Soviet Union moving closer to democratic state

By DEBORAH G. SEWARD

Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) - Communist Party leaders today agreed to surrender their monopoly on power guaranteed by the Soviet Constitution, allowing rival parties to compete for the first time in more than seven decades, a delegate said.

The decision by the powerful party Central Committee was a victory for President Mikhail S. Gorbachev in his drive to transform the party from a static oligarchy to a modern political force able to compete for power.

Svyatoslav Fyodorov, a famed eye surgeon and participant in the three-day meeting in the Kremlin, said the committee agreed to support abolishing the constitution's Article 6, which guarantees power to the Communist Party.

"Article 6 will no longer be, there will be a multiparty system. There will be a normal democracy," Fyodorov said. He called the move "fantastic."

The official news agency Tass and official Radio Moscow reported the approval of the platform, but did not provide details. They said the document would be published in official newspapers.

Both hard-line Communists and reformers had sharply criticized Gorbachev's platform, with hard-liners complaining he was going too far and reformers saying he failed to go far enough.

Populist leader Boris N. Yeltsin cast the only vote against the platform, Fyodorov said, apparently because it was not radical enough. Yeltsin on Sunday addressed a huge crowd that gathered outside the Kremlin to demand reforms, and he promised to present the demands to the Central Committee.

There also was one abstention, Fyodorov said.

There were few major changes in the document Gorbachev presented to the Central Committee on Monday, he said.

The 249-member Central Committee was joined in the meeting by more than 700 other officials from around the Soviet Union, and all were allowed to vote on the platform, he said.

The committee agreed to move up the date of the next party Congress from October to no later than July, Radio Moscow said. The Congress, the most powerful party body, is the only group that has the right to choose a new Central Committee.

The Central Committee, the party's policy-making body, is considered by reformers to be the main bastion of hard-liners wary of Gorbachev's reform program, and the Congress offers Gorbachev the last step in a long struggle to reform the committee to his liking.

Sources inside the Central Committee meeting said the committee would recommend to the Supreme Soviet parliament that it delete Article 6.

The Supreme Soviet could take up the issue at its meeting next week.

Final authority rests with the Supreme Soviet's parent legislative body, the Congress of People's Deputies. At its last meeting in December, the Congress of People's Deputies heeded Gorbachev's plea and blocked an effort by reformers to strike Article 6.

But since then, Gorbachev said it would be "no tragedy" if a multiparty system develops in the Soviet Union. He told the Central Committee on Monday that rather than relying on constitutional guarantees, the party must prove its worthiness to govern.

The Central Committee, which had been scheduled to meet only two days, continued to consider how to deal with the breakaway party in Lithuania, which split from the national Communist Party in December.

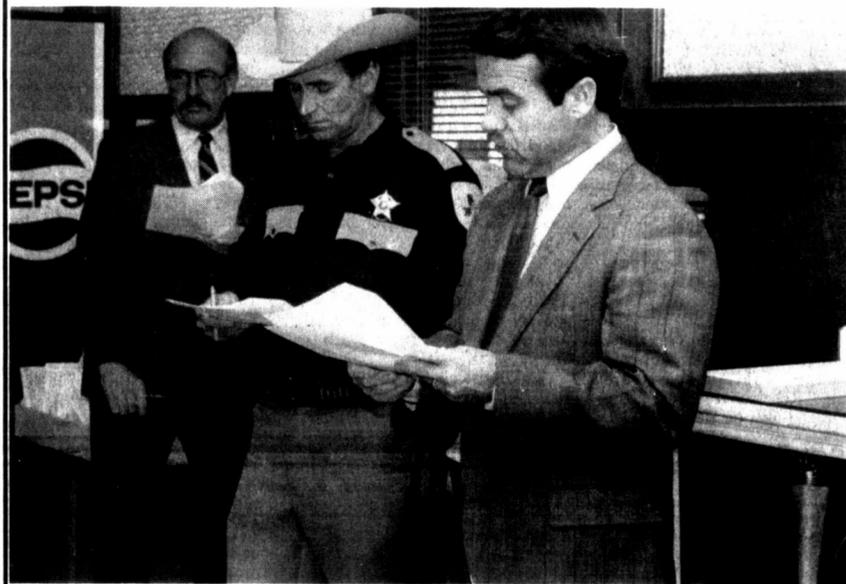

Gorbachev and his advisers were turning their attention after the Central Committee meeting to talks with U.S. Secretary of State James A. Baker III, who arrived today in Moscow.

Most speakers during debate Tuesday agreed the Communists must end their political monopoly, but Gorbachev's plans for the party's future - and his tenure itself - drew harsh criticism from hard-liners.

Yegor K. Ligachev, a leading orthodox Politburo member, was applauded Tuesday for a speech that blamed Gorbachev's reform program for the country's dire economic situation and nationalist upheavals, a committee source said.

Ligachev, according to Tass, demanded that the party platform emphasize the sacredness of party unity and said he firmly opposes allowing private property, a demand of radical reformers.

West Germany creates committee to study decisions on reunification

By TERENCE PETTY

Associated Press Writer

WEST BERLIN (AP) - The West German government today created a select committee to prepare for eventual German reunification and agreed to pursue immediate talks with East Germany on using a single currency.

Rudolf Seiters, Chancellor Helmut Kohl's chief of staff, said the committee began its work immediately under the chancellor's leadership. Other panel members include Cabinet ministers in Kohl's government.

Seiters said the panel will examine all the steps and decisions necessary for unification, including creation of a monetary union, East German economic reforms and legal questions, as well as issues of foreign policy and security.

He made the announcement after Kohl's Cabinet met to hear the chancellor's proposal for urgent talks with East Germany on uniting the two nations' currencies, which would be a giant leap toward reunification. A monetary union would make the West German mark East Germany's currency and turn over much of East Germany's economic sovereignty to West Germany and its central bank.

Kohl, under domestic pressure to relieve the influx of thousands of East Germans seeking better jobs and housing in the West, said Tuesday: "People in East Germany must see now that citizens of West Germany are ready to help."

Nonetheless, new signs are emerging that both German states may have to make huge sacrifices to rescue East Germany's ailing economy.

A newspaper quoted officials as saying that under reunification, West Germany would have to pay billions to salvage East Germany's economy.

In East Berlin today, three leftist opposition movements agreed to join forces and campaign as a coalition for East Germany's March 18 elections, said the ADN news agency. The three are New Forum, Democracy Now and the Initiative for Peace and Human Rights, said ADN. New Forum is East Germany's best-known pro-democracy movement.

Three conservative opposition groups, including the Democratic Awakening, have also joined forces for East Germany's first free elections.

Kohl said details for talks with East Germany on reunification would be worked out when Premier Hans Modrow of East Germany visits Bonn next week.

Kohl did not give a deadline for the monetary union, but government sources said on condition of anonymity that Kohl shared Finance Minister Theodor Waigel's view that it should come before the end of the year.

Lung implant recipient dies early today

By PEG McENTEE

Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - The world's first recipient of a device that works like a lung died early today, 4 1/2 days after surgeons implanted the mechanism.

LDS Hospital spokesman Tim Madden said the teen-age girl from Texas who received the experimental IntraVascular Oxygenator - a slender, 20-inch bundle of hollow synthetic fibers that delivers oxygen to the body - died at 5:30 a.m.

He said he could provide no other details immediately.

The device - designed for temporary use to allow the lungs to rest and recover - was implanted in a major vein during two hours of surgery Friday in a girl with acute respiratory failure.

She reportedly was a 16-year-old from Texas, but her parents had asked that no details about their daughter or her condition be made public.

The Paris News in North Texas reported that the girl was from Paris, about 80 miles northeast of Dallas, and that she suffered from pneumonia.

It was unclear how long doctors had planned to leave the device inside the girl. Food and Drug Administration guidelines limit implants to seven days, and Madden had said any use beyond a week would require further FDA permission.

LDS Hospital is one of four medical centers authorized by the FDA for clinical testing of the IVOX.

The others are Hershey Medical Center at Pennsylvania State University, the University of Michigan Medical Center in Ann Arbor and the Los Angeles County-University of Southern California Medical Center.

Developed by Salt Lake City-based CardioPulmonics Inc., the device can satisfy as much as half of the body's need for oxygen delivery and carbon dioxide removal.

External tubes the size of a soda straw are connected to the device. One tube delivers oxygen from a hospital system or oxygen tank; the other tube removes carbon dioxide from the body.

Bush stays busy on campaign trails

By TOM RAUM

Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - President Bush will spend a good part of this election year traveling about, mixing politics with war. And with peace. And maybe with the environment, education, crime and the battle against drugs as well.

Any time Bush mixes a political appearance with an "official" presidential event, it reduces the amount the Republican Party must pay for his appearance.

In this congressional election year, people can expect to see Bush making plenty of stops combining political and non-political events.

Some critics see the tactic as a partial taxpayer subsidy for political activity. In any event, Bush is not the first president to do it, nor likely to be the last.

This week's three-state swing, focusing on national defense issues, is a good example of mixing the business of politics with the nation's business.

On Tuesday, Bush's first stop in Southern California was to watch Army war games in the Mojave Desert and to talk to U.S. troops.

Afterward he came to Los Angeles for an evening $1,000-a-plate GOP fundraiser for Sen. Pete Wilson, who is running for governor of California.

Election law requires political parties or candidates to pay for purely political visits by a president - and the cost of moving a president and his entourage can be quite high.

Thus, the fact that Bush had an official event in the same state as the fundraiser means taxpayers will bear some of the cost of the visit, on a pro-rated basis.

Further official stops today - a foreign policy speech in San Francisco and a tour of a laboratory where Star Wars research is done - will also trim the cost to California Republicans for getting Bush to the Wilson fundraiser.

On Thursday, Bush will combine a visit to the Strategic Air Command Headquarters in Omaha, Neb., with a fundraising breakfast for Nebraska's Republican Gov. Kay Orr. The SAC tour will help defray the cost to the Nebraska GOP.

Then, before returning to Washington, he will tour a Head Start center in Columbus, Ohio. The political twin? An Ohio GOP dinner.

"This should be a very good trip, emphasizing some of our defense requirements, needs. And a little politics mixed in here," Bush told reporters accompanying him aboard Air Force One. "We'll be doing more of that this year."

"It raises a serious question about abuse of taxpayer funds," said Ellen Miller, director of the Center for Responsive Politics in Washington D.C., a private organization that studies the role of money in politics.

Braun waives preliminary hearing on knifing charge

RATON, N.M. (AP) - A Kansas man charged with killing five people in four states last July waived a preliminary hearing Tuesday and was bound over for trial in district court for allegedly having a homemade knife in the jail.

Gregg Francis Braun - was ordered to stand trial on a charge of possession of a deadly weapon by a prisoner.

Magistrate Archie Valdez continued Braun's bond at $100,000.

Braun, 28, also is being held at the Colfax County Detention Center on $1 million bond in connection with the July 23 point-blank shooting death of Springer convenience store clerk Geraldine Valdez, no relation to the magistrate.

The weapon possession charge was filed after Braun allegedly threatened jail administrator Chuck Talley with a homemade knife, or shank, when Talley entered the day room on Christmas Day to give Braun coffee.

Authorities said Talley pretended he was going to throw the coffee on Braun, and was able to leave the room when Braun stepped back.

Assistant District Attorney Leslie Skinner said today that the weapon was never found.

Braun also had been charged aggravated assault on a peace officer or assault by a prisoner, which were dropped.

Skinner said a date for a trial on the weapon possession charge will be set after the charge is filed in district court later this week.

Braun's trial on a first-degree murder charge in the death of Ms.

Valdez is set for May 7.

Braun also is charged with two counts of murder in the July 19 shooting deaths of two convenience store clerks in his hometown of Garden City, Kan., and with first-degree murder in the July 21 shooting death of a woman in an Ardmore, Okla., flower shop. He also is charged with murdering Pete Spurrier, the owner of a photo processing shop, in Pampa, Texas, on July 20.

Braun said at an August preliminary hearing that he killed Ms. Valdez but has denied involvement in other slayings. Ms. Valdez, 48, was shot twice in the head.

Finney County Attorney Rick Pierce in Garden City has said Braun will be sent to Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas, in that order, after his murder trial in New Mexico.

Chief Appraiser Pat Bagley, second from right, administers the oath of office to the 1990 Gray County Appraisal Review Board members at their first meeting Tuesday at the appraisal district offices here. From left, Milo Carlson, Bill Davis, Dudley Steele and Roy Sparkman receive the oath. Absent from the meeting was G.W. "Bill" Dingus. Carlson and Steele are returning members to the board.

Steele elected to head Appraisal Review Board

Dudley Steele was elected chairman of the Appraisal Review Board of the Gray County Appraisal District during a Tuesday meeting.

Milo Carlson was elected vice chairman of the group during the meeting, the first of the new board. Both Steele and Carlson are returning members.

Bill Davis, Roy Sparkman and G.W. "Bill" Dingus are new members on the board.

The minutes of a protest hearing held Dec. 6 were unanimously approved and routine changes to appraisal records were unanimously approved.

The board discussed considering a procedural change in the way it conducts protest hearings and directed Chief Appraiser Pat Bagley to formulate a policy in writing for consideration at the next meeting.

Carlson suggested that each side in a protest hearing be allowed a maximum of 20 minutes to present their cases, with 10 minutes of rebuttal allowed by each side. Under the proposal, any waivers of the times deemed necessary by the board could be granted.

Witness says Hazelwood admitted he was problem

By LINDA DEUTSCH Associated Press Writer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) - Coast Guard officers who boarded the Exxon Valdez as it created the nation's worst oil spill asked Capt. Joseph Hazelwood to explain the problem, and a witness said he replied: "You're looking at it."

Defense attorney Michael Chalos suggested that Hazelwood's reply referred to the overall situation on the crippled tanker.

But Exxon Valdez chief radio officer Joel Roberson, who related the statement in court Tuesday, disagreed with that interpretation.

"I took it to mean that he meant himself," Roberson said.

Minutes after Hazelwood's interrogation, a Coast Guard commander came to his radio office to use a phone, Roberson said.

"I overheard the commander saying, 'I smelled alcohol on his breath. I want a technician out here,'" Roberson recalled.

Blood tests on Hazelwood taken

10 1/2 hours after the tanker ran aground, showed a blood-alcohol content 0.061 percent, lower than many states' driving 0.1 limit but above the 0.04 federal limit for operating a commercial vessel.

Superior Court Judge Karl Johnstone suggested out of the jury's presence that the prosecution was failing to address a critical issue - whether there was liquor found aboard the Exxon Valdez that night.

If no liquor was found, he said, it would mean that Hazelwood's blood-alcohol level might have been much higher earlier in the evening.

The first two days of testimony in Hazelwood's criminal trial have focused on his alcohol consumption in the hours before the ship set out on its doomed journey.

Shortly after midnight last March 24, the tanker hit Bligh Reef, spilling more than 10 million gallons of oil into Prince William Sound.

The disaster killed thousands of fish, birds and animals and blackened hundreds of miles of shoreline.

Exxon has said it spent more than $2 billion on the cleanup.

Roberson remembered being jolted from his sleep by a rumbling but said he didn't immediately realize the ship had grounded.

"I sensed that it was something very serious," he said. "I noticed vapors enough to make my eyes water. I noticed the ship was listing."

When he went above, he said, "There was a stream of water shooting up into the air on deck about 40 to 50 feet high."

Soon, he said, "There was a commotion of people coming aboard," including the Coast Guardsmen who were met by Hazelwood.

"One gentleman asked what the nature of the problem was," said Roberson. "Captain Hazelwood said, 'You're looking at it.'"

Hazelwood, 43, of Huntington, N.Y., is being tried on a felony charge of second-degree criminal mischief, and misdemeanor charges of reckless endangerment, negligent discharge of oil and operating a vessel while intoxicated.

Fort Worth woman spearheads campaign against 'Geraldo' talk show

By PATRICE GRAVINO
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Lynda Beams doesn't care if Geraldo Rivera interviews battered lesbian lovers, topless donut shop operators, and transsexuals on his talk show — but not in front of her kids.

"It's soft-core pornography," said Mrs. Beams, who is at the forefront of a national grassroots movement against Rivera's controversial program.

The Fort Worth woman would like the show taken off the air, but will settle for it being moved from its after-school time slot.

"It's an adult talk show and it airs when most adults are at work and children are at home," she says.

Mrs. Beams joins a growing number of people who have complained to their local TV stations about Geraldo. Some stations are listening.

Rivera publicist Jeff Erdel said Geraldo is being carried by 199 stations — all but a handful of network TV markets, and up from 162 stations a year ago. But he said 25 percent of the stations have let Rivera know they're not happy with his show.

Mrs. Beams said she has "been hearing from parents all over our country and Puerto Rico — doctors, lawyers, housewives — wanting to know what they can do" to persuade local stations to change the time Geraldo is on, or to cancel it. Meanwhile, Rivera and the show's producers have pledged a return to "more substantive issues" in an effort to win back sponsors and viewers.

But some stations are holding out on renewals. "We haven't quite decided about Geraldo," said Joe Bell, program director of KDFW in Dallas, which lost numerous sponsors for the show after Mrs. Beams contacted them.

She asked that the program be rescheduled from 4 p.m., but so far the station has refused.

Jerry Eaton, program director of KYW in Philadelphia said his station hasn't decided whether to keep Geraldo after August.

"We want to assess the new direction of the show and do a little consumer research and see if it makes sense for us," Eaton said. "(Rivera) needs to broaden his scope a bit and find a wider range of subjects. We're anxious to see what they put on the air."

In Augusta, Ga., WAGT moved Geraldo from 5 p.m. to 10 a.m. in September after sponsors pulled out because of citizen complaints, led by Claire Tankersley.

Mrs. Tankersley said she boiled after her 4-year-old watched a Geraldo show in which a prostitute graphically described being sexually abused as a child.

"I was so horrified and aghast that something like that would be on at 4 p.m.," Mrs. Tankersley said. "I'm not for censorship, but I just don't think that kids should be exposed."

"Sounds familiar," said Jeffrey Ulrich, program director of WROC in Rochester, N.Y., which had so many complaints about Geraldo last year that it canceled the program with three months left on the contract.

"The opposition we were receiving on the show was tremendous. Geraldo really raised a stink here," Ulrich said.

KNSS in San Diego took Geraldo off the air two weeks ago because advertisers withdrew, complaining about the show's content, said station controller Jay Belbey.

"We are considering moving it to a different time period," Belbey said.

Mrs. Beams in Fort Worth started her campaign against Geraldo after seeing a show in which Rivera interviewed guests about bestiality.

"He asked them if they had had sex with animals," she said. "I turned it off."

Other shows that raised viewers' ire include:

- "Men in Lace Panties"
 - "Kids Who Murder in the Name of Satan"
 - "When the Other Woman Is a Man"
 - "Kiddie Porn Underground"
- "I don't think it's wrong that some of these issues are addressed," said Ulrich. "But it's the way Geraldo exploited them. Phil Donahue could cover them and you wouldn't get the same complaints. Geraldo's problem lies in his exaggeration and sensationalism."

Last month at the National Association of Television Program Executives convention in New Orleans, Rivera and his producers courted program directors with promises of a changed Geraldo.

Executive producer Martin M. Berman said the show "went a little wild" during the November 1989 ratings period when it was competing for viewers against The Oprah Winfrey Show in 125 markets.

"We were pandering, and I'm changing to preserve my own reputation," Rivera recently told Electronic Media, an industry publication.

Erdel said that "in order to get back on track, Geraldo has pledged that through the '90s, (his) programs ... will be addressing more substantive issues."

"He's started doing that already," Erdel said, pointing to Thursday's show about migrant farm workers. He said stations are showing "very strong support" and advertisers are coming back.

Rivera is "very serious about this," Erdel said. "That's all fine," said Ulrich in Rochester, N.Y., station. "But I think he's going to have a hard time getting program directors and station managers and viewers to believe Geraldo is going to be any different."

Hobby: School finance reform probably means new taxes

By RUTH RENDON
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby says the state's school finance system could be revamped without raising taxes, but it would mean cutting aid to larger school districts.

"We could meet the mandate of the Texas Supreme Court without spending another dime. I have a computer printout showing how to do it," Hobby told about 700 attending a luncheon Tuesday at the Hyatt Regency Hotel.

"But this would cut aid to the Dallas Independent School District by $59 million a year, to Houston by $38 million a year and to Austin by $25 million a year," said Hobby, who is not seeking re-election.

"The numbers are not as large, but the effect is equally damaging on smaller districts with above-average wealth."

Last year, the Texas Supreme Court ruled the Texas school finance system unconstitutional. The court ordered the state Legislature to devise a plan that doesn't discriminate against poor districts.

Hobby, who repeatedly has said a state income tax is inevitable, contends that even if a new school finance bill could be implemented without raising taxes, it would never get voters' support.

State lawmakers will begin debating the issue Feb. 27 in a special legislative session. The court set a May 1 deadline for the legislature to work out a new school financing system.

The state last passed a school finance bill in 1984, when the Legislature enacted a school reform package that included the controversial no-pass, no-play rule and teacher testing.

That reform package targeted state funds to poorer districts in an attempt to achieve fiscal neutrality, which requires that district expenditures be independent of district wealth.

Since then, however, school tax increases in the property-rich districts and changes in their spending patterns have created significant disparities.

Hobby said he will introduce a bill that he hopes will achieve the reform outlined by the court, but refused to elaborate further about it at a news conference before his speech.

"The education reform bill passed in 1984 has improved quality education in Texas," he said. "But while public education has improved since 1984, it hasn't improved enough."

Texas students rank 46th nationally in SAT scores, he said. One-third of the state's high school seniors can't pass a basic skills test and 35 percent never graduate from high school.

Hobby said some of those reforms need to be reviewed to determine which ones worked and which need to be overhauled further, like teacher testing, teachers' salaries and a career ladder set up for teachers.

Gray County receives bingo tax check

AUSTIN — State Comptroller Bob Bullock sent checks totaling $2.4 million to counties and cities in Texas that have legalized charity bingo and levy the 2 percent local tax on the games' gross receipts.

The checks sent by Bullock's office reflect the amount collected by 69 counties and 127 cities during the fourth quarter of 1989.

Gray County received a payment of $238,566 this month, compared to $98,100 received at the same time last year. The money received this month is 143.2 percent above last year's payment.

Harris County received the state's largest payment of $210,142. Dallas County received $201,555 and Tarrant County's check totaled $153,999. Bexar County's payment was $94,078.

The city of Dallas received $122,384, which was the largest payment to Texas cities that collect the tax. Houston's check was for $95,682; Fort Worth received $92,085. San Antonio's check totaled $61,439.

Bingo is regulated by the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission, which can be reached by calling 1-800-622-5991 or by writing to the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission, Bingo Division, P.O. Box 13127, Capitol Station, Austin, Texas 78711.

Colonel to address Air Force Association banquet

AMARILLO — A colonel who participated in the invasion of Panama will be the speaker Saturday at the annual awards banquet of Panhandle Chapter 181 of the Air Force Association.

Col. H. Ross Becker, director of operations for the 12th Air Force headquarters at Bergstrom Air Force Base at Austin, will tell of the highlights and observations of the invasion in a speech entitled, "Just Cause."

The banquet begins at 6:15 p.m. at the Fifth Seasons Inn East at 2501 E. Interstate 40. Cost is $12 per person. Reservations can be made by contacting the chapter secretary, Guy Leach, at 352-2381.

Pampa has the second largest Air Force Association membership in the Texas Panhandle.

Winners of the 1990 Earle North Parker Contest will be recognized at the banquet. Amanda K. Roberson of Perryton High School received first place and will be awarded a $300 savings bond. Jennifer Jo Ann Kirkland of Shamrock High School received second place and will be awarded a $200 savings bond. Sean C. Fox of Tascosa High School in Amarillo was awarded third place and will receive a $100 savings bond. Title of this year's essay was "What the United States Flag Means to Me."

Col. H. Ross Becker

Additionally, the AFA Southwest Region will hold its annual executive meeting. A former Amarillo resident, Ollie Crawford, is vice president of this group, which includes officers from New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas.

The meeting is open to anyone interested, Leach said.

Col. Becker was born in Albany, N.Y., and graduated from St. John's Academy in Rensselaer, N.Y. In June 1964 he earned a bachelor's degree in meteorology from St. Louis University. He completed National War College at Fort McNair, Va., in 1982. In August 1986, he completed the Executive Development Program at the Whittemore School of Business and Economics, University of New Hampshire.

He was commissioned in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps at St. Louis in July 1964, before entering active duty in November.

Col. Becker is a command pilot with approximately 3,082 hours in the F-100, F-111, A-10, T-38, and O-1 aircraft, including 614 combat hours. His military decorations and awards include the Silver Star, Legion of Merit, Distinguished Flying Cross, Meritorious Service Medal, Air Medal with 14 oak leaf clusters, and Air Force Commendation Medal.

He assumed the grade of colonel Oct. 1, 1982, with a date of rank of Feb. 21, 1982.

Through the valley of home buying

"Whatever you do," Caryl said, "don't write a column about looking for a house."

"But, Dear, people keep asking me why I haven't had a column in the last month."

"Tell them you've developed writer's block. Tell them anything. But don't tell them the reason is because we're tired of renting and have been searching for the unholy grail, a house of our own."

It's true. Sad but true. There is precious little that's funny about trying to buy a house. And when you're house hunting, there is little else on your mind.

It begins with a late night conversation, the kind your wife starts five minutes after you've dropped off.

"Bear, are you asleep? Bear? Bear?" A jab to the ribs. "Bear? Are you asleep?"

"Not anymore."

"I didn't wake you, did I?"

"No, Dear, I just had a dream I was gored by a bull and it startled me. What did you want?"

For the next two hours she told me. A house. A house of her own. A house of her own with three bedrooms, two baths, new carpet, central heat and air, in a good neighborhood, with nice grass, a garage, a garden, a spacious kitchen, well-lit dressing area and easy access to the entire city. Oh, and there was one other thing, all for about $30,000.

I withheld a laugh for fear of getting gored again. The first realtor we went to wasn't so self-controlled.

"Oh, honey," the woman said, "Mary and Joseph couldn't find a stable in Pampa for 30 grand. Let me show you something. Let me show you something you can grow into."

Grow into. That is a term realtors like to use. It means, "Of course you can't afford it. But with those raises you and the little woman are bound to get because you are such wonderful and talented people, this dream house will hardly make a dent in the wallet."

You read about people who buy houses they will "grow into" every week in the bankruptcy notices. No thanks.

Fortunately, our next shot on the realtor roulette wheel was a better catch. She showed us what we could afford.

"This one needs a little work," she said. "It is a rental they want to sell."

Those in the housing market know this phrase well. "A rental they want to sell" means the renters have wrecked it to the point that even Handy Dan himself couldn't fix it.

Off Beat By Bear Mills

There are other phrases the home hunter should know about. "Doll house" or "adorable cottage" mean, "As long as you don't have any furniture, your family should fit in here nicely." "Located in an established neighborhood" is a nice way of saying, "Coronado built his first home here and some of the original structures remain."

So what's the answer for a middle-class family with no oil royalties or rich uncle on the verge of a major coronary?

Like all of God's more stubborn creatures, we turned to prayer only after nothing else seemed to pan out. But now we have adopted the home-buyers Psalm:

"The Lord is my realtor, I shall not want

He maketh me to look at three bedrooms with only one bath and not fear

He maketh me to consider laying new carpet and not having a den

He leadeth me from the 'tree streets' and toward a lower income tax bracket

He remindeth me not to take out a nonassumable loan

He showeth me 'tis better to remodel an older home as it can be afforded

Yes, though I walk through the valley of variable interest rates, I shall fear no banker

Surely equity and home improvement loans shall follow me all the days of my life

And I will dwell in the house the Lord gives me forever.

"If you put this in the paper," Caryl keeps telling me, "people are going to be bugging you constantly to buy their house."

"No they won't."

"And why not?"

"I'll tell them all calls have to go through you."

Take Congress out of the fuel business

Every few years some guy gets a lot of publicity by claiming to have invented a carburetor that allows a car to run on water and get 100 miles per gallon. When reporters ask where the plans are, he says the big oil and auto companies kidnapped him and stole the blueprints. The story then disappears, except for appearances in supermarket-checkout tabloids.

It now looks like all those pie-in-the-sky inventors are working as environmental advisers to the U.S. Congress, which is considering a Clean Air Act that will demand of U.S. automakers that they install something akin to the water-burning carburetor.

One of the worst parts of the legislation is its requirements that auto companies drastically reduce the amount of carbon dioxide spewed out by cars, even though these emissions have already been reduced by 96 percent over the past 20 years.

Reducing carbon-monoxide emissions is designed to reduce global warming — the "greenhouse effect" that is only now undergoing serious scientific examination after years of unchallenged hype. Imposing costly requirements on America's automakers before this scientific debate is concluded — it's actually hardly begun — is bad science and bad economics.

Moreover, the overall standards of the legislation are unrealistic. Representatives of the domestic and foreign automakers, speaking together in a panel recently, say that meeting the new Clean Air Act requirements will mean building cars that get 40 miles per gallon, something they can do about as well as they can make "water-burning" carburetors.

Currently, only 5 percent of cars, the tiny golf-cart sized models, get 40 miles per gallon or more. Even Honda North America, whose parent company in Japan pioneered small, fuel-efficient cars, says the requirement would be ridiculous. Spokesman Toni Harrington said, "Forty miles per gallon is just not reasonable. The technology just isn't available."

Ford spokesman Helen Petruskas said the only way the requirements could be met would be to cut 1,000 pounds off most models now sold. Only small cars, no medium or large sized models, could be built. She added that improved catalytic converters would cost from $200 to $400 per car, but would cut emissions only by another 2 percent.

America's smallest automaker, Chrysler, would be slammed hardest. Said spokesman Robert Liberatore, "Chrysler doesn't have a single car that produces more than 33 miles per gallon." He added, "There's no magic carburetor out there that can produce 40 miles per gallon for large and mid-sized cars."

So Congress might as well require that cars use those "water-burning" carburetors. The car wouldn't work but at least you could take a drink.

Berry's World

FLU MAN strikes again!

Our town doesn't need Jesse

WASHINGTON — Jesse Jackson, the nation's most peripatetic politician, has decided to run for high public office here in Our Town. Not for mayor, silly. That's beneath him. He's running for U.S. senator.

Before he can run for the Senate, of course, there must be a Senate seat for which he can run. No problem. Jackson has appointed himself chairman, point man, top enchilada and No. 1 high muckety-muck of an all-out campaign to turn the District of Columbia into the state of New Columbia. It is a consummation devoutly to be ditched.

Until this past month, when Jackson stated his political intentions, it had been widely speculated that he would seek the office that Mayor Marion Barry has disgraced. After all, it is said, Jackson never has held any elected office anywhere. As mayor of the nation's capital, he would hold a position of high visibility. He could prove his managerial skills by running the city efficiently. One good bounce from his diving board, and he's back in the swim for the White House.

Fortunately for this beloved and beleaguered city, Jackson has now said no. He has not said absolutely no, or positively no, but he has candidly recognized his own shortcomings.

The streets of Our Town suffer from an estimated 500,000 potholes, of which 7 percent are deep enough to swallow a large Volkswagen or a small Buick. But Jackson has no interest whatever in filling potholes. A better ambulance service is not among his goals.

"The mayor's office would substantially limit my ability for national and international service," he told Parade magazine. "A senator has much more mobility than a governor."

James J. Kilpatrick

Indeed so, and "mobility" is the gentleman's watchword. I have a theory about Jackson. Like the young Calvin in the comic strip Calvin and Hobbes, Jackson has managed to duplicate himself. There is not one Jackson, but probably three or four.

No one man could have his picture taken simultaneously with the pope in Rome and with East Germans in Berlin, and on the same day be photographed marching in Manhattan. The thought of multiple Jacksons is a thought that needs rethinking.

He is a fascinating fellow — long, tall and handsome, quick-witted, only 48 years old. He ranks one-two and take your choice with Mario Cuomo as the most gifted orator in the country. I have twice seen him hold an unruly Democratic national convention in the palm of his hand. He has what George Bush has called the "vision thing," a political gift not to be minimized.

But all of Jackson's talents will not suffice to beat life into the dead horse of statehood for the District of Columbia. The idea is preposterous. Only one argument supports it: It is the complaint that residents of the district cannot vote for members of Congress; they pay the same federal taxes that others pay, but have no voice in adopting these taxes.

The principle is as old as the republic. I don't mean to knock it, but no one is compelled to live within the district. No wall prevents the politically active family from emigrating to Maryland or Virginia, there to vote to their heart's content. To judge from the apathetic turnouts in local elections for the city council and the school board, few residents are all that mad about the franchise anyhow.

Against this paper argument, a host of solid considerations may be arrayed. The district is a city, not so pure but abundantly simple. Our Town has none of the aspects of a "state." No farms, no forests, no fisheries, no factories, no minerals. Its one big industry is government. The pending statehood bill would hook out a federal enclave from the White House to Capitol Hill, but the concept is unworkable. Foreign embassies no longer would be located in the nation's capital; they would be out on Massachusetts Avenue in the "State of New Columbia."

Serious constitutional objections stand in the way. The 23rd Amendment, granting residents a right to choose three presidential electors, cannot be brushed aside. Unless the amendment were repealed, the handful of residents who actually live within the proposed federal enclave would have the same power in a presidential election that now reposes with the people of Wyoming or Alaska.

There is much more, but it will hold. Jesse Jackson's dream of becoming Sen. Jesse Jackson is not a dream that is widely shared. Let him run for something else more suited to his ambition. The presidency would do. And after that, who knows?

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Wednesday, Feb. 7, the 38th day of 1990. There are 327 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On Feb. 7, 1964, thousands of screaming fans welcomed the Beatles at New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport as the "Fab Four" began their first U.S. tour.

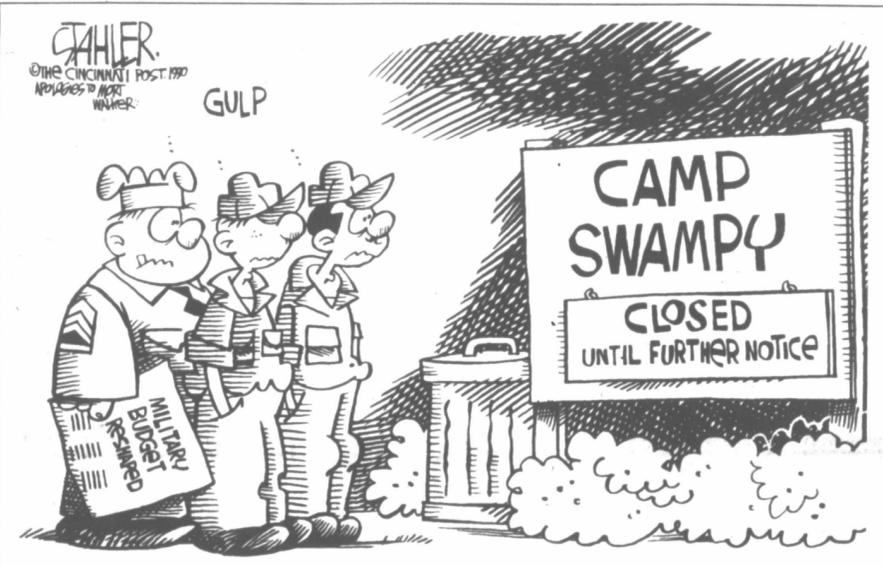

On this date:
In 1812, author Charles Dickens was born in Portsmouth, England.

In 1948, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower resigned as Army chief of staff and was succeeded by Gen. Omar Bradley.

In 1971, women in Switzerland won the right to vote.

In 1974, the island nation of Grenada won independence from Britain.

In 1984, David, a 12-year-old boy born without immunity to disease, touched his mother for the first time after he was removed from a germ-free "bubble" at Texas Children's Hospital in Houston.

The confessions of an alarmist

Stephen Schneider works for our government as a climatologist.

He has been appearing before committees of the Congress warning that the world is overheating.

Schneider has been the featured speaker at environmental conferences, warning that the world is warming up.

He has written a book called Global Warming. He writes and talks of a dread "greenhouse effect of catastrophic proportions."

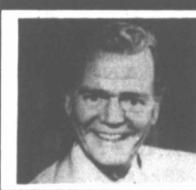

Stephen Schneider has been everywhere on TV and radio promoting his book and proclaiming his gospel of fear:

The world is overheating!
For perspective: This same Stephen Schneider, just 20 years ago, was making the rounds warning that the world is growing cold; he was then predicting a "new ice age."

Whatever worries you most, hot or cold, environmental extremists can keep you supplied with more than enough anxiety.

Interestingly, in the October 1989 Discover Magazine, Schneider exposed himself, described his own technique for purposely scaring people.

He said, "... we have to offer up some scary scenarios, make simplified dramatic statements with little mention of the doubts one might have. Each of us has to decide what is the right balance between being effective and being honest."

Paul Harvey

Respected researchers at Massachusetts Institute of Technology — Reginald Newell, Jane Hsiung and Wu Zhongxiang — have conducted a survey of the world's ocean temperature data since the mid-19th Century.

In the current Technology Review they offer this conclusion: "There appears to have been little or no global warming over the past hundred years."

This MIT study confirms parallel research by the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration that "there has been no warming trend in the 49 continuous states over the past century."

What you hear and read on the subject is most always from environmental fanatics more interested in "dramatic statements" than in being honest.

Serious climatologists, such as Andrew Solow of Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, report "absolutely no hard evidence" of any enhanced greenhouse effect.

And Solow represents 61 leading climatologists who make up the International Climate Trends Panel.

What is further sobering is the fact that Schneider, willing to play fast and loose with the truth in order to manipulate the public psyche, is himself completely funded by taxpayer dollars through the National Science Foundation.

The Detroit News, after a careful examination of Schneider's premise, suggests that we of the media are going to have to take a harder look at scientific reports underwritten by the government bureaucrats who have a vested interest in keeping us frightened.

Thornburgh tries to plug news leaks

By ROBERT WALTERS

Determined to identify the source of an unauthorized disclosure about a criminal investigation involving a member of Congress, the Justice Department spent $224,000 on a seven-month-long probe of that "leak."

A federal grand jury was impaneled to issue possible indictments against those who improperly revealed information to CBS about a politically delicate preliminary investigation. It had been alleged that an employee of Rep. William H. Gray III, D-Pa., received a government salary but performed no work.

Eleven agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation were assigned to the disclosure case. They interviewed 30 people, including members of Congress, "confidential sources and a number of news reporters," according to Attorney General Richard Thornburgh.

Lie detector tests were administered to 10 Justice Department and FBI employees. Sworn statements were collected from 109 people. Thornburgh even suggested that subpoenas might be issued for journalists' telephone records.

The probe was especially important to Thornburgh, because he has been obsessed with news media leaks, threatening employees with criminal prosecution, drastically curtailing journalists' access to traditional sources and inveighing against a department he says "leaked like a sieve" when he arrived.

But the attorney general recently disclosed that the ambitious investigation had been abandoned because probes had been "unable to identify with certainty the original source" of the leak.

Moreover, Thornburgh has been unable to discover who leaked information to journalists about numerous other probes, including those involving State Department employee Felix Bloch, Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley and former Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif.

He has succeeded, however, in antagonizing many longtime Justice Department employees who resent the suspicion Thornburgh has spawned and view his insistence that the department "speak with one voice" as a manifestation of an authoritarian personality.

In addition, he has unnecessarily alienated reporters who cover the department.

"To Thornburgh, any information he doesn't control is a leak," says one. Another characterizes the attorney general as "a control freak."

Nobody disputes the importance of maintaining the secrecy and respecting the sensitivity of pending criminal investigations, but Thornburgh has used that rationale to justify choking off the legitimate flow of other information.

Last summer, Thornburgh dispatched a deputy assistant attorney general to Capitol Hill to cite a long list of the "broad array of criminal and civil penalties and administrative sanctions which can be used to punish employees found to have made unauthorized disclosures."

In early 1989, the department's public affairs office was decimated when the number of professionals was slashed from 11 to four. In the ensuing year, some of those experienced information officers who were summarily dismissed have been succeeded by far less knowledgeable replacements who have neither the time nor the background to p...

assist reporters.

"The public can't get the basic stuff it ought to have to know what Justice is doing," says Ron Ostrow of The Los Angeles Times, the dean of the press corps covering the department.

Shortly after Thornburgh became attorney general, Ostrow had a routine lunch with Francis A. Keating II, then associate attorney general and the third-ranking official in the department. When Keating returned to his office, he was ordered by Thornburgh's most senior aide to debrief a public information officer about what was discussed during the meal.

"As a senior policy-maker, I imagined it was in the attorney general's best interests for me to meet with senior correspondents," says the astonished Keating, who has since left the department.

Ostrow offers an even harsher analysis of that example of Thornburgh's fixation with secrecy: "That sent out a chilling message to people at that (high) rank that it would be better not have any communications with reporters."

Federal judge says nyet to Arizona's English-only law; state won't appeal

By LARRY LOPEZ
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX (AP) — Arizona's voter-approved "Official English" law is kaput. Finis. Finito. Terminado.

U.S. District Court Judge Paul Rosenblatt threw out the law on free speech grounds Tuesday, and Gov. Rose Mofford — the only person with legal standing to appeal — said she would let the ruling stand.

"I am happy the courts ruled it unconstitutional," Mrs. Mofford said in a brief statement. She said she considered the law, which made English the state's official language, "flawed from the beginning."

Backers of the measure said the Democratic governor should appeal the decision, noting a state court had upheld the measure's constitutionality last year and because similar laws in 16 other states had been allowed to stand.

Republican state Attorney General Bob Corbin said he believed any ruling that changes the state's constitution should be appealed as high as possible, but he said he would abide by Mrs. Mofford's decision.

The initiative, approved 580,830-569,993 in the 1988 election, required state and county governments to conduct all business in English, with certain exceptions in education, public health and safety, the justice system and federal election law.

The judge said the amendment would have forced lawmakers, officials and judges "to either violate their sworn oaths to obey the state constitution ... or to curtail their free speech rights" in such cases as talking with foreign-speaking constituents and performing marriage ceremonies.

He said the amendment was "substantially overbroad" and "invalid on its face in violation of the First Amendment" of the U.S. Constitution.

The ruling came on a lawsuit by Maria-Kelly Yniguez, a state Department of Administration employee, and state Sen. Jaime Gutierrez, a Democrat.

Ms. Yniguez, who evaluates and arbitrates medical malpractice claims, said the law inhibited her constitutional right to free speech and threatened her job if she used Spanish while speaking with co-workers.

Gutierrez, who represents a partially Hispanic district in Tucson, said the law could block him from communicating effectively with constituents.

Rosenblatt dismissed Gutierrez from the case on technical grounds but said Yniguez was justified in her concerns.

"I'm just very happy," Gutierrez said. "If you can write that I'm jumping up and down, that's just what I'm doing."

"I thought it was a long-shot," he added. "It took a lot of courage on the part of the judge. I hope the decision can be used nationwide, but we'll just fight the battles one at a time."

Supporters of the law said the decision should be appealed to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco, but the U.S. Supreme Court instructed that court last April to dismiss a challenge to a rule that generally requires Los Angeles city court employees to speak only English while at work.

The justices decided to take such action because the woman who challenged the rule no longer works for the city court.

The legal meaning of "official English" amendments in some states is far from clear. In Colorado, the governor and mayor of Denver ordered bilingual government information to still be provided.

And in Florida, the Legislature has taken no steps to pass laws that put voter-approved English-only provisions into effect.

Baker: Summit should enshrine free elections

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — The United States wants leaders at a proposed 35-nation summit meeting this year to enshrine free elections as a fundamental human right, Secretary of State James A. Baker III said today.

Baker said the United States, the Soviet Union, Canada and the 32 countries of Europe also should join in sending observers to monitor upcoming balloting in Warsaw Pact countries "to ensure that people power elections of 1990 genuinely represent the will of the people."

"Let me be clear," he said in a speech at Charles University in Prague. "The peaceful transition to democracy now under way in Central and Eastern Europe will not tolerate rear guard maneuvers from any quarter."

Before the speech, Baker went to Wenceslas Square, the city's commercial center, and placed a wreath at the statue of King Wenceslas, the monarch who brought Christianity to Bohemia.

A crowd of a few hundred watched the ceremony quietly. Nearby is a circular flower bed, which has been turned into a shrine to honor the student martyr Jan Palach, a victim of the Soviet suppression of the 1968 "Prague Spring" uprising.

Baker delivered the speech in Magna Aluh, the ceremonial Great Hall of the university, after entering in a processional with gowned deans and professors.

Afterward he met with Foreign Minister Jiri Dienstbier, who was expelled from the Communist Party in 1968 and lost his job as political commentator for Czechoslovak radio for supporting the reforms urged 22 years ago.

The nearly 650-year-old university was a rallying point for pro-democracy forces that overthrew the communist order in December. Czechoslovaks, who have not voted in a free election since the communists took power in 1948, are preparing for balloting June 8.

Baker also unveiled a U.S. support plan for Czechoslovakia that would knock down U.S. barriers to its exports but provide no direct economic aid to the leaders of its "Velvet Revolution."

"They are not asking for a handout," one U.S. official said, referring to the new Czech leaders responsible for the country's smooth transition from hard-line communism.

Baker was scheduled to fly to Moscow later today for talks with President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze.

On Tuesday, the Communist Party Central Committee decided to extend its deliberations into a third day today following Gorbachev's proposal to end the party's monopoly on power.

Endorsing Gorbachev's call for the 35-nation summit meeting, Baker said its agenda should include making free elections a human rights obligation under the 1975 Helsinki agreement.

"The spirit of revolution needs to move from the street into the government," he said. "Transitional regimes need to give way to fair and free elections that establish open parliaments with a place for opposition. The new democratic political system needs to respect the rule of law and fundamental individual rights and liberties."

In addition to knocking down trade barriers with Czechoslovakia, Baker said the Bush administration was prepared to support the country's request to join the International Monetary Fund and back the location of a European development bank in Prague.

But, he cautioned, "It's up to you to provide a conducive legal environment, to turn over or sell factories to private owners, and to lift the heavy hand of excessive government intervention."

In another initiative, Baker called for "greater military transparency" between neighboring states, especially along their borders.

He did not provide any specifics while urging all nations, East and West, to put forward measures to build confidence with border surveillance.

Price of mailing a letter heads toward 30 cents

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mailing a love letter, paying the phone bill and chewing out your congressman likely will cost more next year — postage rates appear headed up again.

The Postal Service is poised to launch the long, complex process of raising prices on March 6.

Postmaster General Anthony M. Frank says a 30-cent stamp seems likely for first class mail in 1991, although the final price could be from 28 cents to 32 cents.

First class postage rose to the current 25-cent rate on April 3, 1988.

If things follow the normal course, the new charges would take effect about 11 months after the filing, or in February 1991.

Frank doesn't expect the new proposed raise to play well.

Noting a 5-cent increase would be a 20 percent raise, substantially above the 14 percent he projects that consumer prices will have risen from 1988 to 1991, Frank said recently he was "committed to paying back to the American people that 6 percent" difference.

To do that, he has pledged to keep future increases below the inflation rate and said Tuesday, "We may very well be able to hold increases in rates after the 1991 adjustments to one more increase in the balance of this century."

The Postal Service managed to operate about $404 million in the black for the first quarter of this fiscal year, but the agency expects a record $1.6 billion deficit for the full year ending Sept. 30. The postal service is required to break even over the long run.

Frank has cited a number of reasons for the planned 1991 rate increase.

"We were required in 1988 and 1989 to contribute $800 million to deficit reduction even though we don't use a penny of tax money. Health benefit costs are out of control — a problem we share with the private sector," he said.

The first official step in raising rates will be taken March 6, when the Postal Service's board of governors is to vote on the proposed increase.

The independent Postal Rate Commission then will ask for comment — that should produce tons of reports and appeals from various interest groups — and hold lengthy hearings before making its recommendation.

It then will be up to the Postal Service board to put the new rate into effect.

Frank's comments came in a Jan. 25 speech to the Economic Club of Indianapolis. The Postal Service made a text of his remarks available Thursday.

Frank has said he wants to lengthen the period between rate increases, but his efforts have been complicated by federal budget woes. The Postal Service was separated from the federal government in 1971 and its tax subsidies were eliminated.

It was returned to the federal budget in the 1980s, when the agency was showing a surplus. It then was taken back off the federal budget, but was also required to take over some retirement and medical payments for employees of the former U.S. Post Office, at a cost of millions of dollars.

Old grapevine saved for winery promo

AUSTIN (AP) — A native grapevine believed to be 200 years old has been saved from the bulldozer and will be tried out as a tourist attraction for a winery that is being built nearby.

The grapevine, which measures 54 inches at the base and is entwined with a live oak, was scheduled to be moved Tuesday to Hill Country Wine Cellars. It will be transplanted at a picnic area near the winery.

Expense-account probe tarnishes Arkansas AG's image

By RON FOURNIER
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The state attorney general's squeaky-clean image is taking a beating because of disclosures that the gubernatorial hopeful charged the state for meals with people who say they didn't dine with him.

A judge, a congressman, and others listed in Steve Clark's records of how he used his state-issued Visa card have said the records are in error. Some others who agree they were with him say the meals were dates, not state business.

Clark, 42, has found his bid for governor suddenly sullied, with some reports suggesting he ought to get out of the race, perhaps resign.

"I am redoubling my efforts to win this race," he said last week, but then he scrubbed two political events during the weekend and went into seclusion to consult advisers.

State Police and legislative auditors began combing his expense vouchers Monday at the request of the prosecutor in Little Rock, who helped write the state's year-old ethics law.

Clark, a Democrat in his 12th year as attorney general, said he is guilty of nothing more than memory lapses and keeping poor records. He has repaid the state almost $4,000.

Although Clark has acknowledged nearly $4,000 in mistakes, reports by two Little Rock newspapers — the Arkansas Gazette and the Arkansas Democrat — say the errors exceed $4,000 and may amount to more than $6,000.

In a state where the average monthly blue-collar salary is $1,525, Clark has had to explain why he needed $562 to entertain four political supporters at an August dinner, one of many instances of Clark billing the state for meals at posh Little Rock restaurants.

He also has had to explain why many of the people listed as his guests in records dating from 1986 say they were not with him at the time.

Among the phantom guests are U.S. District Judge Richard S.

Arnold of the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals, Rep. Tommy Robinson, R-Ark., and state Supreme Court Justice Steele Hays.

"You must have the wrong Richard Arnold," Arnold replied when asked about the $243.76 meal Clark said he had shared with the judge and another man. "I have never actually eaten dinner with Steve Clark."

Rex Nelson, a spokesman for Robinson — himself a gubernatorial hopeful for the Republican Party, said the congressman "has never been to LaScala's before, with Clark or anyone else. I had to tell him where it was." Clark reported spending $29 on his meal with Robinson at the Little Rock restaurant.

Clark, who is divorced, was on dates at two of his state-issued Visa-financed dinners, the women told the newspapers.

The disclosures about Clark's records have set off a wave of jokes about the attorney on bumper stickers:

• "Honk if you ate with Steve Clark."

• "Honk if you didn't eat with

Steve Clark."

• "The businessman's diet — lunch with Steve Clark. Zero calories guaranteed."

A radio station offered prizes to anyone who could photograph Clark eating last weekend. A high school student caught him at LaScala's, and the Gazette published the picture.

"There is no doubt about it," Clark said of his records. "It was an honest mistake, but I made a mistake. I'm sorry and I apologize."

Clark said he would sit down every 60 to 90 days with his Visa bill and divide the personal and business expenses, using sketchy notes in his personal calendar as a guide. For example, he said, he may have seen Arnold at the restaurant, jotted that down, and 90 days later assumed he ate with the man.

Clark did not have to keep the records that are getting him in trouble. The state's seven constitutional officers, including the governor, are not required to itemize their expenses. Clark said he tried to keep more complete records "as a positive thing."

Pig peddlers prove potbelly porkers popular with public

FORT WORTH (AP) — This little pig peddler went to market, and he says he's certainly glad he did.

Lorne McMillan sold 15 Vietnamese potbelly pigs at the Southwestern Livestock Show and Rodeo, which concluded Saturday, and accepted cash deposits on 10 more. The commercial sales booth, which he ran along with Pat Birmingham, was the hit of the livestock show, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported.

Prices on the tiny porkers, which are becoming popular pets, start at $1,500 and can exceed $25,000. The pigs can be housebroken and are extremely intelligent, breeders say.

Two sets of buyers nearly came to blows last Saturday over a piglet that both sides wanted.

"People have sent cashier's checks for pigs they've never seen," McMillan said. "We're learning the true meaning of buying a pig in a poke."

Romania gripped by first epidemic of AIDS among children

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — This country is in the throes of the first known epidemic of childhood AIDS caused by contaminated blood and the constant reuse of needles, a French humanitarian organization says.

Dr. Jacques Lebas, president of the Paris-based Doctors of the World, urged the international health community to provide Romania with disposable needles and blood-screening equipment.

"We know AIDS from people who take drugs, homosexuals and heterosexuals in Africa, but for the first time in the history of AIDS, we are confronted with childhood AIDS," he said.

"It's an epidemic," he said. "It's on the level of famine. It's an international emergency."

Doctors said they do not know how many children have AIDS, but that at one hospital alone 33 of the 45 people who have died of the disease since 1985 were young children.

The Romanian outbreak is unusual because it does not involve the transmission of the virus from mother to fetus — the manner in which most children around the world are infected — but from contaminated blood transfusions and needles, he said.

"In the adult population, the incidence of AIDS is very low," Lebas said, adding that more than 98 percent of mothers of infected children do not carry the virus.

Blood transfusions are routinely used in Romania as a treatment for premature babies, sick children and the thousands of youngsters suffering from malnutrition, he said. But needles are in short supply and are routinely used hundreds of times, encouraging the spread of the virus.

Like other East bloc nations, Romania is short of disposable syringes and other medical supplies.

Lebas said Romania's AIDS outbreak was considered a "state secret" under Communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu, who was toppled in a bloody revolution in December and executed on Christmas Day.

Last month, Dr. Ludovic Paun of the infectious diseases department at Bucharest's Victor Babes Hospital said 69 people treated there had developed AIDS since 1985, among them 53 young children. He said 33 of the 45 AIDS fatalities so far were children 3 or younger.

Lebas did not have updated statistics on AIDS deaths, but he said an initial screening of 1,025 children up to 3 years old at several hospitals and orphanages found 367 with the virus that causes AIDS — human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV.

Dr. Ion Patrascu, a researcher at the Institute of Virology, said 60 percent of the 283 children with HIV who are hospitalized have full-blown AIDS. The children in orphanages who tested positive for the virus will be checked this week to see whether they have developed the disease, he said.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome attacks the body's immune system, leaving victims vulnerable to a wide variety of infections and cancers. A person can carry the HIV virus for years without developing AIDS, but almost all cases lead to the disease.

Free speech monument reviving bitterness of '60s protest movement

By RICH CARTIERE
Associated Press Writer

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — A monument commemorating the 25th anniversary of the free speech movement at the University of California at Berkeley has revived the bitterness over its legacy.

Veterans of the protest — which helped launch a decade of dissent by the nation's youth — endorse the idea of a monument to their accomplishment, but the university's chancellor and some faculty deride the proposal as a "gesture of remarkable arrogance."

"We want something that is meant as a tribute and inspiration to all freedom fighters," said Charles Schwartz, a physics professor who last year dreamed up the idea of commissioning artwork for the project.

Since then, the proposal has garnered support from 100 professors, local politicians, students and most of the now middle-age leaders of the free speech movement.

But Chancellor Ira Michael Heyman, who must accept the monument before it can be placed on campus, said he was troubled by the proposal.

"It is not clear why the free speech movement of 1964 deserves such special commemoration," he wrote in a public letter to Schwartz and Peter Selz, a retired art history professor and the former chief curator of the New York Museum of Modern Art.

He added that those involved in the movement were "not very good at designing public art to commemorate their own actions."

In a subsequent statement, Heyman criticized public art on the campus, saying statues "do not wear well and they are vulnerable to being defaced."

More than 270 people, including internationally known artists, have submitted proposals for the artwork, and a seven-member committee was scheduled to name five finalists this week.

Their work will be displayed and a final selection announced March 3. Organizers, who have already raised $30,000, plan to give the winner $70,000 to build the monument, which will be donated to the university.

The movement began in the fall of 1964 when philosophy student Mario Savio and friend Jack Weinberg set up a card table to distribute political material on the university's Sprout Plaza.

The school had enacted a ban on campus political activities because it feared civil disobedience actions were disrupting classes.

Weinberg was arrested and placed in the back of a patrol car, but hundreds of students surrounded the automobile and for 32 hours refused to let 600 police officers take him into custody.

Photographs of Savio and others addressing the crowd from atop the police car were published around the world, leading to sympathy strikes by students until the university dropped its ban several months later.

The often iconoclastic proposals to commemorate the confrontation include a huge screw; two chairs facing each other on two pedestals; a giant megaphone; three monkeys in a cage; a suspended exclamation mark; and a bronze fist breaking through the pavement with the middle finger extended.

Supporters of the monument are casting the dispute as another free speech issue, accusing the university of trying to stifle a permanent reminder of its attempt to keep students and others from engaging in political activities on campus 25 years ago.

But others say the movement did not live up to the principles it espoused.

David Littlejohn, a journalism professor, said the movement heralded an era of dogmatic liberalism, in which conservatives are routinely shouted down during public speeches on campus.

In a letter to a local newspaper, he called the monument proposal a "gesture of remarkable arrogance and unjustified self-assurance.... To welcome it to this campus would be to reject and insult the opinions of any members of the campus who did not regard (the movement) as Berkeley's finest hour."

Hearts and flowers, candlelight and confections — it must be Valentine's Day. Be it a romantic dinner for two or a pre-holiday Sunday brunch, make it a festive occasion. 1 Graham Cracker ready-crust pie crust
Combine gelatin and water in 5-cup blender container; cover and blend at low speed until gelatin dissolves, about 1 minute. Add cream cheese; cover and blend 30 seconds. Add 1/2 cups of the pie filling; cover and blend 5 seconds. Transfer mixture to large mixing bowl; refrigerate until almost set, 45 to 60 minutes.

Fold in whipped topping; pour into ready-crust. Refrigerate until firm, at least 3 hours. Top with remaining cherry pie filling and additional whipped topping, if desired.

Chocolate Silk Pie
1 Butter-flavored ready-crust pie crust
1 3/4 oz. vanilla instant pudding
1 3 oz. chocolate instant pudding
1 cup milk
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
2 cups vanilla ice cream, softened
3 tablespoons whipped topping
1 small chocolate bar
Mix pudding and milk. Stir in ice cream and spices. Pour into shell and put into freezer.

Before serving, decorate with whipped topping and chocolate curls. For beautiful chocolate curl garnishes, use a vegetable peeler/peeler tool on room temperature chunks of semisweet dark chocolate. Practice on broken pieces to produce smooth shapes by drawing blade toward thumb along edge of chunk to form curl evenly.

Cajun Pecan Pie
1 Graham Cracker ready-crust pie crust
1 egg yolk
1/2 cup cream or half and half
1-1/2 cups pecans; reserve (1/2) cup for later
1/2 cup dark corn syrup
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 tablespoons butter, melted
2 tablespoons bourbon
Brush bottom and sides of pie crust with egg yolk. Bake for five minutes at 350 degrees. Remove from oven and set aside. Blend remaining ingredients in blender or food processor in order given. Blend for 10 seconds. Pour into pie shell. Bake at 400 degrees for 20 minutes. Decorate top of the pie with the remaining pecans and bake for an additional five minutes or until the pie is set.

8-Minute Cheesecake
1 package 8 oz. cream cheese, softened
1/3 cup sugar
1 cup (1/2 pt.) sour cream
2 teaspoons vanilla
1 8 oz. container Birdseye Cool Whip whipped topping, thawed
1 Keebler Graham Cracker ready-crust pie crust, fresh strawberries for garnish

Beat egg whites and cream of tartar until frothy. Add sugar 1 tablespoon at a time. Beat after each tablespoon until peaks are stiff, but not dry. Add vanilla. Pile meringue onto frozen tart shells. Use bowl scraper to form peaks. Preheat oven to 425 and bake for 2-4 minutes. Watch carefully so it doesn't over-brown and serve immediately.

You can substitute fresh blueberries, sweet cherries, strawberries or raspberries for the peaches; if you do so, delete lemon juice.
Beat cheese until smooth; gradually beat in sugar. Blend in sour cream and vanilla. Fold in whipped topping, blending well. Spoon into crust. Chill until set, at least 4 hours. Garnish with fresh strawberries if desired.

Amaretto Creme Pie
1 Graham Cracker ready-crust pie crust
2 tablespoons water
1 (1 oz.) envelope plain gelatin
1 pint whipping cream
1/4 cup of sugar
1/2 cup of chocolate Amaretto liqueur
3/4 cup of miniature chocolate chips
Soften gelatin in water and microwave for 30 seconds. Whip cream until soft peaks form. Add sugar, one tablespoon at a time to whipping cream until it holds a stiff peak. Mix in liqueur and gelatin mixture. Stir in miniature chocolate chips and chill for at least 4 hours. Serves 8.

White chocolate dessert recipes for Valentine's

By CAROL DEEGAN
AP Food Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — White chocolate, once considered a rare delicacy, can now be found in your local supermarket.

Marty Friedman, editor of New Product News, says white chocolate will be the "hot" chocolate for the 1990s. He lists white chocolate as one of the top 15 new food trends.

Unlike milk or dark chocolate, white chocolate does not contain the cocoa part of the bean; it is therefore not classified as chocolate in the United States. Instead, cocoa butter, milk solids, sugar and vanilla are the key ingredients in most white chocolate products.

White chocolate can be used in mousses, truffles, cheesecakes and fillings. It complements desserts that are spicy or slightly citrus in flavor.

"Glorious Chocolate," a new cookbook by Mary Goodbody and the editors of Chocolatier magazine (Simon & Schuster, $29.95) contains white chocolate recipes for ice cream, cookies, muffins, cheesecakes and ganache.

Both Goodbody and Faye Levy, author of "Chocolate Sensations" (HP Books, $25), caution consumers to make sure that the white chocolate products they buy contain cocoa butter, not palm oil or vegetable shortening.

The best method for melting and tempering white chocolate requires a hot water bath. Water is boiled in a large pan while the chocolate is finely chopped and placed in a metal mixing bowl. The heat is then turned off under the water, and the bowl of white chocolate is placed in the hot water. The chocolate is stirred constantly as it melts.

Nestle Foods, which introduced its first white chocolate product in the United States in 1984, has three white chocolate recipes for Valentine's Day:

Alpine White Mousse
Two 6-ounce packages white chocolate baking bars, chopped
1/4 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
3 egg whites
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 cup heavy or whipping cream
Combine baking bars and milk in a metal mixing bowl over hot (not boiling) water; stir until baking bars are melted and mixture is smooth. Stir in vanilla extract. Transfer mixture to large bowl; set aside 15 minutes.

In medium mixer bowl, combine egg whites and salt; beat until stiff peaks form. Gently fold egg whites into chocolate mixture.

In medium mixer bowl, beat cream until stiff peaks form. Gently fold into egg white mixture. Spoon mousse into individual serving dishes. Refrigerate until ready to serve. Makes 8 servings.

Raspberry Mousse
11/2 cups fresh or frozen thawed raspberries, pureed
One 6-ounce package white chocolate baking bars, chopped
1/2 stick butter, softened
1/2 cup sugar
3 egg yolks
1 cup heavy or whipping cream
1/2 cup sugar
Press raspberry puree through a sieve to remove seeds. Combine baking bars, raspberry puree, butter and 1/2 cup sugar in a metal mixing bowl over simmering water; stir until baking bars, butter and sugar are melted and mixture is smooth. Remove from heat; stir in egg yolks. Transfer to small bowl and refrigerate until chilled, about 30 minutes.

In medium bowl, beat cream and remaining 1/2 cup sugar until stiff peaks form. Gently fold raspberry mixture into whipped cream. Spoon mousse into individual serving dishes. Refrigerate until ready to serve. Makes 8 servings.

Alpine White Dipped Fruit
One 6-ounce package white chocolate baking bars
1 teaspoon vegetable shortening
Fresh fruit, such as strawberries, orange sections
Combine white chocolate baking bars and vegetable shortening in a metal mixing bowl over hot (not boiling) water. Stir until baking bars are melted and mixture is smooth. Remove from heat, but keep over warm water. Dip fruit into chocolate mixture; shaking off excess. Place on foil-lined cookie sheet; refrigerate until set, about 10 to 15 minutes. Gently loosen fruit from foil with metal spatula. Makes about 1/2 cup dip.

Hospitalized Veterans Week

Pampa Mayor Richard Peet, center, signs a proclamation declaring the week of Feb. 14 as "Salute to Hospitalized Veterans Week" here. Observing the signing are Minnie Ruth Emmons, left, president of the Pampa Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary, and Phyllis Laramore, VFW Auxiliary hospital chairman. Members of the local VFW encourage everyone to pay tribute to veterans who have sacrificed much to ensure the freedom and liberty enjoyed by Americans and to visit veterans at VA medical centers, nursing homes, service hospitals and domiciliaries.

Seniors - don't pay Medicare surtax

Editor's Note: The American Association of Retired Persons is sponsoring a free Tax Aide program at the Senior Citizens Center every Tuesday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. By CHANGING TIMES The Kiplinger Magazine For AP Newsfeatures

Capital Gains Again: If you were confused by the 1989 capital gains roller coaster, get ready for more bumps in 1990.

Millions of investors were disappointed when Congress failed to vote in a tax break for 1989 profits. After all, a number of politicians and publications all but guaranteed a tax cut for capital gains in '89. If you sold on the advice that part of the gain would be tax-free, you face a bigger-than-expected tax bill in April: 100 percent of the profit is taxable at your top tax rate, up to 33 percent.

The drive to revive capital gains in 1989 was only derailed, not destroyed. It will be back on track in 1990 and this time is more likely to make it through Congress. Capital gains remains one of President Bush's top priorities and, this being an election year, Congress will be more inclined to dispense tax favors.

Whether to index gains for inflation, set a top rate of 28 percent or resurrect the right to exclude part of the gain from tax altogether — or a combination of these — will be hashed out over the next few months. But don't even dream about a deal as sweet as the one before 1987, when 60 percent of long-term gains was tax-free.

Don't Pay This Tax: The 1989 income tax forms include a line for senior citizens to pay the Medicare surtax: 15 percent of your regular tax bill, up to a maximum of $800. Ignore it, says Changing Times magazine. Also disregard the accompanying IRS instructions for figuring whether you owe the tax. Nobody does.

In a remarkable flip-flop, Congress decided last November to kill the surtax, which had been overwhelmingly approved in 1988. The tax was to apply only to those over age 65 and was supposed to help pay for an expansion of Medicare benefits.

Although it was clear last summer that Congress was in full retreat on the issue, the lawmakers didn't get around to finalizing repeal until after the IRS had to send tax forms to the printer. That's why the forms, which are delivered to taxpayers right after Christmas, include a line for paying the tax.

More good news: If you prepaid the surtax as part of your quarterly estimated payments, you can use the money to offset your regular income tax bill. That will boost your refund or cut the amount you owe when you file your 1989 return.

Poor Advice: As the curtain rises on a new tax season, be prepared for another round of bum advice from the IRS. In 1989, the IRS accuracy rate was 62.8 percent. In other words, almost four in 10 inquiring taxpayers got wrong or incomplete answers from the tax agency's toll-free phone service. Here's how you can protect yourself:

Before you call, learn as much as you can about the issue at hand. Almost nothing is simple about the tax law and it's often little details — which may seem unrelated to your question — that determine the answer. The more informed you are when you ask the question, the better the odds for a correct response.

Press for an answer that you can easily understand. "Anytime you are uncomfortable with an answer you get, ask to talk with the person's supervisor," advises Steve Pyrek, an IRS public affairs officer in Washington. "There is a person up the line who is more knowledgeable."

Get the name of the IRS employee who answers your question, and remember the date and time of the call. Jot down that information along with the question asked and the answer received. That can protect you from a penalty if the advice you're given over the phone leads you to underpay your taxes. The IRS has a longstanding practice of waiving penalties if a taxpayer can show that he or she was following advice dished out by the IRS itself.

Best Time To Call: Getting through to the IRS is especially frustrating when you're trying to put the final touches on a tax return. If you know when most of your fellow taxpayers are dialing the IRS, though, then you can avoid the crush.

The earlier in the filing season you call, the better. Things are absolutely still now compared with the rush in April. Whenever you get around to your return, it's best to telephone during the middle of the week, but not at midday, says Changing Times magazine. On any day, the calls balloon around noon, when lunchtimes are used for tax-time. Mondays are generally the busiest day, as taxpayers who ran into roadblocks during the weekend attempt to get through.

The nationwide toll-free number is (800) 424-1040. In many cities the IRS has local phone banks, too. Check the instruction packet you got in the mail for the number.

In 1647, Margaret Brent, a niece of Lord Baltimore, shocked the Maryland Assembly by demanding a place and vote in that governing body. She was ejected.

Two wives result in one wife too many

DEAR ABBY: I am in a pickle with my mother. My first wife and I were divorced 13 years ago. I remarried eight years later. My former wife remains close to my family — especially my mother.

My mother has continually invited my former wife to family get-togethers — Christmas dinner, Thanksgiving, etc. — when she knows full well that I, my current wife and our children will be there. This has been a problem since my divorce.

I have talked to my mother and ex-wife about this, and they refuse to budge. My current wife is very uncomfortable in that situation, so I declined Mother's Thanksgiving and Christmas invitations for 1989.

Abby, I must remain firmly loyal to my wife and considerate of her feelings or my marriage vows are meaningless. She is, after all, my lifelong partner now, and has done nothing to warrant the cold shoulder she receives at these family get-togethers.

Am I taking the most appropriate stance since diplomacy has failed? My mother's nose is still out of joint. HAD IT IN FLORIDA

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR HAD IT: I'm sorry about your mother's nose. I'm all for family unity, but if your wife risks pneumonia by the reception she gets at your family get-togethers, she has every right to avoid them. And so have you.

DEAR ABBY: My son recently married his "live-in" girlfriend. It was a very private wedding with only their attendants. They sent no invitations or announcements. The reception following the ceremony was a quiet family dinner.

I am very hurt because not one friend or relative who has known my son since he was a boy sent a present. I gave expensive presents for their children's second, and even third marriages. Am I wrong for feeling this way?

HURT IN VERMONT

DEAR HURT: You need never apologize for your feelings — only your actions.

Since no announcements or invitations to attend the wedding were issued, your friends and relatives may have felt ignored. (Rare is the person who, upon learning that a friend or relative has recently married, will rush out and buy a gift.)

Apparently those to whom you sent gifts for their second and third marriages felt no obligation to reciprocate, since there were no festivities to attend.

DEAR ABBY: I am married with two teen-age sons. My husband's business requires a great deal of travel — sometimes overseas.

When I tell people that "Jim" is in Japan, Germany or Hong Kong, they ask, "Why didn't you go with him?"

Abby, I can't just dump the boys with friends every time Jim goes to a foreign country. Teen-age boys are involved in so many activities, and I have my own commitments, including a part-time teaching job. Furthermore, although Jim's travel expenses are paid for by the company, mine would not be. (Would any of these people like to pay my air fare?)

Abby, I hope you find my letter worth printing. Having a traveling husband is lonely enough without having to respond to this thoughtless question. (By the way, folks, how about having us over for dinner sometime?)

I'm sure other wives of traveling husbands have been asked the same question.

HOME ALONE A LOT
DEAR HOME ALONE: The "why didn't you go with him" question is asked by well-meaning but thoughtless people. Perhaps after this hits print, many will think before they speak. (Me, included.)

The case of the unknown batboy

Ever watched television's "Unsolved Mysteries?" We've got a mystery right here in Pampa that Robert Stack might like to hear about.

In Pampa's Coney Island Cafe there's a framed photograph of the 1950 Pampa Oilers professional baseball team hanging on the wall. All the players in the photo are identified, but somebody forgot about the batboy.

Years have passed and no one has a clue to the youngster's identity.

"I've asked the old players who are still around here and people who watched the Oilers, but nobody can remember his name," said retired schoolteacher-coach Deck Woldt, who played for the 1950 West Texas-New Mexico League pennant winners.

Woldt estimates the boy's age at 12 or 13 at the time the picture was taken, putting him in his early fifties today.

"We'd like to find out who he is and maybe do something for him, if he's still alive," Woldt said. So the next time you're in Coney Island, take a closer look at the boy in the photograph. Maybe you can solve a mystery.

Unknown batboy

Canadian football coach Paul Wilson was shocked, but only a little, at the UIL's recent realignment of districts.

"I knew there was going to be some big changes, so I was kind of prepared for that," Wilson said. "I made some pretty good guesses on how it would be."

Wilson figured that Panhandle would be moving into Canadian's District 2-2A.

"Panhandle has been in this district before and they really didn't have anyplace else to go. I knew Memphis and Shamrock would be going down," he said.

What Wilson didn't figure on was White Deer moving from 1-1A to 2-2A.

"That was a real shocker," Wilson said. "I was also surprised that Quanah moved out."

White Deer, however, won't be a stranger to the higher classification. The Bucks were members of District 2-2A for two years when Wilson was coach at White Deer.

White Deer football coach Dennis Carpenter was more surprised that the UIL lowered the cutoff number to 139 and below for Class 1A. The previous cutoff number, based on average daily attendance, was 144 and below.

"We definitely can compete in Class 2A. It's not going to be that drastic a change in football as it is in other UIL activities," Carpenter said. "In other sports (track and basketball), we're going to be outnumbered quite a bit."

White Deer currently has 141 students in high school and Carpenter looks for that enrollment number to keep changing. He indicated that White Deer could be back in Class 1A when the UIL realigns the districts again in two years.

Harvesters assured of first-place finish

The Pampa Harvesters broke the century mark for the second time this season and assured themselves of at least a tie for the District 1-4A championship with a 109-78 rout of Dumas Tuesday night at McNeely Fieldhouse.

Pampa, ranked fourth in the state by the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches, surpassed its previous season high, a 105-point effort against Hereford on Jan. 26. In the process, the Harvesters tied the second-highest point total in school history.

The Harvesters reached the 109-point plateau for the first time on Jan. 3, 1984, in a 109-80 victory over Canyon. Pampa's all-time scoring mark in a single game came three days later when the Harvesters drubbed Lubbock Estacado, 117-67, on Jan. 6, 1984.

With the victory, Pampa improved its perfect league record to 13-0, one victory away from clinching the district crown outright.

"That sure feels good," said Pampa coach Robert Hale, whose team is 23-4 overall. "Last year, we had to win the last game to win district. Now we have a chance to win it outright on Friday."

The Harvesters took Dumas by storm in the opening period, scoring 41 points (their season-high in a single quarter) and causing 15 turnovers while limiting the Demons to 19 points. Jayson Williams, who led all Pampa scorers with 25 points, added 12 in the first seven minutes to key the Harvester rally.

"We really cranked it up," Hale said. "We're getting a knack for it. Our strong point is we enjoy playing defense and we play team basketball. When we're really playing well, you can't tell one player from another. If we didn't have numbers on our jerseys, you couldn't tell who's who."

Although the Harvesters notched a handy, 71-49 victory over the Demons last month in Dumas, the game appeared closer than the score indicated. On Tuesday, however, it was no contest after the first five minutes.

"I don't think we worked as hard in Dumas," said Jayson Williams, whose 25 points was his best effort of the season.

The Harvesters had the hot hand from the opening tipoff, running up a 23-2 lead in the first four minutes. Dumas finally put some points on the board in the last two minutes of the quarter, but Pampa still owned a 22-point lead that never dipped below 20 for the remainder of the game.

On the night, the Harvesters caused 29 Dumas turnovers and surrendered only 14 of their own.

"Our kids really came out ready to play," Hale said. "They love to play here at home — it's an exciting atmosphere."

Tuesday's victory boosted Pampa's home win streak to 16 games, dating back to Jan. 15, 1989, when the Harvesters lost to Borger.

On the season, Pampa has won 10 games without a loss. The Harvesters' last setback was a 75-70 thriller against Burk Burnett on Dec. 30 at the Fort Worth Tournament.

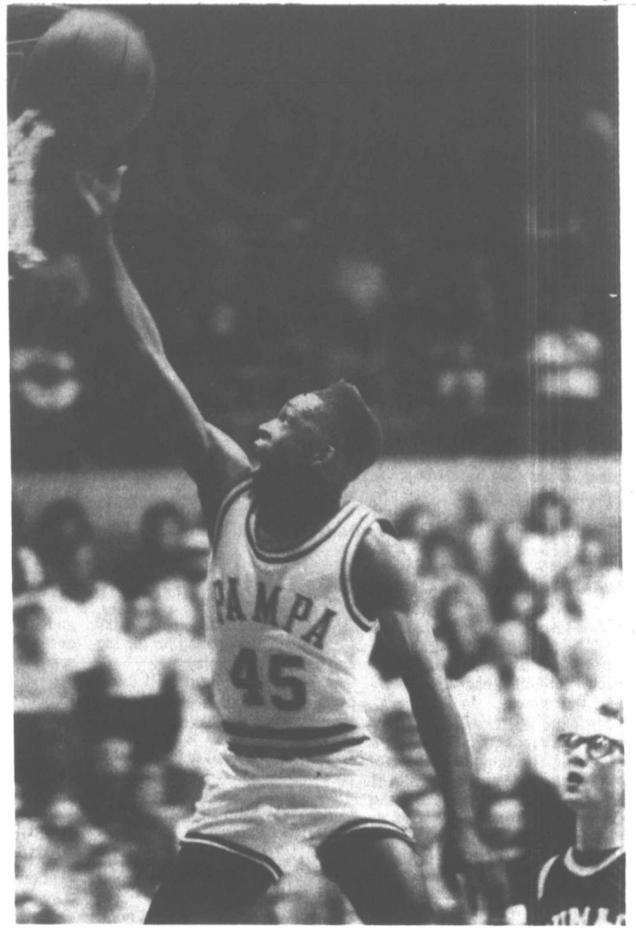

On Tuesday, Pampa led the Demons by 21 at intermission, 61-40, then stretched it to 24 by the end of the third frame. The Harvesters broke the 100-point mark with 4:25 left to play when sophomore David Johnson hit a three-point shot from the right side of the court to make it 101-67.

All 10 Pampa players contributed points and five scored in double figures. Jayson Williams paced the Harvesters, followed by Mark Wood with 22, David Johnson with 16 (including four three-pointers), Cedrick Wilbon with 13 and Randy Nichols with 11.

Three Demon players surpassed the 10-point mark. Brad Sommersell scored a game-high 28 points, while teammate Chris Northcutt had 23 and Ben Reed added 11.

The loss dropped Dumas to 5-8 in district play, 8-18 overall.

Pampa plays at home again on Friday against fifth-place Lubbock Dunbar. The game is scheduled to start at approximately 8 p.m.

Jayson Williams lays in two of his 25 points Tuesday night, a new season-high scoring mark for the PHS junior.

Former Cincinnati assistant takes over Jets head job

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. — Bruce Coslet, the new coach of the New York Jets, is ready for all New York can throw at him, even if the "Joe Must Go" chants that preceded the firing of Joe Walton turn into something like "Turn Bruce Loose."

Coslet was named coach of the Jets on Tuesday, culminating a six-week search by Dick Steinberg, whose hiring as general manager preceded Walton's firing by a week.

Coslet, who was the offensive coordinator of the Cincinnati Bengals, faced a press corps that he conceded was six times as large as any he had faced in Cincinnati.

The constant question: Can he handle New York?

The constant answer: Yes. "If I can coach the Anthony Munoz and Boomer Esiasons of this league, I can coach anyone anywhere," Coslet said of the Cincinnati stars known for their independence.

The 43-year-old Coslet is the NFL's second youngest coach, 31 1/2 months older than the Los Angeles Raiders' Art Shell.

Coslet got the job after Steinberg interviewed 12 candidates and tried to hire one — Michigan State coach George Perles, who two weeks ago agreed to a $6 million, 5-year contract only to back off in favor of accepting the school's offer to become athletic director.

Losing Perles may be a good omen for the Jets. Twice before, Perles has accepted coaching jobs, only to pull out at the last minute.

The first time was with the Philadelphia Stars of the USFL in 1983. Jim Mora was named coach instead, led the Stars to two titles in three years before the league folded, then coached the New Orleans Saints to the first winning seasons in history.

The second job that Perles backed out of was with Green Bay two years ago. Lindy Infante ultimately got the job and this season the Packers improved from 4-12 to 10-6.

"Things work out," Coslet said. "Look at my friend Lindy Infante. He went to Green Bay instead of George Perles and now he's coach of the year."

Many of Coslet's former associates seemed to think it would work out for the man who spent eight years with the Bengals as a tight end and got his start in coaching when hired by Bill Walsh as a summer intern with San Francisco in 1980. He stayed with the 49ers for a year, then took a job as tight end and special teams coach with the Bengals.

"Having coached Bruce as a player and seen him grow as a coach, I know him as well as you can know anyone," said Walsh, who stepped down as the 49ers coach in 1989 after leading the club to three Super Bowl titles.

"He is extremely bright and his intellect is not common to athletics. He is creative and has a solid knowledge of offensive football," Walsh said.

"The players love Bruce Coslet," said linebacker Reggie Williams, who retired from the Bengals after last season to devote full time to his job as a Cincinnati city councilman.

"You don't elicit that kind of emotion casually. It embodies a response to discipline, a respect of intellect and recognition that he always had the players' best interest at heart."

Lady Harvesters fall to Dumas at foul line

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Editor

The Dumas Demonettes haven't exactly taken the world by storm with their free throw shooting this season, but you'd never have guessed that from their performance Tuesday night.

The Demonettes scored 12 of their 17 fourth-quarter points from the charity stripe to key a 61-53 victory over the Lady Harvesters at McNeely Fieldhouse. On the night, Dumas hit 20-of-27 foul shots (74%) to account for almost one-third of their total points.

"We've been having some trouble from the foul line, but it definitely won the game for us tonight," said Dumas coach P.D. Fletcher, whose team improved to 6-9 in District 1-4A play and 12-12 overall. "I'm glad they put us on the line."

The Lady Harvesters really had little choice. After chasing Dumas for the majority of the game, they had moved within a point (48-49) with two minutes left to play. But Dumas steadily increased its lead until Pampa trailed by eight (59-51) with 39 seconds left.

"They were going to hold the ball, and we had to do something to get it back," said Pampa coach Albert Nichols, whose Lady Harvesters fell to 8-7 in district, 12-13 overall. They're still half a game behind third-place Hereford, which lost a 42-34 decision to Lubbock Estacado Tuesday.

If free throws were the Demonettes' saving grace, they were Pampa's undoing. The Lady Harvesters converted 12-of-24 (50%) and missed two of four in the final period with the game on the line. Dumas, meanwhile, hit 12-of-15 in the final eight minutes.

On the night, Dumas made good on 20 charity shots, eight more than Pampa. Ironically, that was the Demonettes' final margin of victory.

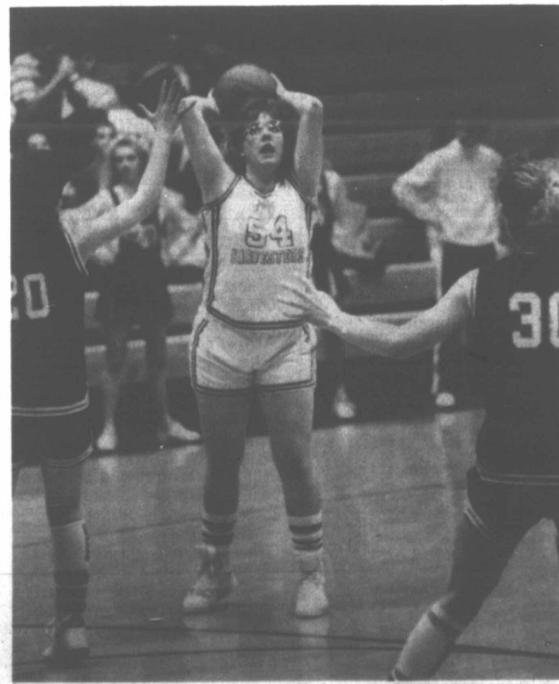

"We can't win the game when we miss that many free throws," Nichols said. "It's a mental shot is all it is. We have to shoot better than 50% from the free throw line."

The Demonettes held only a one-point lead (15-14) at the end of the first period, although guard Jakayla Janow helped boost that advantage when she nailed four identical 15-foot jumpers in the second frame. By intermission, Dumas owned a 32-23 lead.

Pampa stayed within eight points in the third period, then forced nine turnovers in the fourth quarter to close the gap to one point. That's when Dumas proved its prowess from the foul line.

"We had a good comeback in the fourth quarter, but we'd already spotted them too many points before we started," Nichols said.

Pampa sophomore Nikki Ryan poured in 23 points to top all scorers, followed by Bridgett Mathis with 14 and Sheila Reed with nine.

Four Dumas players made it into double digits, led by Amy Jowell with 14. Janow added 12, while Keva Raper and Trista Perry tossed in 10 apiece.

The Lady Harvesters, who defeated Dumas 45-42 when the two teams met last month, have only one game remaining this season. They will take on Lubbock Dunbar Friday night at 6:30 in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Sports marketing firm fined record $10,000

AUSTIN (AP) — Secretary of State George Bayoud said a record $10,000 fine against a Nebraska-based sports marketing firm should serve as a warning to athlete agents.

"If you mess with Texas athletes, you are going to pay the price. Any type of illegal recruiting activities will not be tolerated, period," Bayoud said Tuesday.

TEAM America paid a $10,000 fine for illegally contacting 1989 Heisman Trophy winner Andre Ware, quarterback at Houston.

In December, Bayoud said he would fine TEAM America and its agent, former Heisman Trophy winner Johnny Rodgers of Nebraska, $10,000 each for contacting Ware.

He said Rodgers had been acting as an agent for Team America, a Lincoln, Neb.-based firm, and because of that he wasn't fining Rodgers separately.

State law requires that player agents be registered with the secretary of state. It prohibits agents from making contact with a player who has college eligibility remaining. Ware has one year of eligibility remaining.

Bayoud said the fine is the largest imposed since passage of the athletic agent law in 1987. He said the fine also is the largest ever assessed in the United States for such a violation.

Bayoud contended that Rodgers and TEAM America had failed to register as athlete agents in Texas, illegally contacted Ware, and offered gifts, cash and other inducements to Joyce Ware, Andre's mother, to lure Ware into signing a professional services contract.

Although he wasn't fined, Bayoud criticized Rodgers' actions.

"I want to make clear it crystal clear that Johnny Rodgers has not been cleared of wrongdoing by this agreement," Bayoud said. "What Johnny Rodgers did was clearly and unquestionably against Texas law. The seriousness of these violations warranted the maximum penalty against the corporation."

Bayoud said the secretary of state's investigation found that Rodgers contacted Mrs. Ware several times to try and convince her son to sign a financial services contract with TEAM America.

He said Rodgers provided transportation and lodging for Mrs. Ware after her arrival in New York on Dec. 2 for the Heisman Trophy presentation where she accepted the award for her son, who was playing in a game against Rice.

Rodgers and TEAM America president Howard Mistle met with her and told her how her son's football skills could be marketed for $20 million, Bayoud said.

The investigation showed that Mistle and Rodgers bought Mrs. Ware several items of clothing, including a fur coat.

The case of the unknown batboy

Ever watched television's "Unsolved Mysteries"? We've got a mystery right here in Pampa that Robert Stack might like to hear about.

In Pampa's Coney Island Cafe there's a framed photograph of the 1950 Pampa Oilers professional baseball team hanging on the wall. All the players in the photo are identified, but somebody forgot about the batboy.

Years have passed and no one has a clue to the youngster's identity.

"I've asked the old players who are still around here and people who watched the Oilers, but nobody can remember his name," said retired schoolteacher-coach Deck Woltd, who played for the 1950 West Texas-New Mexico League pennant winners.

Woltd estimates the boy's age at 12 or 13 at the time the picture was taken, putting him in his early fifties today.

"We'd like to find out who he is and maybe do something for him, if he's still alive," Woltd said.

So the next time you're in Coney Island, take a closer look at the boy in the photograph. Maybe you can solve a mystery.

Canadian football coach Paul Wilson was shocked, but only a little, at the UIL's recent realignment of districts.

"I knew there was going to be some big changes, so I was kind of prepared for that," Wilson said. "I made some pretty good guesses on how it would be."

Wilson figured that Panhandle would be moving into Canadian's District 2-2A.

"Panhandle has been in this district before and they really didn't have anyone else to go. I knew Memphis and Shamrock would be going down," he said.

What Wilson didn't figure on was White Deer moving from 1-1A to 2-2A.

"That was a real shocker," Wilson said. "I was also surprised that Quanah moved out."

White Deer, however, won't be a stranger to the higher classification. The Bucks were members of District 2-2A for two years when Wilson was coach at White Deer.

White Deer football coach Dennis Carpenter was more surprised that the UIL lowered the cutoff number to 139 and below for Class 1A. The previous cutoff number, based on average daily attendance, was 144 and below.

Harvesters assured of first-place finish

The Pampa Harvesters broke the century mark for the second time this season and assured themselves of at least a tie for the District 1-4A championship with a 109-78 rout of Dumas Tuesday night at McNeely Fieldhouse.

Pampa, ranked fourth in the state by the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches, surpassed its previous season high, a 105-point effort against Hereford on Jan. 26. In the process, the Harvesters tied the second-highest point total in school history.

The Harvesters reached the 109-point plateau for the first time on Jan. 3, 1984, in a 109-80 victory over Canyon. Pampa's all-time scoring mark in a single game came three days later when the Harvesters drubbed Lubbock Estacado, 117-67, on Jan. 6, 1984.

With the victory, Pampa improved its perfect league record to 13-0, one victory away from clinching the district crown outright.

"That sure feels good," said Pampa coach Robert Hale, whose team is 23-4 overall. "Last year, we had to win the last game to win district. Now we have a chance to win it outright on Friday."

The Harvesters took Dumas by storm in the opening period, scoring 41 points (their season-high in a single quarter) and causing 15 turnovers while limiting the Demons to 19 points. Three Demon players surpassed the 10-point mark. Brad Sommersell scored a game-high 28 points, while teammate Chris Northcutt had 23 and Ben Reed added 11.

The loss dropped Dumas to 5-8 in district play, 8-18 overall.

Pampa plays at home again on Friday against fifth-place Lubbock Dunbar. The game is scheduled to start at approximately 8 p.m.

"We can't win the game when we miss that many free throws," Nichols said. "It's a mental shot is all it is. We have to shoot better than 50% from the free throw line."

The Demonettes held only a one-point lead (15-14) at the end of the first period, although guard Jakayla Janow helped boost that advantage when she nailed four identical 15-foot jumpers in the second frame. By intermission, Dumas owned a 32-23 lead.

Pampa stayed within eight points in the third period, then forced nine turnovers in the fourth quarter to close the gap to one point. That's when Dumas proved its prowess from the foul line.

"We had a good comeback in the fourth quarter, but we'd already spotted them too many points before we started," Nichols said.

ers, followed by Bridgett Mathis with 14 and Sheila Reed with nine.

Four Dumas players made it into double digits, led by Amy Jowell with 14. Janow added 12, while Keva Raper and Trista Perry tossed in 10 apiece.

The Lady Harvesters, who defeated Dumas 45-42 when the two teams met last month, have only one game remaining this season. They will take on Lubbock Dunbar Friday night at 6:30 in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Sports marketing firm fined record $10,000

AUSTIN (AP) — Secretary of State George Bayoud said a record $10,000 fine against a Nebraska-based sports marketing firm should serve as a warning to athlete agents.

"If you mess with Texas athletes, you are going to pay the price. Any type of illegal recruiting activities will not be tolerated, period," Bayoud said Tuesday.

TEAM America paid a $10,000 fine for illegally contacting 1989 Heisman Trophy winner Andre Ware, quarterback at Houston.

In December, Bayoud said he would fine TEAM America and its agent, former Heisman Trophy winner Johnny Rodgers of Nebraska, $10,000 each for contacting Ware.

He said Rodgers had been acting as an agent for Team America, a Lincoln, Neb.-based firm, and because of that he wasn't fining Rodgers separately.

State law requires that player agents be registered with the secretary of state. It prohibits agents from making contact with a player who has college eligibility remaining. Ware has one year of eligibility remaining.

Bayoud said the fine is the largest imposed since passage of the athlete agent law in 1987. He said the fine also is the largest ever assessed in the United States for such a violation.

Bayoud contended that Rodgers and TEAM America had failed to register as athlete agents in Texas, illegally contacted Ware, and offered gifts, cash and other inducements to Joyce Ware, Andre's mother, to lure Ware into signing a professional services contract.

Although he wasn't fined, Bayoud criticized Rodgers' actions.

"I want to make clear it crystal clear that Johnny Rodgers has not been cleared of wrongdoing by this agreement," Bayoud said. "What Johnny Rodgers did was clearly and unquestionably against Texas law. The seriousness of these violations warranted the maximum penalty against the corporation."

Bayoud said the secretary of state's investigation found that Rodgers contacted Mrs. Ware several times to try and convince her son to sign a financial services contract with TEAM America.

He said Rodgers provided transportation and lodging for Mrs. Ware after her arrival in New York on Dec. 2 for the Heisman Trophy presentation where she accepted the award for her son, who was playing in a game against Rice.

Rodgers and TEAM America president Howard Mistle met with her and told her how her son's football skills could be marketed for $20 million, Bayoud said.

The investigation showed that Mistle and Rodgers bought Mrs. Ware several items of clothing, including a fur coat.

Third-quarter rally boosts Allison

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

MIAMI — Few teams could have had a prettier third quarter than Allison did Tuesday night.

Allison outscored Miami, 30-12, and ran off a dozen unanswered points in the third quarter en route to a 73-64 District 4-1A win.

"That had to be one of the best third quarters we've ever had," said Antelopes' coach Kyle Wilkins. "I thought it was going to be close all the way, but we were able to get away from them."

Allison, 7-2 in district, clinched at least a tie for second place with the win. Miami, 6-3, must beat first-place Briscoe Friday night and Allison has to lose to Wheeler for the Warriors to force a playoff for the No. 2 spot.

"Miami has a good team. They're certainly capable of beating Briscoe," Wilkins added.

The first half certainly had indications of a close contest right down to the final buzzer. The lead switched five times in a fast-paced first half with Miami leading, 29-27, at intermission. But by the time the third quarter ended the Antelopes were up by a whopping 16 points.

Ronnie Hall poured in 40 points to lead the Antelopes while teammate Brian Markham contributed 23 points, including four 3-point goals. Hall also ripped down 18 rebounds as Allison ended with a 57-47 advantage on the boards.

"I thought our rebounding was a key to the game. They beat us 2 to 1 in rebounds when we played them at our place. I thought we really hit the boards hard," Wilkins said.

Miami won the first meeting between the two teams, 49-46.

Don Howard was high scorer for Miami with 18 points, followed by Kyle Fields with 14.

Another factor in the Antelopes' win was their frequency of trips to the foul line as the Warriors found themselves in early foul trouble. The Antelopes downed 27 of 40 (67.5%) free throw attempts while the Warriors went to the line only eight times, connecting on four shots.

"We shot well from the line when we had to. We're hitting about 69 percent as a team, which is pretty good," Wilkins said.

Allison improved to 17-6 for the season while Miami is 16-9.

Miami girls kept their hopes alive for a playoff spot by holding off Allison, 50-43.

The Warriorettes hold down third place in the district standings after last night's crucial win.

"That was make or break for us. Now we need some help from Wheeler," said Miami coach Joel Blasingame.

If Miami beats Briscoe and Wheeler takes care of Allison Friday night, then the Warriorettes would be in a playoff for second place.

Miami, leading most of the way, held off an Allison spurt in the fourth quarter to avenge a 35-28 loss to the Lady Antelopes three weeks ago.

"We got a little rattled in the fourth quarter, but the girls played well. I'm real proud of them," Blasingame said.

Miami, 6-3 in district play and 10-16 overall, was paced by Amanda Morris' 14 points.

Deidra Dukes and Kimberly Hall had 15 and 14 points respectively for Allison, 7-2 in district and 14-7 for the season.

Lady Pirates edge Groom, 35-33

GROOM — Lefors slipped by Groom, 35-33, in a District 3-1A girls' game Tuesday night.

The Lady Pirates finished the regular season with a 3-3 district mark and tied with White Deer for the No. 2 spot in the playoffs. The two teams will meet at a site and time yet to be determined to decide the second-place winner.

Susie Davis led Lefors in scoring with nine points while Shannon Fields topped Groom with 10.

"Groom went into a slowdown game against us and neither team could hit when they had the shot," said Lefors coach Richard Moore. "It was a big win for us."

The Tigertees, 5-2 in district and 19-5 overall, had already wrapped up the district title despite the loss.

Groom boys won the district championship with their 78-57 win over Lefors last night.

The Tigers closed the regular season 5-1 in district play and 16-9 for the season. Lefors still clinched a tie for second place with Claude despite the loss, forcing a playoff between the two teams.

Jeff Fields paced Groom scorers with 21 points, followed by Mike Conrad and Jay Britten with 15 and 14 points respectively.

Dusty Roberson also had 21 points for the Pirates, 3-3 in district and 11-10 overall. Lee Villareal had 12 points and Kevin Mayfield 10.

CLAUDE — White Deer closed out the regular season Tuesday night with a 76-51 loss to Claude.

The Bucks finished at 1-5 in district and 3-20 overall. Claude, which clinched a tie for second with Lefors in the district race, is 3-3 and 12-15.

Mike Campbell led Claude's scoring attack with 24 points. Brandon Carpenter had 23 points and Allen Mercer 10 for the Bucks.

The White Deer Does won a 40-39 squeaker over Claude in the girls' game to force a playoff game with Lefors for second place. The winner advances into the post-season playoffs.

White Deer's Traci Lemons led all scorers with 19 points as the Does ended the regular season 3-3 in league play and 11-13 overall.

SILVERTON — The McLean Tigers, who have already clinched a playoff berth, closed the regular season Tuesday night with a 77-60 win over Silverton.

The Tigers, 8-2 in district and 13-8 overall, were led by Bobby Sherman's 30 points.

Silverton's Brunson had 16 points.

Xavier whips Loyola despite Hill's absence

By The Associated Press

Tyrone Hill took ill so Xavier Coach Pete Gillen had to go to his shake-well remedy.

Hill, the Musketeers' leading scorer and rebounder, came down with a lung infection just before No. 21 Xavier's game against Loyola of Chicago on Tuesday night. But the Musketeers didn't miss a beat, defeating Loyola 70-53 as Jamal Walker scored a career-high 28 points and Aaron Williams, who replaced Hill in the lineup, had a game-high 10 rebounds and seven blocked shots in his first start.

"He was the difference," Coach Pete Gillen said of Williams. "It was scary playing without Hill, but Walker recognized the emergency of the situation."

In other Top 25 games, it was No. 8 Connecticut 74, Fairfield 39; No. 15 Louisville 69, Florida State 50 and No. 24 St. John's 89, Rutgers 77.

Hill was examined at a hospital. He returned and dressed for the second half but didn't play.

"The doctor said Hill could play," Gillen said. "The trainer said no. We went with the trainer."

Loyola led 22-21 midway in the first half when Walker hit a 3-point shot that ignited a 15-0 run for the Musketeers. The victory kept Xavier (18-2, 7-1) atop the Midwestern Collegiate Conference.

No. 8 Connecticut.....74
Fairfield.....39

Nadav Henefeld scored 18 points and eighth-ranked Connecticut pulled away after a close first half and breezed to its 10th consecutive victory. The Huskies (20-3) held the Stags to 16 second-half points, only five in the first 11 minutes.

Fairfield took an 11-4 lead but Connecticut responded with a 16-2 spurt. The Huskies led 28-23 at halftime but Connecticut's Tate George scored two baskets and Henefeld and Rod Sellers each had one to open the second half. After Duncan scored for Fairfield, UConn got successive 3-pointers from George and Henefeld for a 42-25 lead.

"We came out for the second half with a commitment to play defense for 20 minutes and to play Connecticut basketball," Coach Jim Calhoun said.

No. 15 Louisville.....69
Florida St.....50

Louisville came alive with a 14-2 run following a technical foul on Coach Denny Crum midway through the game and Cornelius Holden had a career-high 20 points and 12 rebounds.

The game was tied 23-23 with 5:01 left in the first half when Crum was assessed a technical for arguing an official's call. Florida State made only one of four free throws and then turned the ball over. Louisville scored five of the next six points to take a 28-25 halftime lead.

Troy House sets state scoring mark

INGRAM (AP) — When Troy House's first free throw dropped through the hoop Tuesday night, all he saw were flashes of light.

The Tom Moore High School senior's fifth point of the game against Blanco broke the known all-time schoolboy scoring record, and the photographers were ready to record it.

Going into the game, House needed five points to break Calvin Gerke's Snook High School record of 3,823 points from 1962 to 1966. Snook is just southwest of College Station. Ingram is just west of Kerrville.

House, a senior who is considered a major college prospect, connected on two field goals and the free throw to surpass the record. He finished the game with 40 points and now has 3,859 career points.

He also had 11 assists and six rebounds in 31 minutes Tuesday to boost his team to a 115-48 victory in the District 27-2A contest.

"I was happy to finally get it out of the way," said House. "I felt pretty good. I couldn't see the ball after I made the free throw because of all the flashes and TV cameras."

Ingram coach Jim Reid called time-out after House's record-breaking free throw to allow parents and players to congratulate him.

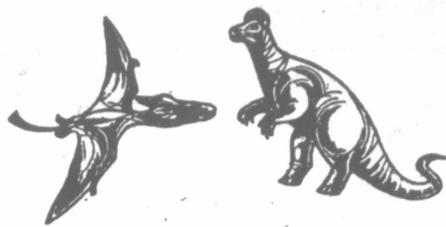

"He earned it. He's worked for it and he deserves it," Reid said. "He handled this whole thing admirably. He's a great athlete."

House missed his first three field-goal attempts, all from 3-point range, then scored twice on fast-break lay-ups before missing a 2-point jumper. He was fouled by Blanco's Charles Riley to get the trip to the free-throw line and connected on the first of two shots to break the scoring record.

Claytie's cowboy charisma has Republican rivals runnin'

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Late in 1988, Clayton Williams was asked if he would ever consider running for public office. "I may be dumb," he replied, "but I'm not stupid."

About a year and $4 million of his own money later, opinion polls are calling the Midland oilman-rancher the GOP gubernatorial front-runner and Republican rivals are complaining that "cowboy Claytie" is more suited to the 1890s than the 1990s.

Such criticism doesn't phase the jovial Williams.

"I didn't know I had as many faults as I seem to have until I became the front-runner," he says.

Pledging an all-out war on drugs and promising to put a business-based balance sheet to government, the personable candidate exudes confidence while delighting in bashing "career" politicians.

"There's some fun to this. You get a crowd, an enthusiastic crowd that applauds when you come in and stands up," he said. "It's no wonder politicians lose their perspective, they get all full of themselves."

Williams, 58, entered this, his first race for public office, better known than many of his rivals.

As founder of the ClayDesta long distance telephone company, Williams had donned cowboy duds for the company's "you can count on it" television commercials. He kept that wardrobe for his first campaign ads, aired last summer, which helped boost his name identification while other Republicans still were studying the race.

Opponents question the numbers, but Williams claims he has founded 26 companies and created more than 100,000 jobs since being graduated from Texas A&M in 1954. Those included Clajon Gas Co., the largest individually owned natural gas company in the state.

Opponents, including Railroad Commission Chairman Kent Hance, have criticized his lack of experience in government. Williams, in a pointed crack at GOP rivals, says that is a plus.

"The biggest applause I get is when I say I'm not a politician and I'm not a lawyer," he said. The three other major Republican candidates are lawyers. "The longer politicians are in Austin or Washington, the worse job they seem to do."

Drugs are his top issue, Williams said, and a major reason he decided to run. A son became involved with drugs in 1986. "While he made it, a lot of those little kids didn't. And they're in my heart."

Williams says he will bring his businessman's skills to the state's chief executive chair.

The first target will be budget excesses, he says, to free up funds for his priorities, including an expanded war on illegal drugs, a two-year, tuition-paid college education for lower-income high school graduates and economic development efforts.

"I just don't accept that the state can go and grow unreined and unchecked, while the rest of us have been through some real tough times," he said.

"We've lost our banks, we've lost our savings and loans, we've lost half our oil companies; many people have lost their homes. But the bureaucracy goes on unchecked. I'm not against the people in state government; I just want a well-run state."

He notes that the state government budget rose from $38 billion in 1988-89 to $47 billion in the current two-year period, and says such growth shows there's plenty of money to go around.

To spend it his way, Williams pledges to lobby the Legislature personally. A sales call, if you will.

"I am a very good salesman," he said. "I won't be King Williams. I'm going to be in the Calendars Committee, the Rules Committee, I'm going to be courting the speaker and lieutenant governor and committee chairmen. I'm going to be courting them every way I can. And the liberals and the Hispanic Caucus and the Black Caucus. Selling them on the projects where I think we have a common bond. And I'll be scrapping with them where we don't."

Scrapping, as in fist fights, became an issue when Williams admitted to two bouts since turning 50. Some opponents criticized him. But when he replied, "Do you want a patsy for governor or someone who will fight for what Texas needs?" his standing in the polls rose.

Although he opposes abortion except in the case of rape, incest or threats to the mother's life, he said that "is not my first issue."

Williams says he'll borrow a page from President Reagan's playbook, calling on campaign supporters to lobby the Legislature with him.

"We now have close to 40,000 men and women all across this state, from every county in this state. After I'm elected I'm going to be asking them to help me. I'll be asking them to write their senators, write their legislators, call them collect, put the heat on," he said.

"That's the only way you can do it. And let me tell you, the people are really ready to do something."

Clayton Williams chose the construction site of the William P. Clements Prison Unit in Amarillo for a campaign speech emphasizing his stand on illegal drugs.

Cabbies to be fined for 'uncouth' behavior

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Taxi drivers short on cleanliness or courtesy will face long fines, thanks to a new ordinance.

Mayor Tom Bradley on Monday signed the law calling for $500 fines to punish cabbies and the city's six taxi companies for behavior deemed uncouth. The ordinance takes effect March 28.

"I think we now will see a new day in Los Angeles in terms of cab service," Bradley said. He urged disgruntled riders to telephone the Department of Transportation with complaints.

"We'll get action for you," the mayor promised.

Department general manager Ed Rowe said individual driver fines will be imposed based on customer complaints and observations of city taxi inspectors posing as riders.

The L.A. law establishes standards for cab cleanliness and driver courtesy, and sets a dress code that prohibits drivers from wearing tank tops, shorts and dirty clothing.
