Groups offer free TVs, landscaping to Pampa schools

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Trustees for the Pampa public school district received two late Christmas presents Tuesday night when groups presented separate plans that could put televisions in virtually every class at the high school and middle school and landscape the high school at no charge to the district.

Both offers, which jointly would have cost taxpayers a minimum of $85,000 if paid out of school budgets, were heartily accepted.

Blake Holton, a representative of Channel One, an educational network owned by Whittle Communications and financially sponsored in part by Time Inc., said the company would install televisions and VCRs in almost every room at the two schools for daily viewing of a 12-minute news show aimed at teenagers.

Sponsorship of the program comes from the network selling two minutes of commercial time a day to advertisers under strict criteria. It allows schools to have technology that would have otherwise cost a minimum of $50,000 to purchase and install, Holton said.

"The reason most kids don't watch the news is they don't see it as relevant," Holton told board members. "We want to make it relevant."

A sample clip showed young adults as anchors covering stories that would appear on any national news broadcast, but slanted toward young people.

Holton's claim that extreme care is taken in presenting both sides of any issue was backed up by the sample broadcast. It covered the Alaskan oil spill involving the Exxon Valdez as one of its stories.

Commercials in the sample clip included an advertisement by Ford encouraging students to stay in school, a Snickers plug and a message for a mascara.

Holton and PISD officials reviewed advertising guidelines which prohibit messages for abortion clinics, religious groups, alcoholic beverages, contraceptives, firearms, ammunition or fireworks, gambling, drug-related paraphernalia, lotteries, R- or X-rated movies, prescription drugs, any type of feminine hygiene products, political candidates or groups, solicitation of funds or any type of tobacco products.

Three pages of the contract between the PISD and Channel One are dedicated to what type of advertising is permissible.

The standards appeared to be much stricter than for ads teenagers see on commercial television presently. Channel One officials point out that some districts have decided to use the commercials in consumer education courses to study how advertisers get their messages to the public.

In other action, members of the Class of 1944 also brought tidings of great improvements to trustees when they sought permission to spearhead a project estimated at $30,000 for massive landscaping of the high school with trees, bushes and shrubs.

"I was here last summer at the cemetery across the street seeing where my parents were buried," said Jerry Kerbo of Houston. "I walked back across the street (to the high school) and it was as barren as when the school was built back in 1940."

Kerbo said he flew to Pampa to help create interest within the Class of '44 for making landscaping the campus a class project.

"The more we got into it, the more we decided the better way to go was a comprehensive plan," Kerbo said, adding that such a program would take great cooperation from other classes and the community.

Kerbo said he had talked with others who graduated in the '40s and that they remembered original plans for the building including landscaping which was never added when the building was completed.

"I think you have given us a vision," Curry told Kerbo and other Class of '44 members present. "I think this is outstanding."

Griffith said funds would be kept in a school account and overseen by the Class of '44. Kerbo and Mike Fraser of Pampa, who will oversee landscaping, said they believe enough money can be raised to start the project in October.

They both said they want all the money raised before landscaping begins, rather than doing the project a little at a time.

Kerbo was among those who said landscaping should be completed in time for the campus' 50th anniversary in 1991.

In explaining how Channel One will come into the two schools, Holton said, "We'll come in and set up the satellite dish and a TV for every 23 students. There are numerous things you can do from there."

He pointed out that except for the 12 minutes a day spent watching the Channel One news show, teachers could use the TV for any other

City commissioners considering extra charges from auditing firm

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners officially learned during a work session Tuesday afternoon that it will be billed an additional $25,000 for work on the 1989 audit, which was awarded at a bid of $18,900.

The auditing firm, Peat, Marwick and Main Co. of Amarillo, was represented by Roger Jones and Ken Cochran at the work session. Jones and Cochran spent about an hour explaining the problems the firm had encountered while conducting the annual audit. They said an additional 1,012 hours was used above the estimated 600 hours.

Many of the problems relate to the prior auditing firm of H.V. Robertson & Co., according to the present firm.

Cochran said, "None (of the problems) represent impropriety or someone intentionally doing something wrong."

Several city commissioners expressed concern that the firm had not first come to the City Commission with the problem as is required in its agreement with the city.

Mayor Richard Peet asked, "At what point did you determine it was going to take more time?"

Jones responded, "I think we were guilty of some over-optimism ... Around Thanksgiving I called John (Horst, city finance director) and told him a lot of accounts didn't reconcile with the prior year balances."

Jones said the City Commission could and was encouraged to verify with the city staff on how much time the firm spent working on the audit.

"We were just trying to get the thing resolved. We thought this was being communicated (by city staff)."

However, City Manager Glen Hackler said the firm had made a promise to the City Commission to contact the City Commission if there was a problem. Hackler quoted a document from the firm as saying, "However, if we believe our fee will be higher, we will certainly discuss the matter with you before proceeding with the work."

The city manager said he first learned there were problems about two or three weeks ago, but at that time he believed the increase in fees would be around $3,000.

Cochran said it was not a "reasonable assumption" on the accountant firm's part to foresee the problems. Cochran said the firm had the city's contract from 1978 or 1979 until 1984, and so it had a prior reference point on which to base its bid of $18,900.

"I've got $117,000 in this audit," Cochran said. "I had guys here seven days a week trying to get this mess cleaned up. It's not a pleasant situation for us. We certainly don't think we brought on these problems."

Cochran said he was significantly discounting the costs of the project in order to come to a fair agreement with the city, thus the $25,000 additional charge.

"I'm sure you're not happy with this. I'm not happy with this," Cochran said.

Commissioner Gary Sutherland said, "One of our problems with this is we had no knowledge."

Hackler told commissioners he had no idea the additional charge would be $25,000. "It was not anticipated in my mind we were talking $25,000."

Cochran said, "While we may have erred (in not coming to the commission), we didn't do it with any malice aforethought."

The mayor said he was curious as to why the city

City Commission takes first steps in implementing new landfill fees

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

The Pampa City Commission took the first steps Tuesday evening to implement new charges for private use of the city's landfill.

By a unanimous vote, the commission approved the first reading of an ordinance that modifies the landfill fees. The amendment was suggested by City Manager Glen Hackler to coincide with the "adjusted" commercial sanitation rates that recently went into effect.

Hackler said the prior ordinance was not being enforced and it did not set charges for cars, pickups and trailers. Area cities were surveyed during the study of implementing new rates, with the lowest fee charged in those cities being $3.

The city manager said it was his belief that the users should help pay the costs of operating the landfill.

A minimum fee of $1 will be charged, if the second reading of the ordinance is approved. The second reading is scheduled for the next City Commission meeting. Under the proposed ordinance, the following fees would apply:

- Automobile - $1.
- Pickup, less than one-ton - $2.
- Trailer of eight-foot in length or less - $2.

- Truck, 1- to 2 1/2-ton - $3.
- Trailer of more than eight foot, but not including a float - $3.

- Truck, 2 1/2- to 5-ton - $6.
- Truck, more than 5 tons - $10.
- Cement truck, dry - $6.
- Chipper truck - $9.

• Large van-type trucks and floats and any other type of vehicles not within the above classifications - $15.

The fees for the landfill would be paid in cash upon entry into the landfill, according to the proposed ordinance.

Gray County Commissioners' Court, through County Judge Carl Kennedy, hand delivered a letter to Hackler Tuesday afternoon expressing the county's concern with the enforcement of the ordinance.

In the past, when the ordinance was enforced, the county had problems with people dumping trash on county roads to avoid paying the fees at the landfill.

Although the concern was expressed, Kennedy said the Commissioners' Court had no alternative proposal to offer to the city's escalating landfill costs.

Hackler said violators of the landfill ordinance would be prosecuted and every attempt would be made to find out who dumped the trash.

Hackler also said if it is found the burden is simply being dumped on the county, the City Commission should consider looking at the effects of the ordinance in about 60 days after it goes into effect for re-evaluation.

Mayor Richard Peet pointed out that residential sanitation rates were not raised during the last year and this would help pay for the costs of operating the landfill.

"We're really pleading to the citizens, 'We need your help.' The user fee is not an across-the-board fee, but one that applies to those who use the landfill," Hackler said. "If we get help from the citizenry, we're looking at a one dollar or two dollar increase in the future, instead of doubling (sanitation fees)."

Beginning Jan. 1 of this year, the city is also now required to pay the Texas Department of Health 50 cents per ton of garbage. Hackler said the city is paying about $1,000 a month under the new requirement. Hackler said the city estimates the new charges in the ordinance will bring about $20,000 into the city coffers.

According to the city's survey, the cities of Hereford and Dumas both charge a minimum $3 fee. Amarillo charges by the cubic yard, with the smallest charge being $4 for 0-3 cubic yards. Plainview charges a minimum of $3.75 for the use of its landfill.

In other business, the commission deferred action on taking down a traffic signal at Faulkner and Alcock (Texas 152) following a request by resident Jack McAndrew.

The Texas Department of Highways and Transportation has declared the traffic signal as "not warranted" by a traffic survey. If the signal is removed, the Highway Department would place school crossing flashers at the intersections of Sumner and Alcock and Banks and Alcock at no cost to the city. The school crossing guard would be retained at the school crossing at Alcock and Faulkner.

The city's Traffic Commission recommended that the traffic signal be taken down.

However, McAndrew said he had talked to the school and it did not want to lose the traffic signal, and he did not want the signal taken down.

"This thing has been batted around for 10 years or more. We don't want to lose the traffic light as business people," said McAndrew, whose business is located at 1019 Alcock.

McAndrew said if it took petitions to keep the traffic signal, he would do the legwork in seeing that the city got the petitions.

After learning the school had not been consulted for its opinion on taking down the traffic signal, the City Commission decided to defer action.

This morning, Horace Mann Principal Tom Lindsay said he would consider the safety of the children to be of first importance in the consideration of taking down the traffic signal.

"I would hate to give it (traffic light) up," Lindsay said.

In the last 10 years, Lindsay said the subject of removing the light has come up several times, and each time he is contacted by parents who voice concern in the matter.

The City Commission also deferred action on an ordinance establishing a school crossing zone on Alcock from Sumner to Banks and setting a school zone speed of 25 mph when the warning lights are flashing.

In other business, the City Commission:

- Unanimously accepted the lowest bid meeting city specifications on a tractor/backhoe/front-end loader for the water distribution department. The bid, from Yellowhouse Machinery was for $36,456.

- Heard from resident Kim Jones, who requested the city consider a non-smoking ordinance in Pampa. Jones, who with her husband Craig operates the Northgate Inn, said she believed the city would benefit from an economic and health standpoint if such an ordinance was implemented.

- "It's OK if you want to smoke, but please, not on me and my food and my child," Jones said.

- The mayor said the city has been gathering data from other cities for a study on such a non-smoking ordinance and said other residents had been before the commission with similar requests.

- Unanimously approved on second readings ordinances relating to permits for wrecker services and the allowing of parking and/or standing on the east side of Duncan Street between 19th and 20th streets in front of Austin School.

- Unanimously approved a list of disbursements for November and December 1989.

- Unanimously approved authorizing the mayor to execute a supplemental agreement with Roberts County relative to fire service. The agreement was approved by Roberts County Commissioners' Court on Jan. 8.

- The agreement changes the rate of false alarms from $750 a call to $150 per call. It also calls for notification to the Roberts County Sheriff's Office by the city of the nature of any response and the location of the emergency.

education purpose they deemed fitting.

Board members agreed that TV has replaced film strip or movie projectors as the primary way to use audio/visuals in the classroom.

Pampa High School has only five TVs on the entire campus, said Principal Daniel Coward. Dawson Orr, assistant superintendent, said the middle school has about that many TVs or maybe even less on their campus currently.

"The only cost is 12 minutes a day," noted Dr. Harry Griffith, superintendent of schools. "I can find no reason to say 'no' unless the two minutes of commercials bother you."

Trustees pointed out that commercials are currently seen in school annuals, on book covers and on boards around campuses.

Board President John Curry said, "It was not that long ago we discussed how to bring TVs into the classrooms and had no idea how or when we could ever afford it. Here's someone offering to come in and do it for free. I don't see how we can turn them down."

LVN group to meet Thursday

The Pampa division of the Licensed Vocational Nurses Association of Texas will meet at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Energas Room.

Sonny Luther from Austin, director of the LVN Association of Texas, will speak on the new development regarding licensing of LVNs and the requirement of yearly C.E.U.'s to maintain a license. Luther will present the Panhandle with its new charter.

Holton admitted the reason advertisers are willing to underwrite such an expensive nationwide project is they get a captive target audience for their two minutes of product announcements.

However, school officials said the commercials are milder than what teen-agers are exposed to on regular TV and are surrounded by a 10-minute newscast that is specially designed to improve a student's grasp on cultural literacy, current events, geography and critical thinking skills.

Holton said schools that are willing to invest in a camcorder can do school announcements through the TVs by pumping a live picture and sound feed through the school via the Channel One system.

In addition to Channel One, teachers will also have access to a station which feeds public television programs designed for the classroom and another channel which is geared to professional development for educators.

Holton said the school was free to connect any other educational satellite or cable system to the televisions they desired or to use the VCRs to show any other educational tapes.

Veterans of NBC, CBS, Time, Money Magazine and Fortune are among those who have been hired to put Channel One on the air, Holton said, promising it would be a top-flight educational mechanism for schools.

Teachers at Pampa Middle School have already endorsed the project and it is now being reviewed at the high school, district officials said. Approval was given for the middle school and for the high school if teachers there decide they want it.

Channel One is among several networks being offered to schools. Others include an adolescent version of Cable News Network.

Other area districts to sign up for Channel One include Hereford, Borger, Levelland, Frenship and Snyder, Griffith told trustees. He noted that a check on the company revealed they are "solid."

Full-time programming by Channel One and its accompanying stations is scheduled to begin in the fall.

Holton said a major draw for Channel One is that installation and subscription to viewing and equipment are all free.

In other business, trustees extended the contract of Griffith another year, stating they are "very pleased" with the job he has done since coming to Pampa.

They also approved food bids for the district, the sale of tax property to Tralee Crisis Center, the use of teachers as trainers in some instances and an annual performance report on the system.

Board members deferred action on a new heating system for McNeely Field House because the lowest bid for the project was $25,000 higher than the district had budgeted.

Price says Gramm an 'outsider' trying to influence area voters

By BEAR MILLS Staff Writer

Former Congressman Bob Price of Pampa continued his attack on Sen. Phil Gramm Tuesday afternoon when he accused the senator of being an "outsider" trying to influence the outcome of the upcoming 13th Congressional District Republican primary.

Price is running against former state representative Dick Waterfield of Canadian for the right to face Democratic incumbent Bill Sarpalus in the general election for the 13th District seat.

"As a respected pioneer family in this area, since 1907, our family does not take kindly to outsiders who affront us," Price said of Gramm's endorsement Sunday of Waterfield. "As my pappy would say, 'Mister, you don't have much upbringing.'"

Price said the senator used a private fund-raiser north of Skellytown Sunday night to push Waterfield's candidacy.

"His remarks, taking sides in the Republican congressional race, made at a public meeting among friends and neighbors of mine, no more than 10 miles from my ranch, were uncalled for," Price said.

Jim Newberry, an aide to Waterfield, said no comments supporting Waterfield were made publicly at the fund-raiser for Gramm, held at the Hayhook ranch owned by Jim Campbell.

Both Price and Waterfield were at the fund-raiser.

Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy did reportedly make a reference to Waterfield being the next congressman in the 13th District, said Republicans who were at the fund-raiser. However, they said the remarks were meant to build up the Republican running to fill Waterfield's 88th District state seat, David Swinford of Dumas, rather than to run down Price.

"I was asked to introduce David and without calling anybody's name, I said what I said," Kennedy said. "It was not meant with malice toward Bob. I mean him no ill will."

"Sen. Gramm did not endorse any candidate at the (fund-raiser)," said Susan Triplehorn, Gray County Republican chairman. She said the senator is highly respected, though, and has the right to endorse anyone he wants.

Gramm did publicly endorse Waterfield at a public gathering in White Deer Sunday afternoon.

"In the ethics of politics, this can only be considered as a brash insult to a former member of Congress, to a sitting member of Congress, to endorse one candidate over another in a contested Republican primary," Price said of Gramm's endorsement of Waterfield.

Price said he was misquoted in The Pampa News on Monday over the information on which Gramm based his endorsement.

He said he never accused Gramm of basing his endorsement on a National Republican Congressional Committee report, though he reiterated that he believes President George Bush did base his decision to ask Waterfield to run on an NRCC recommendation.

Price also said he was misquoted in a Wall Street Journal editorial on Jan. 9 which had him saying he was running for office because "Congress voted themselves 125,000 bucks. I can't make that much around here."

He stated he was originally misquoted in Roll Call, a Capitol Hill newspaper, about his intentions and that the Journal also misquoted him.

Price said Gramm's endorsement of Waterfield may be the result of his being a former Democrat.

"That may have been the practice of the Democrat Party before the senator switched over to the Republican Party six years ago," Price said. "But it is not the standards we have tried to uphold in the 30 years I have helped to build the Republican Party and a two-party system in Texas."

Waterfield's using Gramm's endorsement is an attempt to "influence this election by using the prestige of the Senate office to subvert the free and open election to public office in our race," Price said. He added that it was "an insult to the intelligence of the voters of this district."

Price also said he was more qualified than Waterfield because, among other reasons, he did not have to "use someone else (Gramm) as a prop."

NRCC officials confirmed Price's claim they are endorsing no one for the race, but said they did identify Waterfield as the most qualified candidate.

"In 25 years I've never seen the NRCC take sides like this," Price said, insisting they are guilty of "subverting" the voters' right to choose a Republican candidate to face Sarpalus.

"I told them (Republican officials) I was going to run no matter what was decided," Price said. "I don't believe in the Republican Party making decisions for voters."

had been paying an estimated $25,000 during the last three years if there were so many problems. "It catches us by surprise. We thought we were doing great."

Hackler said attempts would be made to determine where the problems were by evaluating the prior management, the finance department and the past auditor.

"These are procedural and accounting things. We're going to try to locate the fault and lay it wherever it lies," Hackler said today.

The city manager said he believed the current auditing firm was, at considerable fault for failing to notify the City Commission in person of the continuing problems. "I think they pretty much admitted that was their mistake," Hackler said.

"I would really be surprised if we pay it ($25,000)," Hackler said, adding it was up to the commissioners on whether they think the extra fee is justified. He said a solution might be a reduced fee and/or recovering part of the extra cost from the prior auditing firm, H.V. Robertson & Co. of Amarillo.

"As a new manager, I have to look to see if we have problems internally," Hackler said.

The city manager said his immediate plans are to contact the accounting firm during the last three years, H.V. Robertson & Co. of Amarillo. He also said he may talk with the prior management and will continue discussing the matter with the city finance department.

"I'll also try to explore where they felt some of the differences lie - is this a preference or something we should be doing?"

While Hackler said there is no question of whether the firm of Peat, Marwick and Main did the work, there is a question on the manner it was conducted and brought to the attention of the City Commission.

Freed from Death Row, Brandley visits church on first day of freedom

By SUSAN FAHLGREN
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — After nearly a decade on Death Row, Clarence Lee Brandley used his first day of freedom to go to the church where his family and friends had held regular vigils for his release.

Amid applause and shouts of "Thank you, Jesus" from supporters, a soft-spoken Brandley emerged from the Creston Baptist Church in northeast Houston late Tuesday after praying with his family and church leaders.

"I just recall the words of Martin Luther King: 'Free at last. Free at last. Thank God Almighty ... free at last,'" said the Rev. Ozell Brandley, who cheered his brother's release along with neighbors of the small church.

Brandley, 38, who once came within five days of execution, was released on a $75,000 bond Tuesday, a month after the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals threw out his capital murder conviction for the 1980 rape-slaying of a 16-year-old Bellville girl. The court issued its final mandate in the case Monday, confirming its decision that Brandley did not receive a fair trial.

"We prayed for him continually," said Margaret Clark, Brandley's sister. "This is my church and this is where we prayed for him every Sunday and Wednesday and sometimes Tuesdays."

Women with their hair in curlers and babies slung on their hips waited patiently outside the church for Brandley, who maneuvered around television cameras and journalists. A few men chanted "We Shall Overcome" as teen-agers asked the freed prisoner for his autograph.

But Brandley said little except that he was happy to be off Death Row, planned to spend time with his mother and four children and would move anywhere except Montgomery County, where he was convicted.

"It's a great feeling just walking outside the gate, knowing I'm standing on some grass — not concrete — and no nonstop handcuffs," Brandley said earlier Tuesday as he left the Ellis 1 Unit at Huntsville where he was incarcerated for more than nine years.

At the church, Brandley bowed his head and exclaimed "Amen!" as the Rev. Leroy Ross of the thanked God, saying, "You have indeed freed an innocent man from execution and after nine and a half years of being on Death Row."

Meanwhile, Montgomery Coun-

(AP Laserphoto)

Brandley meets with reporters Tuesday outside the gates of Huntsville prison after his release.

District Attorney Peter Speers said Tuesday he will pursue an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, but wouldn't seek another trial for the former Conroe High School janitor if the high court refused to hear the case.

"I believe that serious errors in constitutional interpretation were made by the (Texas) Court of Criminal Appeals in its decision and that therefore this appeal will not be frivolous," Speers said. "I realize, however, that the chances of success at that level are purely speculative."

Speers has contended Brandley is guilty of the capital murder of Cheryl Dee Ferguson, who was attending a volleyball tournament at the Conroe school in August 1980 when she was slain.

A third trial would be virtually impossible because of the time that has elapsed, lost evidence and corrupted witnesses, Speers said.

Brandley's attorneys have claimed their client was the victim of racism. Brandley is black and Miss Ferguson was white.

Brandley's first trial ended in a hung jury, and an all-white jury convicted him of capital murder in his second trial.

"As much as we'd like to think this is the 1980s or 1990s and racial prejudices are behind us, race was a major factor in the prosecution and the investigation," said Paul Nugent, one of Brandley's attorneys. "As much as we don't want to believe it, (Brandley's case) was tainted by racism."

In 1987, retired State District Judge Perry Pickett recommended Brandley get a new trial because the previous two had been racially discriminatory. The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals agreed in its Dec. 13 ruling, saying the investigation "lacked the rudiments of fairness."

Evidence revealed during the 1987 hearing showed contradictory testimony from other janitors — all of whom were white — and questionable investigatory tactics by the state.

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said Tuesday he would not join Speers in seeking the U.S. Supreme Court ruling.

"It would be inappropriate to try and reinstate a jury verdict that came out of a trial that was racially tainted," Mattox said in Austin.

C.L. "Buck" Ferguson, the slain girl's father, said he was upset that Brandley was free. "I'm still convinced he's guilty, and I hope Speers is going to do everything he can to rectify the situation."

Brandley's family credited the work of defense attorneys, a coalition of supporters, the media and a higher power in helping attain the former janitor's freedom.

"I think that his injustice has really been exposed and so many people have asked, 'Why did it take so long?' (There was) one hurdle after another hurdle," said Ozell Brandley.

"But God was on our side and God has made it possible today that a great injustice has been corrected."

Clarence Brandley Jr., 19, who said it had been three months since he last saw his father in prison, said he, too, always believed his father would be exonerated.

"I thought it was going to come because I've been reading the newspapers," the younger Brandley said. "I always thought it would happen."

Three of five suspects lie cuffed on the ground following a shootout with San Antonio police officers Tuesday.

San Antonio police officer shot after stopping car for routine check on warrants

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A shootout erupted between police and suspects in a car, leaving one officer and two other people wounded by gunfire and two others suffering minor injuries.

"We do not believe the injuries are life-threatening or will keep him from returning to duty, hopefully, very shortly," Police Chief Bill Gibson said of injured officer Raul Alonzo, 27.

Alonzo was shot Tuesday when gunfire broke out about 12:30 p.m. as he and officer Danny Robles stopped a car after turning up police warrants through a computer check, Gibson said.

'As they walked up to the vehicle, the person in the right front real quickly swerved around and fired.'

A single shot from a 9 mm semi-automatic weapon entered Alonzo's arm, traveled into his lower abdomen and exited through his buttocks, police spokesman Sgt. Paul Buske said.

Alonzo was taken to Medical Center Hospital, where he was in stable condition, a hospital spokeswoman said.

As police rushed to the scene, so did Mayor Lila Cockrell, who later held a news conference with Gibson.

"Our prayers are with officer Raul Alonzo and with his young wife, who I understand is expecting a child," Mrs. Cockrell said, adding that she also planned to visit the officer at the hospital.

The mayor denied her actions were because of the city's battle against a tax rollback effort.

San Antonio voters will go to the polls Feb. 3 to decide whether to roll back a tax increase of more than 12 percent.

City leaders have said the planned addition of more police officers is one reason higher taxes are necessary.

Buske said the shooting occurred as the two officers approached the stopped car.

"As they walked up to the vehicle, the person in the right front real quickly swerved around and fired," Buske said.

When that happened, both officers began shooting, he said. It was believed one officer emptied his service revolver and another fired four shots, he said.

Police Lt. Albert Ortiz said there were five people in the car. Three of them were released by police following questioning and the others were jailed following medical treatment.

Lorenzo Rodriguez Santana, 22, who suffered a gunshot wound in the back, was charged with attempted capital murder and was being held in the Bexar County Jail in lieu of $500,000 bond.

Orlando Colin, 19, was charged with unlawfully carrying a weapon and was being held in lieu of $800 bond.

Police recovered a 9 mm weapon and a 380 semi-automatic weapon at the scene, according to Buske.

About 25 blocks south of the shooting, officer Ruben Rendon, 51, was injured when his car and another vehicle collided as he tried to get to the shooting to help.

WT-A&M merger backers heading to Austin

By HOLDEN LEWIS
Associated Press Writer

AMARILLO (AP) — Proponents of a plan to consolidate West Texas State University into the Texas A&M system said the smaller school would benefit from the union, but some opponents have another project in mind.

The two sides are headed for a showdown Thursday in Austin, where a Coordinating Board committee will decide whether to recommend that the full board approve the merger in its meeting Friday.

Despite opposition from the staff of the Higher Education Coordinating Board, the proposal's backers said Tuesday they are optimistic they will succeed.

The Amarillo Chamber of Commerce has chartered a 150-passenger jet to fly supporters to the hearing, and 80 people had bought $200 tickets by Tuesday.

"I think just that demonstration of support would show the Coordinating Board that the people in this region support the proposition," said Steve Ahlenius, government affairs director for the chamber.

Supporters contend that making West Texas

State part of the A&M system would improve the 6,000-student school and bring more research dollars to the campus in Canyon, 16 miles south of Amarillo.

But Coordinating Board staff advisers contend that a merger would be premature, and say it would make more sense to merge West Texas State with Lubbock-based Texas Tech.

Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, said he hopes the show of support "will move some of those (Coordinating Board) members who appear to be uncommitted."

The merger's backers had thought that Friday's vote was just a formality. The Legislature has approved the plan, as have the West Texas and A&M system regents.

But in a report last week, the Coordinating Board's staff recommended the panel veto the proposal because of program duplications with Texas Tech and opposition from Texas A&M alumni.

Texas Higher Education Commissioner Kenneth Ashworth wrote in the report that a merger would be another step toward the eventual consolidation of all Texas public universities into the University of Texas and Texas A&M systems.

Any mergers should be delayed pending a study of the issue by a panel appointed by the Coordinating Board, he wrote.

But Ben Latham, a Coordinating Board member from Amarillo, said the staff was supposed to study whether the merger would be economical or result in program duplications.

"I think the staff, in their zeal to cover the whole issue, probably covered more than the Legislature charged them to look at," said Latham.

State Rep. John Smithee, R-Amarillo, disputed the findings.

"The merger itself doesn't add any programs; it doesn't add any faculty. All it does is eliminate one board of regents," said Smithee.

T. Boone Pickens, chairman of the West Texas State board of regents, was out of town Tuesday and unavailable for comment. He released a statement last week pointing out that the report was simply a recommendation.

Dr. Ed Roach, president of West Texas State, was also unavailable.

Ashworth said he was considering statewide issues, not just the effect of the merger in the Panhandle.

"If you took only the advantages to West Texas State University into account, you'd probably recommend approval," said Ashworth.

Final arguments scheduled in coupons trial

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Amid thousands of coupons stacked on a federal courtroom floor, final arguments are scheduled to begin today for a self-described trash scavenger accused of mail fraud and conspiracy.

Suitcases full of coupons have been introduced as evidence in the trial of Connie Arvidson, 34, whose obsession for manufacturers' coupons grew into a profitable business.

Known as "Coupon Connie" and the "Dumpster Lady," Mrs. Arvidson is accused of mail fraud and conspiracy in a $2 million distribution of coupons prosecutors say were fake.

Air Force jet crashes near busy highway intersection in Austin

AUSTIN (AP) — Two crew members managed to eject and parachute to safety only seconds before their U.S. Air Force reconnaissance jet crashed near a busy highway intersection during rush hour, officials said.

Air Force officials said the two crewmen suffered minor injuries and were transported to a hospital at nearby Bergstrom Air Force Base and no one on the ground was injured.

"It's a godsend that nothing on the ground was hit and no one was hurt," Jerry Reed, a communications supervisor for the Austin Police Department, said.

The RF-4C jet slammed into a grassy area at a highway cloverleaf near the intersection of U.S. Highway 183 and Texas Highway 71, located in south Austin and just outside Bergstrom Air Force Base.

Capt. Hal S. Goldsmith, 32, and 1st Lt. Robert B. Brumley, 25, ejected safely from the plane, Capt. Guy Thompson, a Bergstrom spokesman, said. Goldsmith was the pilot and Brumley, the weapons officer. Their hometowns weren't immediately released.

The cause of the crash was unknown, Thompson said. The crew was on a routine training mission, the Air Force said.

"A board of officers is being convened to investigate the cause of the accident," Thompson said.

The jet, a reconnaissance version of the F-4C fighter plane, crashed at 5:51 p.m., lifting a black mushroom cloud of smoke over the heavily traveled roads.

The manufacturers' coupons for everything from soap to soup have been stacked in boxes between the judge's bench and lawyers' tables in Judge Sidney Fitzwater's court since the trial began Jan. 8.

Mrs. Arvidson faces up to 30 years in prison and fines up to $1.5 million if convicted of all charges against her.

The Boca Raton, Fla., resident was indicted along with nine others in June 1989 in the alleged counterfeit scam.

The indictment alleges that coupons for food and other products were printed and distributed nationwide from Texas.

Mrs. Arvidson, accused of knowingly buying and distributing fake coupons, staunchly maintains her innocence.

She has turned down two plea-bargain agreements from federal prosecutors that would have sent her to jail for up to 18 months.

"We are counting down to the end, so I am getting stronger," Mrs. Arvidson said. "I know the jury's going to let me go home and be with my little girl."

Mrs. Arvidson, who estimated she pulled in $200 a week at her rebating peak, said the expense of the trial combined with a recent bank foreclosure on her property have forced her to file for bankruptcy.

"I just want the trial to end," she said. "I can't borrow anymore money from relatives to stay in a cockroach motel here. I have no money for anything."

Boxes of coupons stacked 4 feet high in the courtroom are the nightmare of 47 companies whose coupons allegedly were counterfeited and distributed illegally through the mail.

Mrs. Arvidson is on trial with David Rees and James Floyd Richards, both of San Antonio.

The seven others indicted in the case have agreed to cooperate with prosecutors in exchange for leniency. Several of them have testified against Mrs. Arvidson.

Charges against Rees and Richards relate to the alleged printing and distribution of coupons, prosecutors said.

But Mrs. Arvidson said she plans never to clip another coupon. "There's more to life than just coupons," she said Monday.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Unos offer promise of hope in Nicaragua

Peace in Nicaragua never looked more promising. Recently, five top members of the Nicaragua democratic opposition gave an exclusive interview to the Orange County Register editorial board. The opposition is called Uno because it unites almost all forces — liberals, conservatives, socialists — opposed to the Sandinista dictatorship.

Uno's presidential candidate is Violeta Chamorro, a member of the Chamorro family that for decades resisted the Somoza dictatorship, and has lately resisted the Sandinista dictatorship. She was going to speak with the group, but broke her leg and was hospitalized in Texas.

The delegation was headed by Uno's vice presidential candidate, Virgilio Godoy. He spoke with a cautious confidence of Nicaragua's movement toward democracy. He noted that polls show the Sandinistas and Uno to be running neck-and-neck in the cities, where the Sandinistas' military and government apparatuses are numerous. But Uno garners most of the support from campesinos in the populous countryside. This adds up to a solid Uno victory in the Feb. 25 election.

Alas, Mr. Godoy is all too aware that the Sandinistas may not allow a fair election to be held. He reminded us that the dictatorship, led by the Ortega brothers, Daniel and Umberto, and Interior Minister Tomas Borge, has said all along that it might give up control of the government, but not control of power.

Will the Sandinistas batter the opposition senseless, as strongman Manuel Noriega did to Panama's opposition when it won an election last May? Or will the Sandinistas protect their communist junta by gunning the opposition down in the streets, as happened in Romania last month, with Daniel and Umberto Ortega reprising the roles of Nicolae and Elena Ceausescu?

Mr. Godoy and the other Uno leaders say they are doing all they can to assure a peaceful transition of power. They accept the notion of a coalition government, with Uno and the Sandinistas sharing power. This would follow the model of a peaceful transition from communism, as has happened in all Eastern European countries except Romania. Uno's two goals are reconciliation and reconstruction.

Mr. Godoy also thinks that most of the Sandinistas' rank-and-file support a peaceful transition. Alas, when we asked him whether the Ortegas and Tomas Borge would go peacefully, Mr. Godoy recited a Central American proverb: "An old parrot doesn't learn to talk."

Another problem is the continued Soviet presence in Central America. Smiling Mikhail Gorbachev continues shipping arms and ammunition to the Sandinistas, giving the junta the firepower it needs should it choose to follow Ceausescu's bloody precedent.

Uno's alternative, should it remain faithful to the market economics Mr. Godoy endorsed, is as appealing as the Sandinistas' continued hold on power is odious. Mr. Godoy told us that Uno wants "amnesty, the return of those in exile, an expansion of the meaning of liberty, justice, and to democratize power. That's a message that has a lot of support."

A question of discrimination

Over the past 12 years, the Supreme Court has grappled four times with the complex constitutional question of "affirmative action," otherwise known as discrimination in reverse. Last week the court agreed to go to the mat again. It will hear two cases involving preferential treatment of minority applicants for television licenses.

One case comes from Orlando, Fla., where the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) has authorized the licensing of a new UHF station. The competing applicants are Metro Broadcasting Inc., which is 80 percent white-owned, and Rainbow Broadcasting Co., which is 90 percent Hispanic-owned.

The companion case comes from Hartford, Conn., where the present owners of Channel 18, Faith Center Inc., have offered to sell their license under what is known as the "distress sale" provision of FCC policy guidelines. The competing applicants are Astrolene Communications, largely black, and a Shurberg group that is largely white.

In Orlando the minority applicants won. In Hartford they lost. In both cases the issue is the same: Is it a violation of the Constitution for the FCC to take race or national origin into account in awarding licenses to broadcast?

When the two cases come up for oral argument this spring, the Supreme Court will hear the same contentions it has heard before. The four precedent cases are known as Bakke (1978), Fullilove (1980), Wygant (1986) and Croson (1989). In the two earlier cases, the high court came down in favor of the minority petitioners. In the 1986 and 1989 cases, the court went the other way.

The four cases have produced 23 separate opinions. In three of the four (the exception was Croson last year), a majority of the nine-member court could not be mustered behind a single opinion. Thus at our highest levels of jurisprudence is confusion splendidly compounded.

Prior to 1965 the FCC policies on license renewal were race-neutral. The principal factors in a license proceeding were the experience, background and community involvement of the applicant. In the lucrative game of broadcast ownership, the playing field was level. Then came an extended period of hemming and hawing, and a new policy emerged; The FCC would award credits for such "enhancement factors" as "minority status" and "female status" of the prospective owners.

In 1988 Congress formally endorsed this version of affirmative action. The reasoning was that minorities own very few TV and radio licenses; the public interest would be served by the "diversity" minority owners would bring to broadcasting. The question is whether these are "compelling" interests, sufficient to justify racial and ethnic discrimination as public policies.

Looking at the Orlando case, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia ruled 2-1 this past April that the FCC's enhancement factors "easily pass constitutional muster." The policy does not require quotas of minority owners; it has no fixed targets; it promotes diversity in programming; it tends to remedy the effects of past discrimination; and it treats race as only one of several factors to be taken into account.

Judge Stephen Williams, dissenting, felt that the FCC's policy amounts to racial stereotyping. He could not see how the award of a license to the Rainbow group would serve a remedial purpose in Orlando. Further, "No one can seriously argue that there is a compelling governmental interest in increasing the proportion of station owners who say they engage in something they call minority programming."

The Hartford case reached the D.C. Circuit a month earlier, in March of 1989. Different judges were on the bench. The case went exactly the other way. Two judges agreed in separate opinions that the FCC's policy unconstitutionally deprives a white petitioner of his right to due process of law. Shurberg had been "absolutely denied an opportunity to compete for the license merely because of his race." Judge Patricia Wald sharply dissented.

There it stands. The pending cases from Orlando and Hartford differ significantly from the four earlier cases. The court will not be dealing with a college admissions policy or a school system's policy on faculty layoffs. Unlike the set-aside programs in government contracts, broadcast applicants are not "diffused" and the immensely valuable licenses are relatively permanent.

Someone will make a million dollars out of a TV license in a major marketing area. Is it morally and constitutionally right to award such a windfall plumb on the decisive factor of race? I think not, but I don't sit on the court.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Jan. 24, the 24th day of 1990. There are 341 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: Twenty-five years ago, on Jan. 24, 1965, former British Prime Minister Winston Churchill died in London at the age of 90.

On this date: In 1848, James W. Marshall discovered a gold nugget at Sutter's Mill in northern California, a discovery that led to the gold rush of '49.

In 1908, the first Boy Scout troop was organized in England by Robert Baden-Powell.

In 1916, the Supreme Court ruled that the federal income tax was constitutional.

In 1922, Christian K. Nelson of Onawa, Iowa, patented the Eskimo Pie.

Wisdom found in the mailbag

There is frequently profound wisdom in the mailbag.

Dear Paul Harvey News...

Now that the threat of war in Europe has diminished, let's bring home most of our troops from Europe and deploy them along our borders to intercept illegal aliens, drugs and weapons.

If we are going to call it a "war on drugs" then it should be fought as a war.

As it is, we are fighting the drug war the way we lost the Vietnam War. — Warren Roberts, South Lake Tahoe, Calif.

You who write are often able, as we say in the Ozarks, to "shuck right down to the cob."

Dear Paul Harvey News...

Judges should not use such harsh courtroom language.

When a person is convicted of a deadly crime, the sentencing judge is likely to say, "I sentence you to serve (certain years) in the penitentiary."

The judge should be more specific, more precise.

He should say, "It is the judgment of this court that you be sentenced to three meals a day, comfortable lodging, a warm place to sleep, medicine if you get sick, color TV to watch — and all within the security of a state-operated facility. And all of which will be free to you through the generosity of law-abiding American taxpayers." — James Baily, Columbus, Ohio.

That's what I call "hitting the nail with your head." As is this:

Dear Paul Harvey News...

If American businesses faced no more competition than our public schools do, the United States would be an economic basket case.

Imagine how inefficient our automobile industry would be if it were run as our public schools are run.

A car company would be given monopoly in a specific region.

For example, if you lived in Missouri you would have to pay for a new Buick every three years whether you used it or not.

You could buy another type car if you wished, but in addition you would still be taxed the price of a new Buick.

None can doubt that Buick makers would provide us with inferior cars at inflated prices.

That's precisely what's happened to our schools.

Local governments could, instead, give parents vouchers good for "one education" at the school of their choice.

Public financing would be predicated on the ability of each school to compete for the patronage of parents.

That way — as in the car business — the school would either provide quality education and do so efficiently or it would go out of business. — Dwight R. Lee, Washington, D.C.

One more? All right:

I'd mentioned that many people were most lonely around Christmastime. Ruby Spivey wrote from Jesup, Ga., saying that there's no reason for anyone to be lonesome.

When Ruby wants company she says she takes off her clothes and gets into the bathtub.

She guarantees that three people will telephone and somebody else will be ringing the doorbell within five minutes.

A change in attitude toward despots

By ROBERT WALTERS

Does the extraordinary treatment of Panamanian Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega herald the opening of a new era in which deposed despots are prosecuted for their crimes in office rather than retired to tropical resorts?

Nobody knows the answer to that question but it does present the intriguing possibility of the beginning of a third phase in the U.S. attitude toward the dictatorial misfits who become other countries' chiefs of state.

The first phase lasted throughout the 19th century and most of the 20th century. On scores of occasions, troops were dispatched to other nations not to topple tyrants but to prop them up because they had fashioned alliances with U.S. commercial interests operating in their countries.

A disproportionate number of those military operations occurred in Central America (including three forays into Panama — in 1856, 1865 and 1903) and residue of ill will toward this country that persists across the region today.

The second phase, a vary recent development, involved placing considerable pressure on dictators to relinquish their power and flee their homelands but then helping them escape to sunny climes suitable for retirement.

The two best known beneficiaries of that policy were President Ferdinand E. Marcos of the Philippines and President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier of Haiti, both of whom were deposed and fled into exile in early 1986.

Both despots and their families were flown out of their native countries in U.S. Air Force transport planes. Duvalier was carried to France, where he eventually settled on the Riviera and lives today. Marcos was taken to Hawaii, whose comforts he enjoyed until he died of natural causes last year.

Although there is no evidence of similar direct U.S. involvement, covert assistance reportedly was provided to two other toppled dictators —

President Anastasio Somoza Debayle of Nicaragua and Gen. Alfredo Stroessner of Paraguay — who had similar experiences in recent decades.

Somoza went into exile in Paraguay in the summer of 1979, but was killed there slightly more than a year later by assassins firing machine guns and a bazooka. Stroessner fled to a Brazilian beach resort (where he still lives) after being overthrown in a coup early last year.

To the extent that there is no contemporary precedent for the treatment of Noriega — unrelenting White House pressure for his capture and removal to this country to be tried on criminal charges — his handling could signal the start of a third phase in which the United States insists that tyrants be charged for their crimes.

But there also are mitigating circumstances that suggest Noriega could be the exception to the rule. Indeed, U.S. diplomats offered him the comfortable-exile-in-return-for-prompt-retirement option at least twice in recent years — in the spring of 1988 under President Reagan and in the autumn of 1989 under President Bush.

But the combative Noriega preferred to strut about Panama City and taunt the United States about its inability to depose him through the imposition of economic, diplomatic and military sanctions.

The extent to which Bush then felt obliged to commit his personal prestige to the capture of Noriega — dead or alive — was illustrated by the unprecedented act of offering a $1 million bounty for a former chief of state.

There were other factors that made Noriega a special case — including the slaying of a Marine Corps lieutenant on the streets of Panama City and the pending criminal indictments in Florida alleging his extensive involvement in narcotics trafficking.

Thus, the extent to which his treatment establishes a new standard for handling despots remains uncertain — but we can always hope that other tyrants will meet a similar fate.

Soviets ban demonstrations in Azerbaijan's capital

By ANN IMSE
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet troops trying to put down a nationalist uprising in Azerbaijan raided the offices of unofficial groups in the republic's capital of Baku, arresting 43 people and seizing copying machines, local radio said today.

Demonstrations and strikes were banned in the city and activists were warned they face 30 days in jail if they try to organize protests, the official news agency Tass said.

Despite the ban, a general strike called to demand the withdrawal of Soviet troops paralyzed factories and transport in the city and activists said secessionist sentiment was on the rise.

The city has seen mass demonstrations almost daily for weeks.

Oil tankers blockaded the oil-producing Caspian Sea port, their captains threatened to blow up the ships if the military tried to break the blockade, an activist said.

Troops killed dozens of people Saturday in storming Baku to end bloody ethnic clashes in the region that exploded Jan. 13 with anti-Armenian rioting in Baku. The official death toll in 11 days of violence stood at 170.

Authorities have blamed unofficial Azerbaijani organizations for inciting the anti-Armenian rioting and later clashes between armed bands of Armenians and Azerbaijanis in the neighboring republics.

Soviet TV said gunfire continued Tuesday night in parts of Baku, though activists and news reports said the city was quiet this morning.

Soviet troops have been ambushed by militants and, in response to increasing threats, hundreds of military dependents have been evacuated.

On Monday night, militants killed two reserve soldiers and a woman bystander, Baku Radio said, according to British Broadcasting Corp. monitors.

Tass said today that more than 500 wives and children of navy personnel had been airlifted out of the region and that "militant groups continue to provoke clashes with troops and to seize weapons" in Baku.

"In several instances, terrorists dressed in military uniform took part in outrages," the news agency said. It did not say when the incidents occurred.

The Azerbaijani news agency Azerinform said the Azerbaijani People's Front, the grass-roots group that has led the republic's pro-independence movement, was not a target of the overnight sweep in Baku.

Tass, however, said the front's National Defense Committee, a militant arm of the group, had been specifically banned.

Tass quoted the military commander of the Baku area, Lt. Gen. Vladimir Dubynak, as saying the Azerbaijani capital was calm Tuesday night with no new casualties.

"Forty-three people were arrested when the headquarters of illegally functioning informal organizations were neutralized," Tass said. "Many copying machines, and propaganda facilities were confiscated."

On Tuesday, Radio Moscow described the situation in the region as "very, very tense" and said there was little progress in talks between leaders of the two republics on how to stop the conflict.

Fighting between the mainly Moslem Azerbaijanis and largely Christian Armenians has been centered around Nagorno-Karabakh, a disputed Armenian enclave in western Azerbaijan.

Also today, Niayaz Gajiyev, an Azerbaijani on a self-appointed investigative commission, said Russian residents were following the example of the military families and fleeing Baku. He insisted there was no real danger, although he said anti-Russian sentiment is rising due to outrage over the troops' activities.

Radio Moscow said anti-army and anti-Russian sentiments were being whipped up by "irresponsible people" sending threatening unsigned letters and making anonymous phone calls. It did not elaborate.

Oil tankers and barges were still blockading, and threatening to blow up their ships if military vessels attempt to break through, said Arif Yunosov of the independent Social Democratic Group.

Elsewhere in Azerbaijan, there were reports Tuesday of individual skirmishes but also claims of greater order.

Armenian Communist Party leader Suren Arutyunyan said militants on both sides in the Sharmyan and Khanlar regions of Azerbaijan, located just north of Nagorno-Karabakh, had exchanged hostages. He made the statement on Yerevan Radio, monitored by the BBC.

Tass said 10 freight trains made it through the Azerbaijani blockade to Yerevan for the first time in days. Armenia has nearly run out of fuel.

A smaller satellite leaves Muses 'A' satellite, right, enroute to a lunar orbit in this artist's sketch released by Japan's Institute of Space and Aeronautical Science.

Japan launches satellite toward moon

By DAVID THURBER
Associated Press Writer

UCHINOURA, Japan (AP) — Japan's first lunar probe lifted off today, billowing clouds of smoke and carrying Japanese hopes of becoming the third nation to reach the Earth's closest neighbor.

The slender M3S-2 rocket disappeared into the night sky over the Pacific Ocean from its launch pad nestled between mountains on Japan's southern coast.

Launch officials said it would take several hours before they knew whether the launch was successful. The rocket blasted off on schedule at 8:46 p.m. (5:46 a.m. CST).

If successful, the Muses-A satellite will be the first spacecraft to visit the moon since an unmanned Soviet vehicle landed on its surface in 1976. Only the United States and the Soviet Union have sent spacecraft to the moon.

Originally set for Tuesday, the liftoff had been postponed with only 18 seconds to go after an electrical switching problem cut off power to a hydraulic pump used to aim the nozzle of an auxiliary booster rocket.

Mission chief Hiroki Matsuo said Tuesday's delay was the first time in five launches of the solid-fuel M3S-2 that the countdown had been stopped in the final 60 seconds.

Overcast skies blanketed the remote oceanside launch site in southern Japan today and snow fell in nearby areas.

During Tuesday's launch attempt, winds blew volcanic dust and grit from Sakurajima, a nearby live volcano, over much of the launch area. But officials said the dust was not related to the electrical problem.

The three-stage red-and-silver M3S-2 rocket, which cannot lift much more than its 400-pound payload, is to carry Muses-A into an elliptical orbit that will bring it to within about 10,000 miles of the moon in eight weeks.

Just before crossing the moon's path, a smaller satellite will break off the Muses-A and go into lunar orbit and send data to the larger satellite on temperatures and electrical fields.

The Nissan Motor Co., Japan's second-largest automobile maker, built the three-stage, 62-ton M3S-2 engine used in the lunar mission.

Japan's first satellite was launched in 1970. Muses-A would be the 13th Japanese satellite in operation.

The Muses-A mission is being conducted by Japan's Institute of Space and Astronautical Science, one of two government-funded space agencies.

"This time we are going to the moon. But our objective is not the moon itself," Matsuo said. "Our institute is getting into interplanetary missions in the 1990s and for that we need to refine our technology."

Japan to hold elections in February

TOKYO (AP) — Lawmakers shouted "Banzai!" as Parliament's lower house was dissolved today to make way for elections next month in which the once-invincible but scandal-plagued Liberal Democrats may lose their majority.

Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu, who took office in August after two disgraced predecessors resigned, told fellow party members after parliament dissolved that it was their duty to "restore the people's confidence in our party."

Shortly after the session began, Speaker of the House Hajime Tamura read an imperial edict written on parchment declaring the house dissolved.

The legislators then shouted three resounding "Banzais!" — literally "10,000 Years," a wish for long life — and disbanded.

The 10-minute session allowed legislators just enough time to pass a bill on subsidies for rice growers and to approve plans for Emperor Akihito's younger son, Prince Aya, to marry commoner Kiko Kawashima this spring.

The Cabinet met later and said it would officially announce on Feb. 3 that the election will be held Feb. 18.

It was up to the 59-year-old Kaifu, a former education minister, to decide when to dissolve the lower house. He was believed to have wanted a later election date so he could make a major policy address Parliament, but gave in to the wishes of party leaders with more clout.

An election must be held by July, when the current four-year term of lower house members expires.

Pressure for an early election has been building for a year since the Liberal Democrats became mired in scandals, and party leaders apparently chose mid-February to get the election out of the way before legislators become bogged down with the national budget, which must be passed by April 1.

The Liberal Democrats, who have governed Japan continuously for 34 years, could lose their majority in the lower house and therefore the right to govern. In July, they lost their majority in the less powerful upper house as voters registered dissatisfaction over bribery and sex scandals and an unpopular sales tax.

After just two months in office, Prime Minister Sosuke Uno resigned to take responsibility for the loss and Kaifu, widely considered an interim leader, was the surprise choice for party leader.

The upper house majority is held by opposition parties led by Japan Socialist Party leader Takako Doi, but it is the leader of the majority party in the lower house that traditionally becomes prime minister.

The Liberal Democrats face a tough challenge in retaining the 295-seat majority they have held in the 512-seat lower house since July 1986.

Man who set his son on fire being paroled in California

By JEFF WILSON
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man who set fire to his son seven years ago was being paroled today under orders to wear an electronic leash and stay away from the boy. But the youngster said he is keeping a BB gun by his bed just in case.

"I'd shoot his eye out if he ever came over. I'd blind him," said David Rothenberg, who was 6 when his father, Charles Rothenberg, tried to kill him.

The boy, now, 13, was severely disfigured by the fire.

Prison officials sought to keep Rothenberg's whereabouts secret and said only that he was being released sometime today on a three-year parole.

On NBC's Today show this morning, Tipton Kindel, a spokesman for the state Corrections Department, remained tight-lipped about whether Rothenberg had already been released.

"He will be under the strictest parole ever for a California parolee," Kindel said. "He will be leaving prison, but he will not be a free man. He will be in the custody of at least one parole agent 24 hours a day. In addition, he will be required to wear an electronic surveillance monitor at all times."

"He will not be allowed to leave the jurisdiction to which he is being paroled. He will not be able to go to the county where his son lives. He will not be allowed to have any contact with his son, his ex-wife or her current husband."

Rothenberg, 49, was moved this week from the prison in San Luis Obispo to "one of the 18 prisons within the state," Kindel said Tuesday.

If Rothenberg violates parole, he will be returned to prison for 30 days to a year. He also must submit to weekly psychiatric counseling.

David lives in Orange County with his mother, Marie, and stepfather, police Officer Richard Haf-dahl, who helped in the investigation of the fire.

Asked in the Today interview what is being done to protect David, Kindel said that if Rothenberg is ever "not where he's supposed to be, then the family, David, will be notified immediately."

Rothenberg set fire to his son in a Buena Park motel room on March 3, 1983, after a telephone argument in which his estranged wife said Rothenberg would not be able to see the boy again.

Rothenberg had taken the boy on a holiday to Southern California from New York, where the boy was living with his mother.

"If I can't have him, nobody else can," Rothenberg said when arrested six days later. He told authorities he was going to kill himself but was too much of a coward.

David, dragged from the inferno by motel guests, suffered third-degree burns over 90 percent of his body.

Rothenberg was convicted of attempted murder, arson and other charges and got a maximum 13-year prison term. The sentence was cut in half because of good behavior.

If convicted today, Rothenberg would have faced a possible sentence of life in prison. But sentencing laws at the time required the state to release him after less than seven years behind bars.

Prison officials kept the relocation plans secret, fearing a repeat of the hysteria surrounding the 1987 release of Larry Singleton.

Singleton, who had raped a teenage girl and left her for dead after hacking off her forearms with an ax, had to be moved repeatedly from Northern California communities where he was rejected by an outraged public.

David said he would always live in fear of his father.

"He will be out there, free. He probably has people out there right now looking for me. I will have to live the rest of my life on the line... always looking behind me," David said recently.

Security guard shot to death at Houston hospital

HOUSTON (AP) — A security guard who was the brother a convicted judge killer Charles Harrelson was shot to death with his own gun in a confrontation at the hospital where he worked.

Claude Harrelson, 63, was shot in the head about 7 a.m. Tuesday after he struggled with a 23-year-old man in a hallway at the old Ben Taub Hospital, Houston Police Lt. Richard Holland said. The suspect was arrested outside nearby Hermann Hospital.

Harrelson is the brother of Charles Harrelson, who was convicted of assassinating U.S. District Judge John Wood in San Antonio in 1979. The security guard also was the uncle of Woody Harrelson, star of NBC's sitcom, Cheers.

Holland said the suspect, who has been treated for psychological problems and was wearing a hospital gown, fled after he was shot in the foot during the struggle. He is believed to have taken Harrelson's gun, which was found in a courtyard outside the old hospital.

Hermann and the old Ben Taub hospitals are part of the Texas Medical Center complex.

Holland said police found the suspect's wallet and driver's license on the floor in the hallway. No charges have been filed in the case.

Police said the suspect apparently wandered from the new Ben Taub Hospital to the older complex next door. Holland said Harrelson's gun was fired numerous times.

Crispy coated hamburgers are as easy as a shake of chili powder and instant minced onion. Serve with sliced tomatoes, shredded lettuce and chips.

Crispy coated hamburgers are quick and easy to make

NEW YORK (AP) — It's possible to have a delicious, crunchy hamburger without a lot of effort. Just coat the burgers with instant minced onion and broil or barbecue until done the way you like them. This will give them a mellow onion flavor, quite different from raw onions.

If you want to give the burgers a Tex-Mex flavor, enclose Cheddar cheese mixed with chili powder between two thin patties, then seal the burgers together and dip the outside in the instant minced onion. The middle gets melty when broiled or grilled, and the coating becomes golden and crunchy.

Using instant minced onion is quick; no peeling, no chopping.

Crispy Onion Burgers
1/2 cup shredded Cheddar

cheese
1 tablespoon chili powder
1 1/2 pounds ground beef
1-3rd cup instant minced onion

In a small cup combine cheese and chili powder. Shape ground beef into eight patties, 3/2-by-1/2-inch thick.

Place an equal amount of the cheese mixture in the center of 4 patties. Place remaining patties over cheese, pinching edges to seal. Place onion in a shallow dish.

Press burgers one at a time into onions, turning to coat on all sides. Preheat broiler. Place burgers on the rack, broil 6 to 8 inches from heat source for about 6 minutes per side.

To cook on outdoor grill: on a rack 4 inches over hot coals cook burgers for about 6 minutes per side. Makes 4 servings.

Super Bowl feast has Southern Flair

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

The Super Bowl really brings out the party spirit. It's one of our most watched TV events—more than 120 million U.S. viewers are expected to see the NFL title game on Jan. 28. Most of them will share the occasion with friends.

For example, a New York Giants fan, Jim Cronin, once spread the Super Bowl spirit in a rather unorthodox way. A fuse blew during his friend's Super Bowl party three seasons ago. So, Cronin asked the next-door neighbor if it was OK to bring the party over to their home. They agreed, although they were lukewarm about football.

As it turned out, everyone was happy. Cronin got to see the game, his friends met their neighbors and the Giants won. Now the once-reluctant party-givers plan to host this year, as well.

Super Bowl XXIV returns to New Orleans. So a Mardi Gras theme, complete with colorful masks and beads, would be perfect for this year's entertaining.

Prepared foods, such as fully cooked roast chicken and hot and spicy wings with bleu cheese dressing, help make it an easy event.

A chicken muffaletta will enhance the New Orleans theme. The muffaletta is a popular New Orleans hero made with Italian bread and layered with all kinds of goodies. No salad is needed with this sandwich since it is all in the filling.

Chicken Muffaletta
1 cup pimento-stuffed green

Drumstick Wrap-ups star at a Super Bowl XXIV New Orleans party.

olives, chopped
1 cup pitted black olives, chopped
1 jar (7 ounces) roasted red peppers, drained and chopped
1 cup olive oil
3 cloves garlic, finely chopped
2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh parsley
2 tablespoons white wine vinegar

1 loaf Italian bread (about 2 feet long), cut in half horizontally
1 package (2 3/4-3 pounds) fully cooked roasted whole chicken, skin and bones discarded
1/2 pound sliced Provolone cheese
10 slices bacon, crisp-cooked

In medium bowl, combine green and black olives, roasted peppers, oil, garlic, parsley and vinegar. Let stand at least 1 hour. Remove the soft center of the bread and drizzle both halves with oil from the olive mixture.

Bread should be saturated. On bottom bread half, layer chicken, olive salad, cheese and bacon, top with remaining bread half. Slice to serve. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Honey Mustard Drumstick Wrap-Ups

2 tablespoons prepared mustard
2 teaspoons honey
1 package (8 ounces) refrigerated crescent dinner rolls
8 oven roasted drumsticks

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. In small bowl stir together mustard and honey. Separate crescent rolls into triangles.

Spoon mustard sauce onto center of each triangle. Place meaty portion of each drumstick on the sauce.

Wrap dough around drumstick leaving the small end exposed. Place on baking sheet. Bake 15 minutes or until pastry is golden. Makes 8 servings.

Horseshoe Ketchup Drumstick Wrap-Ups:

Follow recipe for Honey Mustard Drumstick Wrap-Ups, substituting 2 tablespoons ketchup and 1 tablespoon prepared horseradish for honey and mustard.

Super Wings With Creole Toppers

2 packages (7 wings each) oven roasted chicken wings; or, 2 packages (6 pieces each) oven roasted drumsticks

Creole Toppers (see below)
Preheat oven to 325°. In shallow baking pan arrange chicken wings in single layer. Brush Creole Topping on wings. Bake 20 to 25 minutes or until heated through. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 14 wings.

Creole Toppers — Top wings with one or more of the following combinations:

- 1/2 cup apricot preserves mixed with 1/4 cup Dijon-style mustard and 1/8 teaspoon black pepper
- 1/2 cup barbecue sauce mixed with 1/4 cup beer and 1/4 teaspoon hot pepper
- 1/2 cup ketchup mixed with 1/8 teaspoon black pepper, 1/8 teaspoon white pepper and a dash of ground red pepper

Microwave directions: In microwave-safe baking dish arrange 1 package of the chicken in a single layer. Brush with 1/2 of the Creole Topping. Cook on High according to package directions. Repeat with remaining chicken and Creole Topping.

Entertaining with New Wave Pizzas

Pizza. This all-time favorite dish has gone through many changes, from thick crust to thin crust, from meat laden to vegetarian. Now the "next generation" of pizza — "New Wave Pizza" — is on the scene to add gourmet flair to this country's number-one food.

"New Wave" pizzas begin with pita bread or tortillas and a basic tomato sauce that can be altered with spices and seasonings to create the taste you want. Adding some spicy salsa to the sauce creates the base for a Mexican tortilla pizza. Make "Greek Pizza" in a flash by adding a touch of oregano to the basic tomato sauce, topping pita bread with feta cheese, anchovies and canned black olives. Canned seafoods, casper and goat cheese top a "French Pizza."

Taking advantage of the convenience and versatility of canned items saves time and makes "New Wave" pizzas fast and easy to prepare.

Decorate a pizza with your favorite topping combinations or let guests top their own — just a few minutes under the broiler and you can serve "New Wave" pizza before you know it!

Try one of the following recipes the next time you entertain — it's sure to be a hit, just like apple pie.

Basic Pizza Sauce

1 can (15 ounces) tomato puree
1 can (14 1/2 ounces) whole tomatoes, drained, chopped
1/2 cup finely chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
1/2 teaspoon dried basil leaves
1/4 teaspoon dried tarragon leaves
1/4 teaspoon dried oregano leaves

Combine all ingredients in large skillet; heat to boiling. Reduce heat and simmer 10 minutes. Cool. Makes about 2 1/2 cups

TIP: Basic Pizza Sauce can be prepared up to 3 days in advance; refrigerate, covered. Preparation time: 15 minutes or less

Mexican-Style Pizzas

1/2 cups Basic Pizza Sauce
1/2 cup hot or mild salsa
1 tablespoon minced cilantro or parsley
4 large tortillas
1 can (8 ounces) whole kernel corn, drained
1 can (5 1/2 ounces) canned chicken or turkey, drained
1/2 cup drained canned pinto beans

1 can (4 ounces) green chilies, drained, cut into strips
1 cup (4 ounces) shredded Monterey Jack cheese

Mix Basic Sauce, salsa and cilantro; spread on tortillas. Arrange corn, chicken, pinto beans and chilies over sauce; sprinkle with cheese. Broil until cheese is melted, about 3 minutes. Makes 4 servings. Preparation time: 10 minutes or less

Greek-Style Pizzas

1 cup Basic Pizza Sauce
1 teaspoon dried oregano leaves
4 pita breads
1 can (14 ounces) artichoke hearts, drained, cut into fourths
4 ounces canned ham, cut into julienne strips
1/2 cups sliced onion
1 can (2 ounces) anchovies,

drained (optional)

8 pitted ripe olives, sliced
1/2 cup crumbled feta cheese
Mix Basic Pizza Sauce and oregano; spread on pita breads. Arrange artichoke hearts, ham, onion, anchovies and olives over sauce; sprinkle with cheese. Broil until cheese is melted, about 3 minutes. Makes 4 servings. Preparation time: 10 minutes or less

French-Style Pizzas

1 cup Basic Pizza Sauce
1/4 teaspoon dried tarragon leaves
1/8 teaspoon dried thyme leaves
4 pita breads
1 can (10 ounces) baby or minced clams, drained
1 can (4 1/4 ounces) medium shrimp, rinsed, drained
1 small red pepper, sliced
8 pitted ripe olives, sliced
1 tablespoon drained capers
1/4 cup crumbled goat cheese

Mix Basic Pizza Sauce, tarragon and thyme; spread on pita breads. Arrange clams, shrimp, red pepper and olives sauce. Sprinkle with capers and goat cheese. Boil until cheese is melted, about 3 minutes. Makes 4 servings. Preparation time: 10 minutes or less

Chicken chili is healthy snack

Having a few friends in to watch the Super Bowl on television? The National Broiler Council suggests cooking up a pot of Chicken Chili to keep simmering on the stove and you'll score big for both good taste and nutrition.

Chicken Chili

2 pounds broiler-fryer chicken thighs
1 bag (2 pounds) dried pinto or red kidney beans water

1/4 cup vegetable oil
2 large onions, chopped
3 cloves garlic, minced
2 tablespoons chili powder
1 can (28 ounces) tomatoes
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons crumbled leaf thyme
1/2 teaspoon pepper

Wash and pick over beans. Place in large saucepan and add water to a depth of 2 inches over beans. Bring to a boil, cook 1 minute and cover. Remove from heat and let stand one hour. Return beans to a boil, lower heat and simmer 2 hours or until bean skins burst. Drain beans and reserve cooking liquid. Remove skin and bones from chicken thighs and cut into chunks. In Dutch oven or large, heavy saucepan, place vegetable oil and put over medium-high heat. Add chicken and brown, turning. Remove chicken and reserve. To pan drippings, add onion and garlic and sauté until soft; stir in chili powder and cook 2 minutes. Add tomatoes, breaking up with back of spoon. Add salt, thyme and pepper; bring mixture to a boil. Add reserved chicken, cooked beans and just enough of reserved cooking liquid to cover beans. Stir to blend well, bring to a boil, lower heat and simmer 3 hours, or until beans are tender, adding more cooking liquid if needed. Spoon into serving bowls and, if desired, top with shredded lettuce, shredded Monterey Jack or Cheddar cheese and dollop of sour cream. Makes 12 servings.

Apple Dumpling dessert

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes & Gardens
Food Editor

This homey dessert goes together a lot faster and easier than classic dumplings. Roll up apples, sugar and spice in a tender sour-cream pastry. Serve warm with vanilla or cinnamon ice cream or light cream.

Apple Dumpling Roll-Ups

1 beaten egg
One 8-ounce carton dairy sour cream
2 cups all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon baking soda
1/4 teaspoon salt
4 cups thinly sliced, peeled cooking apples
1/4 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
Lemon Sauce (recipe follows)
2 tablespoons margarine or butter

For dough, in a medium mixing bowl combine egg and sour cream. In a small mixing bowl stir together flour, 2 tablespoons sugar, baking powder, soda and salt; add to sour cream mixture. Mix well.

On a lightly floured surface roll dough to a 12-inch square. Spread apples on top. Combine 1/4 cup sugar, cinnamon and nutmeg; sprinkle on top of apples. Carefully roll up dough. Cut into twelve 1-inch-thick slices. Place slices, cut side down, in greased 13-by-9-by-2-inch baking pan. Pour Lemon Sauce over. Dot with margarine.

Bake, uncovered, in a 350-degree F oven 35 to 40 minutes or until golden. To serve, spoon warm dumplings and juices into individual dessert dishes. Serve with cream or ice cream, if desired. Makes 12 servings.

LEMON SAUCE: Stir together 11/2 cups water, 11/4 cups packed brown sugar, 1 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons cornstarch and 2 tablespoons lemon juice.

Don't blush; men flesh out skin care products

Richard Santaguida of Manhattan applies lotion to his face as Aramis Lab Center counter manager, Jens Wallrabe, background, watches at Bloomingdale's in New York. By ROBERT DVORCHAK
AP National Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Pssst. Yo, buddy.

You can stop sneaking into your wife's beauty cream. Stop slinking around cosmetics counters.

Hey, look, it's the '90s. Times have changed.

"Men have begun to come to grips with their masculinity in a less stereotyped way. They can say, 'I can use this treatment cream and I'm still a man.' But men have to be taught to use the product. They haven't used them since they were a teen-ager like women."

See? That's Byron Donies talking. President of the Aramis division of men's skin care products for Estee Lauder.

Gotta get with it, man.

Fourteen years ago, Estee Lauder's Clinique division sold the first dermatologically designed line of cosmetics made specifically for men. Women's products aren't for men, the makeup makers say, because a man's skin is thicker, oilier and has larger pores. Men also have special shaving-related problems such as ingrown hairs.

Hey, no need to blush. You're not alone. Sales are growing about 15 percent a year. Seventy-five million bucks last year.

Now, nobody's calling that a boom, especially with women shelling out $2.5 billion a year, but... "There's a joke in the industry that men's cosmetics is an explosion with the longest fuse." That's Donies again.

"There's still a stigma attached to some of these products." That's Allan G. Mottus. He's an industry consultant. "Men don't like products positioned as cosmetic or feminine."

No way, Jose. But, if you tell a guy about fragrance-free, oil-free skin-clearing solutions made of crushed apricot pits to exfoliate dead skin cells, shaving gels with cationic polymers to shield skin from razors, non-comedogenic scrubs to ward off blackheads and ingrown hairs, dual action glycerin soaps to clean the face and soften the beard before shaving, translucent balms to relieve razor burns and anti-aging supplements with radical scavengers to reinforce skin — well, we're not exactly talking Chanel No. 5, are we?

Education, dude, education. Aramis has a traveling staff of 200 people to visit department stores around the country to talk one-on-one — to you — about the benefits. Another way to reduce feminine connotations is marketing. Clinique calls a facial cleanser for women clarifying lotion; for men, it's called scruffing lotion. Uh-huh. Men's products also come in manly gray packages. To promote it's Lab Series products, Aramis opened the only cosmetics counter of its kind in the country a year ago in the men's department of Bloomingdale's in New York. Radical, huh?

Two white-coated technicians are on hand to give a computer test to see if skin is oily or dry. In the privacy of a back room, customers can also sample treatments. You know, these days three-quarters of men's cosmetics are bought by women for men. Andrew Shore, an analyst for Shearson Lehman Hutton, figures he knows why:

"Men are intimidated. Men aren't educated about these products. How in the world are you going to get a man to cross a department store floor and stand at the cosmetics counter to ask for moisturizing cream. It's also a big-city phenomenon. You're hard-pressed to see an auto mechanic in Albuquerque buying this stuff."

No, maybe just a little Gillette after-shave for that guy. But wait. Gillette Co. itself plans to introduce tony toiletries next year. Nothing too fancy, says Michele Szyml, a company spokesman:

"I don't think we'll get into anything like mud packs to firm up jowls or toning lotions or bronzers. There's a mindset here. I don't think men have progressed to the point where they're comfortable with makeup."

Wait. For a fraction of the cost, drugstores carry beauty bars, astringents, moisturizers and fragrances rubbing alcohol for oily skin.

"You need to protect your skin beyond cleaning with soap and water." That's Zoe Draclos, a dermatologist in High Point, N.C. "You're no longer a sissy if you put things on your face." Men now sit cheek by jowl with women in hair salons, and the greasy kid stuff has gone the way of the dry look of blow-dried hair perhaps colored to hide the gray. Males of the baby boom are turning 40 and may want to slow down the aging process. Fitness is in. Neanderthals are history.

"Taking care of your skin is part of being healthy, inside and out. It has nothing to do with vanity." That's Mariana Lucinda of Los Angeles, who has a skin care line of tinted moisturizers, aftershave toners and treatments.

"It's taking care of your skin, which is the body's largest organ."

Hey, think about it.

Woman is right to stop sister driving wrong way

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: How do you tell an older member of the family that it's time for her to quit driving? My 78-year-old sister has no business driving. Her hearing and eyesight are not what they used to be, and neither are her reflexes. She should not drive in heavy traffic or on busy expressways.

She terrifies her passengers as she runs red lights, drives over curbs and makes left-hand turns from right-hand lanes. If anyone criticizes her driving, she says, "I've never had an accident in my life!" (She's lucky. Also, when the other drivers see the way she's driving, they get out of her way.)

Would it be better if I told her flat-out to quit driving and let her be mad at me? She may not speak to me again, but wouldn't that be better than letting her kill somebody — or herself?

HER KID SISTER (AGE 64)
DEAR KID SISTER: Contact your Department of Motor Vehicles and tell someone there what you have told me.

Include your sister's full name and her license number, and suggest that she be retested. I am assured by the Los Angeles Police Department that the DMV will do the rest.

If your sister flunks her next driving test, some lives may be saved — including her own. This may not be the law in all states, but if it isn't, it should be.

DEAR ABBY: I was shopping in the city (I live in a suburb), and just as I was coming out of a large department store, a nice-looking, middle-aged man approached me and said politely, "You are such an attractive young woman — would you mind if I took your picture?" (I then noticed a small camera in his hand.)

I was alone and rather startled by this question, but I must admit I was rather pleased by the compliment, so I smiled and said, "All right — go ahead."

He took my picture, then whipped out a pencil and piece of paper and asked, "Where shall I send it?"

Without thinking, I gave him my name and address, then hurriedly went about my business. This happened three weeks ago, and I haven't heard from him. When I tell this to friends, some say the man was using the "May I take your picture" trick as a way to meet me.

Now I am wondering if I was foolish to have given him my name and address.

FOOLISH OR NOT

DEAR FOOLISH: He may have been harmless and sincere, but on the chance that he wasn't, you'd have been wise to have said, "Thank you very much" and kept walking.

DEAR ABBY: I have a co-worker who drinks on the job. She thinks no one knows, yet the smell is overwhelming at times. Other co-workers have made comments to me. My response has been a rather non-committal shrug of the shoulders.

Now, upper-management has confronted me, asking if I have witnessed her drinking or seen any actual bottles, which I have not. They are watching her. Meanwhile, she thinks she's getting away with something.

I would like to see her get help — not fired.

KEEPING MUM

DEAR KEEPING MUM: If ever a person needed a friend, your drinking co-worker does. Be that friend and tip her off. Also suggest that she attend just one meeting of Alcoholics Anonymous. You may be saving not only her job, but her life. Tell her today. Alcoholics Anonymous is listed in every phone directory.

Is your social life in a slump? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular" — for people of all ages. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Astro-Graph

Something you always wanted but were previously unable to afford might come into your possession in the year ahead. Someone who likes you will play a role in bringing this about.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Basically you are not a bashful person who hides his/her light under a bushel, but today you might be reluctant to tell friends about something you did that is worthy of attention and praise. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you to understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your popularity is ascending at this time and you may become involved with someone who will introduce you to two new groups with whom you'll have much in common.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Surprisingly that which appears to be the most difficult could turn out to be the easier for you to perform today. Don't let outward appearances intimidate you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It behooves you to be observant today, because you can gain from studying the example set by another. What this person has done, you can later emulate to your advantage.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Joint ventures should work out rather well for you today, especially those that have been initiated by associates and not from foundations you have laid yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you show a cooperative spirit in your dealings with others today, this will encourage persons to go out of their way to do a bit more for you. Good begets good.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Conditions in general look favorable for you today, but you're likely to do best in situations that are creative, artistic or both. Let the esthetics you emerge.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today you could derive considerable enjoyment from involvements that have elements of friendly competition as well as chance. The game itself will be more important to you than winning.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Let events run their natural courses today, because things have a way of working out to your ultimate benefit, even a situation about which you're worrying more than you should.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Using terms of endeavor in your meaningful relationships will have more impact than usual today. This is because sincerity will motivate your comments.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Conditions that affect your material well-being continue to trend favorably for you. You'll have to be careful, however, not to spend more than you take in.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your assertiveness will be tuned to a high pitch today, but it will be masked with charm and consideration. Companions will find you pleasant, not pushy.

Panhandle edges Lady Harvesters

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Editor

Panhandle freshman Amy Ogletree may have earned herself a permanent spot on the Lady Panthers' starting roster after Tuesday's victory at McNeely Fieldhouse.

Ogletree, making her first start of the year, played like a seasoned veteran when the game was on the line. She poured in 16 second-half points, including back-to-back free throws with two ticks left on the clock, to lead the Lady Panthers in a 61-59 win over Pampa.

The 5-8 freshman, who was standing in for injured teammate Meredith Wood, paced Panhandle with 25 points on the night. She was a perfect 10-for-10 from the foul line, although one of those shots was discounted because of a lane violation.

"Angie doesn't play much like a freshman most of the time," said Panhandle coach Greg Slover, whose team improved its record to 18-4. "She's been a sub and played a bunch for us, but we haven't been starting her until tonight. She came in and did pretty good for us."

Pampa sophomore Nikki Ryan captured the game's top scoring honors with 31 points, including 16 in the second quarter alone. She led the Lady Harvesters to an apparently comfortable 12-point lead in the second quarter and trotted into the locker room at halftime with 24 points. Pampa led by nine, 37-28.

At that rate, Ryan appeared well on her way to breaking the single-game scoring record, set by Yolanda Brown a year ago when she scored 42 points against Lubbock Estacado.

But Panhandle staged a comeback in the second half by limiting Ryan to 7 additional points (all in the third period), causing 15 Pampa turnovers and outscoring the Lady Harvesters, 33-22, in the final 16 minutes.

"This is not the first time we've had an eight-point, nine-point lead and let it slip," said Pampa coach Albert Nichols. "You sit there and watch the turnovers turn into baskets and it's going to cost you in the long run."

While Pampa committed 15 turnovers after halftime, the Lady Panthers surrendered only three. Panhandle's flex offense, meanwhile, was able to penetrate the Lady Harvester defense like clockwork.

"They were using a double pick and it's virtually impossible to get through," said Nichols. "It's not the first time we've seen the flex. We see the flex whenever we play Randall and Levelland."

On the other end of the court, Pampa's offense sputtered in the fourth quarter, contributing only nine points to Panhandle's 19. Amy Throgmorton, who put in 20 points for the Lady Panthers, completed Panhandle's eight-point comeback and tied the score at 55 when she hit a jumper with 4:30 to play.

The score see-sawed for the next four minutes until Pampa junior Sheila Reed knotted the score again at 59. As the clock ticked down to the final two seconds of the game, junior guard Christa West fouled Panhandle's Ogletree, who sunk both charity shots to make it 61-59.

Nikki Ryan took Pampa's inbound pass, but her prayer from halfcourt bounced off the top of the glass at the buzzer.

"We were not passing the ball inside in the fourth quarter," Nichols said. "When you quit doing what has been your success, that's how you lose a two-point ball game."

The Lady Harvesters fell to 10-

11 with the loss. Bridgett Mathis, who contributed 10 points, was the only other Pampa player besides Ryan to score in double figures. Sheila Reed added seven points, all in the fourth quarter.

Pampa hosts Hereford this Friday at 6:30 p.m. The Lady Harvesters enter the game with a 6-5 district record, tied with Lubbock Estacado for fourth place.

Hereford is in third place after Tuesday's 49-36 loss to Randall, one-half game ahead of Pampa.

Paris protects Montana one calorie at a time

By JIM LITKE
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS — The biggest eater in the best-eating town in America has been starving on salad these past few days, and now, between ham hock-sized hands, San Francisco-sized Bubba Paris is holding a reporter by the lapels. And staring hungrily.

Only a few meals away from the Super Bowl, Paris had plucked this average-sized specimen from among many and lifted him onto a platform inside the cavernous Superdome to make a point.

"Let me show you how," Paris said, and a collective prayer goes up from the unplucked that the 49ers' fine offensive tackle is talking now about blocking — and not about eating. Because when Bubba is feasting on the media, the topics are almost inseparable.

Yes, Bubba answers with practiced patience, he was always big, and yes, he was always sensitive about it.

Yes, he allows, he is bigger today, perhaps bigger than ever, and depending on whom you believe, much, much, much bigger.

And yes, he said again, there is purpose to this added poundage. His name is Joe Montana.

"Joe is so small, so frail, that he's about the size of my youngest son. I figure I have to be this big," Paris said, "to protect the both of us."

And so every calorie taken in — and there are many — is taken in in the name of prevention. The sacks that keep Bubba Paris awake at night are not always the ones with food in them.

Former San Francisco coach Bill Walsh kept Bubba awake plenty of nights as well. Soon after the 49ers drafted the Louisville native by way of the University of Michigan, Walsh told Bubba to get down to 300 pounds and stay there. When that didn't work, Walsh ridiculed him, fined him and shipped him out to a fat farm.

None of it worked for long. "Bill messed with him a lot mentally," said Steve Wallace, who shares the tackle spot with Paris and is his closest friend on the Niners. "In some ways, I think the constant pounding it into him actually made Bubba gain weight."

"I mean what difference does one pound or 20 pounds make," Wallace added, "as long as he gets the job done."

When George Seifert took over for Walsh this season, he laid down a more tolerant (waist)line. Indeed, the only nod to the weighty struggles of the past carried over by the new regime was to continue listing Paris' weight in the San Francisco media guide at 299 pounds.

Wishful thinking. One teammate who snuck a peek at the 6-foot-6 Paris on a scale several weeks ago confided the real number was 348; suffice it to say that a surveyor might be needed for an accurate assessment today.

But it wasn't always so.

"I was a skinny guy at Michigan," Paris offered, "about 270."

"But they kept me there year round and worked me like a dog. Besides," he added, "I didn't have any money then to go McDonald's."

Edberg advances, moves closer to No. 2 tour ranking

By STEVE WILSTEIN
AP Tennis Writer

MELBOURNE, Australia — A wild celebration by serene Swede Stefan Edberg — he raised both fists and smiled — punctuated a victory that could help him vault past Boris Becker in the chase for Ivan Lendl's No. 1 spot.

Edberg, ranked No. 3, said he was "pumped" as he reached the semifinals of the Australian Open today along with No. 1 Lendl, while No. 2 Becker went bye-bye.

That narrowed the gap between Edberg and Becker in the tour computer rankings, and spoiled the West German's chances of catching Lendl at least until the summer.

If Edberg goes on to beat fellow Swede Mats Wilander, Becker's conqueror, in the semifinals and win the Australian for the third time, he could take over the No. 2 spot and move within striking distance of Lendl.

Edberg may not have an easy time beating Wilander, who whipped precision passing shots through swirling winds against the net-charging Becker to beat him 6-4, 6-4, 6-2.

That kept Wilander on track for a fourth Australian championship and ended Becker's bid for a third straight Grand Slam title to go with his Wimbledon and U.S. Open triumphs.

It was a wacky day of weather at the National Tennis Center, where at least 50 fans among the crowd of about 20,000 were treated for heat exhaustion.

The temperature on the rubber-bottomed hard courts hit 115 degrees, down from the 140 degrees on Tuesday, but the dry, hot winds of up to 35 mph tossed around baseline shots. Away from the court, the temperature reached 99 degrees.

The fickle weather changed late in the Wilander-Becker match in mid-afternoon, with the wind dying down a little and the court temperature dropping to a relatively mild 90.

Wilander, winner of the Australian in 1983, 1984 and 1988, had been struggling the past year and fell to No. 15 in the rankings, but he came back to show his old form in beating No. 2 Becker.

Becker, two sets down in his previous match against Miloslav Mecir, could produce no magical escape this time. He grew increasingly frustrated by Wilander's passing shots and finally backed up to the baseline and played his opponent's style.

Super Bowl still a thrill for some

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS — Old hat? The Super Bowl is like a whole new wardrobe to some 49ers and Broncos.

While many veterans of these encounters try to play down the scene this week — going as far as warning young players to avoid the pitfalls of Bourbon Street, as Ronnie Lott did — just as many are getting more excited each day, along with the kids.

"The happiest day of my life will be Sunday, when the game starts," said Ron Holmes, a five-year veteran who spent the first four seasons of his NFL career far from any championships. He was a defensive end for the abysmal Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

"But I've got a lot of joy this week because I'm lucky enough to be in a Super Bowl, what a lot of guys never get a chance to do."

Holmes couldn't have imagined he would wind up here, starting for the AFC champions, not even when he expressed his unhappiness in Tampa. His expectations were slightly lower when he was dealt to the Broncos before the season.

"Football is a business," he said. "Once you tell a team you're not happy or other teams know you want to be traded, a team is lucky to get a third or fourth-round (draft choice) for you."

"I was happy with the trade because I knew Denver was after me in 1987. I knew they needed me, wanted me, and I would be able to play."

"In my years in Tampa, we never went 8-8, which is what the Broncos were last year. I thought, '8-8, wow, that's great.'"

"A year ago, at Miami, I was looking at all these other guys getting ready for the Super Bowl. If I wasn't traded, I'd be deep up there in the stands, watching. Finally, now I'm going to be on the football field. I never thought it would happen."

Matt Millen felt it might happen again for him. Millen won two Super Bowls with the Raiders, once in Oakland and once in Los Angeles, but was released before the season. The Los Angeles Rams and 49ers showed interest in the 10-year veteran linebacker.

"I saw a chance to get here with both teams," Millen said.

"Both teams were confident," he said in comparing the approaches of the Raiders and 49ers to the Super Bowl. "But the Raiders told people about it. They liked the fact they could tell you about it."

"Here, a guy like Ronnie Lott will sit there and not say it, but he knows it, he knows he can do it."

And how does Matt Millen feel?

"I still get a big kick out of every game during the season," he said. "So you can imagine how I am for this."

"Anyway, everything went the way I planned it."

Things sort of went the way Chet Brooks planned them, with one unfortunate exception. Brooks was on injured reserve for last year's Super Bowl, "bored as hell watching all this from the sidelines."

He vowed then that if the 49ers got back, he would play a bigger part. When his buddy and mentor, Jeff Fuller, nearly was paralyzed against New England and forced to retire, Brooks owned the strong safety spot.

"Jeff always was telling me to be patient, like your mother always tells you that good things come to those who wait," Brooks said. "I'm not one that likes to wait."

"I was looking forward to the competition with Jeff all year. Competition makes friends even closer. There's no animosity."

"In camp, I didn't think I was going to the bench, Jeff didn't think he was going to the bench, and Ronnie knew he wasn't going. When you're not playing, it's no fun at all."

"I never wanted anything like this to happen, although I feel I earned my place. I talk to Jeff a lot and we won't let it be forgotten that he's still part of the team."

SUPER BOWL XXIV

Lady Pirates rebound with victory over Claude

By L.D. STRATE

LEFORS — After a disappointing loss to White Deer last week in a District 3-1A opener, the Lefors Lady Pirates didn't want two straight district setbacks. No need to worry. The Lady Pirates bounced back with a 60-50 win over Claude Tuesday night.

"We really needed to win this one. We played a little better than we did last week against White Deer," said Lefors coach Richard Moore.

Lefors evened its district record at 1-1 and improved to 16-3 for the season. Claude is 0-2 in district and 14-10 overall.

"The four teams in this district are pretty evenly-matched," Moore said. "I don't know if any team could get through it without losing one or two games."

Lefors did have to overcome some early turnovers and trailed three different times in the first quarter. However, the Lady Pirates never fell behind again after Carrie Watson's jumper gave her team a 13-11 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Lefors ran off six unanswered points to start the second quarter and went into halftime leading by eight, 28-20. Claude could have helped itself from the foul line, especially in the first half, but the Lady Mustangs went a paltry 4 of 17 from the line.

Lefors bested Claude from both the floor and foul line. The Lady Pirates were 22 of 54 (40.7%) from the floor and 14 of 28 (50.0%) from the foul line. Claude was 18 of 50 (36.0%) from the floor and 14 of 33 (42.4%) from the line.

Lefors led by as many as 15 points in the second half, using a sticky fullcourt press to keep the visitors in check.

Claude managed to cut the deficit to nine, 51-42, on Linda Stephenson's free throw at the 3:27 mark in the fourth quarter, but the Lady Mustangs wouldn't get any closer.

Watson led the Lady Pirates in scoring with 18 points, connecting on 7 of 14 field goal attempts, including a pair of 3-pointers. Kellie Lake followed with 11 points.

Claude's Michelle Stoffle had game scoring honors with 20 points. Gigi Baggerman chipped in 10.

Lefors lost to White Deer, 50-31, in the district opener last Friday night, but the Lady Pirates had gone two weeks without playing.

"That long layoff hurt us, but last night's win really helped us," Moore said.

Others scoring for Lefors were Jennifer Moore with nine points, Danna Davis and Susie Davis with eight points each, Shellie Lake, four, and Howdi Cotham, two.

Claude held off Lefors in the fourth quarter for a 73-66 win in the boys' clash.

"Claude has a good team. They've got about nine guys who can play some ball," Moore said.

Ronnie Campbell led Claude's scoring attack with 28 points and two other players scored in double figures to offset a 30-point performance by Lefors Jarrod Slatten.

Lefors trimmed Claude's lead to four points late in the game, but the Pirates lost some of its scoring punch when Dusty Roberson fouled out. Roberson finished the night with 15 points.

Also scoring for Lefors were Rodney Nickel with seven, Mike Bowley, six; Kevin Mayfield, four; Jason Boggs, three, and Lee Villareal, one.

Claude is 2-0 in the district race and 11-12 overall. Lefors is 1-1 and 8-9.

Tarpley scores 11 points in Mavericks' victory

By JAY JORDEN
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Forward Roy Tarpley, reinstated to the Dallas Mavericks after his suspension for violating terms of his substance abuse after-care program is playing again sooner than expected — with his coach's blessing.

Tarpley came off the bench in the fourth period Tuesday night against the Washington Bullets, scoring 11 points in 12 minutes before the Mavericks won 129-105.

"The game dictated giving him the opportunity to relax and do it, rather than having to go in on a 4-point game under a lot of pressure," said Mavericks coach Richie Adubato. "So we were very lucky tonight."

"Roy is going to have to be accepted by our team and to earn a lot of his playing time."

Tarpley, who had not been expected to play until Friday, said it felt good to be back on court.

"I felt it was okay, you know. It was a mixed reception but it felt good," he said after the game. "I expected that and I'm glad it's over with now. So hopefully it will get a little better Friday."

That's when Tarpley, who was reinstated following a strict drug after-care program, is expected to play against the Sacramento Kings.

"We are going to trust him but it really won't be the same as the last couple of times, where we really honestly believed that he would never have a problem again," said center James Donaldson.

Tarpley, who was left alone throughout his latest suspension on orders of Mavericks owner Donald Carter, made the recovery on his own, said Dr. David Lewis of the ASAP Family Treatment Center in Van Nuys, Calif.

"Mr. Carter was taking a 'tough-love' approach," said Lewis, who lifted the suspension Monday. "A person who's an alcoholic or an addict needs to take responsibility for the recovery."

"That's one of the things I saw Roy doing for the last two weeks, for sure. He was enthusiastic, focused on his own recovery. He didn't ask me, 'When am I going to get back?'"

When asked what was the toughest part of returning from a 34-game absence, he quipped, "Akeem," referring to Houston Rockets All-Star center Akeem Olajuwon. But he said he wasn't worried about starting for the team.

Other Mavericks players said they were relieved that Tarpley didn't feel like he could immediately reclaim his starting position.

"We can't be married to the guy, emotionally, anymore," team captain Rolando Blackman said. "I don't know if he can handle himself, at this point. We thought that before, and he couldn't."

He was the NBA's leading rebounder when he was suspended Nov. 16, one day after he was arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated and resisting arrest. The suspension cost Tarpley more than $240,000.

Beaumont woman remembers Spindletop boom days

By LISA VIATOR
Beaumont Enterprise

BEAUMONT (AP) — Ethel Alice Slauson thinks all this fuss everybody's making over the recent opening of the Texas Energy Museum is just fine. And she recognizes the importance of educating the public about the impact the 1901 Lucas Gusher made on the world.

But Mrs. Slauson, 95, is one up on even the most edified of Spindletop-era historians. While the scholars research the days when a gusher would erupt and oil would rain over the village-turned-boomtown, Mrs. Slauson remembers tipping over the black gold-covered grounds.

When the Lucas Gusher blew in on Jan. 10, 1901, Mrs. Slauson was 5 years old and living in Houston. Her father, J.T. "Captain Jack" Shockley, shrewdly realized that the oil blanketing the sleepy little village to the east meant opportunity.

"Word went out like wildfire when they struck that gusher," she said. "Everybody who could get here came. I mean they flocked here like fleas on dogs."

So Captain Jack and his wife, Polly Ann, pulled up a couple of kegs of nails and sat down and discussed the possibilities of a life for their family at Spindletop. "He wanted to get in on the ground floor," Mrs. Slauson said. "Papa said, 'That (Spindletop City) is going to be a flair, let's get into something there.'"

So he loaded his wife and eight children into a carriage and headed for the boomtown. And they didn't waste any time seeking their own sort of fortune in the new promised land. Going on the advice of her mother who observed "everybody's got to eat," Polly Ann opened a rooming and boarding house.

Captain Jack quickly realized the roughnecks would demand an occasional break from the fields, and hung his shingle on a saloon and gambling house. He also operated a livery and hack service, a sort of turn-of-the-century cab company. Mrs. Slauson said both family businesses turned a tidy profit.

Many of the oilfield workers lived in the Shockley boarding house. "Mama made money hand over fist," she said. "It was nothing for a boarder to drink a cup of coffee, lay a five dollar bill on the table and walk out." And even if a villager wasn't contributing to the Shockley family economy by living in or eating at the boarding house, they were likely belying up to Captain Jack's bar.

Mrs. Slauson remembers the men of Spindletop City as an earthy bunch who enjoyed the simple pleasures, like a shot of whiskey chased with a frothy mug of beer. "Cocktails?" she sniffed. "We didn't know what that was. A Fanny Lou cocktail or a Betty Lou, we didn't know about that kind of stuff."

Mrs. Slauson said another favorite pastime of the men was a lively game of poker. "In those days, it was hotshot gambling," she said. "You didn't play for pennies, you played for big money. All the big money that was in Texas and as far as New York and across the sea that could get here (did) when that gusher was struck."

The children of Spindletop also found a way to capitalize on the oil field workers' poker playing. "They'd set up a little poker game in those fields, and they'd let us watch," she recalled. "When a well would come in they'd rush out to it." The youngsters would comb the area around the makeshift card tables and spirit off with the coins the workers had dropped in their haste to stake a claim.

And when the ground rumbled as the gushers blew in, Mrs. Slauson said commotion permeated the city along with the oil. "Did you ever hear a gusher blow in?" she said. "Well, you'd better believe it was exciting. You'd think all hell broke loose."

But after dozens of ear-shattering eruptions, Mrs. Slauson said Spindletop residents learned to take the gushers in stride. She smilingly added that she'd often sneak up to the machinery after the hullabaloo died down and run her fingers along the capped derrick.

The citizens of Spindletop also took time off to enjoy their newfound wealth. Mrs. Slauson said there were dances every Saturday night at a tool warehouse on what is now West Port Arthur Road. And Captain Jack was always ready to hitch up the family surrey and take his clan for rides around the village and neighboring grounds.

Mrs. Slauson said her life has been one filled with "heavenly blessings," and counts growing up amid the bustle of the Spindletop boom town as one of her favorite godsend.

Although she admits her memory may not be what it once was, she can still spin a colorful tale about those times and insists that her recollections of her childhood in the boom town are accurate. "It was all there in the open and I don't have to exaggerate," she said. "And I wouldn't tell you any tales about old Spindletop."

Ethel Alice Slauson visits Gladys City for the first time and talks about the Southeast Texas oil boom. She also says she remembers the day the Spindletop gusher blew in.

Judge: No probation without castration

GREENSBURG, Pa. (AP) — A judge sentenced a man who sexually abused a girl to a 30- to 60-year jail term and recommended he not be granted early release unless he is castrated or medically treated to eliminate his sex drive.

Common Pleas President Judge Gilfert M. Mihalich acknowledged Monday that his sentence for Samuel Elbert Powell, 42, might not be binding.

But Mihalich said he was trying to encourage legislators to consider making castration a legal punishment in some cases.

"I'm trying to tell the Legislature to eliminate the menace," the judge said. "Incarceration alone is not the remedy for the menace caused by sexual urges. If you eliminate that sexual urge, I think it eliminates the menace."

Powell was charged with committing 25 criminal acts against the girl, now 9 years old, from 1986 to 1988. He pleaded guilty to 23 counts.

He has been charged with sexual crimes in several states in the past, starting when he was 16, and has served more than five years in prison for sex crimes and burglary.

Assistant District Attorney Rita Hathaway said she did not anticipate the recommendation regarding castration.

But, she added, "I'm all for it."
