Agnew Resigns In Disgrace

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson said today that Spiro T. Agnew, who has resigned as vice president in disgrace, has been penalized enough without having to go to jail.

Richardson told a news conference that Agnew "has rendered a high service" by his decision to plead no contest to a single tax evasion charge and resigning without a prolonged legal battle that could have hurt the nation.

Agnew appeared this morning at his office in the Executive Office Building adjacent to the White House to close out his affairs.

While Richardson spoke, the White House indicated that President Nixon might submit a nominee to succeed Agnew to Congress within a matter of days.

Some presidential aides hinted that Nixon, sensing that Agnew ultimately would have to quit, has already reached a decision.

Richardson said President Nixon was kept fully informed about "plea bargaining" negotiations between Agnew and the Justice Department but did not actively participate.

The attorney general said seeking to jail Agnew was "more than I as head of the government's prosecution arm can recommend or wish."

He indicated that the U.S. attorney for Maryland, George Beall, whose investigators built the bribery and extortion case against Agnew, disagreed with him and wanted Agnew jailed as part of the plea bargaining deal.

Richardson said the final agreement with Agnew was a compromise. "The very essence of a negotiated plea is that each side yields something in order to reach agreement," he said.

Talks in September broke down, he said. But they resumed by telephone on Saturday with final details worked out Tuesday afternoon — the day before Agnew's resignation.

Richardson said Beall and his staff "did not always agree with me" during the negotiations, "particularly on the painful issue of sentencing."

The plea bargaining was initiated by a call from "the President's counsel" — presumably Leonard Garment — "asking if I were willing to meet with the counsel for the vice president," Richardson said.

At the White House, Nixon was at his desk early.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon wanted all recommendations for a successor to Agnew on his desk by the end of the day "and then he will make a decision."

While some Democrats, notably Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, said Nixon should nominate a nonpolitical caretaker, two potential 1976 presidential candidates—Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts and Edmund S. Muskie of Maine—did not accept that line of reasoning. Muskie did object, however, to John B. Connally, a Democrat turned Republican.

Richardson has been mentioned by some as a possible choice of Nixon to complete the Agnew term.

Favorite for Nomination

Agnew, 54, the son of a Greek immigrant, was the favorite for the Republican nomination to succeed Nixon until 10 weeks ago when he was forced to reveal that he was under investigation for serious crimes.

He denounced the charges as "damned lies" but also engaged in two rounds of secret "plea bargaining" with Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson.

The results came before federal Judge Walter E. Hoffman Wednesday when Agnew pleading "nolo contendere" — no contest—to a single count of tax evasion. The judge said the plea was "full equivalent to a plea of guilty." Fined Agnew $10,000 and put him on three years probation—but spared him the ignominy of having to report to a probation officer.

Richardson gave the court a detailed "exposition of evidence." It said several of Agnew's closest associates had told the federal prosecutors that Agnew initiated and directed, almost from his first days in office, a plan to extort thousands of dollars from consulting engineers awarded contracts by the state without competitive-bidding. The paper said Agnew told his associates this was "customary" in Maryland.

Principal Figures Named

The paper said Agnew accepted $85,000 from two of four principal figures it named.

Money also was taken, the documents said, from I. H. Hammerman, a wealthy real estate man and a sixth-grade classmate of Agnew's; and Jerome B. Wolff, Agnew's director of the state Road Commission. Each received 25 per cent of kickbacks from seven cooperating consulting engineering firms and Agnew got 50 per cent, the document said.

Even after his inauguration as vice president on Jan. 20, 1969, it said, money flowed to Agnew. Engineer Allen Green "continued to make cash payments to Vice President Agnew three or four times a year up to and including December, 1972," it said.

Hoffman said he usually imposed jail sentences when lawyers, accountants or executives admitted evading taxes, but he would yield to Richardson's plea for "compassion" and to save the nation turmoil.

He called Agnew's case "a tragic event in history."

Agnew said he resigned "in the best interest of the nation" and to spare his family from a "brutalizing" court fight which could have lasted two years.

He Took No Bribes

But he insisted Agnew he took no bribes, demanded no extortion. He said he would tell his story in an address to the nation in a few days.

He still faces the possibility of state prosecution by Maryland authorities. And an IRS official said a person in Agnew's position would still owe back taxes plus a 50 per cent penalty.

In the formal atmosphere of the Oval Office, Agnew met Nixon Tuesday night to disclose his decision.

Throughout Wednesday, the President gave no inkling of the momentous secret he kept.

Meanwhile, Agnew spent the morning in his office, he took the secret, from all but two aides.

At 1 p.m., he slipped away and was driven to Baltimore. At 2:05 p.m., somberly he entered the courtroom, his hair slightly mussed, a bit less precisely combed than usual.

Letter Presented

At the same moment, in keeping with precedent, a letter of resignation was placed before Kissinger, the senior Cabinet member.

It read:

"Dear Mr. Secretary:

"I hereby resign the office of vice president of the United States, effective immediately.

"Sincerely,

"Spiro T. Agnew"

Agnew became the second vice president to resign, the first to step down under duress. Vice President John C. Calhoun, denied renomination, resigned Dec. 28, 1832, three months before the expiration of his term, to fill a Senate seat to which he had been named.

Agnew's resignation surprised the nation and shook his party. Untainted by Watergate, he was the favorite of conservatives, who are likely to dominate the 1976 convention.

RESIGNATION — Vice President Spiro Agnew resigned his office yesterday and also pleaded guilty in a Maryland court to income tax evasion in 1967. His decision to resign was made earlier in the week and he told President Nixon of his intentions Wednesday night. He said he resigned for "the good of the nation."

Commissioners Discuss Auto Operation Expense

By TEX DEWEESE

Increased costs of operating an automobile were reflected at today's regular meeting of the Gray County Commissioners Court when mileage allowance for operating personal cars on county business was increased from 13 cents to 14 cents per mile.

This included the sheriff's department, constables and — for the first time — the county's four justices of the peace.

Heretofore the JPs have received no travel allowance.

Inclusion of the justices in the mileage allowance action is believed to have resulted from a request filed at the last county commissioners meeting by Justice Nat Lunsford who asked that $50 a month be added to his salary to cover his auto expenses on county business.

County commissioners receive $100 a month travel allowance in addition to their salary.

Commissioner Don Hinton said he drove his personal car 1500 miles last month and if he could collect 14 cents a mile it would amount to $250 instead of his $100 allowance.

The new mileage increase will become effective Jan. 1, 1974.

Commissioners also gave approval today to the 1974 county tax roll which showed Gray County has an assessed property valuation of $79,418,575.

Tax Collector Jack Back reported that the figure is $1,396,017 less than the total assessed valuation in the county last year.

In other business today, approval was given for payment of September bills totaling $43,993 for Gray County and $121,532 for Highland General Hospital.

Hijackers Surrender

HONG KONG (UPI) — Three confused young Filipinos armed with pistols and a hand grenade hijacked a Philippine Air Lines (PAL) jetliner from Manila to Hong Kong today, but surrendered to police in exchange for a promise of amnesty, the Hong Kong Information Service said.

The Hong Kong Information Service said Philippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos offered the hijackers amnesty if they would surrender.

"The three young hijackers of the PAL BAC111 have decided to return to Manila," the information service reported. "They made their decision after (PAL President Benigno) Toda had on their behalf obtained from President Marcos an amnesty for hijacking the aircraft. They have surrendered their weapons."

All the original 48 passengers aboard the plane, hijacked on a domestic flight, were exchanged for PAL President Benigno Toda Jr. in Manila.

Toda was allowed to leave the plane in Hong Kong to pursue negotiations with the hijackers, but the seven crewmembers were kept aboard.

"They are asking to stay here... they are asking to go on. They don't know what they want," a police spokesman said before the hijackers surrendered. "They're just kids and there's a real danger."

Two of the hijackers were said to be 20 years old and the third to be 19.

Shortly before touchdown, the traffic control tower at Hong Kong's Kai-Tak International Airport ordered other aircraft and all persons to stay clear of the vicinity of the hijacked plane. A public announcement at the busy airport told passengers all departing flights were suspended because of an "emergency."

Sunshine Moves In After Rain And Hail

Sunshine spread across the Pampa area today after rain and small hail peppered down late yesterday and last night leaving 85-inch precipitation.

The mercury slid downward as the cold front moved through and dropped the thermometer reading out of the 40's for the first time this fall.

It hit 39 degrees in Pampa at 7:30 this morning and the forecasters indicated it would move into the low 60's for a high this afternoon.

Apparently no more rain was in sight for the next 24 hours with the National Weather Service at Amarillo predicting fair skies through tomorrow with a high on Friday in the mid-60's.

Last night's thunderstorms dropped heavy rains and small to golf ball size hail on a number of Texas Panhandle counties.

Hardest hit was Plainview where wave after wave of hail, high wind and heavy rain were reported.

Heavy rain also was reported during the evening hours in Canadian. Panhandle had 1.5 inches of rainfall earlier yesterday.

Several southeastern Panhandle counties were under a tornado watch until 9 p.m., but nothing serious developed.

Elsewhere across the state:

A carpet of thunderstorms with thunder, lightning and up to two inches of rain, moved more than halfway across the state Wednesday night and today pressed on into East Texas.

As the storms moved west to east, along an advancing cold front, the National Weather Service issued flood warnings for counties in the hill country around San Antonio.

Flash flood warnings also were issued for Dallas and Tarrant (Fort Worth) counties, where water from thunderstorms accumulated in low places.

As the rain and cold front moved through the state, it lowered temperatures. Thursday overnight lows in the upper 30s

Israeli Armor Driving Toward Syrian Capital

By United Press International

Defense Minister Moshe Dayan said today Israeli armored columns were driving toward the Syrian capital of Damascus.

Dayan made the statement at a news conference in Tel Aviv after Gen. Chaim Herzog, the official Israeli military spokesman, reported the Israelis had destroyed 800 of Syria's 1,400 tanks in Israel's greatest victory of the six-day-old war.

Israeli military strategists had indicated Israel hoped to destroy the Syrian army and remove Syria as a military factor in the 1973 war before turning its full attention to the Egyptian army still pouring across the Suez Canal with tanks and troops.

Dayan visited the Golan Heights frontlines and told newsmen he did not know how far the Israeli forces had penetrated into Syria thus far "but they are heading toward Damascus."

"I think today the Syrians will find out the route from Damascus to Tel Aviv the route that leads from Tel Aviv to Damascus," he said. He had said earlier in the day the route to Damascus was only 38 miles and downhill all the way. The drive to knock Syria out of the war was accompanied by intense Israeli air strikes and a series of dogfights in which the Syrians claimed to have shot down 80 Israeli planes. There was heavy air combat along the Suez Canal and Egypt said it had turned back an Israeli armored counterattack and destroyed an encircled Israeli tank unit.

Israel reported its first commando attack across the Suez Canal early today and said its troops had inflicted "good hits" on Egyptian supply convoys rolling toward the series of pontoon bridges across the Canal. It gave no details but in the past Israel has used helicopters for such lightning strikes.

Israel also reported a successful air and naval bombardment of Syrian oil installations and the Iraqi news agency said

Rotary Club Ticket Sales Reach 70 Percent Capacity

More than 70 percent of the seating capacity of the M.K. Brown Memorial auditorium has been sold for the upcoming World of Travel motion picture-lecture series sponsored by the Pampa Rotary Club.

A total of $6,687 in ticket sales was reported today by C.D. Zlomke, general chairman for the project.

The ticket campaign drive has ended with 974 of the 1,500 auditorium seats sold.

Tickets still may be purchased by calling club officials or members and if the auditorium is not sold out on the night of the performances,

Pampa Teachers Credit Union Ups Dividends

The Pampa Teachers Federal Credit Union yesterday chalked up a near-first in the Texas Panhandle area.

The credit union board of directors met late Wednesday and amended its by-laws to establish the new dividend interest rate of 7 per cent, authorized two weeks ago by the National Credit Union Administration board of directors in Washington.

L.C. Davis, president of the Pampa board, received notice of the raise from the 6 per cent dividend interest rate limitation from Gen. Herman Nickerson Jr., National Credit Union administrator, Washington, D.C.

The interest rate had been limited by law to 6 per cent for many years. The Pampa Teachers credit group, organized here in 1937, was only outdistanced in taking the early action by Dumas, Snyder and Friona.

McLean Certification Is Now Under Study

Gray County Commissioners Court and the County Hospital Board today were exploring avenues to avoid the federal Health, Education and Welfare Department's proposed decertification of McLean Hospital.

The HEW regional office in Dallas has notified the hospital that on the basis of deficiencies which have been found to exist at the hospital the hospital no longer qualifies as a provider of services under the Medicare program.

The deficiencies cited by HEW charges the hospital does not have professional nursing care for all patients on a 24-hour basis.

The complaint also says that "LVNs function as head nurses on some evening and night shifts; a registered nurse does not supervise and evaluate the nursing care of each patient, and on some shifts, LVNs without RN supervision, accept doctors' telephoned orders and administer medication."

County Judge Don Cain and Robert Monogue, general administrator of Highland General and the McLean hospitals, have both written to U.S. Rep. Bob Price asking him to assist in helping the county maintain the McLean facility.

"If we lose Medicare patients at McLean," Judge Cain said today, "and they go elsewhere, it soon would reduce the hospital there to a deficit operation as far as the county is concerned."

Cubans Storm Podium

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — With Foreign Minister Raul Roa in the lead, the Cuban delegation Wednesday stormed toward the podium of the U.N. General Assembly shouting obscenities at the ambassador from Chile.

"Be careful, I am armed," warned one of the Cuban delegates, dramatically throwing open his jacket as if to reveal a concealed pistol. U.N. guards restrained the Cubans, but some diplomats said they had in fact seen a gun.

VP's Resignation Shocks Politicians

AUSTIN (UPI) — State Republicans think a Texan might be named to replace Vice President Spiro Agnew.

Both GOP and Democratic politicians in the state expressed shock at the vice president's resignation.

Dr. George Willeford, state GOP chairman, said he was startled at Agnew's decision and called for compassion for the Agnew family and for President Nixon, "who is now faced with a most difficult decision."

"I don't want to speculate on who might become the next vice president," Willeford said. "We're fortunate to have many qualified Republicans who would be an asset to this country in a position of national leadership. There would be a long list, of course, but whatever the list it should include John Connally, George Bush, Anne Armstrong and John Tower."

Tower, Republican U. S. senator from Texas, issued a terse statement from his Washington office saying "I regret this very deeply. I believe Ted Agnew to be a patriotic, well motivated man of considerable dedication."

Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen, D-Tex., said, "The very fact that the vice president has resigned under a cloud makes this an unfortunate and sad day for all Americans."

"The crucial challenge now before this nation is to restore the mutual trust between the people and their government."

which is the very fabric of American society."

Polly Sowell of McAllen, GOP vice chairman, said in Houston "we have several Republicans of national renown from Texas who could handle the job with integrity and dispatch." She mentioned no names.

Speaker Price Daniel Jr., a Democrat, in a statement issued in Austin, said it is incumbent on both politicians and private citizens to accelerate efforts to bring about reforms in the political and governmental systems.

"It is not a time for condemnation of individuals or political parties, or for hanging our heads in disgust with the system, but a time for positive action."

He said Texas met the crisis in state government caused by the Sharpstown scandal with "positive steps to correct and eliminate abuses in the system."

"Now we must obviously do the same on the national level," he said.

Lt. Gov. William P. Hobby said "my thoughts are with the vice president and his family at this most difficult time."

"As an American I know that our great democracy will withstand this constitutional crisis. I trust that the President will nominate and the Congress will confirm that person most able to fill the office of vice president."

Gov. Dolph Briscoe expressed similar sentiments.

"I had not expected a resignation," Briscoe said. "This is a tragic event for Mr. Agnew, his family and the American people. Our system of government has survived many tragic crises throughout our history."

McGovern Dismisses Claim As "Impossible"

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. George S. McGovern has denied as "impossible" the claims of a young Republican spy that it was so easy to infiltrate Democratic camps that he ended up watching television with McGovern at the Democratic National Convention.

Michael W. McMinoway, appearing before the Senate Watergate committee Wednesday bragged of infiltrating the campaigns of three Democratic Presidential hopefuls without anyone suspecting he was gathering political intelligence.

He became a security guard at McGovern's penthouse suite at the Doral Hotel in Miami Beach, he said, and one night he watched the convention with McGovern.

McGovern rebutted McMinoway's claims in a letter to Sen. Joseph Montoya, D-N.M., a member of the committee.

McGovern said he did not recognize a picture of McMinoway.

"Since there was a Secret Service agent stationed immediately outside the door of my suite whenever I was there, and since even close members of my staff were cleared to enter only when I wanted to see them, the sort of access he claims would have been impossible," McGovern said.

McMinoway, 27, Louisville, Ky., said he was hired in February, 1972, by a man using an alias and he never did know until the hearings this spring that he was working for a representative of the Committee to Re-Elect the President.

McMinoway said he volunteered to work in the campaigns of McGovern, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie in four states and Washington, D.C., rising to positions of trust and responsibility.

"I was never challenged at all," he said. "They were damn glad to get a volunteer."

While working for the various Democratic candidates, McMinoway said he telephoned daily reports to a contact in Washington about staff, scheduling and other "inside" matters of the campaigns.

A strange thing has been happening to British voters on their way to the polls.

The British Liberal party, out of power for more than 50 years, has won four out of the last eight off-year elections and in public opinion polls ranks in popularity just ahead of Prime Minister Edward Heath's ruling Conservatives and just behind the Labor party led by former Prime Minister Harold Wilson.

It has caused considerable soul-searching among both Conservatives and Laborites.

Heath's government, battling inflation and at odds both with the British housewife and the big unions, is in trouble but has some 18 months before being forced to hold general elections.

Dreams of Power

The Liberal gains are of perhaps greater importance to the Labor party and its hopes of returning to power in 1975.

Not since the days of Lloyd George and World War I have the liberals been much of a factor in British politics. Their greatest showing since 1918 came in 1923 when they sent 158 members to Parliament. A year ago their membership had fallen to a total of six.

In the last year they have won four by-elections, all from the Conservatives, to boost their strength in Parliament to 10 seats.

It has led to a certain euphoria and even to dreams of once more returning to power with a majority or at least enough seats to hold the balance between the other two parties.

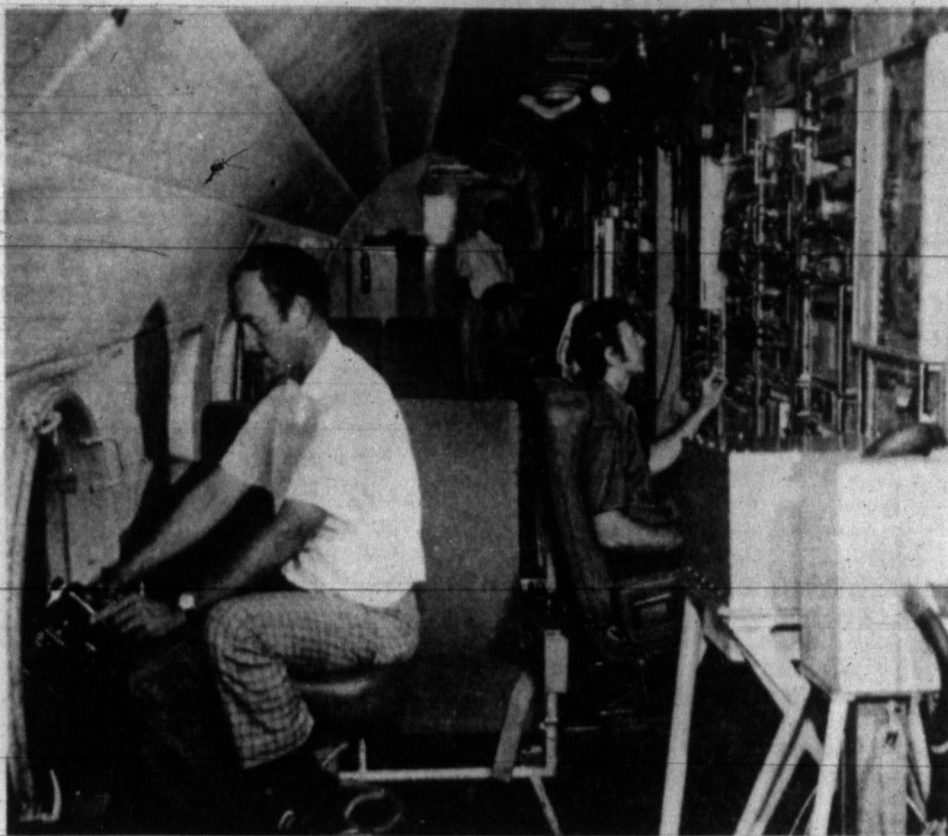

Labor Discouraged

The real truth appears to be that the British voter is indulging in his traditional right to show his disapproval of both the Conservatives and the Laborites in off-year elections but to switch his vote back to one or other of the two when the chips are down in general elections.

While Liberal victories have been at the expense of the Conservatives, they are discouraging to Labor because they demonstrate that Labor has failed to make gains despite acknowledged widespread discontent with Heath's Conservative rule.

At its annual conference at Blackpool in the first week of October the Labor party swung sharply to the left, so much so that one of its radical leaders, Michael Foot, was led to declare, "We have set our party once again on the Socialist Road."

Whether the Liberals can extend their gains into the general elections is a matter still to be decided. A good bet would be that voters once again will decide between Labor's promises of socialization and Heath's "dash for growth."

AIRBORNE SCIENCE CENTER, an instrumented NASA plane, is the U.S. contribution to a Joint European study of the North Sea. Conducted by the West German Hydrographic Institute, Hamburg, the study focuses on the relationship between surface waves and prevailing wind conditions in the relatively shallow and often stormy waters between Great Britain and northern Europe.

For Johnson Security

Congressional Testimony Reveals $5.1 Billion Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government spent some $5.1 billion between 1963 and 1972 for security measures at two ranches owned by President Lyndon B. Johnson, congressional testimony revealed today.

Rep. John Buchanan, R-Ala., said the figures are documented in a yet to be released preliminary report by the General Services Administration (GSA).

The General Accounting Office (GAO), Congress' book-keeping agency, has been investigating how much was spent on previous presidents' homes following disclosure an estimated $10.1 million was spent for security at President Nixon's estates at Key Biscayne, Fla., and San Clemente, Calif.

Buchanan, at a House Government Activities Subcommittee hearing into expenditures on presidential homes, said the new study would show GSA expenditures totaling $1.6 million on the 400-acre LBJ ranch near Johnson City, Tex. and the Haywood Ranch in Llano County, Tex.

In addition to that figure, Buchanan said $1.3 million was spent on communications equipment at the two ranches, of which $750,000 worth was subsequently removed after Johnson's death, and an additional $2.2 million was spent for other communications expenses.

GAO Comptroller General Elmer B. Staats said that the GAO was unable to come up with final cost totals on all Presidential retreats since Franklin D. Roosevelt and could provide only preliminary figures for Johnson's.

Staats was able to provide no figures for President John F. Kennedy's homes in Hyannisport, Mass., Glen Ora Estate in Middleburg, Va., or Palm Beach, Fla., except for a $97,000 fallout shelter built by the Navy on federal property near the Palm Beach residence.

Horsemeat Cold Cuts Have Low Fat Content

WESTBROOK, Conn. (UPI) — Ken Carlson started selling horsemeat in his shop in Westbrook five months ago and found so much demand that his business has since grown to 15 franchises. Now Carlson has a new idea: Horsemeat cold cuts.

"We now have salami, bologna, hotdog, liverwurst, and they're all first class because they don't contain fat or by-products. They're 100 percent lean horsemeat," he said.

Carlson says he is selling between 4,000 and 5,000 pounds of horsemeat a day and he has been able to keep up with the demand from a meat packing firm in Plainfield, Conn.

To boost sales even higher, Carlson has written a 25-page recipe book giving the techniques of cooking horsemeat. He said it calls for moisture-water, tomato sauce or consommé. But never just fat.

"Horsemeat is never just fried, because it is lean with no fat at all," he said.

The cookbook is prefaced with testimonials from the Connecticut health commissioner, a Harvard nutritionist, McCall's and Time magazines, all saying horsemeat is nutritionally the same, and probably better, than fatty beef.

Carlson and a partner have sold 15 franchises under the name "Carlson's International Equine Meat, Inc."

"We have one horsemeat shop opening in Rhode Island, another in Maine, and we've already got eight stores in New York," he said.

Although publicity about the sale of horsemeat has helped boost his business, Carlson said, it is the high price of beef that has made consumers turn to less expensive red meat.

"Let's face it, people can't afford beef anymore," he said.

In Carlson's horsemeat shops, customers pay 99 cents for sirloin steak and round roast, 89 cents for chuck, and 59 cents for chuck including the bone.

Carlson said most of his customers are from middle-income families, mostly of European extract.

"Some thought that because horsemeat is much cheaper than beef and other meats, only poor people would buy it," he said. "But they all come, in their Cadillac and Continentals, not the poor people at all."

Briscoe Creates Special Task Force

AUSTIN (UPI) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe Wednesday announced the creation of a special task force on youth to develop a comprehensive program of child abuse prevention and an office of inspections to investigate complaints of mistreatment of children.

Briscoe, reacting to recent calls by legislative investigators for immediate action to correct lack of coordination between state agencies dealing with young people, said he will personally supervise the task force on youth care and rehabilitation.

Briscoe said the task force will be chaired by his executive assistant, Charles Purnell, and will include the commissioners of the state departments of welfare, mental health and mental retardation, health, education, and the executive director of the Texas Youth Council and the Rehabilitation Commission.

The governor said he is concerned at recent reports of abuses of children at private institutions and state facilities.

"Our youth is the greatest hope we have for the future of the state of Texas and we must always treat it as a precious human resource," Briscoe said in a statement read by press secretary Robert Hardesty.

NEW YORK (UPI) — From art supplies to model airplanes, from permanents to powdered milk, the USO want list is out with a lineup of Christmas gifts requested by American servicemen and women overseas.

The United Service Organizations Inc. reminds that the first deadline is near, before the end of October, for surface parcel post to the Far East.

USO, which annually compiles the gift list, reminds that although the war in Vietnam is now a sporadic fighting one, there still are about 600,000 men and women in the armed forces abroad, many in remote areas and others in military hospitals.

USO asks that donors channeling gifts to service personnel through their centers around the world place special emphasis, however, on distribution points in Thailand, Germany, Iceland and Korea. The center in Saigon has been closed.

General Items Wanted

Servicemen especially have requested colognes, dry and regular shampoos, fashion magazines, hair-setting lotions, home permanents, lipsticks, lotions, nail polishes, rollers, and the disposable wash-dry towels.

The general list for both sexes follows:

Combs, deodorant, hand towels, shaving cream, small terrycloth towels, soaps, toothbrushes and toothpastes, in the cosmetics category.

In the electronic equipment area, camera film, cassette tapes, nine-volt batteries, pre-recorded music tapes, small transistor radios.

Among foods, bouillon or instant soups, candy, canned foods, cheese packages and party snacks, coffee, fruit cake, instant breakfast, meats, fruits, nuts, gum, packaged cocoa, fruit drinks, powdered milk, Tabasco sauce and tea.

In games, requests are for all sorts including puzzles, dart boards, miniature chess and checker sets, and plastic playing cards.

Hobby requests include art supplies and paints, drawing paper, model planes and shipbuilding kits.

Miscellaneous includes candles; Christmas stockings, cigarettes, decals for car or motorbike, holiday decorations and Christmas trees, inflatable pillows, key chains and key cases, leather strips and string, pocket knives, poster-type pictures of stateside landscapes, plastic containers, sewing kits, small flashlights and batteries, small leather kits and small magnifying glasses.

Deadlines Listed

SO reminds of the importance of sending gifts through its distribution points because the postal department will not accept packages addressed to "Any Serviceman." However, gift packages can be sent to USO directors at special armed forces APO and FPO addresses (APO stands for Army or Air Force Post Offices, FPO for Fleet Post Office).

The mailing deadline guide follows:

For all areas of Europe including Iceland, airmail second week of December; PAL parcel post, first week of December; SAM parcel post, end of November, and surface parcel post, second week of November.

Psychiatrists Are Lukewarm To Soviet Offer

YAREVAN, U.S.S.R. (UPI) — Western psychiatrists attending a symposium appeared lukewarm Wednesday toward a Soviet offer to let them inspect a mental hospital some 500 miles from Moscow, said dissidents say houses "sane political detainees."

The invitation was made to counter allegations that Soviet psychiatry is used to quell political dissent.

An informal poll Tuesday of the 34 foreigners attending the international symposium on schizophrenia showed only 15 said they would take up the offer. Others said they were suspicious of the invitation and viewed it as a propaganda move.

The invitation was disclosed by Dr. Denis Leigh, secretary general of the World Psychiatric Association, which is sponsoring the symposium. He said Soviet Health Ministry officials invited the psychiatrists to visit Moscow's Serbsky Institute next week.

Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, was born Oct. 11, 1884.

On this day in history:

In 1811, the first steam-powered ferry in the world started its run between New York City and Hoboken, N.J.

In 1868, Thomas Alva Edison filed papers for his first invention: an electrical vote recorder to tabulate floor votes in Congress in a matter of minutes. Congress rejected it.

In 1962, Pope John XXIII opened the second Vatican Ecumenical Council in St. Peter's basilica in Rome.

In 1972, French diplomatic mission buildings were hit during a U.S. air raid on the Hanoi area of North Vietnam.

A thought for the day: President Franklin D. Roosevelt said, "There is no indispensable man."

Hill Rules No Increase

AUSTIN (UPI) — Attorney General John L. Hill yesterday said district judges cannot be paid more than $38,000 a year even for supposedly "extra" work as members of county juvenile boards.

Hill told Comptroller Robert S. Calvert the juvenile board pay of Travis County judges — $4,800 a year — must be considered as part of their yearly salary.

Dear Abby

She's 43 and divorced but still loves her 'ex'

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd.

DEAR ABBY: After 20 years of marriage (and five children) my husband and I decided on a trial separation. I begged him to go to our minister or a marriage counselor, but he refused.

Even tho I loved him, after a year's separation, I filed for divorce, thinking that would bring him to his senses. I was amazed and heartsick when he let me go ahead with the divorce. After the divorce was final, he informed me that he was getting married again in two weeks!

Abby, this brought forth such a feeling of love for him as I had never known before. I made a complete fool of myself by telling him how much I loved him, and begging him to marry me again. He said, no, his mind was made up. My whole world fell apart.

The night before he was to be married, he phoned me and said he would always love me, but was going ahead with his marriage anyway. This really tore my heart out.

With the help of tranquilizers and my friends and family, I'm slowly getting my head together, but I can't stop loving this man. Don't tell me to keep busy. I am employed full-time and have a 10-room house to take care of, plus three children still living at home.

If I could only hate him, it would be so much easier, but I love him. Please help me. I am 43, which is a terrible time to be left alone. Sign me,

CRYING OVER SPILT MILK

DEAR CRYING: The milk is not only "spilt"—it's curdled, so quit feeling sorry for yourself. There is a valuable lesson to be learned here. A woman should never "file for divorce," hoping a man she loves will come to his senses.

Your "ex" has a meaty streak in him a mile wide. Why else would he call you the night before his marriage to tell you he would always "love" you, but he's marrying another? You may need a therapist to help you "get over" him. But get over him, you must!

DEAR ABBY: There are quite a few couples we simply have stopped seeing because they never go anywhere with their children. We know they can afford baby-sitters, but our gentle hints have been ignored.

Unfortunately, their children are neither well-behaved or babies who will sleep peacefully thru an evening. When the children have not been actually destructive in our home, the afternoon or evening has been completely dominated with their being disciplined by their parents, an activity we hardly can expect to find entertaining.

Abby, don't you think when we issue an invitation to a couple, their children should be left home unless they are specifically invited? We miss seeing some of these people whose adult company we enjoyed, but we just refuse to put up with ill-behaved children. Do you blame us?

MARYLANDER

DEAR MARYLANDER: No. But I think you are foolish to remain silent and continue to miss the adult company you formerly enjoyed. What's so difficult about saying: "We'd like to see you, but please leave the children home this time"?

CONFIDENTIAL TO "HONEYBUN" IN NEWTON, MASS.: His motives are questionable. Tell him if he's trying to pull the wool over your eyes, he's using the wrong yarn.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

South holds only 10 high card points but they are an ace and two kings. In addition he has two five-card suits and should realize that a slam is possible opposite an opening no-trump.

He can get there with the use of the Jacoby transfer plus a little imagination. His two-heart call is a spade transfer. His rebid to three diamonds is a game force and shows either a spade-diamond two suiter or a diamond feature.

North has a maximum hand in support of diamonds—17 points including three aces and a king; four good diamonds; a doubleton spade. His four-club bid is a slam try!

South just goes to four diamonds to show that he really has a two-suit hand. North raises to five and now it is up to South to use that imagination and bid the diamond slam.

It is a very sound contract. Actually, if spades broke 3-3 or diamonds broke 2-2 he would be able to make all the tricks. As it is he has to lose a spade or let East get in an overruff.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, OCT. 12

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: In the rush to close out the week, see that no serious new venture gets started. It is not time to invest in anything speculative. Tidy things up and take a holiday-style weekend.
Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: A brisk, business-like quality ripples through your dealings today, and you find that with little or no consideration you've come to some settlement on nearly all issues.
Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Your bargaining and persuasive abilities are a bit off; let well enough alone where you can. Wind up your work week as smoothly as conditions permit; give yourself a break.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Budgets need reconsideration and reduction. There are people who may expect extra money. It's worth an argument to remain free of financial projects of friends.
Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: The breaks are coming your way, but you must deserve them by being courteous and graceful today in coping with those who err. To offer any harsher evaluation is futile.
Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Travel remains doubtful in results and, along the way, spending is beyond anticipations. See the other fellow's side of the issues, and make adjustments.
Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Material resources now appear to be the key factor, with difficulty in doing anything drastic about it. There is yet another answer. Pray it will come to you.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Interruption is the expectable phenomenon, but neither of the sort you had thought about nor at the time logic would predict. Keep an eye on your possessions.
Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Spending should include something for charitable works, but nothing for the schemes of your friends. Lending and borrowing are to be avoided today. Strive for a steady pace.
Cancer [June 21-July 22]: If you ask an opinion instead of figuring out for yourself, then you've got the added hindrance of having to go contrary to advice. Pause, pray for serenity.
Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Your own impatience is your largest problem today. As you contain that, you can also avoid offering harsh answers to provocative comments and be the better for it.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Let bygones be bygones—yesterday's doings needn't ruin today's constructive efforts. There are no bargains; even what seems to be a price cut of some familiar item turns out poorly.

Thomas-Cole Vows Said In Panhandle

Miss Jeanne Thomas of White Deer and Randy Cole of Panhandle were united in marriage in a double-ring ceremony Aug. 30, in the First United Methodist Church in Panhandle. Rev. Keith Wiseman performed the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Jerry Thomas and the late Mr. Thomas of Pampa. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Earl Cole of Panhandle.

Miss Vicki Houston of White Deer served as maid of honor and best man was Kevin Cole, brother of the bridegroom.

Given in marriage by her brother, Greg Thomas, the bride wore a formal length wedding gown of white voile over-bridal taffeta and carried a cascade of white roses.

Wedding music was provided by Mrs. Bobby Skidmore, who accompanied her husband as he sang, "The Lord's Prayer."

A reception followed the ceremony in the church parlor. Mrs. Joe Spann and Miss Pam Duckworth presided at the serving table. Miss Joan Thomas, sister of the bride, presided at the guest book.

The bride is a 1973 graduate of White Deer High School. The bridegroom is a graduate of Panhandle High School and also attended West Texas State University. He is employed with Southwestern Public Service of Amarillo.

The couple is presently at home in Panhandle.

Harvesters To Host Carlsbad, NM, Friday Night

Pampa, revenge-minded and seeking its second straight win, hosts Carlsbad, N.M., at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

The 4-AAAA Cavemen defeated Buddy Williams' Harvesters, 22-6 last year on their way to a 9-2 record and a second-place district finish.

Carlsbad lost 19 starters off that team and has only managed a 2-3 record this season.

"They're not as strong as they were last year, but they're still better than average. Carlsbad is an aggressive football team, they come at you real hard," said Williams, whose Harvesters are 1-3 after last week's 21-7 win over Canyon.

"Carlsbad's a team that never lets down," added the Pampa head coach.

Revenge will not be the primary motive for winning against Carlsbad, as Williams knows a win will mean two straight victories, which means the Harvesters will have momentum going into the district race. Pampa visits Amarillo Caprock in a 3-AAAA clash next week.

In defeating Canyon last week, the Harvesters made few mistakes and featured a balanced attack between offense and defense.

The Harvesters gained 16 first downs to the Eagles' 11, while picking up 213 yards rushing to Canyon's 99. More important was the fact that Pampa annihilated Canyon's passing game.

CHUCK QUARLES

Quarles, who in two games has become the district's seventh-leading passer, connecting on 11 of 23 passes for 159 yards.

Quarles became Pampa's starting quarterback when Rick Leverick suffered a mild concussion against Perryton. Quarles completed seven passes against the Rangers and earned the starting berth. Leverick gives the Harvesters the best depth of any 3-AAAA team at the quarterback slot.

Fullback Jack King, tailback Joe Curtis, slotback Chuck Reeves and Quarles will start in the Harvesters' backfield.

Pampa's defense is headed by Leverick and Rick Smith in the secondary, defensive end Tim Thornburg and linebacker David Hampton.

"Pampa's good, potentially very good," said Carlsbad head coach Bill Waters, "and they're just now getting to the point where they can really go hard against you."

"Pampa has great speed and that speed scares anybody to death, especially when you don't have any. We've got very little speed. We're also impressed with that little Pampa quarterback."

Mets Win NL Pennant, Triumph Over Reds, 7-2

NEW YORK (UPI) — Today the New York Mets rest.

The Mets Wednesday did what they do best—the unexpected—when, despite the loss of slugging outfielder Rusty Staub, they beat the Cincinnati Reds, 7-2, in the fifth and deciding playoff game to win the National League pennant. The victory earned New York the right to meet either Oakland or Baltimore in the World Series beginning Saturday.

with a two-run single in his first at-bat.

And then there was Willie Mays, who already has announced his retirement at the end of this season. With the Mets leading 3-2, in the fifth, Mays came up to pinch hit for Kranepool with the bases loaded and the crowd of 50,323 at Shea Stadium roared its approval.

Mays swung at the first pitch and topped the ball down the

with a double off loser Jack Billingham. The Mets added three more runs in the inning and got their final run in the sixth when Jones singled home Seaver, who had doubled.

One Jarring Note

For New Yorkers, the only thing marring the pennant-clinching victory was the actions of some in the crowd toward the end of the game. Members of the Reds' official party, sitting behind the Cincinnati dugout, had to be escorted into the dugout for their own safety. As the game ended, fans poured onto the field and tore huge chunks out of the grass portions of the infield and outfield in addition to stealing the bases and tearing out home plate.

Quarterback Ed Lair, who has college potential as a passer, was sacked twice, which no team had been able to do prior to Pampa. Lair was intercepted three times during the game and in the second half. Lair completed only one pass.

Carlsbad also features a passing threat — Richard Forrest, who can also run exceptionally well for a quarterback. However, Forrest's primary receiver, split end Paul Brown, is not expected to see action against Pampa because of a pulled leg muscle.

The Cavemen's running attack is led by halfback Frankie Theragood, a 173-pound junior.

Defensive standouts for Carlsbad are linebacker Mark Arnold and end Gary Kinley.

Williams will go with the same starting lineup that played against the Eagles. The Harvesters will be led by junior signal-caller Chuck

Baltimore Downs Oakland, 5-4 In Come-From-Behind Victory

OAKLAND (UPI) — Jim Hunter, a man who has won 64 games over the last three years, pitches against Doyle Alexander, a man who has won 18 in his big league life, when the Oakland A's meet the Baltimore Orioles at 12:30 PDT today in the game that decides the American League title.

The A's blew a 4-0 lead Wednesday as the Orioles, never giving up, battled back for a 5-4 victory that left the two old rivals in a flat-footed tie with two decisions each in the best-of-five AL championship series.

Odds makers, sticking with the veteran pitcher, have the A's as favorites at 3-2.

Hunter, who won 22 games this year, beat the Orioles, 6-3, in the second game of the playoffs last Sunday while Alexander, who won six games in his rookie season a year ago and 12 more this year, will be making his first post-season appearance.

"Hunter is my best pitcher right now," said A's skipper Dick Williams. "Over the years he has won a lot of important games for us and we'll be looking for him to do it again or the whole season goes down the drain."

He has Faith

Earl Weaver, the Orioles manager, has almost as much faith in Alexander, like Hunter, a right hander.

"He (Alexander) handles right-handers pretty good and they (the A's) have a primarily right-handed hitting lineup. He's had a long rest and he's one of the strongest pitchers I have."

PHS, Borger Tackle Today In JV Action

Pampa's Shockers, smarting from a 31-26 loss to powerful Lefors, tackle Borger's junior varsity at 7 p.m. today in Harvester Stadium.

Lefors dealt Pampa its first loss of the season Saturday as the Shockers are now 3-1-1.

Today makes it all worthwhile," said winning pitcher Tom Seaver, still savoring the champagne that was dripping down his face after it was poured over his head by referee Tug McGraw. McGraw, as he had done so many times in the final month of the regular season, came on to get the same, retiring the final two batters with the bases loaded.

Seaver and McGraw were not the only heroes for the Mets who gained their second NL pennant in the last five years.

Jones Drives in Both

There was Cleon Jones, who drove in both the go-ahead and final runs, and Ed Kranepool, the last of the original 1962 expansion Mets, who got a chance to start because of the injury to Staub and responded third base line. Pitcher Clay Carroll fielded the ball, hesitated just a second, and then threw home but it was too late to catch the sliding Felix Millan.

Kranepool, starting in place of Staub, who suffered a bruised shoulder making a spectacular catch of a line drive by Dan Driessen in Tuesday's fourth game, claimed this year's pennant was more gratifying than the 1969 world championship, "because we didn't let down."

Despite the Mets' early 2-0 lead, the Reds managed to tie the score on Driessen's sacrifice fly in the third and Tony Perez' RBI single in the fifth. Jones put New York ahead for good in the bottom of the fifth when he doubled home Wayne Garrett, who led off the inning

About Sports People

By United Press International INVITED TO PLAY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Manager Sparky Anderson received a blanket invitation for his Cincinnati team to see the Broadway musical "Don't Bother Me, I Can't Cope" Wednesday night. The Reds couldn't cope with the New York Mets, either, as they lost their crack at the National League pennant.

WILT CAN'T PLAY

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Wilt Chamberlain can coach the San Diego Q's, but a temporary restraining order granted the Los Angeles Lakers Wednesday prohibits him from playing for the American Basketball Association team.

TRYOUT OFFERED

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tim Van Galder, a St. Louis Cardinal and Cincinnati Bengal castoff, has been invited by the New York Jets to try out for the quarterback slot.

Probation Hasn't Affected Oklahoma

DALLAS (UPI)—Before Oklahoma embarked on the 1973 football season there was a good deal of speculation on how much the Sooners' two-year probation would dampen their eagerness to play.

Going into Oklahoma's annual showdown with Texas Saturday, the answer appears clear.

The probation, which prohibits the Sooners from playing in a bowl game either this season or next, has affected them not at all.

And not only has it had no detrimental effect on the Sooners' play, Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer does not believe it will hamper his recruiting this year.

The announcement of the probation came after the national signing date this year. "So Switzer said, 'So actually the next recruiting season will be the one we have under the probation.'"

The Big Eight Conference and the NCAA have banned Oklahoma from post-season contests for the 1973 and 1974 seasons and have forbidden the Sooners from appearing on television during the 1974 and 1975 seasons.

The probation was voted because Sooner officials knew of and did not report the tampering with the high school transcript of Sooner quarterback Kerry Jackson. Jackson's high school coach at Galveston, Tex., admitted altering Jackson's transcript so the youngster would be eligible to play at Oklahoma.

Switzer said the only argument other recruiters could use with high school youngsters against Oklahoma next year was that the Sooners would not be going to a bowl game during that recruit's freshman year.

"Oklahoma, Texas and Nebraska are the only people in this part of the country going to bowls year in, year out, anyway," said Switzer. "And most kids are not going to play with Texas or Nebraska their freshman years. So they are not going to get to go to a bowl their first year."

"We tell them that after their freshman year at Oklahoma they will still get to go to bowl three years. People are going to game. "I realize a bowl game is a fine reward for good play," he said, "but the best reward of all is winning. You develop pride by winning. That's why they have a scoreboard at the end of the stadium.

"And just because we can't go to a bowl does not mean we can't beat the teams that will go. There was a lot of talk about the probation when we first came back this season. But our players have reacted very well. And I'm happy they have."

OSU To Battle Badgers

By United Press International
Top-ranked Ohio State, still plagued by baseball sharing its headlines, takes on underdog Wisconsin Saturday as the Buckeyes attempt to solidify their No. 1 rating.

This may be the year of miracles, with the New York Mets winning the National League pennant, but it doesn't seem likely it will rub off on the hapless Wisconsin Badgers, who haven't beaten a Woody Hayes Ohio State team since 1959.

With Archie Griffin providing ground gaining power, Ohio State has rolled over three foes and allowed only 13 points. Griffin is the nation's eighth leading rusher with 376 yards on 44 carries for a 125.3-yard game average.

The game between sixth-ranked Oklahoma and 16th-ranked Texas goes on national television as the "Wishbone Special." The Sooners feature a running attack combining the talents of Steve Davis and Waymon Clark. This 1-2 punch made Oklahoma the top rushing team this week with a 386.0-yard game average.

Another annual "big game" pits fourth ranked Michigan against neighboring Michigan State. The unbeaten Wolverines have rolled past Iowa, Stanford, Navy and Oregon, the latter two by shutouts, while State has lost three and owns its single victory to a 14-0 decision over Syracuse.

Nebraska, rated No. 2, looks for a repeat of last season's lopsided 62-0 triumph over Missouri. This is the Cornhuskers' first Big Eight game after four, inter-sectional triumphs, but it could be a toughy based on Missouri's 4-0 record.

Southern California, still shaken over the 7-7 tie that toppled the Trojans from top ranking, hooks up with hapless

Washington State, a 24-point underdog after four straight losses. If Coach John McKay is through ranting at his USC troops, the Trojans could produce another big winner.

Among other top ranked teams, No. 7 Penn State is an overwhelming favorite over Army. No. 8 Tennessee is picked by 14 over Georgia Tech, ninth-ranked Notre Dame is a 21-point choice over Rice and 10th-rated Louisiana State is a mere 3-point pick over Auburn.

Warriors To Start Using Water Wings

By United Press International
Maybe somebody ought to send advance notice that the Golden State Warriors are a basketball team and not a swimming team.

For the second time in as many nights and as many cities, the Warriors had a game postponed because of a wet and slippery floor.

At Cleveland Tuesday night, vapor from the ice rink under the floor caused water to form on the court and the game was postponed. Wednesday night, the Warriors got started against Detroit but referee Darrell Garretson stopped the game with 4:57 left in the first period and Detroit leading, 21-14.

Players slipped nine times in the first quarter and Garretson decided it was too risky to continue.

The game was delayed a half-hour at its start while attempts were made to clean the floor and twice more before Garretson stopped it.

"It was very bad out there," guard Stu Lantz of Detroit said. "You show up, you want to play."

Christensen Pacing Golf

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI)—Utah University's Mack Christensen battled wind, rain and cold temperatures and a naturally tough course to fire a one-over-par 73 Wednesday to take the first round lead in the 19th annual William H. Tucker Intercollegiate Golf Tournament.

Christensen led his Ute team to a one-stroke lead over host New Mexico for the team leadership in the 72-hole tournament, billed as college golf's premier fall event.

The 36-hole women's competition does not begin until Thursday.

WHA Blazers Nip Winnipeg

VANCOUVER (UPI)—A goal by Jim Adair with 3:50 in overtime gave the Vancouver Blazers a 4-3 victory over the Winnipeg Jets in their first game ever of the World Hockey Association season.

The Blazers dominated the extra stanza, peppering five shots at Jets goalie Ernie Wakely while Winnipeg managed only one shot at Vancouver net-minder Yves Archambault.

A crowd of 12,452 attended the premiere of the WHA in Vancouver. The team played as the Philadelphia Blazers this season but the franchise was shifted when industrialist Jim Pattison purchased the club.

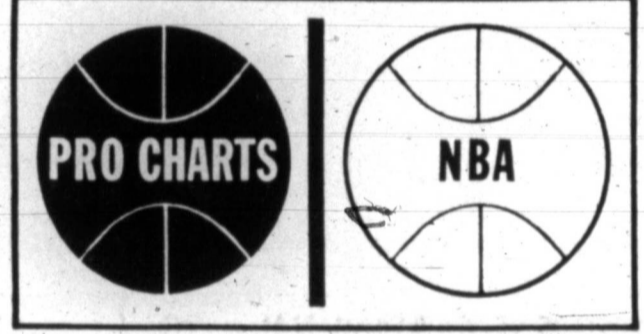

Vancouver took a 2-1 first-period lead on Adair's first goal and one by Danny Lawson. Jean Guy Gratton replied for Winnipeg. The Jets tied it in the second period on a goal by Ab McDonald on an easy shot that handcuffed Archambault.

10 - Detroit Pistons NBA - Midwest Division

1972-73 finish: W 40, L 42 - 3d place

PROSPECTUS: The Pistons have two of the NBA's best players in center Bob Lanier and guard Dave Bing. But they haven't made the playoffs in the past five seasons and have finished over .500 only once in that time. One problem is that the talent thins out considerably after Lanier and Bing. Another is the Pistons' tendency to lapse into a disorganized, one-on-one style of schoolyard basketball, which is attested to by the fact that they had fewer assists than 15 of the 17 NBA teams last season. With no prominent additions coming through the draft or via trades, Detroit has to hope for improvement among its younger players and continued consistency from its two stars.

FORWARDS Curtis Rowe has proven to be steady but unspectacular after two seasons, so Pistons hope George Trapp, coming in trade from Atlanta, can show more than he has in past. Don Adams, Fred Foster and Willie Norwood are all just journeyman reserves. RATING: C

CENTER: Lanier came back from injuries to average nearly 40 minutes a game in 1972-73, ending up sixth in rebounding and ninth in scoring in the league. He is a strong all-around center. Jim Davis is an adequate backup and can also play forward. RATING: B plus

GUARDS: Bing had eye problems in 1971-72 but he was seeing well enough last season to rank 14th among NBA scorers and place third in assists. A seven-year veteran, he has never averaged below 20 points per game and should be at his peak this season. The problem is finding someone to pair with him. Stu Lantz had a dismal season after coming from Houston and is a question mark. John Mengelt is unlikely to rise out of mediocrity. And Chris Ford did not dazzle anyone last season as a rookie. Where is Andy Phillip when the Pistons need him? RAT/RG: B minus

PREDICTION: It looks like another frustrating season for coach Earl Lloyd and the Pistons could wind up in the Midwest cellar if Kansas City-Omaha shows anything at all. (NEXT: KANSAS CITY-OMAHA)

Hank Aaron's Success

Hank Aaron failed to notch his 714th homerun to tie Babe Ruth's record, but he got three singles in the final game of the season. Those three singles may tell more about Hank as a man than the homerun would have told about him as a player if he had gotten it.

To be sure, according to his pre-game comments, Hank was going for the long ball. On the other hand, he wasn't sacrificing the team objective to get it. He was remembering Hank Aaron without forgetting his teammates. It so happened his team lost and, even if it had won, the victory meant little to the league standings. Still, the game score is the primary meaning of baseball, not the individual statistics that baseball writers have dreamed up to measure the stars with.

Aaron was able to put first things first. While poing for the outfield fence, he had enough reserve in his wrists to collect three hits in four times at bat. If he had connected only once or twice, we could write it off as a coincidence. But THREE! We have to believe that Hank, instinctively calculating his own power, was putting his teammates' cause along side his own. You might say he was applying the Golden Rule to baseball.

The Vanishing 'Fifth'

U.S. winemakers have decided to go to the European bottle measurements. Henceforth — if the red tape can be unwound — they will abandon the one-fifth gallon size and adopt the European three-fourths liter. For the sake of bottle collectors, a historical footnote may be appropriate. Where did the "fifths" come from anyway?

Our information is that the currently typical American wine bottle was a product of state prohibition laws prior to the adoption of the 18th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Some of these laws outlawed the possession of alcoholic beverages, however, in recognition of medicinal potential of alcoholic liquids, including its curative reputation for snakebite, and in view of the increased sightings of snakes in that period, the lawmakers in their sagacity defined illegal possession as a quart or more. As matters stood at that time, this would have left a man free to keep a protective pint on his premises, but not two pints and not a quart (the standard large economy size of that era).

Out of concern for that segment of suffering humanity that might be exposed to especially venomous reptiles, the liquor industry then brought forth the "fifth." The bottle was safely within the law and afforded 60 per cent more fortification than a "pint."

Forty years after the repeal of Prohibition, the "fifth" lingered on. It seems logical that the rest of the liquor makers will follow the course of the wine people, for the same reason — standardization of international measures. The hour may be expected therefore that an odd-size bottle will stand on collectors' shelves as a memorial of the "Noble Experiment" to change human nature by force of statute.

Daredevils On Wheels

Motorcycle daredevil Evel Knievel misses a few, and he has a body full of broken bones and a noticeable limp to prove it.

But how does the famed motorcycle jumper convince his young fans of the bicycle set of the potential hazards involved?

Shortly after the recent Evel Knievel movie appeared on television, newspapers were swamped with calls from bicycling jumpers inviting photographers to witness their feats.

One photographer obliged. An action photo of a daring youth sailing through the air on his bike hit the front page, prompting a flurry of calls from other youngsters who claimed they could sail even further.

Then the mothers began phoning in — to report that their sons were missing their jumps and crashing, some incurring serious injuries.

One mom reported that her 12-year-old boy and some of his friends rigged a jumping ramp over a school desk. The makeshift ramp, however, collapsed on one run, dumping the youngster head-first onto the pavement. He wound up with a fractured skull.

Another woman said her son got four teeth knocked out in a similar crash, and advised parents to make sure their kids are wearing crash helmets if they're going to be imitating the famed Knievel stunts.

To be sure, life on this earth is not always long. Neither is it always short. A skin full of crushed bones and the possibility of long-term paralysis are a high price to pay for a fleeting moment of airborne glory. You may suppose the watching throng admires your daring when they are only marveling at your foolishness.

Obsolete Data Hinder Economists

By DON OAKLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA) — It is now clear that President Nixon's failure to deal more effectively with inflation has been due in considerable measure to reliance on obsolete, incomplete and misleading economic indicators. These have led administration economists into false assumptions on what the economy could handle and what should be done.

What was wrong? First, in this day of statistics, computers and data collection, we are not putting out the effort to gather the complete and accurate statistics needed to know what is happening in the economy. Early this year, for example, the administration did not know the unused industrial capacity of the economy, and evidently it was misjudged so badly that the President put into effect policies which overwhelmed that capacity — leading to the current round of hefty price rises as consumers competed for scarce goods and products.

Second, in this era when we are spending tens of billions on physical, social and political research, the Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon administrations have relied on such crude concepts as Gross National Product projections and over-all unemployment rates to produce pictures of what is happening in the economy and what is likely to happen in the near future and to suggest what government and private actions should be taken.

Government economists will resent the term crude. Today they use the most sophisticated mathematical equations, the mightiest computers and the most esoteric theories. But with this sophistication the government economists by and large depend on data so generalized and so crude that no advanced mathematics can transform it into an accurate means of forecasting or translate it into a reliable guide as to what corrective actions should be taken.

The argument is that the same crude generalized data worked in the early 1950s. But in the past two decades the shape of the economy, the structure of the work force, the relative shares of agriculture, industry and the service industries have changed radically.

Today, for example, it may be much more meaningful to know the unemployment rate among married adults 25 and over than to know the overall unemployment figure.

It may be much more important for certain estimates to know the number of companies reporting slow deliveries of basic materials and products than to calculate the probable gross national product for the next quarter. Why the government has continued to rely on obsolete methods is not clear. There have been able men, some in high places, within the government and in the private economic community who have used more sophisticated data and better techniques to come up with more accurate forecasts. There has been no scarcity of criticism of the system used, even by close friends of Mr. Nixon.

The current inflation was not due solely to mismanagement by this administration. President Nixon inherited it from Mr. Johnson and Mr. Kennedy. In considerable measure, too, the inflation has been due to rapid increases in worldwide demand and a growth of worldwide shortages over which Mr. Nixon and his advisers had no control. In part, it has also been due to political decisions.

But there seems little doubt that inflation has been worse that it might have been had the government economists updated their thinking and their data.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The soybean is a leguminous plant native to eastern Asia where it has been grown for about 4,000 years. The soybean was not of economic importance in the U.S. until about 1900, but today is one of the most useful plants known. The World Almanac says. During World War II soybeans became important in the U.S. as substitutes for other protein foods and as a source of oil.

"... and You Guarantee I'll Always Be Warm?"

Bruce Blossat Nixon's life: profile in suffering

WASHINGTON (NEA) — It may be that those of us who have been writing that President Nixon could not endure his seventh crisis, Watergate, because it seemed beyond control have been quite wrong.

As one of many observers who have kept on totting up the difficulties which still lie ahead for him, I do not find it easy to backtrack. But a fresh look at the man and his dilemmas is giving no pause.

In fact, the list of difficulties is long. He may lose the issue of the Watergate tapes in the courts, and then have to decide whether to defy a Supreme Court judgment, recognizing that such defiance might be grounds for impeachment proceedings.

He has special prosecutor Archibald Cox and his predicted string of Watergate indictments to worry about. Cox could write a critical report on the President's role. So may the Ervin Senate committee next winter. Then there's the Agnew problem, a possible winter home fuel crisis, an economy still struggling with serious inflation.

It all sounds like too much for anyone to bear, particularly a man who, writing of his life in the early 1960s, divided it up into "Six Crises" — all of which he nevertheless weathered and, by his definition, somehow controlled.

But I think that approach of his really puts us off from a deeper reality. What emerges from a fuller reading of his behavior, his utterances, the things he himself brings out in that celebrated book, is that his whole life is a crisis, almost by the day.

Political science scholar James David Barber, in his somewhat controversial book called "The Presidential Character," cited five occasions (up to 1962) when Richard Nixon was "about to quit" public life. Since Watergate broke in 1972, the President may have given thought to that notion at least one more time.

The overriding fact, of course, is that he did not quit. By his own words, crisis is agony. But he has truly come to expect suffering, not just in relatively brief periods of high stress, but as the continuing price of living in public life.

As other running themes in Mr. Nixon's career, Barber finds he does not really look for counter-vailing enjoyments, that his view of men is that — at least in politics — they are basically untrustworthy and disloyal, that for decades he has had to battle to control his tendency to fight back against his "enemies" with every weapon at his command.

Your Health

Dear Dr. Lamb — I have suffered for a number of years with bursitis in each of my shoulders, at different times. I would like your opinion of the best way of treating this painful affliction. In the past I have had cortisone in pill form and in shot form, but I am hesitant to take this powerful drug in fear of what it can do to the body. Do you consider cortisone harmful for one who might need it about once a year? Can it harm the bone structure?

H. L. Hunt Writes

RUSSIAN GRAIN The marketplace of the United States is still suffering under the blow of the big sale of grain to Russia several months ago. The deal involved approximately one-fourth of the wheat crop of this nation. Tremendous shortages were created at home at a time when the economy already was reeling under heavy inflationary pressures.

The price of beef and other commodities was driven sky high. Shortages emerged on the retail counter. All of these problems were compounded by government-imposed controls of retail prices. Thus the grain deal with a nation that has vowed to destroy us dealt the U.S. a staggering blow.

In the wake of all this came two surprising announcements. The first was from Moscow which said the Russians were "loaning" more than a million metric tons of wheat to India to promote "good will" with that nation.

The second came from Washington where the U.S. Department of Agriculture estimated the Russia's grain crop this year would be approximately 195 million metric tons. That would be a record for the USSR. Her best production had been in 1970 when she grew 186.8 million metric tons.

International commerce is a fine thing when the nations involved look after their own interests first. The administration in Washington did not do this when the grain deal with the Russians was consummated. The communist world reaped what we sowed. The people of the U.S. suffered and our economy is still struggling to recover.

We as citizens should see to it that our representatives do not make the same mistake again.

Dear Dr. Lamb — You mentioned soybeans helping to take the place of meat in providing amino acids. Do roasted soybeans from the health centers contain the same amount of proteins as prepared in other forms?

Dear Reader — Roasted soybeans are fine. There are many other ways soybeans and soybean products can be used in food preparation. I have one word of caution about roasted soybeans — be sure they are dry roasted and read the label carefully. Some of the products are roasted in coconut oil, and as I have stated before, coconut oil is very rich in saturated fat which should be limited in the interest of preventing heart and vascular disease.

Press Chairman to Accept Hartke One-Shot Amendment

By Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON — There has been a spectacular favorable development in the year-long fight to recompute the pay of some 900,000 military retirees.

Ten senior members of the House Armed Services Committee have sent a joint letter to chairman F. Edward Hebert, D-La., strongly urging him to agree to the Hartke "one shot at age 60" recomputation amendment the Senate approved overwhelmingly 71-14 last week.

Also highly significant is that a number of these ten committee members (six Republicans, four Democrats) are members of the House Conference Panel meeting with a Senate group to iron out differences in the $20 billion plus military procurement authorization bill to which the Hartke recomputation proposal was attached.

This is the first time in this protracted struggle that influential members of Hebert's committee have openly pressed him to accept recomputation. The weighty importance of this joint bipartisan stand is indicated by the following:

Of the four Democrats, two are the third and fourth ranking committee members — Reps. O.C. Fisher, Tex., chairman of subcommittee No. 2, Charles Bennett, Fla., chairman of subcommittee No. 3. The other two Democrats are Reps. Floyd Hicks, Wash., and Jack Brinkley, Ga.

Of the six Republican signers, five are the top GOP committee members — Reps. William Bray, Ind., Bob Wilson, Calif., Charles Gubser, Calif., Carleton King, N.Y., and William Dickinson, Ala. Also G. William Whitehurst, Va.

Rep. White, third-ranking GOP committee member, spearheaded the exceptional bipartisan plea. He conceived the idea of sending a joint letter and obtained signatures of the powerful array of committee members.

What They Said In asking chairman Hebert to agree to the Hartke "one shot at age 60" amendment, the bipartisan group stressed three points:

- (1) "The proposal falls within the President's budget recommendation."
(2) "It will result in declining costs each year after the initial phase-in period."
(3) "It resolves the problem of pre-1949 disability retirees by permitting the pre-1949 disability retirees a new option to remain under the old law with the CPI system or to come under the current law with recomputation and later CPI increases based on the 1972 rates at their actual degree of disability."

Still another important factor strongly emphasized by the group is the pledge of the Council of Military Organizations and other retiree units to accept the Hartke amendment "as a fair and equitable final solution of the recomputation problem."

"Leaders of the council and associated groups," the ten committeemen told Hebert,

"have assured us that all 16 organizations support the Hartke amendment as a fair and equitable final solution of the problem. They have assured that, if the Hartke amendment is enacted, they will cease all efforts for further expansion of recomputation."

The council and other military organizations listed by the legislators as making this commitment include the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans, and the American Association of Retired People — totally more than 10,500,000 members.

"We have notified the council," the joint letter reads, "that if the Hartke proposal becomes law, the council should no longer expect Congress to support any further advocacy of a return to the recomputation method of determining retired pay. On that basis, we and many other concerned members of both parties believe strongly that the committee and the Congress should be given an opportunity to vote on this issue."

"Many of us have been concerned for a long time about the 1958 cancellation of the principles of retired pay recomputation for military personnel. We believe strongly that an opportunity is now at hand which will settle once and for all the question of our country having changed the time-honored system of recomputing retired pay on the basis of current active-duty pay."

If chairman Hebert can be persuaded to bow to this request, it virtually assures House approval of the Hartke plan.

Because of the House's germane rule, it will be necessary to obtain a "special order" from the Rules Committee to permit a House vote on the Hartke amendment. There is no question the Rules Committee would grant such an order if asked by Hebert.

What will happen if he continues to balk in conjecture. The House conferees may split with him and refuse to accept a compromise on the huge military procurement measure, and thus indirectly force recomputation before the House.

Or the Senate conferees may insist on a House vote on the Hartke amendment, which the Senate has twice overwhelmingly approved, and thus force a showdown in the House.

What happens from here on out largely depends on how adamant Senate and House recomputation advocates stand pat on the Hartke amendment. If they will wage a last-ditch fight, they will win. They have the votes if they won't force recorded roll calls.

Adversity, if for no other reason, is of benefit, since it is sure to bring a season of sober reflection. Men see clearer at such time. Storms purify the atmosphere. — Henry Ward Beecher, American clergyman.

Pennsylvania Doctors Tell Ways To Stop Strokes

By ELLEN L. SLOTT PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — About 200,000 people die each year from strokes, and for many the one that kills them is not their first.

When two clinical neurologists at Pennsylvania Hospital in Philadelphia considered the figures, they began a study to discover a form of stroke prevention.

No miracle drug, as Dr. Stanley Leonberg said, but find a way of preventive actions patients could take to decrease the risk of a second stroke.

And after over five years of study with 102 stroke patients, Leonberg and Dr. Frank Elliot have reached their goal.

Regular Checkups
About seven years ago, Elliot recalled, they began observing and treating their first stroke patients. They scheduled regular checkups with each of them for an average of five years.

The result was that 61 per cent of patients in an untreated control group at the hospital died, while only 18 per cent of patients under the stroke prevention program died of a second cerebral infarction.

"If we lose the ballgame in the first inning, that's it,"

Leonberg said. "If the person survives the first, our intention is to keep him from having another."

The doctors' stroke prevention methods, which were exhibited at the 1973 American Medical Association's convention, seem relatively simple.

"In this program," Leonberg said, "we follow the people who had strokes. They might develop diabetes or something that could lead to cerebral infarction. We also bear down on people who are smokers."

The patients, 73 males and 29 females, visited Leonberg or Elliot regularly for checkups following their strokes. Because the program was operated under a grant from the Hartford Foundation, all examinations were free within the five-year period.

Prevention
Elliot, 64, said the prevention method centers around common high risk factors in strokes. They include hypertension, diabetes, heart disease and hyperlipidemia, which is described as an excess of fat in the blood.

Also considered high risk factors are extracranial arterial stenosis, commonly called a clogged artery around the brain, and polycythemia, which is an excess of red corpuscles in the blood.

While those are known factors leading to strokes, Leonberg added that a number of possible factors may not lead directly to strokes, but will increase susceptibility to them.

These other factors are emotional stress, cigarette smoking, obesity and hyperuricemia, an excess of uric acid in the blood.

Both doctors told their overweight and cigarette smoking patients to stop their damaging activity. Leonberg claimed that they all had stopped smoking and tried to diet.

"We have no direct evidence that cigarette smoking or obesity causes cerebral infarction, but it does cause heart infarction."

"When someone comes in overweight I rant and rave and put them on diets," he said, "but it's hard to get a 60-year-old person at 204 pounds to lose weight. But some do get skinny."

The 46-year-old Leonberg tried continually to get stroke victims to understand the importance of checkups, dieting, not smoking and reducing stress.

He told of a carpenter who suffered a transient ischemic attack, what might be called a mini-stroke, and refused treatment after the initial stroke was over.

A Little Stroke
He had been watching television when he felt a numbness on one side of his body. After lying down for about 30 minutes the numbness cleared up. The carpenter had just undergone a stroke, a small one, but nonetheless a warning.

A small area of his brain lacked oxygen for the half-hour period. Leonberg said that 99 per cent of the deficiency improved, but the man's chances of having another one were good. The next time, Leonberg said, he might have a "big, bad attack."

"Some people are looking for a miracle drug," Elliot said, "but they'll never find one."

Thank You Mr. Haynes, Whoever You Might Be

By ROBERT CAREY NORTH LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — A storm was gathering outside when the phone rang. My wife was talking, something about the car and Michael, the five-year-old, noticing the smoke.

"Smoke, what smoke?" my voice broke and cracked like a teen-ager's. "Under the hood," she said. "Should I stay here?"

"Don't move, I said. I had visions of a burned out engine, thrown rods and horrendous repair bills. It started to rain, big popping drops that splattered noisily on the roof and pavement.

I cranked up the 10-year-old Volkswagen, laughingly known in our house as the second car, and am off, heading through the deluge on what sounds like three cylinders. I am worried. Frankly, what I don't know about cars would fill a bookshelf of encyclopedias.

His Saviour Arrives
I turned in to the post office lot where our vehicle lay wounded and in need of medical attention. It was dark and wet and service stations were closing early because of the fuel shortage. The babies were peering up with big round eyes. It was at this nadir of events that the real saviour arrived.

He appeared at my elbow, a short man with white hair and rosy cheeks. "Haynes is the name," he said. "What seems to be the trouble?" Well, Mr. Haynes, there's been some smoke and ... "Let's have a look at," said Mr. Haynes, pushing up the sleeves of his seersucker jumpsuit, anxious to get busy. We opened the hood and poked inside with a flashlight.

"There it is, you see, your radiator hose is busted, split right up the backside there," said Mr. Haynes, standing back and confidently wiping the grease off his hands. "Best I can do for you is to run you over to the auto shop," he added, "see if they got a part."

We rushed to Stinger Sam's Auto Parts, arriving just before closing, and bought a radiator hose for $1.96 including tax. Back at the lot we put the thing on in five minutes. When I say "we" I must generously include myself as my role in the emergency repair was, as you might imagine, limited.

I hoped I hadn't put him out any. "Nope, just going home to watch 'Gunsmoke,'" he said. We talked a bit more there under the dripping post office eaves about the vagaries of radiator hoses on foreign cars and similar experiences and I found out he had been an electrician for the Veterans Administration for 24 years.

"Well, let me have your first name and address Mr. Haynes," I said, "and I'll send you a Christmas card or something."

"No, no," he said, swinging up into his camper, a little old driver so lively and quick. He wouldn't hear of it. "You do the same for someone else some time," he called over as he drove out of sight.

"I'll do that Mr. Haynes and thank a lot," I hollered after him.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress is losing its battle with President Nixon on the issue of the nation's priorities.

Nixon's veto rules supreme. Seven times this year, Nixon has vetoed a bill. Seven times, either the Senate or the House has sustained him.

Simply put, this is why: — The Democratic-controlled Congress, with help from the liberal Republican bloc, can pass bills that shift more of the nation's resources to domestic social needs.

But if Nixon vetoes a bill, Congress cannot round up a two-thirds majority to override the veto.

No Compromise Expected. The result is that Congress, either has to backtrack and scale down its proposals to a level acceptable to the White House or give up.

As a result, some congressional liberals are looking toward the 1974 elections to pull them out of the impasse.

With no indication that Nixon plans to compromise, Congress will remain saddled with having its bills returned throughout the rest of this session and until the end of next year.

Book Beat

By GEORGETTE WAGNER
CHICAGO (UPI) — Does The Jackson Five, a black singing group, belong in a school textbook?

A Chicago publishing firm, Let's Save The Children, says it does.

The firm, started in July, 1972, has brought out eight school books with rhymed stories and photographs of well known blacks such as members of The Jackson Five.

"Most black children come to school feeling they are not going to succeed," Helen King, the firm's president, said. "School has become almost a place of punishment."

"If a first grader sees a book on The Jackson Five, he knows them. School's not so horrible. There's an element of trust," she said.

Mrs. King knows what she is talking about. A strikingly elegant black woman, she taught school in Chicago and Michigan, wrote several children's books and is a mother of two.

"It was designed as a social studies text," Mrs. King said, and a teacher's guide explains how to relate the text to lessons in geography, arithmetic, current events and culture.

She pointed to a book on singer Marvin Gaye. When Gaye meets Walter Washington, mayor of Washington, D.C., the guide suggests discussing the function of a mayor, the location of Washington, the child's hometown mayor and other black mayors in the country.

Stimulating Interest. "It wasn't designed as a reading series. But it will stimulate an interest in reading," Mrs. King said.

She said the series was also "cultural enrichment," valuable to white as well as black children in much the same way as the German folk tale "Hansel and Gretel."

Forty-two school systems, urban, suburban and rural, ordered the series, Mrs. King said.

She said she wasn't surprised that so many different types of school systems were interested in the series. She was surprised at the lack of response to using words like "cool" and "superbad" from the black language.

"We thought the use of the black language (would make children) trust the books. Maybe it's becoming accepted. Everyone uses 'hip' and 'cool,'" she said.

"We spell everything correctly," Mrs. King added. Speaking as a teacher she observed, "If we teach a kid to recognize 'going' as 'going,' how is he going to read Baudelaire?"

The use of page-size photographs, many of them collages, is also unusual. "Children are used to looking at TV. They're not used to looking at drawings," Mrs. King said "unfortunately."

The firm has 13 more books ready for the press and has begun a high school current affairs newspaper. Several of the new books are geared to black teen-agers, some of whom, Mrs. King said, are very sophisticated but lack reading skills.

"We have to use a language that is simplistic to talk about a sophisticated aspect of life," she said.

"You know, I'm not basically a career woman," she said. "I feel as though I'm part of a mission. Reading is like a social problem. A child who cannot read is a lost person in a society based on academic achievement."

That's why Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., said that the primary goal of American voters in 1974 is to elect a "veto-proof" Congress.

"Those in Congress who supported the Nixon policy of selfishness at home and arrogance abroad must be called to account in 1974," Mondale said in a speech at Toledo.

Hard Core Agrees. But getting a "veto-proof" Congress in the 1974 elections will be no easy task.

In the House, which sustains vetoes more frequently than the Senate, the numbers run against the possibility of nullifying Nixon's veto power.

The present lineup is 243 Democrats and 192 Republicans, with 291 needed to override a veto if everyone votes.

Among Democrats is a hard-core of about 50 southern conservatives that tends to agree with Nixon on priorities, meaning that to get two-thirds, the Democrats have to attract about 70 Republicans.

With those kind of numbers, the Democrats are going to have to displace Republicans or southern Democrats in wholesale numbers next year.

But even a much smaller shift could help on some issues. As an example, the House failed by only five votes to override a veto on the medical services program.

Know What To Do In Case Of A Fire

By FINACE DYER
Fire Chief

Not long ago in a western state, a man in his seventies sat at his telephone and burned to death, after reporting his home was on fire. It was later learned from a close relative that, through some terrible misunderstanding, the man thought he was supposed to remain by his phone until firemen arrived, in case the department needed to call him back for directions!

In a small city in the middle west, an elderly lady's three room home burned to the ground while she attempted to put out the fire with her garden hose. She later said, "I didn't think you were supposed to call the firemen unless you found you were unable to put the fire out yourself."

And, most everyone has heard the hard-to-believe report about the lady who called the fire department and said, "come quick, my house is on fire," and then hung up the phone before giving her address. She watched helplessly as her home was destroyed by the fire, waiting for firemen to come who didn't know her location!

Most children know better than to make the mistakes these adults made. Yet, things like this happen, across the country, frequently. It shows clearly that fire prevention and safety measures concerning fire, should be discussed at regular intervals by everyone, especially family members.

What is the first thing to do when a fire is discovered in your home? Get yourself and other members of the family OUTSIDE FAST AND FIRST! If the fire has obviously gotten a good start, no matter how confined it might be at the moment, DO NOT attempt to call the fire department from your own home! Once the family is outside safely, and away from the dwelling, go to a neighbor's home to call the fire department! If you live in an area where neighbors are not close by, and you feel going to a nearby home is a loss of time, use your own phone ONLY if you can do so safely, and then, ONLY after the family is removed from the premises. Remember, while the loss of your home is no small matter, the house can be replaced... you and your family cannot!

Once the family is safely outside DO NOT attempt to return to the home to carry out things you feel are precious. While the home may not be completely engulfed by the flames, the extreme heat creates gases and smoke that are just as deadly as dying from severe burns.

When the fire department has been notified, and your address given them, (DO NOT hang up the phone until the person at the fire department tells you to do so), it is helpful to post an adult member of the family at the nearest cross streets, to direct firemen when they are close at hand.

Beware of being tempted to remove items you want to save from the garage, carport, outbuildings, etc. You have no way of knowing how extensively the fire has weakened your home and there is the danger of collapsing walls, chimneys, etc. There are only two logical reasons to return to a burning home: to carry a child out or assist an invalid, or someone who has been injured. There is nothing else worth risking your life for!

In your family fire drills, which we discussed yesterday, it will be beneficial to go over these procedures with all members of the family, so that, in case of one of the adults is injured, or away at the time of the fire, the entire family will know how to proceed.

When there is a fire, fast action is necessary... train the children so there will be no panic, no reason for misunderstanding!

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Stereotypes about the human aging process, particularly the adage that old people must keep busy to keep happy, are challenged by a 31-year-old sociologist-researcher at the University of Southern California's Andrus Gerontology Center.

Dr. Vern L. Bengtson says that recent studies have shown many widely held theories about the aged are myths based to a large extent on the stubborn clinging to the Protestant work ethic.

Bengtson challenged such assumptions as: — Retirement is a traumatic

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Nora is desperately in need of a good psychiatrist. But you laymen should realize that people do not run away from happiness! Yet externals may suggest that Nora should be quite happy, though her internal conflicts can produce insanity or suicide!

CASE-Y 540: Nora F., aged 17, needs psychiatric help fast. "Dr. Crane," her Guidance Counselor at high school began, "Nora was formerly a straight 'A' student."

"She was also immaculate in her dress and meticulous with her home work assignments. And she practiced faithfully on the violin till she was quite an accomplished musician."

"But 3 months ago, she began to grow careless regarding her clothing."

"Her grades also began to drop this term and she seems unconcerned though she would have cried and been upset a year ago if she had even received a 'B' mark!"

"Now she turns in sloppy themes and just sits, staring at the wall."

"Occasionally, her eyes will light up, as if she is hearing distant voices."

"Dr. Crane, what is wrong with Nora?"

SCHIZOPHRENIA

Nora's symptoms are the standard picture of schizophrenia.

It often starts in the late teens and afflicts people who may have been very high in their I.Q. Nora's case is one which merits immediate treatment by a good psychiatrist!

Otherwise, she may end in a state mental institution. But you laymen should vividly keep this psychological axiom in mind:

"People do NOT run away from happiness!"

To outsiders, it might appear that Nora violates this adage.

For she lived in a modern home, in a suburban neighborhood and her parents didn't mistreat her.

But many such children have inner tensions and secret conflicts which parents may not even dream exist.

For example, thousands commit suicide every year, for suicide is the major cause of death among college students. Why?

Inner conflicts of some sort! For suicide, like drunkenness, drug addiction, the rolling stone

Vegetable Soybeans Good High Protein Substitute

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — You're missing some good, cheap eating if you shrug off soybeans as cattle food.

While field soybeans have long been recognized as an excellent source of cattle fodder, vegetable soybeans have sustained the peoples of the Orient for centuries.

A letter from a reader in suburban Lindhurst, N.Y., reminded me of their role in the human diet.

Florence Ballman wrote that she and her husband, Charles, had planted soybeans in their garden. Harvest was almost at hand when she asked for directions for shelling and cooking them.

"All the recipes I've seen call for dried beans, sprouts or soybean meal," she added. "How do you cook them? In the pod or shelled? I am enclosing a self-addressed envelope and hope you will send me help in a hurry."

By the time our response reached her, she said she'd spent four or five hours trying to remove raw beans from their tough shells.

"Then I tried cooking a few in the shell. That should have tipped me off," Mrs. Ballman said in a telephone interview.

Blanching five minutes over steam or in boiling water is recommended by the few publications dealing with the subject. This softens the shells so they can be slit easily. The green beans can be frozen without further cooking, or boiled or steamed for 10 to 30 minutes—depending on taste—and used in any recipe that calls for cooked, dried soybeans or canned ones.

With Salt Pork. Mrs. Ballman, a native of Roanoke, Va., said she serves soybeans as a vegetable.

"I cook them with salt pork, just like I do string beans. They are delicious."

"A friend who grew up on a farm in Kentucky said soybeans were tasteless, but I found them very delicate."

The same can be said for dried soybeans that are sold in oriental and health food stores and departments. Cooked fresh soybeans can be used in any recipe calling for cooked dried ones or canned ones. They're particularly good in spicy or sauced dishes or casseroles.

Asians use them chiefly as sprouts or in bean curd, a bland cheese-like product the consistency of firm custard.

Natural food cookbooks generally contain special recipes for cooked soybeans but they're not really necessary. You can simply substitute them for ground meat in spaghetti sauce or stuffed peppers or onions, or for pea beans in your favorite baked bean recipe.

Drained and ground, cooked soybeans make a nutritious extender for meat loaves, meat balls and croquettes. Cooked, drained beans also make a delicious meatless salad, mixed with chopped raw apple, grated carrots, chopped celery and onion or scallions, in an herb or curry-flavored salad dressing.

Unlike other dried legumes, soybeans never become mushy. Even after prolonged cooking, they retain a nutty texture.

But their biggest advantage is price: A one-pound package sold for 51 cents in a midtown Manhattan supermarket when beef prices hovered in the $1.50 to $2.00 a pound range.

Meat shrinks in cooking, adding to its cost per serving. Dried soybeans expand from two and one-half to three times their volume when presoaked and cooked. Weight for weight, cooked soybeans have twice as much complete protein as most meats and about three times as much as eggs and cereals.

Former Bake Show Queen Wins Blue Ribbon At Fair

By BOBBYE COMBS

The famous pound cake of the panhandle won its fourth, First Prize Blue Ribbon this fall at the 1973 Tri-State Fair in Amarillo.

Stephanie Eastham, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Eastham, 2531 Christine, entered the pound cake in the senior culinary division. Her mother previously won three Blue Ribbons at the fair for the same recipe.

Stephanie, a 4-H club member for the past seven years, has also received many cooking awards, and she is sharing some of her prize-winning recipes today. She placed first and received $100 in the Tri-State 4-H Better Bake Show in 1971 which made her the Bake Queen for 23 counties competing.

Stephanie, 1971 Gold Star Girl of Gray County, was a winner at District Food Show in 1972, then placed sixth at the State Food Show at College Station.

She has also participated in the following 4-H projects: flower arranging, rifle, arts and crafts, decoupage, crocheting, clothing, macrame, home improvement, grooming and electricity. Stephanie stated that she took rifle to overcome her fear of guns.

Stephanie is presently serving as a Junior Leader, conducting cooking classes for a group of 12 boys and girls. She is also actively involved in church work and is serving as Conference Chairman for the La Da Sa Girls Conference, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. The conference will be held No. 9, 10, 11 at the Episcopal Conference Center, in Amarillo. A special guest at the event will be Karen Heard, first runnerup to Miss America. Stephanie has spent many hours throughout the year in preparation for this event since she will be chairman for the West Texas Plains area.

Stephanie is a senior student at Pampa High School, where she is associated with the Vocational Office Education, working at Horace Mann Elementary School Library. After school hours, she is employed by the Pampa Country Club.

"Solo, A Self-Portrait Of An Undercover Cop" Is New On Lists

By United Press International
Solo, a Self-Portrait of an Undercover Cop, by Anthony Schiano, with Anthony Burton. Dodd, Mead, $6.95.
The man who faces the greatest dangers in the battle against narcotics is the undercover cop, the volunteer who roams the underworld seeking evidence that will convict the drug dealer.
Besides the ever-present risk of exposure as "the man," the undercover cop on the street operates in a world where desperate junkies prey on other junkies, pushers or anyone suspected of having money or dope.

Det. Anthony Schiano, who describes his adventures as a "UC" on New York City streets in Solo: Self-Portrait of an Undercover Cop, has been mugged repeatedly.
Schiano was mugged because he insisted on working alone and because he walked into buildings known to be full of muggers ready to jump junkies looking for their connections.
Solo, written with New York Daily News reporter Anthony Burton, is a curious tale about a man who in his earlier years was very close to falling on the wrong side of the law. Yet, he not only opted for the police, but once on the job he threw himself into the action with an aggressiveness bordering on the compulsive.

Schiano kept asking for more after being wounded, even after he began to "smell" like a junkie and his fellow officers began to shun him, and even when his appearance and long hours began to take their toll on his family.
Schiano's aggression also led him to adopt the standards of his adversaries. He tells of using an illegal gun to ambush and wound men who had mugged him or who had stood in his way. He dismisses the shootings with the reasoning that all is fair on that level.

Probably the question of what makes a man like Schiano continually seek danger can only be answered by psychologists. Solo takes a stab at it and it is absorbing reading.
Patrick W. Sullivan
The Inquisition, by the Rev. John A. O'Brien. (Macmillan, $6.95)
A terrifying look at the Inquisition, which obsessed the Roman Catholic Church for several centuries, by a leading liberal Catholic scholar. In his use of detail, in his blending of events, he shows the impact of one of religion's cruelest movements and is able to elucidate its philosophic basis.

The Rothschilds, a Family of Fortune, by Virginia Cowles. (Knopf, $15).
Undeterred by Frederick Morton's popular biography of the great European banking dynasty and its Broadway adaptation, Virginia Cowles retells the now familiar saga in an exceptionally handsome volume with a wealth of illustrations, many in color. It is stronger than Morton's book on the family's recent history.
The Notch of the Knife, by William Haggard.

(Walker, $4.95).
That very British gentleman, Col. Charles Russell, alights in a Balkan country to help a former comrade in arms, now the nation's premier, in a struggle against Communists for control of a hugely important mine. A full agenda of murders and intrigue is handled with the color's suave directness. Haggard, as usual, writes with elegant precision.
The Thirteenth Trick, by Russell Braddon. (Norton, $5.95).
Is the Motorway Maniac who murders girl hitchhikers crippled Robbie or his brother.

Mark? Chief Inspector Cheadle has a hard time working this one out and so does the reader as he is drawn deeper into the close love-hate relationship between the brothers.

Hawaii Foundation Launches "Operation Grandmother's Trunk"

HONOLULU (UPI) — Youngsters here are rummaging through grandmother's trunks and discovering their colorful pasts.

The Hawaii Foundation for History and the Humanities has launched "Project Grandmother's Trunk" to help bring the past to life for elementary school children.

Concerned that the island's many ethnic groups will lose touch with their rich cultural and historical roots, the foundation is bringing the old and the young together to awaken the past in the present.

Barbara Meheula, the foundation's executive director, asked islanders to gather "everyday items of the past, symbolizing a single ethnic group or community" to lend to Hawaii's schools.

The foundation's staff constructed trunks made from painted picnic chests. Each trunk contains a detailed written description of the items and a tape recording of a grandmother describing the contents and how they were used.

Mrs. Meheula said the foundation is working with senior citizens so that they can accompany the trunks and talk to the children about what's inside. Although "Project Grandmother's Trunk" is off to a successful start, with a few trunks Mrs. Meheula plans to expand the program to six trunks representing each ethnic group in Hawaii: Hawaiians, Filipinos, Samoans, Japanese, Chinese, Portuguese, Puerto Ricans, Koreans and Caucasians.

Aware that demands of educational curriculum often preclude studies of all the different ethnic groups in a community, Mrs. Meheula believes "Project Grandmother's Trunk" can be useful anywhere to give children a sense of pride in their heritage.

The project, which has the support of the Hawaii Department of Education, has generated an enthusiastic response among the children and the elderly.

"We've found that senior citizens really love to get involved with something like this," Mrs. Meheula said. "They'll be teaching youth about history, about their own lives."

The program has generated so much enthusiasm among the young that Mrs. Meheula has been asked to consider expanding it to the high schools as well.

"We are not interested in priceless antiques for the trunks," Mrs. Meheula said. "We want the ordinary articles that a grandmother would hang on to, items that children can handle and not be afraid of damaging."

The contents of one trunk, donated by a grandmother, 73, include a red, black and blue embroidered "oi dai," the sling which Chinese women use to carry their babies on their backs so their hands would be free for work. Old family pictures, an 80-year-old jacket typical of those worn by Chinese women, an abacus, chopsticks and Chinese soup spoons were also inside.

Acupuncture Used In Child Delivery

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — A woman gave birth to a girl at Magee-Womens Hospital this week after doctors used acupuncture to reduce her labor pains.

Drs. Richard Depp and Ezzat About-Eish said that Mrs. Thomas Chelkowski, 40, wife of a truck driver, had labor pains dulled for eight hours by eight acupuncture needles in her lower legs and abdomen.

But before Mrs. Chelkowski gave birth to a 6-pound, 12-ounce girl—her sixth daughter—she also was given an injection with a pain-killing drug. Mrs. Chelkowski said she felt

"some pressure, but no pain" during the acupuncture treatment.

The hospital said she volunteered for the procedure.

Depp said that, with more research, acupuncture might become the best method of killing labor pains. "Any drug you give the mother goes to the baby and has a potential for harm," he said.

Depp said Mrs. Chelkowski was given the pain-killing injection because she may have developed a tolerance to the acupuncture procedure.

"We are looking for more volunteers for this procedure," he said.

Raza Unida Chairman Accused Of Being Too Conservative

CRYSTAL CITY, Tex. (UPI) — Jose Angel Gutierrez has made an occupation of tweaking the nose of the Anglo establishment for almost a decade.

Now Gutierrez, national chairman of the Raza Unida Party, is being accused by a faction of the Mexican-American party of becoming too conservative.

The 28-year-old son of a Crystal City physician thrust himself on the political scene in 1970 when he led his fledgling party to a victory in the Crystal City school board election. Turned down for a teaching job at Crystal City despite a master's degree, Gutierrez ran and won the position of school board president.

It was during a series of school boycotts he led in Zavala and surrounding counties in 1968 and 1969 that he coined the phrase "kill the Gringo" that later was shouted during marches of angry Mexican-Americans in several South Texas cities.

Gutierrez later explained he meant the epithet "metaphorically," that he was referring to "killing the gringo politically and economically" similar to Stockley Carmichael's concept of Black Power.

However, last month in Denver a group of disenchanted Raza Unida members, including Colorado's Corky Gonzalez whom Gutierrez nosed out for the party chairmanship at El Paso last year, met and criticized the Raza Unida leadership.

"We feel that if Jose Angel is going to be given national leadership, that he begin to act other than just trying to implement solutions to Crystal City and Texas," said San Antonio restaurant owner Mario Cantu who attended the Denver meeting. "He represents the whole national movement. He should have been in Wounded Knee. He should have, for example, been protesting against the situation in Chile. He should be more involved in the issues of blacks for example."

Cantu said some Raza Unida leaders wanted Gutierrez to call a convention so they could express dissatisfaction with the party direction, but that he expects Gutierrez to "stall, because the national convention would break open all the opposition he has."

in other theories of government, such as the Puerto Rican Socialist Movement based on Marxist philosophy and the so-called Third World movement. "The solution that this country faces is to change the system radically," he said. "There's a guy in San Antonio who claims he's Raza Unida and he's trying to move it (party) over to the Marxist and Communist Party." Gutierrez replied to charges his leadership is becoming reactionary. "They're trying to be revolutionists. It boils down as simple as this, if you want to wage revolution, don't you think you ought to buy guns first?"

Gutierrez said he was not particularly opposed to the overall ideas of the faction but wanted to move slowly. "I'm opposing the position these people take because I think it's impractical and premature. I'm not opposed to their ideas at all. I don't think they're radical at all. I've been making some pretty heavy statements myself in the past, but I think we've got to cool it a little while. We've got to get ourselves organized before we start taking on some big fights."

Cantu admits he is not a bonafide member of the Raza Unida Party but said he contributed financially to it. The restaurant man said he could not be a party member because he served six years of a 10-year sentence when he pleaded guilty to selling heroin 12 years ago.

A shire is a political subdivision in England that corresponds to a county in the United States.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — A University of Maryland psychology professor is advocating a new government program that would require a license for parenthood.

Such plans have been advanced before, but were deemed impractical for obvious reasons. Now, according to Dr. Roger W. McIntire, birth control methods that are being perfected could make the program feasible.

Writing in the magazine Psychology Today, McIntire anticipates opposition by noting that the word licensing carries an implication of government meddling in private affairs. Indeed it does.

What it suggests to me is a policeman stopping a pregnant woman on the street and saying, "Let me see your license, lady." If she can't produce one, he books her for illegal fertility.

Everything Else Licensed
But McIntire also points out that "we already license pilots, salesmen, scuba divers, plumbers, electricians, teachers, veterinarians, cab drivers, soil testers and television repairmen."

The new license, he says, would merely insure that potential parents would be familiar with the principles of sound child-rearing.

Presumably, a parent who violated the principles would have his permit revoked. In which case the familiar roadside warning that "Speeders Lose Licenses" might be changed to "Breeders Lose Licenses."

One thing is certain—standards of parental competency must be uniform in every state. Otherwise, people would be flocking to certain states to have babies the way they now flock to some states to get married and to others to get divorced.

McIntire's article set me to wondering whether other problem areas might be improved by some sort of licensing arrangements. Old age, for example.

No Doubt at All
There is no doubt that, beyond a certain age, the older we get the more likely we are to become burdens to society.

One way to prevent this might be to require anyone wishing to live a long time to get a license to grow old.

We might call it a "Senility License" and the applicants must be familiar with the principles of growing old gracefully.

Anyone caught doddering without a license would be subject to arrest. There are a number of appropriate penalties that could be imposed on the guilty parties.

First offenders might have the rockers on their rocking chairs removed for two weeks.

Or, if the judge really wanted to throw the book at him, a culprit might be sentenced to six weeks without prune juice.

Women Should Learn Some Basic Mechanical Skills At Home

NEW YORK (UPI) — Homeowner or apartment dweller, woman alone or married to a handyman husband, there are some basic mechanical skills any woman should master.

"Woman's liberation may have given her freedom, but it hasn't equipped her to fix a running toilet," says William D. Sally of Baird & Warner, Inc.

Sally is vice president and general manager of Baird & Warner's property management division, responsible for the management of thousands of apartments in the Chicago area.

He says his experience with women tenants living alone—whether unmarried, divorced or widowed—convinces him any woman should have at least a basic knowledge of household mechanics. Even the gal with a handy, and willing, husband or boyfriend, will find that household crises don't always occur when he's around to solve them.

"Not that there's anything innate about a woman's inability to cope with simple household mechanics," says Sally. "It's just that most women haven't learned to make simple repairs, and many are afraid to tackle a job as uncomplicated as replacing a broken light bulb."

(To handle that problem: turn off the light switch, then use a pair of pliers with insulated handles to remove the base of the bulb from the socket.)

Simple Tools
Sally urges the would-be handywoman to get herself a set of simple tools—even if hubby has a well equipped workshop, it's better to have your own. A minimum includes hammer, screwdriver and pliers. Ask a friendly hardware dealer to help you choose. A sturdy ladder or stepstool is another must; no makeshift telephone book on a chair arrangement. There are other things you will want to add as you go along.

He suggests every woman:
—Learn where the circuit breaker or fuse box is and how to restore an interrupted circuit. In new apartments, the circuit breaker is located in a closet; in older buildings the fuse box probably will be in the hallway or basement. In private homes, they are located in basement or utility room or closet.

An overload on the electrical system will trip the circuit breaker or blow a fuse. First, disconnect some appliances or turn out some lights. Then push the circuit breaker button to restore service, or replace the fuse—it's as simple as replacing a light bulb. Just be sure to have replacement fuses of the proper amperage on hand. Never use too large a fuse. If the system goes again, call for professional help.

Add to your emergency kit: fuses and a flashlight with fresh batteries.

Investigate Innards
—Investigate the innards of the toilet tank. Sometimes all it takes to stop a running toilet is to jiggle the handle.

If the toilet continues to run, Sally explains, "lift off the top of the tank and see if the rubber valve is stuck. This valve looks like a sawed-off rubber ball, and fits over a hole in the bottom of the tank. It may get stuck in lifted position, permitting water to continue flowing out of the tank. If you poke around with your finger, that may be enough to let the ball fall into place."

—Buy and use a "plumber's helper." This is a toilet plunger—a big rubber suction cup on the end of a handle about three feet long. "Every home should have one," Sally says. "If a toilet bowl gets stopped up, put the plunger in the bowl and work it up and down quickly a few times. The combination of suction and pressure usually will be enough to dislodge whatever is causing the stoppage."

If a toilet is running over, the first thing to do is turn off the water supplying the tank. Usually there's a valve underneath the tank. If there isn't, find out where the water shut-off is.

Proper Usage
—Learn to use appliances properly. Strange as it may seem, Sally says, many women don't know how to use even the ordinary kitchen equipment. Reading instructions is the first order—even for something as simple as a refrigerator. Different makes and models have minor differences. If instructions are missing, write to the manufacturer, including model number.

—Keep sink drains free of grease, fat and hair. The best way to cope with stopped-up drains is to avoid them in the first place. As much as possible avoid disposing of grease or fat in the sink. When doing dishes, Sally says, "run a stream of hot water into the sink to keep any grease and fat fluid and permit it to be washed out of the trap."

Tub and shower drains usually are clogged by hair. Use a strainer basket to catch most of this—and to avoid loss of rings, bobby pins, etc. Regular use of drain cleaner will keep drains clean, Sally says, but be sure to read and follow directions carefully. Most drain cleaners are extremely caustic and dangerous chemicals. Do not use them around children or pets.

You might want to add to your kit a plumber's snake which can be worked down clogged drains to clear obstructions.

From these fundamentals, many a woman may want to go on to other fix-it jobs, tightening loose handles and switchplates, hanging pictures, replacing an electric cord plug.

Sally suggests, however, that the proverbial dripping faucet be left for someone with experience.

Women Are Endorsed

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — Harvard University this week endorsed three women applicants for the prestigious Rhodes Scholarship, restricted to men since its founding in 1902.

Founder Cecil Rhodes set up a trust fund 72 years ago for the grants to be administered by the British Parliament to college graduates who exhibit "qualities of manhood."

Abby Dubman, a member of Harvard's Committee on Fellowships, which received applications from women for the first time this year, said members are aware of the ban, but are attempting to challenge the sex barrier.

The committee selected three Radcliffe seniors along with the usual 82 Harvard seniors to represent the university in nationwide competition for the award.

The University of Minnesota endorsed a female applicant in 1972, but she was disqualified by the American secretary of the Rhodes Committee.

The University of San Marcos in Lima, Peru, founded in 1551, is the Western hemisphere's oldest.

Television In Review

By RICK DU BROW
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Doc Elliot," an occasional ABC-TV series that had its debut last night, concerns a physician who gave up his career as a New York surgeon to become a general practitioner in a remote part of Colorado. It is described as "a modern-day medical Western," and stars James Franciscus in the title role.

A one-hour entry, "Doc Elliot" will be seen from time to time in the network broadcast period normally occupied by the regular series "Owen Marshall, Counselor at Law." And there has been industry talk that ABC-TV might give consideration to the Franciscus show as a possible weekly program in the future. So the question is: What does it have that could make it worthy of attention?

It's a Mixed Bag

Well, the premiere tonight is a mixed bag. It is technically well-made. Its story, which deals with the doctor's belief that the vision of a blind, beautiful, mountain girl can be restored despite the objections of her ugly husband for obvious reasons, is well-acted but hokey and predictable.

Despite the predictability, many viewers will probably find their eyes moist when the girl, after a successful eye operation, sees her homely husband for the first time and reacts exactly as we knew she would all along. But many viewers will probably also wonder how a fellow as educated and bright as the doctor could have been so stupid in not recognizing immediately the reason why the husband resented his attempts to give the girl her sight back.

So we have pluses and minuses in tonight's debut. But stories can be improved, and flaws can be ironed out of future scripts. What is more important in this first glance at a new television series is that it has the look of careful handling from a long-run production viewpoint, and it has a solid basic theme (the seeking of new values by an educated person), and it has an attractive and professional leading man.

Setting is Modern Day

Although the setting of "Doc Elliot" is modern-day, the dramatic tone of tonight's premiere is somewhere between two successful video series, "The Waltons" and "Gunsmoke." And the regular supporting cast is top flight—Noah Beery Jr., Neva Patterson and Bo Hopkins. In short, there are a number of grounds for thinking that "Doc Elliot," with astute handling, could evolve into an enjoyable weekly show.

Tonight's debut is particularly fortunate in the excellent casting of Meredith Baxter as the blind girl and Mills Waterson as her bearded, chunky, uneducated husband. Miss Baxter gets the most out of a cliché part by bringing genuine emotion to her role. And Waterson is equally fine as the ugly mountain man who loves her deeply despite his fierce animosity toward others, and who is certain she will reject him when she sees him—as other women had in his earlier years.

The executive producer of "Doc Elliot" is Lee Rich, who is boss of "The Waltons." The director of tonight's premiere is Robert Totten, who has done a number of "Gunsmoke" episodes.
