Yard Says 'Rot' To Threat

Reveal IRA Plot To Kidnap Prince Charles

LONDON (UPI)—Scotland Yard may snort at a London newspaper's report that fanatical Irish republican gunmen plan to kidnap Prince Charles, but would not specifically confirm or deny the report.

The London Daily Herald said in a banner headline story that gunmen wanted to seize the 11-year-old heir to Britain's throne, as a hostage in a scheme to win independence for Northern Ireland.

The Herald, quoting "Irish sources," identified the group as the Flanna Uladh (Warriors of Ulster) and said it was so fanatical that even the outlawed Irish Republican Army looked on it with disfavour.

Scotland Yard said the story obviously was written "because we refused to give information about his security measures were increased at Cheam School" which Charles attends.

Authorities in Dublin expressed surprise at the story but declined immediate comment.

The Daily Herald said the plot caused Scotland Yard to set up a new security around exclusive Cheam School which the 11-year-old prince attends.

"The authorities do not think the plans have reached an advanced stage," the Herald said. "But they dare not take any chances with the life of the heir to the throne."

"Reports that there have been night prowlers in Cheam grounds recently brought about the final decision to strengthen the Scotland Yard guard."

Missing Cuban Got Transfusion?

HAVANA (UPI)—The Cuban press ignored Monday the claim of an American woman that she gave a blood transfusion to Maj. Camilo Cienfuegos a week after he disappeared on a plane flight.

Neither was there any official comment available on the claim by Mrs. Vani L. Maris, a 39-year-old practical nurse, in a copy-righted story in the Miami News.

Mrs. Maris was quoted as saying she had given Cienfuegos the transfusion Nov. 5 as he lay unconscious in a military camp outside of Havana.

Cienfuegos vanished Oct. 27 on a flight from Camaguey to Havana. Premier Fidel Castro, who took personal command of the extensive search for his army commander, said all evidence pointed to the probability his plane had crashed into the sea. Cuba now is in official mourning.

FOR THE LAST TIME—Four-year-old Brigitta Toerngren will see Santa Claus for the last time this Christmas. Brigitta has been blind in her right eye since an eye cancer operation when she was nine months old. Now, in order to save her life, doctors in Skoensberg, Sweden, say the other eye must be removed. Doctors have promised Brigitta's parents they will delay the operation until after Christmas.

Monitors Vow To Oust Hoffa, Cronies

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Court-appointed monitors vowed today to speed efforts to force the ouster of Teamsters' President James R. Hoffa and his cronies from union office.

Monitor Chairman Martin F. O'Donoghue made the pledge following a Supreme Court ruling which permits enforcement of his anti-corruption drive within the giant truck union.

Hoffa also faced possible trouble on another front. Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell said Monday night he had asked the Justice Department to check whether the Teamsters were fully obeying the labor-reform law's ban on ex-convicts holding union office.

Mitchell said Hoffa had advised him that only "a few Teamster officers" were forced to resign because of the ban. The secretary added, "The Justice Department has been asked to look into the accuracy of this report."

The Supreme Court refused Monday to interfere with lower court decisions upholding the clean-up directives issued by the Teamster monitors. It was a major setback for Hoffa and some of his top lieutenants who have been tagged for removal by the watchdog group.

O'Donoghue indicated he would try to nail the Teamster chief for his part in a Florida real estate deal involving use of funds belonging to Hoffa's home Local 299 in Detroit.

The monitor chairman said he would ask a federal court early next week for power to go ahead.

A Frigid Blast In N. Texas

Dalhart Has Reading Of 6; Cold To Stick

United Press International

A frigid Canadian cold front, the third and worst of the season, raced across Texas and blanketed the state today with a mass of arctic air that plummeted temperatures to record lows in many parts.

The front, shoved along by icy winds that gusted up to 40 miles per hour, hurtled past the Texas Gulf coast at 5 a. m. today. Sub-freezing temperatures extended as far south as Lufkin, Austin, Alpine and El Paso.

Although Dalhart, with the coldest early morning reading in the state, was three degrees warmer than the six above zero it had last Saturday, the front was generally the most severe of the season.

Lubbock's 10 degrees and the 16 degrees at Wichita Falls were the lowest recorded so early in the autumn. And new low records for Nov. 17 were set in both Fort Worth and Dallas.

The 20 degrees at Fort Worth eclipsed the 27 degrees for this date in 1955. Dallas had 21 degrees this morning. Its previous low was 26 degrees in 1956.

Light snow fell Monday at Amarillo as the front swept southward into the state. Although the Weather Bureau at Fort Worth had issued snow warnings for the Texas Panhandle, the front failed to produce much moisture.

Most of the scanty moisture that fell was in the form of freezing drizzle.

Light rain fell this morning along the Texas Coast and in the lower Rio-Grande Valley. Skies were mostly clear in North and West Texas and partly cloudy to cloudy elsewhere.

Other minimum temperatures this morning were Amarillo 11, Abilene 18, Midland 20, San Angelo 21, Alpine and Brownwood 22, Texarkana 27, El Paso 29, Austin 30, San Antonio 33, Victoria 37, Houston 38, Corpus Christi and Presidio 39, Laredo 40, Galveston and Port Arthur 42 and Brownsville 45.

Drizzle fell at Dallas, Fort Worth and Mineral Wells during the night.

Weather Bureaus at many Texas cities noted a marked delay between the time the front passed through and the time when temperatures started to drop, but when the drop started, it happened in a hurry.

At Fort Worth, the first effects of the front's passage were felt at about 2 p. m. Monday. An hour and 15 minutes later, the temperature had dropped 18 degrees, from 56 to 38.

The gusty winds that accompanied the frontal system made the low temperatures seem worse to those who were outdoors.

Floggings Urged As Punishment

LONDON (UPI)—Sir Thomas Moore is leading a campaign in Parliament to restore flogging as a punishment in crimes of violence. He thinks young thugs can stand anything but humiliation.

"Forcing them to lose face among their fellows is the worst fate they can suffer," he said today. "And the cane or the birch is the most humiliating of punishments."

Ever since flogging was abandoned a decade ago, Sir Thomas has been arguing for its return. For years his was a lonely voice but as juvenile delinquency and crimes of violence increased he found many supporters.

And today his mail, he said, is heavily in favor of his suggestion that the cane and birch be restored, but not the cat o' nine tails.

U.S. Acts To Halt Another Canal Incident

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The United States moved today to head off a new outbreak of anti-American violence in Panama by offering to send a top diplomat there to solve "misunderstanding."

Secretary of State Christian A. Herter called Panamanian Ambassador Ricardo M. Arias to his office late Monday for a 40-minute discussion of threats of new violence in the Central America country.

The threats have been made in Panamanian radio broadcasts and newspapers. Herter said he was "increasingly concerned" for the safety of the 300 American citizens in Panama.

Herter said the United States was willing to send a top diplomat to Panama to solve the "misunderstandings" that led to demonstrations against the U.S. embassy Nov. 24.

Arias said it would be helpful if a high-ranking State Department official could be sent to his country. There was speculation that the assignment might go to Robert Murphy, trouble-shooting undersecretary of state for political affairs.

Woman Shot In Houston

HOUSTON (UPI)—An attractive 46-year-old woman was found beaten and shot to death Monday night in her fashionable home in the Astor Oaks addition.

The body of Mrs. Wilma Selby was discovered sprawled in a hall way of her home at 4703 Devon St. She had been beaten about the face and shot twice in the chest with a small caliber pistol, homicide detectives said.

Mrs. Selby's body was found by her husband, Joseph F. Selby Sr., 51, when he returned home shortly before 8 p. m.

82 Signed Up For Turkey In The Mall

Eighty-two local business firms will participate in Pampa's second annual Turkey in the Mall promotion Nov. 24. Lucien Young, chairman of the Merchants activities committee, said today.

Young added that any firm desiring to take part should contact the Chamber of Commerce office no later than Friday. Benefits include participation in cooperative advertising. In 1958, Young said, 70 firms participated.

The two White Deer men offer parking violations will not count against the record.

Points will be awarded on a sliding scale of zero to six. A person with zero points will receive a 20 per cent discount on his premium for bodily and property damage, medical and collision insurance.

A one point driver will pay the same rate now charged. From there the rates jump 20 per cent for each point up to a maximum of double rates for six points.

For example: Husband and wife own one 1959 medium priced car and the car is used by the husband driving to and from work. The husband and wife are the only operators and the car is insured for $5,000, $10,000 bodily injury, $5,000 property damage, $1,000 medical and $50 deductible.

In Gray County the regular premium will be $98, but a driver with no points on his record would receive a $20 discount, while the driver or family with four points (husband one accident, wife two moving convictions) would be charged an additional $97.

Solons Discuss U.S. Sales Tax

Conflicting Advice On New Taxes

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Congress got conflicting advice today on whether the federal government should rely more heavily on excise taxes to meet its money needs.

The House Ways & Means Committee, in the second day of a five-week inquiry into ways of making income taxes more fair, called for testimony on the relative role of the excise levy from a panel of experts.

The question of broadening present excise taxes—even to the extent of enacting a national sales tax—popped up in advance papers submitted to the tax-writing committee by several of today's scheduled witnesses.

William Fellner of Yale University suggested that income taxes be revised with a 15 per cent, across-the-board cut in rates, coupled with a $100 increase in personal exemptions. Together, these would reduce federal revenue nine billion dollars a year.

Fellner proposed offsetting this with a retail sales tax of 7 per cent, applied to about 40 per cent of national consumption.

He conceded his suggestion was controversial but termed it a "reasonable compromise."

John F. Due, a University of Illinois economics professor, said in his paper, however, that a federal sales tax would hit hardest at lowest income levels—elderly retired couples, large families, and young couples—as well as cause businessmen "considerable nuisance and expense."

Gerhard Colm, chief economist of the National Planning Association, said a federal sales tax not only would boost costs of tax administration but invade a field that has largely become that of the states.

Kin Of A Pampan

Clues Followed In Shotgun Slayings

GARDEN CITY, Kan. (UPI)—New clues turned up today by officers investigating the ruthless shotgun killing of a wealthy wheatman and three members of his family indicated the killer, probably a psychopath, was familiar with the work of cowboys or rodeo performers.

A top policeman, who has worked on the case since the four nearly-decapitated bodies were found early Sunday, revealed that they had been trussed up like bulldogged steers on the range.

Herbert W. Clutter, 48, his wife, Bonnie, 45, and their two children, Kenyon, 15 and Nancy, 16, were bound hand and foot and gagged before the killer-pumped shots pointblank into their heads.

"This was a carefully thought out murder, planned skillfully and in advance," the officer said. "The knots are the kind used a lot on these prairies by cowboys."

The officer said 12 ranchhands who work on Clutter's 1,000-acre wheat farm and cattle ranch had been questioned extensively and none was under suspicion.

Officers also revealed that the victims had been gagged with two-inch strips of adhesive tape. Earlier, it had been believed that the gagging material was cloth, but it had been so badly torn and bloodied by the shotgun pellets that its nature was uncertain.

"There was no such adhesive tape in the house," the officer said. "The killer must have brought it and the nylon cord used to truss the family with him."

Logan H. Sanford, chief of the Kansas Bureau of Investigation and in charge of the big manhunt for the killer, called the crime the "most brutal" in his 12 years of heading up the FBI-like agency.

Sanford said no motive for the massacre had been rundown.

Investigators Begin Probe Of Plane Crash

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—Federal authorities today began a determined effort to learn what caused a Miami-to-Los Angeles airliner to plummet into the Gulf of Mexico killing all 42 persons on board.

Civil Aeronautics Board Investigator Charles S. Collar said "there are no indications as yet of sabotage," but added that "we don't have enough to go on towards establishing cause."

Investigators from four federal agencies—the FBI, U. S. Post Office, Federal Aviation Agency and the CAB—plus airlines officials are cooperating in investigating the crash.

The doomed National Airlines DC-7B was on the second leg of a three airlines "interchange" flight from Miami to Los Angeles when it dropped into the gulf Monday without any advance hint of trouble.

The mangled bodies of nine victims—seven men and two women—were brought ashore at Gulfport, Miss., early today. One of the bodies had been mutilated by sharks, the others apparently were smashed by impact.

The bodies will be taken here today for pathological examination to determine how the victims died. FBI fingerprint experts stood by to help establish identities.

Cranberry Parcel Has U.S. Approval

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Some 3,500,000 pounds of cranberries and cranberry products had the government's stamp of approval today as uncontaminated and safe to serve with the Thanksgiving turkey.

Arthur S. Flemming, secretary of health, education and welfare, who touched off the cranberry cancer scare, said tests so far are encouraging. But he said much remains to be done to find those cranberries which are contaminated with a chemical weed killer that causes cancer in rats.

Commissioner George P. Larrick of the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), which is conducting the hurry-up tests, said findings so far indicate only a small part of the cranberry crop is tainted with the chemical, aminotriazole. He said the findings were "reassuring."

However, Flemming said Monday night the FDA had seized a fourth batch of contaminated berries. The 25 cases of canned cranberries were grown in Wisconsin and shipped to Nashville, Tenn.

Parole Violator Turned Over To FBI

A parole violator wanted by the FBI was apprehended in Pampa Saturday and turned over to the U.S. marshal Monday, Sheriff Rufe Jordan reported today.

The man, J. C. (Jake) Agin, was arrested at a Tuba St. rooming house. Jordan said Agin robbed a Seminole, Okla., bank in 1964 and was wanted in connection with the theft of a car. The arrest was made by sheriff's deputies.

New Insurance Law Penalizes Reckless, Accident-Prone Driver

By PAT CONWAY
United Press International
(Second of three articles.)

AUSTIN (UPI)—Otto P. Gomez finished his last of many beers, then sidled into his 280-horsepower Juggernaut and accelerated off into the night.

"You see officer, I was going about 25 when all of a sudden there was this drunk cow coming at me about 70," Otto tried to explain.

To Otto's driving record was added one conviction for driving while intoxicated and one accident—a total of six points under the new merit insurance plan—and his automobile insurance rates were doubled.

What happened to Otto could possibly happen to any Texas driver under the state's new "safe driving insurance plan" designed to equalize the cost of car insurance between careful and "unsafe" drivers.

The new plan goes into effect New Year's Day.

Some drivers will pay 20 per cent less for their insurance while those with "unsafe" records will make up the difference.

The merit plan is based on a point system, with points assessed for both accidents and traffic convictions over the past three years.

Four points will be assessed, in addition to two points for accidents, when convicted of driving while drunk; failure to stop and

Quotes In The News

United Press International
NEW YORK — Secretary of State Christian A. Herter, stating that mutual fears of an all-out war may help East and West achieve a new process of communication: "I believe that on certain fundamentals we can find a common language because we have a common interest. That interest lies simply in the basic will to survive, shared by free men and Communists alike."

WASHINGTON — Former Secretary of State Dean Acheson, criticizing the administration as lacking clear foreign policy objectives: "This administration neither negotiates nor acts. It travels. The mileage clocked, is very impressive, but the results are not impressive."

LOS ANGELES — Dr. Eberhard Rechtin, chief of the California Institute of Technology's jet propulsion laboratory guidance division, asserting that the United States must expand its space effort: "In a sense, we are so far behind that the Russian competition does not even look back to see where we are."

NEW YORK — Republican Gov. Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon, predicting that Vice President Richard M. Nixon and New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller will hold within bounds any fight for the GOP presidential nomination: "Nixon and Rockefeller have agreed that whatever may develop, they will not conduct a vicious, name-calling, party-splitting pre-presidential campaign."

DEAR ABBY....

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend is getting on my nerves. He is the type who would rather eat burnt toast in a restaurant than make a fuss by complaining about it. He is steady and dependable. He hasn't missed a day's work or been late in four years. He is so conservative I could scream. He makes his own hair tonic and shaving lotion and says I am foolish to buy cologne when he could make me some. He works in a plant where everything is made with an alcohol base. He is so "good" he is boring. My parents want me to marry him. Do you think he would make a good husband?

BORED WITH HIM
DEAR BORED: He would make a wonderful husband — but not for you. If his patience irritates you, his thriftiness annoys you and his steadiness bores you turn him loose. There are plenty of girls who are looking for a man with his qualities. One girl's nightmare is another girl's dream.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 15-year-old girl with a rare problem. I can't stand old people. They are like to be near them. I don't even like to be near them. They are very repulsive. The other day when I was on a bus this old lady got on and sat next to me. She was all wrinkled up and drooling and humming. I suppose she couldn't help it, but she made me feel so crawly I couldn't wait to get off the bus. How can I get over this feeling? Do you think I

MATURE PARENT
By MRS. MURIEL LAWRENCE
Mrs. T. writes: "Our little girl's school serves hot lunches. But it has a rule that forbids lower grade children to leave the table until they have eaten all the food they are served. Both has a small appetite and is beginning to dread lunchtime because it means unpleasantness with her teacher when she can't finish her meal. Can you explain this rule?"

No, I don't understand it. A child's properly jealous of his right to govern his own digestion. Though we provide him with food, it's his teeth that have to work on it. In a world where so many of his activities are directed by us, he resents our attempts to control his digestive activities too. So, when we try to force him to eat, he will reject the food, not only because he doesn't want it but because he resents our domination. This can be unfortunate. Once he's learned to express resentment by refusing to eat, he may reject food whenever he gets angry at us. If we won't let him look at TV, he may refuse to eat his supper. If we won't order the dessert he wants, he may refuse to eat his meat and vegetables. He'll shove his plate away whenever he feels displeased with us. Rejection of food and retaliation have become the same thing in his mind, so that refusing to eat becomes his only means of expressing vengeful feelings toward us.

And later toward other people. It is an unfortunate method of retaliation because it is self-destructive. We need food to live, and when we use self-starvation to express anger at people, all that happens is that we get thin while the people we're mad at stay fat.

In Victorian days young ladies whose lovers jilted them went in heavily for self-starvation. When they declined into the local graveyard it was popularly believed that they'd died of broken hearts. The truth was, the poor things died of unexpressed rage at their lovers.

Don't wonder. They couldn't help making the fatal connection between rage and rejection of food. They'd learned to make it in nurseries where Nannies made a habit of requiring "clean plates" from rebellious children.

FEELING GUILTY
DEAR FEELING: The fact that you are "feeling guilty" indicates that you realize your attitude is wrong. This is half the battle. With maturity will come understanding, patience and respect for others. Elderly people are not always attractive (neither are young people) but it is up to the younger ones to give them a pleasant minute, or hour, or day. Who knows how many more they will have?

DEAR ABBY: Who said a woman has to be skinny as a beanpole in order to be good-looking? Ten years ago I married a gal who weighed 155 pounds. She was five feet six. I'm the kind of guy who likes a lot of Mamma. Today she is down to 110 pounds and she is always on a diet. Her disposition is terrible and she picks at her food like a sparrow. She won't even take a drink because of the calories in it. I am fed up with diet talk and diet meals. I'd like to have her like she was. But how?

DEAR BILL: Every woman should consider her husband's preferences first and foremost. If you like "a lot of Mamma" — your wife should start filling herself in. She shouldn't weigh more than the doctor's chart allows, but dieting down to "a rag, a bone and a hank of hair" is ridiculous.

About Supreme Court, From Newsletter Printed In 1956

Because of considerable interest which was manifested in my newsletter of last week and from questions which have arisen therefrom, I am reprinting one of my 1956 newsletters.

Where did it all start? Few people have taken the trouble to find out the history of the doctrine which seems to be causing so much trouble today. That is, the doctrine that the Supreme Court has the power to declare an Act passed by the duly elected officials of the people, to wit, the Congress of the United States, repugnant to the Constitution and therefore unconstitutional and of no force and effect, thus vesting in the Supreme Court the final veto power concerning the rules, regulations and laws by which our daily lives are governed.

It all started in 1801 immediately after Thomas Jefferson was sworn in as President of the United States. At that time the political parties were the Federalists on the one side and the Democratic-Republicans on the other side. The general philosophies of those parties were in keeping with the general alignments of thought as between Jefferson and Hamilton. The Jeffersonian doctrine was based upon a distrust of centralized government and the advocacy of confidence in the people's capacity to govern. The Hamiltonian philosophy supported a strong national government by a sort of "royal purple" group who would have full control of the centralized powers and be able to govern without interference from the people.

At that time President Adams was leader of the Federalists, while Vice President Jefferson was leader of the Democratic-Republicans. The Federalists had gotten in bad favor with the public and realized that they would be turned out of office in the December 3, 1800, election. They were correct. Thomas Jefferson was elected President at that time and prepared to be inaugurated on March 4, 1801. The Federalists, in an effort to perpetuate their power, undertook between the date of the election, December 3, 1800, and the date of Jefferson's inauguration, March 4, 1801, to fill all open offices with Federalist followers. The number one appointment in this plan went to John Marshall, President Adams' Secretary of State and a loyal Federalist. He was appointed the third Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court. There were a number of other appointments made by President Adams, among them being the appointment of a Justice of the Peace for the District of Columbia. The recipient of this appointment was Mr. William Marbury, who was appointed on March 2, 1801, just two days before Jefferson's inauguration.

In the confusion of the change of Administrations, the then-Secretary of State, John Marshall, signed and sealed the appointments, but apparently got busy on other matters and forgot to issue the commissions to several appointees, including William Marbury. Jefferson, upon inauguration, had instructed his Secretary of State, James Madison, to withhold the issuance of these commissions. Whereupon, Marbury filed suit against James Madison, the new Secretary of State, in the Supreme Court of the United States. This was born the famous case of Marbury vs Madison, with which all students of the law are familiar.

Since the Supreme Court's power to take original jurisdiction in cases is limited to a very narrowly defined class of cases, there was much discussion about Marbury having filed his suit in the Supreme Court rather than in a trial court. The filing of the case in the Supreme Court created a situation whereby John Marshall, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, was called upon to decide whether or not the Court could compel James Madison, Secretary of State, to issue a commission that Chief Justice John Marshall, while serving as Secretary of State John Marshall, had neglected to issue. Since the Marbury case was clearly outside of the original jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, the normal procedure would have been for the Court to decline to hear the case and permit the complainant to file his suit in a proper court. However, for some reason Chief Justice Marshall brought into the picture the Judiciary Act of 1789, an Act to control the procedures in federal courts. He indicated that, although the Supreme Court could not hear the Marbury case under the Constitutional restrictions, there were provisions in the Judiciary Act, a statute passed by Congress, that would permit the Supreme Court to hear the case. He then proceeded to hold that, because according to his conclusions the Judiciary Act was in conflict with the Constitution, the Judiciary Act became unconstitutional and therefore void. This action on the part of Chief Justice Marshall has been interpreted as a master stroke of a devoted advocate to centralized government. It created the doctrine that the Supreme Court had the power to declare Acts of Congress unconstitutional — power which was bitterly opposed by Jefferson's followers.

Had John Marshall held against Jefferson's followers on the Marbury case and had entered a judgment requiring Madison to issue Marbury a commission, there was a strong chance that Marshall might have been impeached. Many thought that Marshall realized this and thereupon conceived his idea of not endangering his position as Chief Justice, but at the same time, creating a strong weapon in the hands of advocates of centralized government. This approach left the Jefferson followers in the position of having won the Marbury case, for which they could not complain, but of having had to accept, as a thorn with the roses so to speak, the establishment of a doctrine that vested the Supreme Court with final veto powers, on all legislative actions. It is interesting to note that in the 35 years that John Marshall served as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, he never again declared an Act of Congress unconstitutional.

It is also well to remember in this connection that as matters stand, the laws passed by the duly elected officials of this land are in a strange position. These laws can be knocked down by the Supreme Court of the United States as being unconstitutional. Yet, a treaty between this country and a foreign country, written and entered into by the Executive

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The "no man's land" in labor-management relations that has so long plagued the employers and employees in small business appears to be eliminated by the new amendment to the Taft-Hartley Act.

The old law barred the states from taking jurisdiction over labor-management conflicts in small businesses if the business had a relation to interstate commerce. At the same time, the National Labor Relations Board, which administers the federal law, could not take these cases for lack of funds and other reasons of administration. This created the "no man's land," which the new law is designed to eliminate.

Under the new law, the states and territories may take "jurisdiction over labor disputes over which the (national) board declines . . . to assert jurisdiction." This gives the states jurisdiction over cases which the national board does not take, but it does leave for solution the question of how to determine which cases the national board will take and which it will decline.

The board has fashioned two means of meeting this problem. One is the board's published "jurisdictional standards," which state in dollar volume of business the categories of cases that the board will take. For example, the standard for "retail concerns" is $500,000 gross volume of sales per year. The national board will take cases involving companies which have that much annual business. Cases involving retail companies with less business go to the state courts or whatever agency the state has established to handle labor relations matters. There are 11 of these jurisdictional standards.

Branch of the government and duly approved by the Senate, is on a parity with, if not superior to, the Constitution. But in any event, as the law presently stands, the laws passed by the Congress are subservient to such treaties as well as the Constitution, so you can imagine how far down this puts the laws of the several states.

But, in addition to its published standards, the board has provided regular procedures for parties to cases before state courts or agencies to get an official advisory opinion on close cases. State courts and agencies also may get such opinions from the board in Washington.

Another important NLRB jurisdictional standard is that for non-retail concerns. The board takes jurisdiction in cases involving one of these concerns if it buys or sells, directly or indirectly, goods or services outside its home state to the value of $50,000 a year. This standard applies to manufacturing companies and wholesalers.

The retail standard of $500,000 annual gross business also applies for transient hotels and motels is to taxicabs, and the standard for transient hotels and motels is the same amount. In addition, there are separate standards for truck and bus lines, public utilities, newspapers and communication systems such as television and telephone, office buildings and national defense industries. Associations of employers are treated as a single employer in computing their business volume for jurisdiction purposes. Employers who refuse to supply data for computing jurisdiction are taken without regard to the dollar standards if their company is involved in interstate commerce to any substantial degree.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The biggest change in federal labor law made by the new Taft-Hartley amendments probably is the limitation put on picketing or threats of picketing by a union seeking to organize employees or to force bargaining recognition by an employer. This provision grew out of the administration's efforts to curb "blackmail" picketing. Its general thrust is to halt picketing or threats of picketing by unions which do not represent a majority of the employees.

Unfortunately, this also is one of the most intricate provisions of the new law. It not only forbids such organizational or recognition picketing, but it also provides a special, high-speed procedure for representation elections in such cases. In addition, it includes a safeguard against the provision being used to protect a "sweetheart" union, which an employer has helped organize in order to prevent genuine union bargaining for employees.

Furthermore, it provides a special exception for "informational" picketing or publicity which truthfully informs the public that an employer does not employ union members or does not have a contract with a union. This exception only applies, however, if the picketing does not stop deliveries or pickups. These various provisions are all wrapped up in one section of the law.

The curb on this type of picketing, however, does not apply to a union which has a current certificate from the National Labor Relations Board, designating it as the bargaining agent of the employees involved. It applies only to unions not certified by NLRB.

The new provision deals with three specific situations. But the key one undoubtedly is that forbidding "such picketing . . . without a petition (for a representation election) . . . being filed within a reasonable period of time not to exceed 30 days" from the start of picketing. However, if an election request is filed within the reasonable period, the law directs the board to hold an election "forthwith" — without having to follow usual procedures. These elections will be held without a preliminary hearing unless substantial questions of the voting unit or other important matters make a hearing essential.

The expedited elections, however, will not be held until the employer or some other interested party has filed a written charge of illegal picketing or threats of picketing. Even then, we can proceed only if our investigation confirms that the picketing involved or threatened is for the purpose of forcing an employer to bargain with an uncertified union or to compel employees to join the union.

In addition to the usual NLRB proceeding in cases of this type of illegal picketing, the new law also requires us to seek a federal court injunction to halt the picketing until the board can complete its action on the case. This injunction procedure, however, is not available if a charge of illegal assistance to another union

CHARGED AN ABORTIONIST
HOUSTON (UPI)—William Marvin Hall, 33, a former hospital laboratory technician, faced charges of criminal abortion Saturday. Police said Hall signed a statement admitting he had performed between 80 and 100 abortions in recent months charging from $50 to $250. His activities were uncovered when police arrested a woman for embezzling $150 from a Houston store. She said she needed the money to pay Hall.

Detector Of Cancer Claimed

LONDON (UPI)—Radio Moscow Sunday reported the invention of a device which it claimed enables detection of cancer in its early stages.

The English-language broadcast reported here gave no details of the device.

The inventor has explained that the apparatus is based on the fact that supersonic waves are reflected differently by diseased and healthy tissues, Moscow said.

Using such supersonic waves, it is said, "tumors can be detected before they are capable of being detected by X-rays and it can be determined whether they are malignant or not."

A New York spokesman for the American Cancer Society said that experimentation was under way in the United States on detection of cancer with ultrasonic waves. Several devices using the sonic principle have been developed with varying degrees of success, he said.

Contract Marketing Practice Studied By Farm Bureau

By BERNARD BRENNER
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The American Farm Bureau Federation is quietly completing plans to set up a new organization designed to give farmers a stronger hand in bargaining for the prices of their crops.

The farm group's new marketing and bargaining subsidiary will start small. It is expected to begin operations next year with a one-man staff concentrating on service to local and area-wide farmer cooperatives which sell fruits and vegetables to processors.

But this relatively small start does not disguise the fact that the nation's biggest farmer organization is stepping into an area of growing importance in the fast-changing farm and food industry.

The Farm Bureau subsidiary, not yet formally named, will be working with farmers who contract the sale of their crops without going through local or central open markets. In many cases, contracts are signed before the crops involved are even planted.

Contract marketing has been widely used in the past by farmers producing crops for canning, sugar beets, and several other commodities. Farm Bureau officials now see signs that the system will spread to other major crops that have, until now, been sold mostly in bulk through open markets.

Farm Bureau spokesmen said that after their new subsidiary gets its program of aid to local bargaining groups underway in the fruit and vegetable field, the next step is likely to be expansion into poultry marketing. After that, they said, may come the same type of activity in marketing hogs, cattle, and other livestock.

The farm group said its bargaining subsidiary would not do any nationwide-bargaining of its own. It is not going to be a device for getting a monopoly of any food or for fixing prices. Farm Bureau officials emphasized.

The main job of the new organization, these officials said, will be to strengthen the hand of local and area farmer bargaining groups by giving them as much information as the buyers have on the other side of the bargaining table.

The local groups would be fed reports on supply and demand conditions and contract prices for their crop in other areas. The new national group would also analyze proposed contract terms in advance and might give legal and other aid in setting up new farm-

Talking Or Silent Flying? Airlines Ask

By ROBERT J. SERLING
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI)—How do you like your airline captain—talkative and informative or strong but silent?

This is one of the major problems faced by airlines and their flight crews. Namely, how much talking should captains do over cabin public address systems?

Capital Airlines recently got a letter from an irate woman passenger who inquired indignantly: "Now why couldn't the captain or co-pilot break the monotony and give a little information from time to time, pointing out some of the landmarks and highlights?"

Actually, pilots just about write their own tickets on public speaking. Some captains love to "get on the horn" and chat with passengers. Others consider the little PA mike somewhat like Thunderstorm and collisions—something to be avoided at all costs.

"We have guys who admittedly are hams and we have guys who would rather lose two engines than use a PA mike," a spokesman for the Airline Pilots Association (ALPA) said.

Pilots sometimes go to great lengths to entertain the customers. Capt. Ed Tappe of Capital, who used to be a stenographer, jots down news items from his car radio while his wife drives him to the airport. After reaching cruising altitude, he relays them to the passengers on the PA.

A National Airlines pilot with a flair for electronics hooked his radio to the PA in such a way that passengers can hear take off and landing instructions from airport control towers.

One captain got in some hot water because of a PA incident. He was flying a new type airliner on a trip when off to one side, at a safe distance, he saw a plane from a competing PA. Quickly, he flicked on the PA.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he intoned pleasantly. "This is your captain. Off to our right I want you to notice that plane. It is 40 miles an hour slower than the one we're traveling on, and not nearly as comfortable or as vibration-free. I just wanted to point out these facts to show you the superb equipment on which you're riding."

Unfortunately for the pilot, one of the passengers was a vice president of the airline he had just disparaged. When he landed, the official protested and the captain was reprimanded—publicly. Privately, there is reason to believe, his airline wasn't unhappy at all.

There were 50 passengers who owed their lives to a captain who liked to show them various landmarks. One clear, bright day he deviated slightly from course to show his customers an abandoned desert town. Enroute, he er bargaining groups.

If producers of any one commodity want to coordinate the work of bargaining groups in scattered growing areas, the new Farm Bureau subsidiary could serve as a clearing house, officials said.

Teacher Reports Great Strides Teaching 1st Graders Reading

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Every normal child can be taught to read easily and accurately.

Even if a child scores well below average on I. Q. and "reading readiness" tests, he can be taught to read in the first grade.

These are radical promises. They directly contradict modern educational theory, and they might be shrugged off by the teaching profession if they came from an outsider.

But they deserve a hearing when they come from an experienced teacher—one who can back them up with 12 years of strikingly successful results in public schools of New Castle, Pa.

The teacher is Glenn McCracken. He has written a book entitled "The Right to Learn" (Regnery, Chicago, $4.50) which should be read by every teacher and school administrator—and every parent—who is disturbed by the large number of poor readers who are now floundering their way pathetically through American schools.

This book will inevitably be compared to Rudolf Flesch's "Why Johnny Can't Read," which touched off a national flap four years ago. But there is a tremendous difference. Flesch attacked educators in a way that many of them regarded as vicious. McCracken's book is addressed to educators; it is essentially an appeal to his own profession to try a new system of teaching reading that has worked incredibly well in New Castle.

Like Flesch, McCracken believes that our present reading troubles can be traced back to public schools of New Castle, Pa. the 1930's, when schools abandoned phonics as old-fashioned and went overboard for the whole word or "look-say" method of teaching reading.

But unlike Flesch he does not suggest that the problem can be solved simply by a return to phonics.

New Castle schools supplement basic phonics instruction with a visual reading method that is based on the use of film strips. The details of the method are described in McCracken's book.

It is sufficient here to note that the results are rather awesome. Throughout the 12 years in which this system has been used, New Castle children have consistently scored far above national norms on reading achievement tests. It is not uncommon for an average child (I. Q. 100) to be reading at the third grade level before he finishes the first grade. Superior students do even better.

The most encouraging aspect of the New Castle method, however, is that it seems to work miracles even with those children whose "mental age" as measured by I. Q. and Reading Readiness tests is well below six. In most of the nation's schools today, these children are relegated to "slow learner groups" where they play games and study pictures until they are presumed old enough to begin learning to read—perhaps in the second or third grade. In New Castle, they learn to read in the first grade.

Taxes By The Minute

It was just 48 years ago this October that the federal government put the income tax amendment into effect. That year, it collected a total of about $35 million through this particular device.

That same year, just to keep the record straight, we should report that the TOTAL of all federal taxes came to $662 million, and the $35 million raised by the income tax was a pretty small piece of the total.

But things have certainly changed since then. The estimated federal income tax collections for this year are supposed to go to $8.4 billion.

There can be no question as to the dire consequences this nation is experiencing as a result of the income tax. Yet, and this is worth thinking about, when our Constitution was written, the founders knew the danger of an income tax and specified that no per capita tax of this type could ever be collected by the federal government.

This prohibition served to inhibit big taxers and spenders in the central government for a long time. During the Civil War, Abraham Lincoln was the first president to sidestep the Constitutional restraints, not only respecting the income tax but other departments as well. He put an income tax into effect and collected on it, too, until the Supreme Court finally got around to reviewing the issue. Then the high tribunal declared Mr. Lincoln's income tax unconstitutional.

Efforts were made in the '80's to make more alert, more willing to defend themselves, more suspicious of intrusion. Domesticated rats, on the contrary, appear to become just the reverse in all cases.

Dr. Richter points out: "In the wild state the rats are constantly subjected to attack not only from other rats but from a variety of enemies—dogs, cats, owls, snakes, and man; it is the strongest, fiercest, and most active and resourceful ones that survive, the rats most fitted for that type of environment."

Having made these observations respecting rats, the researcher now turns to man with these observations: "Progressively with the great increase in the resources of energy, more and more production was provided for the individual citizen—first from small communities, and finally from the central government—until now has been stated at the outset the necessity of life are assured just as fully as for the domesticated rat."

"The survival of the less strong, less vigorous individuals was aided at first by legislation, then by the introduction of all kinds of hygienic practices, and more recently by the widespread use of antibiotics, drugs and other compounds, and by the development of all kinds of devices such as air conditioning, easy means of transportation—all calculated to reduce stress to a minimum."

Dr. Richter is peculiarly fitted to undertake at least one part of the study, the dealing with rats. He points out that more is known about the Norway rat than about any other animal with the possible exception of man. It seems that Norway rats have been the objects of both clinical study and clinical experimentation since about 1850.

In that period, Norway rats have been made available to laboratories both in their wild and native states and after having been domesticated and even after having been bred in captivity. The contrast between the wild Norway rat and the domestic Norway rat is quite startling. Examples:

1. Wild rats are similar coloring. 2. Wild rats are larger than domestic rats of the same species. 3. The adrenals, the liver, heart, preputials and brain grow smaller in the domestic rat. 4. However, the domestic rat has enlarged thymus, pituitary, thyroid and pancreas and is more active sexually.

Additionally, wild rats appear to be more alert, more willing to defend themselves, more suspicious of intrusion. Domesticated rats, on the contrary, appear to become just the reverse in all cases.

Dr. Richter points out: "In the wild state the rats are constantly subjected to attack not only from other rats but from a variety of enemies—dogs, cats, owls, snakes, and man; it is the strongest, fiercest, and most active and resourceful ones that survive, the rats most fitted for that type of environment."

Having made these observations respecting rats, the researcher now turns to man with these observations: "Progressively with the great increase in the resources of energy, more and more production was provided for the individual citizen—first from small communities, and finally from the central government—until now has been stated at the outset the necessity of life are assured just as fully as for the domesticated rat."

"The survival of the less strong, less vigorous individuals was aided at first by legislation, then by the introduction of all kinds of hygienic practices, and more recently by the widespread use of antibiotics, drugs and other compounds, and by the development of all kinds of devices such as air conditioning, easy means of transportation—all calculated to reduce stress to a minimum."

Dr. Richter is peculiarly fitted to undertake at least one part of the study, the dealing with rats. He points out that more is known about the Norway rat than about any other animal with the possible exception of man. It seems that Norway rats have been the objects of both clinical study and clinical experimentation since about 1850.

In that period, Norway rats have been made available to laboratories both in their wild and native states and after having been domesticated and even after having been bred in captivity. The contrast between the wild Norway rat and the domestic Norway rat is quite startling. Examples:

Efforts were made in the '80's to make more alert, more willing to defend themselves, more suspicious of intrusion. Domesticated rats, on the contrary, appear to become just the reverse in all cases.

"How Would You Settle The Steel Strike?"

The American Economic Foundation issued a broadside under the above heading.

Before I go into how they suggest the steel strike should be settled, I want to briefly state how I think the steel strike, and all other strikes, should be settled.

The first thing that should be done would be for Congress to repeal the Clay - Amendment to the Sherman Anti - Trust Law that exempts labor unions and farmers from the law that makes it a crime to combine and set prices and boycott others. If it is a crime for the employers or any other group to combine to injure others, it is a crime for workers and farmers.

Then I would repeal the Norris-LaGuardia Law, the Minimum Wage Law, the Wagner Law, and all laws that interfered with a free and unhampered market for the products of labor. That would mean that all people, not just some people, would have a right to help establish values. And I cannot believe that we can have any true value or any true peace when any individual is impeded or interfered with by any group in having the right to produce anything that anybody else has a right to produce and sell to the world's highest bidder and a right to buy from the world's lowest seller.

Now, here is the way the American Economic Foundation goes at the subject:

"The key issue of the steel strike is simple - who should get how much for doing what in the production of steel?"

"Everybody who can read can understand the argument when it is simply presented, and can form his opinion as to how it should be settled."

"Moreover, everybody has a right to an opinion in this strike because everybody is affected by it."

"But the simple truth needed to form an opinion has, thus far, not been publicly presented."

"Here it is:

"The incorrect assumption that has confused collective bargaining in the steel strike (and many others) is that wages should go up just as fast as production-per-hour goes up."

"This theory has been accepted in the United States by most industries ever since World War II."

"Obviously, as long as this theory prevails the consuming public will never again have the advantage of the lower prices that used to follow improved hourly productivity."

"This error is based on the faulty conclusion that the human energy of the worker is responsible for the increased production."

"As a matter of fact, less than 5 per cent of the energy used in steel production is supplied by the worker - the remaining 95 per cent comes from the tools supplied for the worker's use."

"To say that the steel workers supply the energy that makes steel is like saying that the locomotive engineer supplies the energy that hauls the train."

"So, in steel, as in all manufacturing, credit for the production belongs to two groups of people: those who supply the tools and those who use them."

"A 'set of tools' for a steel worker, that is, the production facilities per employee, amounts to $20,000."

"In 1958 the reward to the stockholder for supplying this $20,000 set of tools was about $90, made up of about $600 in cash dividends plus the future benefit of about $300 of profit reinvested in the business."

"Last year the reward per employee for using this $20,000 set of tools was $6,456, made up of $-846 in cash plus $610 in future benefits."

"The hard core of the argument is that the negotiators for the steel workers want increases which would require that the companies take away part of the payment for supplying the tools and add it to the payment for using them."

"The companies have offered increases providing that the union will agree to certain changes in work practices that would lower the production cost of steel."

"Both sides claim to be firmly opposed to providing higher wages through higher selling prices."

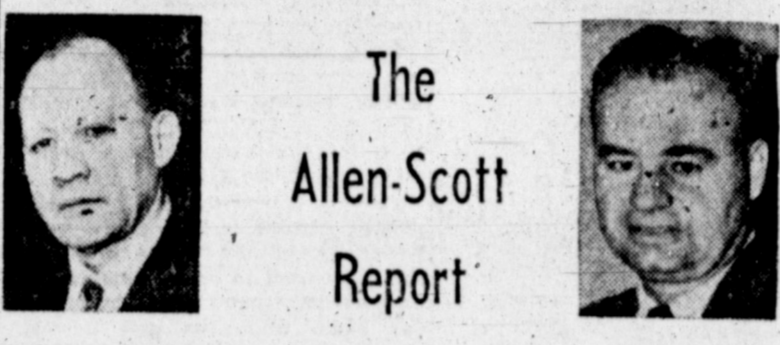

"There you have the heart of the issue - the facts on which your opinion should be based."

"Both sides have talked themselves out, and it is now just an old fashioned tug-of-war."

All of the above by the American Economic Foundation is unnecessary talk if we granted the American principle that all men are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights and not just some men. If we complied with the Commandment "Thou shalt not injure thy neighbor" then there would be no strikes and no unemployment, except seasonal, and our standard of living would be very, very much higher than it is at present.

The idea that there can be too much profit under a free market is a fantasy, because the more profit there is the more it will have to be distributed, and if it is put into tools, the more the owners of the tools will have to compete with other owners of tools to employ labor. This will raise the real wages of the workers, and at the same time the employers of tools will have to compete with other producers in order to sell their products. This will lower prices and increase real wages for everybody.

KHRUSHCHEV, TITO SECRETLY MET, REPORTED ENDING 2-YEAR FEUD

WASHINGTON - Premier Khrushchev and Marshal Tito are in the process of ending their feuding and getting together again.

The two Communist rulers already have had one secret get-together on that, and Tito is liberating an invitation to make an official visit to Moscow, possibly in December.

The State Department has authoritative information on this significant, backstage development from Belgrade, Russia and Poland.

According to these diplomatic and intelligence sources, the secret meeting between Khrushchev and Tito took place on the Yugoslav-Rumanian border during the Kremlin boss's so-called vacation in the latter country following his trips to the U.S. and Peiping.

At this conference, Khrushchev reportedly told Tito about his talks with President Eisenhower and the Red Chinese leaders.

Khrushchev is credited with initiating the harmony overtures to Tito.

They split bitterly in 1957 after cordial relations had been restored following the death of Stalin. But these ties were again angrily frayed when the Kremlin abruptly cancelled a promised $125 million credit urgently needed by Yugoslavia for its sagging economy.

Subsequently, this crucial economic aid was largely provided by the U.S., Britain and France.

Now Khrushchev is again wooing Tito as part of his overall plan to abate the cold war on both sides of the Iron Curtain. From inside indications, this effort is making headway with Tito.

Further light will be thrown on that if the Yugoslav ruler goes to Moscow, U.S. authorities, on the basis of their information, think he will do that.

BUMPER CROP - It is also "reliably understood" that in their secret meeting last month, Khrushchev advised Tito to continue seeking credits and other economic aid from the West, chiefly the U.S.

Reason is that Russia is unable to give Yugoslavia much help at present.

In frankly admitting this, Khrushchev is said to have cited three reasons:

1. "The fact that the U.S. is now just an old fashioned tug-of-war."

2. "The fact that the U.S. is now just an old fashioned tug-of-war."

3. "The fact that the U.S. is now just an old fashioned tug-of-war."

Looking Sideways

By WHITNEY BOLTON

NEW YORK - Whenever winter steals upon New York and the smell of the oil burner crisps the air, when women all dress in dark browns, dark blues and blacks and men all look as though they had just come from the funeral of a poor uncle, then I have a little something going for me that is not available to many of the city's other 8,000,000 people.

I find a warm room, sit down in a deep, encompassing chair and immerse myself in the real estate aids of The Hollywood Reporter. There's been nothing like it since Alexander's pausing in his mass-sundered and ordered a silk tent.

Consider "Fountainhead." Private accounts, Yugoslavia is booming - industry and agriculture.

In striking contrast to this doleful account, Yugoslavia is booming - industry and agriculture.

Industrial production there is now the highest in its history, and steadily increasing. Similarly, Yugoslavia has had a record-breaking grain crop that not only amply meets its needs but will permit some exports for the first time since World War II.

In fact, Khrushchev urged Tito to ship grain to his Iron Curtain neighbors so Russia won't have to do that. Last year more than 8,000,000 tons of Soviet grain went to Rumania, Bulgaria, Poland and East Germany.

A comparable amount this year would be very difficult for Russia because its grain crop is estimated at 20 to 30 per cent less than 1958.

Significantly, Moscow has published no official figures on this total.

The usual grain - delivery reports have not been forthcoming. Also, Pravda stated several weeks ago that "unfavorable weather conditions have seriously damaged crops in Kazakhstan, and heavy rains are making harvests extremely difficult in virginland areas."

And Khrushchev himself is quoted in a newspaper in Bratislava, east of Siberia, while enroute from Peiping, as saying: "It is true that this year we will harvest somewhat less grain than last year, because there was drought in some areas and too much rain in others. But I will see to it that there is enough bread for everyone. I promise you that."

Since 1950, the U.S. has given Yugoslavia a total of $900 million in economic aid. Also $800 million in military equipment and supplies. The latter was ended in 1957.

FLASHES - President de Gaulle will definitely visit the U.S. early in 1960 before the Big Four summit conference. That is what Ambassador Herve Alphand is telling diplomatic colleagues. According to him, de Gaulle's trip here is all set except the time.

Turkish Premier Menderes will make an official visit to Greece in the latter part of January. He has accepted an invitation from Premier Karamanlis.

The Doctor Says:

by EDWIN P. JORDAN, M.D.

What can you do about acne or pimples besides wait until you grow older when it will disappear by itself?

Many are the "cures" you are offered, and surely there will be many more magic miracle remedies in the future. I have explained the dangers that lurk in some of them.

I will now tell what can be done now to control this annoyance, with safety to the younger patient until the body regulators are running smoothly.

Here's a list of things a conscientious parent can do to help a co-operative boy or girl control these facial blemishes:

First, assure your child that his pimples have nothing to do with failure to wash or to eat the right foods.

Shift to plain salt if you use the lozged kind. Otherwise, forget the common ban on fats, chocolate, starches, spices, etc.

Provide the youngster with a few bars of an nationally advertised sudsing detergent to replace soap, with freshly laundered towels daily and with a sudsing detergent shampoo.

If you can swing it, get an inexpensive sun lamp which carries the endorsement of the American Medical Association or an institute of some reliable magazine. This is a source of ultraviolet irradiation.

Here is how it should be used: Each morning have your youngster scrub his face with a lather made by soaking the soap substitute in the rough towel. Give special attention to the skin folds and creases.

Each evening, after return from school or work, repeat the scrubbing and then expose the face for a short time to the sun lamp. Regulate the time and distance so that the face is tanned but not burned, flakes but does not peel.

At bedtime apply hot towels to the face until it is flushed. With scrubbed fingernails or a pimple extractor gently push out the secretions from whiteheads and blackheads. Repeat the facial wash before retiring.

Vacationer Will Find Home Is Unchanged

One of the very nicest things about America is that no matter how long a traveler is away, he can count on its being unchanged on his return.

He need make no adjustments. No resetting of his sights is required. Half an hour after he is back he discovers that he fits his country, and it fits him, as snugly as a sword and scabbard.

When he left the cost of living was rising. He returns to find it doing the same thing. This gives him a warm, comfortable feeling and relieves any worry he might have had about prices being slashed behind his back while he was away.

I have been back only a matter of hours, after six months in Europe, and it's hard to believe that I have been away.

The same people are shooting for the presidency. Not a new face has been added. Kennedy, Symington and Humphrey are as eager as ever, and Adlai is just as shy and retiring. On the Republican side Nixon still has the oars but Rocky continues to rock the boat.

A quick glance through the magazines reveals that Bob Hope still refuses to carry more than $50 in cash in his pocket, that the same serene couple is having the time of their lives on that $500 monthly retirement plan, that it is still possible to make a fortune by completing a sentence beginning "I like Wool Soap because..." and that almost every item offered for sale has a secret, magic ingredient.

There is nothing like a twist of the knob on the TV set to give a returned traveler the feeling of belonging.

Matt Dillon is just as broad of beam as ever. Dinah Shore just as precious. Perry Como as filled with tired blood as usual. Ed Sullivan the same jolly fellow. Brod Crawford as handy at throwing up roadblocks as ever and violence just as violent.

It's hard to believe that America is the land of change. During my est ones, have a profile of the newest pet dog with the quaint phrase in Antique Sampler style: "Not on here, Gerald." Cunniff: I'm here to tell you, friend, that Southern California in the Hollywood-Beverly Hills area is SOME-thing.

Here's one of the ads I have sent to the State Department with a citizen's request that they throw it to the cryptographers for decoding. It goes:

"Skid-a-Way. Flor-Cell glass. 3 sides. Have fun, chum, and if you get the answer call me. One place has a 'built-in kitchen,' which may mean that the kitchen is in the doorway old lease to 100 yards from the house. I would think this means the bar has running water in it, complete with faucets. It could mean that the roof over the bar areas leaks and you are a sucker if you think you are going to enjoy it in the rainy season."

Over the weekend, play this one on your zither: "4 Br. 4 bas. Full Ding Rm. DeLuxe LR. 3 FP. Pirm. Pan den. Elect Dr."

Ding room is easy. It's the room in which the host throws a wing-ding when the bills for the month come in. Nice to have a special room for that. Most of us poor mutts have to do it in the living room or bedroom and fill the house with screech. That's what I want for Christmas: a ding room.

On this date in history: In 1784, editor John Peter Zenger of the New York weekly journal was arrested and charged with libel. In 1860, Congress held its first session in the capitol building. In 1869, the Suez Canal was formally opened for world navigation.

In 1881, Samuel Gompers organized the federation of organized trades and labor unions of the U.S. and Canada.

In 1948, the British House of Commons voted to nationalize the steel industry in England. A thought for today: British statesman Winston Churchill said: "There is no finer investment for any community than putting milk in babies."

Builders Have Plan To Get Around Tight Money Block

By EDWARD COWAN
United Press International
WASHINGTON (UPI)—The nation's home builders are preparing to drum up public interest in mortgage financing plan they will make it easier for home buyers to get mortgage loans when money is tight.

Although approval by Congress is not considered likely next year, a House subcommittee on Housing is interested in the home builders' proposal for a central "mortgage bank."

Committee Chairman Representative R. A. Taft (D-Ohio) said in a recent speech that the group's hearings in which "We will obtain all ideas and suggestions. We will search for ways of solving the vast resources of pending funds. We will examine in detail the builders' proposal for a central mortgage bank."

The bill is the national association of home builders, which has drafted the proposal without great success for several years.

Associations officials are not optimistic that Congress will go next year.

This is a major innovation that can come about only after a bill is passed and the thing built up," one official said.

But he may not see this thing next year, but as the housing needs of the 1960s become more immediate and compelling it will come about.

According to the Home Builders Association, the main purpose of the bank would be to supply more loan money when interest rates are high and credit is scarce. They say this would stabilize new construction and provide thousands of extra new dwelling units.

The builders argue that in recent years the Federal Reserve's anti-inflation tight money policy has hit home construction much harder than many other industries. They maintain that sharp swings in availability of mortgage money are the reason for sudden changes in the market for new houses. For example, non-farm housing starts fell from 1,318,900 dwelling units in 1958 to 1,101,400 units in 1959.

Then in 1960, the general easing of credit and lowering of interest rates aimed at reversing the recession boosted starts to 1,200,400 units. The 1959 total is expected to exceed 1,300,000 units; but a drop is forecast for 1960.

This substantial variation in the market for new houses whipsaws the building industry and makes it impossible for builders to plan ahead, the association says. It explains that smaller builders may not be able to handle all the business they could get.

From the public's viewpoint, sharp fluctuations in housing starts may prevent construction of enough houses to shelter adequately the growing number of families, according to the association.

Critics of the proposal for a mortgage bank say the builders are vague on how it would be financed. They contend that the Federal National Mortgage Association performs the sort of job the bank would do, if on a smaller scale. They say this government agency, with the kind of financing arrangements the central mortgage bank would have, finds it difficult to raise money when credit is tight.

PREDICTS "PEACE"
MIAMI (UPI)—Sen. Spessard L. Holland (D-Fla.) Sunday predicted the end of conflict between Democratic National Chairman Paul Butler and Southern Democrats.

"Something has to give and I feel it will be Mr. Butler," Holland said.

Need More Homes To Care For Aged

United Press International
NEW YORK (UPI)—The aged population is increasing at an alarming rate, necessitating positive action by our society to meet its housing needs.

There was a time at the turn of the century when, because of low life expectancy rate, aged, closer family ties, the aged lived little concern.

Times have changed, however. The soaring population and medical science's part in lifting the expectancy rate to over 70, raised the number of people aged 65 to 15 million, with figures expected to reach 17.6 million by 1975.

Although only about 5 per cent of these live outside their own homes, the greatest proportion are in homes for the aged nursing homes.

Book Cites Needs
Realizing the dire present and future need for adequate homes for this growing segment of our society, F. W. Dodge Corp. has published a book to aid towns, cities, states and states to cope with this problem.

The new book, "Planning Homes for the Aged," is the first comprehensive planning guide ever published on the problem of designing and building homes for aged and infirm.

It is longer can responsible groups agree with putting up the so-called "old ladies' home." People are getting more money through social security benefits and industrial pension funds and now can afford to live in accommodations and care formerly the province of the poor. And medical science has produced a more active group of residents who require much more to keep them busy.

The combination of improved health and increased income enables people to live independently much longer than before, resulting in an increase in the average of residents in institutions by about 10 years—to about 50 during the past two decades. Their average age at admission is in the middle seventies.

However, the book notes, the chronic illnesses for which medical science has as yet found no cure are much more prevalent among this age group, necessitating infirmity care in these homes.

All these factors must be considered by those who plan and build homes for the aged, the editors declare.

They add that probably the least tangible and yet most crucial consideration in planning the new buildings is that of making them homes rather than institutions. "Board members or others responsible for a home should plan the kind of life that will be most conducive to the maximum health, happiness and well-being of all residents."

Architects and builders play a big part in the "modern" home for the aged. "Although life in a home for the aged is, at best, a substitute for the kind of life one hopes to have in the intimacy of a family circle, thoughtful planning can make it a very rewarding substitute," the book states.

There is, according to the book, an apparent deepening appreciation on the part of the general public of what "aging" means in terms of personal and public responsibility for the lives of older people, who, through no fault of their own, cannot adequately cope with their own problems.

This appreciation gives rise to hope for the future improvement of facilities for the aged.
