Up to about six months ago, teenagers were scuffing around in thin leather shoes called "flats," some with no heels at all and some with heels about an eighth of an inch thick. If a girl wasn't wearing flats she was way out and looked upon as something probably resembling a praying mantis instead of a human girl. Then, as Spring Prom and June graduation came around, all the young things hoisted themselves up off the ground on heels about as thick as a lead pencil and four inches high. How they walked on those stilts without wobbling dangerously was their problem and I never delved into it. But, then, as summer waned and fall approached, the teen-age set moved into suedes and rough leathers of a dozen hues and shapes, but most generally resembling the kind of shoes you see on royal pages in any painting dating back to 1500 and earlier. in the nature of things, our country house swarms with young female creatures ranging between 14 and 17 years old. My own contribution to the convention is a twinned pair, but they have latched onto a formidable group which runs through the house like rivulets after rain. In and out of rooms, upstairs and downstairs and out onto a porch or a terrace. For awhile, these youngsters went in for skirts ballooned enough to tent a supermarket under which they took mysterious or seven horsehair-"spreaders." Spreaders are underskirts designed to hold outer skirts out as far as possible and any girl wearing less than four was beyond the pale. The idea seemed to be to hold the skirts out with these stiffeners to a point where going through a door was a geometric problem. And then, suddenly, one day we found stiffeners strewn all over the house, discarded in apparently a sudden onslaught of the Black Plague which did not give the afflicted time to even hang the underskirts up neatly, and were told that pencil-slim skirts, tailored to the tightness of human their friends gave me cool, demolishing looks of vast, vast pity. Poor, poor old man, they seemed to say. Poor drooling old idiot, indulging his silly dreams in the sun. Shoes for fall, they said, would be in colored suedes with thin black soles, cut long, pointed, ankle high, and cuffed in an easy roll at the top with a tuckled strap to hold them on. I took them all upstairs to a room I used fondly to think was mine alone and on the wall I showed them two small Breughels, in full color, and said "Like those people are wearing?"

They said, yes, like those people were wearing. I called a superb merchant named Max Hess Jr. in Allentown, Pa., and asked him if I was being gulled. He said, no, I wasn't. of the sac where it belongs. This method requires several reatments and carries some risk Also the scar tissue formed is not always strong enough to bring permanent relief. Although the injection treatment still has some supporters, it is probably not used as much as it used to be and is not as desirable as surgery in most

Surgery is the most effective treatment. By this means the contents of the sac can be put back in place and a firm covering built up at the weak point so that organs are kept where they best The hernia occasionally returns at ter such operations, often because of the carelessness of the patient bu' modern methods of operating have improved the technic so much that recurences have become less wear a truss for many years with

HIGH-HANDED TYRANNY (Christian Economics)

Shortly after Fidel Castro became master of Cuba last spring. forty-three airmen were accused of bombing and strafing civilians in Oriente province during the revolt. They were tried by a military court in Santiago and acquit-

Castro declared the acquittal to be a "grave error" and immediately ordered a new trial. Those who think the new dictator of Cuba is not heading for a Red regime were shocked by this highhanded procedure. It was protested by the Bar Association of Santiago and by the National Bar Association of Orba. We have seldom seen anything in Russia exceeding this act of tyranny. Stalin certainly influenced the courts but we recall no occasion where he completely set aside a verdict. One of the principles of Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence is that a man cannot be put in jeopardy twice for the same offense. Having been acquitted by court-martial, these men are obliged to face re-trial. If Castro follows this policy, he will rank with the world's most complete dictators and will make the Batista rule seem mild in comparison.

at Ford's Body Shop, 111 N. Frost, Coyle Ford now has seven hardworking men who like nothing better than to go to work on a wreck that has just been towed in off the Dented fenders, stuck windows and doors that won't open are just a few of the problems that Ford's men iron out every day.

The shop has a new front end machine that is really doing a job. With two full-time painters, Ford can give you factory paint jobs on rebuilt or scratched-up cars. More total wrecks have been saved from the junk yard at Ford's than at most other body shops. If you're in trouble on the road and it's dark call MO 4-7542. If it happens in the daytime call MO 4-4619. A Ford wrecker will come to your rescue at any hour of the day or night.

Shop Foreman Robert McCain really brings in the business with the wrecker. Metal men are Ray Shults, Bill Barrett, Joe Autry, Red Golden and Tinnie Riley, Shults and Barrett are new. The men with the paint guns are Henry "Razz" Johnson and Tinnie Riley, who is new.
