Smoke billows above a house in the Cabot Kingsmill Camp Wednesday afternoon. The cause of the fire, which destroyed the home, is still under investigation.

Authorities continuing investigation into possible arson cause for fire

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Officials with Gray County Sheriff's Office, assisted by Pampa Fire Marshal's Office, continued today to dig through the burnt rubble left from a Wednesday house fire at the Cabot Kingsmill Plant.

Gray County Sheriff Jim Free said today that the investigation continues to focus on the possibility of arson.

"We check all points for arson any time there is a fire like this," the sheriff said, declining to give further details of the investigation.

Free said the residents of the house, Brent Crossman, his wife and two children, were at the residence at the time of the fire. It was reported to the Pampa Fire Department at 1:53 p.m. Wednesday.

Firefighters battled the blaze and the 35-40 mph winds that accompanied it. The house was fully involved when the firefighters arrived at the scene.

Fire officials were on the scene of the fire, at the first house north of the railroad tracks at the Cabot Kingsmill Camp, until 8 p.m. Wednesday.

At 8:55 p.m. Wednesday they were called back to the scene when the fire rekindled. A Gray County Sheriff's deputy has guarded the scene since the fire occurred.

No one was injured in the fire. Fire investigators, a Gray County sheriff's deputy and an Amarillo insurance investigator dug through the charred remains of the frame house Thursday, Free said.

"They're still out there today," Free said. "They should finish up today."

Any suspicious substances will be sent to a laboratory for evaluation, Free said.

During the fire, numerous grass fires near the residence erupted and firefighters hosed down the next door residence in an attempt to keep it from catching fire. Although it did not catch on fire, there was smoke damage caused.

There was a fire at the Crossman house in 1987 that was ruled an arson.

Mike Knutson of Hardy Knutson Masonary Contractor scrapes tile Thursday off the floor of the women's restroom on the third floor of the Gray County Courthouse in preparation for the placing of new tile.

Courthouse restrooms under renovation

Restrooms in the Gray County Courthouse are being renovated with workers beginning this week on the third floor and working their way down.

Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy said he expects the work to take 30 days or less.

"We're trying to dress up the restrooms," Kennedy said, saying the six restrooms in the courthouse are outdated. "This is something we've talked about on and off."

General contractor for the project is Craig Raeburn and the tile work is being completed by Harley D.

Knutson Masonary Contractor.

Kennedy said he is responsible for seeing that the building is maintained and authorized the work. Money for the work will come out of the capital improvements budget.

Kennedy said besides new tile that will be placed on the floors, new sinks, urinals and counter tops will be installed. Other items will be replaced as needed, he said.

The judge said he did not have an estimate on what the work would cost. He said the contractor will be paid on a time and materials basis.

Noriega being kept under tight security

By BRIAN MURPHY
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Manuel Noriega's tumble from dictator to defendant ended in the tight security of a U.S. courtroom as the once-fiery Panamanian ruler quietly faced a federal judge.

In a soft voice, a humbled Noriega answered U.S. District Judge William Hoeweler's initial inquiries. But he declined to reply to drug trafficking charges at the brief hearing Thursday, less than a month after saying he would never surrender to the United States.

The judge entered an innocent plea for Noriega, who appeared in court in a Panamanian Defense Force uniform for his arraignment on the charges.

Noriega, federal prisoner No. 41586, was being held early today in an undisclosed Miami-area location, his attorneys said.

Defense attorneys say it could be nine months before they can go to trial on charges that Noriega took $4.6 million in bribes from Colombia's Medellin drug cartel to turn his nation into a way station for the cocaine trade.

U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen said he thought the trial would take only two months; defense attorneys said it could go on for six months.

Defense attorney Frank Rubino said Noriega "appeared to be strong. He appeared to be confident. We went over the facts. ... He was extremely confident in assisting us."

U.S. drug agents who accompanied Noriega on his flight from Panama to Miami gave a markedly different description, saying he was in tears aboard the transport plane and regretted leaving the papal nunciature, The Washington Times reported today.

"I really put my foot in it this time," Noriega was quoted as saying. "I should not have left the nunciature."

A source familiar with the flight said Noriega carried a Bible in one hand and three rosaries in another when he was brought to the plane.

"He was very depressed, although tranquil. One agent read him scriptures from the Bible in Spanish during the flight," the unidentified source told the newspaper.

If convicted of all charges, Noriega, 51, could be sentenced to 145 years in prison and fined $1.1 million.

Rubino said he planned to file motions to dismiss the case, claiming the charges are politically motivated and questioning the methods used late Wednesday to remove Noriega from the Vatican Embassy in Panama City, where he was sheltered in a room for 10 days under diplomatic protection.

"General Noriega refuses to submit to the jurisdiction of this court ... because he is a political prisoner brought to this country illegally," Rubino told Hoeweler.

Other defense claims will say the U.S. invasion violated Panama's sovereignty and international treaties, and that Noriega is a chief of state and subject to immunity, Rubino said.

But last year, Hoeweler ruled the United States has jurisdiction in the case because the State Department never recognized Noriega's political legitimacy.

Rubino said the Panamanian general surrendered

following statements that Panama would revoke the diplomatic status of the papal nuncio, and because the embassy was surrounded by angry crowds and U.S. soldiers.

Vatican officials, however, said Noriega left voluntarily. In Washington, a senior Bush administration official said the Vatican planned to order Noriega to leave by noon Thursday.

Rubino said he will likely request a bond hearing within 30 days. The judge ordered Noriega held without bond.

Tom Cash, head of the Drug Enforcement Administration in Miami, said Noriega's capture was only one benchmark in the nation's drug war.

"We're not going to open cases of champagne. We'll take it one glass at a time," he said.

Noriega walked into the downtown courtroom without handcuffs or shackles. Each time Hoeweler asked a question, he rose and removed his headphones used for translation. He answered softly in Spanish and stared at the judge, showing no emotion.

Noriega and 15 others were indicted in February 1988 by a federal grand jury in Miami. Noriega also faces charges in Tampa.

Bush administration sources said Noriega was assured he would not be tried under a statute that carries the death penalty for drug-related killings.

Five other defendants in the indictment have appeared in court in Miami. Noriega's whereabouts today were a closely guarded secret.

"We will only say that he is in a secure facility," said Justice Department spokesman Daniel Eramian in Washington.

Embassy pressured Noriega to leave

By DOUGLAS GRANT MINE

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The Vatican embassy pressured Manuel Noriega to surrender to U.S. troops by threatening to ask Panamanian authorities to come in after the "highly dangerous criminal," a spokesman said.

"We would have lifted the diplomatic immunity," said the Rev. Javier Villanueva, assisant to the papal nuncio.

He made the disclosure Thursday as Panamanians assessed the cost of the two-year struggle over Noriega's ouster, which was completed Wednesday when he left the Vatican embassy and was whisked off by U.S. troops to Florida to face drug-trafficking charges.

Noriega's arrest sparked festive street celebrations, but Panamanians must now face an economy battered in large part by the invasion and by U.S. sanctions aimed at toppling

Noriega.

Maj. Gen. Marc Cisneros, commander of U.S. Army South, said there was no remaining fighting or guerrilla activity on Thursday.

"The whole country is pretty well pacified," Cisneros said. He said all 16,000 members of Noriega's Defense Forces had been accounted for, but he did not say where they were.

Villanueva said embassy officials didn't give Noriega a deadline to leave, but made his choices clear.

"If he would not have given himself up, the Panamanian government, not the U.S. government, would have been invited to send in forces to take him out," Villanueva said in a telephone interview.

In Washington, however, a senior Bush administration official said the papal nuncio, Monsignor Sebastian Laboa, gave Noriega a Thursday noon deadline to get out, "meaning he would no longer be a welcome guest."

U.S. troops had ringed the mission since Noriega took refuge there on Christmas Eve, four days after the American invasion crushed his military regime and installed a civilian government.

Cisneros said Noriega kept a machine gun under his bed during his entire 10-day stay at the mission, which would have made it difficult for embassy staff to remove him forcibly.

Villanueva said the lifting of diplomatic immunity would not have been considered if Noriega had been a political prisoner.

"But this man is a highly dangerous criminal," he said.

Noriega claimed he was a political prisoner in refusing to enter a plea to drug-trafficking charges in Miami. The judge entered an innocent plea for him and he was held without bond.

Nation's unemployment rate holds steady in December

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate held steady at 5.3 percent in December, ending 1989 at about where it began, despite weaker-than-average job growth in the final month of the year, the government said today.

The civilian jobless rate as measured by a household survey by the Labor Department was unchanged despite the gain of 142,000 jobs in December, a figure artificially bolstered by the return of 55,000 striking telephone workers in New York.

The survey of employers, from which the job growth figure is derived, is often considered a more reliable indicator of economic developments by analysts.

The unemployment rate began 1989 at 5.4 percent in January and since then has fluctuated in a narrow range within a tenth of a percentage point of 5.3 percent, except for March when it dipped to a 15-year low of 5 percent. The average for the year was 5.3 percent.

Last month, the Labor Department said the November unemployment rate was 5.4 percent, but today it revised that figure down to 5.3 percent.

The unemployment stall in 1989 was due primarily to a slowdown in the manufacturing sector, which lost 25,000 jobs in December, bringing job losses since March to 195,000.

Overall job growth during the last six months of the year averaged around 150,000 a month, down sharply from the average 270,000 monthly gain during the previous 21/2 years.

The economy produced 1.7 million new job during 1989, bringing the civilian workforce to 117.9 million. That was down from job gains of 2.3 million in 1988.

More manufacturing layoffs are expected. Automakers have already announced plant shutdowns this month.

The average manufacturing work week held steady in December at 40.7 hours, as did overtime at 3.7 hours.

Construction employers reported a seasonally adjusted 38,000 fewer jobs in December than a month earlier. Analysts are attributing the drop to the deep freeze that gripped most of the nation last month.

In contrast, service-producing industries continued to demonstrate healthy gains, adding 206,000 jobs to bring growth for the year to 2.4 million.

Transportation employers added 73,000 jobs on a seasonally adjusted basis last month. Business services added 14,000, health services, 47,000; government, 34,000; and finance, insurance and real estate, 13,000. Retail employment grew by 12,000 fewer jobs than the normally expected seasonal gain.

Mining industries, which includes oil drilling, lost 1,000 jobs.

Average hourly earnings posted a 0.6 percent rise in December to $9.84, bringing the gain for the year to 4.1 percent. That wasn't enough to keep up with consumer price inflation, which has been running at about 4.5 percent.

In Texas, the unemployment rate fell from 7.2 percent to 6.6 percent in December as more people left the job market, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said today.

"We're seeing people basically moving out of the labor force," said Nic Santangelo, a bureau analyst in Dallas. "They're either going into housework, going back to school or ... they're not looking for work because perhaps they don't believe they can find work."

Retailers hired extra help for the holiday shopping season, but Santangelo said he wasn't sure that made an impact on the jobless rate. An industry breakdown of December unemployment will not be complete for another month.

Chisum unopposed for state representative

State Rep. Warren Chisum, D-Pampa, has announced his filing for re-election to the Texas House of Representatives, subject to the Democratic primary on March 13. He has no opposition.

First elected to the House in 1988, Rep. Chisum co-authored two of the major bills of the session: HB 18, the Rural Health bill and HB 1, the Workers' Comp bill. He served on the most active committees of the House — the Committee on County Affairs and the Committee on Corrections. The Corrections Committee was responsible for adding 18,000 new beds to the Texas prison system and for helping change the criminal justice system through HB 2335.

He was the first freshman in the House to pass a bill during the regular session.

"The next session of the Texas Legislature will be very important for the people of the 84th District," he said, "because the House and Senate will redistrict in 1991. We must have strong leadership from the Panhandle to protect our representation."

Rep. Chisum pledged to continue his fight against a state income tax during the next session.

A native of the Pampa area, Rep. Chisum was an active civic leader in Pampa, and the owner of several businesses related to oil and gas when he decided to seek public office in 1988.

no emotion when he left the Vatican mission.

"When he walked out of the nunciatura, he was normal. In other words, he wasn't strutting or ... defeated. He was just walking expressionless," he said.

He said no deals with Noriega led to the surrender.

"Our condition to him was to come out and face justice," Cisneros said.

A top Noriega adviser and head of his secret police, Lt. Col. Nivaldo Madrinan, walked out of the mission on Thursday and surrendered to U.S. troops.

The new government of President Guillermo Endara preferred to have Noriega go directly into U.S. hands.

Endara has said Panama has no prison secure enough to hold him and the judicial system was inadequate to prosecute him.

Also, several Panamanian officials have said there was no law that would allow his extradition.

Endara said his government's priorities are:

- Reconstruction of Chorrillo, the low-income neighborhood around the Defense Forces headquarters that was destroyed in the U.S. invasion.

- Organization of a security force.

- To "make sure the military occupation is as brief as possible."

- Reconstruction of the economy, "which has suffered so much."

Relatives criticize DHS inaction in boy's beating death

AUSTIN (AP) — A two-year-old boy who was scalded last summer and beaten to death this week might be alive if the Texas Department of Human Services had recognized the danger, relatives of boy say.

Caroline Boutwell and Margaret Spinks, aunts of Christopher Wohlers, Thursday criticized the child protective services division of the state agency for not acting more swiftly after the boy's uncle filed a complaint Dec. 22.

The child was declared brain-dead and was disconnected from a life-support system Wednesday at Brackenridge Hospital, hours after emergency workers responded to a call at his family's home late Tuesday.

The boy's stepfather, Gerald Christopher Zuliani, 23, was charged with injury to a child. The charge can carry the same penalty as murder — five to 99 years or life.

The boy's mother, Robbie Zuliani, also 23, told police she saw her husband strike her son with his fists and slam him against the wall of their home.

An autopsy showed he died of internal bleeding with swelling caused by a head injury.

The boy was scalded last June when he was forced to sit in 120-degree water by Wayne Michael Hoffman, 21, who then was his mother's boyfriend. Hoffman was sentenced to 10 years in prison for injury to a child.

Robbie Zuliani told police she was afraid to report the assaults by her husband and ex-boyfriend because they beat her.

Spinks and Boutwell said DHS workers downplayed relatives' concerns about the child and failed to recognize a pattern of abuse against Christopher.

"We're really upset with the DHS and their incompetence," Spinks said. "It seems like they wait until there's a body, or a corpse."

Ron Perrett, program supervisor for the child protective services division in Travis County, said a DHS committee would review the actions of two caseworkers, who remain on duty but are not being assigned new cases until the review is complete. Perrett said he also would review the matter himself.

The DHS has been granted temporary custody of Christopher's 4-year-old sister, Jennifer. And officials also are seeking temporary custody of the unborn child of Robbie Zuliani, who is pregnant.

Spinks said her brother took Christopher to a clinic after seeing bruises on Christopher's head when the toddler was visiting the boy's grandparents on Dec. 22. A doctor urged the boy's grandfather to take to the baby to the hospital and the DHS was called, she said.

A DHS caseworker interviewed her father and later told her parents "they didn't feel it was critical, and they would be taking care of it," Spinks said.

The child was released from Children's Hospital of Austin at Brackenridge the next day, hospital spokesman Larry BeSaw said.

Boutwell said that only hours before the boy died she talked to two caseworkers about the boy. The first caseworker "told me there was no real emergency here, and if I was really concerned to get hold of my sister," she said.

She said she told the other caseworker, "I'm really afraid that Christopher is going to end up in the hospital or dead."

The caseworker told Boutwell she would talk to Robbie Zuliani that day, Boutwell said.

Perrett said that caseworkers interviewed members of the family and hospital tests "didn't find anything that would be indicative of a current injury or a past injury."

"Our best judgment at (that) moment was the child was not in any kind of immediate risk, immediate danger in the home," he said.

Perrett said he plans to find out why DHS workers did not detect a pattern of abuse in the Zuliani household.

"Once I'm through with my review, I'll decide whether I have any regrets" of how the DHS handled the case, he said. "I don't know if what we did was wrong. I don't know that yet."

Officials await answer on judicial elections request

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas officials today were awaiting U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton's answer to a request to modify or stop special elections he ordered for 115 state judge posts in nine urban counties.

Bunton ordered nonpartisan elections to be held in May for the district judges, saying the current at-large election system in the nine counties diluted the strength of minority voters.

But state officials argued in a legal motion filed with in Bunton's Midland court Thursday that Texas law includes no method for conducting nonpartisan balloting. They said holding special elections after the regular March 13 primary would cost millions.

The state's chief elections officer, Secretary of State George Bayoud, went one step further, calling for an immediate stay blocking implementation of Bunton's order.

Complying "would not only be totally disruptive to the Texas judiciary but also extremely disruptive to the entire Texas election process," Bayoud said.

Bayoud said former Texas Supreme Court Chief Justice John Hill agreed to represent him in the case after Attorney General Jim Mattox declined to immediately seek the stay.

Mattox, meanwhile, asked Bunton to modify his order by dropping the requirement for nonpartisan May elections.

Mattox said the 115 judicial elections should be conducted as partisan contests in conjunction with the regular Republican and Democratic primaries and November general election.

Mattox said there are too many problems in Bunton's order for the special elections to be carried out. Among them: Bunton's order doesn't specify who pays for the elections, supervises them, prints the ballots or certifies the results.

"There are massive gaps between the court's ... order to conduct nonpartisan judicial elections in 1990 and the statutory framework set forth in the Texas Election Code for conducting elections," Mattox told the judge.

Mattox noted — but didn't recommend — an option. He said Bunton could choose to follow an old system in which candidates would place their names on both the Republican and Democratic primary ballots. Any runoff could then be held in conjunction with the November general election.

Mattox said he may seek a stay blocking the order if Bunton fails to modify his original election order.

Bunton's order applies in nine urban counties — Bexar, Dallas, Harris, Travis, Tarrant, Jefferson, Lubbock, Ector and Midland.

At least two state district judges — Judge Sharolyn Wood of Houston and Judge Harold Entz of Dallas — have filed appeals to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans asking that Bunton's ruling be overturned.

Entz's attorney, David Godbey, said, "Until the 5th circuit decides the system is broke, Judge Bunton shouldn't try to fix it."

Houston lawyer Gene Clements, who represents Wood, said a petition was filed to New Orleans. Wood also wants a stay to block implementation of Bunton's order, Clements said.

Mattox again blasted Republican Gov. Bill Clements for failing to allow the Legislature to consider judicial elections.

Bunton ruled the at-large elections illegal in November, but Clements refused to add the topic to the agenda of a special legislative session held in November and December.

"The clock has been ticking away while Bill Clements twiddled his thumbs," said Mattox, a Democratic candidate for governor.

Responding, Clements said Mattox was "trying to blame others for a case that he lost. It's time he acknowledged the loss and vigorously defended our state's constitution."

Drug czar takes tour of operations along border

By SUZANNE GAMBOA
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO (AP) — Gen. Manuel Noriega's surrender is the strongest evidence yet that the war on drugs is being won, drug czar William Bennett said during a whirlwind tour here.

But local officials told Bennett in a meeting late Thursday evening that they are losing the war on the local front because the majority of their resources are concentrated on the national effort.

Bennett was in El Paso to visit anti-drug operations in this Texas-Mexico border city. He was given a quick demonstration of a random vehicle check using a drug-sniffing dog at the international Bridge of the Americas. He was then whisked through the cargo inspection area of the border checkpoint.

"If anything before had cast any doubt on it (the drug war), all doubt should be removed about how serious this government, this administration, is about pressing this war on drugs," said Bennett, the director of the government's drug control policy office.

The U.S. invasion of Panama Dec. 20 ended Noriega's dictatorship. Noriega surrendered to U.S. troops Wednesday night, ending his 10-day stay in the papal nuncio in Panama. He was taken to Miami, where he faces federal drug trafficking charges.

Board: Weaknesses in property appraisals

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Property Tax Board says an audit's findings of "major weaknesses" in determining property values that are the basis for allocating billions in school funds are exaggerated.

The report released Thursday by the Office of the State Auditor urged the State Property Tax Board enact rules and state lawmakers pass legislation to guarantee the accuracy of property value records.

But the Property Tax Board responded by saying the findings "exaggerate the impact of what they perceive as weaknesses." Many of the auditor's recommendations "do not represent a wise allocation of resources," the board added.

The audit, however, questioned the accuracy of the Property Tax Board's studies which determine each school district's total taxable value. These studies are a key factor in calculating how much each district will receive from the $5 billion Foundation School Program.

The more taxable property value per student, the less the district receives in state aid.

"Our audit revealed major weaknesses in the system used to conduct the annual property value studies, which reduce the reliability of these studies," State Auditor Lawrence F. Alwin said in a letter to the Legislative Audit Committee.

The accuracy of the school district study is dependent on reliable property sales documentation, the audit said, but that data is not available to the Property Tax Board.

The inability to obtain copies of deeds, settlement statements and contracts, "increases the risk of using unreliable information in the annual property value studies," the report said.

Bennett said the general's ouster "sends a signal that a very powerful person could not withstand serious efforts of the United States."

"This is how you wage a war. It's got a lot of fronts. It's got a lot of pieces, but this is how you get there," Bennett said.

Local officials, however, told Bennett that victories in the war on drugs nationally and internationally are coming at the expense of local success.

Police Chief John Scagno appealed to Bennett to provide El Paso with more assistance for local drug interdiction.

"A lot of our resources are directed toward federal problems because so much (drug smuggling) is coming through here," Scagno said. "It seems like almost all of our efforts in the way of narcotics interdiction are aimed toward those big loads that may be headed for Chicago or L.A., and we're not doing that much to help El Paso with the street-corner type of dealer."

Scagno said local drug trafficking is flourishing. "We're going to be aiming at that more, but may be aiming at the nation's problem a little less, unless he wants to send us some of that assistance we need in the way of money or whatever, and then we'll do both," he said.

Mayor Suzie Azar told Bennett

she would like to see $3 billion of the $9 billion allocated for the national anti-drug effort to be given to municipalities, not states, for treatment programs and education projects. She suggested the nation set a standard fee paid to informants because locally, informants are "shopping around" between law enforcement agencies for the most money for their information.

Ms. Azar told Bennett of this city's vehicle theft problem which has risen 94 percent in the past two years. A majority of the stolen vehicles are taken to Mexico and never recovered.

"I would associate it with the large drug industry moving here, because our auto theft crime has increased as the organized drug dealers have moved into Mexico," she said. Federal agencies have been unable to help the city with its auto theft problem, however, because their resources are concentrated on drug interdiction, she said.

Bennett took a helicopter tour of El Paso and Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, across the border; visited the El Paso Intelligence Center, a computerized federal center that gathers intelligence on drug operations; and toured Operation Alliance, an El Paso-based organization that coordinates the anti-drug efforts of federal, state and local agencies along the border. That tour was closed to the press.

He also visited the headquarters of Joint Task Force 6, a newly formed military task force that will be part of Defense Secretary Dick Cheney's plan to use the armed forces to stem the flow of drugs.

Bennett said the quick visit of the border operations would help decide where to send federal anti-drug funds.

"We are of the view that these efforts ought to be increased, that Washington ought to be paying more attention to this part of the world ... and that we have to increase our manpower here," Bennett said.

Bill Nowak, U.S. Customs director of inspections and control division for the El Paso district, said that is what law enforcement officials here were hoping to hear.

Boston citizens upset to learn lies behind man's claim that his wife was killed in shooting

By ARLENE LEVINSON
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — The story behind a grim inner-city shooting that stirred racial fears turned out to be a lie as the storyteller committed suicide after his brother implicated him, authorities said.

The body of Charles Stuart, who became a sympathetic figure as the suburban victim of a Boston shooting that killed his pregnant wife and left him wounded, was pulled from the Boston Harbor.

Stuart's tale to police was that he and his 30-year-old wife, Carol, were robbed and shot by a black man after they left a childbirth class Oct. 23. Stuart, a fur store manager, also reportedly identified a black man in a police lineup as the killer.

The story, Suffolk County District Attorney Newman Flanagan said, "is not true."

Mrs. Stewart, a lawyer, died hours after the shooting. The Stuar's son, delivered by Caesarean section, died 17 days later.

Hospitalized at the time his wife was buried, a letter from Stuart was read at the funeral.

"Now you sleep away from me," he wrote. "I'll never know the feeling of your hand in mine, but I will always feel you. I miss you, and I love you."

Gov. Michael Dukakis and Mayor Raymond Flynn were among those who attended the funeral. Flynn had called Stuart a hero for directing police to his wife by their car phone despite being wounded himself.

"The whole case did the entire city an injustice," Flynn said Thursday.

Blacks also reacted angrily — because the story touched the worst fears among white America about black inner-city violence when it exploded in headlines and on news reports nationwide.

"Black people in particular have to look at it and wonder what hope we have for justice in a country that took this man's lie and made him and his family a symbol of national mourning," said Chuck Turner, director of the Episcopal City Mission in Boston's largely black Roxbury section.

Authorities were theorizing that Stuart's motive in the slaying was to collect life insurance policies taken out on his wife, The Boston Globe and Boston Herald reported today. Both newspapers quoted unidentified sources.

Police said there were reports that Charles Stuart had tested positive for cocaine after the shooting, the Herald reported today.

Stuart, 29, jumped off the 300-foot Tobin Bridge hours after his brother's disclosures to authorities. He left a suicide note in his car.

Flanagan said the case remained active, but he refused to disclose details or the contents of the suicide note.

Flanagan said he ordered police to arrest Stuart in his wife's killing. But police could not find him late Wednesday or early Thursday.

A black man, William Bennett, had been identified in news accounts as a suspect. He was never charged in the Stuart case, and the prosecutor has now cleared him.

Bennett said that was not enough.

"My life and my family's lives have been ruined and no one is willing to take responsibility," he said.

Stuart's 23-year-old brother, Matthew, a paint factory employee who was a pallbearer at Mrs. Stuart's funeral, had long suspected that his brother's account of the shooting was false, according to his attorney, John Perenyi.

He stepped forward with his fears on Wednesday because he was afraid an innocent man might be charged, Perenyi said.

On the night of the shooting, Matthew Stuart said his brother had asked him to meet him near the hospital where the Stuarts had attended the childbirth class, according to Perenyi.

Matthew Stuart said his brother told him he would pass a bag to him through the car window. He said he took the bag, which included a nickel-plated snubnosed revolver, according to Perenyi. The lawyer said Matthew Stuart did not see Mrs. Stewart in the front seat.

A search Thursday of the Pines River in Stuart's hometown of Revere turned up evidence mentioned by Matthew Stuart, including a Gucci bag, wallet, makeup and other personal belongings of Mrs. Stuart. The gun was not found.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Deceased prophets can inspire liberty

Political revolutions usually are sparked by some mass political event. The Boston Tea Party protest against rapacious taxation emboldened American colonists to commit revolution. In recent times, the revolts across the communist bloc have had their own rallying points: the 1979 visit of Pope John Paul II to Poland, the Leipzig demonstrations last fall in East Germany, China's mass protests in Tiananmen Square began with the mass mourning at the funeral of Hu Yaobang, the reform leader who had been deposed by hardliners.

Will the Soviet reform movement find a catalyst in the funeral of its leader, Andrei Sakharov? Recently, after his death last month, at the Luzhenski sports arena in Moscow, at least 80,000 people mourned Mr. Sakharov at his public funeral; thousands more mourned him outside. The day before, 100,000 mourners passed by his body as it lay in state in the Central Palace of Youth. He was even honored by Soviet Chairman Mikhail Gorbachev and the Politburo, who clearly want to stay on the side of the people.

Academician Dmitry Likhachev told the crowd in the sports complex that Mr. Sakharov led opposition to the "one-party system, the state economic monopoly, the anti-popular state socialism, and state imperialism which we have now." He eulogized Mr. Sakharov as "a real prophet in the ancient sense of the word, a man who did everything for the sake of a better future. And like all prophets, he was misunderstood and expelled from his own town." This was a reference to Mr. Sakharov's 1980 exile to Gorky under the regime of Leonid Brezhnev. He was released in 1986 by Mr. Gorbachev.

The vast crowd that filled the arena, despite the foul Moscow weather, held up signs reading: "Forgive us, Andrei Dmitrievich, we should have come out onto the square in 1980"; and "You will always remain a living example to us." As Mr. Sakharov's coffin was carried out of the stadium on its way to burial, thousands of those in the stadium raised their arms in V signs for victory. Some also raised clenched fists.

Since almost all of Moscow's dissidents attended the funeral or wish they had, they now have a unifying symbol to carry them forward. Who knows what may happen in the next several weeks? Even Moscow's hideous winters may not stop them. We may see another Tiananmen Square rally and mass protest — this time in Red Square. This winter, food and fuel shortages are expected to be the Soviets' worst in decades. Mass strikes may break out again in the coal mines and railroads, shaking the economy (and Mr. Gorbachev's regime) to its knees.

Or the protesters may start their planning now, hold meetings all winter, and wait for the spring thaw. Whatever happens, Soviet dissidents and the entire nation now have a dead prophet to rally around. While prophets in their own time are exiled and go unheeded, after death they inspire the people to liberty.

Children's TV act is a bad bill

WASHINGTON — Just before Congress adjourned in November, a House committee approved the "Children's Television Act of 1989." This is a bad bill that breathes of good intentions.

It smacks of government not by government, but rather by governesses. It ought to be dumped.

By way of background: Off and on for the past 25 years, the Federal Communications Commission has fiddled around with regulations on "children's programming." In 1960 the FCC required TV licensees to devote special attention to the supposed needs of children. In 1974 the commission conducted full-blown hearings that led to a formal policy statement on the matter.

In this policy statement the FCC stated its expectation that the industry would observe voluntary guidelines — no more than 12 minutes per hour of commercial advertising on weekday children's programs, and no more than 9.5 minutes per hour on weekends.

Five years later, the FCC tried again, with a proposed rule on the subject. More years passed; membership on the commission changed under the Reagan administration, and in 1984 the commission decided against any mandatory programming quotas or commercial restrictions.

The FCC held that "marketplace forces can better determine appropriate commercial levels." That is officially where we stand now: Licensees are encouraged, but not compelled, to produce more educational programs for children and to limit advertising on the screen.

So much freedom was too much for Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., and members of the House Committee on Energy and Commerce. They put together a mandatory bill (H.R. 1677) to impose compulsory limitations on the broadcast of programs intended primarily for children.

This is the rationalization: "By the time the average child is 18 years old, he or she has spent between 10,000 to 15,000 hours watching television, and has been exposed to more than 200,000 commercials."

This is thought to be bad. The committee believes that total reliance upon marketplace forces is neither sufficient nor justified "to protect children from potential exploitation by advertising or commercial practices."

Says the committee report: "It is well established by scientific evidence that children are uniquely susceptible to the persuasive messages contained in television advertising."

Young children, up to ages 4 and 5, lack the perceptual capabilities to consistently discriminate program from commercial content. An even larger proportion of children, under the age of 7 or 8, "lack the ability to recognize the persuasive intent that necessarily underlies all television advertising."

To correct these evils, the bill would limit commercials on children's programming to not more than 12 minutes per hour on weekdays and not more than 10.5 minutes per hour on weekends.

Licensees would be required to demonstrate that they meet "the educational and informational needs of children" in their overall programming.

The bill is one more piece of nanny-nanny-nanny legislation. The "scientific evidence" cited by the committee report is mostly rubbish. Nothing in the hearings convincingly demonstrates that TV commercials cause harm to children.

Nothing supports such meticulous limits as 12 minutes here and 9.5 or 10.5 minutes there. The time limitations are contrived from whole cloth. Nothing establishes that TV commercials are in any way fraudulent or misleading. They may influence a child to badger his parents for a particular product, but such an irritation is scarcely a basis for federal law.

Four Republican members of the committee believe the bill is an unconstitutional infringement upon freedom of commercial speech. The four are Reps. Bill Dannemeyer of California, Tom Tauke of Iowa, Michael Oxley of Ohio and Joe Barton of Texas. They had by far the better of the argument in the committee's report.

In their view, "the public interest is not served by this heavy-handed, unjustified meddling in the programming discretion of licensees."

Exactly so. Because some of us will do anything for our profession, this observer spent three mornings during the Christmas holidays watching children's TV. The programs were innocuous. The commercials were not excessive. The best of them was an anti-smoking commercial paid for by the government.

My thought is to leave things alone. If parents believe their children are being victimized by the TV set, they have a remedy that is better than a federal law: They can turn the damned thing off.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Jan. 5, the fifth day of 1990. There are 360 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 5, 1896, an Austrian newspaper (Wiener Presse) published the first public account of a discovery by German physicist Wilhelm Roentgen — a form of radiation that became known as "X-rays."

On this date:

In 1781, a British naval expedition led by Benedict Arnold burned Richmond, Va.

In 1895, French Captain Alfred Dreyfus, convicted of treason, was publicly stripped of his rank. (He was later declared innocent.)

In 1925, Nellie Tayloe Ross became the first female governor of a state as she assumed her duties as chief executive of Wyoming to finish out her late husband's term.

In 1933, the 30th president of the United States, Calvin Coolidge, died at his home in Northampton, Mass., at the age of 60.

U.S. losing its edge in energy

Our nation's economy is growing 2 to 3 percent per year.

Our need for additional electricity increases at the same rate.

By next year some of us are going to need electricity we won't have.

Our nation has no energy policy.

The Department of Energy, conscientiously seeking to create a policy, is frustrated by well-intentioned environmentalists who fear what they don't understand.

France has an energy policy. It decrees what's necessary and prescribes what's best.

France gets 70 percent of its electricity from nuclear power plants. French cities compete with one another for the new nuclear plants that assure power and add jobs.

Belgium gets 66 percent of its electricity from nuclear facilities. Belgium has a national energy policy.

Japan gets 30 percent of its electricity from nuclear power plants and is building big new ones.

In the United States we get only 18 percent of our electricity from nuclear sources. We have only 112 nuclear power plants — and we are not yet ordering any new ones.

Paul Harvey

Protesters protest that our power plants pollute. France has enjoyed a significant reduction in emission because there are no emissions from nuclear plants.

Protesters protest disposal of nuclear waste. All our nation's nuclear waste to date could be enclosed in a warehouse of only 100 by 140 feet. It's absurd to imagine that we cannot safely stash that.

If our nation were run by a beneficent dictator he would immediately decree that coal is dirty, oil is vulnerable and renewable resources are inadequate. He would:

1. Prescribe a national energy policy.
2. Balance growth and environment.

3. Expedite the building of new nuclear power plants.

It can be done more expeditiously and at less cost than heretofore.

Both General Electric and Westinghouse are developing new advanced nuclear energy plants.

If bureaucrats will stay out of the way; if new regulations will remain consistent and will be consistently honored by local regulators ...

Within five years we can have the technology ... Within 10 years we can have in place and operating ...

Scores of less cumbersome, less costly, safer and more efficient nuclear-generating plants.

The missing link is you. Public acceptance must come first.

True, all recent surveys reveal that ever more Americans (now 80 percent) recognize the importance of nuclear energy to our future. Yet a handful, with demonstrations and litigation, still obstruct the future of nuclear energy with the same irresponsible passion that a previous generation picketed the first installations of alternating current electricity.

Americans enjoy the most reliable and the most cost-efficient electrical system in the world, but we are losing that leadership by default.

A preview of Soviet events for 1990

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

When the members of Congress reassembled in Washington in January 1990, all the talk was about how to spend the "peace dividend." It seemed clear that the end of the Cold War would enable the United States to cut its military budget by $100 billion a year, or more in the near future.

A minority in Congress (mostly Republicans) wanted to devote the money exclusively to reduction of the massive federal deficit. But the mood among the Democratic majorities in the House and Senate was more generous — if not to the taxpayers, at least to the recipients of federal largess.

"The little people have waited long enough," House majority leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., declared, "now it's their turn." Senate majority leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, put it more diplomatically, as befits a senator. "America has attended to the needs of the world," he asserted, "now it must attend to its own."

It was no surprise, therefore, when sweeping cuts in defense expenditures — phased in over a short period of years — sailed through both Houses by near-veto proof majorities. Bills vastly increasing federal expenditures for education, child care, the drug war and medical assistance passed by generally smaller but still substantial margins. President Bush, determined not get caught between the voters and their new "benefits," signed these measures, albeit reluctantly.

It was, however, during the winter of 1990-91 that the first major riots occurred in Moscow and other Soviet cities, protesting the near-total unavailability of all sorts of essential consumer items, from soap and toilet paper to beans and bread. President Gorbachev insisted that the economy would improve its performance in the near future, and sent troops to quell the riots — a step deplored, but not convincingly condemned, by the Bush administration.

But when the troops refused to fire on the rioters, and in several instances actually joined the protests, the Politburo in Moscow realized the situation was getting seriously out of hand. With Gorbachev's grudging consent, Gen. Pyotr Popov — an infantry commander, aged 56, previously stationed in Minsk — was appointed head of a powerful State Security Force and ordered to quell the riots.

Popov did exactly that — so swiftly and efficiently, and with so little actual bloodshed, that he became an instant hero to the Soviet public. He growled that "stability must be preserved" — a sentiment that echoed in many a Russian breast — but added that the protesters had a legitimate complaint. He hinted that Gorbachev had let the economy spin out of control, to the benefit of a few crooked entrepreneurs, and in several apparently off-hand comments blamed the country's problems on "the Jews." He spoke lovingly of "Mother Russia," and of his desire to serve it.

As we now know, Popov had by mid-summer 1991 obtained the backing of the Soviet military units for a coup ousting Gorbachev and his supporters. Most of the armed forces and police, and large numbers of ordinary citizens, supported Popov with a sigh of relief. They had had enough of perestroika.

By the end of 1991, the Soviet Union was firmly in the hands of a fascist, nationalistic regime, bent on restoring the glory of the Motherland. It had, of course, inherited the nation's huge supply of nuclear missiles, not to mention its stores of chemical and biological weapons, and it was reaching out to like-minded regimes and opportunists all over the world. President Popov showed no particular desire to continue arms control negotiations.

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., was only one of many liberal legislators who were appalled at the turn events had taken. "Where," he demanded to know, "is the Pentagon, now that we need it?"

Right where you and your colleagues left it, Senator — flat on its back.

Keating denies personal involvement in stock decision costing firm profits

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Phoenix millionaire Charles H. Keating Jr., the central figure in a $2 billion thrift scandal, says he doesn't know who made a stock decision that cost his savings and loan up to $12 million in potential profits.

Keating, chairman of American Continental Corp., parent company of Lincoln Savings and Loan Association, broke his self-imposed silence Thursday in an attempt to overturn the government's seizure of Lincoln, the costliest ever S&L failure.

In more than an hour of testimony before U.S. District Judge Stanley Sporkin, Keating described how he used the Irvine, Calif., thrift to finance massive residential projects in the Phoenix area. He was scheduled to finish his testimony today.

Keating has had little to say in public since September, when government regulators filed a $1.1 billion fraud and racketeering civil suit charging he operated Lincoln for his own and his family's benefit. A grand jury in Los Angeles is examining possible criminal charges against Keating.

The government seized Lincoln in April, claiming it was operating in an unsafe and unsound manner.

In November, Keating asserted his constitutional protection against self-incrimination and refused to testify before a House committee investigating the failure.

But Keating sought the court action and, in response to the judge's questions, he readily described his disappointment when the seizure of Lincoln blocked the completion of a large residential project west of Phoenix.

"The saddest thing in my life is that we were brought to this pass," he said.

Keating also is at the center of a Senate Ethics Committee investigation, examining the actions of five senators who accepted more than $1.3 million in contributions from the financier and later met on his behalf with federal regulators.

In Thursday's hearing, government investigators focused on a stock transaction which denied up to Phoenix millionaire Charles H. Keating Jr. arrives at District Court in Washington, D.C., Thursday to testify in his suit against the government.

$12 million in profits to a Lincoln subsidiary and instead benefited American Continental, which provided Keating and his family with millions of dollars in salaries and benefits.

The Lincoln subsidiary sold $1 million of Memorex common stock to Phoenix developer E.C. Garcia. The subsidiary retained an option to repurchase the shares for $4.25 million, should their value skyrocket.

Four months later, in late October 1987, American Continental repurchased the stock from Garcia for $2 million and the subsidiary, headed by Keating's son, Charles H. Keating III, waived its option.

Later, in March and April of 1988, American Continental sold the stock for $13.3 million. Because it waived its option, the Lincoln subsidiary didn't get any of the profits, which would have offset taxpayer losses in the S&L's later failure.

The Memorex transaction is one of four deals the government has cited as examples of "unsafe and unsound" practices that justified its takeover of Lincoln.

The elder Keating testified he approved the decision for American Continental to buy back the Memorex stock from Garcia. But, he said, "I don't believe that I made the decision where to put it. I don't know who made the decision on waiving the (Lincoln's buyback) option."

He said he assumed that was done because federal S&L regulators were pressing Lincoln to get out of stock market investments.

However, Sporkin said, "I can't see the regulators objecting" to retaining the Memorex option, which could only benefit Lincoln.

The younger Keating said he assumed it was in Lincoln's best interest when he signed a document waiving the option. He said he trusted the judgment of senior American Continental officials who negotiated the stock transactions on Lincoln's behalf.

as sympathetic with rightist causes.

Some of the opposition groups have shown more interest than the Communists in joining in a confederation with West Germany, although most have carefully avoided discussion of formal reunification.

The new coalition, called Election Alliance 90, includes New Forum, Social Democratic Party, Democratic Awakening, Democracy Now, the Initiative for Peace and Human Rights, and the United Left.

Detlef Poge of New Forum, the largest opposition group, conceded that the groups are so divided on how the economy should be restored that he doubted they could agree on a single position to push in the elections. "Everyone is so preoccupied with political problems that the economic crisis is being ignored, and that's dangerous," Poge told The Associated Press.

As the opposition stumbles, the Communists' advantage of 40 years in power and strong political organization becomes more apparent.

The Communists still draw more voter support than any other single political party, and they have been stirring voter concern over the issue of a rightist resurgence.

The Communists were stripped of their constitutional mandate to rule on Dec. 1, reducing them to the status of other political forces and transferring the leadership role to the premier instead of the party chief.

New Forum on Thursday proposed that reform supporters start an independent newspaper, to be called The Others, and begin publishing weekly by the end of the month.

ADN said printing facilities, editorial offices and money for operating the newspaper would have to be raised through donations.

East German parties form election coalition

By CAROL J. WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

EAST BERLIN (AP) — Six main pro-democracy groups said they are forming a coalition for elections in May, but the groups are divided over economic and foreign policy issues that will be central to the campaign.

Also Thursday, a parliamentary commission investigating corruption charges against ousted Communist officials reported that doctors were checking Erich Honecker to determine if the country's disgraced former leader could be imprisoned.

Honecker, 77, suffers from complications from gall bladder surgery last August. He will have to be moved from the exclusive residential compound where he was under house arrest after his ouster on Oct. 18 because the complex is being converted to a facility for the handicapped.

ADN, the official news agency, said the police cordon around Honecker's home had been lifted weeks ago and that the government was looking for a suitable place to move him while the corruption investigation continues.

The government also said it wants to revive some intelligence activities following last month's decision to disband the state security agency.

Pro-democracy opposition forces have demanded that no secret police activities be carried out until a new government is seated after the May 6 elections.

In announcing the formation of a pro-democracy coalition, Social Democratic Party leader Steffen Reiche said a united front against the Communists was needed because reform groups were being wrongly cast

Countdown begins for launching of Columbia shuttle

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The countdown was under way today for launching the space shuttle Columbia on a 10-day mission to deploy one satellite and rescue another.

The clock began ticking at 4 p.m. Thursday when NASA test director Jim McKnight issued the traditional call to stations at the launch pad and in the control center.

Liftoff is scheduled at 8:10 a.m. Monday for the first of a record 10 shuttle flights planned in 1990.

The commander is Dan Brandenstein. The other crew members are pilot Jim Wetherbee and mission specialists Bonnie Dunbar, Marsha Ivins and David Low. Brandenstein and Dunbar have made shuttle flights, while the others will be on their first trip.

Once in space they are to deploy a Navy communications satellite and track down and retrieve a 21,400-pound science laboratory the size of a small bus before it falls back to Earth.

A New Beginning

A scene like this says: It's dawn—time for a new beginning, a fresh start.

The calendar says: It's January 1, New Year's Day—time for a new beginning, a fresh start.

That's what the churches in our community offer; that's what they specialize in—new beginnings, fresh starts. Many people have found a new beginning for their life in some church in our town—forgiveness, a new sense of direction, different goals, inspiration and strength to do a better job from day to day. Many people find it worthwhile to make a new beginning at the start of every week—in worship, prayer, and praise every Sunday at church.

Why not start this New Year in church? Why not plan to get the spiritual strength available with a "fresh start" every week by attending church regularly this year? You will find a warm welcome awaiting you and the opportunity for a new beginning in the church of your choice.

"Old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." (11 Corinthians 5:17)

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Lefors First Baptist to show 'Caught' by World Wide Pictures

LEFORS - Caught, the newest film from Billy Graham's World Wide Pictures, will be shown at 7 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 14, at the First Baptist Church of Lefors.

Rev. Lewis Ellis, pastor, says the true-to-life dramatic story portrays the power of one person caring for another.

An 18-year-old American, Tim Devon, goes to Amsterdam in search of the father he has never known. His mother reluctantly admits he was born illegitimately out of a college romance between her and a Dutch exchange student.

In Amsterdam, far from his home, Tim slips into the self-destructive drug culture, but he encounters a single, caring person - a person of deep faith. The person, Rajam Prasad, finds a way to share Christ's message of love, hope and forgiveness in a way that Tim cannot ignore.

Rev. Lewis notes that vast audiences who have witnessed the film's premiere in movie theaters around the world have been gripped by its central focus on their friendship that is forged out of danger and desperation.

Deeply moved by the warmth of the film with its many moments of humor, Billy Graham said, "Caught is certainly the most outstanding film yet produced by World Wide Pictures."

Lewis says Caught rings a challenge to all - in reality, one caring person can have an immeasurable impact on the life of another lonely, disillusioned, desperate person.

Lewis invites the public to attend the Jan. 14 showing in Lefors.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: So I find this law at work: When I want to do good, evil is right with me. For in my inner being I delight in God's law; but I see another law at work in the members of my body, waging war against the law of my mind and making me a prisoner of the law of sin at work within my members. What a wretched man I am! Who will rescue me from this body of death? Thanks be to God - through Jesus Christ our Lord. (Romans 7:21-25 NIV)

We have a pup named Buck. He's half corgi and half brittany spaniel. He's six months old and is as big and awkward as a baby horse.

Bursting with the exuberance of youth, Buck becomes delirious with joy at being let into the house. He goes bounding and crashing through the house, unable to do and see everything at once and incapable of determining where to start.

His excitement shortens his attention span to the point he can't decide to chase the cat or get his belly rubbed - two particular favorites of his.

Good doggy manners are still somewhat unacceptable to Buck. Although he knows certain rooms are forbidden territory, he'll sneak or blatantly charge right in. He understands the command "sit," and he wants to obey and be rewarded; however, compelled to keep moving, he sits then scoots his hind across the floor. He just can't help himself!

Buck is definitely not ready for obedience graduation, but he's learning.

Christians often find themselves in much the same state of agitation. Exuberant in our spiritual youth, we are excited and awed by belonging in God's family. We go bounding and crashing about, unable to do everything at once or even to determine a good starting place.

Our flighty commitment span is additionally shortened by our conditioning for instant earthly gratification. We often find the confines of God's guidance unacceptable. We pay lip service to obedience and sincerely long for the reward of God's approval, but we repeatedly backslide.

Through it all, we like to believe we were so irresistibly compelled, we just couldn't help ourselves.

We're definitely not ready for obedience graduation to a heavenly plateau, but we're learning. Praise God! He's the eternally loving Master!

Religion

'Religious right' and new freedoms in Soviet bloc dominated religion news in the decade of the 1980s

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

In religion, the decade of the 1980s started with a plunge into politics by America's "religious right" and is ending with a burst of new freedoms for believers within the Soviet orbit.

Over the past 10 years, the religion domain also has been jolted with scandals, hit with jail terms for "sanctuary" workers and shaken with conflicts over homosexuality, the Bible and abortion.

The freshening spiritual breath in Eastern Europe emanated in part from the churches themselves and from that surprising Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Capping the trend was the unprecedented friendly meeting this year between Gorbachev and Pope John Paul II.

The Vatican was scorned by previous Soviet leadership as impotent for lack of military power.

But while religious opportunities grew in most Communist areas, even in China despite the brutal anti-democracy suppression last summer, the churches met persistent harassment in Latin America.

The decade there began with the assassination of El Salvador's Roman Catholic Archbishop Oscar Romero in 1980 and ended in 1989 with the murder of six Jesuit priests.

U.S. churches entered a sanctuary movement to shelter refugees fleeing the strife-ridden area.

But the formerly open movement edged underground after several participants were convicted in 1986 of smuggling aliens.

A key religious development of the decade was the emergence into public affairs of the long insular religious right, which had previously denounced such activity as meddling in politics.

The changed mode was sparked by a suave Virginia preacher, Jerry Falwell, who founded Moral Majority in 1979, and led it through 10 years of robust politicking, closing it down only this year.

A conservative tide also swept the Southern Baptist Convention, where fundamentalists gained the presidency in 1979 and held it through 1989, broadening control throughout that biggest Protestant body.

Also, quiet but steady progress continued on the ecumenical front.

Northern and Southern Pres-

1990 designated International Year of Bible Reading

The Bible Church of Pampa is encouraging area residents to join in reading the Bible during 1990, which has been designated as International Year of Bible Reading.

Pastor Roger Hubbard notes that The Bible Guide pamphlet is available at the church, 300 W. Brown. The pamphlet contains a monthly guide with day by day selected passages to read, with Old Testament readings in the morning and New Testament passages in the evening.

Christian leaders, in conjunction with the International Bible Reading Association in Washington, D.C., are encouraging people around the world to read through the Bible this year.

Back to the Bible, publishers of The Bible Guide, also encourages people to join the worldwide Bible reading effort, using the theme, "Thy word is a lamp to my feet, and a light to my path." (Psalms 119:105)

Hubbard says that with the pamphlet as a guide, "You can start reading today and finish the entire Bible a year from now."

For example, in the first month, Old Testament selections are taken from Genesis and Exodus, with New Testament selections from Matthew, continuing month by month to conclude with Malachi and Revelations.

byterians, separated since the Civil War, united in 1983 into the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and three branches of Lutherans united in 1987 into the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America.

Of wider significance, a stream of worldwide, largely favorable responses flowed into the World Council of Churches to a remarkably inclusive "convergence agreement."

Dealing with key issues dividing churches - baptism, eucharist and ministry - the "BEM" document was produced by representatives of Protestantism, Roman Catholicism and Eastern Orthodoxy at a 1982 meeting in Lima, Peru.

The deepening ties were dramatized at a giant largely Baptist rally in Columbia, S.C., where the pope preached on his 1987 U.S. trip, flanked by leading figures of most U.S. denominations.

But he had a tense session with his U.S. hierarchy in Los Angeles, where bishops told him Americans were used to being persuaded rather than told what to believe.

But the Pope insisted dissenters were't good Catholics.

Seeking to tighten Vatican controls, he stripped noted moral theologian Charles Curran of teaching credentials in 1986 and temporarily curtailed the authority of Seattle Archbishop Raymond Hunthausen, restoring it in 1987.

Sex scandals hit two prominent television evangelists, Jimmy Swaggart and Jim Bakker. Bakker resigned his PTL network in 1987 over a sexual tryst and in 1989 was convicted and imprisoned for defrauding contributors.

Swaggart was defrocked in 1988 for sexual misbehavior after he refused to accept disciplines imposed by his denomination, the Assemblies of God.

Reba Rambo and Dony McGuire

Rambo & McGuire to be in concert at Spirit of Truth Ministry Center

Award-winning gospel singers and songwriters Reba Rambo and Dony McGuire will be in concert at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 11, at the Spirit of Truth Ministry Center, 407 W. Foster.

The two had established separate careers as writers, producers, arrangers and dynamic ministry performers before they married and continued their careers together.

Their versatility encompasses nearly every musical style from country and inspirational to rhythm and blues, to the contemporary Top 40 sounds of today.

"Our music is our life," McGuire says. Together, individually and with other writers, they have written well over 1,000 songs, including the Grammy Award- and Dove Award-winning musical, The Lord's Prayer, which was performed by the original cast on the 1982 Grammy Awards Show in a condensed version.

They also have won numerous other awards for their music and performances, including 1978 Best Contemporary Christian Album for Rambo's Reba Lady; 1985 Dove Award for Song of the Year, "Upon This Rock," written by McGuire and Gloria Gaiter; and 1985 Grammy for Best Gospel Song Recorded by a Secular Artist for Donna Summer's recording of "Forgive Me," written by Rambo and McGuire.

Rambo has recorded over 900 songs: solo, with McGuire and with her parents, Buck and Dottie Rambo. They both have written songs with Grammy and Dove Award winners Dottie Rambo, Bill and Gloria Gaiter, Andrae Crouch and two-time Oscar winner Al Kasha.

Since marrying in 1980, the two have been on missionary journeys to Jamaica, South Africa, Zimbabwe, Zambia, Sweden, Germany, Great Britain, Venezuela, Holland, Israel, the West Indies, Greece, Canada, Mexico, Italy, Denmark and others. Recently they have expanded their ministry to include seminars for church leadership and for those who feel a call to the field of writing lyrics and music.

They are frequent guests on the Trinity Broadcasting Network, as well as other national and local television programs, including The Mike Douglas Show, Jerry Lewis Muscular Dystrophy Telethon, 700 Club, and Oral Roberts and Richard Roberts shows.

The public is invited to the concert. Limited seating will be available.

Temple woman brings past to life with vintage clothing collection

By CATHY YOUNG
Temple Daily Telegram

TEMPLE, Texas (AP) — Some people read about history, filling shelf after shelf with books and papers.

Others study history by gathering memorabilia about specific events or people and displaying them.

Linda Shobert of Temple lives history every day in her antique-filled home with her wardrobe of vintage clothing and accessories.

Her closets are filled with Victorian gowns, silk dresses from the 1920s and 1930s, silk-lined day and evening coats, a 1920s negligee with crystal pleats and maribou feathers, and Japanese kimonos "from my oriental period," she said.

But she doesn't simply store the clothes, or bring them out occasionally for display or admiration. Shobert wears vintage clothing, either entire outfits or individual pieces, "for fun" and when she goes out in the evenings.

"It would be impractical to dress completely in vintage clothing," she admits, "so what I like to do is combine selected pieces with modern clothing."

For instance, she will combine a vintage jacket with jeans, or wear an embroidered silk coat over an evening dress, or wear antique jewelry with street clothes — "to make my wardrobe eclectic," she said.

However, Shobert admits that "in my kind of work, I can't wear vintage clothing every day." She is a customer service representative at TU Electric, specializing in marketing and electrical distribution engineering.

Shobert became interested in clothing and fabrics while studying home economics at Texas Tech University in Lubbock, and estimates that she began collecting vintage clothing and accessories in the mid-1970s.

"Someone gave me the first piece of antique clothing," she said, "and I've been collecting it ever since. The first antique piece I bought? It was probably a hat."

She now owns approximately 100 pieces of clothing, 50 hats, 200 pieces of jewelry, and 10 to 15 pairs of shoes, including a pair of satin evening pumps.

A desire to know more about some of her collected pieces led her to study fashion history, which in turn led to general historical studies. She can now explain which world events changed fashions and what people had the biggest effect on the popularity of certain styles. For instance, Joan Crawford popularized the "big shoulder" look in dresses in the 1930s. Shobert has a black silk dress from that era, the heavily padded shoulders further accented with silver beading.

Napoleon Bonaparte, emperor of France, brought his wife Josephine a shawl woven with an interesting pattern from India. The shawls became popular in England and were eventually produced in Paisley, Scotland, gaining a name in the process.

Even Queen Victoria of England affected fashion styles. Small bonnets became popular as head gear, and Victoria's habit of always dressing in black inspired the creation of jewelry with jet stones.

Shobert's jewelry collection began with Victorian-era jet jewelry, but Bakelite (plastic) jewelry from the 20s and 30s now makes up the bulk of the collection.

Other accessories include hat pins, some with jet accents or cloisonne designs; small purses and chatelaines; a few pieces of vintage undergarments, including some silk tap pants from Neiman-Marcus; and a sporran, worn by Scotsmen as a substitute for pockets in dress kilts.

Antique clothing is becoming more difficult to find, Shobert said, because "anything from before the 1880s is either in a museum or up in someone's attic."

"A lot of my clothes are from the Victorian era," she said. Several years ago, the Victorian-era white cotton dresses and blouses were popular, but "they have almost completely disappeared from the market."

In the 19th and early 20th centuries, wealthy women bought their clothes in France, she said. If they were unable to travel to Europe, women could see miniature versions of the fashions on dolls dressed by the French couturiers.

Clothing was not mass-produced until the 1920s, Shobert said. "Everyone seemed to have a dressmaker, or they sewed their own clothes until then," she said.

She owns several beaded dresses from the 1920s, but the thread is too fragile for the dresses to be worn,

(AP LaserPhoto)

Linda Shobert models a Japanese kimono with a backdrop of antique Oriental wall hangings at her home in Temple. Shobert collects vintage clothing and accessories.

"and I don't have the patience to reread the dresses," she said.

Most vintage clothing on the market now dates from the 1930s and 1940s. Shobert likes the 1930s evening clothes, but owns only one piece of daywear: a housedress that she describes as "dowdy, but typical of the day."

She avoids clothes from the 1940s, saying that the shorter skirts and brightly-colored platform shoes remind her of the 1960s. But she does own several felt hats reminiscent of Ingrid Bergman in "Casablanca."

Shobert's collection does not include any clothing made since the 1940s, though 1950s clothes are considered vintage items by some collectors.

She feels that the interest in clothing from the 1950s and 1960s is strong because those decades "were simpler times," she said. "The world was in turmoil during the '70s, and the '80s are becoming increasingly complicated. So we look back to the '50s and '60s to recapture that simplicity."

No matter what the era, evening clothes are easier to find than street clothes, Shobert said, because they were usually made from heavier and more durable fabrics, and of course, were worn less often.

Shobert's love of antiques extends to her home furnishings as well. The living room is filled with oriental furniture, including a lacquered traveling chest, folding screen, and intricately carved Chinese chair; a Japanese kimono screen holds pieces from her collection of kimonos, obis and shawls.

"Most of my oriental pieces date from before the 1920s," she said. "That's when the first 'cultural revolutions' began in China."

Displayed in the sun room are two Chinese silk banners which originally hung in the "Chinese mansion" on North 11th Street in Temple. Dr. and Mrs. J.M. Woodson, who built the pagoda-style house in 1914, obtained six of the tapestries during their travels in the Orient, but only two survived.

More oriental figurines and artwork, all of them authentic, are scattered throughout the house, mingling with furniture from the 1940s and a futuristic projection television. A Hopi Indian dress with sash and a silk brocade panel that once belonged to singer Kate Smith hang side by side on the staircase leading to the sun room.

"It's a big mixture," Ms. Shobert said.

U.S. Air Force Sgt. Derrek W. Woodard, left, son of Winfred and Linda Simmons, recently received special recognition from Colonel Tad Oelstrom, Base Commander, for responsible actions and quick thinking.

During a routine transport assignment, Woodard and co-worker, Kevin Warrens happened upon a serious traffic accident while stationed in Bentwaters England.

Woodard and Warrens were able to reroute traffic and assist accident victims until ambulance personnel could arrive on the scene.

Uncle's 'souvenir' towels bear sticky fingerprints

DEAR ABBY: We are twins. We have an uncle whom we love very much, and we know he loves us. He travels a lot, even to foreign countries, and he always brings us a gift. We like the sweatshirts the best. But he also brings us a towel or two from the various hotels where he stays.

Our mother has told this uncle (he is her brother) that she will not use the towels in her home or anywhere else, and she's embarrassed to give them to any charity because the names of the hotels are on the towels and they are obviously stolen.

He is such a wonderful and honest man in everything else. My mom tried to tell him that she feels guilty even having those stolen hotel towels in her home. But our uncle doesn't look at it as stealing. He calls it souvenir collecting. What do you think?

J.C. AND M.C. IN PHOENIX

DEAR J.C. AND M.C.: When people take things that don't belong to them, it's stealing. Tell your uncle that you appreciate his thoughtfulness, but the towels in hotel rooms are there for the guests to use, not to take home, and you have accepted your last hotel towel.

This reminds me of another pair of twins who, with their high school classmates, went to Sioux Falls, S.D., for a football game. All in the spirit of fun, we rowdy Sioux Citizens snaked through the lobby of a hotel in Sioux Falls, collecting souvenirs such as hotel stationery, pens and ashtrays. My twin and I collected a brass spittoon! When we brought it home, our father demanded that we have it boxed and returned to the hotel in Sioux Falls — and the shipping charges came out of our allowance.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

That ended our souvenir-collecting careers.

DEAR ABBY: I know that you have printed a lot of letters about smoking, but I hope you print this one because it might make a difference in somebody's life.

My mother tried to quit smoking many times, but always without luck. She finally quit forever on Sept. 7. She died.

As a nurse, I stood by her bedside those last few weeks. She was literally dying for a cigarette, so my oldest sister (another smoker) held a cigarette to Mom's lips and commanded her to "suck" so she could have a puff or two.

On the way to the funeral, Sis lit up in my car. I asked her to please not smoke in my car — my husband's health cannot tolerate smoke and I am repulsed by it. We got into a huge fight.

Before Thanksgiving, I invited my brothers and sisters to my home so we could all be together. Sis said she wouldn't come unless I allowed her to smoke. I was grasping for some sense of family since we no longer have parents, so I agreed to let her smoke. Now I wish I'd said, "Fine — stay home — we will do without you."

Abby, our mom and dad both died of cancer. Sis says she won't die like Mom and Dad did — she'll blow her head off first!

It's too late for this holiday season, but next year I'll be facing the same problem. Should I stand my ground, or let the holidays go up in smoke?

SECONDHAND SMOKER, OHIO

DEAR SECONDHAND SMOKER: Stand your ground. And pray for your sister. I will.

DEAR ABBY: This is for your "Now I've Heard Everything" file:

After waiting for two months for some kind of acknowledgment of my check to my granddaughter following her high school graduation, I telephoned her, asking if she had received it.

Her reply: "For goodness sakes, Gram, all you have to do is look through your canceled checks from the bank!"

ALBANY GRANDMOTHER

DEAR ABBY: I don't have a problem; I am writing to thank you from the bottom of my uterus for printing that wonderful letter from Ellie and Jack suggesting what not to say to an infertile couple.

My husband and I have heard all those remarks, and many more equally inane and hurtful. Thank God, someone is finally speaking up. Maybe people will listen. And if they must say something to infertile couples who are trying desperately to have a child, let it be, "I'm sorry." ANOTHER INFERTILE COUPLE

NFL's divisional playoffs heat up this weekend

Sore elbow plagues Kosar as Bills roll into Cleveland

By CHUCK MELVIN
AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND — Bernie Kosar learned last year that an NFL quarterback frequently has to play with pain. It's a lesson that seems to be paying off now.

Kosar, who missed most of the first half of the 1988 season because of a sprained right elbow, bruised the same elbow on Nov. 12 during a victory at Seattle and he admits that his arm hasn't been the same since.

The injury began a string of 20 straight quarters without a touch-down pass, but Kosar pulled himself together in time to lead Cleveland to victories in its last two games, clinching his fourth AFC Central Division title in five years.

The elbow, he says, probably won't heal until he can rest it completely after the season, although having last week off and practicing in warm weather in Dallas this week was a help.

"The elbow's been about the same the last couple weeks," Kosar said as the Browns prepared for Saturday's playoff game against Buffalo. "I think the main thing with it is, I'm more accustomed now to the way it's feeling ... and the week off did help."

The injury, and the offensive slump that followed it, opened Kosar's eyes to the fickle nature of even his most devoted fans. A native of Boardman, about 60 miles from Cleveland Stadium, he had been revered by fans since the Browns made an elaborate trade with Buffalo in 1985 to earn the right to select him in a supplemental draft.

When the Browns scored a total of 37 points over four games in November and December, however, Kosar found himself being booed loudly, and fans began chanting for reserve Mike Pagel to replace him. In a television station's poll, Kosar was favored over Pagel by only a 51 percent to 49 percent margin.

"I block out the fans during a game, whether you're home or away, because you can't get too caught up in that kind of situation," Kosar said. "You've got enough to concentrate on on the field."

Though Coach Bud Carson's support of Kosar ebbed — Carson waited until game day before naming Kosar as his starter one week — owner Art Modell said he never lost faith in his $15 million quarterback.

"I think for a while there he was hurting more than he would let anybody believe," Modell said. "I think he's a great quarterback, a born leader, and given the right supporting cast, he can continue to win for this team for years to come. I have not lessened my appraisal of Bernie Kosar one bit."

Pagel mostly kept quiet during the controversy, and though there was reportedly some private grumbling in the locker room, the situation never escalated the way the bickering among Buffalo's offensive players did this year.

Cleveland fullback Tim Manoa waits for a hole to open up during practice earlier this week in Dallas. (AP Laserphoto)

"Look at how many people wanted to change quarterbacks," receiver Reggie Langhorne said. "But we still stuck behind B.K. because we've all been in slumps ourselves. We've all been banged up before. We knew he was giving all he had to give."

Despite the slump, Kosar completed 59 percent of his passes for 3,533 yards. His rating of 80.3 ranked fourth in the AFC, a notch below the 86.2 of Buffalo's Jim Kelly.

49ers shooting for repeat as Super Bowl champions

By DAVE CARPENTER
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — His teammates jokingly call Mike Sherrard "Jesse James" for "stealing" the San Francisco 49ers' money without playing. On Saturday, the long-sidelined wide receiver apparently will get a chance to be the good guy for a change.

Coach George Seifert said he expected to activate Sherrard today as the 49ers add a wild card to their offensive aces in what's likely to be a high-scoring NFC playoff game against the Minnesota Vikings in Candlestick Park.

"I think maybe I can surprise them. They don't have any film on me," said Sherrard, the Dallas Cowboys' 1986 first-round draft pick who has been idled for three years by a twice-broken right leg.

If the 49ers win, they'll be the first defending Super Bowl champion in six years to make it back to a conference title game. They'll also be a victory closer to becoming the first repeat champion since the Pittsburgh Steelers a decade ago.

"We want to get to the Super Bowl," 49ers center Jesse Sapulu said. "We are a team that is within three weeks of making history. It's very important to them, and even more important to us."

That last point is more than arguable in Minnesota, where the Vikings have had Super Bowl expectations piled high on them ever since trading a chunk of their future for running back Herschel Walker. They haven't been in the Super Bowl since the last of their four unsuccessful appearances 13 years ago.

Vikings coach Jerry Burns makes no bones about his team's strategy in the third straight January matchup with the 49ers in Candlestick. Anthony Carter was the star two years ago with a playoff-record 227 receiving yards in a 36-24 Minnesota victory. Carter's 49ers counterpart, Jerry Rice, caught three touchdown passes in San Francisco's 34-9 runaway last year.

"I think the philosophy of both teams is to come out with both guns blazing and just see what happens," Burns said. "We're not stupid. We try to get the ball to Anthony Carter."

Sherrard would love to be the third straight wide receiver to steal the show. It will be the first playoff game of his career, although he said Thursday, "I'd be excited even if it was a preseason game."

The 26-year-old Sherrard, born in Oakland and raised in Chico, has been listed as physically unable to perform since returning to the Bay area last March 30 when the 49ers signed him to a $200,000 contract as an unprotected free agent.

His leg is "96 to 97 percent" healed, but he became a candidate for the team's fourth wide receiver spot only because Terry Greer is yet to recover from a Nov. 12 knee injury.

The fleet, 6-foot-2 Sherrard was the 18th player selected in the 1986 draft, acquired with a pick the Cowboys obtained, ironically, from the 49ers. He caught 41 passes for an 18.2-yard average and five touchdowns as a rookie.

During training camp before the 1987 season, he sustained a compound fracture of two bones in the lower portion of his right leg.

He broke the leg again in March 1988 while jogging on a Southern California beach. The Cowboys didn't include him among their 37 protected roster players after last season, and he's spent this season in rehabilitation.

Next two games important for Lady Harvesters

By SONNY BOHANNAN
Sports Editor

Pampa's postseason destiny hangs in the balance over the next two days as the Lady Harvesters prepare for back-to-back district games against Dunbar and Frenship.

In fact, this weekend will go a long way toward clearing up the District 1-4A picture for a host of teams. The Lady Harvesters enter tonight's game at Lubbock Dunbar with a 2-3 record, and they are tied for first place with 6-0 records.

However, the second and third place teams also have three losses apiece. Only Levelland and Randall have fewer losses, and they are tied for first place with 6-0 records.

In short, Pampa is still very much in the race, and with 11 league games remaining, virtually anything can happen.

"This thing is likely to be in a topsy turvy mess after this weekend," said Pampa coach Albert

Nichols. "This dadgum district is just like it's always been, and if we can get a little help, we could throw this thing back into a race for all of us."

But before the Lady Harvesters can expect any help from the other district teams, they've got to help themselves, and that means beating Dunbar and Frenship tonight and Saturday.

"We don't want to turn this district over to the first and second teams," Nichols said. "We're gonna have to handle our business with Dunbar and Frenship, then see if we can't go out and take care of teams like Levelland and Randall."

"But we can't let these teams like Dunbar and Frenship sneak up on us."

Tonight, the Lady Harvesters will try to boost their league record back up to .500. They enter the game at 6-8 overall after losing two out of three games at last weekend's Slaton Tournament.

"Even though we came back with one win and two losses, we played three good teams," Nichols said. "We accomplished some things while we were there, like how to take care of a lead."

Pampa's victory was a 63-60 decision over Dalhart. Its two losses came against Sweetwater (50-49) and Tulia (76-70), despite leading by a significant margin in both games.

"We ran up a 14-point lead on both Sweetwater and Tulia, but they came back and beat us," Nichols said. "I know that good teams are gonna be hard to stop when they get rolling, but whenever we do that, we're telling ourselves we're not a good team. We have to go out and put people away."

"But we're working on that, and we'll get back into district play and see what we've learned."

The Lady Harvesters pay a visit to Dunbar tonight at 6:30 p.m. The Lady Panthers are still searching for their first league victory, and at 0-6, they are the only remaining team without a win in 1-4A.

Pampa then hosts Frenship on Saturday at 5 p.m. The Lady Tigers, who play Dumas tonight, are currently 2-4 in district play, one-half game behind Pampa. Overall, they're 4-12.

Frenship is a young squad with no seniors at all in the program. Shelley Rich, a 5-7 junior, and Daisha Lawlis, a 5-11 freshman, are the top scorers for the Lady Tigers. Rich is averaging 8.7 points per game, while Lawlis is right behind with 7.2. The freshman is also the top rebounder, pulling down 6.9 a game.

"We're gonna put a lot of young, inexperienced players in The Pit, and that's scary," said Frenship coach Sam Tipton. "We've got one pretty good ballhandler (Kerry Hudgens, 5-3, jr.), but other than that we're not blessed with great speed. I

Harvester grapplers fall to Caprock, 65-9

Pampa travels to Liberal today

AMARILLO — The Harvester wrestling squad won two individual battles but lost the war, 65-9, to Caprock Thursday night at the Longhorn Activity Center.

Chris Archibald and Bill Larkin picked up a pair of victories to pace the Harvesters, who fell to 0-7 on the season. Caprock improved its record to 4-3.

Archibald, wrestling in the 171-pound division, pinned Patrick Bray 31 seconds into the second period to pick up six of Pampa's nine points. Archibald was also victorious in the Harvesters' last meeting with the Longhorns, when he defeated Brian Reyes, 8-5.

Larkin notched a 10-7 decision over Sabian Lopez in the 152-pound weight class. Larkin also defeated Lopez just over a month ago when the two met in the 160-pound class.

Three other Harvesters lost by decision, including 125-pounder John Pacheco, 135-pounder Frank Jara, and heavyweight Phillip Sexton. Pampa forfeited three matches, and lost the remainder by pin.

"I thought we had several that did real well," said Pampa coach Dennis Cavalier. "I saw some good improvement there."

Tonight, the Harvesters travel to Liberal, Kan., for a two-day tournament featuring 17 teams from four states.

Ten Kansas teams will compete in the tourney, including Colby, Dodge City, Garden City, Goodland, Hays, Hutchinson, Pratt, Wichita East, Thomas Moore Prep and Ulysses.

Texas will be represented by teams from Pampa, Amarillo High, Tascosa, Palo Duro and Caprock. Wrestlers from Hobart, Okla., and Tucumcari, N.M., round out the field.

The tourney will cover two days, beginning with the first round today. The finals are scheduled for Saturday.

Results from Thursday's matches against Caprock are on Scoreboard, page 12.

Norman opens new decade with first-round 66

CARLSBAD, Calif. — Greg Norman moved into the decade of the '90's looking for a 30 or 31 on the back nine.

"I'm glad the '80's are gone," said Norman, who made a habit of losing golf's major titles in imaginative fashion.

Those include the miracle shots of Larry Mize in the 1987 Masters and Bob Tway in the 1986 PGA, a flock of near-misses in the Masters and playoff losses to Fuzzy Zoeller in the 1984 U.S. Open and Mark Calcavecchia in the 1989 British Open.

"Coming into the '90's is like a breath of fresh air," Norman said. "I'm looking forward to it."

"I figure I'm on the back nine of my career now," the 34-year-old Australian said Thursday after he'd rallied from an early double-bogey for a 66 in the first round of the first event of the decade, the Tournament of Champions.

"I played the front nine in 32 or 33. I won 50-odd tournaments around the world in the '80's. Now I'd like to get a 31 or 30 on the back nine," he said, "and win another 50-odd tournaments."

Suns surpass .500 with victory over Mavericks

By WALTER BERRY
AP Sports Writer

PHOENIX (AP) — It took one trade, one fractured cheekbone, two hamstring pulls, 14 stitches and 20 games to get the Phoenix Suns above the .500 mark again.

Tom Chambers scored 35 points and the Suns shot a torrid 75 percent from the field in a lopsided second period to beat the Dallas Mavericks 119-102 Thursday night.

The win was the second straight and fifth in the last six games for the Suns, now 14-13 and sporting their first winning record since being 4-3 on Nov. 18.

In the ensuing two months, Kevin Johnson strained his hamstring and missed eight games, five resulting in losses; Armon Gilliam was traded to Charlotte for Kurt Rambis and two draft picks; and Chambers suffered a fractured left cheekbone, a 14-stitch cut under his left eye and slightly pulled his right hamstring.

"We got to keep hanging tough," said Chambers. "We're starting to come around. We're starting to put good games back-to-back, which we didn't do earlier in the season."

"It's only two games. We can't get over-confident," said Jeff Hornacek, who had 24 points and 11 assists. "We have a long way to go. We've got to do this on a consistent basis, do it every night. If we can do that, we'll be fine. But these two wins back-to-back gives us the confidence that we can go out there every night and do it."

Phoenix, coming off an impressive 113-99 win Tuesday night at New York, trailed Dallas 27-23 after Rolando Blackman's three-point play and jumper 1:08 into the second period.

Chambers, who had 11 of his 19 first-half points in the second quarter, hit a hook and a layup during a 14-0 run for a 37-27 lead 6:55 before halftime.

Hornacek and Chambers had five points apiece in a 12-2 spurt to make it 51-34, with 2:47 left in the half. The Suns settled for a 57-42 lead at intermission after making 12 of their 16 field goals in the decisive second period.

The Mavericks, hitting just 6 of 17 field goals in the second quarter, trailed 88-66 after the third period.

Dallas opened the fourth with a 6-0 run and then got eight points from Brad Davis and seven from Derek Harper, closing to 96-83 on Davis' jumper with 7:27 to play.

But Chambers had two free throws and a 3-pointer in a 7-2 spurt to put the Suns ahead 103-85 with 5:23 left and they coasted from there.

Chambers finished with 13 rebounds and made 14 of his 20 field goals. Hornacek had 15 of his points in the second half while Eddie Johnson scored 11 of his 19 after halftime.

Kevin Johnson added 12 points and 11 assists as Phoenix improved its home record against Western Conference competition this season to 8-1.

"They're on a roll right now. They're really clicking," Dallas coach Richie Adubato said. "Chambers and Hornacek shot the ball terrific. Whenever we got back in the game, they lit it up."

"We couldn't do anything to stop Chambers and Hornacek. They were shooting too well," Harper said. "With Kevin Johnson back in their lineup now, I think it will show that their bad start was a fluke. Now, we have to regroup."

Despite winning eight of their last 12 games, the Mavericks (16-14) are off to their worst start since going 14-15 in 1985-86.

Blackman paced Dallas with 23 points while Harper had 21, Perkins 19 and Davis and James Donaldson 15 each.

Adrian Dantley, the NBA's 10th-leading all-time scorer with 22,882 points, was held scoreless in 19 minutes by the Suns.

Dallas forward Sam Perkins (44) reaches out to block the shot of Phoenix's Tom Chambers Thursday night.

Motta takes Kings coaching job

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The Sacramento Kings today named veteran NBA coach Dick Motta as new head coach, effective Saturday.

The Kings, currently third worst in the National Basketball Association with a 7-20 record, said the 58-year-old Motta, who retired from the Dallas Mavericks in 1987 after 19 seasons as an NBA head coach in Chicago, Washington and Dallas, would take the reins of the Kings after tonight's game against Denver.

The team said Jerry Reynolds would coach his final Kings game tonight, with Motta observing, and that Motta would take over coaching duties for Saturday's game against the Portland Trail Blazers.

During his NBA career, Motta had 808 wins and 750 losses. He won one coach-of-the-year award.

Norman

He took a step in the right direction with the 6-under-par effort that gave him a share of the lead in the winners-only event that produced a decided Australian aura.

Norman shared the top spot with another Australian, Ian Baker-Finch, and Paul Azinger. A third Australian, Wayne Grady, was tied for fifth.

In a separate but simultaneous competition for 20 winners from the Seniors Tour, a fourth Australian, Bruce Crampton, shared the top spot with Bobby Nichols at 71.

The weather half a world away could be a contributing factor to the Australian success Norman suggested.

"I'm a little rusty," Norman said. "But everybody who lives in this country is in the same situation. The weather all over the country hasn't been very good lately and nobody has been out doing any practicing."

"But then you take Wayne and Ian, they still live in Australia and it's summer there and they've been playing in 100 degree temperatures at home," Norman said. "That makes a difference."

Norman had to overcome a second-hole lapse where he was bunkered in three and later three-putted — "the fastest, easiest seven I've had in the '90's," he said — to gain his share of the top spot. He managed it with a burst of four birdies in five holes and a 35-foot birdie putt on the 17th hole.

Baker-Finch got his approaches within 10 feet of the hole 11 times in what he called "my best round since winning at Colonial" last summer. Azinger got his share of the top spot with a 9-iron shot that set up a 3-foot birdie putt on the 17th.

PGA champion Payne Stewart was one stroke off the lead with a 67. Grady was at 69 with Mark O'Meara, Tim Simpson, Scott Hoch, Mark McCumber and David Frost.

The Seniors, generally, had trouble with the 7,022-yard length of the La Costa course.

Home teams favored in NFL playoff games

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

Now the fun starts, wall-to-wall football and all competitive games. Here's how the weekend looks.

SATURDAY

Minnesota (+7) at San Francisco

Bill Walsh used to say the 49ers were always heavier favorites than they should be because San Francisco is near Las Vegas.

Wrong. San Francisco is favored because it's good and it knows how to win — don't give Joe Montana the ball with any time left and a workable margin.

And San Francisco is favored because Minnesota is one of the two most underachieving teams in the league. The other is Houston and we know what happened to the Oilers last weekend.

49ERS, 24-16

Buffalo (+31/2) at Cleveland

There's nothing to indicate the Bills aren't still bickering among themselves, the victory over the moribund Jets notwithstanding. The one plus — both Cornelius Bennett and Shane Conlan are healthy together, a rarity this year.

But Kevin Mack seems healthy for the Browns and that's the key — it provides a running game that Cleveland lacked most of the season. If Eric Metcalf's foot comes around and Bernie Kosar's elbow is OK, that's a bigger plus.

BROWNS, 17-7

SUNDAY

L.A. Rams (+31/2) at N.Y. Giants

This spread makes little sense if you take into account that the Rams have scored 76 points against the Giants in their last two meetings, more than the Cardinals, for example, have against New York in SIX games.

It makes more sense if you take into account that in the Giants' last three home games, the wind-chill has averaged minus-10 and the wind around 25 mph. By that measurement, the windless 35 degrees Jim Everett had in Philadelphia is tropical.

GIANTS, 19-17

Pittsburgh (+8) at Denver

The Steelers are a nice story. The Steelers are also in on a pass — they've won six of seven, but the only good team they've beaten is Houston, which died in Cincinnati three weeks ago.

You can win in Mile High Stadium if you're a tough, experienced NFC team like the Giants and Eagles, the only two visitors to win there this season. A young, emerging team like the Steelers, who lost at Mile High 34-7 Nov. 5, isn't likely to.
