Bush lobbies to avoid veto override of China policies

By JIM DRINKARD Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush is lobbying Republican senators hard in an effort to avoid the first veto override of his year-old presidency and a repudiation of his widely criticized policies toward China.

Both sides agreed today's vote would be close, with the outcome boiling down to the decisions of just a handful of Republican senators.

Democrats said they were confident they could hold their 55 senators in line and hoped to pull away the expire before returning to the United States or going dozen GOP votes they needed to override the veto.

> The legislation would affect as many as 32,000 Chinese students now in the United States on "exchange visitor" visas.

> The bill would waive a legal requirement that those students return home for two years after their visas

In addition, the bill would permit any Chinese student whose visas have expired - as many as 8,000 others - to remain in the United States as long as danger exists at home, and would allow Chinese students to work while in this country.

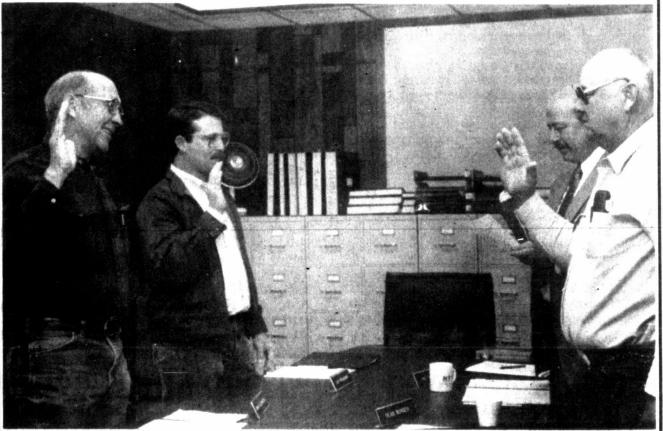

Bush vetoed the measure on Nov. 30 after it passed unanimously in the House and by a voice vote in the Chinese student groups have lobbied hard for an override of the veto, saying many of them would face political persecution at home because they supported the pro-democracy demonstrations that brought a violent government crackdown.

When Bush vetoed the bill, he ordered government agencies to adopt what he contends are essentially the same safeguards.

The veto was an effort to preserve executive branch foreign policy prerogatives, he said, and to keep open the door for future student and cultural exchanges.

Postal officials began asking customers how large an area they thought should have overnight delivery, and it always turned out to be less than what the agency was

Communist Party head ousted in Azerbaijan

By DEBORAH G. SEWARD Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) - Communist leaders in Azerbaijan today blamed their former leader for allowing ethnic strife to explode into warfare and expelled him from the party. More Soviet troops were reported killed in attacks by militants.

Military authorities continued efforts to restore order in the southern republic's capital, Baku.

More than 100 people were detained overnight, military authorities reported, and "measures designed to neutralize the activities of certain illegal informal organizations" continued, according to the official Tass news agency.

This was a reference to pro-independence groups that the military has targeted in its effort to end the nationalist uprising.

Families of servicemen were being flown out of Baku amid reports of a acks on Soviet soldiers who were deployed to quell the violence, which began as anti-Armenian rioting and evolved into a fight for secession by some Azerbaijanis.

At least 171 people have been killed since the unrest broke out Jan. 13.

The republic's Central Committee convened at 11 p.m. Wednesday and ousted Abdul-Rakham Vezirov, who was named party leader during Azerbaijani-Armenian unrest in May 1988. He had been given a mandate to restore order after a long-running land dispute between Azerbaijanis and Armenians erupted.

Vezirov, a former diplomat and career party official, was expelled from the party for "serious mistakes" that led to the current crisis, said Baku journalist Tunzala Kasumova. Vezirov had been removed as party chief earlier in the week.

Vezirov was replaced by Ayaz Mutalibov, the republic's prime minister.

Meanwhile, Tass said militant nationalists were con-See PARTY, Page 2

AUSTIN (AP) - In the end, neither blinked.

At the Texas AFL-CIO endorsement convention Wednesday, Attorney General Jim Mattox had more than enough votes to block state Treasurer Ann Richards in their battle for the Democratic Party nomination for governor.

And Ms. Richards had just enough votes to frustrate Mattox.

The result was a bitter floor fight that careened into down ballot races, leaving Democrats without any endorsements from the powerful labor bloc.

After the convention abruptly ended, bitter supporters of Mattox and Richards shouted at each other and waved placards for nearly an hour.

Bob Krueger, a political veteran and Railroad Commission candidate, quoted humorist Will Rogers as he watched the uproar: "I'm not a member of any organized group, I'm a Democrat.'

"Ann Richards and her minority destroyed the endorsement of the other candidates," Mattox said.

Richards saw it differently. "I didn't want to see this divisiveness and fight in the first place. I regret he uses these inflammatory remarks," she said.

Both campaigns blamed the other for the failure of the 213,000-member labor group to endorse anyone in any statewide race.

The organization only considered Democratic candi-

The Richards campaign said Mattox should not have sought the group's endorsement when it was obvious that after three test votes he fell short of the necessary two-thirds majority.

Mattox supporters said that since they were close to the two-thirds plateau they would have been foolish to give up. They say Richards should have released her delegates in the interest of unity.

"It's an unusual thing when the minority tells the majority 'You join us so we won't divide organized labor.' It defies logic," Mattox said.

Richards said, "What I want is for these people to work for whomever they choose."

Former Gov. Mark White, another leading Democrat in the race for governor, did not emerge as a force at the

The failure to endorse candidates in any of the down ballot races has a substantial side effect, according to Texas AFL-CIO president Joe Gunn.

If a candidate seeks and fails to win the union's fied. endorsement, a quirk in union rules allows rank and file members only to aid the campaigns of candidates who did not seek the organization's backing, Gunn said.

This means that although Mattox had the most support, none of the union members can help his campaign, although they can go ahead and help Richards and White, Gunn said.

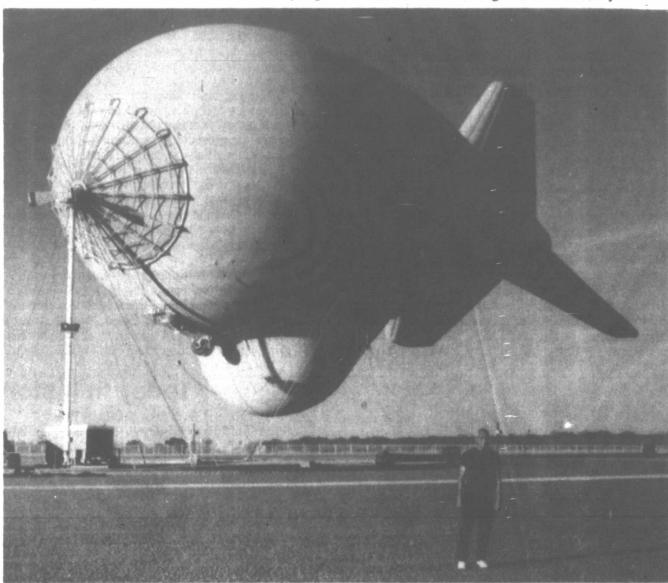

"If Joe Gunn thinks that 60 percent of the working people in Texas are not going to help their candidate Jim Mattox, Joe Gunn will be proved to be mistaken, said spokeswoman Kelly Fero.

The AFL-CIO convention marked the second time that Mattox enjoyed a majority for an endorsement but failed to reach the necessary two-thirds mark. The first time occurred earlier this month in Corpus Christi at the Mexican American Democrats convention.

Since then, the Mattox-Richards battle has intensi-

AUSTIN (AP) - Fruit flies continue to pose a major threat to the Texas citrus industry, said Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower. urging the federal government to be ready to quarantine California fruit

"We're getting almost daily news reports of discoveries of fruit flies in California," Hightower said Wednesday. "Should any fruit flies be found in commercial citrus groves, we want the U.S. Department of Agriculture to impose an immediate quarantine on shipment of California fruit into Texas.

In a letter to James Glosser, administrator of the USDA division that enforces quarantines, Hightower urged that damage to Texas fruit trees during last month's freeze not create a false sense of security about fruit fly dangers.

"Despite the losses in the state's revenues, we plan on continuing our trapping programs for detecting the Mediterranean, Mexican and other fruit flies," he said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

That tax increase idea is back again

How are economic prospects for the 1990s? Even though the economy is chugging along in its eighth year of expansion, Rep. Lee H. Hamilton, chairman of the Joint Economic Commmittee of Congress, thinks prospects are bleak.

Summarizing his committee's position, he writes in The Chairman's Report, "While we have been successful in reducing unemployment without reviving inflation, we have not improved our prospects for long-term growth or spread the benefits of growth fairly among our citizens."

Say what? Cutting inflation and putting people to work is no mean feat; we should carefully examine any changes that might endanger that foundation. And it's odd for a member of the House of Representatives, which just voted itself a tax-founded 35 percent pay raise, boosting its members into the top 1 percent of U.S. income, to be worried about spreading "growth fairly."

This hypocritical rhetoric is but a prelude to: "We cannot eliminate that deficit without a moderate tax increase. We cannot grow out of the deficit." Wrong, congressman. In fact, the deficit has dropped from $221 billion in fiscal 1986 to $100 billion for 1990, and we should "grow out" of the deficit completely in this decade, provided Congress doesn't go on another spending binge.

Rep. Hamilton's Report then offers us the old switch-and-bait trick: "A tax increase alone is not politically acceptable. Therefore, a balanced budget will require a package deal which includes spending cuts and a moderate tax increase."

But the voters ain't so stupid, Mr. Chairman. They remember that in 1982 President Reagan agreed to the so-called Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act, in which he thought he traded a package of $3 in spending cuts for every $1 in tax increases. We sure got the tax increases, amounting to $250 billion over several years, but almost none of the spending cuts.

Moreover, Ohio University economists Lowell Gallaway and Richard Vedder studied their charts and found that, since 1947, every $1 in new taxes has led to $1.58 in new spending. In other words, the Joint Committee tax boost, if enacted, would almost certainly increase the deficit.

If Rep. Hamilton and his committee colleagues are so concerned about the deficit, there's a solution: Spur the economy through a capital gains tax cut, like the drop from 33 percent to 15 percent proposed by President Bush last year and to be re-introduced in 1990. That would lead to a business expansion, new jobs created, and, in the end, to more taxes collected from this greater business activity. And accept the proposed rollback in Social Security taxes, which would give workers more money to spend.

Alas, Rep. Hamilton says, "The proposed capital gains tax cut would be unfair, costly and ineffective." But a capital gains tax in 1978 cut the top tax rate from 49 percent to 28 percent. The tax rate dropped - but in 1979 tax collections actually increased by 49 percent. And the new, lower rate sparked a decade of entrepreneuring.

Likewise, a tax cut, not a stifling tax increase, is the ticket to prosperity in the 1990s.

Law officers should uphold law

One of the noble achievements of the U.S. Constitution is the principle that in its efforts to combat lawbreaking, the government shouldn't be rewarded for lawbreaking. If police and prosecutors get valuable information by stomping on the constitutional rights of criminal suspects, they can't expect the courts to serve as accomplices by allowing the use of that information.

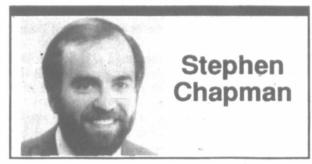

Any "fruit of the poisonous tree," as Justice Felix Frankfurter described such evidence, is supposed to be discarded by the courts. The alternative is to give lawless law enforcement officials not only the judiciary's blessing but its encouragement black - and, as the court once declared, to make the constitutional protections given to criminal suspects "revocable at the whim of any police officer."

The exclusionary rule is unpopular with the public because it sometimes allows the guilty to go free. But it is important to our liberties because it black. discourages police and prosecutors from trampling the constitution.

Unfortunately, the police hadn't bothered to get a warrant before arresting James, so the court had to throw out his statement. Five witnesses testified that the boy had red hair at the time of the killing, but a friend called by James' lawyers said it was

But the trial judge took the exception a step further, letting the prosecution use James' statement to has begun to resemble a house with all the win-contradict his friend's account. prosecution won't be any worse off; since otherwise it won't have the information anyway. If the defendant is rash enough to take the stand, the evidence can be used. If he knows that, he probably won't testify - which, experience shows, will increase the odds of a guilty verdict.

The second answer is that, even if the original exception makes sense, this one doesn't. A defendant on trial for a serious crime has nothing to lose by lying on the witness stand. The chance that otherwise inadmissible evidence will emerge to expose him, however, makes that option less attrac-

But a defense witness, as Justice William Brennan noted in the court's opinion, has a good reason not to lie: the threat of going to jail for lying under oath. "Perjury by proxy" is a neat but misleading phrase, since a defendant can't control what a friend will blurt out under cross-examination. And Had James taken the stand in his own defense, a broader exception would deter the defense from to make such a claim, the prosecution could then calling any witnesses at all - since every witness gives the prosecutor an opening to introduce evidence that otherwise can't be used.

> By refusing to give prosecutors a new weapon, the court invites denunciations for hampering the fight against crime. But the exclusionary rule doesn't strike at random like a bolt of lightning. It pops up only when law enforcers have broken the law. There's a simple way to avoid this obstacle: Don't violate people's constitutional rights.

> Those who think the exclusionary rule is an intolerable handicap in the fight against crime are really saying that the Constitution is a dispensable luxury. The Supreme Court, which has often indulged this point of view, may yet come to recognize that the solution to private disdain for the law his father dies. Rothenberg left prison early Wednesday, beginning three years' probation, said Tipton Kindel, spokesman for the state Department of Corrections in Sacramento.

At a news conference later, 13year-old David Rothenberg told reporters he fears his father will try to see him again.

"I know that he'll try," said the boy, who was severely scarred by his father's arson attack seven years ago. "If he tries to hurt me, I'll do something in self-protection.'

David said he still keeps a BB gun by his bed just in case.

"I would like them to keep him in jail for the rest of his life," said David, who was 6 when his father set him on fire in an Orange County motel room.

The boy said he could never for-

Miami police officer freed on bond after sentencing for manslaughter

By RICHARD COLE Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) - A Hispanic police officer was free on bond and predicting his vindication after receiving a sevenyear prison term for the deaths of two blacks. One critic called the sentence "justice delayed and justice denied."

Officer William Lozano thanked his supporters after client a fair trial. being sentenced Wednesday by Dade Circuit Judge Joseph Farina

"My attorney, my family and I will continue to fight within the system for the truth, for what is right, and at the end, we will win," Lozano said.

Lozano, 30, was convicted last month on two counts of manslaughter for fatally shooting an unarmed black motorcyclist, sending the vehicle crashing into a car and killing the motorcycle's passenger. The deaths ignited riots by blacks.

The defense contended that Lozano shot in self-defense because the motorcyclist tried to run him down. "This court cannot do perfect justice in this case," said Farina, who called the deaths and resultant trial a "tragic incident."

Supporters of the Colombian-born officer cheered as they left the courtroom after Farina said Lozano could remain free on $10,000 bond pending the outcome of Prosecutor John Hogan, who recommended a 12year prison term, described the sentence as a just one. Lozano could have faced a punishment of 12 to 17 years in prison under state sentencing guidelines.

Miguel Degrandy, a vice president of the Spanish American League Against Discrimination, said the judge "fashioned a sentence that he felt that both parties could live with.

"However, this is a no-win case for our community in Dade County, and there is still going to be unfortunately polarized reaction," he said.

Duds by Moscow designers add Soviet chic to U.S. market

By KAROL STONGER AP Newsfeatures

NEW YORK (AP) - As U.S. denims continue to command big money on the Soviet black market — Levi 501s reportedly fetch $150 to $200 a pair — guess what's coming to America.

You got it. Russian jeans. Not just jeans with Russian-sounding names, but jeans designed in Russia by Russians.

They're called, very simply, Soviet Jeansware. And for Seattle Pacific Industries, which has the U.S. manufacturing and distribution rights, the timing couldn't have been better, what with the recent rapid-fire political developments in Eastern Europe.

Steve Ritchey, senior vice president of merchandising and design at SPI, spotted the clothing in Europe last summer and started negotiating with The Pantrem Group of Italy, which owns worldwide licensing rights. The deal was signed in late September, and Soviet Jeansware was introduced in 40 department stores in time for Christmas. By the end of January, the line will reach 200 stores nationwide, according to Ed Backholm, director of SPI marketing and advertising.

"Time and place is what the fashion business is all about," Backholm says. "With the political thaw and the positive energy associated with it, people are buying and wearing Soviet Jeansware as a statement of support for what's happening in the world.'

A team of seven Moscow-based designers provides the illustrations, color suggestions and detailing ideas. SPI, which has been making denims for 10 years under the Union Bay label, does the rest.

In addition to blue jeans, the Soviet collections for men and women include 100 percent cotton knit and woven shirts, jackets, pants and shorts. Colors include brass, mustard, loden and olive as well as black, white and red, chambray and stonewash and wornwash denim.

If the styling isn't distinguishable from other casualwear, the detailing is. There are sewn-on Soviet labels with Cyrillic writing, metal buttons with the Soviet logo, and stars, CCCP and other legends.

The signature item is button-fly jeans with a miniature screwdriver hanging from a belt loop. The screwdriver is utilitarian. It's used to replace a color metal plate on the back waistband with one of two optional ones. The jeans are packaged in a tin embossed with the Soviet logo and retail for $68.

Denim jackets go for $125, but most of the line is priced at $50-

"Denim will play a big role in the '90s," says Packholm. "It comes in three to five-year cycles, and the last time it was a big fashion item was in the mid-80s.

Wilson Elementary gets Apple computer

Woodrow Wilson Elementary principal Raymond Thornton, left, accepts an Apple computer and printer from John Leland, assistant manager of Homeland grocery store here, at a presentation ceremony Wednesday morning. The computer is the second Wilson elementary has earned through Homeland's grocery tape promotion. Homeland also donated apples to each student of the school. Leland said that Homeland presently owns more than 100 stores in three states and have presented 250 computers to schools to date at a total value of approximately $350,000. More than $63 million in grocery store receipts have been turned in through the program, he added.

Heart patient finds parking laws a handicap

DEAR ABBY: Concerning handicap parking spaces: In Massachusetts, the law is such that if you are in a wheelchair and cannot walk even one step (as my mother was) you cannot get a handicap plate. I know. I begged the powers that be to give her one. She had doctors' requests, but the answer was a resounding no. You must have at least one foot missing.

My uncle, who lives in New Mexico, has a handicap plate, and he can dance the jitterbug! He is a handicapped veteran. The laws are not as strict in New Mexico.

Why the entire country doesn't have uniform laws concerning parking spaces for disabled people is beyond my comprehension. I live in Florida now, and while I am not familiar with the laws of this state, this I do know: Even though a borrowed vehicle has handicap plates that entitle the owner to park in a preferred area, no able-bodied person should use that space.

Everyone seeing anyone whom they believe to be a healthy person drive into the handicap parking space should write the license number down and report it. If the person is not qualified, then reporting them will finally result in the revocation of the plate for whom it is issued. And people who own the plates will be more careful of the inconsiderate persons they lend their cars to.

Before my open-heart surgery in Massachusetts, I could not walk 10 feet. I could not get a plate either. E.C. IN WINTER HAVEN, FLA.

DEAR E.C.: One does not have to have a "missing foot" to get a handicap plate in Massachumanent loss of the use of at least one foot or leg, not the foot or leg itself. Your difficulty in obtaining a permit for yourself may have arisen because your physician could not state that your run down his chin. And by the handicap was permanent. This year, the Massachusetts RMV further expanded the law to include "class 3 and 4" heart patients, by virtue of the severity of their disease. Although every state does not have the same requirements for the issuance of handicap plates, almost all respect plates issued by other states. And Massachusetts confers reciprocity on handicap parking permits for all states and Canadian provinces.

DEAR ABBY: I see letters in your column quite often from wives who are upset with their husbands because they "look" at other women. I think all men like to look at good-looking women, but some are more sneaky about it than others. Fifty years ago, my boyfriend was a girl watcher. When I complained. he told me that as long as he lives, he'll look. That was the truth, because we've been married for 48 years and he's still looking. It doesn't bother me a bit because he's a "looker," not a "toucher." We have a wonderful marriage, and he's

Hmong traditions result in teacher's body being exhumed

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) - A pre-school teacher's body was exhumed and photographs of her Hmong pupils were removed from the casket to believed the children were under.

The grave of Headstart teacher Charlotte Bell, of the parents, who are from the mountains of Crystal Lake Cemetery in Minneapolis. Laos in Southeast Asia.

Burying a beloved picture "is an honor to a lot of people" but a "disgrace and dishonor to the Hmong," said Angela Mann, director of the local Headstart program.

"The parents felt their children were cursed. They would have bad luck for the rest of their lives. I didn't want that on my head."

pneumonia. She received a get-well card made private sources, Mann said. She said she tracked by a colleague, Mann said.
