Greene sentenced to 7 years for kidnapping estranged wife

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Michael Frank Greene, 37, was sentenced to seven years in the state penitentiary under a plea bargain arrangement Wednesday for the kidnapping of his estranged wife and three children on Sept. 28.

Greene, who was originally accused in a four-state murder spree in July, pleaded guilty in 223rd District Court before District Judge Don Cain to the third-degree felony of kidnapping.

The October indictment in the case was enhanced, making it a second-degree felony, due to Greene's previous felony conviction in Gray County. However, under the plea bargain with the state, District Attorney Harold Comer said that enhancement was waived.

While on the witness stand Wednesday, Greene was questioned heavily by Comer about any involvement he might have with Gregg Francis Braun, 28, of Garden City, Kan., who has since been charged with five murders. Braun is charged with the capital murder on July 20 of Pampa businessman Pete Spurrier, owner of One Hour Photo, during a robbery.

Asked if he knows Braun, Greene responded to Comer, "Yes." Comer asked him how he knew Braun and Greene replied,

"Through the newspapers."

However, Greene denied with answers of "No, sir" when asked if he had ever met Braun or ever known him or any member of his family. He also answered "No, sir" when asked by Comer if he had ever run into Braun in the last year or so at a bar or at any other location.

Greene testified Wednesday that he did kidnap his estranged wife and three children on Sept. 28 from the home of his estranged wife's parents. However, he denied using or threatening to use "deadly force."

"I just took her," Green said. Melissa Greene, in stipulated testimony, stated her husband had threatened her with a tire tool and told her he was going to kill her and bury her in a field during the kidnapping ordeal.

"I didn't say that," Greene said Wednesday.

Ms. Greene testified at a prior hearing that her husband had arrived at her parents' home begging her to accept him back, telling her he could not live without her and the three children.

After dragging her to his pickup in the alley, she escaped briefly before he caught up with her and put her back into the truck, as she was clad only in a housecoat, clutching her baby.

Heavy snowfall forecast

From staff and wire reports

Forecasters are calling for up to a foot of snowfall by Friday morning as a low pressure system continues brings a heavy, wet winter storm to the area.

Darrell Schorn, meteorologist for KGRO/KOMX Radio, said this morning that snow was falling at the rate of two inches an hour.

"As the low pressure system moves this way, it is drawing a lot of moisture from the Pacific and the Gulf," Schorn said. "The main thing is it's wet and will be very economically beneficial to the wheat crop."

"Hopefully this will be in time to save the wheat crop."

Schorn called for temperatures ranging from 32 to the mid 20s, perfect for a snowfall, he said.

Within an hour of the snowfall starting, street crews in Pampa were sanding Duncan Street and other major thoroughfares in town because of slick conditions.

Schorn said winds should stay calm enough to prevent blizzard conditions locally.

"Right now the streets are getting very slick," Deputy Chief Ken Hall said shortly before 10 a.m. "The hill on Duncan is getting slick and cars are having trouble getting up it. People need to stay off the streets unless it is absolutely necessary to get out."

"With more snow expected, people need to take every precaution. They need to be on the lookout for cars that may have lost control as well."

Hall said travel is being discouraged, but that in the event it is unavoidable, blankets should be carried in the car in case the auto becomes stranded or slides into a bar ditch.

By 10 a.m., teachers and other personnel with the Pampa Independent School District, the city's largest employer, were being sent home due to hazardous roadway conditions. Students are out of school today and Friday for teacher work days.

The Associated Press reported that around the state freezing rain, snow, fog, flash flooding, thunderstorms and rain were all expected to result from the low pressure system.

A winter storm watch is in effect for the Panhandle and South Plains tonight and Friday. Forecasters are saying some areas south of the Panhandle could experience freezing rain.

A flash flood warning was in effect for Cherokee County today and a flash flood watch was in effect through tonight for the eastern third of North Texas.

Dense fog covered North Texas and Central Texas Wednesday night with visibility reduced to zero or slightly above at times at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. Visibility was about one-sixteenth of a mile during the pre-dawn hours.

Scattered thunderstorms with heavy rain continued early today over portions of Central Texas and East Texas early.

A slow moving cold front was nearly stationary early today along a line from Cotulla to Columbus to Shreveport, Louisiana. It was producing thunderstorms and rain showers. Heavy rainfall of five to six inches prompted the National Weather Service to issue a flash flood warning for Cherokee County.

It was cloudy over most of the state at dawn today.

Forecasts called for mostly cloudy skies statewide through Friday.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 40s, ranging from the 20s in the Panhandle and the 30s in the South Plains to the 50s and 60s in South Texas.

Highs Friday will be mostly in the 40s and 50s, ranging from the upper 20s in the Panhandle and the 30s in the South Plains to the 60s and 70s in Central Texas and South Texas.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 40s and 50s, ranging from the 30s in the northern Panhandle to the 60s and 70s in extreme South Texas along the coast. Extremes ranged from 31 at Pampa to 72 at Brownsville.

The southern Rockies braced today for the storm system that dumped up to 2 feet of snow on Southern California's mountains earlier this week. Rain was expected along a front extending from Texas to Maine.

Arctic air and flurries were forecast near Lake Superior, while cooler air crept into the Northeast.

High pressure over the northern Rockies should move east and south, bringing variable clouds and cooler temperatures to the nation's midsection through Friday.

More showers and thundershowers were expected to soak northeastern Texas across Arkansas to the Tennessee Valley.

DeLeon receives 15 years in murder case

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Although testifying that he was not the triggerman in an August 1988 murder case, Ricardo DeLeon, 23, of Pampa pleaded guilty Wednesday in 223rd District Court to the first-degree murder of Humberto Castillo Granillo, 19.

DeLeon, also known as Ricky DeLeon, was sentenced to 15 years in the state penitentiary by District Judge Don Cain. The 15-year sentence was the result of a plea bargain between DeLeon and the state. Three charges of attempted murder against DeLeon were dismissed.

Another man, Richard Gonzales, 22, was sentenced in July to 45 years in the state penitentiary on a charge of first-degree murder. Gonzales was implicated as the person who actually pulled the trigger in the Houston Street alley shootings.

The crime occurred about 4:25 a.m. on Aug. 14, 1988, as Granillo; Miguel Angel Castillo, 24; San Juana Carmina Cortez, 19; and a 16-year-old girl were sitting in a car in the alley behind 310 Houston St.

Granillo was killed instantly by one of two shots to the head. He also received gunshot wounds to the arm and leg. Also injured by gunshot wounds were the 16-year-old female and Castillo, who was Granillo's roommate in the trailer home at 310 Houston. Cortez was not injured in the gunfire and drove the vehicle to Coronado Hospital at speeds reaching 85 mph.

Although Gonzales testified during his sentencing in July that the shooting was the result of an ongoing argument that had continued for 1 1/2 to two years, he said through a stipulation filed in the case Wednesday that the shooting was the result of a fight DeLeon had been in on Aug. 12, 1988.

According to the stipulated testimony of Gonzales, he was approached by DeLeon on the night of Aug. 13 to go and shoot some rabbits and drink some beer.

"Ricky had already told me that he had gone to a dance on Friday night (August 12, 1988) and that he had gotten into a fight. He said that six guys had jumped him while he was dancing. Ricky told me that he had come looking for me that Friday night to help him, but I was not there."

Gonzales' statement indicated they got some more beer and drove by the dance to see who was there. "Ricky said there was one (of the persons from the earlier fight) there. Ricky said that we should go back to his shop and get some boards to fight with and we did."

They drank some more liquor, according to Gonzales' statement, with some other people, and then dropped off everyone, leaving only Gonzales and DeLeon in DeLeon's father's pickup.

"He (DeLeon) asked me if I wanted to do something. I was already drunk. He said that we were going to go by a trailer to look for the people that he had been in a fight with."

However, in testimony Wednesday, DeLeon contradicted Gonzales' statement, saying Gonzales was the one who was driving and initiated the attempt to start some trouble.

After parking the pickup by an auto mechanic's shop near railroad tracks, Gonzales said DeLeon pulled out a .22-caliber pistol and gave it to Gonzales and DeLeon took a .30-caliber rifle and they walked toward the alley where the car was parked.

"... [T]he gun just started going off. After the gun went off, I took off running and Ricky and I ran to the truck."

Gonzales was arrested the morning of the murder. However, DeLeon was not charged with the crimes until June.

On Wednesday, DeLeon said he went to talk to Sgt. Terry Cox with the Gray County Sheriff's Office in June after Gonzales called him and asked him to give a statement so Gonzales' sentence would be shorter.

"Richard called and told me if I gave a statement it would cut his sentence," DeLeon said.

DeLeon said he disagreed with some of Gonzales' statements. He said he did not ask Gonzales to go with him. "I was asleep in the truck. Richard was driving," DeLeon said.

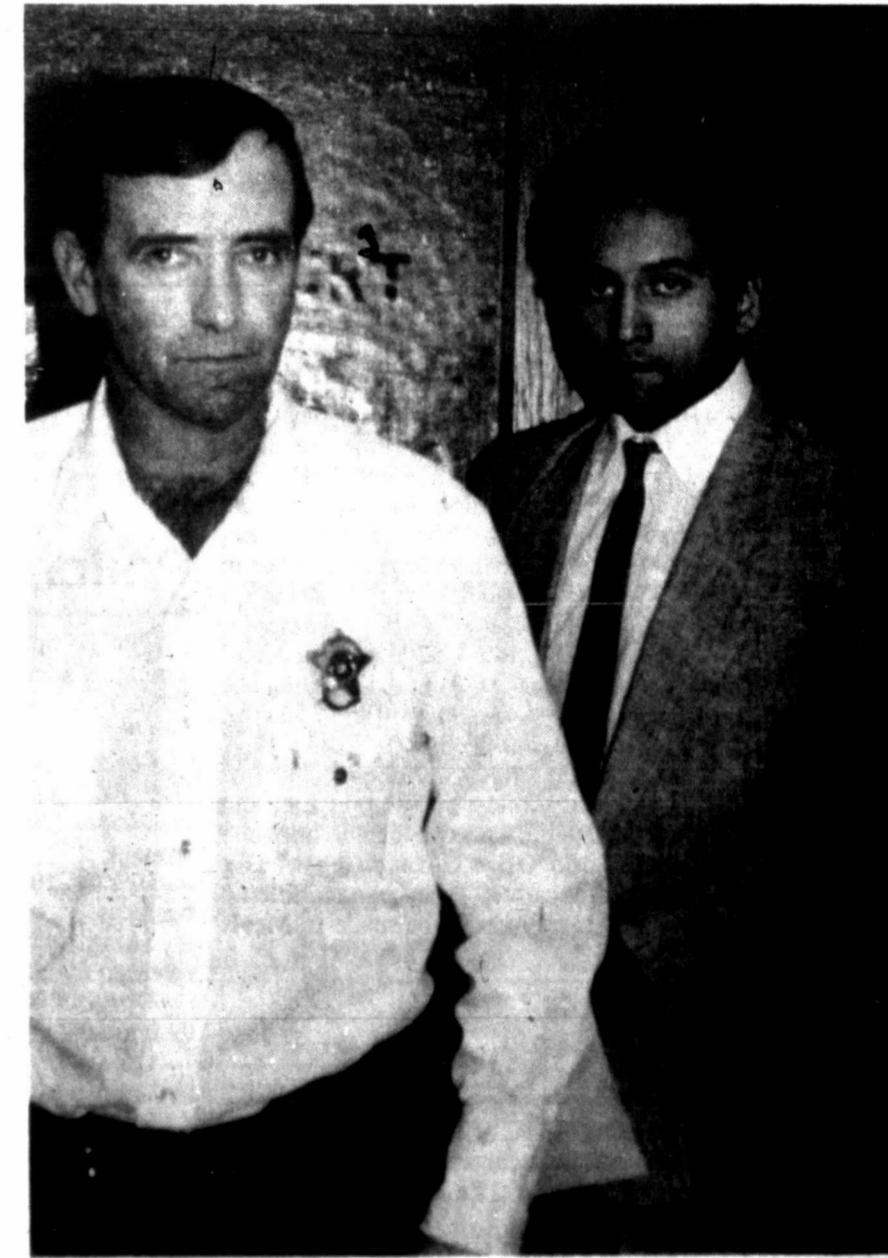

Asked about the actual shooting, DeLeon said, "I just got there when the shooting started. Richard was running and he ran into me."

District Attorney Harold Comer asked DeLeon if he realized that he could be guilty of murder even if he did not commit the murder, and DeLeon said, "Yes."

"The state is not saying you shot the young people," Comer said.

DeLeon was given credit for 176 days already served in confinement. He was released on $80,000 bond on Dec. 20 and was free on bond until the Wednesday sentencing.

Assistant City Manager Frank Smith resigns after 16 years of city service

By BEAR MILLS
 Staff Writer

Frank Smith

After 16 years with the city of Pampa, Assistant City Manager Frank Smith turned in his resignation Wednesday afternoon to City Manager Glen Hackler.

In a statement to the press, Hackler said Smith is retiring on a medical disability caused by a chronic heart condition.

Hackler said the Texas Municipal Retirement System confirmed to the city Tuesday that Smith would be eligible for retirement because of the heart problem.

Hackler said Smith's position will not be filled, nor will that of assistant to the city manager, which Hackler formerly held, in an effort to trim upper management.

"The commission has held for some time we are top heavy, especially at the senior management levels, and so it's my decision not to accomplish an effective delivery with a savings of about $80,000 a year to the city."

Hackler credited Smith with having an integral part in developing landfill and recycling plans currently being considered by the city and heading the construction phase of the new municipal golf course.

In addition, Commissioner Ray Hupp noted Smith's part in developing the city's data processing department.

Smith was originally hired as a consultant to the city's financial department, later joining the finance department.

He served as data processing manager and finance director. In 1985 Smith was promoted to assistant city manager under then manager Bob Hart.

Hackler said Smith's resignation is effective immediately and that a retirement party is planned for early February.

U.S. diplomats fearful of reprisals

By GEORGE GEDDA
 Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Angry State Department officials say U.S. diplomats overseas could be the target of reprisals following a series of incidents between U.S. forces in Panama and foreign envoys there.

"We cannot conduct diplomacy on the basis of 25-watt thinking," said one administration official, accusing the U.S. military of failing to take into account the potential diplomatic consequences of its actions.

The incidents "put in jeopardy American diplomatic missions all over the world," said Perry Shankle, a former president of the American Foreign Service Association, the union of career diplomats. He was the only one of several officials interviewed who was willing to be quoted by name.

Fearful of the diplomatic fallout as a result of incidents at the embassies in Panama of the Vatican, Cuba, Peru and Nicaragua, the association has expressed its concern in a private letter to Defense Secretary Dick Cheney.

The United States is considered particularly vulnerable to reprisals against its diplomats because it often pursues unpopular policies internationally and also has more envoys stationed overseas than any other country.

The State Department insists the United States subscribes fully to rules governing treatment of diplomats spelled out in the Vienna Convention. On the other hand, it acknowledges that an "unusual situation" has prevailed in Panama.

A U.S. official, worried about the precedent set in Panama, said, "We diplomats have to rely on good faith of foreign governments to live up to their commitments to protect us."

One foreign service officer expressed particular outrage over the statement by President Bush following the

Dec. 29 penetration of the Nicaraguan Embassy in Panama by U.S. forces searching for weapons.

Bush acknowledged that a mistake had been made because the U.S. troops thought the envoy lived elsewhere, but the president sharply criticized the diplomat for "having automatic weapons up to his eyeballs in his house."

The U.S. official said Nicaragua is not alone in having weapons caches stored at its diplomatic sites.

If a hostile group entered U.S. facilities in some foreign countries, "don't you think they would find RPG's (rocket-propelled grenades)?" the official asked. "You don't think we have TOW (anti-tank) missiles in some compounds?"

Use of loud music outside the Vatican Embassy, where Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega sought refuge on Dec. 24, drew angry complaints of "amateurism" from some State Department officials and expressions of irritation from the Vatican.

A few days after the invasion, Cuban officials charged the U.S. forces were preventing diplomats from entering or leaving their embassy as part of the effort to bar Noriega from seeking refuge there. U.S. officials denied the Cuban allegations.

In an effort to track down Panamanians who served Noriega, American troops have been checking cars entering and leaving the Cuban mission even though some experts contend such vehicles apparently are exempt from such activity under international law.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler has said the Cuban ambassador's car "has very dark, tinted windows which require troops guarding the mission to open the doors to identify the passengers."

But a State Department official said the action by the troops "exposes every American ambassador to the possibility of an armed blockade. He would have to agree to be searched. This is appalling. This is the most appalling thing I've ever seen."

Greene

Around noon that day, she begged her husband to stop so she could get some food for the baby. He stopped at a service station and got gas and went inside. Mrs. Greene ran inside begging the service station attendant to call for help.

The attendant, Mac Christner, manager of the Phillips 66 station in Shamrock, testified at a prior hearing that he did call law enforcement following the incident.

A deputy with the Beckham County Sheriff's Office in Oklahoma said earlier he saw the Greene vehicle after a bulletin was broadcast to all law enforcement officials about the kidnapping.

He said he stopped the vehicle on Interstate 40 about 10 miles east of the Texas-Oklahoma border, and placed Greene under arrest.

Greene was given credit for 109 days served in confinement.

Sheriff Jim Free said Wednesday his office will not file charges of felony escape against Greene. Greene allegedly escaped from the custody of a Gray County deputy on Nov. 17 while Greene and another prisoner were at a doctor's office in Amarillo for psychiatric evaluation. Greene was captured about 15 minutes after his escape attempt.

Free said he had decided not to press the charges in Potter County since Greene agreed to the plea bargain.

North Dallas residents fearful after series of child snatchings

By PATRICE GRAVINO
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Even the thinnest of leads are getting police attention in a quiet, North Dallas residential area, where four sleeping girls have been snatched from their beds since September.

Taken in the middle of the night, three of them were sexually assaulted outside their house, police say.

Investigators say the assailant has been spotted twice more, prowling outside girls' bedroom windows before being scared off by passers-by.

The latest episode occurred a week ago, when an intruder carried an 8-year-old girl from her bedroom but dropped her outside the house, unharmed, after she screamed.

Officers patrol on foot, homeowners use security systems even when they're home and parents and school officials grapple with protecting children without traumatizing them.

Police are talking to crime watch groups and at schools to make sure parents and children protect themselves. They've set up special surveillance units and a task force to work on nothing but the child snatchings.

"We are continuing to run down every available lead, no matter how faint or remote," said Deputy Chief Grant Lappin, who oversees the district where the crimes have occurred.

Police said Wednesday they have no solid leads in the attacks. The victims, all elementary school-age girls, haven't been able to give good descriptions of the attacker, police say.

Investigators say some of the victims have been in heavily secured homes, complete with elaborate alarm systems and fences. But in at least the last attack, an unlocked patio door provided the intruder an easy way in.

In each case, a man has taken the children just outside the house and assaulted or tried to assault them there, never taking them far.

"It's a daring offense," Lappin said. Some neighborhood men have quit taking evening walks for fear people will suspect them. Other residents worry that someone will get shot accidentally as tensions rise.

Some parents tell of changing the pink drapes in their daughters' rooms to white to avoid tipping someone to the location of girls' rooms.

"The parents are really struggling with how to protect their children and at the same time keep from instilling fears in their children so that they can't sleep at night," said Lori Messerschmidt, who has coordinated counseling for families in the neighborhoods where the attacks occurred.

More than 500 parents from the middle- to upper-class neighborhoods came to meetings Tuesday at two schools to talk about the attacks with school officials and police.

In the exclusive Bent Tree West development where the latest attack occurred, the homeowners' association passed out fliers asking parents to take safety precautions: locking doors, watching their children, using security systems even when they're at home. "Our neighborhood knows each other, that's why it was so shocking," said Jane Hood, who lives in the development. "But I think everybody on our street is remembering to lock their doors."

While parents want their children to be aware, they worry about traumatizing them.

"You have to choose your words carefully," said Meg Sherard. "I have a 10-year-old daughter, and you have to be careful that you don't get the children so paranoid that they think someone's going to break into the house and take them."

Officers patrol the areas on foot day and night and have woken up several residents in the middle of the night to tell them to lock their doors, Lappin said.

"It's our belief that, despite the publicity, that there are still some people in the area that are not aware of what is happening," said police spokesman Ed Spencer. "Some officers up there on foot patrol on Sunday observed quite a few unlocked garage doors."

U.S. official calls Mexico A.G. after 'Drug Wars' airs

By RICHARD HERZFEIDER
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The U.S. government was so concerned about reaction to NBC's Drug Wars miniseries that a top Justice Department official called Mexico's attorney general the day after the first episode aired, the attorney general says.

"He asked me how I was taking it," Attorney General Enrique Alvarez del Castillo told reporters Wednesday. Laughing, he said he had replied with a Mexican profanity and added that he had appreciated the gesture.

The NBC miniseries based on the death of Drug Enforcement Administration agent Enrique Camarena in 1985 was broadcast Jan. 7-9; it caused a controversy in Mexico because of its frank portrayal of corruption in the Mexican legal system.

Mexican officials feared it would deal a blow to President Carlos Salinas de Gortari's efforts to change Mexico's image, while U.S. officials feared Mexican anger and hurt pride would inhibit relations, especially in the fight against drug trafficking.

Officials of both nations have insisted that is not happening and U.S. officials have praised the Salinas administration's efforts to fight drug trafficking and corruption. Mexican officials are quick to point out that 36 tons of cocaine has been seized in the 13 months since Salinas took office, more than was seized in the preceding 10 years put together.

Drug kingpins Rafael Caro Quintero and Ernesto Fonseca Carrillo were sentenced in December to 40 years in prison without parole for the Camarena killing.

Alvarez, who was governor of Jalisco when Camarena was kidnapped in the state capital of Guadalajara, said he found the miniseries' portrayal of Mexican justice "irritating" but emphasized that it had not affected relations and that the governments were keeping things on an even keel.

As an example of the close U.S.-Mexico relationship under Salinas and President Bush, Alvarez said he had received a sympathetic telephone call from a top U.S. drug enforcement official on behalf of U.S. Attorney General Richard Thornburgh.

The call came after the first episode of Drug Wars was broadcast in the United States and on Mexico City's cable system, Alvarez said.

At a press conference, Alvarez said the government is "interested" in press reports that allege Camarena was involved in drug trafficking himself, but that it is not reopening the Camarena investigation.

U.S. officials have indignantly denied the reports, which originated with a dispatch by the government news service Notimex.

"We're interested in corroboration for those reports, but that doesn't mean we've launched a full investigation, nor that we're using that type of speculation as evidence to go ahead with a criminal proceeding," said Alvarez.

On Tuesday, Alvarez had said there was no independent corroboration of the allegations, which were repeated on a Mexican television program that purported to point out "falsehoods" broadcast by NBC.

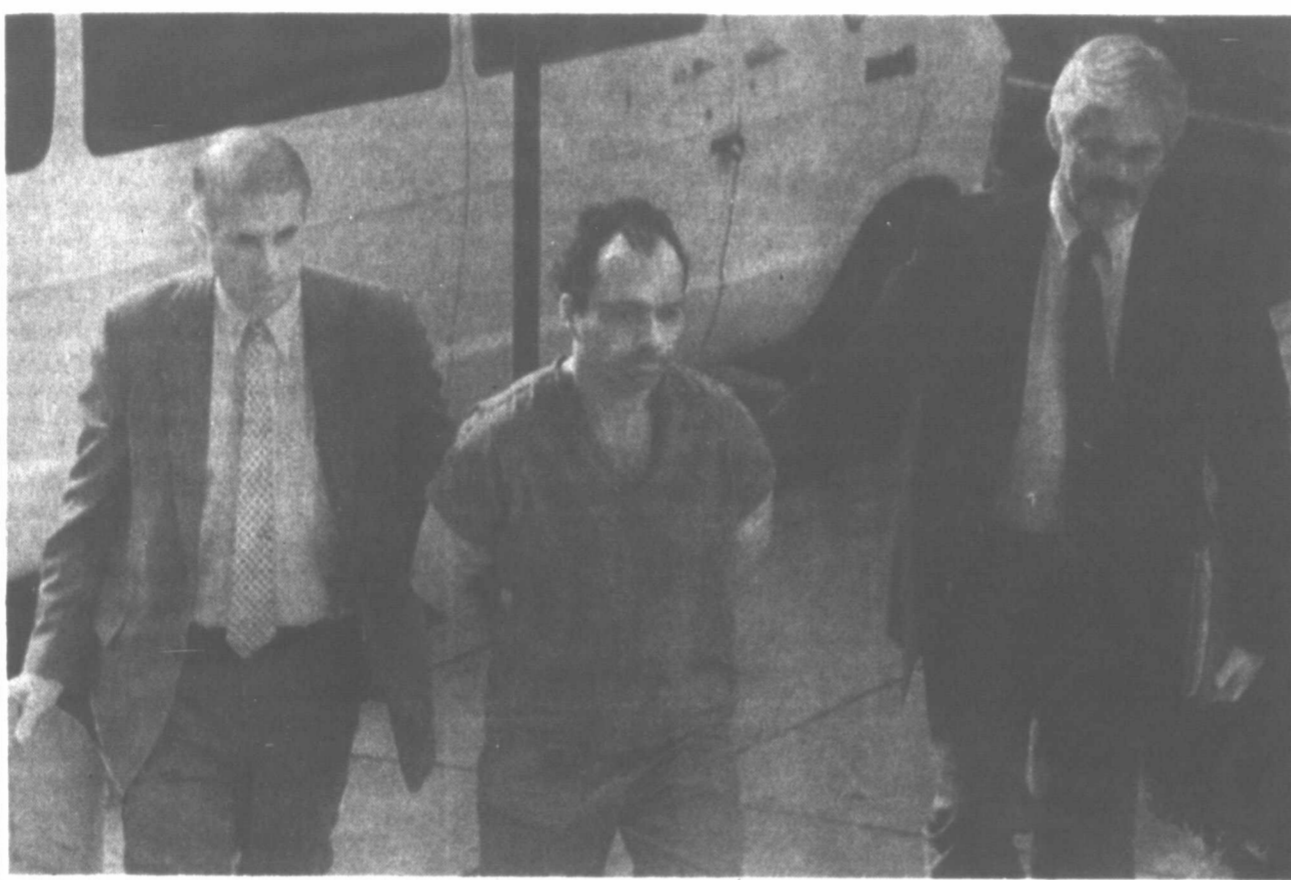

Alvarez noted that 26 others were convicted with Caro Quintero and Fonseca and said he did not expect any more indictments.

Alvarez said he did not know enough to comment on the substance of charges related to Camarena's murder that were filed in California against Ruben Zuno Arce, a brother-in-law of former president Luis Echeverria. More indictments relating to the Camarena case are expected in the United States.

At another news conference, members of a U.S. congressional delegation visiting Mexico praised Mexican law enforcement efforts since Salinas took office and minimized the impact of the NBC miniseries.

"It was just like a soap opera, like Lonesome Dove, Dynasty or Dallas and that's how people will regard it," said E. (Kika) de la Garza, D-Texas, who represents a border district.

Hijacking suspect arraigned

Law enforcement officials escort Jose Manuel Gonzalez-Gonzalez to his arraignment in federal court Wednesday in Austin. Gonzalez-Gonzalez is accused of hijacking an America West flight late Tuesday from Houston to Las Vegas. Gonzalez-Gonzalez was apprehended by Austin police after the jet landed to refuel at the Austin airport.

Gramm proposes tough anti-drugs bill

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm is promising to get tough on drug thugs with a series of stiff anti-crime proposals that would require most inmates to work and could deprive them of such prison amenities as air-conditioning.

But an official of the American Civil Liberties Union says the plan is an election-year ploy that fails to address the causes of drug abuse and drug dealing and ignores such issues as education, treatment and prevention.

"Every election year we see these new, get-tough approaches to the drug problem, and they're offered as though we haven't gotten tough on the drug problem," said Gene Guerrero, a legislative representative for the ACLU.

Guerrero said drug use is actually down, prisoners are serving longer sentences and prison populations have tripled since 1970. The military is involved in the fight against drugs, yet more potent drugs are more readily available at cheaper prices than ever.

Gramm, R-Texas, and House Minority Whip Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., are proposing legislation that would declare a five-year national drug and crime emergency act to "deal with the problems of our bleeding nation."

"What I think we need to do is string some of these people (criminals) up," Gramm told a Capitol news conference Wednesday.

While Gramm acknowledges his plan would lock

"pretty revolutionary" in Washington, "in Mexico, Texas, it will have strong support."

Joe Gunn, president of the Texas AFL-CIO, is already objecting to Gramm's proposal to allow prisoners to work in private industry, saying it would take away jobs in a state with too high an unemployment rate.

"There are things (inmates) can do for the federal or state government ... but we (in Texas) have a policy of opposing them going into private industry," Gunn said.

Gramm's bill would require mandatory sentences, without parole, for federal drug and violent crime convictions. It also imposes stiff penalties for drug users; allows states, local governments and businesses to conduct random drug testing; and restricts the courts' right to limit prison overcrowding.

"How can we take seriously putting pressure in Colombia and Peru and Bolivia if we haven't got the guts to put pressure in the United States?" said Gingrich. "The fact is that by any reasonable civilized standard we have a breakdown in public safety. It is incumbent on the Congress to deal with this as a serious war, not just a skirmish."

Gramm also announced that one of several sites in Texas seeking a 6,000-bed federal prison has a good chance of landing the facility from a national field of about 100 competitors.

The Bureau of Prisons is expected to choose a location for the mega-prison, which would house minimum, medium and maximum security inmates, within the next couple of months, Gramm said.

Education officials blast group's report

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — State education officials and representatives of poor schools blasted a report by a conservative Dallas group that says there is no relationship between school funding and student performance.

The National Center for Policy Analysis report Wednesday stated taxable wealth of school districts and spending per student does not affect basic skills test results.

Texas Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby said, "I think it is a simple headline-grabbing approach to indict the public schools and to argue against spending more money on public education."

"We feel that the degree to which you spend certainly has an impact on your ability to provide services," said Donna Blevins, director of communications for the Equity Center, a group of poor school districts.

But John Goodman, president of the National Center for Policy Analysis, said the current public school system doesn't work.

"Overall, Texas schools are doing a poor job," he said.

His group identified the 52 best and 37 worst schools based on the 1988-89 Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills examination of ninth-grade students.

But of the 37 school systems rated as the lowest, 36 rank below the average in taxable property wealth per student and some are among the poorest, according to the Equity Center.

Of the 52 high-ranking schools,

20 are above the average in taxable property wealth per student and some are among the richest.

The district listed as the best by the study, Petersburg Independent School District, had all of its ninth graders score better than 70 percent on the TEAMS test last year. The district only had 31 ninth graders and made a priority of improving TEAMS scores, said Petersburg High School Principal Ken Wiseman.

"The year before we did not score well," Wiseman said. "We said to ourselves 'We're better than that' and we got serious about it and the kids got serious about it."

The district with the worst performance, in the colonia area of El Paso called San Elizario, had only 12 percent of its 110 ninth-graders pass all three sections of the TEAMS test. San Elizario is in the bottom 1 percent in taxable property wealth in Texas, Ms. Blevins said.

She said the report doesn't address disparities in education quality between rich and poor schools.

Report: WTSU and A&M merger harms Texas Tech

AMARILLO (AP) — A merger of West Texas State University into the Texas A&M system would harm Texas Tech University and duplicate programs in that area of the state, says a staff report from the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board.

The staff's recommendation against the merger comes a little more than one week before the coordinating board is scheduled to rule on the proposed merger.

The vote on whether to allow the 6,000-student West Texas State school into the A&M system is set for Jan. 26.

The report recommended killing the proposal, saying instead that the Legislature should consider aligning West Texas State with Texas Tech.

Officials with West Texas State and Texas Tech were unavailable late Wednesday to comment on the report's findings.

The West Texas State campus is about 16 miles south of Amarillo and 100 miles north of Lubbock, where Texas Tech is based.

Supporters say the merger plan enjoys wide support in the Panhandle because West Texas State would attract more research money and gain prestige as a member of the A&M system.

But the coordinating board's staff report said a merger likely would harm Texas Tech by "encroaching, through a Canyon campus, upon programs and services already offered by Texas Tech University in West Texas and the Panhandle area."

Those programs include agricultural and veterinary courses, according to the report.

In addition, the staff report said, many Texas A&M alumni object to the merger because they oppose the extension of A&M labels, degrees, rings and traditions to any location other than College Station.

Rep. Rick Crawford, R-Amarillo, said he was disappointed by the staff report and hopes that the full board will approve it despite the recommendation.

It was unclear how the development would affect plans by the proposal's backers to charter a plane to Austin so they could show their support for the merger at the coordinating board meeting.

The Amarillo Chamber of Commerce announced it planned to charter a 150-passenger jet to Austin on Jan. 25, and chamber members said they hoped to fill the plane at $200 a seat.

Backers said they were worried that an in-depth study of Texas higher education would delay a vote on the merger proposal past a March 31 deadline, effectively killing it.

The committee appointed to study Texas higher education is supposed to make recommendations to the 1991 Legislature.

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

The '80s marked Freedom Decade

Pundits have yet to dub the last decade with a name that fits, but what it should be called is the Freedom Decade. Liberty — at least an insatiable yearning for it — broke out almost everywhere. Early in the decade Latin America dumped most of its old military dictatorships, and, in the decade's last year, freedom burned brightly across Central and Eastern Europe, even as its light was eclipsed — to shine again — in China by the Tiananmen Square massacre.

Here at home, some setbacks were suffered. The drug "war" panic led to increased government police and spying powers. A similar panic over our borders being "out of control" led to the vast increase in powers for the Immigration and Naturalization Service. Ironically, this occurred even as the KGB, which performs similar border control duties in the Soviet Union, decreased in power and the Soviets relaxed their controls on emigration.

Despite such decreases in liberty, by the end of the decade most Americans were a little more free. The top tax rate dropped from 70 percent to 28 percent. The inflation malaise of the Carter years faded into a kind of furtive happiness, unquenched even by an outcropping of neo-Puritanism.

Debate now whirls about who was the decade's most significant (not necessarily best) man. Time says it was Mikhail Gorbachev. Yet he was more someone who rode on a wave of events than someone in control of them. The clangorous collapse of socialism forced him to face a choice: either a crackdown at home and possible war abroad, or market reforms at home and accommodation abroad. He chose the latter — a courageous action, certainly. And having chosen that, he has adeptly manipulated his image and has taken actions to advance his own position.

But as others have pointed out, one who better deserves the honor is Ronald Reagan. His rhetoric stoked the fires of freedom. Today people in the Soviet Union post on their walls pictures of him meeting Gorbachev. Gorbachev, who is loathed at home by many despite his shiny image abroad, is there to make the authorities happy; Reagan is there because the people like him.

At home, Reagan advanced the American tax cuts and some deregulation. Alas, his most significant actions include his acquiescence in two major tax increases in 1982, totaling more than $500 billion; a protectionist binge that almost killed his economic recovery, and the aforementioned panics over drugs and immigration. Had he spurned these ill-advised plans and embraced the good, there would have been an even more lasting "Reagan revolution."

Three other men deserve mention as being close to Reagan in the "most significant" category: Pope John Paul II, Lech Walesa and the late Andrei Sakharov. All three implanted spiritual and ethical norms in the side of the Soviet regime, prodding Gorbachev into action; therefore, they rank above him.

And they personify the type of person most significant in the Freedom Decade: the freedom fighter, who battled for liberty everywhere, whether on the battlefields of Afghanistan, Angola, and Nicaragua, or in Tiananmen Square, the dockyards of Gdansk, or the halls of Congress.

Maturity should come with age

In the photograph, the woman's face is being punctured by a needle inserted directly into her cheek, which has already left several spots of blood. It doesn't look like something you'd volunteer for.

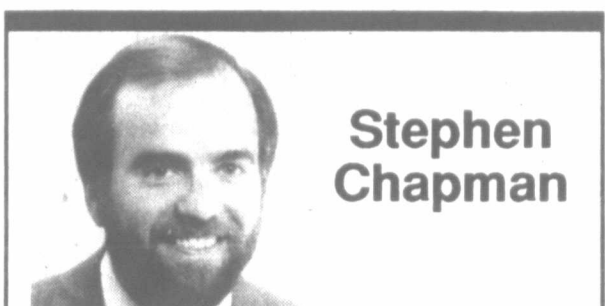

Is she the victim of some deadly disease for which this is the only treatment? A political prisoner being tortured by the secret police of some totalitarian country? A maddened slave of the latest drug habit?

None of these. According to the accompanying story in Time magazine, the woman is a victim of nothing more insidious than the clock. She's just trying to enhance her looks a little by combating one of the effects of aging. The syringe contains collagen, a substance taken from the hides of cattle that is used to smooth facial wrinkles in humans.

This is no weatherbeaten retiree. It's hard to tell from the picture, but I'd bet a year's subscription to Time that the woman is not a day over 40. She might be 30. Yet she is bound and determined to look even younger, and hang the discomfort and expense.

She has plenty of company. Since 1981, Time reports, more than 300,000 Americans have gotten the shots. They're quick, leave no scars and cost just $300 to $1,500 per treatment. Those advantages explain why someone would choose collagen over a facelift, even though it doesn't last as long (anywhere from three months to two years.) But they don't tell us why so many people are willing to take drastic measures to subtract a few years from their looks.

As one who has a few wrinkles of his own, who looks several years older than his birth certificate indicates, and whose hair is turning gray in those places where it isn't falling out, I am not entirely immune to the impulse. Minioxidil is tempting, and if someone were to come out with a youth elixir, guaranteed to stop the decay of body and mind in its tracks, I wouldn't be last in line to buy it.

But until that day arrives, why kid ourselves? Except for the fortunate few who die young, all of us get old. Part of that process is that we don't look like high school kids forever. If collagen could restore the reality of youth — physical vigor, mental alertness, unbounded good health — it would be easier to understand. But all it does is provide a phony youthful appearance, a facial version of the Potemkin village.

To some people, apparently, appearance is all. If you visit your local health club, you'll notice that most of the members seem more intent on improving their looks than upgrading their cardiovascular systems. In fact, if science discovered tomorrow that exercise is profoundly hazardous to human health, I doubt the aerobics classes would be any less crowded.

As it is, this form of preening can be submerged in the pursuit of sound muscles, healthy lungs and free-running arteries. Exercise actually combats the effects of age, not just its outward signs. Collagen injections, however, are vanity unadorned.

One 32-year old Californian who runs eight miles a day and plays tennis twice a week explained his decision to get his first treatment: "I always had the feeling I'd be willing to do anything to improve my appearance." If this guy were the Elephant man, that would be understandable. Otherwise, it falls in the category of ridiculous excess. Smoothing wrinkles at 32? What's next — tummy tucks for teen-agers?

And what about the money? It doesn't sound like a lot, but the expense has to be repeated frequently and without end, lest the crow's feet come sneaking back. In the worst case — $1,500 every three months — a 32 year old who plans to live another 50 years could spend $300,000 or so before he's lowered smooth-faced into the grave.

There are plenty of more socially redeeming ways to spend that sum. You could donate it to advance research on truly threatening human afflictions, like cancer or AIDS. You could give it to people who don't have a place to live or enough to eat. You could pass it on to your children. If you're determined to blow it all on yourself, you can surely find more pleasurable activities than having your face perforated.

Everyone knows that Americans worship youth, and if collagen treatments really catch on we may become a nation of people who look like they've been prematurely embalmed. But I'm hoping that as the Baby Boom generation grows older it will accept the ravages of age gracefully, making bald heads and thick waistlines as fashionable as it once made long hair and bell-bottoms. Sometimes with age comes maturity.

Blown away by modern 'GWTW'

As movie lovers celebrate the 50th anniversary of the debut of Gone With the Wind, I was wondering what a modern version of the classic might be like.

GWTW, of course, was set in Atlanta during the Civil War. But what if Margaret Mitchell had written the novel that became the movie in the '80s instead of the '30s?

Perhaps she could have made the setting Atlanta during the war on drugs.

Rhett Butler is a crack dealer. Scarlett O'Hara is a hooker.

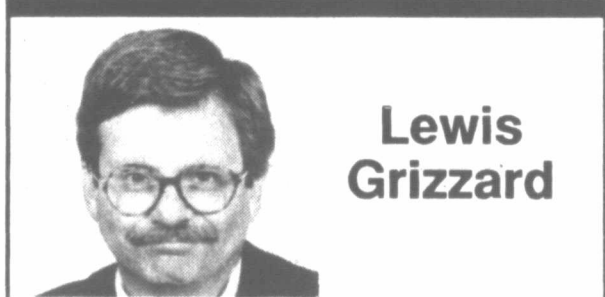

Rhett is sitting at a sleazo bar drinking tequila shooters. Scarlett is sitting at the other end of the bar in a pink leather miniskirt, paipping her nails and drinking cheap wine.

Rhett asks the bartender, "Who's the chick?" "Hooker named O'Hara," answers the bartender, Belle Watling, a large woman with tattoos. Rhett walks over to Scarlett.

"Out of my face," says Scarlett, between chomps on her gum. "I'm taking the rest of the night off."

Rhett sits down anyway. Drinks four more tequila shooters and throws up on Scarlett's leather miniskirt, just before passing out.

Scarlett goes through his pockets and finds a wad of Ben Franks, invests them wisely and opens a residential real estate firm.

Lewis Grizzard

Rhett comes to on the floor of the bar, sells some more crack, then goes into porno films and starts making millions.

One day, he decides he needs a new house. He looks in the telephone book, finds the number of a real estate firm and makes an appointment.

It's been many years, and he has no idea he's about to be shown a house by the ex-hooker, O'Hara. She doesn't know her new client is the guy she rolled in a sleazo bar.

"Haven't I seen this guy before?" Scarlett asks herself upon meeting Rhett in her office.

"Why am I suddenly sleepy and feel like throwing up?" Rhett asks himself.

Scarlett shows Rhett a house that includes 7bds, mdn kitn, fplac, wlk-in clsts and pool.

"It's a steal at $2.2 mil," says Scarlett, smelling a hefty fee.

"Sold," says Rhett. A few weeks later Rhett shows up at the closing in a large truck filled with hundred dollar bills to pay for the house.

Just then Scarlett recognizes him. "You're the guy who threw up on my leather miniskirt in the sleazo bar," she exclaims.

"And you're the hooker ..."

"Yes, yes," Scarlett continues. "I'm sorry I took your money but it got me off the streets and into that Mercedes parked outside. How can I ever repay you?"

Rhett says, "Marry me and star in my porno films."

Scarlett agrees, but when she turns 40 she's washed up, so Rhett kicks her out of the house.

"But wherever will I go?" asks Scarlett.

"Frankly, my dear," replies Rhett, "I don't give a (something appropriate for the '80s)," slams the door in her face and goes back to taping the torrid love scene involving 11 participants that is taking place in one of the 7bds of his house — and the story ends there.

I'm still not sure who would play Scarlett in the modern version of the Gone With the Wind movie, but I do know who I'd like to see play Belle Watling, the tattooed bartender, and Rhett.

Ben's demo-eco-politico-socio forecast

By BEN WATTENBERG

So it's 1990. But what's going to happen by the year 2000? Listen up; some aspects of the future may be mildly knowable.

There will be several top American romantic movie stars, of Asian parentage.

Despite continuing discussion about how weak the presidency is, the president of the United States, whoever he or she may be, will be very powerful — probably as powerful as George Bush was when he alone decided to invade the sovereign nation of Panama, while the Congress said yes boss, what a great idea.

A unified Germany will be the most populous country in Europe. But because of low fertility rates it will be losing population more rapidly than any country in Europe. What's the opposite of lebensraum, shinken-sraum?

Several presidents of the United States will have bragged about how they won the drug war.

With the disappearance of communist dictatorships, socialism — no longer linkable to tyranny — will again be toasted in trendy salons. It still won't work.

The United States will have a children's allowance, just like every other modern democracy.

Medicine will get better and better and, as scientists can measure more things, scarier and scarier.

The United States will grow by 18 million people during the decade, our slowest growth rate ever. But 18 million more people ain't chopped liver. They'll need some place to live, which will cushion a sagging new housing market. (We'll grow by yet another 14 million from 2000 to 2010.)

Japan will grow by 5 million people during the decade; it will have reached rough population stability, preparing for population loss in the century to come. Japan accordingly will be on the down slope of history, maybe Europe too, for the same reason.

The United States will have raised its legal immigration levels. It will be apparent that immigration is the most potent source of our growing economic and political muscle. Immigration will also be a source of creative turbulence in America.

Poverty in the United States will go down slowly in the 1990s, just as it did in the 1980s.

Watch out for the end of the decade! Sane people go haywire at the turn of century. When a millennium ends, sane people will be predicting the end of the world. It won't end. Even if it does, it's a safe prediction. Who'll know?

The population explosion will clearly be over. Third World fertility rates in the year 2000 will be at 3.1 children per woman and plummeting toward the replacement rate.

As democratic modernism sweeps the world, Islamic fundamentalism will rage in reaction. Terrorism will increase.

Nicaragua will be a democracy. There will probably be a major recession in the '90s. Something bad usually happens, and the other bad things, like plagues, are worse.

A likely candidate for the decade's dumbest argument will be that the U.S. government is paralyzed. Hey! It spends a trillion dollars a year!

Political scandals will proliferate in direct proportion to the continuing growth of public affairs journalism.

By the end of the decade, it will be quite apparent that Hispanic

Americans have become middle class, progressing in roughly the same fashion that Italians and Poles did earlier in the century.

Blacks will also make progress but perhaps more slowly. Some old-fashioned black leaders will say progress is slow because quotas, set-asides and reverse discrimination have been eroded by the courts. A new generation of black leaders will wisely tell their constituents to stop blaming everything on someone else and get on with it.

The next great economic superpower will be India.

America will continue to have most of the best universities in the world.

English will be the universal language.

America will still be, by far, the most important nation in the world.

Alas, there are some things we don't know.

We don't know which way China will go.

We don't know what will happen in the Soviet Union.

Sobering thought: The world has never had a civil war in a nation with nuclear weapons. Yet.

Soviets call up reservists to help restore order in Azerbaijan strife

By CAREY GOLDBERG
Associated Press Writer

Wednesday and 30 hostages held in one neighborhood were set free.

MOSCOW (AP) — Defense Minister Dmitri T. Yazov has ordered military units in several regions beefed up to wartime strength and reservists recalled to deal with the raging ethnic strife in the southern Caucasus, Soviet radio reported today.

Yazov called the Armenian-Azerbaijani warfare that has left 66 dead and more than 200 wounded "a great disaster." Most of the victims have been Armenians attacked by mobs in the Azerbaijani capital of Baku.

Terrorized Armenians were said to be still fleeing by the thousands.

Soviet troops initially sent in to try to end the blood-letting have become caught up in the fighting, their efforts to enforce a state of emergency hampered by defiant nationalists who were setting up blockades.

"In order to ensure order, we are compelled to bring up to wartime strength a certain proportion of the sub-units and units which are located in that area," Yazov told the radio, without specifying how many reserve soldiers had been called up or where.

Moscow radio said some young men who had recently completed compulsory military service were being called back to the barracks.

The Kremlin on Tuesday poured more than 11,000 additional troops into the troubled mountain region in a bid to quell the deadliest round of violence in the most protracted ethnic conflict facing President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

The soldiers were authorized Wednesday to fire on gunmen who attack them or people trying to steal weapons. But Yazov said their numbers were still insufficient to bring the situation under control.

He said he understood reservists would be unhappy about being called up to maintain order in another Soviet republic, but emphasized that "no one is setting them the task of killing, shooting, going onto some offensive. It is principally to protect public order."

The reservist call-up was needed in part because recent cuts under Gorbachev's plan to slash the nation's armed forces by 500,000 men have depleted the pool of units that can be moved to the Caucasus, Yazov said.

Also today, Gorbachev made his first public comments on the civil strife, noting that a centuries-old conflict was involved.

"The problems which have been accumulating for tens, no, for hundreds of years have erupted ...," he told a meeting in Moscow.

Radio Moscow, detailing the difficulties facing units sent to the Caucasus, said one transport plane arriving with troops had been immediately seized by Armenians fleeing the fighting who demanded to be flown to safety.

The radio said anti-Armenian attacks continue in Baku, though no new killings were reported since

The six-day round of violence exploded Saturday with bloody anti-Armenian riots in the Caspian Sea port, sparking battles by bands of heavily armed Armenians and Azerbaijanis in and near the disputed Nagomo-Karabakh district.

The fighting is the worst between mainly Moslem Azerbaijanis and mostly Christian Armenians since their decades-old feud over Nagomo-Karabakh erupted in violence two years ago. The enclave, with a population of 160,000, has been ruled by Azerbaijan since 1923 and the current troubles were sparked by its demand in February 1988 to be annexed by Armenia.

In Moscow, Interior Ministry spokesman Dmitri Seleznev said the death toll in the civil warfare was now up to 66 and that 220 people had been wounded.

He said 4,658 more Armenians had been evacuated from Baku since Wednesday, adding to more than 7,000 who fled earlier in the week.

There were 45 "pogroms," or ethnically motivated attacks, in the oil-producing center during the same period, and 26 people were detained, said Seleznev, speaking in a telephone interview.

He said pickets continued at two military airfields in Azerbaijan and that attempts were made in Baku to block streets to obstruct the progress of troops trying to restore order in the city of 1.7 million.

In Armenia, people continued attacks on armories to steal firearms, Seleznev said. Since Wednesday, 198 more weapons were seized including four armored cars and one World War II vintage T-34 tank, which he said was towed away although it is not in working order.

Jury convicts Ike Turner

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A jury convicted soul singer Ike Turner of two drug misdemeanors but deadlocked on two felony cocaine charges, forcing a mistrial on those counts, a prosecutor said.

Turner, the ex-husband of Grammy Award winner Tina Turner, was convicted Tuesday of driving under the influence of cocaine and being under the influence of cocaine, Deputy District Attorney Ralph Mayer said.

The Superior Court jury deadlocked 8-4 in favor of acquittal on charges of transportation of cocaine and possession of cocaine for sale, Mayer said Wednesday. The panel also acquitted the 58-year-old of being an ex-convict in possession of a gun, a felony count, Mayer said.

The charges stem from an Aug. 19, 1987, arrest by sheriff's deputies who stopped Turner after the car he was in was seen traveling erratically on West Hollywood streets. Deputies found cocaine in the car.

Sentencing for Turner, who is free on bail, was scheduled for Jan. 30. Turner faces up to six years in prison.

Kemp cancels HUD mortgage insurance

By JOHN KING
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing Secretary Jack Kemp is killing a mortgage insurance program that was part of the Reagan administration's effort to trim the bureaucracy but is now blamed for costing taxpayers nearly $1 billion.

Kemp said Wednesday the Department of Housing and Urban Development will phase out the co-insurance program and all private lenders will have to get HUD approval before making new loans in the meantime.

Kemp, in a statement, said another HUD insurance program will provide an alternative financing option. He said he would restructure it by year's end to allow private lenders to process and service those loans while making sure only HUD can approve the necessary mortgage insurance.

The decision to kill the co-insurance program, among the programs investigated during last year's allegations of favoritism and mismanagement at HUD in the 1980s, came four months after HUD officials said it would be reformed and revived.

Democrats in Congress have warned Kemp not to use agency problems as excuses to drop programs, but a congressional aide said he expected no battle over killing co-insurance.

"It was a seriously flawed program," said Donald Campbell, staff director of the Senate Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs subcommittee on housing. Democrats, however, likely would question whether HUD has enough qualified staffers to oversee the program Kemp promoted as an alternative, Campbell said.

The co-insurance program, created in 1983, allowed private lenders to issue mortgages for multifamily housing developments and commit HUD to insuring roughly 80 percent of the loans. Audits by HUD's inspector general have criticized co-insurance lenders for approving bloated mortgages.

Those high mortgages led to excessive rents, which in turn were blamed for high vacancy rates that led to defaults — leaving HUD holding most of the bill.

The General Accounting Office estimates that defaults and other related HUD program losses have cost taxpayers at least $960 million.

The most notorious case — which Kemp cited in announcing the decision — was the HUD-backed loan for Colonial House apartments in Houston.

The development was co-insured for $47.2 million. HUD was forced to take over Colonial House after default and recovered just $8.9 million when it auctioned the property.

In his statement Wednesday, Kemp said extensive reviews by HUD staff and outside auditors convinced him to kill the program.

"Our review of co-insurance, and its mounting losses, has shown that it cannot be managed or overseen in a way that will serve the interests of the public at large or the needs of families for affordable housing," Kemp said.

Columbia crew preparing for Friday landing

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Columbia's astronauts today tested their flight systems for Friday's homecoming after taking control of their ship when a bad navigation signal from the ground sent it into a slow spin.

Commander Dan Brandenstein, roused from sleep, manually overrode the shuttle's navigation system and stabilized the craft until Mission Control transmitted correct guidance signals.

There was no danger to the five astronauts, but "we had a little excitement tonight," said flight director Bob Castle.

The incident happened Wednesday night, about 2 1/2 hours before their scheduled wakeup. A false fire alarm also got them out of their beds Wednesday.

A third wakeup, at the planned time, was music to their ears: a rendition of Washington and Lee University's fight song. One of the astronauts, David Low, is a graduate of the school.

"Good morning, Columbia, after what must have been a restful, or restless, night," the control center radioed. President Bush planned to radio them later in the day.

Brandenstein and pilot Jim Wetherbee successfully tested Columbia's flight control systems to make sure they were in good shape for returning home. During the 10-day mission the astronauts have deployed a Navy communications satellite and retrieved an 11-ton science laboratory that had orbited for six years.

The weather at Edwards was bad early today, with rain and snow flurries. But NASA said the storm would leave the region later in the day, and conditions were expected to be good Friday.

The landing is scheduled at 2:55 a.m. PST (4:55 a.m. CST) at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

Recent heavy rains have closed the public viewing area, and the space agency discouraged citizens from driving to the base to watch the touchdown.

While Brandenstein and Wetherbee checked the shuttle's systems, mission specialists Bonnie Dunbar, Marsha Ivins and Low completed a series of medical and science experiments and began stowing them away.

Castle said Columbia began its slow spin after an errant navigation signal from the ground caused six small steering jets in the shuttle's nose to fire on and off, the longest for two minutes.

That sent the shuttle into an unwanted spin of about 3 degrees a second, or about one rotation every two minutes, Castle said.

He said the navigation data had suffered radio interference during the transmission, but that an operator on the ground failed to catch it.

Castle said that if nothing had been done, Columbia would have continued to rotate at that rate, but there would be no threat to the astronauts.

"I'm concerned about what happened because we have to find out what happened and correct it," Castle said. "But I'm not real concerned. It was an error on the ground. Columbia did exactly what Columbia should have done."

NASA spokesman Jack Kroehnke said the astronauts would not have felt the spin imparted by the six thrusters, part of a system of 44 steering jets on the shuttle.

"If we had not awakened the crew, they'd eventually have awakened themselves, I'm sure, and looked out to see the Earth view changing in the windows," Kroehnke said.

Senior mentors share lifetime of experience

By NANCY BENAC
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lillian Goldberg spent 15 years as a teacher and administrator in New York City schools, but developed her deepest relationships with students after she retired.

"For the first time in my life, I've been able to work with them on a one-on-one basis and to help them follow their interests," Mrs. Goldberg, 70, said of her work with youngsters in Florida. "It opens up vistas of knowledge for me and I see the blossoming of the children."

In Salem, Mass., 70-year-old James Brennan's work helping young toughs get jobs and stay out of trouble keeps him going in his own battle against cancer.

"Undoubtedly this program has something to do with my mental and physical health. I would hate to think that when one becomes a certain age they're disposable. That thought always plagued me," Brennan said.

"The whole idea of linking youth and elders is really gaining a lot of momentum," said Nancy Henkin, director of the Center for Intergenerational Learning at Temple University's Institute on Aging. "People are finally realizing that these are two groups that should get together."

One of the latest such ideas is mentoring, in which older Americans are paired with youngsters in one-on-one relationships.

With the elderly making up the fastest-growing segment of society and the number of at-risk youth at 12 million and growing, intergenerational match-ups are "something whose time has come," Henkin said.

Mentoring is distinguished from other intergenerational programs by the development of deeper relationships between adults made wise by a lifetime of experience and youngsters who need unconditional love, encouragement and strong role models. Children who succeed against long odds often are those who have been able to develop meaningful relationships with adults, Henkin said.

Temple this month launched a $3 million Linking Lifetimes program, financed by five foundations, that will help nine communities set up mentoring projects pairing older people with young offenders and troubled youth. The mentors, paid a small stipend, will spend at least two hours a week helping their partners.

In Springfield, Mass., for example, retirees will help offenders aged 14-17 finish school and steer clear of drugs and crime. The mentors are in a unique position to help because they're neither parents nor professionals, said John Tansey, director of the project there. "These elders don't have to prove anything to the kids. They're there just for these kids and to listen."

In Memphis, Tenn., Linking Lifetimes will pair low-income older women with pregnant seventh- and eighth-graders. Other programs are being launched in Los Angeles; Miami; St. Petersburg, Fla.; Birmingham and Montgomery, Ala.; Hartford, Conn.; and Syracuse, N.Y.

While intergenerational mentoring programs are on the increase, projects matching seniors with troubled youth are rarer, said Sandra Sweeney, of the American Association of Retired Persons. "For the right kind of person it's a terrific experience, but there are more barriers to working with at-risk youth."

"They may not share some of the same backgrounds or know how to approach kids who may have been in trouble."

One success story is the Work Connection, based in Saugus, Mass., in which retirees, paid a weekly salary based on caseload, help young offenders find and hold jobs as an alternative to jail. Over the past four years, more than 350 people have "graduated" from the program.

"It's amazing how the relationship evolves and develops," said director Kelly Quinlan. "It never really stops because our participants still keep in touch with their mentors. They've made a permanent friend."

In Michigan, Ann Arbor's TLC program — Teaching-Learning Communities — arranges for senior mentors to meet at school each week with junior high school students who are in danger of dropping out or having other problems.

"Youngsters tell their mentors, 'just the fact that you're here in this room gives me courage,'" said Carol Tice, who directs the program. Elders, meanwhile, "know that their life has made a difference."

In Florida, the Senior Mentors for Creative Students program started in Broward County in 1982 and has spread to 22 districts.

New service opens television to blind

By TED BRIDIS
Associated Press Writer

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — For millions of visually impaired Americans, televisions are little more than over-sized radios — worse, really, because of Hollywood's heavy reliance on visual images to propel plots.

"I'm about as totally blind as you can get," says Dale Lamar, vice president of a support group for the blind in Oklahoma. "Most shows I can keep up with fairly well. But when you get into an action show with lots of car chases and shootings, you end up missing half the show."

But imagine a TV show where narrative is sprinkled between the dialogue, describing the stealthy movements of a murderer, the outcome of a chase. That's the vision of Jim Stovall, president of Narrative Television Network.

"I started losing my sight when I was 17," Stovall said. "I'm 31 now and totally blind. About a year and a half ago, I was watching an old Bogart film and somebody shot somebody else and I was lost. ... I thought with a little bit of narration, this could work. It just kind of exploded on us."

The network's programs have been shown at 11 a.m. and 11 p.m. EST every Sunday since Aug. 20. They can be seen on the Nostalgia Channel, available in about 7 million homes, and on independent stations in 500 cable markets. The network uses Nostalgia's production facilities in Dallas.

Nostalgia Network Inc., which sees its prime market as older viewers, is a natural partner for NTN. Demographers say 60 percent of the 11.4 million visually impaired Americans are older than 45.

"We feel that narrative television has enhanced our value as a cable channel," said Joe Schramm, Nostalgia marketing director. "The cable operator has a commitment to the community to provide a service, and this certainly is a service."

There are few advertisers, in part because Nostalgia broadcasts movies uninterrupted. "We are just now approaching some national advertisers," said Stovall. "Adapting commercials isn't as big a problem as people would think. A lot of radio commercials are just television commercials without the picture."

"The way we narrate these programs," he said, "is to try and determine what is important and present that to you as unobtrusively as possible without interjecting our opinion."

In the premier narrated episode of "Matlock," featuring Andy Griffith as an Atlanta lawyer, a man stalks a young woman and stabs her to death. The first dialogue, though, comes minutes into the plot — after the stabbing and just before the woman's boyfriend is arrested in her death.

The narration fills the void: "The silver-haired man pulls a long knife from his holder," the narrator says. "His face is drenched with sweat. ... As the young man showers, the silver-haired man enters the bedroom holding the knife."

"The young woman stirs awake, sees him and begins to scream. He puts his hand over her mouth. He stabs her."

Lamar, who rented the episode on videotape, said that until the narrated version, the show was difficult to follow. "There's nothing but music for the first three minutes or so. If it wouldn't have had the narration, I would've missed the fact that Dick Van Dyke was the killer."

While the network is a boon to the blind, supporters point to another group sure to benefit, Schramm said. "It's also for the visually impaired who have a spouse or family members or loved ones whose lives have been taxed or tied to the visually impaired because they had to interpret these shows."

The Narrative Television Network is a spin-off of Narrative Video Network, a 1988 innovation that coupled narration with popular TV series on videotape.

"We did 'Matlock,' 'Big Valley,' 'Andy Griffith,' 'Gomer Pyle,'" Stovall said. "The response was so huge, we couldn't get enough tapes out or do enough to keep everybody happy."

Texas roads become safer

AUSTIN (AP) — Traffic fatalities have fallen during the past 10 years thanks to new safety laws, stricter enforcement and heightened public awareness, the Texas Department of Public Safety reports.

The 1988 traffic toll of 3,395 fatalities represented a 28 percent decrease from the decade's most dangerous year — 1981 — when 4,701 people died on Texas roadways, said DPS spokesman David Wells.

Wells said the gradual decline in deaths came even as the state's roadways handled an ever-rising number of motorists.

And in 1989, for the first time in more than 12 years, a day went by without a single recorded traffic fatality in the state.

The date — June 13 — marked the first "deathless day" on the state's roads since Jan. 5, 1977.

The passage of safety and alcohol laws in the 1980s, combined with strong support from many independent groups, "has placed us well on track in combating automobile-related deaths for the near future," DPS spokesman Mike Cox told The Dallas Morning News.

Wells said the final count for 1989 won't be available until early March, but preliminary figures for the first 10 months of the year were similar to the same period in 1988.

A law passed by the state Legislature in 1985 that requires automobile drivers and front-seat passengers to wear seatbelts played a large role in decreasing the number of deaths in the late '80s, Wells said.

The law went into effect Sept. 1, 1985. That year, the number of deaths dropped by 6 percent from the 1984 total, Wells said.

"The compliance with the seat belt law has been good, but not because the public is afraid of getting tickets," said former Texas Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belton, the chief House sponsor of the seat-belt bill.

"Seatbelts work because they save lives ... People soon knew someone who survived an accident only because that person was wearing a seat belt," he said.

Cox said the crackdown on drunken driving has played a significant role in reducing traffic deaths. Also important were awareness groups and dial-a-ride services, he said.

Summertime and holidays are generally the most dangerous times to be on the road, Wells said.

Some U.S. veterinarians needle animals back to health

By BILL BASKERVILL
Associated Press Writer

MIDDLEBURG, Va. (AP) — The patient quivered as William McCormick applied pressure to pinpoint the source of back pain. Then he inserted a needle. No problem this time, though sometimes the patients try to bite — or kick.

McCormick, one of about 125 U.S. veterinarians certified to practice acupuncture, says the therapy used by the Chinese on humans and animals for 3,500 years is an effective alternative to Western medicine. "The potential is vast. I feel each time I do it I'm touching on new ground."

Acupuncture, whether in humans or animals, consists of stimulating precise points on the surface of the body. Traditionally, the stimulus is insertion of extremely fine needles; more recently, ultrasound and lasers also are used.

In traditional Chinese thought, each human or animal is born with a fixed amount of energy,

Shootings may lead to firing of four officers

HOUSTON (AP) — Four police officers involved in two separate shooting incidents that resulted in two deaths last fall are expected to be fired, an attorney representing three of them said.

The four met separately with Police Chief Lee Brown in his office Tuesday afternoon.

Attorney Richard Cobb, who is representing the three officers involved in the Oct. 31 freeway shooting death of Ida Lee Delaney, said all of them will be dismissed.

"I think it's going to be a negative decision," Cobb said Tuesday. "I think it's because the public and political atmosphere surrounding this whole incident has made it such."

Ms. Delaney, 50, was fatally wounded by gunshots to the stomach and arm by officer Alex Gonzales after she shot him in the chest. Just before the shooting, the off-duty officer and two others had chased Ms. Delaney down two Houston freeways after she reportedly cut Gonzales' car off in traffic.

Gonzales, 25, has been charged with murder in the case.

A grand jury took no action in Gonzales' two companions, off-duty Officers Robert C. Gonzales, 28, no relation, and Alexander Romero, 25.

Cobb maintains his clients are innocent because Ms. Delaney fired first.

A grand jury is scheduled to hear testimony in the Nov. 15 shooting death of security guard Byron Gillum. Gillum was shot four times in the back and once each in the arm and stomach after Officer Scott Tschirhart stopped his car near the University of Houston campus.

After his meeting with Brown, Tschirhart told Sgt. J.C. Mosier, a department public information officer, that he had been fired.

"We feel that Officer Tschirhart was justified in the shooting," said Mark Clark, president of the Houston Police Officer's Association. "I believe that the grand jury will find that out when it's presented to them."

called "chi." Energy imbalance, from external or internal causes, is thought to be the underlying reason for disease. By treating certain reflex points, the acupuncturist helps the body balance its own vital energies.

Laboratory studies have found that this balancing occurs primarily through the nervous system, although physiological mechanisms such as hormones also are involved, the International Veterinary Acupuncture Society says. Balancing can adjust blood flow, nerve and muscle tone, hormone levels or organ function.

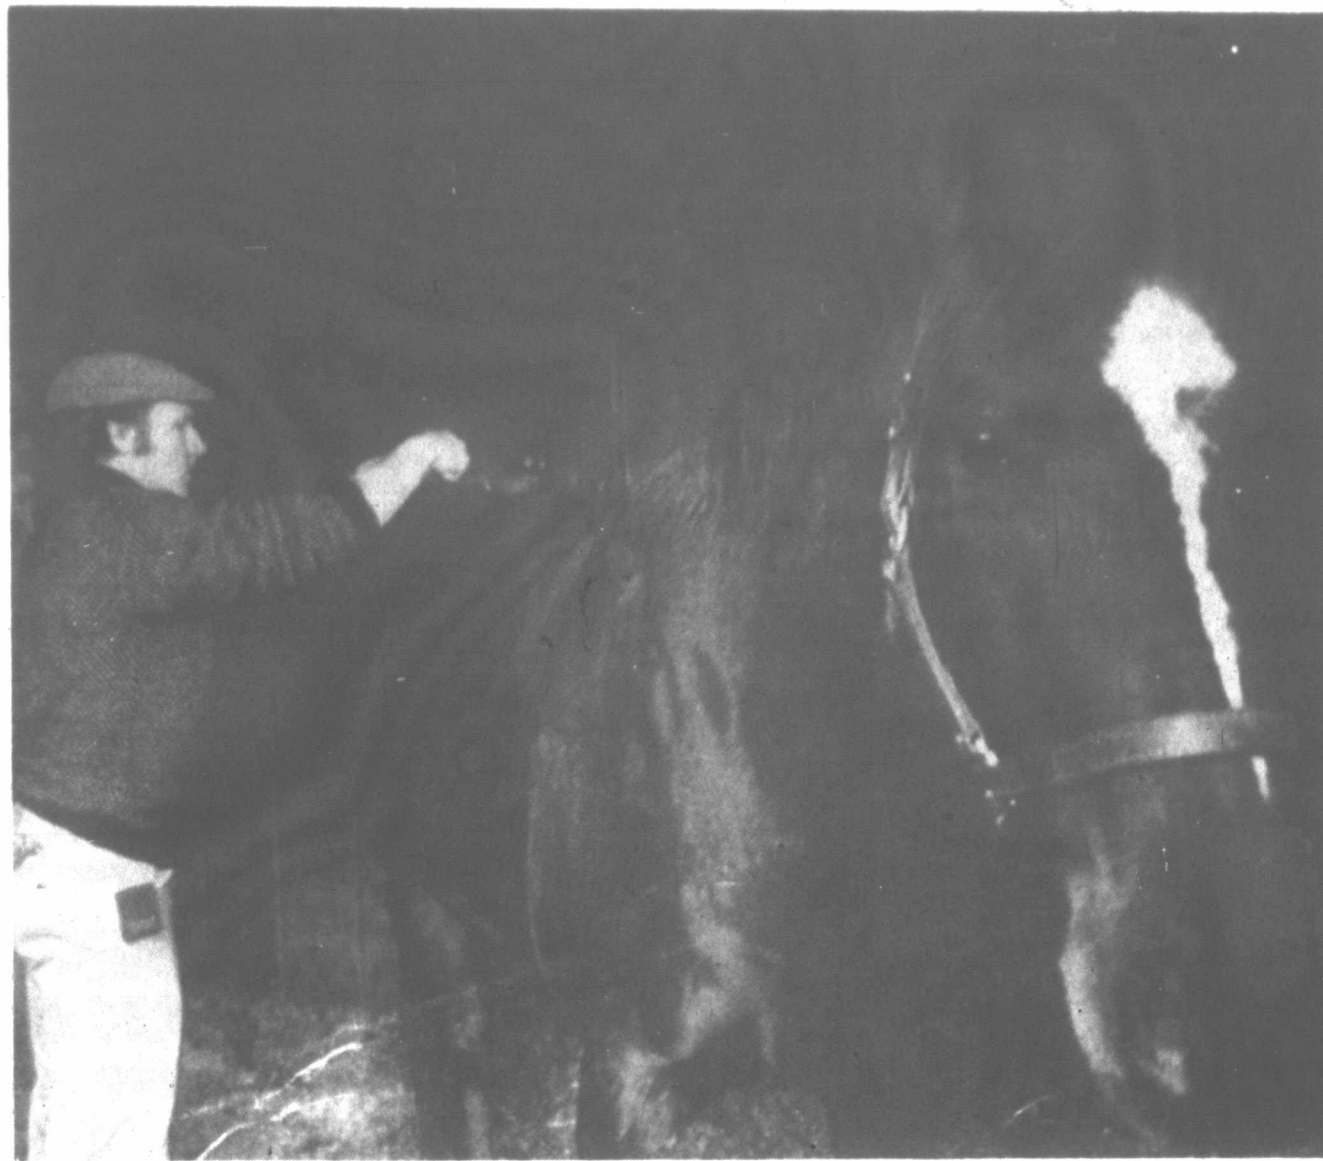

Dr. Meredith L. Snader of Chester Springs, Pa., executive secretary of the society, uses acupuncture exclusively in her practice.

"People are looking to alternative methods of treatment rather than going to drugs," Ms. Snader said. "The public is demanding that vets change, instead of pumping animals full of medication."

The American Veterinary Medical Association endorsed acupuncture in 1988 as valid treatment, but it hasn't been totally accepted by veterinarians.

"Some think it is pretty strange and others accept it quite readily," said McCormick. Ms. Snader said her colleagues were skeptical when she started using acupuncture eight years ago. "It didn't bother me. I said, 'Just give me a chance.' Now most of them are very willing. Now they refer clients to me."

Acupuncture makes up a major part of McCormick's practice in Virginia's horse country, where many owners and trainers insist on it. "My clients have come to expect expertise from me on that — mostly because the horses have done well," he said. "At its best, it's effective 80 percent of the time."

Kitty Beveridge, who trains show horses at her Wind in the Willows farm near Middleburg, swears by the technique. As McCormick applied needles to a horse, she described the "dramatic turnaround" of a 3-year-old thoroughbred treated for pain in its back and legs. "He became much more relaxed through work and didn't try to hurry."

While needles are the preferred implement, portable, battery-operated lasers sometimes are used on sensitive reflex points because they are less intrusive than needles. Ultrasound machines provide deep heat and are useful for such diseases as arthritis.

In addition to chronic pain, acupuncture is used to treat a wide variety of animal ailments, including reproductive, urinary tract and abdominal problems, though McCormick said it's not effective for such problems as broken limbs or acute bacterial infections that require antibiotics.

He recalled the case of an expensive race horse with an abdominal problem. The owner spent $5,000 for surgery and $5,000 for treatment of colitis, but the horse kept having pain. When he was called in he performed a $150 acupuncture treatment, and the animal didn't have the problem again.

Ms. Snader said acupuncture usually produces a positive response within minutes. "Usually at the end of my treatment I see a reasonable improvement," she said. "Over the next several days I see changes in gait."

Although animal acupuncture was brought to the United States in the early 1970s when President Richard M. Nixon re-established ties with China, it isn't taught in veterinary schools, said Dr. Kent Roberts, an associate professor at the Virginia-Maryland College of Veterinary Medicine.

To receive certification, veterinarians must take a 120-hour course offered by the acupuncture society.

Acceptance would become more widespread if it was included in veterinary education, Roberts said, but he sees little chance of that happening because "we're pretty well pushed to get everything into a 4-year curriculum."

Still, he believes acupuncture is a legitimate therapy. "It certainly has stood the test of time. It must have some validity."

Appeals court rejects state's motion for rehearing in Brandley case

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday denied the state's motion for a rehearing in the case of death row inmate Clarence Brandley.

Brandley, 38, was sentenced to die for the 1980 rape-strangulation of a 16-year-old Bellville girl. The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals overturned the conviction Dec. 13, saying Brandley's trial was tinged by racism and "lacked the rudiments of fairness."

Montgomery County District Attorney Peter Speers had asked the appeals court to reconsider its Dec. 13 decision.

The court, without comment, denied Speers' motion Wednesday.

Brandley said from Huntsville Wednesday he is cautiously optimistic about his chances for release.

"This is good news, but still, I'm very cautious," Brandley said. "I was really disappointed when I thought I was going to go home for the holidays and then he (Speers) stayed everything. All I can do now is sit and wait and hope something will come down before the weekend."

Brandley's attorney, Mike DeGeurin, said the ruling came as no surprise, but he was pleased to see the appellate court rule so quickly on the motion.

He said he would file for bail to be set in the case, but it would be at least 15 days before his client could be freed from Texas prison system's Death Row because of the state's right to appeal.

"Technically, it can't be done for 15 days," DeGeurin said. "But the mechanisms to get the bond set can be begun now and he can be out in 15 days."

DeGeurin said the prosecutor's attempts to keep Brandley behind bars have amounted to a "vicious personal attack."

"Hopefully, he won't try to hold me up any longer and I will be able to make bond - hopefully," Brandley said. "It still remains to be seen."

Speers has said he believes Brandley is guilty and that he would pursue the case through every legal avenue.

Meanwhile, the Coalition to Free Clarence Brandley said it is not celebrating victory yet.

DeJoy Parker said he believed prosecutors still will pursue the case against Brandley. But he said the group would continue to push for a federal investigation of discrimination in the case of Brandley and others in Montgomery County.

"Clarence is a victim," Parker said. "But there are many other victims. Because what happens to him, is just a glaring example - a glaring symbol - of what has happened to many people over the past years."

Brandley, who is black, was a janitor at Conroe High School, where Cheryl Dee Ferguson, who was white, was killed in 1980 as she attended a volleyball tournament. She was raped and strangled.

His first trial ended in a hung jury. He was convicted of capital murder in a second trial by an all-white jury.

In 1987, retired State District Judge Perry Pickett recommended Brandley get a new trial because the previous two had been tainted with racism.

Brandley's attorneys have offered evidence that police and Montgomery County prosecutors had set out to prove that Brandley, the only black janitor at the school, was guilty rather than seeking the real killer.

Prosecutors, who have maintained that Brandley is guilty, have denied allegations that he was the subject of racial discrimination.

Hightower joins in announcing plan to market rare mushrooms in Japan

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Used for centuries in Asia to treat hypertension, ulcers and allergies, reishi mushrooms are making their debut in Texas as a nursery here is growing the rare mushrooms for export to Japan.

"It's the kind of thing that we've got to have in Texas agriculture in the long run," Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said in announcing the venture earlier this week.

Once import paperwork is complete, Lone Star Growers of San Antonio will ship tablets made from the mushrooms to Japan for sale to Uni-World Corp. of Tokyo, Hightower said.

Lone Star Nursery produced 600 pounds of the exotic mushrooms last year and estimates it will produce at least 1,000 to 1,500 pounds this year and 20,000 to 30,000 pounds by 1991.

The mushrooms are made into tablets, and they're not cheap. A bottle of 100 tablets sells for about $150 to $200 in Japan, Hightower said.

Reishi tablets also are sold at Austin-based Whole Foods Market for about $20, he added.

Known scientifically as Ganoderma lucidum, reishi mushrooms have been used in Japan and China to treat hypertension, arteriosclerosis, diabetes, ulcers and allergies.

Researchers at the University of Texas Health Science Center in San Antonio are studying the use of reishi to evaluate its possible success in reducing inflammation, lowering cholesterol and boosting the immune system, officials said.

"What this little mushroom does is it pretty much cures what ails you," said Hightower, standing next to a table full of curly brownish-orange reishi mushrooms.

Lone Star president Joe Bradberry, Hightower and others at the Tuesday news conference did not discuss specifics of which ailments reishi mushrooms might help, but Bradberry said the substance is seen as a preventive rather than a curative product.

"We're not making any medical claims," Bradberry said. "This is a health food."

Hightower, who sipped reishi tea during the announcement, joked that he might be in need of the mushrooms. "In fact, Joe, if you can take care of cedar fever, I'll take a gross of these things right now," he said to Bradberry.

Only five other American companies produce reishi mushrooms, which Bradberry said was the most difficult substance his nursery has attempted to grow.

Noboru Kayagaki, one of Japan's largest commercial producers of reishi, said nurseries in Korea, China, France and elsewhere have tried to grow reishi without success, but the Lone Star venture appears successful.

Hightower says the reishi venture will help put Texas at the forefront of the herbal product market with the potential to perk up the state's economy.

Don't get me wrong. I think taking care of your eyesight is just as important as the next guy. In fact, that's why I went to Dr.'s Simmons & Simmons in the first place . . . to see about disposable contact lenses.

I know a lot of stores have them. But I figure for something as important as my eyes, I needed an eye-care specialist to make sure I get the best fit possible. And besides, I got a thorough examination, the right type of lens for me, a good fit and check-ups to make sure I'm getting the best wear possible.

Now that I've got my disposable contacts from Drs. Simmons & Simmons, I've got more interesting things to do with my time than worrying about my eyes . . . see what I mean?

Where sex is concerned less is more for some

DEAR ABBY: Why do you perpetuate the idea that frequent sex is "normal"? You seem to believe that any other arrangement is so bizarre that people ought to see doctors or lawyers for a cure or a divorce.

Millions of couples have infrequent sex — or none at all — and they are happy. For you to suggest that sex should be at the top of the list with air and water is a peculiar blind spot of yours.

A streetwise punk uses this "sex-is-normal" argument to convince his virginal girlfriend to give in by implying that she is weird if she doesn't. Let people off the hook, Abby. Tell them that sexual frequency is a private arrangement that each couple must decide for themselves. Who cares if it's once a decade, or never again, if they're content with their lives?

Wiser people stay married — sex or no sex. Apparently that's news to you, as you advised "Practically Untouched in Tulsa" that if her husband didn't see a doctor, she should see a lawyer.

JAN IN BOULDER, COLO.
 DEAR JAN: Sex is a normal part of marriage, and it's true that some people require more sex than others. But "Practically Untouched" complained that her husband of two years had made love to her five times in the last six months. (She had gift-wrapped herself in Saran Wrap and greeted him at the door with a martini, and he had said, "Hi. What's for supper?")

This couple obviously is not operating on the same frequency, hence my suggestion that if they couldn't "fix" this marriage by seeing a doctor, they should see a lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: I bought your cookbooklet last year, and I just love it! Your recipe for chocolate cake is superb. I must have made a dozen chocolate cakes since I got it. Also, the sugar cookies are wonderful.

I thought my chicken soup was good, but your mother's recipe is better. Are you going to publish another cookbooklet? I certainly hope so, as I would enjoy having more of your recipes.

MRS. ELEANOR ZAGORSKI, ST. FRANCIS, WIS.

DEAR ELEANOR: I have had many letters from women (and a few men) asking me when I am going to publish a Dear Abby's

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Cookbooklet II. Your letter gave me the push I needed. I am going to work on it, as of now.

Please be patient. Every receipt must be tested, and I want this one to be as good as my first — if not better.

DEAR ABBY: My best friend is getting married, but she's not having a wedding. Some of her girlfriends want to give her a bridal shower, but she says it's not appropriate. Is this true?

HER BEST FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Not necessarily. If her friends want to honor her with a luncheon or dinner and shower her with gifts in anticipation of her upcoming wedding, go right ahead and do it. I think it's a lovely idea.

DEAR ABBY: I have the perfect solution for all those people out there who are always complaining about not receiving thank-you notes. Simply do not give a gift out of obligation — try giving it out of love. Then notice that the person you give this gift to will give you a very sincere "thank you" (unless the person has no manners, in which case he or she didn't deserve the gift in the first place).

I do not mean to get a thank-you note? I give gifts because I care about the person I am giving it to. If giving because you care isn't the reason you give, then go out and buy something for the person you love the most — yourself. And don't forget to send yourself a thank-you note.

A TRUE GIVER IN ALABAMA

DEAR TRUE GIVER: People "give" for a variety of reasons. Some people give a gift to reciprocate for a gift they were given. Most people give a gift because they sincerely want to express their affection or friendship with a material token. Then there are those who give gifts spontaneously for no rhyme, reason or occasion — they just happen to see something they think someone they know will appreciate. I've known people like all of the above. In fact, I am one of them. But I have never met anyone who gave a gift because he or she wanted a thank-you note.

DEAR ABBY: A while back a reader signed "Cat Lover in Maine" asked for some tips on traveling cross-country in a vehicle with her cats. All she needs are some catnip, a large box with air holes cut into it, some pillows, toys for the cats and a familiar cat blanket. Add the catnip to the toys. It will put them in a state of euphoria, and they will travel well.

Tax time made less taxing

By LARRY BLASKO

Associated Press Writer

Freddie Kreuger may prowl the nightmares of a few kids on Elm Street, but he's got nothing on Freddie Goldberg, who brings nightmares to millions of grownups.

Commissioner of Internal Revenue Fred T. Goldberg Jr.'s tax forms 1040 and Schedule A will take 4 hours, 11 minutes to complete, the IRS says, but you can trim that by using TurboTax Personal 1040, a tax-preparation package from ChipSoft. It costs $75 list, which sounds stiff until you try the package.

TurboTax is menu-driven, intuitive and thorough. It's difficult to make a mistake — the software beeps you if you try. Help screens are plentiful, and there's a pop-up calculator for adding up all those records.

Entering tax information is simple. Start with a worksheet that asks your name and tax filing status and the usual information about dependents and exemptions, then go to the W-2 income worksheet for wages, salaries, tips, etc.

When you call up the Form 1040, information you entered in the worksheets has already been transferred and all the calculations made. For each additional form or worksheet you complete or change, the software will quickly change all the related math on the base form.

In addition, there's a "Tax Trivia" game to cheer you up when you see how much of your money is heading to Washington.

The on-screen display of worksheets and forms looks very much like those of the IRS, and the software supports a wide variety of dot-matrix and laser printers. If your printer has graphics capability, you can print an IRS-acceptable form for filing your taxes.

A separate state-tax package that integrates with the federal form is available at $40 per state. Since tax laws change every year, updates are priced at half the original cost for the federal package and $25 for the state forms.

The software comes bundled with a paperback book, "The Price Waterhouse Personal Tax Adviser," a clearly written guide through Taxland published by Pocket Books.

A minimum system for TurboTax is an IBM PC or compatible with at least 384,000 characters of memory and two disk drives or a single floppy drive and a hard disk. The package is available at software stores or direct from the manufacturer: ChipSoft Inc. Customer Sales, 5045 Shoreham Place, San Diego, CA 92122-3954. Phone 619-453-8722.

While TurboTax will make the math and data entry easy, it won't assemble records for you. A lot of personal financial or checkbook software is sold on the premise that it will make tax time easier by generating reports on expenses, income, charitable deductions and the like. That's true only if you are faithful about entering the data every time. For most of us, balancing the checkbook with a $5 calculator and then buying a tax preparation program makes better sense.

No. 5 ranking earns Harvesters respect

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Editor

After being voted the No. 6 team in the state last week by The Associated Press, the Harvesters climbed a step higher this week, checking in at No. 5 on the heels of last Friday's 59-53 victory over Levelland.

Pampa cracked the Top 5 in only the second week of balloting, which was released on Monday. The rankings list the Harvesters at 17-4 on the season, although Pampa has since improved to 18-4 with a 76-43 rout of Borger on Tuesday.

That victory boosted the Harvesters to 8-0 in District 1-4A, two games ahead of Lubbock Estacado and Levelland, which are tied for second place with 6-2 records.

Pampa's success has caused a new-found sense of respect around the league. Some rival coaches are already talking as though the district crown is a foregone conclusion.

"Pampa is real strong and they're playing good right now," said first-year Frenship coach Grady Newton. "They should win the district — there's no mystery about that."

Newton isn't the only one betting the mortgage on the Harvesters. Even Lubbock Estacado coach J.J. Wood agrees, and his team is tied for the runner-up spot.

"Pampa's definitely the class in our district, and basically the rest of us are just playing for second place," said Wood, whose Matadors host the Harvesters in a district tilt Friday night. "You always like to play the best team in the district, and Pampa by far is the best team."

Harvester coach Robert Hale accepts the praise, albeit with a grain of salt. Pampa, as he well knows, has earned the respect it is now getting, but the middle of January is hardly the time to rest on one's laurels.

"Call me back in a month," he said, laughing.

"Really, I'm flattered, but everybody's patting everybody on the back, and what we've got to do is push our sleeves up and dig a little deeper. We can't quit shoveling and we know that. If we think anything else, we're kidding ourselves."

"At the same time, we want to build on our momentum and continue to play as hard as we can play. We want to play a little bit harder Friday night than we did Tuesday night. That's our goal. We want to get a little bit better every game."

The Harvesters open the second half of the District 1-4A season when they visit Lubbock Estacado Friday night at 8. Pampa will be facing a team they defeated, 72-52, at McNeely Fieldhouse on Dec. 15.

A fourth-quarter rally helped the Harvesters get a victory in the first meeting. Pampa led by one, 33-32, at the end of three quarters, then exploded for 29 additional points in the final eight minutes.

Mark Wood paced Pampa in that game with a 26-point performance, including 10 points in the fourth frame. Randy Nichols and Jeff Young, both sophomores, also scored in double figures to aid the Harvesters' victory.

Nichols, who finished with 14 points, posted four in the last minute and a half, while Young contributed 10 points on the night.

Estacado is led by Andre Brooks, Michael Irvin — both averaging over 10 points per game — and Ricky Smith.

team-high 13 points against Pampa in December, while Smith, a 6-5 senior, added 12. Irvin, the smallest of the three at 6-4, managed nine points.

"We've got to work and make sure we don't let Brooks and Smith out-position us," Hale said. "We've got to make sure we don't let Irvin drive to the basket. Those are key things for us."

"We've got to go to Lubbock and play with high intensity but a relaxed feeling."

Broncos could use Collier's talents now

By JOHN MOSSMAN
AP Sports Writer

DENVER — The good news is that the Denver Broncos haven't lost to the San Francisco 49ers since 1973, a streak of four victories that includes three over Joe Montana in the '80s.

The bad news is that the defensive mastermind who frustrated Montana and the 49ers in those games is no longer employed by the Broncos.

Ironically, the cerebral, finesse-oriented defense used so effectively against the 49ers by former Denver defensive coordinator Joe Collier began rupturing against most other opponents in 1988. That breakdown forced the Broncos to switch to a simpler, bigger, more physical and more aggressive defense under Wade Phillips this season.

Just when the Broncos seemingly could benefit from Collier's dominance of the 49ers, they'll have to depend on Phillips' more traditional defense in the Super Bowl Jan. 28 at New Orleans.

The 49ers pose a formidable challenge because of their many weapons.

Try to rush Montana, and he dumps off short passes that fleet receivers often turn into big plays. Concentrate on shutting down wide receiver Jerry Rice, and John Taylor burns you from the other side. Focus too much on the passing game, and running backs Roger Craig and Tom Rathman run wild.

"Joe Montana is a great quarterback, but don't forget he has a great supporting cast, too," Broncos coach Dan Reeves said.

"We're not going to overdo it trying to stop one guy and then have the other guys beat us," strong safety Dennis Smith said. "We have to contain all of them. You're not going to shut out Rice or Taylor, but you have to find ways to contain them. They're big-play receivers, but we haven't given up many big plays this year."

Phillips believes the way to keep Montana & Co. from making big plays is with an effective pass rush.

"Montana completes a high percentage of passes against everybody," Phillips said. "He's quick at making decisions. He gets rid of the ball quickly, and he's tough to sack."

"What we want to do is force him to make decisions a little quicker. You want to force him to scramble or do things he doesn't want to do."

Phillips said the Broncos will try to disrupt Montana's rhythm, all the while keeping those dangerous receivers underneath the coverage, and hoping the two safeties — Smith and Steve Atwater — can deliver some intimidating hits.

Pressure isn't always effective against a short passing game such as that favored by San Francisco. And there is a short passing game that often turns into something longer.

"In the Minnesota (playoff) game, he threw a 4-yarder to Rice and it went 78 yards and put them ahead early in the game," Phillips said. "They'll dink you and dink you until something breaks down on defense. You've got to be patient."

As an assistant with the New Orleans Saints in the early 1980s, Phillips has some experience against Montana and the 49er offense.

"We played them twice a year, so I know a little bit about their offense," he said. "We had some success against them."

Phillips believes there is one factor working in his favor. Montana hasn't played against the new defense Phillips installed in Denver this season.

In their favor, the defense has kept the Broncos in contention in every game. Their five losses were by a combined 20 points, and the defense finished the regular season ranked third in the NFL.

Preseason holdouts now holding 49ers together

By DAVE CARPENTER
AP Sports Writer

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — When eight San Francisco 49ers starters held out for almost the entire exhibition season, it looked like the no-repeat jinx was about to claim another championship team.

Not only are the 49ers back in the Super Bowl with a 16-2 record, but the contract holdouts all played key roles almost from the start of the season.

Only four retain their starting jobs going to New Orleans — guard Guy McIntyre, cornerback Don Griffin, linebacker Charles Haley and defensive end Kevin Fagan — but cornerback Tim McKyer, defensive end Larry Roberts and offensive tackle Steve Wallace play extensively as backups.

Aside from strong safety Jeff Fuller, lost for the season and perhaps never to play again after sustaining a compressed vertebrae against New England on Oct. 22, none had a bad year. And all were reimbursed handsomely for their negotiating efforts.

The holdouts have been forgotten. What is remembered are the efforts of owner Edward J. DeBartolo Jr. to get them into the fold before the start of the season and downplay the squabbles in the interest of team harmony as soon as they were resigned.

"Everybody knows he's willing to spend whatever it takes to get the job done," John McVay, the 49ers' vice president for football operations, said.

"It's a credit to Mr. DeBartolo and management that they'll do what's necessary to win, no matter what the cost," linebacker Bill Romanowski said.

The 49ers produced only one Pro Bowl selection, McIntyre, out of their AWOL players.

McIntyre, who had arthroscopic knee surgery in June, had the best of his six seasons after signing a $370,000 contract on Aug. 25. He started 13 games at left guard and helped hold Minnesota pass-rushing specialist Keith Millard without a sack in the Jan. 6 playoff game.

His linemate, Wallace, didn't lose his starting job to Bubba Paris because of the holdout. He broke his left ankle in last January's Super Bowl and was not expected to report back 100 percent healthy. He got a $410,000 contract when he reported on Aug. 24, and improved enough throughout the fall to be platooned with Paris, playing significant minutes in the two playoff victories, when quarterback Joe Montana was not sacked.

Griffin, a fourth-year player, also had his finest season but was bypassed in the Pro Bowl voting. He started all 16 games at right corner and had a team-high 17 passes defended plus two interceptions and 47 tackles, justifying his $205,000 pay boost to $530,000 this season.

Haley's statistics didn't match his salary increase — from $100,000 in 1988 to $550,000 in 1989. He went from 111/2 sacks and 69 tackles to 101/2 and 57, but was still the co-leader in sacks along with Pierce Holt.

Fagan, a starter in 15 games at right defensive end, also burst out of the $100,000 salary range (to $425,000) but improved along with the pay hike. He had seven sacks, one pass defended and 40 tackles, 33 of them solo.

Roberts lost his job at left defensive end to Holt, something that might have happened even if he had reported before Aug. 28. Plagued by knee and shoulder injuries, he still finished the year with 31/2 sacks and added one last Sunday.

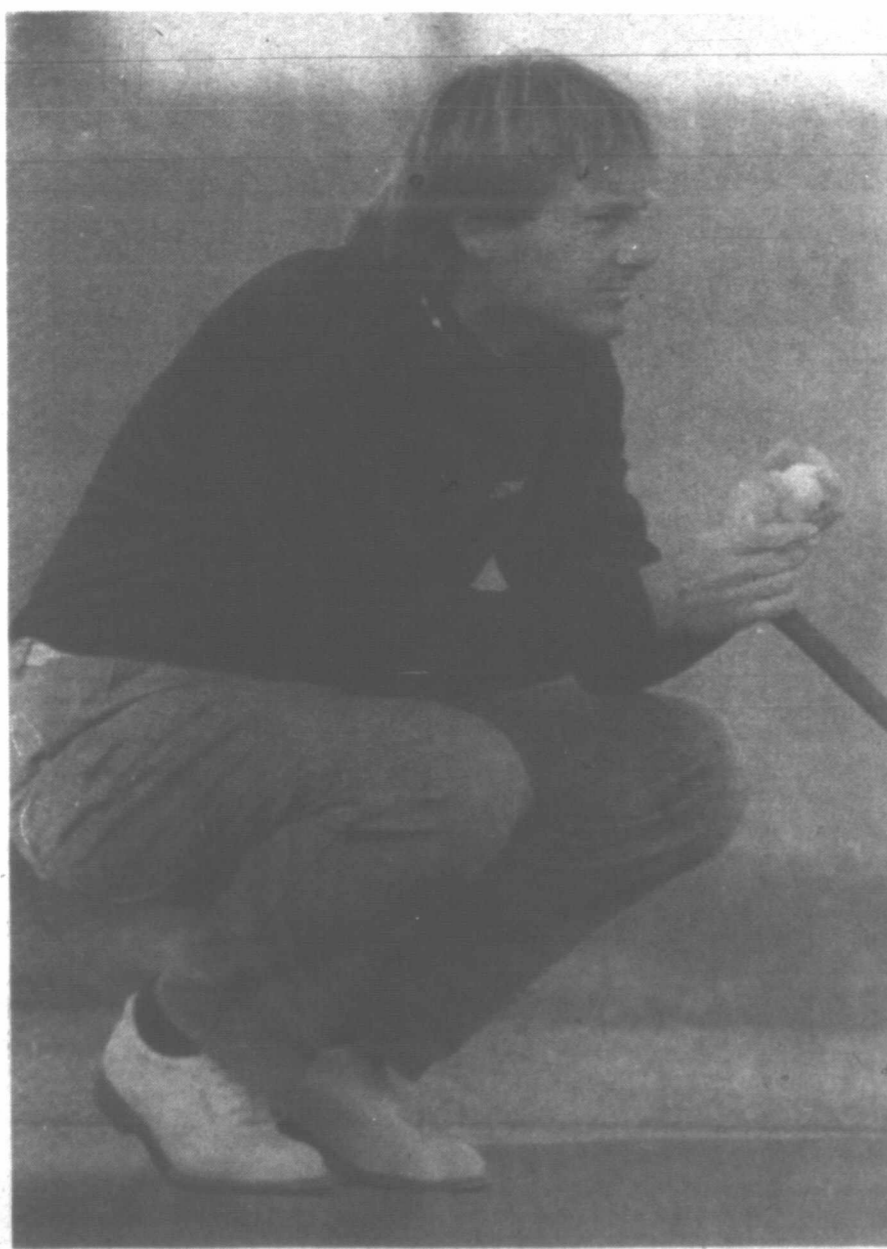

McKyer had less than smooth going after signing a $544,000 contract on Aug. 26 and declaring himself the NFL's top cornerback. He made an important goal-line interception in the season opener at Indianapolis but also injured a groin and was limited to one start all year.

Cook overcomes injury to share Hope Classic lead

By BOB GREEN

LA QUINTA, Calif. — John Cook, back from an eight-month vacation he didn't want to take, played when he didn't think he could.

Both situations worked out just right for the oft-injured Cook.

The vacation followed extensive hand surgery last April which resurrected Cook's career on the PGA Tour.

"Oh, I knew I'd play again. I just didn't know if I'd ever be able to play again out here" on the Tour, he said.

And there was considerable doubt that he'd be able to play Wednesday in the first round of the five-day, 90-hole Bob Hope Classic.

"The flu bug hit me like a bomb. At 5:30, there was no way I could play," he said. He actually went so far as to call Tour officials to withdraw, but changed his mind at the last moment.

A few hours later, he finished off a bogey-free round of 7-under-par 65 at Indian Wells to gain a share of the first-round lead.

"I got it in somehow," he said after tying Fred Funk, 48-year-old Dave Stockton and Don Pooley for the top spot.

Stockton, who won his second PGA national championship in 1976, one-putted 12 times at Tamarisk.

Funk did not have a bogey in his round over the Arnold Palmer course at PGA West.

Pooley, the 1985 Vardon Trophy winner, played at Indian Wells, which he called "probably the easiest of the four courses" used for the first four rounds of this unique tournament.

The format calls for the 128 pros to play one round each day on each of four desert resort courses, with a different three-man amateur team every round. The field is then cut for the final round Sunday at the Palmer course.

Jim Benepe and 44-year-old Hale Irwin, a two-time U.S. Open champion, were a shot back of the leaders with 66s in chilly, cloudy weather.

Benepe played at the Palmer course and Irwin had the best round of the day at Bermuda Dunes, where most of the gallery gathered to watch the celebrity amateurs.

Many of them, cameras in hand, flocked to the host comedian, who played with former President Gerald Ford, former Speaker of the House Tip O'Neill and their pro, defending champion Steve Jones.

Jones could do no better than a 75. Hope, Ford and O'Neill had a best-ball of 74, two over par, and trailed the field.

"I've come along faster than I thought," said Cook, who did not have a bogey on his card, birdied all the par-5 holes and gained his place among the leaders with a birdie-birdie finish.

Robert Gamez, the rookie who won the Tucson Open last week in his first start as a member of the PGA Tour, shot 70 at Tamarisk.

Arnold Palmer, 60, making his 31st consecutive appearance in a tournament he won five times, shot 73 and Tom Watson had a 70.

Harvester wrestlers travel to Amarillo High tonight

Fresh off their first victory of the season, the Pampa Harvester wrestlers travel to Amarillo High tonight for their next-to-last dual meet of the year.

The Harvesters defeated Palo Duro, 44-35, last Thursday to end a seven-meet winless streak. Pampa pulled ahead of the Dons with a victory in the 125-pound bracket and never trailed again, improving its dual meet record to 1-7.

In all, the Harvesters won seven matches, while Palo Duro won six. Neither team fielded a competitor in the 180-pound bracket.

In tonight's matches, the Harvesters face an Amarillo High squad that stands at 3-5 on the season.

The Sandies are coming off a hard-fought, 42-31 loss to Caprock last Thursday. Caprock won four out of the last five matches to erase a 27-12 deficit and clinch the win.

The Sandies defeated Pampa, 62-14, when the two teams met on Dec. 11. Two Harvester grapplers, Bill Larkin and Chris Archibald, pulled off victories to pace Pampa in that contest.

Larkin made good on a drop to the 152-pound division by pinning AHS' James Goddard at the 1:48 mark of the first period. Archibald pinned Tim Pendergrass in the 171-pound class.

Chad Chairez, Pampa's 112-pounder, wrestled Bryan Caudle of Amarillo High to a 2-2 tie in the first meeting.

Tonight's matches are set for 6:30 at Amarillo High.

Jazz hand Hawks fifth straight loss

By DICK BRINSTER

When Karl Malone has 15 points at halftime and thinks the news is bad, the opposition should be ready to read another headline.

That's exactly what happened to the Atlanta Hawks, who managed to hold the Utah Jazz to 43 points in the second half Wednesday night. But Malone, getting over the feeling that his teammates were carrying him, poured in 25 of them.

"In the second half, my shot came on," Malone said after leading Utah to a 95-88 victory.

It was the third time in four games that Malone, second in scoring in the NBA to Chicago's Michael Jordan with an average of 30.6, has scored at least 40 points.

John Stockton had 20 points and 13 assists as the Jazz handed the Hawks their fifth straight loss. It also was the seventh straight defeat on the road for Atlanta, which got 27 points from Dominique Wilkins.

Utah took the lead for good at 75-74 at 10:49 of the final period on a layup by Blue Edwards.

Malone followed with a layup, but the Hawks stayed close and were within 91-88 before Malone hit a jumper with 30 seconds remaining.

He also grabbed the last two of his team-leading nine rebounds in the final half-minute to help preserve the lead.

Moses Malone had 16 points and led the Hawks with 11 rebounds.

Horns, Hogs remain atop SWC

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The Arkansas Razorbacks, third-highest scoring team in the nation, posted their fewest points of the season, yet coach Nolan Richardson couldn't have been happier.

The 12th ranked Razorbacks smothered Southern Methodist with a full-court defense and forced 19 turnovers in an 80-61 victory over the Mustangs.

The victory kept the Hogs tied with Texas atop the SWC ladder with 5-0 records. The two teams meet on Thursday, Jan. 26, at Fayetteville in a nationally televised (ESPN) showdown.

Texas beat Texas A&M 96-94 and the Rice Owls won their third consecutive game with a 66-64 overtime victory against Texas Christian. Austin Peay edged Texas Tech, 69-68, in a non-conference game.

"It was one of the best games we've played," Richardson said. "We played hard and well for 40 minutes. We stuck it on 'em and played hard from the outset."

The previous low for Arkansas was 82 points in a 94-point victory at Houston.

"We've been doing well on the road," Richardson said. "Sometimes I think we are more relaxed on the road than we are at Barnhill (Arena)."

He added "We broke them down pretty good. SMU was sucking air trying to keep up with our press."

Arkansas forward Lenzie Howell said the Mustangs got jittery against the full-court pressure which forced 19 turnovers.

"They (the Mustangs) were intimidated by our pressure," Howell said. "You could see it in their eyes. A lot of teams don't like pressure. By the time they learned how to handle it the game was over."

Arkansas, 13-3 overall, slapped a full-court press on the Mustangs, who didn't score until almost five minutes were gone.

When SMU, 6-7 and 1-3, did get back into the game behind the shooting of Tony Patterson and John Colborne, Arkansas countered with Ron Huery of the bench.

Huery scored nine straight points, including a three-point shot, to boost the Arkansas lead to 28-10 and the Mustangs were down and out.

"That's my job to spark the team off the bench," Huery said.

Todd Day led the Razorbacks with 17 points, Lenzie Howell added 15 and Huery contributed 12.

"The key to the win was our defense in the first 10 minutes," Day said. "You could see a little panic out there."

Arkansas, the third highest scoring team in the nation, was held 20 points below its average as the Mustangs milked the 45-second clock before shooting.

Patterson scored a career-high 16 points for the Mustangs. Colborne also had 16 and Gerald Lewis scored a career-high 15 points as SMU lost before a crowd of 5,356 fans, about half of them cheering for the Razorbacks.

SMU coach John Shumate said Arkansas showed why "it's the elite team of our conference. There's no question the pressure hurt us. Arkansas has so many great players."

Travis Mays scored 30 points as the Texas Longhorns fought back from a five-point deficit in the final minutes to upend Texas A&M 96-94.

Tar Heels whip archrival Duke, 79-60

By The Associated Press

Even in what has been a down year, at least by North Carolina standards, it's always easy for the Tar Heels to get up for Duke.

Rooted on by a record crowd in the Dean Smith Center, the Tar Heels routed their eighth-ranked archrival 79-60 Wednesday night.

North Carolina did it with defense, forcing 24 turnovers and holding Duke to 39 percent shooting. The Tar Heels shut out their neighbors for nine minutes during a run of 16 straight points that made it 25-7, and led 45-21 at halftime.

"Tonight is Carolina's. Hats off to them," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said.

North Carolina is 12-6 overall and 2-1 in the Atlantic Coast Conference. The loss was the worst for Duke (12-3, 3-1) since a 20-point defeat against the Tar Heels last season.

In other games, No. 2 Georgetown beat Boston College 68-45, No. 12 Arkansas stopped Southern Methodist 80-61, No. 23 Arizona topped Arizona State 70-61, No. 24 Purdue held off Wisconsin 56-54 and Kentucky downed No. 25 Alabama 82-65.

The Tar Heels applied full-court pressure from the start, and it worked, to the delight of 21,572 fans. Duke committed 15 turnovers in the first half and, during one stretch of seven possessions, threw the ball away six times and missed one shot.

"I thought our defense was the key to the victory," Coach Dean Smith said.

Duke began the second half with a 9-2 run that cut its deficit to 47-30. The Blue Devils later got within 15 points, but no closer.

Rick Fox led North Carolina with 19 points and King Rice had 13. Christian Laettner scored 18 for Duke.

No. 2 Georgetown.....68
Boston College.....45

Dikembe Mutombo had 12 points and 13 rebounds as undefeated Georgetown won its 27th straight home game.

The Hoyas (14-0, 4-0 in the Big East) led 33-18 at halftime and were ahead by at least nine points the rest of the way. Mark Tillmon added 17 points for Georgetown.

Lior Arditu scored 10 points for the Eagles (6-9, 0-5).

No. 23 Arizona.....70
Arizona State.....61

Brian Williams scored 20 points and Arizona beat Arizona State for the seventh straight time.

Arizona (10-3, 5-3 in the Pac-10) led 30-28 at halftime and scored the first six points of the second half. The host Sun Devils (8-7, 2-5) got no closer than four points after that.

Wayne Womack scored 18 points, 14 in the second half, for Arizona. Alex Austin had 24 points for Arizona State.

No. 24 Purdue.....56
Wisconsin.....54

Tony Jones, who scored 23 points, led a late surge as Purdue beat Wisconsin for the 25th straight time.

Jones scored his team's last 12 points as Purdue overcame a 45-42 deficit in the final 5 1/2 minutes.

Purdue is 12-2 overall and 4-0 in the Big Ten.
