore a corsage of white roses. The bridegroom's mother wore a street length navy blue dress. Her corsage was made of red roses.

RECEPTION

For the reception held at the church, the serving table was covered with a white cloth. The two-tiered wedding cake was ornated with a miniature bride and bridegroom.

The tiers of the cake were divided by columns and decorated with blue flower and ribbon designs. The top tier was saved for the couples first year anniversary celebration.

For the wedding trip to Monroe, La., the bride wore a navy blue and white knit dress and navy blue shoes. Her corsage was made of red roses.

AFFILIATIONS

The bride and bridegroom both are juniors at Louisiana Tech University in Ruston. The bride is majoring in elementary education, and the bridegroom is majoring in Industrial Management.

OUT-OF-TOWN GUESTS

The out-of-town guests were Mrs. and Mrs. Edsel W. McCrea, Doline McCrea, Alan McCrea, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin J. Peoples, Joey Peoples, and Mrs. and Mrs. Ray Manhart.

By LINNIE LESTER

Present Thursday for the October birthday party and wearing a smile, big like Texas, was Mrs. Myrtle Smith. She had observed her 92nd birthday, Oct. 1.

59 others seniors were present and those having October birthdays were Mes. Edith Norris, Rosalie Wedge, Lillie Reynolds, Muriel Kingery, Emma Banks and H.G. Lawrence and W.D. Wasson. Each one received a gift.

Sponsors and hostesses for the afternoon were members of the Altrusa Club, and serving 'home grown' cakes, ice cream and coffee were Mrs. Louise Sewell, chairman, and Mes. Lora Dunn, Olive Hills, Libby Shotwell, and Lillian Snow.

The cakes were baked by Mes. Evelyn Mason, Virginia Jolly, Libby Shotwell, and Jean Scott.

We are sorry Mrs. Mae Hatcher's name was omitted last week, as one of the hostesses. She served with the Rebekah Lodge Women.

Mrs. Edith Lawrence brought a beautiful floral arrangement for the October-born. It represents spooks, pumpkins, and ghosts. Mr. and Mrs. D.W. Kendrick spent a lovely week visiting an aunt, Mrs. Vivian Head, and a cousin, Ruth Vest at Blossom, Tex.

Mr. and Mrs. Jay Evans, accompanied by their daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Runyon, spent last week with a daughter, Mr. and Mrs. W.D. Oates in Dallas.

Mrs. Lewis Henderson traveled to Amarillo Thursday for an eye examination. Welcomed as visitors Thursday were Mrs. W.T. Donnell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W.R. Emmons, Mr. Henry Lewis and W.G. Ehaman.

Jackson-Phillips

Mrs. Tom Anderwald of White Deer and T.C. Jackson of Groom, are announcing the engagement of their daughter, Twila Jo Jackson and Samuel Dodds Phillips. Parents of the prospective bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. R.H. Phillips of Graham. A Nov. 16 wedding in the First United Methodist Church of White Deer is being planned.

FIRST BAPTIST WOMEN

The Baptist women met in the dining hall of the church for a luncheon at 12 noon, Wednesday, Oct. 3. John Glover gave the prayer of grace.

The group adjourned to the lower auditorium for their regular business meeting and Royal Service study, with president, Mrs. Jack White, presiding.

The Call to Prayer was given by Mrs. James Malone. Mrs. Sam Condo, secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting and Mrs. Paul Turner gave the treasurer's report.

Mrs. White announced upcoming dates and events of importance. She invited all women to attend the prayer meetings each evening from 7 until 9 p.m., in homes for the group from the church who are on the Korean Crusade.

Nov. 5 is to be Baptist Women's Day of Prayer and Nov. 21 is the date set for the mission study book to be taught. The mission action project accepted for the month of October is donations to help insulate a medical building used in the Rio Grande River Ministry.

Various chairmen gave reports of activities of their groups of the month of September.

It was noted that the church has gone over their goal for state missions offering.

Mrs. White turned the study over to Mrs. Louis Tarpley, program chairman. Mrs. Tarpley reviewed briefly the monthly study programs for the coming year. She presented a study of Rhodesia in a school room setting.

Assisting in the study were "pupils": Mes. Fred Epperly, George Smith, John Glover, Bill Horne, Raymond Neff and Ed Langford.

At the conclusion, Mrs. Smith sang "Heavenly Sunlight" in Rhodesian, with Mrs. Glover accompanying on the piano and the other "pupils" accompanying on instruments from Rhodesia.

Mrs. J.P. Heath adjourned the meeting with prayer. The next Royal Service study will be Wednesday, Nov. 7.

Police in Maryland county take work home in 'personal patrol car' program

By Tom Tiede

FORESTVILLE, Md. — (NEA) — When David Ford, his wife and two children get into the family buggy to go shopping they're not really getting into a family buggy nor are they merely going shopping. They ride a police car and though they set out to pick up the groceries they may also pick up people who break the law.

Recently, as example, the Ford family was en route to a store and had to stop at a traffic light. Waiting, Ford made small talk and his wife burped the baby. Suddenly, another car raced through the intersection and the Fords became suspicious. They followed the vehicle, radioed for help and before the "shopping trip" was over the family had helped catch a thug in a stolen automobile.

Unusual? Of course. But such things are happening with increasing frequency in Prince George's County, Maryland. It's part of the fallout from a county police experiment called the "personal patrol car program." Patrolman David Ford is one of 650 county officers who utilize their squad cars 24 hours a day.

The program, used here and in several other jurisdictions in America, is simple enough. Each officer on the force is assigned a patrol car for on- and off-duty purposes. "It's like his own," says a PGC police spokesman. "On-duty the officer uses it as normal; off duty he takes it home, to the bowling alley, the shopping center, the church — anywhere he goes in the county. The idea is that he is to be ready for emergencies or routine assistance any time he's in the car."

The plan, say PGC police officials, was born of desperation. Prince George's, once largely rural, experienced a 100 per cent increase in the population during the 1960s. Add to this the county's proximity to Washington, D.C. — it borders the capital — and the exploding urbanization has, in the words of one PGC cop, "really" shaken us up around here.

In 1965, the county had 11,615 reported crimes. In 1971 the count was 21,209, and 82.6 per cent increase. "Between 1970 and '71 alone," says PGC police spokesman

DAVID FORD, a police patrolman in Maryland's Prince George's County, takes his family on a shopping trip in his personal patrol car, which he uses while off-duty as part of an experimental program.

John Hoxie, "we had a 25 per cent crime increase. The things happening in Washington began to spill over the border and happen to us."

Understandably, the public began to apply the screws. "They expected more of us," says Sgt. Giacomo San Felice, "and the force responded by implementing the personal patrol car program."

The hope was that fulltime utilization of the cop vehicles would act as a visible deterrent to crime. The county authorized three quarters of a million dollars in November 1971 to get the plan started. Since that time, to equip each man, the number of PGC cars on the road has risen almost threefold, from 225 cars before to 650 today.

Has it worked? PGC cops believe so. In the first 20 months of the program, according to police statistics, off-duty officers have "handled, stood-by or assisted in 24,820 calls or incidents producing 192 felony arrests, 673 misdemeanor arrests and 2,115 traffic arrests." The result is that whereas PGC crime was growing at an annual rate of 14 per cent prior to the program, last year's rise was only 4 per cent. One special encouragement: off-duty policemen issued 1,049 traffic citations in 1972, thus helping to reduce highway fatalities a startling 31 per cent.

The program, to be sure, has not been without its problems. Some county residents protest that the experiment is an exercise in "Big Brother Watching." One young man puts it this way: "I was at the drive-in with my girl and a cop and his family pulled in right beside me. Well, like I didn't want to stay because I was uneasy, but I didn't want to go because he might think I was hiding something." The kid was hiding something: "Yeah, we were smoking grass, before the cop car anyway."

Some police, too, complain. A patrolman says his wife is "afraid to have the damn thing in the driveway, much less ride in it." She fears riding, he says, because of the risk of snipers. And she doesn't like the vehicle in the driveway because it marks their home as a cop residence (there have been numerous instances of home-car vandalism, some of them obscene).

Moreover, besides the complaints, the personal patrol car program has felt some humiliating moments. Says John Hoxie: "I remember this one off-duty officer who got drunk and used his car radio to call the dispatcher. Man, was he smashed. Needless to say that man's patrol car was taken away from him."

Despite such wrinkles, however, the experiment has worked "rather smoothly." Police officials have instituted stiff regulations concerning off-duty use of the cars: no wives can drive, maintenance must be kept up, normal traffic laws must be obeyed. And most families find the extra auto not only valuable ("It's worth about $1,500 a year to an officer" but prestigious; "I'm proud to have the car at our home," says Patrolman Ford's wife, "and everybody in the block feels safer.")

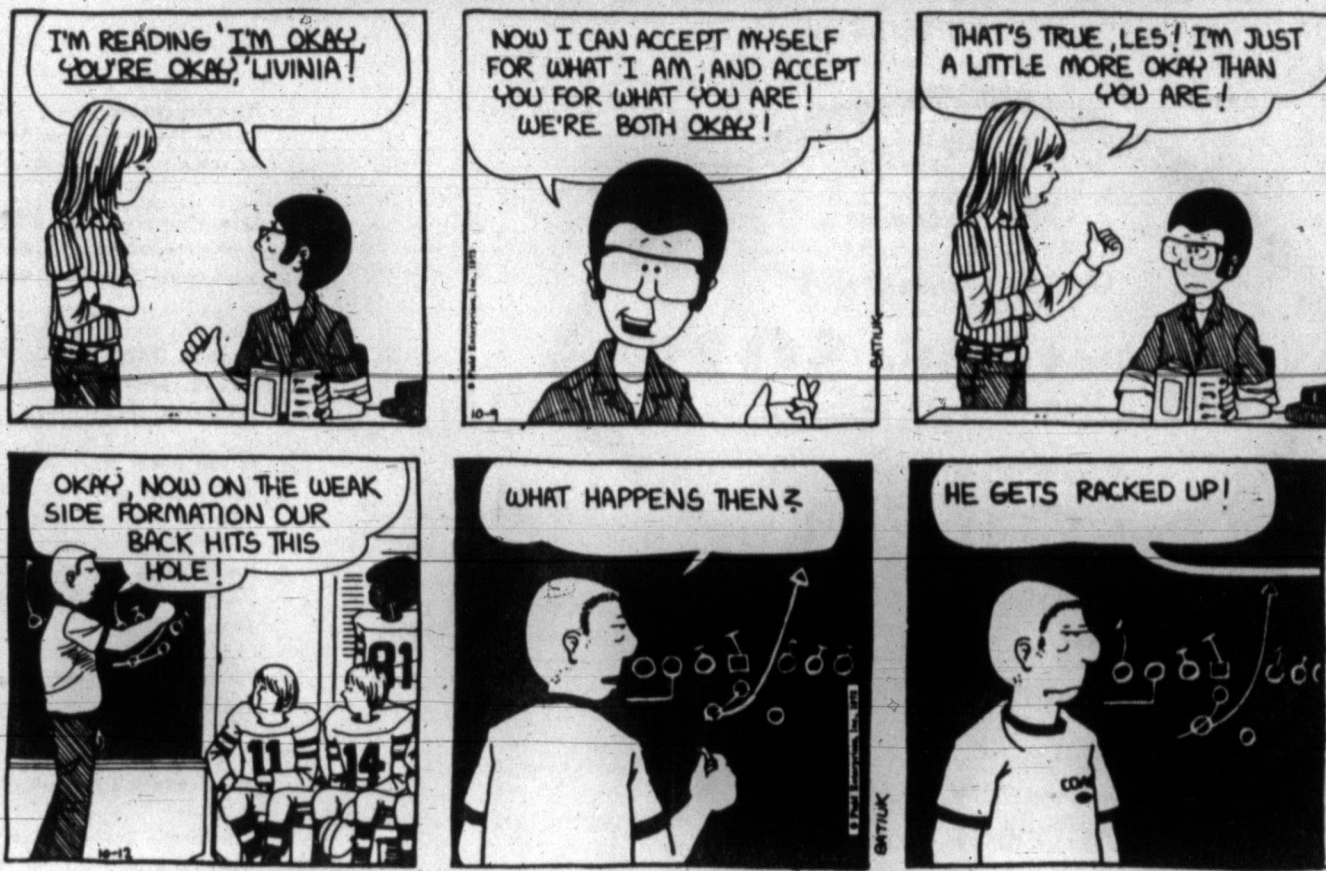

And besides helping reduce crime, says PGC cops, the personal car idea has perhaps also aided community relations. About one of every five off-duty responses has been friendly in nature: to help a man with a flat tire, to help a woman with her bags at the supermarket.

Says Hoxie: "People are beginning to see that cops don't have horns, that they don't always wear badges and that they groan at the meat counter like everyone else."

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Alone and embattled, Vice President Agnew has found he has more friends in the Senate than he thought, even among senators who in the past had avoided him like the political plague.

Agnew, at times depressed over the allegations of wrongdoing against him is being given "large doses" of morale boosting support from Republican senators who have usually been allied with his causes, according to those close to the vice president.

"They're telling him to fight it out to the end," one Agnew aide told UPI.

"At times when things looked bad those phone calls really stiffened his resolve to hang in there and fight," the aide said.

Hatfield Invites Agnew
Democrats, too, have called to wish him well in the battle for his political life. But even Agnew was surprised recently to receive an invitation to meet with the Wednesday Club, a group of liberal GOP senators who have never been considered Agnew partisans.

The invitation came from Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., and Agnew promptly agreed to meet with the group in Hatfield's office while, on the other side of the Capitol, Speaker Carl Albert was announcing that the House would not comply with Agnew's request for a full inquiry into the charges of wrongdoing.

The group included Sens. Charles Mathias of Maryland, Edward Brooke of Massachusetts, Richard Schweiker of Pennsylvania, Charles Percy of Illinois, Clifford Case of New Jersey and J. Glenn Beall of Maryland.

During the two-hour meeting, Agnew discussed his "problems with the news leaks" and the Justice Department's handling of the case but did not go into the specifics of the allegations against him, according to participant in the meeting.

Agnew Morale Boosted
Although Agnew won no new open support for his insistence of innocence of any wrongdoing, "I think there was a lot of sympathy for him," one Wednesday Club member said.

"The poor devil needs all the friends he can get," he said. "No one else seems to want anything to do with him."

Agnew came away from the meeting feeling he had "more friends in the Senate than he had supposed," an Agnew associate said.

"The meeting with the Wednesday group did a lot to boost his morale," he said. "And that was the week he needed it."

Roloff Given A Week

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Evangelist Lester Roloff, given until a week from today to correct 59 deficiencies in two child care centers he operates, says the truth about the schools will be revealed "for the world to evaluate" the day after the deadline.

The Texas Welfare Board has given Roloff until next Monday to get state licenses to operate the Rebekah School for Girls near Corpus Christi and the Anchor Home for Boys at Zapata. To obtain licenses, the schools would have to correct 59 deficiencies, the board said.

But Roloff said Saturday he will hold a rally Oct. 16 to talk about the homes.

"Ever since the Texas Department of Welfare began its onslaught upon our ministry we have turned the other cheek in Christian kindness," Roloff said. "The machinations of untruths and innuendo now compel us to look them straight in the eye and expose their total disregard for the First Amendment of the United States Constitution. "The truth about the Rebekah Christian Academy for Girls and the Anchor Home for Boys will be revealed for the world to evaluate," Roloff said.

Roloff appealed to the Welfare Board Friday asking it to waive some of its licensing requirements for his schools. Attorney Gene Palmer spoke on behalf of Roloff to the three-member board.

"Many of the very detailed regulations set forth by the Department of Public Welfare are considered by Brother Roloff to contravene the tenets of his religious beliefs," Palmer said.

"These institutions are what might be called intensive care religious training," Palmer said. "It is absolutely essential that they continue operating."

Natural Gas Pipeline Co. To Honor Area Employees

Natural Gas Pipeline Company of America will honor six area employees for their long service to the company at a dinner Thursday at the Coronado Inn in Pampa.

An annual event, the awards dinner is one of 21 scheduled during October and November for employees along Natural's western pipeline route extending from the Amarillo area to the upper Midwest. Special guests will be the six employees celebrating five-year multiples of service, while all other area employees and their spouses, along with several executives from the company's Chicago headquarters, also will attend.

The combined service of the six awardees to be honored this year equals 85 years.

Two Pampa residents will receive the company's top service awards. Leroy P. Cantrell, 1527 N. Russell, will be honored for his 25 years of service and James K. Kirkwood, 1924 N. Banks, will receive a 20-year award.

Fifteen-year service awards will go to Lawrence K. Bunch and David Rarden, both residents of Wheeler. Additional award presentations for five years of service will be made to Pampa residents Melvin M. Davis, 709 Doucette, and Charles A. Smith, 1112 Sirrocco.

Charles E. Doubrava, district superintendent at Natural's Pampa facilities, will be master of ceremonies at the dinner.

Natural Gas Pipeline is one of the country's largest gas transmission firms, supplying 48 utility customers in the upper Midwest with natural gas from gas fields in the Texas Panhandle. Natural, a subsidiary of Peoples Gas Company, operates transmission facilities at Pampa and Wheeler.

WW I Model Airplane Is In The Air Again

LIVERMORE, Calif. (UPI) — A World War I Spad 7 fighter plane rebuilt from salvaged spare parts took to the air for the first time Sunday after its owner spent 5,000 man-hours, $40,000, and 2-1/4 years on the project.

The British biplane, originally built in 1916, thus became "the only flying Spad in the United States," said James S. Ricklefs, who searched all over the country for parts to rebuild his plane.

The Spad was flown by test pilot James Nissen for its maiden flight, which lasted about 15 minutes in light rain and ended at rural Meadowlark Field here because "the Spad has no brakes."

"I got interested in antiques about five years ago," said Ricklefs, 59. "I guess I picked World War I vintage as my interest because many of my friends also were interested in that era."

"I've visited every (aeronautical) museum in the United States and Canada, researching this plane and other World War I vintage planes. I have learned that the last one that flew was in 1971 and now is 'grounded' in a museum."

The Spad has a top wing-span of 25 feet, 6 inches, a maximum speed of 123.5 miles an hour, a ceiling of 18,000 feet and an endurance of 3.5 hours. French and British makers turned out 5,820 units of the plane that fighter ace Eddie Rickenbacker called "the best ship I flew."

"Most of it is rebuilt," said Ray Johnson, son-in-law of Ricklefs and manager of the helicopter repair shop in San Carlos where the work was done.

"The point is, we might get an original piece of a Spad airplane, but it may not be airworthy. However, there are a number of original, 1916 parts on the Spad as well."

"The radiator, the wheels and, of course, the engine are original."

Ricklefs found the fuselage of his Spad in disrepair about four years ago in Gastonia, S.C. The radiator was found in Lewiston, Idaho.

Ricklefs, retired head of Rick Helicopters, Inc., which he says is the world's largest commercial helicopter charter firm, said his Spad is a plane "you could have bought for $400 back in the forties when they were considered junk."

Interception, Tackle Kill Dallas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Free safety Brig Owens won it. Strong safety Ken Houston saved it. That was the nutshell of the Washington Redskins' 14-7 victory over the previously unbeaten Dallas Cowboys in their nationally televised struggle Monday night which left the two archrivals tied for the National Football Conference Eastern Division lead with 3-1 records. With 2:33 left to play and the score tied at 7-7, Owens picked off a Craig Morton pass and raced 26 yards into the end zone for the winning margin. With 15 seconds remaining, Houston halted Walt Garrison after a pass reception from Morton on Washington's one to end a desperate bid by the Cowboys for a tie.

"As soon as he threw it, I said this is me," Owens said of his game-winning interception. "I saw it all the way." He raced untouched into the end zone to break the tie and most of the Redskin bench raced down the sideline to join in a jubilant celebration. Owens' TD came shortly after the 'Skins had tied the score on Sonny Jurgensen's one-yard pass to Charley Taylor.

Dallas to a 7-0 lead in the second period when Otto Stowe made a diving catch of his 15-yard pass in the end zone. Jurgensen tossed his one-yard TD pass to Charley Taylor to tie the game with 3:30 left to play. But everything else was defense. These were the evidences of the fierceness of it.

Staubach Sacked 7 Times — Staubach was sacked seven times for losses totalling 45 yards before giving way to Morton because of a slight Charley horse. Jurgensen was dropped five times for losses of 37 yards.

Washington blocked one Dallas punt and two field goal attempts. The Cowboys blocked two field goal efforts by Curt Knight.

Last year's conference rushing champion, Larry Brown, was held to 36 yards rushing on 18 attempts. The Cowboy front four stopped him twice with no gain on their own 10 early in the fourth quarter to take over the ball.

It was the biggest tackle I ever made," Houston said. Morton pumped once. I stepped toward Garrison as he caught it and I brought him down.

The plays by Owens and Houston provided a fitting ending to a game which featured tremendous defense by both teams throughout the tense struggle.

Roger Staubach had passed Dallas to a 7-0 lead in the second period when Otto Stowe made a diving catch of his 15-yard pass in the end zone.

NY Takes Playoff Lead After Whipping Cubs, 9-2

NEW YORK (UPI) — George Stone hopes today to keep a promise he made to Mets teammate Jerry Koonsman prior to Monday's near-riotous third National League playoff game between New York and the Cincinnati Reds.

George told me before the game that if I win today, he would win tomorrow," said Koonsman who pitched the Mets to a 9-2 victory and a 2-1 advantage in the best-of-five series. A win today would send New York into the World Series beginning Saturday in either Oakland or Baltimore.

Stone (12-3), the third straight lefthander to face the Reds, will be opposed by southpaw Fred Norman (13-13).

It's Norman Tuesday and (Jack) Billingham Wednesday," said Reds' Manager Sparky Anderson, confident of a Cincinnati win today that would force a fifth and final playoff game.

Rusty Staub, seemingly fully recovered from two seasons of various hand injuries, slugged two home runs, his second and third of the series, to back the eight-hit, nine-strikeout performance of Koonsman.

Performances Overshadowed — However, the performances of both players was overshadowed by two fights on the field and the ugly actions of some in the crowd of 53,967 that included the throwing of empty whiskey bottles at Reds' leftfielder Pete Rose.

Rose, the fiery Reds' captain and leading hitter in the NL this year with a .338 average, slid hard into Mets shortstop Bud Harrelson in the fifth inning, attempting to break up a double play. No sooner did Harrelson return the throw to first than he and Rose were battling each other on the ground.

Mets' third baseman Wayne Garrett jumped into the melee, signaling the emptying of both benches and bullpen. Right after Rose and Harrelson were separated, relief pitchers Buzz Capra of New York and Pedro Borbon of Cincinnati began swapping punches behind second base.

Nobody was ejected by the umpires but in the bottom of the fifth with New York's Felix Millan at bat and two out, Rose called time after he narrowly missed being hit by an empty whiskey bottle thrown by a fan in the upper leftfield stands.

At that point, Anderson pulled his players off the field and National League President Chub Feeney asked some of the Mets to walk out to leftfield and talk to the fans in an attempt to calm them down.

Feeney suggested we go out and talk to them," said Mets' Manager Yogi Berra, who along with Staub, Cleon Jones, Willie Mays and Tom Seaver, applied to the crowd in left. "We told them we would have to forfeit the game if they continued throwing things," Berra added.

Anderson had his players return to their positions when order was finally restored a few minutes later but admitted, "I would have pulled them again if another object had come out. I don't think under any circumstances you should have a man out there who could get killed."

Mets Held Lead — At the time of the fights, the Mets already held their 9-2 lead thanks mainly to a solo blast by Staub in the first inning off loser Ross Grimsley and a three-run shot off reliever Tom Hall in the second inning that highlighted a five-run inning.

clubhouse a few minutes after the league president made his decision.

Cronin, not wishing to make newsmen there a part of the discussion, told Finley "I don't think we should hold this conversation in front of all these people."

Finley wasn't immediately mollified but later, while eating a box lunch in his office, said he was surprised Cronin called the game off so quickly.

No ABA Foul Outs To Happen In 73-74

NEW YORK (UPI) — Wilt Chamberlain, who never fouled out of an NBA game, isn't going to foul out of an ABA game, either.

And neither is anyone else. The American Basketball Association Monday decided to institute a no-foul-out rule.

The trustees of the ABA passed the revolutionary and controversial rule for regular season games and playoffs in 1973-74 by a conference call vote.

The rule will be in effect when the ABA starts its regular season Wednesday night.

The vote wasn't disclosed but it took a majority of the 10 owners to pass the new rule.

The rule reads: "No player will be disqualified because of the number of personal fouls he may accumulate during a game and overtime periods. When a player commits his seventh or succeeding fouls, the fouled team will retain possession of the ball after the fouled player attempts any free throw or free throws which he is awarded."

The rule had been in effect on an experimental basis for exhibition games.

Some skeptics said the rule would increase fouling in the game. But an ABA study of the exhibition games showed that fouls were up less than one per team over last year's pre-season play.

Some of the details will be ironed out Tuesday. Among the highly technical details of the rule to be straightened out are:

Whether free throws should be allowed or not allowed along with possession when a team is in the bonus situation; or an offensive foul or a rebounding foul.

Mike Storen, the commissioner of the ABA, said, "I'm very happy that the trustees have seen fit to adopt this new rule. We feel that it is in keeping with past policies of the ABA which have been toward bettering the game of pro basketball."

Jack Refuses 1st-Place Money In Ohio Tourney

KINGS MILLS, Ohio (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus is widely known as a golfer. Monday, he showed himself to be a pretty straight shooter too.

Nicklaus, who turned the first annual Ohio-Kings Island Golf Tournament into a laughier, winning by six shots, refused to accept the $25,000 first prize.

He said he didn't think it would be right for him to "profit" from the tournament, which was held on the Jack Nicklaus Golf Center course and which he had been so instrumental in promoting.

Nicklaus turned the check back over to Charles Mechem, with $5,000 of it to go to the Boy Scouts of America and the other $20,000 to be used to start a scholarship fund at Ohio State University in the name of his father who died in 1970.

"I felt the whole reason for me to be in golf to the people of southwestern Ohio and for me to profit from the tournament would violate that motivation," said the Golden Bear, who owns half of the course and also helped in designing it.

The victory, Nicklaus' sixth of the year and 50th in a pro career which began in 1962, gave him the money winning lead for the year over Bruce Crampton, who did not compete.

Although he shot a one-over-par 72 in Monday's final round, he never led by less than five shots and birdied the final hole for a final six-stroke margin over runner-up Lee Trevino.

Trevino, who was paired with Nicklaus and Tom Weiskopf in the final round, had a 68 Monday and a total of 277, while Weiskopf tied with young Andy North for third with 281.

8 — Houston Rockets
NBA — Central Division
1972-73 finish: W-33, L-49 — 3rd place

PROSPECTUS: The story of the Houston Rockets is that they score a hell of a lot of points. However, the other team usually scores a few more. The Rockets had six players in double figures at season's end, yet finished one game out of last place in their division. Only Philadelphia played poorer defense, according to statistics. Johnny Egan, who took over as coach during the season, is bright and knowledgeable enough to mold a team, even if at 34 he is the youngest coach in the league. He has some good material, though he is weakest at the most important NBA position — center.

FORWARDS: They can shoot, but how strong will they be off the boards? Rudy Tomjanovich (19.3 scoring average) and Jack Marin (18.5) provide formidable firepower but neither is considered a great rebounder in the tradition of a DeBusschere or Sitas. Cliff Meely is a yeoman backstopper. However, rookie Ed Ratleff, a 6-6 guard in college, could be such a tough forward. Rating: B-

CENTER: Otto Moore and Don Smith standing on each others' shoulders could then be competitive against some of the league's top centers. Individually, though, it's a losing battle. Rating: C

GUARDS: The strongest and the weakest part of the team. Strong in ability and potential. Weak, too often, in performance. Jimmy Walker is still one of the most talented players in the league. Yet too often he needs not one but two and sometimes three balls to get off the number of shots he desires. He averaged 18 points a game last year. Mike Newlin, who averaged a point less than Walker a game, is developing into a strong guard. While Calvin Murphy (13 a game) is, at 5-9, one of the most spectacular players in the game. Ratleff could be of help back there. too. Rating: B-

PREDICTION: Without a center of prodigious proportions, the Rockets will zoom nowhere, even if Ratleff makes it big. The front line is not formidable enough on the boards to make an outstanding contender.

Texas Picked In College Golf

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — College golf's premier fall event, the William H. Tucker Intercollegiate Tournament, gets under way Wednesday with the University of Texas favored to win its second straight crown.

However, the Longhorns should have their hands full in the 19th annual Tucker tournament, with the likes of Houston, Oklahoma State, Louisiana State, New Mexico State, Brigham Young and host New Mexico in the 25-team men's field.

Arizona's female delegation is expected to capture the crown in that division again. At least 10 women's teams will be entered.

The 72-hole event will be played over the rugged 7,200-yard University of New Mexico south course which features mountainous fairways and roughs that drop off into canyons.

The tournament is named for the late William H. Tucker, one of the pioneers of golf in America who retired in Albuquerque in 1952 and designed the UNM north course.

Texas is minus three-time NCAA champ Ben Crenshaw, who elected to turn professional, but the Longhorns are paced by Texas State amateur champion Tony Pfaff. Texas finished third in last year's NCAA championships.

OU-Texas Saturday!

By United Press International

When Darrell Royal assumed command of the University of Texas football team in 1957, it only took one year for him to bring an end to what at the time was an Oklahoma domination of the annual Longhorn-Sooner one-day war.

During the next 13 years Texas was winner 12 times over Oklahoma in their October meeting.

But for the past two seasons it has been all Oklahoma and that gnaws more than just a little bit on Royal.

"I don't like getting beat twice in a row by anybody," Royal said. "In fact, once in a row is bad enough, and twice in a row begins to taste real bad."

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer knows the revenge motive is a strong one.

"They may have an extra edge since they have lost two years in a row," Switzer said. "Texas is the same kind of team as they have been in the past. The Texas game is always a brawl. Just a knockdown, dragout fight."

So it should be, with 75,000 persons filling the Cotton Bowl and a national television audience looking on.

To Royal, the game has not changed any since he used to play in it donned in the red of Oklahoma.

"You don't win football games like this one with trickery," he said. "It's a battle of the trenches, meat on meat, flesh on flesh and that's the only way you can play it."

Somewhere along the line, somebody's got to be moved or prevent being moved. They don't come in there and love you down in this game. They shower down on you in the Texas-Oklahoma game."

From a theoretical standpoint Switzer was concerned about his kicking game and Royal was just concerned.

"We haven't had our kicking game going yet," said Switzer, whose Sooners squeaked past Miami last week 24-20.

"That scares me against Texas. They have a kicker who gets it so high people get nervous just waiting for the ball to come down."

Baltimore-Oakland Contest Rained Out

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Baltimore Orioles and Oakland A's try again today to play the third game of the deadlocked American League championship series with Mike Cuellar and Ken Holtzman set once more as starting pitchers.

The third game originally was scheduled for Monday but persistent rain and a soggy field resulted in the game being called off 22 minutes before its 12:30 p.m. PDT starting time by AL President Joe Cronin.

Holtzman, a lefthander who won 21 games during the regular season, and Cuellar, a screwballer who won 18, were supposed to face each other Monday but both earned another day off and will go today instead.

The weather outlook is for clearing skies and temperatures in the 60s. The front which brought the first measurable rain in six months to the San Francisco Bay Area during the weekend moved eastward during the night, although it left a wet field behind in Oakland.

Both managers — Dick Williams of the A's and Earl Weaver of the Orioles — were disappointed with Monday's postponement, but neither saw it as giving either side an edge.

"If it rains again today, though," said Weaver, "then their Jim Hunter can come back at us in the fifth game with three days rest."

Weaver is concerned about Hunter, a Cy Young Award candidate, as well he might be. The A's righthander was the winning pitcher Sunday when the A's beat the Orioles with their home run bats, 6-3, to tie the best-of-five series at one victory each.

Jim Palmer, who stopped the A's on five hits in a 6-0 victory Saturday, will pitch for Baltimore Wednesday no matter what, said Weaver. Palmer was a 22-game winner for the Orioles during the season and is believed to be the top candidate for Cy Young honors.

More upset than either Williams or Weaver at Monday's postponement was A's owner Charlie Finley, a mid-summer heart attack victim who was heard shouting at Cronin near the Oakland clubhouse a few minutes after the league president made his decision.

Cronin, not wishing to make newsmen there a part of the discussion, told Finley "I don't think we should hold this conversation in front of all these people."

Finley wasn't immediately mollified but later, while eating a box lunch in his office, said he was surprised Cronin called the game off so quickly.

Haynie Moves Up In LPGA Prize Winnings

ATLANTA (UPI) — Sandra Haynie, winner of Sunday's Lincoln-Mercury Open at Alamo, Calif., and the $4,500 top prize, has risen from seventh to fifth on the Ladies Professional Golf Association 1973 money list. The LPGA said Monday.

Miss Haynie has now won $47,353, moving her past Mary Mills, $46,441, and Carol Mann, $44,504.

An 11-time LPGA money winning champion, Kathy Whitworth, continues to lead the 1973 list with $87,865. Miss Whitworth is followed by Judy Rankin with $63,688.

Rounding out the top ten are: Betty Burdick, $50,077; Sandra Palmer, $49,658; Haynie; Mills; Mann; Jane Bialock, $36,969; Kathy Cornelius, $36,519; and Joyce Kazmerski, $36,495.

Southern Cal. Continues To Slide In UPI Poll

NEW YORK (UPI) — Southern California continues to fall. The Trojans, defending national champions and overwhelming pre-season No. 1 choice of the United Press International Board of Coaches, slipped to No. 5 in the latest college football ratings after dropping from 1st to third a week ago.

Ohio State maintained its No. 1 ranking with 21 first-place votes and 334 points from the 35 coaches and Nebraska once again was second with eight No. 1 nods and 308 points.

But both Alabama and Michigan moved ahead of Southern California into the 3-4 spots respectively, and the Trojans appear to be losing momentum fast after tying Oklahoma two weeks ago and then struggling to beat heavy underdog Oregon State, 21-7, last Saturday. Oklahoma, which had perhaps the week's stiffest test in coming from behind to defeat Miami (Fla.), 24-20, remained at No. 6 and the rest of the top 10 also was unchanged with Penn State at No. 7, Tennessee at No. 8, Notre Dame at No. 9 and Louisiana State at No. 10.

Nader: Villain or Hero?

It's news of some kind when a businessman has nice words to say about Ralph Nader. No less than the president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States has done just that. The consumer advocate has been described in some quarters as "an enemy of the system." But if businessmen would "look with fresh eyes at Ralph Nader and the kind of consumerism he represents," they would realize that "his commitment is to make the system work," says Edward B. Rust, who is also president of the six companies in the State Farm Insurance group. "The whole point of Nader," says Rust, "is so obvious that it is often overlooked — is his single-minded dedication to making the free enterprise system work as it's supposed to — to make marketplace realities out of the very virtues that businessmen ascribe to the system."

That he says, "suggests a considerable degree of faith in the system and contrasts sharply with the revolutionary who would tear it down." Well, you win some and you lose some. At about the same time that Rust was praising the Caesar of the consumerism movement, another source was challenging him to put his convictions where his mouth is. The point of contention was Nader's recent charge that

"there's no question that the oil industry has been calculatingly developing a short-term energy crisis in order to get what it wants out of Washington."

The claim is "nonsense — and state nonsense, at that," counters the American Petroleum Institute.

"If Mr. Nader has facts to back up his charge," the API says, "as a citizen he should present the information to a grand jury. If he has no such proof, he is doing the public a disservice by adding to the confusion surrounding the energy issue."

The energy shortage is "real and will not go away any time soon," says the institute, maintaining that "the basic cause has been years of indecision over national energy policies."

If the effect of Nader's blast against the oil industry is to encourage Americans to go their merry energy-consuming ways, it would seem that it would be a less-than-desirable consequence of his dedication to making the free enterprise system work, as the Chamber of Commerce president gives him credit for.

But whatever one's feelings about business or consumerism, it has to be agreed that Ralph Nader makes waves.

Prayers in School

The perennial subject of school prayer is up before Congress again.

The Senate's Constitutional Amendments Subcommittee has been holding hearings on an amendment proposed by Sen. Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa., which would specify that the Constitution does not deny "the right of persons lawfully assembled in any public building to participate in voluntary prayer."

It is "almost unbelievable," said the Rev. Robert G. Howes, a Roman Catholic priest, who was among witnesses appearing before the subcommittee the other day, "that Congress has failed to permit the nation to decide this matter through the constitutional process of amendment ratification."

What is really hard to believe is that so many people have failed to appreciate the fact that there is nothing in the Constitution, nor the Supreme Court's interpretation of the Constitution, which prohibits anyone from praying anywhere at any time.

What the Supreme Court has ruled is that the Constitution does not permit state-ordained prayer. That this would be the inevitable consequence of any right-to-pray amendment, no matter how worded, is indicated by the statement of another witness before the subcommittee.

While affirming that her organization does not support "state-imposed or state-composed prayer," Mrs. Bennett G. Miller, co-ordinator of the National Back to God Movement, stated that "we do demand the right freely to recognize a Supreme Being at an appropriate time, place and occasion in the public classroom."

"When, how, what, where and the words must be left to the god sense of state and local option."

"When, how, what, where and the words" — what is this but the substance of an officially sanctioned ceremony of public prayer?

The fact that children whose parents did not wish them to participate in prayer would have the right to remain silent or to leave the classroom does not make it any the less involuntary, nor render it any the less an unwise intrusion of the state into an intensely personal matter.

Democrats Going Round And Round

By BRUCE BLOSSAT WASHINGTON (NEA) — Maybe only the Democrats, while talking more party reform, can manage to touch on some very profound political issues and contrive simultaneously to give their work the faint air of a Woody Allen script.

Part of the reason is that the present chairman of the party's Commission on Delegate Selection and Party Structure is a sawed-off shotgun named Barbara Mikulski, member of the Baltimore city council.

She has no illusions about how she got the job. She was elevated from vice chairman when the first chairman resigned. Says she in a short news conference: "I know Leonard Woodcock (president of United Auto Workers) was the heavy, and I was riding side-car on the motorcycle."

That's misleading. Plump, round-faced, buoyantly cheerful, Chairman Mikulski nevertheless wields decisive command over the 73-member commission, makes tough judgments whose force often is concealed by her bubbly personality.

The hard hand is needed to give some semblance of direction to a wide assortment of Democrats whose "debate" on key reform issues can get as convoluted as Woody Allen's chatter as he breathlessly explains his philosophy to his new girl.

The big thing the Democrats are trying to dispose of is the quota system in selection of national convention delegates. Their previous reform commission (McGovern-Fraser) explicitly avoided it, saying only that state parties should take "affirmative steps" to see that minorities, women, the young, were represented in "reasonable relationship" to their presence.

In 1972, the trouble was militants in some states forced quotas. In others, parties applied them to avoid Credentials Committee challenges of inadequate representation.

It all came to a boil when the newcomers, loosely arrayed under the "new politics" banner and frequently aligned with Sen. George McGovern's candidacy, tangled with the standard politicians and sometimes barred them and their slates from any representation at Miami.

Aside from gratuitous slaps at these oldies (most conspicuous was Chicago's Mayor Richard Daley), the root problem was and is how to achieve balance while using democratic processes, including primaries, whose results can't be forecast or controlled.

Well, the Democrats' two-day reform commission sessions show they're still hung up on that one, not to mention deciding just how "affirmative" affirmative steps toward balanced selection have to be.

But there's much more going on in these Democratic hairsplitters. Does party rule take precedence over state law? A pending Illinois court case may help on that one. Should primaries, where people speak in some numbers, be controlling, or should other mechanisms be allowed the act?

Winner-take-all state primaries are now dead and in 1976 losers will get a proportionate share of the delegate vote. But how far to go with this proportional business?

In states with caucus-convention setups, where the committed, organized folk pour out to gain places, who represents the unrepresented "casual"? Democrat probably dominant in numbers though staying home? Some say the broadly elected officials are best and should be delegates. Argue that and you're back to Woody Allen, weaving his unfathomable intricacies. Page Mikulski!

How Firm a Foundation

Ray Cromley VC prepares next generation for war

WASHINGTON (NEA) — One of the most disturbing stories to come out of Vietnam in some time has been called by neutrals from the statements of North Vietnamese prisoners. These interviews, hidden in reports to home governments, tell of the organized regular movement of children from South Vietnam to the North.

The children, according to this information, are being moved along the regular Communist South-North transportation routes in some numbers.

The current reports do not give the reason for this movement. But it is not difficult to guess, if we recall an interview this reporter had recently with an officer who was held by the Viet Cong for five years. This highly intelligent, observant man said that the VC spent much time in the hamlets where he was held luring young people away from their parents, getting them to disobey, spy on and publicly denounce their fathers and mothers in the most ruthless ways.

Selected youngsters from age seven on were regularly sent to North Vietnam during this period for extensive education and training. Hanoi and the VC were working for the long pull. The youngsters would live, study, be indoctrinated and prepared for political operations and guerrilla maneuvers until they reached adulthood. Then they would be sent back south to carry on the struggle.

What the continuation of this practice today means is that the fight will continue into another generation with new cadres of men and women. How long it will be before the Hanoi planners are ready is not clear. But a 10- to 15-year period of preparation and base-building is a short spell in this kind of war.

There's nothing unusual about this technique — among Communists. Many of the men who now run North Korea were trained as very young men outside the country for years before the takeover. Communists today regularly take youngsters from Thailand and Laos for lengthy training. They have, in fact, done this a long time.

Much of the early fighting in South Vietnam was done by young men who had been taken to the North as children.

The operation proved successful in Vietnam until large numbers of the displaced youngsters died, were killed or became disillusioned. When North Vietnam had too few Southern replacements, it was forced to rely on its own mainline armies as an invasion force.

But at this point, the North found its armies ineffective without a trained Southern underground. The sorting out of residents in occupied areas was intensified. As usual, the old and the sick were moved out to be supported by Saigon, the "untrustworthy" who might spark resistance or dissent were killed or shuffled out, the men and women suitable as unskilled laborers recruited.

But the greatest emphasis was on selecting those who

Gail Bladder Doesn't Work

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D. Dear Dr. Lamb — My doctor tells me I have a gall bladder that is not working, so I have to watch what I eat. He said he would not give me a regular gall bladder diet so I don't need that, but I have broiled meat and poultry and I wondered about other things, if I should eat them or not. Should I eat fresh fruit or canned fruit, what vegetables? I freeze soup and then take the hardened fat out before I eat it. Would you please give me a general idea of what I should eat?

Dear Reader — Your doctor seems to think you are getting along all right with your present program or he would have given you a more specific list of foods. Many people with nonfunctioning gall bladders get along fine on a regular diet but others do not.

If a person has a bad gall bladder and for one reason or another an operation is not performed, the usual approach to the diet is to limit fat as much as possible. When the biliary system is blocked or obstructed in some degree there is a tendency for a marked rise in the blood cholesterol and fats which may increase heart and circulatory problems. The fat, however, is usually restricted to prevent or eliminate symptoms of gas and bloating and painful attacks that some patients have.

To follow a low fat diet you need to use only the very lean meats — like round steak with all the fat removed, fortified skim milk instead of whole milk, fryer chicken (remove the skin before eating) and young turkey (also remove the skin). The chicken should be baked, stewed, or broiled and all frying should be avoided. Fish are fine and you should select the low fat fish such as the white fish group which includes sole or flounder. Egg yolks, chocolate, nuts, oils, fatty dressings, margarine, butter, cheese (except uncreamed or low fat cottage cheese), fat meats such as fat pork and desserts containing fat should be avoided.

Many people do not realize that cakes, cookies and sweet rolls all contain lots of fat. There is usually more fat in commercial cakes (except angel food cake) and those made from ordinary home recipes than there is in many cuts of beef. The same applies to many pies.

So, you can eat lean meats, poultry, fish, fortified skim milk, egg whites, sweets that do not include fats, such as jellies, jams, apple butter, and not candies, ice cream or most cakes and pies. You can eat fresh or canned fruit, and almost all fresh vegetables unless you have learned that a particular one gives you gas or creates problems for you. Everyone reacts differently to these foods. You should include mature bean seeds for you.

You can eat cereals, home cooked oatmeal or prepared commercial varieties. Bread is fine if not taken in excess. You might have to limit some of these foods if you also have a weight problem.

Cook with as little fat as possible, and you should avoid large meals. These, regardless of the type of food, may precipitate a gall bladder attack. Smaller more frequent meals are better.

Mideast Arms Race Fueled By Europe-U.S. Supplies

By ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON — A new arms race is menacingly heating up in the strife-torn Middle East — with the assiduous cooperation of the major weapons purveyors.

Following is what's happening in this sinister development:

FRANCE: While arms sales to "battleground" countries in the Middle East are officially banned, actually France is eagerly selling anything to anyone who will buy — except Israel. Under this sanctimoniously hypocritical, but highly lucrative, policy the Pompidou regime in the past year has sold upwards of $1 billion in combat hardware to — Libya — 110 Mirage supersonic fighter-bombers, of which about 70 have already been delivered. Also a number of Crotale anti-aircraft missiles, rated as probably the most effective ground-to-air weapon against low-altitude attacks. This missile is so highly regarded that the U.S. has been considering buying some pending development of its own. The sale to Libya was so secret it wasn't discovered until several Crotale batteries were spotted on Libyan airfields.

Actually, Libya's Mirages are being flown by Egyptians. In Paris, it's an open secret that the "Libyans" undergoing flight training are Egyptians. At convivial parties, the latter laughingly admit it; they think it's a big joke on Libya's bombastic strongman Muammar Quaddafi.

In reality, Libya as yet has no Mirage-qualified pilots. — Saudi Arabia — Another big buyer of late-model French Mirages and Crotale anti-aircraft missiles; around 40 of III-E deep penetration bombers, and a still-unknown number of the very accurate and mobile ground-to-air missile.

As in the case of Libya, these costly offensive and defensive weapons are really destined for Egypt. — Saudi Arabia is making no bones about that. It's saying so openly. This weapons-supplying arrangement is part of the agreement reached by King Faisal and President Sadat during their recent unity meeting.

More War Priming RUSSIA: Currently, biggest Soviet weapons customer is Syria, which is furiously seeking advanced-type MIG fighter-bombers — 21s and 23s. Also more anti-aircraft missiles, heavy tanks and long-range field guns — the latter to beef up Syria's already massive armaments facing the Israeli-held strategic Golan Heights. Since being booted out of Egypt, Russia has concentrated on extensively arming Syria — at an estimated cost of more than half a billion dollars.

— Egypt — Still getting a large and steady flow of combat hardware from Russia. Some of this equipment is being redistributed to other Arab countries, particularly Libya, whose fire-breathing Quaddafi ostensibly is strongly anti-

Soviet. Despite that, through Egypt Libya has obtained a number of SA-2 and other anti-aircraft missiles. The SA-2 is primarily for defense against high-altitude planes, and Libya has installed them at the huge Wheelus airbase, once held by the U.S. Most of Libya's Egyptian-piloted Mirages are on this field.

BRITAIN: While piously refusing to sell tanks and other so-called "offensive" weapons to Israel, Britain is busily peddling all types of hardware to the Arabs — and with considerable success. — Saudi Arabia — Several hundred Centaurean heavy tanks, rated among the best in the world. Israel tried to buy this tank, but was turned down. A number of these tanks also have been sold to Kuwait and other Persian Gulf sheikhdoms. These one-time British colonies also have been supplied with other combat hardware.

Latest important British sale to Saudi Arabia is 25 Sea King helicopters — for the avowed purpose of giving them to Egypt. Saudi Arabia has neither the need nor personnel for this type aircraft, but is putting out more than $50 million to provide them for Egypt.

UNITED STATES: In addition to Jordan and Saudi Arabia, another Arab country is in the process of becoming a U.S. weapons customer — oil-rich Kuwait. It is negotiating the purchase of 24 A-7E attack bombers. This plane is successor to the A-4 Skyhawk, of which more than 100 have been sold to Israel. The A-7E is rated an exceedingly effective air-to-ground bomber. — Saudi Arabia — Despite large purchases of French weapons for the unabashed purpose of handing them over to Egypt, oil-rich Saudi Arabia is going ahead with its announced plan of buying 25 or more F-4 Phantoms — the supersonic U.S. fighter of which more than 100 now constitute the backbone of Israel's highly potent air force.

In selling F-4s to Saudi Arabia, it is with the categorical understanding they are not to be transferred to any other country. Whether Saudi Arabia would abide by this restriction in the event of hostilities is extremely doubtful — because there isn't anything the U.S. could do about it if they didn't.

On Its Own Not generally known is that Israel has developed a considerable armament industry — and it's rapidly expanding. In addition to conventional weapons, such as hand guns, rifles, artillery, armored vehicles, the Israeli is turning out advanced-type sophisticated arms and missiles.

Outstanding among the latter is the Shafir air-to-air missile — which wound most of the 13 Syrian MIGs in last month's spectacular encounter. Latin American and other countries are equipping their fighter planes with the Shafir.
