House kills education reform bill

Speaker says resolving the issue will be 'difficult'

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — House members' rejection of a school finance reform bill will make it "very difficult" for the Legislature to resolve the issue before the special session ends, Speaker Gib Lewis said.

The House late Thursday voted 45-101 against a bill by Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice, that would have pumped $511 million more into public schools in 1990-91.

The vote ended nine hours of debate in which more than 50 amendments were offered and the bill's cost was raised $61 million.

"Maybe I was the only one that was optimistic enough in the very beginning to think we could do it in 30 days," said Lewis, D-Fort Worth, who stopped short of declaring the issue dead for the session.

Thirty days is the maximum a special session can last, and Gov. Bill Clements can call an unlimited number of consecutive special sessions.

Lewis said he planned to meet with Clements, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House leaders before the House met again at 10 a.m. Friday. Clements has vowed to veto any education bill that spends more than about $300 million next school year, the amount he said could be spent without raising state taxes.

Republicans and conservative Democrats, who wanted a lower price tag, led the charge against the bill. Some members of the House Mexican American Legislative Caucus also opposed it, saying more funding is needed in 1990-91.

Those differences demonstrate the complexity of trying to address the Texas Supreme Court ruling that the current school finance system is unconstitutional, Lewis said.

The court, which last year found glaring disparities between property-rich and -poor school districts, gave lawmakers until May 1 to change the $13.5 billion-a-year system, which relies on a combination of local property taxes, state aid and some federal funds.

"You have one group that was opposed to the bill because it did not spend enough money. You have one group that was opposed to the bill because, just the opposite, it spent too much. Then you have one group opposed to the bill because of mandates to the districts that were unfunded," Lewis said.

Some supporters acknowledged the bill was imperfect, but urged its passage so that the legislation could go to a conference committee to work out differences with a $1.2 billion measure approved Monday by the Texas Senate.

"I think we're on a collision course with the Supreme Court. I don't feel like playing a game of chicken with them, because I think they're going to win," said Rep. Libby Linebarger, D-Manchaca.

But Rep. Eddie Cavazos, chairman of the House Mexican American Legislative Caucus, said, "We're not going to go up in smoke because the session ends next week."

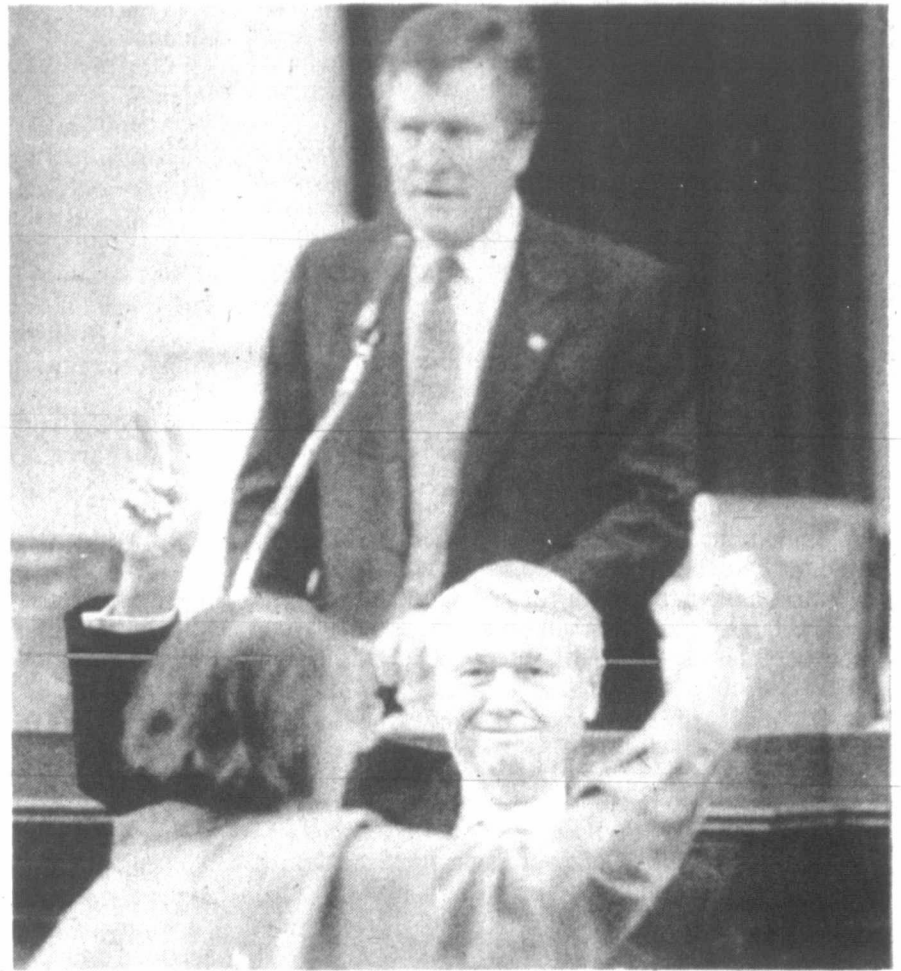

"We don't need to put more money into education," said Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi.

On the other side, Reps. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield; Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont; and Kent Grusendorf, R-Arlington, said the cost of the bill in future years was not entirely known, but could be too high.

"We don't need to fall prey to a billion-dollar tax bill," Stiles said.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock has said he will withhold state monies to schools without a finance plan that meets the court's order, an action that could force the closing of Texas schools.

"I don't think people are going to build monuments to a Legislature and a governor that are so irresponsible that they'll allow our schools to shut down," Ms. Glossbrenner said.

Bivins' public land bill wins support from Parks and Wildlife

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, gained the support from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission on Thursday for his bill to settle the 25-year Canadian River dispute in Hutchinson and Roberts counties.

Commission members unanimously approved the purchase of the 26,500-acre Alibates Ranch, pending passage of Bivins' legislation.

The legislation calls for the Parks and Wildlife Commission to purchase the ranch and in exchange the state will sell about 18,000 acres of land along the Canadian River to adjacent landowners. The money gained from the sell of the land would be applied to the purchase of the ranch.

Canadian River land has been in dispute for about 25 years. The landowners filed a lawsuit in 31st District Court in Roberts County in July against the state of Texas, seeking to settle the dispute. Texas Panhandle Recreationalist Association claims the land should be kept "public domain" and should not be sold or given away.

TPRA board of directors has issued news releases and made statements that the "compromise legislation" is being pushed through because the landowners realize they are going to lose their case in court. The TPRA is not against the purchase of the Alibates Ranch by the Parks and Wildlife Commission. However, the group firmly stands against the exchange of the Canadian River property for the ranch.

Commission members say the sale would open the Alibates Ranch for a public recreation and wildlife reserve, if the legislation is approved.

TPRA representatives have said the fate of the land in dispute should be settled in the court system and should not be bypassed by legislation. In Austin on Thursday, Roger Holland, TPRA president, commented that last year the Legislature OK'd legislation allowing the landowners to sue the state in an effort to settle the dispute.

Tuesday, Bivins passed another hurdle with his bill, getting the approval of the Senate Natural Resources Committee.

A spokesman for Bivins, David Criss, said in a telephone interview Thursday afternoon that Bivins has agreed to amend the bill to allow the riverland in dispute to remain open until the last day of hunting season next year.

"That is one of the concerns we've heard from folks up here. They've told us it might be a while before Parks and Wildlife could get the ranch ready for the public," Criss said. "However, Parks and Wildlife has said the second they get the Alibates Ranch they can open up (for the public)."

Another victory for Bivins also came Thursday, Criss said, when Joe Conch, a former leader in the TPRA, gave his support for Bivins' bill.

Asked about a possible conflict of interest that the TPRA has implied Bivins has with the Alibates Ranch, Criss responded, "The senator is very comfortable with the situation that his family does have an interest in the mineral rights of the Alibates Ranch. But the family has no interest in the surface rights. The legislation has nothing to do with the mineral rights."

The TPRA has maintained that less than three years ago Sen. Bivins' family owned the Alibates Ranch and continues to own mineral rights and does have a conflict of interest.

"He (Bivins) is very comfortable he doesn't have a conflict of interest," Criss said. "If he did, he wouldn't be involved in the matter."

Criss said Bivins has been busy the past few days talking to other senators trying to answer their concerns about the bill. Bivins wants to get the bill passed during the special session, which concludes at midnight Wednesday. The bill can be considered without Gov. Bill Clements adding it to the agenda, but if a senator calls a point of order, it would be killed, Criss said.

Apartment complex residents say 'No' to neighborhood crime

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Tenants at Pampa's Caprock Apartments took a stand against crime in their complex Thursday night when they formed a Neighborhood Watch program with apartment managers.

Cpl. Dave Wilkinson, crime prevention officer, led the group through a crash course on home safety, thwarting car burglars, how to report suspicious activity to police and burglary-proofing a residence.

Betty Hough, apartment manager, said after six recent vehicle burglaries and two apartment break-ins at the Caprock, residents had had enough.

"Also, someone broke into an apartment near mine and turned on all the faucets and flooded that apartment and mine," Hough said of recent problems. "I'm real concerned for our people and making sure they are safe."

Believing their complex is a nice place to live, but one that has been marked as an easy hit by thieves because of its size and the amount of come-and-go traffic, residents of Caprock took information from Wilkinson that is to be spread to residents throughout the apartments.

"The same things that happen in Dallas, Houston and Amarillo happen in Pampa," Wilkinson reminded tenants. "They just happen on a little smaller scale. The whole thing is to generate interest in you neighbors."

Wilkinson said crime prevention or detection takes a break from the mind-your-own-business mentality.

He gave residents permission to be a "nosy neighbor," saying it could save property and put criminals in jail.

"You know what they are doing with the stuff they steal?" Wilkinson asked. "They are sticking it in their arms and up their nose. They sell it for 50 cents on the dollar in Amarillo or Oklahoma City and they buy drugs."

However, he said not all burglars meet the "young ruffian" stereotype.

"If I was a burglar, I'd have nice, close-cut hair, wear a suit and carry a brief case and I'd steal you blind," Wilkinson said. "How many of you would be suspicious of someone dressed like that?"

Among the tips Wilkinson offered were:

- Any valuables left in a car should be stored in the trunk, out of sight.

- Call police anytime you hear breaking glass; it could be a car window being smashed.

- Photograph all valuable jewelry and keep the pictures separate from the jewelry, to be used in returning recovered merchandise.

- Record all serial numbers of guns, appliances and other larger merchandise. Engrave Texas driver's license number on each item. Engravers are available at no charge at the police department.

- Never hide keys outside a residence or leave notes saying you are gone or for how long.

- Lock the door even when taking out the trash or going to the wash room — it only takes a burglar a moment to steal from you.

- Install dead bolt locks with at least one-inch throw.

- Good lighting will always deter a burglar.

- Exterior doors should never be hollow; they are too easy to kick in.

"If you will do this," Wilkinson said, "you will stand a lot better chance."

He said failure to engrave a driver's license or record a serial number on items such as stereos and televisions make it virtually impossible to get them back to owner when recovered.

"If you have nice jewelry, take a picture of it," he also said. "When you tell us it's a big diamond with a Cartier cut and a lot of little diamonds around it, we don't know what that means."

Wilkinson also told Caprock tenants to get to know their neighbors. He said if a person unknown comes to the door, "it is your house, you can be rude to them" in an effort to make sure they have no criminal motive.

He noted that recording license numbers of unfamiliar cars is also not out of line.

"If you see someone driving through slowly, get the license number," he requested. "It might be someone looking for an address. But, it might be someone casing the place. If there is a break-in, you will have the license number that might lead us to the person responsible."

When seeing someone unfamiliar in the apparent process of moving, Wilkinson said watching their manner might reveal criminal behavior.

"If you see them just chinking stuff in a car, call us," he said. "Would you treat your things like that? Neither would I. It probably means they are stealing things."

Local DECA student to represent PHS at national competition in California

A Pampa High School Distributive Education student has been recognized for outstanding ability in the areas of promoting hospitality and tourism and will now compete in national DECA competition.

J.J. Winborne, a senior, was part of an eight-member team from PHS to travel to Galveston recently for statewide competition.

Winborne said he and DECA students Kristi Cotton, Chastity Moody, Dan Velasquez, Brandon Parker, Becky Whitely, Melissa Jones and Monica Jemigan each took a 100-question test and interacted with judges in mock situations reflecting their area of specialty.

Categories besides hospitality and tourism included, advertising and display services, apparel and accessories marketing, finance and credit services, food marketing, general marketing, general merchandise retailing, full-service restaurant management, quick service restaurant management, and vehicles and petroleum marketing.

Winborne placed in the top nine in his category. He will travel to San Jose, Calif., April 25-29, for the national competition.

Winborne and other DECA students credited the assistance of instructor Donna Crow and community members Martha Clark, Brent Stephens, Rutley Chalk, Tom Caldwell, Dave Norton and Kent Crow with being largely responsible for the team's success.

J.J. Winborne displays trophy he won in state DECA competition.

Consumer group claims pork not as healthful as advertised

By DENISE CABRERA Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - In a town where the pork barrel is considered a treasured commodity, one consumer group says producers and advertisers of ham, bacon and sausage are going too far.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest said Thursday that it wants the federal government to halt advertising by the National Pork Producers Council it says is "deceptive and dangerously misleading."

It said it would file a petition today with the Federal Trade Commission challenging various ad claims that pork is low in fat, low in cholesterol and low in calories.

The center said the industry's 3-year-old campaign touting pork as "the other white meat" is misleading because it claims pork "is as nutritious as chicken, turkey and fish."

To that, Barry Pfouts, director of marketing for the council, replied: "We're confident that our advertising is accurate and can be backed up by substantial scientific evidence."

"All we have said all along is that our products ... are nutritionally comparable to other accepted white meats," he added.

Bruce Silverglade, legal director for the science center, said, "The pork industry is trying to dupe consumers into thinking that pork is as healthful as chicken, turkey and fish. However, government data show that almost all cuts of pork are considerably higher in fat, saturated fat and calories."

The amount of cholesterol in a four-ounce serving of cooked pork is virtually the same for similar servings of chicken and turkey, Charles Mitchell, a spokesman for the consumer group, acknowledged.

But Mitchell said the amount and percentage of fat and the number of calories is substantially higher for pork.

He said four ounces of pork, trimmed of all visible fat, averaged 14.8 grams or 13 percent fat, while an identical serving of skinless chicken averages 8.4 grams or 7.4 percent fat. Turkey weighed in at 2.9 grams or 2.6 percent fat per serving, according to Mitchell.

Similar servings of pork, chicken and turkey contain 264 calories, 215 calories and 171 calories, respectively, said Mitchell.

The science center said the ads also violate Agriculture Department requirements that average servings of "low-fat" foods must be 10 percent or less fat to make the claim.

Pfouts, of the pork producers council, said the average three-ounce serving of tenderloin, the best cut of pork, has about the same 140 calories as a similar serving of skinless white-meat chicken.

And Mike Simpson, executive vice president of the National Pork Board, said nutritional assessments of pork are based on 10-year-old data that don't take into account recent research and improvements in breeding.

The consumer group said that in addition to filing the FTC petition, it will ask Congress to pressure the industry to increase its spending on research to reduce fat in pork.

Money for the pork advertising comes primarily from the approximately $25 million collected annually from producers under the 1987 Pork Promotion and Research Act.

The science center contended that 70 percent of the money is spent on advertising and other promotional activities, and just 10 percent is spent on research that could lead to "safe, low-fat and good-tasting products."

Simpson responded that in the early years of the program the council may have spent that much on promotion. But in the 1990 budget of $26 million, promotion takes up 55 percent, research is 19 percent and consumer information is 26 percent, he said.

Reviewer applauds Canadian play

By KAYLA PURSLEY
Lifestyles Editor

CANADIAN—Last night I attended the opening of the Canadian Community Players dinner theatre production of Social Security by Andrew Berman sponsored by the Lions Club. The show is a delightful comedy about a crotchety live-in mother and the dinner and pre-show entertainment alone are worth the price of admission.

Alexander's catered a prime rib dinner complete with salad, twice-baked potatoes, green beans and delicious hard rolls all served on nice china with long stemmed glasses for tea and water. New York cheesecake with optional blueberry topping was served for dessert during the first intermission. Lions Club members along with a bevy of young ladies served as waiters and waitresses for the evening - the kind of service you only hope for in any fine restaurant (and no tipping).

Dinner music was provided by Mary Lynn Schaffer (Canadian's Woman of the Year) and Jeannie Pfannenstiel - dual pianos.

The play opens when a young couple, David and Barbara Kahn (played by city councilman, Micah Lewis, and Georgia King, executive director) are visited by Barbara's sister, Trudy Heyman, and her husband, Martin (Ione Mixon and Dean Loooper). It seems the Heyman's sheltered daughter has run amuck at college and the Heymans are going to go to her to persuade her to come back home.

Barbara's mom, who is described as a very demanding woman, has been living with the Heymans and now they have brought her to Barbara and David to care for. The Kahn's are art dealers on the rise who do a lot of entertaining and being saddled with Mom is not a pleasant prospect.

In ACT II the Kahn's must entertain a very famous "100 year-old Jewish" painter played by Robert Ezzell and are totally shocked when frumpy-dumpy mom appears for the evening properly dressed, without her walker and shamelessly puts the move on the man.

"And you thought I couldn't make conversation," says Mom to a dazed Barbara.

Pat Wagner plays the role of mother. It was my understanding that Wagner was making her acting debut and what a fine choice. Mom has some great lines. The character reminded me of the Estelle Getty character in the TV show Golden Girls.

The set looked great and set construction credits were given to Robert Ezzell and the Lions Club. Members of our own community theatre will appreciate the hard work and nightmares associated with a three-door set.

My dinner companions for the evening were Mr. and Mrs. Ben Ezzell, their two young grandsons and their friend, Chris. Knowing how I scrounge around my families' houses for props and furniture whenever I'm involved with a production, I asked them how much of the set was "theirs." They just laughed and said that the only thing Robert had borrowed for the show was the tuxedo his character wore.

I particularly liked the six-inch platforms used to elevate the sofa and side chair. It not only made it easier for actors to stand and sit, the extra height provided equal opportunity viewing for those sitting "in the back."

Barbara's costumes were appropriately fashionable and Trudy and Martin's costumes were equally tasteless as fit their characters. There is a line in ACT I referring to David's "suit" that confused me. He was only wearing a shirt and tie, no coat, and I wasn't sure if the line was supposed to be sarcasm or if the actor forgot part of his costume. I would have liked for mom's costume in ACT III to be a lot more flashy but on the whole everything worked great, including the borrowed tux.

Lighting was adequate - barely - but I understand and sympathize with having to use "on-off" fluorescent lighting for part of the stage lighting and I know how exciting it will be for the community theatre when they someday have their own complete lighting system.

Georgia King gave an extremely strong performance and the cast worked well together. I suspect that some of the language in the script had been cut to make the show more suitable for a younger crowd and I appreciate that. My compliments to the Canadian Community Players. I look forward to another production.

Performances are scheduled for tonight and Saturday at the Canadian City Hall. As with any catered dinner, reservations are a must. For ticket information call 323-5412 or 323-6213.

Joseph Hazelwood, right, with his arm around his lawyer, Michael Chalos, speaks at a news conference Thursday in Anchorage, Alaska.

Victorious Hazelwood wants to return to sea as captain

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Flushed with a feeling of victory after three acquittals and a conviction on a minor misdemeanor, Exxon Valdez skipper Joseph Hazelwood says he longs to return to the sea as a ship captain.

His lawyer, Michael Chalos, said he will start negotiating with Exxon to regain the skipper's job with the shipping company that hired him out of college and fired him after his tanker grounded a year ago, causing the nation's worst oil spill.

"I'd like to go back to the sea. That's what I do," Hazelwood said Thursday after jurors absolved him of accusations he was reckless and drunk during the disaster that blackened the rocky shoreline of Prince William Sound.

The misdemeanor charge of negligent discharge of oil on which Hazelwood was convicted carries a maximum sentence of 90 days in jail and a $1,000 fine, far less than the 7 1/4 years and $61,000 fine he could have faced if found guilty on all four charges.

Superior Court Judge Karl Johnstone set sentencing for today.

A grand jury indicted him last year on a felony, criminal mischief, and two other misdemeanors, reckless endangerment and operating a vessel while intoxicated. Jurors took only 10 1/2 hours in deliberations to reject those counts.

"The state just didn't have the evidence," said juror Terrill Smith, a hardware store manager.

Alaska Gov. Steve Cowper told a news conference that Hazelwood's acquittal on the most serious charges shows that someone other than the veteran mariner was responsible for the grounding.

"The result bears out the fact that there are other people responsible for this, other than Capt. Hazelwood," said Cowper, who learned of the verdict Thursday while touring Prince William Sound by helicopter.

Alaska Attorney General Douglas Baily disputed suggestions that the state had tried to make Hazelwood a scapegoat.

"It was always my view that the captain of that vessel is ultimately responsible," he said.

The normally taciturn Hazelwood smiled broadly for the first time in the two-month trial when the verdicts were announced two days short of the oil spill's first anniversary.

"I'm not used to being in the limelight," Hazelwood told reporters. "I was a pretty anonymous character until a year ago."

The skipper's future also is clouded by more than 100 civil lawsuits filed by assorted victims of the nation's worst environmental disaster.

Jim Morakis, an Exxon spokesman in New York, said the company, which has fired Hazelwood, was "pleased that the ordeal of the trial is over for Capt. Hazelwood and his family."

"The verdict would seem to confirm the view that the grounding of the Exxon Valdez was an accident," Morakis said. "In light of pending litigation any other comment would be inappropriate."

Another lawyer for Hazelwood, Dick Madson, said even the misdemeanor was wrongly filed and would be appealed.

The heart of the case against Hazelwood was alcohol, and jurors said the state failed to prove he was drunk.

Juror Jeff Sage, a grocery store manager, said the panel didn't buy a prosecution expert's backward calculations which tried proving intoxication without physical evidence. A blood test of the skipper was taken too late to be conclusive.

Assistant District Attorney Brent Cole conceded his prosecution would have been easier if a timely blood test was taken. He said he hoped the case had discouraged tanker captains from drinking before they sail.

The Exxon Valdez, a 987-foot tanker, ran aground and spilled almost 11 million gallons of oil into Prince William Sound on March 24, 1989. It killed countless birds, fish and wildlife in the scenic area, and Exxon came under bitter criticism for failing to respond quickly with a clean up effort.

Sage said jurors concluded that Hazelwood was negligent to leave the bridge of his ship during an icy transit. But he also said they felt that "all his orders were prudent. He was in command."

Officials: oil spill response time has not improved in past year

By DIANE DUSTON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Response to an oil spill as big as the one that polluted Prince William Sound, Alaska, a year ago wouldn't be much better today than it was then, officials say.

"We don't believe recovery capability is where it should be," Larry Dietrick of the Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation told a congressional hearing Thursday.

C.M. Harrison, executive vice president of Exxon Corp., said his company is concentrating on spill prevention, but also has upgraded response procedures.

However, he said he couldn't guarantee that an 11-million-gallon spill, like that from the tanker Exxon Valdez on March 24, 1990, would be fully recovered or kept off the shore.

Walter Parker, chairman of the Alaska Oil Spill Commission, said protection against spill damage was better in 1977 than it is now.

The three men and Coast Guard Rear Adm. Joel Sipes appeared before the House Interior subcommittee on water, power and offshore energy resources, which is investigating whether any improvements have been made since the spill.

Dietrick said Alyeska Pipeline

Service Co., the company responsible for managing spills in Prince William Sound, says it can do a complete clean-up on a 2,000 barrel spill within 48 hours.

"The Department of Conservation is asking for a 48-hour cleanup capability for a much larger minimum spill of at least 250,000 barrels," the size of the Exxon Valdez disaster, said Dietrick. He said the Alaska legislature is considering a bill requiring a plan for handling very large spills.

More than half of the oil lost by the Exxon Valdez still soils the waters and shores of the once-pristine sound, according to estimates by Dietrick's department.

Harrison said Exxon, which has already spent $2 billion trying to restore the area, would resume clean-up in early May. He could not estimate the final cost.

The company official said workers would be picking up tarballs and oil debris, diminishing oil sheens and using a process called bioremediation through which fertilizer is applied to the shore to enhance growth of naturally occurring organisms that speed the breakdown of the oil.

Harrison said other more intrusive techniques, such as spot hot-water washing and tilling, may be used in some places. He said the methods will require fewer workers than last year and were recommended by scientists.

Sipes said the Coast Guard has made a national effort to incorporate lessons learned from the Exxon Valdez spill.

"The Coast Guard is installing better equipment, instituting new procedures and increasing research and development in marine environmental protection," he said.

The controversy over whether double hulls and double bottoms on oil tankers would be better protection against spills surfaced during the hearing.

"Exxon spent $30 million to repair the hull of the Exxon Valdez but did not include a double hull," Rep. James McDermott, D-Wash., noted.

Harrison said the tanker was not designed originally for a double hull and "did not have the structural integrity to support a double hull design."

A House-Senate conference committee is trying to find a compromise between two bills on oil spill liability that have been passed and are wrestling with the double hull-double bottom issue.

The House version would require double hulls and double bottoms. The Senate says other procedures of equal safety value could be used.

Even the IRS doesn't have all the answers

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service blames a budget squeeze for its inability to answer two of every three taxpayer telephone calls for help.

But if you can get through to the agency, you have a better chance than last year of getting the correct answer to a tax question. The General Accounting Office says IRS employees give the right answer 78 percent of the time, up from 66 percent last year.

The bad news is that only 34 percent of callers are getting through to the IRS, down sharply from 61 percent in 1989, Jennie S. Stathis of the congressional investigative agency told the House Ways and Means oversight subcommittee Thursday.

"It bothers the hell out of me that taxpayer service has declined that way," IRS Commissioner Fred T. Goldberg testified. He said the inability to take phone calls resulted from a decision by the agency to cut its service — rather than the quality — because of a shortfall in its 1990 budget.

He said the IRS is also getting calls from 7 percent more taxpayers than had been expected.

Goldberg said the IRS budget that President Bush proposed for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1 is reasonable. He cautioned that any reductions would harm efforts to collect $80 billion of delinquent accounts, force more cuts in taxpayer services and lead to further deterioration of a computer system that already has outlived its usefulness.

"The only hope we have of meeting legitimate taxpayer expectations in dealing with their government is to modernize our systems," Goldberg said.

The administration has proposed a $6.1 billion budget for the IRS, up 12 percent from the 1990 fiscal year.

But Goldberg said the agency is still suffering from previous tight budgets. "I am afraid that the tax system will continue to pay the price of the 1989-1990 hiring freeze and failure to provide adequate training and support for our employees for years to come," he said.

Ms. Stathis gave this rundown on how the IRS is doing this filing season:

- The GAO telephoned 20 tax questions to 29 IRS offices and scored 1,261 responses; 78 percent were correct.

- Through March 17, taxpayers had called the IRS 31.5 million times and the IRS had picked up the phone 10.7 million times. During a similar period last year, there were far fewer calls — 19.3 million — but 11.8 million of them were answered.

- Processing of returns is 12.5 percent ahead of last year's pace; returns received are up 3.5 percent; the number of refunds is up 16.7 percent.

- The percentage of returns with taxpayer errors or IRS processing mistakes is dropping, from 16 percent last year to 14 percent this year.

•Ordering forms and publications by phone can be as troublesome as calling with a tax question. But once a caller connects, the IRS is prompt in mailing requested items within the promised 14 days. The agency is not as reliable for items ordered by letter.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political graft from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Could this be a case of obvious overkill?

The tussle over the current Clean Air Act, which should be debated on the Senate floor this week, illustrates that most environmental battles waged in the political arena have little or no relationship to what's happening in the real environment. In the political arena, environmental legislation is most often equated with toughness, strictness, and expensiveness — even when tough, strict, and costly regulations will have little beneficial impact on the environment, or may damage it.

The Clean Air Act is a prime example. The present version represents a compromise between Senate Democrats and the White House, and already politically-minded environmentalists are calling it a "sell-out." It's more likely a boondoggle that will provide full employment for bureaucrats and lawyers and do little or nothing for air quality.

First, some perspective. The Environmental Protection Agency reports that emissions of sulphur dioxide — which may be implicated in producing acid rain — fell 35 percent between 1978 and 1987. Airborne lead declined 88 percent during that period; carbon monoxide 32 percent; dust, soot, and particulate matter, 21 percent. Ground-level ozone, the main constituent of photochemical smog, declined 16 percent.

The argument that this is simply not enough is based on the fact that 89 million Americans, including most Southern Californians, live in "non-attainment areas" — cities where air quality doesn't meet national ozone standards.

What does it take to be a non-attainer? Periods of at least one hour on as few as four days over a three-year period when the level of "volatile organic compounds" (VOCs) exceeds 0.12 parts per million. Between 1986 and 1988, the Los Angeles area had episodes when the VOC level was as high as 0.34 ppm, or 183 percent above the standard.

Two key questions should be asked, however. How often do these high levels occur, and what would it take to get them down? It turns out that the Los Angeles basin is in compliance — below 0.12 ppm — during 97.33 percent of the hours monitored, and above 0.12 ppm 2.67 percent of the time. It costs U.S. industry about $17 billion per year to comply with the regulations that may not even be the real reason we've achieved this.

EPA spokesmen have said that because of our unique meteorological conditions the Los Angeles basin could not comply fully if half the cars were taken off the road. The new bill would tighten tailpipe standards further and mandate at least a million methanol cars a year by 1997. But such authorities as the World Resources Institute and the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment have questions about safety and whether methanol would really mean cleaner air.

The administration estimated that its version (a "totally inadequate" package) would cost about $19 billion more per year. The Business Roundtable did a more detailed estimate, and came up with $54 billion per year for the White House version and $104 billion per year for the original Senate version.

Is this overkill?

Transportation report's a dud

Sam Skinner, the secretary of transportation, is an exceptional man, but his long-awaited statement of national transportation policy is a bore. The statement reads as if it were written by a committee of file clerks wearing mittens.

This is a disappointment, for a revitalized system of transportation — of every kind of transportation — ranks with environment as the nation's top concern. An estimated 150,000 highway bridges are quite literally falling apart. On congested freeways, peak-hour traffic barely crawls. At 21 major airports, flight delays add up to $5 billion in lost productivity.

Given these disturbing conditions, observers had hoped that Skinner would produce a report with stunning impact. We had hoped for specifics, for a rousing cry to Wake Up, America! The statement is a feather bed. One sinks into a soporific sea of word...words...words.

Skinner's people are incapable of writing concise and vigorous English. They write instead of Federalese. Example:

"As part of the continuing process, the department will put in place formal and lasting mechanisms to ensure that the strategic planning perspective is integrated into the legislative, budgetary and regulatory planning and decision making within each modal administration at DOT, and also across the individual modes, with oversight and guidance from the office of the secretary."

This is typical of the bold initiatives proposed for aviation: "It is federal transportation policy to undertake a comprehensive program of human factors research and apply the results to improving technology, training and procedures, with special attention to the pilot-aircraft interface."

Drowsing through the 126 pages of the policy statement, one discerns that the role of the federal government is chiefly to "work with." The department will work with state and local governments; it will work with industry; it will work with carriers, shippers and community groups. All of this would seem to be elementary, but in this book the most elementary ideas require endless repetition.

When the department is not working with some interest or agency, it will be implementing, developing, promoting and coordinating. It will stimulate, participate and facilitate. It will study. It will identify. It will review. It will prioritize, utilize and formalize. It will focus on resources. The government will "continue efforts to keep unsafe vehicles off the road." Bravo! It will encourage greater efforts against drunk drivers. Bravissimo! This is heady stuff.

Skinner is big on fostering. His department will foster development of more fuel-efficient vehicles. It also will foster academic research. It will foster "an environment in which state and local governments and the private sector give greater priority to transportation facilities and improvements that close critical gaps in the national network."

The syntactical structure of Federalese does not permit plain speech. "Given the pressing need for investment in aviation capacity, airports should be allowed to collect passenger facility charges." The terminology defies easy translation. The only airport "passenger facilities" that come readily to mind are the ladies' and gents' rest rooms, and surely the secretary is not thinking of coin-operated booths as a source of revenue.

No, but the secretary has other ideas: "We also need to give greater attention to the potential for capacity-enhancing pricing techniques." Translation: higher fares on peak-hour flights.

Skinner's idea is that everybody else should pay for what needs to be done. He promises a policy by which federal highway trust will be spent on highways, which is pretty big of him, but he proposes no significant federal initiatives and he conspicuously says nothing about an increased federal tax on gasoline. His thought is that the states and localities should assume a larger share of maintenance and construction of highways. Federal subsidies for railways and mass transit should be curbed. User fees should be widely applied. The secretary is all for toll roads.

Most of this wordy statement makes sense — obvious sense — but it has no guts and it tells us nothing we did not know before. The White House, we are told, gave Skinner's draft the shad treatment before letting it go publication. All the bones were taken out. What remains is — yawn — useful in its pedestrian way, but as a call for dynamic action this report is a dud.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, March 23, the 82nd day of 1990. There are 283 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: Twenty-five years ago, on March 23, 1965, America's first two-person space flight began as Gemini 3 — nicknamed the Molly Brown — blasted off from Cape Kennedy with astronauts Virgil I. Grissom and John W. Young on board.

On this date: In A.D. 752, Pope Stephen II was elected to succeed Pope Zacharias; however, Stephen died only two days later.

In 1743, George Frideric Handel's oratorio "Messiah" had its London premiere.

In 1775, in a speech to the Virginia Provincial Convention, Patrick Henry made his famous plea for American independence from Britain, saying, "Give me liberty, or give me death!"

In 1806, explorers Lewis and Clark, having reached the Pacific coast, began their journey back east.

Sounds of the future — today

We can now replicate the sound of a Stradivarius violin — almost.

We can now bring forth the sound of a nine-foot concert grand piano from an electronic device that weighs less than 100 pounds — almost.

"Oh," I hear you say, "but I could certainly tell the difference."

May you've not listened to the newest of the synthesizers.

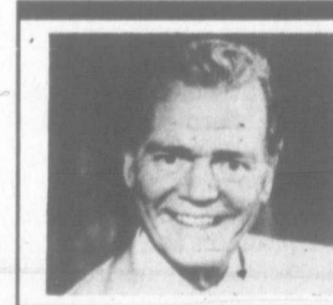

There are many of them. Present top-of-the-line digital electronic pianos are the Borg; Swedish name, Japanese manufacture. And the Easonic by American manufacturer, Bose.

This technology has exploded so rapidly that many professional musicians are yet unaware.

Electrical sound is duplicating acoustical sound so precisely that the piano is already a dinosaur and tomorrow's symphony orchestra may need no more than six musicians.

One prodigiously talented Chicago musician, Howard Levy, is demonstrating the next step in this exciting evolutionary process — is mesmerizing audiences with a combination of acoustical and electronic instruments.

In fact, the "drummer" in one of the many groups with which Levy performs — does not play drums — he plays an electronic instrument — largely of his own invention — which by physical, manual manipulation recreates the entire symphony battery and more!

This is not like the so-called "rhythm master" which has preprogrammed various rhythms and sonic textures; this is an instrument that the musician plays on the spot — moment by moment!

Dr. Amar Bose, our century's acoustical genius, believes electronic instruments will have a greater future if they do not concentrate so strongly on trying to duplicate existing acoustical instruments (which he believes they can never do) but rather focus on the many interesting things which these instruments are capable of doing in their own right.

Even the elusive "attack" and "decay," lacking in earlier synthesizers, is forthcoming from the new instruments.

And attachable to the electronic piano is a unit that allows it to play itself!

Does this portend no future whatever for performing musicians?

There will always be an audience for "live" musicians.

There is a temporal quality in a live performance that excites us. As able as machines may be, technocrats must respect the public's preference for the urgency of the live performance.

Howard Levy, with two associate musicians, synthesizing the sounds of a variety of instruments, can fill a concert hall with music that no symphony orchestra could ever produce.

This will seem a presumptuous statement only to those who have not shared one of his performances.

The present-best electronic piano, because of its adaptability to a condo society, could stimulate a renaissance of live-performer music.

A $50,000 piano for $3,000 answers yet another contemporary need.

A piano a woman can move and a man can carry sounds too good to be true — but it is.

Hold to the truth about the Cold War

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

Some weeks ago in this space I remarked that a rather comical fight had broken out between the liberals and the conservatives over which of them had "won the Cold War." Only in passing did I note a third theory, promoted by Strobe Talbott of Time magazine, to the effect that there had never really been a two-sided Cold War — that it was all a hallucination in the overheated craniums of American right-wingers.

This third theory deserves closer attention, because it will probably end up being the official liberal position on the subject. Any liberal who is sensible enough to concede that the Cold War was a two-sided struggle will sooner or later have to settle for being proud that Harry Truman recognized it early on, and that certain prominent liberals such as Henry Jackson and Hubert Humphrey were staunch battlers for freedom, to their eternal credit. The Talbott version, on the other hand, enables liberal theorists to rewrite history in a way that damages the conservatives while making even dovish liberals smell like roses.

Of course, there has for some years been a "revisionist" theory of the Cold War which blames it entirely on the United States. But this view has hitherto been held only by a handful of leftist professors, of the sort that write for The Nation. Now, as the Cold War ends and the time nears to sum it all up, this extremist view is beginning to move indoors.

One can see how the exegesis is likely to develop. At the end of World War II, Stalin was sitting there peacefully when in 1946 the Republicans suddenly captured control of Congress and initiated their "witch hunt" for communists in government and elsewhere. President Truman responded by intensifying his opposition to the alleged Red menace abroad, and the Cold War was born: not an evenly matched bilateral struggle between the Free World and communist, but a unilateral strategic offensive launched and conducted by the United States.

The Cold War, in turn, provided the excuse for still further witch hunts at home, by McCarthy, McCarran and others, as well as for various right-wing initiatives abroad: support for Chiang Kai-shek on Taiwan, leniency toward South Africa because of its strategic position and vital mineral deposits, and support for Israel against the entire Arab population of the Levant.

Eventually, the whole U.S. economy became geared to a permanent war status. Soviet overtures, such as ending nuclear tests in the atmosphere, were ignored or summarily rejected. The whole world was forced to choose between the United States and the Soviet Union, and most nations (as evidenced by their votes in the United Nations) sided with the Soviet Union. Nevertheless, as far as the United States under successive reactionary presidents was concerned, the Cold War could last forever: an impacted unilateral hostility that consumed untold energy and resources that might otherwise have been devoted to the welfare of mankind.

Just how the left will get down off this horse and explain the end of the Cold War is a little hard to visualize, but don't underestimate their creativity. Depending on how he turns out, Gorbachev can be depicted either as a Soviet hero willing to sacrifice everything for peace, or as an incompetent improviser who regrettably lost his nerve under sustained American pressure, or even as just one more pitiful victim of the North American Molech.

Conservatives, as well as liberals who care about the truth, had better prepare to combat this outrageous distortion of history before the fleas walk off with the army blanket. The Free World's victory in the 45-year Cold War is the proudest and most important achievement of the 20th century, and future generations must never misinterpret or forget it.

Accusations fly over deficit; Mosbacher misses hearing

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Department of Human Services chairman Rob Mosbacher was blasted by state lawmakers for not attending a legislative hearing on his agency's projected $850 million budget shortfall.

Mosbacher, the Republican nominee for lieutenant governor, was on a trip with his children during spring break, DHS Commissioner Ron Lindsey said Thursday.

"All of us must meet our public commitments as well as our personal responsibilities. Certainly spring is a time for all of us to meet family commitments but this is our primary responsibility," said Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo.

Lindsey told the Senate Health and Human Services Committee that if the Legislature doesn't help bridge the shortfall, the agency would have to implement cuts that would leave many needy people unprotected and jeopardize $1 billion in federal funds.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who attended the meeting, said more revenues — not cuts — were needed to prop up DHS, which has projected a budget deficit because of increased demand on services and increased responsibilities mandated by the federal government. Hobby favors a 14-cent increase in the cigarette tax to help bridge the budget gap.

The agency faces a $152 million projected deficit for the current fiscal year that ends Aug. 31 and the remaining $850 million shortfall at the end of the next fiscal year.

Stephanie Thomas, one of many disabled advocates at the hearing, said she was "tired of the Texas Department of Human Services and the state Legislature treating people like throwaways."

Leslie Lanham of the Children's Defense Fund said, "Texas should be investing more, not less on its children." She said Texas ranks 48th in the nation in funding for early prenatal care.

The DHS board on Wednesday approved freezing rate increases proposed earlier this year for a number of contract providers of services, such as pharmacists, nursing homes, day-care centers and hospices.

The rate increases would have helped cover the cost of the federally required increases in the minimum wage as well as other expenses, such as increased minimum staffing requirements at nursing homes.

Lindsey said Gov. Bill Clements' staff has said they would support moving money from the next fiscal year to cover the deficit in the current one.

If that happened, Lindsey said, "I may be in the posture of having to ask the Legislature for a tax increase" next year.

Idaho lawmakers pass stiffest state abortion law in nation

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The Idaho Legislature's approval of the most restrictive state abortion law sets the stage for a possible test of the U.S. Supreme Court's commitment to legalized abortion.

"The people of Idaho have said strongly what millions of Americans believe, that abortion is not an acceptable means of birth control," said National Right to Life Committee legislative director Doug Johnson.

But the American Civil Liberties Union and Planned Parenthood announced they would challenge the measure if it becomes law.

"It's got a wide-ranging impact beyond the understanding of the people who voted for this here," said Jack Van Valkenburgh of the ACLU.

The bill was patterned on a National Right to Life Committee model that has been rejected by other states as too restrictive. But it is the version that abortion foes want for the test of the U.S. Supreme Court's commitment to its 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized abortion.

The law would make abortion illegal except in cases of non-statutory rape reported within seven days, incest if the victim is younger than 18, severe fetal deformity or a threat to the mother's life or physical health.

An abortion would be illegal in the case of statutory rape, or sex with a minor, on grounds that such behavior implies consent on the part of the female, said Democratic Sen. Claire Weatherell, a supporter of the bill. If it is signed by Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus, the measure would take effect July 1. Andrus has declined to announce his intentions on the bill but has reiterated his long-held anti-abortion stand.

Hundreds of telephone calls, messages and letters flooded the governor's office as lobbying by both camps in the abortion debate shifted to Andrus after Thursday's 25-17 state Senate vote approving the ban on abortion as a method of birth control. The legislation cleared the House two weeks ago.

Abortion rights advocates in the Senate said the state was running up a futile legal bill of up to $1 million in passing a measure that would not withstand the high court's scrutiny.

They also labeled the bill a draconian product of an out-of-state organization pushing its own agenda.

"This bill challenges values ingrained in Idaho's tradition — freedom of belief, freedom of action, freedom of privacy," said Democratic Sen. Marti Calabretta.

But the bill's supporters said the only issue was whether the state would take the lead in protecting the lives of unborn children.

"Abortion is the destruction of life, and what can we say about the future of our society when defenseless victims are destroyed for the convenience of personal choice," Republican Sen. Roger Madsen said.

The potential legal bill "is a very, very inexpensive cost for the life of a child," said Democratic Sen. Jim Christiansen.

Andrus remained silent about his intentions on the abortion ban, standing on his recent affirmation of his long-held opposition to abortion except in the case of rape, incest or to save the life of the woman.

Kerry Uhlenkott of Right to Life of Idaho said she was confident the governor would maintain his anti-abortion credentials.

"Idaho is speaking out on this issue," she said. "I don't think he will ignore it."

But leaders of the fledgling Freedom Means Choice, formed two months ago as the Idaho debate was heating up, refused to give up the battle against a bill that would ban more than 90 percent of the 1,500 abortions performed in Idaho each year.

"The word is not dejected," said Sally Trott. "The word is determined. I don't believe anyone can state what the governor will do."

Judge sues over Hispanic hero

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The creator of a Corpus Christi superhero, who can stop a speeding bullet or bend knives with his bare hands, has filed suit against a California video distributor claiming they have violated trademarks by using a superhero with the same name.

Judge Margarito Garza filed the suit, Mex-American Home Video Corp. of Los Angeles violated the law on trademarks by misappropriating the name, Relampago, a comic book hero he created in 1977.

Relampago fought crime on the streets of Corpus Christi in three editions of a special comic book penned by Garza in the late-1970s and distributed only in the Corpus Christi area.

Relampago, whose name means "lightning" in Spanish, fought crime while stressing the importance of education.

Top banana vegges out

WASHINGTON (AP) — This may sound like a corny caper, but President Bush is giving broccoli the kohlrabi shoulder.

He's often been told to eat vegetables. But no longer will meekly respond: mustard?

I carrot stand it, he finally said of the cruciferous greenery. It makes me artichoke, lettuce have it no more. Let's cauliflower a vegetable.

And he isn't sorrel about the decision.

It didn't take long for word to leak out that the president would turnip his nose at veggies.

The news left the president with eggplant on his face as far as farmers were concerned.

The growers didn't take an endive, though, and tomato story worse, they've stalked the president and given him lots of truffle. They are exercising freedom of spinach to defend their produce.

They beet it to the phones and called charitable groups in Washington, offering to donate 10 tons of broccoli to the poor.

In The Church Of Your Choice

DOOR OPENERS

Keys and churches are door openers. In both cases, each require you to put forth some effort. The key you must insert in the lock and turn. Our Lord made the way to heaven even easier, for all that you have to do is present yourself and believe.

"For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: Not of works lest any man should boast: For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love, by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Faith Advent makes new beginning

Faith Advent Christian Fellowship, 421 N. Ward, will celebrate its Pampa beginning this month.

The church is a member of the Texas Advent Christian Conference and is also a part of the Advent Christian General Conference whose headquarters is located in Charlotte, N.C.

The church is temporarily meeting in the Seventh Day Adventist building although the two denominations are not affiliated in any way.

The Advent Christian denomination was founded upon a need to spread the message of the "second coming" of Jesus Christ, church leaders said, and has churches nationwide as well as missionaries and churches abroad.

The church services are led by Grant Johnson and are held at the following times: Sunday school (all ages), 10 a.m.; Sunday morning worship services, 11 a.m.; Sunday evening Bible study, 5 to 6 p.m.; and Sunday evening youth and children's fellowship, 5 to 6 p.m.

The second Sunday evening of each month an all-church fellowship is held following Bible study and refreshments are served. The youth and children's fellowship is active under the leadership of Stacey Johnson.

For further information call 669-9887.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: What good will it be for a man if he gains the whole world, yet forfeits his soul? Or what can a man give in exchange for his soul? (Matthew 16:26 NIV)

My daughter has dyslexia. She spent her school years locked in an unrelenting struggle to subdue and master the printed word.

Now, after all these years, she has found help through a new technique which is proving to be nothing short of miraculous for many dyslexics. For years, the assumption was the dyslexics' brains misinterpreted what their eyes saw in print.

But a woman discovered what was actually happening in many cases was their brains were misinterpreting the light reflections on the page. She developed specially tinted eye glass lenses which filter troubling reflections. Each person is tested exhaustively and the tint is carefully personalized for that person's special needs. With properly tinted lenses, the page itself appears dimmed while the print appears sharper.

When I first heard of the lense technique, I thought it had to be a con game. Surely something so seemingly simple could not possibly be a miracle cure. But it works! She has been given a whole new lease on life.

We are sinners. We spend our lives locked in an unrelenting struggle to subdue and master our own carnality. We assume we have no alternative to our solitary struggle when all we really need is Jesus Christ.

To accept him is so easy, many think it's too easy to be a miracle cure; they regard this trust as a sham, a powerless superstition. But Christ works! His forgiveness and presence filters and dims the troubling influences and makes our spiritual essence sharper. He gives each believer a whole new lease on eternal life!

(If you are seeking salvation, read John 3 in a New Testament. If you are in need of spiritual counseling, contact a clergyman of your choice.)

Christian comedian to bring performance to Texas Panhandle

AMARILLO — Mike Warnke, a Christian comedian evangelist, who was a Satanist high priest, will be in concert at 7:30 p.m. next Friday, March 30, at Amarillo Civic Center.

A $3 suggested donation will be accepted at the door with the offering received for the "War on Satanic Crimes" during the service.

Also appearing will be Rose Hall Warnke, a concert pianist, who will perform her debut instrumental album "Other Voices."

In ministering to his crowds, Warnke relates comical illustrations of his home life and travels, of why he thinks it would be a sin to cut his long hair, (after all just look at what happened to Samson), or the realistic answer on how baptism should be done to please every one.

Warnke's stories go on as he describes to his audience what his guardian angel looks and dresses like, or how distraught a mother can get with her children. He is best known for his humor in relating his life's stories and conveying his Bible-based appeals for Christian salvation.

The Warnkes travel from their home base of Burgin, Ky., with Mike doing 17-20 concerts per month, sometimes spending two months at a time on the road.

He and his wife have a personal non-denominational ministry performing in concerts, traveling by air, conducting interviews and accepting invitations as guests on talk shows.

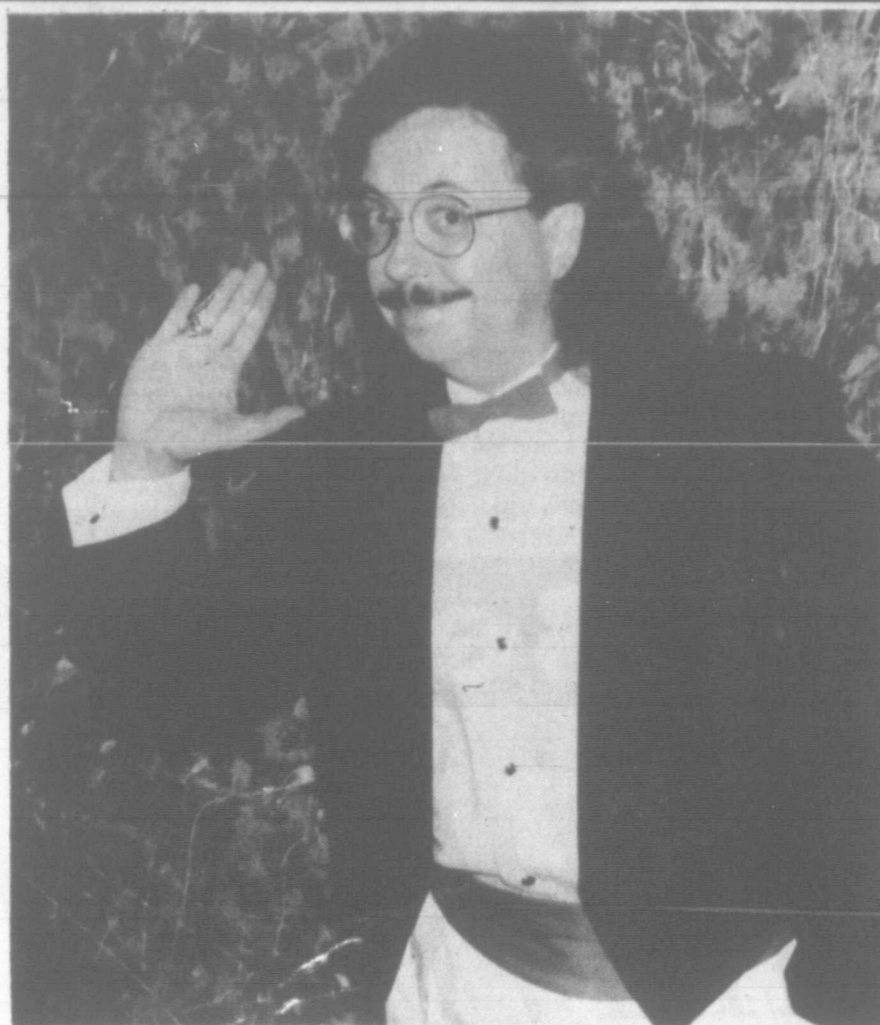

Warnke's evangelistic career began after his first book, "The Satan Seller," a best seller, was published in 1972.

He has spoken in most every state in the nation as well as in Australia, New Zealand, Canada, Denmark and Sweden.

Eight of his concerts since 1976 have been commercial successes as recordings and cassette tapes. His latest release on cassette in 1988, "One in a Million" commemorates the selling of his one millionth tape.

Appearances on television programs for the Warnkes include "Larry King Live," "TBN," and Mike on "The Oprah Winfrey Show," an advisor on ABC's News Magazine and "20/20" in a segment the network did on Satanism.

He has a bachelor's degree and a master's degree in Christian counseling from Valley Christian Uni-

St. Mark announces annual women, men day program

The St. Mark CME Church 9th Annual Women and Men Day Program is set for 3 p.m. on Sunday at the church, 406 Elm St.

The theme of this year's program is: I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord. (Psalms 122:1)

Guest churches include Bethel Baptist Church with the Rev. J.H. Blakemore of Borger; Macedonia Baptist Church with the Rev. I.L. Patrick of Pampa; New Hope Baptist Church with the Rev. V.C. Martin of Pampa.

Other guest churches include New Zion Baptist Church with the Rev. Romaine of Borger; Progressive Baptist Church with Sister Davis of Pampa; Open Door C.O.G.I.C. with Elder H. Kelly of Pampa; and St. Stephen Baptist Church with the Rev. M. Brooks. The program will consist of the opening song, the devotion by the stewards and deacons and several selections by the St. Mark choir.

Jessie Samuels will give the welcome with the response from Macedonia. Moving forward as women in the church will be led by Bea Taylor and men moving forward in the church will be led by Terry Holt.

During the pulpit devotion, the Rev. I.L. Patrick will read the Scripture and the prayer will be given by the Rev. M. Brooks. The Rev. H.R. Johnson will present the speaker, Willie Brooks of Wichita Falls.

Refreshments will be served following the invitation, by the Rev. H.R. Johnson, an offering, remarks and benediction.

Evangelist Mike Stevens to be speaker at revival hosted by First Assembly beginning on Sunday

First Assembly of God, 500 S. Cuyler, will host a revival with evangelist Mike Stevens next week.

Revival services begin on Sunday with worship and praise at 10:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. The revival will be held at 7 p.m. each evening on Monday through Wednesday.

Stevens, a Pampa native who attended First Baptist Church, is founder and president of Mike Stevens Ministries and Crucified Life Ministries Inc. of Shreveport, La. He has committed himself to "contend for revival," which he describes as "engaging until victory is declared and God's purposes are obtained."

Pastor Herb Peak of First Assembly said of Stevens, "He is on the evangelist team for Mario Marillo, one of the top evangelists in America and God is using Mike in a dynamic way. A lot of people have been changed at his meetings. He's young, sharp and he's real."

Peak said the church's prayer is to be "refreshed to a more intimate walk with Jesus Christ" and that "we really desire that people in the community will see their life changed."

In addition to Stevens' messages, Peak said each service will include special music.

"It is our desire that every person in Pampa realize how welcome they will be in these services. This is an interdenominational meeting and people of many denominations would feel welcome," Peak said.

In addition to speaking at churches and conferences around the nation, Stevens has appeared on

The 700 Club and Trinity Broadcasting Network. He has led revivals in Taiwan, Brazil, The Philippines, Scotland and seven European countries.

Stevens noted recently, "We live in a generation that is looking for answers to their troubled world. This generation is being lost to drugs, alcohol, money, power, the occult, satanism and the New Age movement."

He said returning to prayer and the power of Jesus is the true answer the world is looking for.

English minister to preach at First Methodist revival

The Rev. David King of England will arrive in Pampa Saturday and preach for the First United Methodist Church's New World Mission Revival beginning with the 7 p.m. Sunday service.

King will speak at a breakfast service every morning at 6:45 a.m. from Monday through Thursday. He will also preach every evening beginning at 7 p.m. each evening through Thursday at the church at Foster and Ballard.

King was born in Bridlington, a coastal resort in North East Yorkshire. Before his call to the ministry, he was employed as a horticulture instructor to youth mentally handicapped adults. He received his ministerial training at Wesley College in Bristol.

Parochial schools merge to cut costs

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — About a dozen Roman Catholic parishes in downtown Milwaukee pooled resources to form a centralized school system with four campuses.

Also, on the city's south side, plans are mapped to link 42 parochial schools into a regional system, with a joint board, budget and shared facilities and staff.

The aim is both to combine resources to strengthen the schools and effect economies through inter-parish distribution of costs, said the Rev. Ralph C. Gross, chancellor of the Milwaukee Archdiocese.

"We're trying to take some of the school pressure off individual parishes so they can be more fruitful, worshipping communities," he added.

Such changes in many cities signal a gradual but far-reaching transformation in the church's patterns for educating the young.

Under strains of financing and personnel, the single-parish parochial school is fading before the larger cooperative enterprises, but with special efforts to preserve an intimate atmosphere and close ties with parents.

"All sorts of new patterns are emerging," said Sister Catherine T. McNamee, president of the National Catholic Educational Association in Washington.

She said the "restructuring of schools," including consolidations, mergers for different grade levels and other collaborative configurations have come as populations shifted among city areas and to suburbs.

However, the combinations seek to maintain a basis in geographical proximity, she said, such as urban ethnic parishes a few blocks apart, of French, Polish and Italian origins for example, forming a joint school.

"Now they've combined for the whole neighborhood," she said.

Various difficulties have cut Catholicism's elementary and secondary schools in half over the last quarter century, reducing 4.6 million students in 12,300 schools in 1965 to 2.6 million students in 8,800 schools now.

But despite continuing problems, including added expenses of lay teachers that pervasively have replaced the once low-cost but now scarce teaching sisters, the school shrinkage seems abated.

"It's pretty much stabilized," Sister McNamee said, noting that some enrollments are edging back up, expanding rapidly in the lower grades.

"We're holding up fairly well now."

Similar comments came from several dioceses, where checks found many of them consolidating former single-parish schools.

Past decline "is tapering off," said the Rev. George Norton of the Rochester, N.Y., diocese.

Realignments connecting some schools or prospects of it were reported in St. Louis; Baltimore; Green Bay, Wis.; Newark, N.J.; Cleveland and Brooklyn, among others.

Religion roundup

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Church leaders are urging increased reading of the Bible in response to President Bush's proclaiming 1990 the International Year of Bible Reading.

The Rev. Harold C. Bennett, head of the Southern Baptist executive committee, said:

"The Bible is God's word of love, hope, direction and fulfillment in a world of hate, despair, confusion and dissatisfaction. That message from the Lord is needed now, more than ever."

Bush proclaimed the year after a joint Senate-House resolution declared the "history of our nation clearly illustrates the value of voluntarily applying the teachings of the Bible in the lives of individuals and families."

The resolution says: "The Bible has made a unique contribution in shaping the United States as a distinctive and blessed nation and people. Deeply held convictions springing from the Bible led to the early settlement of our nation."

CURITIBA, Brazil (AP) — The Rev. Gottfried Brakemcior, presiding pastor of the Evangelical Church of Lutheran Confession in Brazil, has been elected president of the Lutheran World Federation.

Voting gave him 183 votes at the federations' assembly to 165 for Presiding Bishop Donald Sjoberg of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Canada.

The assembly, representing about 55 million Lutherans in the world, called for "drastic cuts in military and defense budgets" and "the total abolishment of nuclear weapons."

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Roman Catholics and Jews understand and respect each other's faiths much more than they did 25 years ago, but educators need to do more to pass that understanding on to students, a Jewish leader says.

Rabbi A. James Rudin, interreligious affairs director of the American Jewish Committee, told Roman Catholic educators: "Too often the full impact of the improvement in Catholic-Jewish relations has not been felt in the classrooms."

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — A poll finds that 91 percent of college students say there is absolutely no chance of their joining a religious cult and an additional 7 percent say there is "very little" chance of it.

Only 2 percent said there was "some" chance of doing so in the Gallup organization's poll of 545 students at 98 colleges and universities.

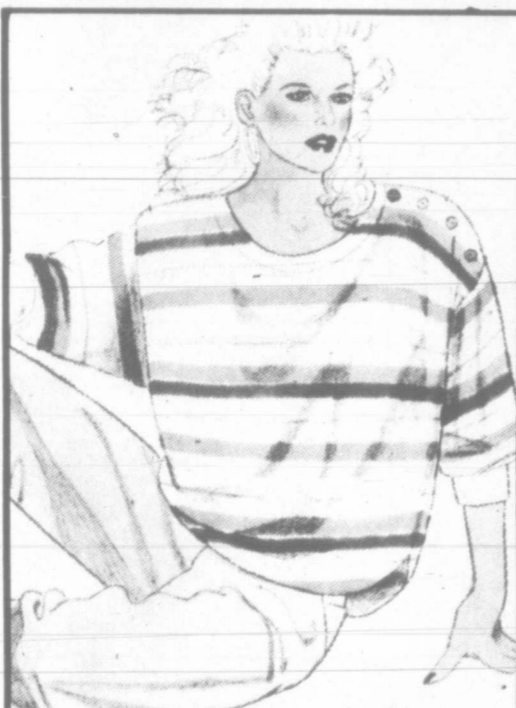

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, an Episcopalian and World War II Navy pilot, says the Navy hymn, "Eternal Father, Strong to Save," is his favorite, according to a poll by syndicated religion columnist George R. Plagenz.

Mrs. Bush listed three favorites — "Nearer My God to Thee," "The Church's One Foundation" and "Amazing Grace."

Plagenz reports that "Amazing Grace" ranked first in a survey of 10,000 newspaper readers, followed by "How Great Thou Art," "In the Garden," "The Old Rugged Cross," "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," "A Mighty Fortress" and "Blessed Assurance."

For Harlan - 'it's a tough job but someone's got to do it'

By KAYLA PURSLEY
Lifestyles Editor

"Discover My Kauai" reads the brochure for the Ohana Helicopter Tours and it might as well be Nancy Harlan's slogan, public relations director for the company and former White Deer resident.

"It is a tough job, but someone's got to do it. Right?" says Harlan, tongue-in-cheek, about her new job and new life on the Hawaiian island of Kauai.

Two years ago, Harlan was working as a travel agent for a local travel firm. She had an opportunity as part of her job to travel to Hawaii and the minute she stepped off the plane she realized that "this is what I've been looking for."

Harlan grew up in Skellytown. "I always wanted to live on an island," says Harlan, "which may seem a little strange living in the Panhandle of Texas."

Harlan put in her application with Aloha Airlines while on her trip. When she arrived back in the states she started packing her bags for a new adventure in a new home. Friends told her about the opening at Ohana Helicopter Tours and the rest is history.

"Ohana" means family and for Harlan, she has a new family who have adopted her and taught her "Hawaiian ways."

"The Hawaiians believe that the only way to be happy is to love everyone," says Harlan. "What makes Hawaii special for me is the people - loving, caring people who accept you as you are."

Harlan has gotten to meet several movie stars - Frankie Avalon for one.

"I get to be a part of everybody's memory," says Harlan relating the story of one man whose son had died several years earlier. After coming in from a helicopter trip inside the volcano, he had tears in his eyes and told Harlan that "that's the closest I've felt to my son in two years."

The stories of the island say that the gods (Great Kahunas) live in the volcanos and all who die on the island want to be cremated and have their ashes dropped from the helicopter into the volcano.

When the company bought a new BeJet Ranger helicopter, an excited Harlan and several employees met at the airport before sunrise one morning to watch it being flown in from Honolulu. The helicopter was purchased in Texas, flown to California and shipped to Honolulu. As the helicopter was approaching, the sun popped up and radiated over it - a magical moment. Maile leaf leis were draped all over the helicopter when it landed and a Hawaiian minister preceded with a blessing.

"Everyone was pretty teary-eyed," says Harlan. When the ceremony was over, someone gently told Harlan she should go back home and get dressed. It was only then she realized she had arrived at the airport in her pajamas.

Harlan was in town recently, her first trip to the states in two years, on her way to California for a trade show promoting the Islands. Her mom, White Deer postmaster, Mary Harlan, has been to see her once, and Harlan's son, Kirt, has practically lived on the beach for the past two years, learning to surf and eat raw octopus and squid, island delicacies.

Harlan lives at Kapaa, a town of about 40,000 on Kauai.

"Going to work is so far," Harlan says, again tongue-in-cheek. "I go down the hill and see nothing but ocean and the baby whales playing in the surf, turn and drive through two miles of coconut groves along the ocean, and then I'm at work."

The island of Kauai has been the favorite site of several television shows and movies. The waterfall that opens Fantasy Island is on Kauai. Also island scenes have been featured in Raiders of the Lost Ark, King Kong and South Pacific.

Seventy-five percent of the island can only be seen by air. All pilots of Ohana are Hawaiian born. In the four- or six-seater helicopters, passengers are linked to a customized audio entertainment system through individual headsets. Live narration and a musical score accompany the choreographed movements over the island.

When she was leaving for the states her new family of friends quizzed her about life in Texas.

"They asked me if they really wore boots and belts with their names on them," relates Harlan. She plans on packing a few souvenirs for her Hawaiian friends on her return trip such as a picture of a cowboy, some barbed wire and maybe some country and western music.

"What I do is not a job," says Harlan, adding "it's a pleasure. And as long as my boss doesn't figure it out...I would pay them to work."

Nancy Harlan, deeply tanned by the Hawaiian sun, talks about the trade winds that always blow and the beautiful flowers forever in bloom on her new island home of Kauai in Hawaii.

Temporary houseguest is too much at home

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine - I'll call her Sara - asked if she could stay with me temporarily until she found employment and an apartment. (She's relocating.)

She had no trouble getting a job because she's well-qualified in her field, but she hasn't found an apartment yet. She says she's looking, but I doubt if she's looking very hard.

Sara is not the ideal houseguest. She's on the telephone constantly, comes and goes at crazy hours, and has friends calling her all through the night. I just discovered that she had checks printed with my address!

I think she's abused the free room-and-board privileges long enough, which is where I need your help. Please tell me how to get her out of here.

ENOUGH IS ENOUGH

DEAR ENOUGH: Tell Sara that you both need your space, and she appears to need more space than you can give her, so you would like her to be out of your apartment in "two weeks," or "three," or "30 days." (Give her a deadline.) Anyone who would have checks printed using the address of a friend without that friend's consent has nerve she hasn't used yet.

DEAR ABBY: When I read the letter from "Fed Up," I had to write. My situation was almost identical. From the day "Don" and I were married, we had one of his friends staying with us - and it continued for eight years!

I was the medical miracle who was walking around with no brain and no guts. I should have spoken out sooner. I finally filed for divorce when my husband refused to ask his buddy to leave, and the buddy refused to leave. It became apparent that my husband preferred his friend's company to mine.

You're right, Abby, assertiveness training can give a person courage she never knew she had. I feel like a new person since I learned to speak my mind without being defensive.

Keep up the good work. People need to be told that they don't have to live in abusive situations - that help is out there if they have the guts to leave, and go for it.

IN CONTROL IN FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

DEAR IN CONTROL: Congratulations for taking control of your life. And to those of you who don't know where to find a course in "assertiveness training," inquire at your local college or university, or your local mental health association.

DEAR ME: Very briefly: Yes.

DEAR ABBY: If you have the address of that woman signed "Irate in North Carolina," who was the victim of gossip, please send her this wonderful piece about gossip. She may want to tack it on her front door. I've had it for a long time, but I don't know who wrote it.

JOAN TRAMEL, COCOA, FLA.

DEAR JOAN: I published that piece about gossip several years ago. I found it in The Wall Street Journal. I agree it's wonderful, and here it is:

NOBODY'S FRIEND

My name is Gossip. I have no respect for justice.

I aim without killing. I break hearts and ruin lives.

I am cunning and malicious and gather strength with age.

The more I am quoted the more I am believed.

My victims are helpless. They cannot protect themselves against me because I have no name and no face.

To track me down is impossible. The harder you try, the more elusive I become.

I am nobody's friend. Once I tarnish a reputation, it is never the same.

I topple governments and wreck marriages.

I ruin careers and cause sleepless nights, heartache and indignation.

I make innocent people cry in their pillows.

Even my name hisses. I am called Gossip. I make headlines and headaches.

Before you repeat a story ask yourself, is it true? Is it fair? Is it necessary? If not, don't repeat it!

Is your social life in a slump? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular" - for people of all ages. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada), to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Very briefly, my question is this: If both the donor and the recipient of a gift are in the same room when the gift is opened, and if the recipient expresses sincere gratitude for the gift - and even gives the donor an appreciative hug - is it still necessary for the recipient to send a written thank-you note?

The course you are presently pursuing could be the one that will lead you to success and fulfillment in the year ahead. Do not alter direction if things are moving smoothly.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A rather unique goal you've established for yourself can be achieved today, but not necessarily through the use of traditional tactics. Let your ingenuity to devise the plan. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't hesitate to speak or write that which you think today, because telling it like it is will be very effective. Frills will not be required to make your points with others.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Although you might not see any visible ways of getting something material you've been wanting, unforeseen circumstances could be instrumental today in helping you fulfill your desire.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your judgment could be a trifle keener today than the analytical powers of persons with whom you'll be associating. Listen to what they have to say, but don't discredit your own feelings.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Some assistance is now likely in a matter you've had to handle solely on your own until this point. From this day on, progress should be more substantial.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your ideas will carry considerable weight with others today and they will act on your presentations. Be extra careful that your concepts are well thought out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Today it might be necessary for you to take the lead in an arrangement where you share a mutual interest with another. You're well equipped for this role, so do not be reluctant to assume it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You could be very fortunate at this time in making new friends. In fact, today you might meet someone with whom you'll have much in common.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A matter that could be meaningful to you financially is shaping up rather well at this time. Several loose ends which have been left dangling may be tied down today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today you might be called upon to help a friend who lacks your imagination and experience and is in dire need of guidance. You are the right candidate for getting your pal back on track.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Conditions could be rather exciting for you today and there is a possibility you might gain in some manner from a situation that has been engineered by another.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Whatever you do today and wherever you go you'll operate with an ambience friends will find extremely charming and pleasing. This should be a very nice day for you.

Hogs, Horns create all-SWC showdown

By ARNIE STEPLETON
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Run-and-gunners Arkansas and Texas shot down the outsiders to set up an all-Southwest Conference showdown between the bitter rivals, and the stakes have never been higher.

The sharpshooting, fourth-seeded Arkansas Razorbacks, behind Lee Mayberry's 3-point shooting and the inside play of Oliver Miller, downed North Carolina 96-73 in an NCAA Midwest semifinal Thursday night.

Midwest Regional

Then Lance Blanks triggered a Texas rally from a 16-point deficit with 26 second-half points, lifting the 10th-seeded Longhorns to a 102-89 triumph over sixth-seeded and 25th-ranked Xavier of Ohio.

For one night at least, this town was big enough for both of 'em.

The Razorbacks used four straight 3-pointers, three by Mayberry, to turn a 54-54 tie into a 66-55 lead with 8:17 remaining.

Eighth-seeded North Carolina, which got into the round of 16 for the 10th straight year by upsetting top-ranked Oklahoma, ended its season 21-13.

"We're kind of like a time bomb," Coach Nolan Richardson said of the seventh-ranked Razorbacks (29-4). "When we blow up, it's pretty hard to stop us."

"All of a sudden it was just like a bomb dropped on us," said North Carolina guard King Rice, who scored 10 points. "I really felt we had control of the game, then they get that cluster of 3's and the tempo was theirs."

Miller helped Arkansas pull away by scoring 13 points in the final 61/2 minutes. He scored 15 of his 19 points in the second half.

Arkansas was set on the road to victory during a timeout with 16:21 remaining and the Tar Heels leading 45-44.

"I thought Lee was passing up too many 3-point shots," Richardson said. "During that timeout, I told him I didn't care if we won or lost but I wanted him taking his shot. I wish I could have packaged that talk."

Mayberry finished with 19 points, 12 coming on 3-pointers.

North Carolina coach Dean Smith blamed himself for the lapse.

"We stayed close until they hit that series of 3-pointers," he said. "Then we got impatient and hurried too much. That was my fault."

Scott Williams finished with 20 for North Carolina.

Lenzie Howell led the Razorbacks with 25 points. Todd Day, who watched most of the first half from the bench with three fouls, had 18 points.

Arkansas led 39-34 at halftime despite the foul trouble of Day and Mayberry. Howell helped make up the difference by scoring 15 points, most on medium-range jumpers.

Texas (24-8) also used a second-half surge to advance to the title game, the first ever matching SWC teams.

No SWC team has ever won the national basketball championship. The last to reach the Final Four was Houston, which was beaten in the 1984 title game by Georgetown.

Arkansas went to the Final Four in 1941, 1945 and 1978, losing in the semifinals each time. Texas finished third in 1947 in its only Final Four appearance.

Blanks, who missed all eight of his shots in the first half and scored two points, finished with 28 as Texas overcame a 53-41 halftime deficit. Travis Mays led Texas with 32 points, and Joey Wright had 26.

Derek Strong had 27 points and Tyrone Hill 22 for Xavier (28-5), which had its most successful season ever. Coach Pete Gillen has taken the Musketeers to the NCAA tournament in each of his five years.

Texas went ahead 75-74 on Blanks' steal and dunk off a wayward Xavier inbound pass with 9:10 to play.

Blanks led Texas on a 15-2 run that made it 90-79 with 2:29 left, contributing two steals and three baskets to the stampede. After a Xavier basket, he hit two free throws to make it 92-81.

Blanks' heroics also included an off-balance, over-the-head layup as he stumbled in the lane with 4:06 to go. The shot broke a 79-79 tie, and Texas outscored Xavier 23-10 thereafter.

"First, I thought I traveled," Blanks said, "and then a little man in my head said, 'Throw it up, throw it up.' So I threw it up. It said, 'Dance, dance,' so I danced. 'Now shoot.' The ball went in."

He said he was glad Coach Tom Penders allowed him to display some showboating after the shot fell.

"If you score, you can dance all you want," Penders reasoned.

Duke, Connecticut battle for East title

By RICK WARNER
AP Sports Writer

Texas and Arkansas will play for the third time this season, while Duke and Connecticut will meet for the third time ever in Saturday's NCAA regional finals.

After Arkansas routed North Carolina 96-73 on Thursday night, Texas rallied from a 16-point deficit to beat Xavier 102-89 and set up an all-Southwest Conference battle for the Midwest Regional championship at Dallas.

NCAA roundup

Although Arkansas beat Texas twice this season, Longhorns coach Tom Penders is happy to play the Razorbacks again.

"It will be a great matchup," he said. "It's good for the conference."

In the East final at East Rutherford, N.J., Duke and Connecticut will renew an interconference rivalry that produced a 4-4 split during the season-opening ACC-Big East Challenge.

UConn edged Clemson 71-70 on Tate George's jumper at the buzzer, and Duke beat UCLA 90-81 to reach the regional final for the fourth time in five years.

In tonight's regional semifinals, it will be Michigan State vs. Georgia Tech and Syracuse vs. Minnesota in the Southeast at New Orleans. UNLV plays Ball State and Loyola Marymount meets Alabama in the West at Oakland, Calif.

No. 3 Connecticut.....71
No. 17 Clemson.....70

George ruined another colossal Clemson comeback and put Connecticut into the final eight for the first time in 26 years.

After missing a jumper with three seconds left, George got another chance to win the game when Clemson's Sean Tyson missed a free throw with 1.6 seconds remaining and the Huskies got the rebound.

Following a UConn timeout, the senior guard took a length-of-the-court pass and hit a 12-foot jumper at the buzzer.

"When I missed that first shot, I was coming to the realization that my career might be over," George said. "But they said in the huddle, 'It's not over, it's not over.'"

George got a perfect pass from Scott Burrell, a major-league pitching prospect. George caught the ball on the right side of the basket, turned around and swished the winning shot over Tyson as the buzzer sounded.

"The game isn't 39 minutes and 59 seconds," Connecticut coach Jim Calhoun said. "We had just enough time to win it."

Chris Smith led UConn with 23 points. Elden Campbell and Dale Davis, Clemson's 6-foot-11 "Duo of Doom," each scored 15.

No. 15 Duke.....90
UCLA81

Phil Henderson scored 28 points, including six 3-pointers, and sparked a decisive second-half run as Duke continued its mastery at the Meadowlands.

UCLA, which trailed by as many as 11 points in the first half, rallied to lead 66-65 on a 3-pointer by Tracy Murray with 7:53 left. With Duke trailing 68-67, Henderson hit his final 3-pointer to start a 15-5 run that put the Blue Devils ahead to stay.

Henderson said the game changed when Duke's big men, Christian Laettner and Alaa Abdelnaby, each went to the bench with four fouls in the second half.

Laettner had 24 points and 14 rebounds and Abdelnaby had 14 points.

Don MacLean led UCLA with 21 points.

Briefs

Baseball

The Harvesters will get a good measure of the District 1-4A race during the next two days when they take on Frenship this afternoon and Lubbock Estacado on Saturday.

Pampa is the only remaining unbeaten team in the league, boasting a 7-0 record. The Harvesters are tied with Lubbock Dunbar and Lubbock Estacado for first place in 1-4A, each with 2-0 marks.

Frenship, tied with Dumas in fourth place, has a 5-4 overall record, 1-1 in the loop. The Tigers will journey to Pampa today for a 2 p.m. start at Harvester Field, weather permitting.

Lubbock Estacado, last year's district runner-up, stands at 5-5 on the season. Pampa will face the Matadors Saturday at 2 p.m. in Lubbock.

Golf

The Harvester and Lady Harvester golf teams kick off the league season Saturday when they travel to Frenship for District 1-4A competition.

See Sunday's edition of The Pampa News for results.

Volunteer workers are asked to lend a hand at the new Hidden Hills Golf Course north of the city at 8:30 a.m. Saturday.

Work to be done includes painting, finish carpentry, surveying the remainder of the boundary fence and possibly installing walking boards across the bridges.

Paint brushes and rollers will be provided for the painters.

Any and all volunteers are welcome to help insure the course will open as soon as possible.

Tennis

Approximately 30 Pampa tennis players, including high school varsity, junior varsity and eighth-grade divisions, will compete in a tournament this weekend in Amarillo.

The United States Tennis Association Zone Advancement Tournament is scheduled for Saturday, Sunday and Monday. The tourney qualifies a player for ranking in the Texas Tennis Association.

Rodeo

High school rodeo clubs from Pampa and the surrounding area will participate in the second Tri-State Rodeo of the spring season Saturday in Stratford. Competition is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m.

Track

Pampa Middle School's Lady

Patriots dominated the Borger triangular track meet last Friday with 15 first-place finishes in the seventh- and eighth-grade divisions.

The seventh graders made the biggest haul with nine first-place finishes, including all three relays. Candi Atwood, Denise Eppison and Mechelle Abbot each emerged with three gold medals to pace all competitors.

Atwood was a member of the winning 400, 800 and 1600 relays, while Eppison won the 800, provided one leg of the 1600 relay and tied with Abbot for first place in the 300 hurdles. Abbot also won the 100 hurdles and ran a leg of 800 relay.

Tammy Chesher finished with two gold medals, one in each of the 400 and 800 relays.

Pampa's eighth-graders finished first in six events. Jamie Jackson was tops with three gold medals, while Shelly Young and Betrice Jackson collected two apiece.

Jamie won the 100 in a time of 12.9, then clocked 26.8 in the 200 as well as running the anchor leg in the sprint relay. Young was first in the triple jump and ran in the 400 relay. Betrice won the 400 and anchored Pampa's 1600 relay.

Below is a list of Pampa's individual results at Borger:

Public Notice

RAILROAD COMMISSION OF TEXAS OIL AND GAS DIVISION

DISTRICT NO. CASE NO. 91,109 DATE OF ISSUANCE: February 15, 1990.

NOTICE OF APPLICATION: NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Applicant, TXO Production Corp., 415 W. Wall, Ste. 900, Midland, Tx. 79701, has made application for a spacing exception permit under the provisions of the 16 Texas Administrative Code §3.37 (Railroad Commission Statewide Rule 37). Applicant seeks exception to the lease line distance requirement to re-enter Well No. 1, Nix "G" Lease, 523.4 Acres, Section 73, Block 42, H&TC RR Co. Survey, Canadian, NE (Douglas), Canadian, NW (Douglas), Canadian Fields, Hemphill County, being 5 miles in a north direction from Canadian, Texas.

The location of this well is as follows: 660' from south line and 1320' from east line of lease. 660' from south line and 1320' from east line of survey. Field Rules for the Canadian, NE (Douglas) Field are 1320/2640, 640 Acres. Field Rules for the Canadian, NW (Douglas) Field are 660/1320, 640/320 Acres. Field Rules for the Wildcat Field are 4671/208', 40 Acres. This well is to be completed at an approximate depth of 7500 feet.

PERSUASION to the terms of Railroad Commission Statewide Rule 37(b) (2) (A), this permit may be granted administratively if no protest to the application is received. An offset mineral interest owner and leasee is entitled to request a hearing on this application. They must be prepared to appear at the hearing either in person or by qualified representative and protest this application through cross-examination or presentation of a direct case subject to all applicable rules of evidence. If a hearing is called, the burden of proof of the need for an exception is placed on the applicant. A protest should be prepared, however, to establish your standing to protest as an affected person, if challenged. If you have questions regarding why the applicant is seeking this exception, contact the Applicant's representative, M.C. Wesley, Exec. Secretary, at (915) 687-7992. If you have any questions regarding standing or other matters, please contact the Commission at (512) 463-7118.
