Lefors school board denies teacher's resignation after lengthy discussions

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

An overwhelming show of support for Michael Downes, a Lefors school teacher, helped reinstate him to his teaching position Thursday night following his resignation last Friday.

The Lefors Independent School District Board of Trustees, following a 4 1/2-hour executive session in a special called meeting, voted unanimously to deny Downes' resignation and require him to fulfill his contract with the school district. The contract ends with the school year at the end of May.

During the closed session, the school board consulted with Superintendent Ed Gilliland, Principal Mike Jackson and Downes.

Downes, a math and computer teacher, resigned suddenly, stating in his resignation letter dated Jan. 19, "I recently started working on my principal/superintendent certification and I have decided I would like to pursue this on a full-time basis."

His last teaching day was on Jan. 18 at Lefors ISD and he wrote in his resignation letter that his departure was effective immediately.

In an interview this morning, Downes said that although he had submitted his letter of resignation last week he had in effect, reconsidered that decision.

"It was the dilemma we were faced with. It was not comfortable," Downes said this morning.

"I'm very happy with their (school board's) decision ... I'm happy to work with the kids."

Gilliland said following the meeting Thursday evening that he told Downes upon the receipt of his resignation letter that he did not have the power to accept it, but would take it to the board.

Gilliland strongly denied that he had asked for Downes' resignation stating, "There is a ton of rumors going around. The only thing I can say is what was turned in. I can't answer to rumor, only to fact."

Downes worked as a substitute for Pampa Independent School District for three days this week, he said, conducting number sense workshops with teachers.

Pampa ISD Superintendent Harry Griffith said today, "He was sitting around the house and it was killing him. He called to ask if he could substitute until this was resolved."

"We told him we didn't want to get involved in a conflict down there but would be happy to have him work with our kids."

Attending the school board meeting were an estimated 50 Lefors students and residents. A petition signed by 121 of the residents and students asking that Downes' resignation be denied was presented to the school board by Kevin Mayfield, a senior at Lefors High School.

Mayfield also made a speech before the school board pushing for the denying of Downes' resignation.

"Last Friday during a student assembly we were told of the resignation of Michael Downes. This

Bush claiming mandate on his policies with China

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush, savoring a major triumph over Congress, is claiming a mandate to deal with China "the way I feel is correct" despite widespread opposition to his policies from Democrats and Republicans alike.

"Surprised you, didn't it?" Bush exclaimed Thursday after the Senate, by a four-vote margin, upheld his veto of a politically popular bill protecting Chinese students from deportation.

Bush said the victory would "be helpful in reaching accommodation" with the Senate and House on other matters.

Senators voted 62-37 against Bush but the vote failed to meet the two-thirds margin needed for an override.

The House had voted 390-25 a day earlier against the president.

In part, the issue was an election-year test of strength between a Republican president and a Democratic Congress.

However, it was not a strictly partisan battle since 145 Republicans in the House and eight in the Senate joined with Democrats in trying to override Bush.

While Bush emerged the winner, the votes provided a clear measure of congressional displeasure with his secret diplomacy with Beijing and his refusal to deal harshly following the crackdown against China's pro-democracy forces.

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, said the bill represented "America's symbol to the world that is struggling to throw off the chains of dictators."

Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., said that letting the veto stand sends "the signal that they can get away with what they have done and retain their power. And I think that's wrong."

Yet Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said the showdown was the equivalent of "throwing out the first ball" of the 1990 election season and was being used by Democrats to force Republicans to cast "a tough political vote" for the president.

Bush said he regarded the outcome as a mandate for his policies.

"It gives me the confidence that I'm going to go forward the way I think is correct here. ... And we're going to stay right on track," Bush said.

Defending the secrecy of his approach, Bush said, "I think the decisions I've made are good decisions."

"I can understand the controversy and I can understand why there isn't unanimous endorsement," he said. "But I view it as a very good step."

Bush said the 40,000 Chinese students in the United States would be fully protected even without the legislation. "No student, as long as I'm president, will be sent back against his or her will," he vowed.

The president's victory followed an intense White House lobbying blitz that included calls from Bush as well as former President Richard M. Nixon.

Bush discussed the China situation, as well as other subjects, in a pair of news conference appearances Thursday at which he also announced a $10.6 drug-fighting strategy and a $1 billion aid package for Panama to rebuild after the American invasion last month.

On a major foreign policy front, Bush praised Mikhail S. Gorbachev as the "best hope" for the United States in the Soviet Union and declined to fault him for using force to restore order in the Soviet republic of Azerbaijan.

On other subjects, Bush said:

— He would not point a finger at any party for the impasse in Middle East peace talks, saying, "I don't think it would be helpful to quantify recalcitrance."

— He disagreed with NAACP leaders that there is "a rising tide" of racial violence in America, although he said there have been "some very ugly incidents" with recent bombings and other actions.

— He will tell Americans in his State of the Union address next Wednesday that "the country is going to be in pretty good shape."

— He believes that members of Congress favor military base cutbacks only if they don't affect their own regions.

CAER encourages local businesses to file lists of hazardous chemicals

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Fire Capt. Kelly Randall told a Community Awareness and Emergency Response (CAER) meeting Thursday night that local businesses keeping hazardous chemicals on their premises need education and encouragement to again file lists of the substances with the fire department.

Lists of hazardous chemicals must be filed every year with the department, Randall said, as part of federal Title III regulations.

Last year, over 300 businesses and farms filed the lists. However, Randall said this year only five have filed so far. He said miscommunication over how often the lists must be filed is probably to blame.

"We also haven't had many requests from the public to let people see those lists of hazardous chemicals under 'right to know,'" Randall told the gathering of chemical company representatives, emergency responders and media. "If anybody wants to see what's in there, we ask them to reduce it to writing to keep our records straight."

Randall said public education would be undertaken soon in an attempt to once again get a high level of compliance with the federal filing rule.

Title III rules are designed to help firefighters know what they are encountering in the event of a chemical fire or accident, fire officials have previously said, as well as to let the public know of hazardous chemicals in their immediate area.

During the meeting, Steve Vaughn, emergency preparedness director for the city and Gray County, pointed out that Pampa has been recognized by the Environmental Protection Agency as having one of the six top chemical emergency preparedness programs in the nation.

Pampa is recognized and their program outlined as an example of excellence in a new EPA book published in late 1989. Other governmental bodies recognized were Calhoun County, Ala.; the state of Wisconsin; Cuyahoga County, Ohio; Racine County, Wisc., and the state of Idaho.

Representatives of the Salvation Army and Red Cross presented brief presentations on how their organizations deal with emergencies on the national or local level.

"These are two examples of how groups are able to assist people locally and around the nation," Vaughn said. "We appreciate you."

Both local groups provided assistance to national efforts during a hurricane that struck the East Coast and an earthquake that struck the West Coast in 1989.

CAER officials said a seminar will be sponsored this spring for members on dealing with clandestine drug labs.

Since the labs contain chemicals for the manufacture of narcotics, as well as booby traps, Randall told members, it is important that emergency responders know what they are walking into when a lab is discovered.

The next CAER meeting, Vaughn said, is scheduled for Thursday, April 26, at noon at a site to be determined later.

Colombian jetliner crashes in New York; 67 people killed

By BILL STIEG
Associated Press Writer

COVE NECK, N.Y. (AP) - A Colombian jetliner on a landing approach radioed that an engine had gone out before it crashed in heavy fog and rain, killing at least 67 of 158 people aboard and scattering bodies across a wooded hillside, authorities said today.

Helicopters lifted bloodied passengers to hospitals as a priest gave last rites on the ground early this morning.

"I gave them rosaries and said little prayers," said the Rev. Daniel Ahern of St. Pius V Roman Catholic Church in Oyster Bay. "They were crying and asking about their family members."

Avianca Flight 52, a Boeing 707, was carrying 149 passengers and nine crew members when it crashed Thursday night on its second approach to John F. Kennedy International Airport, the airline said in a statement from Bogota.

"There were bodies on top of bodies on top of bodies," said Jeff Race, 26, a New York City paramedic who lives a half-mile away. He said he was the first rescuer at the scene. "Some were alive, some were dead. Limbs were bent every way you can imagine."

"People were screaming. ... Most of them were still strapped in their seats," he said. "It was just mangled, twisted metal."

The 23-year-old jetliner, more than 90 minutes late from Bogota after a stop in Medellin, Colombia, broke into at least three pieces. Rescuers arrived to find passengers scrambling out of exits.

Dr. George Dunn of Glen Cove Community Hospital said the number of survivors was so high because the airplane didn't catch on fire. Authorities this morning could not confirm a Cable News Network report that the plane ran out of fuel before it crashed.

National Transportation Safety Board investigators were on the scene but had not commented.

Boeing spokesman Tom Cole said the 707 model is capable of carrying about 24,000 gallons of fuel, which gives it range of 6,000 miles. "It has plenty of capability to fly from Colombia to New York."

Federal Aviation Administration spokeswoman Diane Spitaliere said the plane pulled away from a landing approach at 9:24 p.m. for unknown reasons. At 9:32 p.m., she said, the plane reported to the Kennedy tower that its No. 2 engine had gone out. At 9:34 p.m., the tower lost contact with the plane, and the crash occurred moments later, Spitaliere said.

The death toll as of midmorning was 67, and it was not clear how many crew members survived, said Port Authority Police Officer Michael Palermo.

The plane's flight and voice recorders were recovered, Thomas Gulotta, the Nassau County executive, said.

Authorities created a makeshift morgue on the front lawn of a mansion owned by the parents of tennis star John McEnroe, about a quarter-mile from the crash. The bodies were wrapped in white plastic and lined in rows.

Aleta Heidt of Wyckoff, N.J., said her husband was on the plane, bringing home two adoptive children. The husband and at least one child survived, she said. She said she believed several children being adopted were on the flight.

Race said most of those killed or severely injured were "from the front of the plane, where the fuselage had separated apart."

By early today, 92 people had been taken to hospitals, according to Sgt. James Callahan of the Nassau County Police Emergency Medical Bureau.

Nassau County Police spokesman Officer Peter Franzone said at least 78 people survived the crash.

Feuding brews over drug war funding

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congressional Democrats and big-city mayors are setting the stage for fresh feuding over the war against drugs, saying President Bush's plan to raise spending by $1.1 billion next year is inadequate.

"We're going to have to have a lot more resources and that's not in this document," House Narcotics Committee Chairman Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., told a news conference Thursday after Bush presented his plan.

The $10.6 billion package includes more money for a Pentagon attack on cocaine traffickers and would allow the death penalty for drug kingpins. It would boost the cost next year by 11.6 percent over the current $9.5 billion.

Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del.,

on Wednesday proposed a different version, and debate over the rival strategies could easily carry over into the fall congressional campaigns.

Biden's version calls for spending $14.6 billion next year, including 400,000 new beds in treatment centers and immediate treatment for pregnant addicts as well as more FBI and drug enforcement agents and prison expansion.

Bush presented his plan in a White House speech to newspaper editors, calling drugs "this nation's No. 1 concern."

He said the Senate most likely will shoot for a higher budget than what he is requesting but that "we do sense a desire on the part of the Congress to cooperate."

Biden, in a breakfast speech to the National Conference of Mayors, said he hoped to work with the administration "to implement the proposals on which we agree and to narrow our differences on the rest."

Biden said his strategy did not carry the endorsement of any Democratic Party group or even that of Democrats on the Judiciary Committee.

A number of Democratic mayors were quick to condemn the strategy. "We can't win the war on drugs with $10.6 billion," Philadelphia's W. Wilson Goode told reporters.

"It is woefully inadequate," said New York Mayor David Dinkins. Several of the mayors expressed support for Biden's alternative.

On Capitol Hill, Republican lawmakers and Democrats whose states stand to gain increased federal funds under the Bush strategy expressed support.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, called it "a logical extension of phase I of the program" and scoffed at a Biden complaint that it targets punishing casual users instead of hard-core addicts who commit most of the crimes.

"They're all criminals," Gramm said. He said casual use has "put a drug thug at the door of every junior high school in the country."

Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., complained that "one thing is especially lacking and that is any emphasis whatsoever on rural America and what the drug problem is out there."

caused a lot of hurt, sorrow and pain," Mayfield said. "It was hard to take ... we also lost a part of ourselves."

Mayfield described Downes as an "inspiration" to all of the students.

He pointed out to the school board that since he had been a second-grade student in the school district, there had been three superintendents, three principals and four coaches in the last five years. He said Downes was an excellent instructor and should be retained.

"Anytime there is a change there is disruption," Mayfield said. "Different people and different teachers have different ideas ... we have to learn new techniques."

Mayfield said he was trying to make a point that by losing Downes the students would have to start all over "from the very bottom." The senior said that he realized he and others at the meeting would be graduating soon, but he pleaded with the school board to consider the impact of Downes' resignation on the younger students.

"Don't lose all the work put forth by Michael Downes," Mayfield said referring to increased T.E.A.M.S. scores and the improvement in U.I.L. competitions Downes is directly involved in.

Mayfield said if the resignation was not denied, there would be "an uphill battle with the students because we're going to be rejected." He said the students were finally getting the attitude that "Pirates can accomplish all things," and denying Downes' resignation would help the students feel like they had accomplished a goal.

"I know you have the power to make the right decision. The decision making our school the best is denying the resignation of Michael Downes."

Following the closed session, Lefors ISD Board of Trustees President Garrel Roberson said, "We have decided not to accept Michael Downes' resignation and have him fulfill his contract this year."

Board member Keith Roberson made the motion, seconded by Larry

Daniels, to not accept the resignation. The motion was unanimous with all school trustees present for the meeting.

Downes said today he is continuing to work on his master's degree in administration at West Texas State University, attending classes two nights a week. He said he should have his degree completed next spring. Downes is in his third school year at Lefors ISD. Before that he was a student teacher in the Wichita Falls school system for 2 1/2 years while completing his bachelor's degree in mathematics at Midwestern State University.

Downes said he was impressed with the support of the students and residents in Lefors. Speaking of the students he said, "They are top of the line. They're fantastic to work with. They have all of my support and I think from last night I've got theirs."

As far as his future at Lefors ISD following the end of his one-year contract in May, Downes said he was confident the school district would renew his contract. However, he added, "We sign a one-year contract. We re-evaluate every spring."

Board approves WT-A&M merger

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board voted today to approve the merger of West Texas State University with the Texas A&M University system but asked the Legislature to take steps to avoid politically charged lobbying on future mergers.

The board also approved the expansion of the University of Texas-Dallas to a four-year school.

The board's 10-7 vote on the West Texas merger means the schools can begin to combine. But coordinating board members were critical of the pressure they were put under on the way to the vote.

Board members said the Legislature put the cart before the horse by passing legislation that allowed the merger, contingent on the board's approval. The board had to act by March 31 or new legislation would have been required.

A series of school mergers in South Texas did not require the coordinating board's review.

"It placed a burden on the board. The legislature should have taken action themselves: the South Texas mergers were handled without board approval, after all," said Eleanor Conrad, a board member who proposed the resolution.

Greg Mitchell said it was "obviously politics" that the coordinating board was even involved in approving the West Texas case. He said he voted for it because "I don't see how we could deny access to A&M to that part of the state."

The coordinating board passed a resolution today asking the Legislature to seek the coordinating board's recommendations before passing any more enabling legislation on school mergers, rather than making the mergers contingent on the board's action.

The coordinating board also appointed a special committee to study the effect of mergers on the Texas university system. Results of the study are expected in October, and the board asked that the Legislature not approve any new mergers or university system changes until that study is complete.

Board members said they were angered by the massive lobbying effort by the Texas A&M University.

Rape charge dropped against city employee

By BEAR MILLS
 Staff Writer

Charges will not be filed against a Pampa city employee accused in the Jan. 8 early morning rape of a woman, police said Thursday, because the alleged victim has declined to pursue the case.

However, City Manager Glen Hackler said the employee was terminated Thursday anyway. "He has been terminated based on grounds unrelated to this incident," Hackler said. "Beyond that statement, I'm not going to say anything for the sake of his privacy."

Hackler declined to identify the employee or what department he worked for except to say it was not in the fire or police departments.

Police said previously the employee was on duty at the time of the alleged rape, which the victim said occurred around 3 a.m.

"She has signed a non-prosecution statement," said

Chief Jim Laramore.

Laramore said the case was to the point of deciding to go for a rape charge with the district attorney, lesser charges with the county attorney or non-prosecution and "she chose that option."

Police said the victim was put in touch with Tralee Crisis Center at the time of the alleged attack so she would have an advocate counseling her on the best way to pursue the case.

Hackler, asked if the employee was cleared, said, "That is probably too strong a statement."

Laramore also declined to say the employee was cleared, only that, "She (the alleged victim) signed a non-prosecution statement."

He said the investigation was completed and information gathered, along with the non-prosecution statement.

District Attorney Harold Comer said this morning, "Because of the nature of the offense, if she chooses not to testify, we don't have a case."

Reception Saturday night to honor Pampa man who served in Panama

Pampa native Stephen Thurman, home on leave following his involvement in the Panama invasion last December, is to be guest of honor at a "Welcome Home" reception Saturday from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the Energas Flame Room.

Thurman's parents, June and Boyd Thurman of Pampa, invite well-wishers to attend the come-and-go event.

Thurman, stationed with the U.S. Army's 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C., parachuted into Panama Dec. 20 along with approximately 3,000 other servicemen from Fort Bragg. With a classification of HMMWV driver (High Mobility Multi-purpose Wheeled Vehicle), Thurman is also an artillery expert. He is trained with the tow weapon, an anti-tank weapon fired from the HMMWV, a modified jeep that can travel on any type terrain.

Mrs. Thurman said today that her son, a 1983 graduate of Pampa High School, is expected to arrive home late tonight for a 10-day leave.

Coordinating Board grants tentative approval to WT-A&M merger

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board today was to consider merging West Texas State University with the Texas A&M University system after having already given the proposal tentative approval.

On Thursday, the Coordinating Board, acting on the committee level, approved the consolidation 10-7 despite charges that the proposal was based more on politics than education.

Proponents say a merger would strengthen 6,000-student West Texas State and bring more research dollars to the campus in Canyon, 16 miles south of Amarillo. Both West Texas State and A&M support the merger.

But those opposed said they were under political pressure to support the merger and they feared that West Texas State would be devoured by the mammoth A&M system.

"It is not in the interest of the state to have two university systems become so powerful that they can dictate policy to smaller schools," Texas Higher Education Commissioner Kenneth Ashworth.

"I'm opposed to being made a pawn," said board member Herbert Butrum of Houston during the hearing before an overflow crowd of mostly Panhandle residents who support the merger.

"This has become an emotional and political situation. This board was created to take politics out of the education system," said board vice chairman Cipriano Guerra of San Antonio.

Board member Jack Trotter of Houston said a massive lobbying effort, including a letter from Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, in support of the proposal "gives a suggestion that if we don't vote right we won't get confirmed."

Several board members still face Senate confirmation hearings.

But a majority of the committee said the merger would help both schools.

"What's striking to me is the enthusiasm the students and faculty have for this proposal," board member Dr. Lauro Guerra of McAllen said.

About two dozen West Texas State students were in the audience, wearing maroon buttons that said, "WTSU and A&M. Yes!"

Last week, the Coordinating Board's staff of advisers recommended against the merger, saying it would be premature.

Ashworth said it would make more sense to merge West Texas State with Lubbock-based Texas Tech, though neither school has expressed interest.

But T. Boone Pickens, chairman of the West Texas State board of regents, disagreed.

"The students (at West Texas State) want to be identified with quality and Texas A&M is one of the best systems in the country," Pickens said.

Texas Tech president Robert Lawless said he supported the merger, but told the board to prevent any duplication of programs between Tech and those at West Texas State.

About 120 people from the Panhandle paid $200 each to fly to Austin on a chartered jet to attend Thursday's meeting.

Board members who opposed the merger also said they felt like they were being rushed to make a decision before the completion of a report on the cost-effectiveness of realigning some of the university government structures.

The board, however, must act by March 31 on the West Texas State-A&M merger because of a state law passed last year.

Warm welcome for Brandley

(AP Laserphoto)

Clarence Brandley gets a show of support from a well-wisher at a Thursday press conference at the Coalition to Free Clarence Brandley headquarters in Houston. Brandley spent 10 years on Texas death row for the rape and murder of a high school girl, but the Texas Court of Appeals ruled that Brandley did not get a fair trial and ordered him released, saying there was strong evidence that racism motivated the prosecution and jury's verdict. Brandley has insisted he was innocent.

Bush's SSC commitment questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas congressmen are questioning President Bush's commitment to the super collider now that he has requested $318 million — instead of an anticipated $393 million — for second year construction funds.

President Bush's budget, to be unveiled Monday, requests $75 million less than what had been anticipated for the giant particle accelerator being built in Ellis County, and some Texans say that gets the project off to a rockier start this year than they would have liked.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said he had hoped for a higher starting point, "since I have no doubt, with our budget deficit situation, that Congress will whittle away at it."

"Only a few days ago, a White House spokesman was warning that Congress might make cuts in the president's budget for the SSC. What he didn't warn us was that we'd see substantial cuts before Congress even gets its turn," Bentsen said.

President Bush last year requested $250 million for the SSC; Congress gave it $225 million.

"It's a serious setback," said Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas. "Now they're talking about a higher price tag and the president proposes less money. That leaves us in a doubly difficult position of having to argue with the project's critics, who will say this whole project is going to cost way too much money and let's not put any money into it."

Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur Springs, said the $318 million request "certainly shows less than the full commitment of the administration to the project."

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said Thursday that Bush's budget request, to be submitted to Congress on Monday, would include $318 million for the SSC, including $169 million for second-year construction funds.

Gramm said he was assured by Deputy Energy Secretary W. Henson Moore that $318 million represents as much as the DOE believes it could actually spend in 1991 on the collider.

Gramm said Moore also told him that the lower figure would not have any impact on the project, which if completed would be the largest, most complicated scientific instrument ever built, in which scientists hope to test theories about the building blocks of the universe.

Gramm said the collider, however, would be in far greater danger in Congress from the "sticker shock" of a higher price tag should the Energy Department recommend the cost exceed $5.9 billion.

Scientists now say it would cost some $7 billion to build the collider as originally planned, and that keeping spending at $5.9 billion would reduce the collider's energy by 25 percent.

A panel of leading physicists told DOE that such a reduction in power would "unacceptably increase the risk of missing important new physics."

Gramm said he anticipates the Energy Department will recommend an increase in overall spending for the collider and "I see escalating costs as a clear and present danger."

"The big issue, when the engineering estimates come in at the Department of Energy, the White House and Congress, is going to be the sticker shock," Gramm said. "You have to be awfully naive ...

State to get more federal agents for drug war

By The Associated Press

The Bush administration's plan to dispatch hundreds of federal agents to attack narcotics trafficking in the Southwest is welcome news for overworked border and customs agencies, but Houston's mayor says more money is needed.

President Bush, vowing "to do whatever it takes," proposed a $1.1 billion increase Thursday for the war against drugs. The $10.6 billion overall package would target more money against cocaine traffickers.

The plan, which also urged the death penalty for drug kingpins, still had deficiencies, said Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire. Houston is the president's adopted hometown where high-intensity drug-trafficking was targeted.

Bush plans an address today in Washington for the winter meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, where Ms. Whitmire is president.

Gov. Bill Clements said the attention will be welcome.

"This additional investment in our war against drugs, which my office has diligently sought, will pay great dividends in our efforts to wipe out this scourge," Clements said.

The president's plan would provide needed agents in Houston and other designated areas, officials said.

"This (Houston) is a conduit for smuggling across the border. It comes up to Houston and then goes out of here," said Jim Piatt, regional commissioner for the U.S. Customs Service based in Houston.

Mayors believe the federal government should provide direct aid to the nation's cities, rather than through state governments as it does now, Whitmire said.

A study released by the group this week found only 15 percent of two key grant programs for law enforcement assistance made it to city governments last year.

Mayors also believe federal anti-drug efforts must be sufficient for cities to provide drug treatment for all addicts, Whitmire said.

The president's drug proposal amounted to $44 per person, with only a few pennies additional for treatment, San Diego Mayor Maureen O'Connor said. By contrast, the federal savings and loan bailout plan costs $208 per person.

"Until we put the same amount in fighting drugs, we have not made it our top priority," Whitmire said.

Bush's plan also designates four other regions — New York, Los Angeles, Miami and the Mexican border region — as areas where federal anti-drug efforts would pump millions of dollars.

"The Western District of Texas is going to be affected in a positive way ... in all areas, enforcement, prosecution and hopefully the courts," said Ron Ederer, U.S. Attorney for the Western District of Texas, which includes part of the border.

"The one thing that is reassuring is that the Southwestern border has been designated as one of the areas, so in one way or another we will get some help," said William Nowak, U.S. director of inspection and control division of the El Paso sector.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Those 'tax assistors' are back — again

As you receive your W-2 form from your company and pore over last year's pile of receipts, the internal Revenue Service is preparing as well. Not only are hordes of auditors and investigators sharpening their pencils and dusting off subpoenas, the IRS's taxpayer-service division (they really call it that) is preparing to help you fill out your forms.

Says the division's new director, John Dunne: "We're hoping for a significant improvement" in their ability to help taxpayers. But that's not a hard boast to make, since the division could hardly do worse. Last year taxpayer inquiries were answered incorrectly a horrendous 37 percent of the time, according to the IRS's own survey. Independent surveys peg the error rate even higher.

The situation is amusing, but could also be dangerous. Despite a Taxpayer Bill of Rights passed by Congress in 1988, every taxpayer is still held guilty until proved innocent, and his money can be seized before he gets a fair hearing. This adjourns centuries of legal precedent, dating back to the ancient Anglo-Saxon kings of England, in which a person is held innocent until proved guilty.

So one goof by the taxpayer-service division's "assistors," as they're called, and a taxpayer is in big trouble. The IRS's only response: "Well, excuseuuuuuse me!"

Dunne says that this year his "assistors" will be better trained and supervised, and many will work on computers with extensive databases of tax law information. Tax law also has changed less over the past year than it has in the past.

Any improvement is to be cheered. But an error rate of even 1 percent could harm tens of thousands of taxpayers, possibly putting them at risk of severe financial penalties and imprisonment.

The real problem is not Dunne's office and its workers, though they still should be held to account for their errors. The problem is that, even if Dunne hired a staff of a thousand Einsteins, the tax code is so complex that wrong answers would still be given out to inquiring taxpayers.

The solution, then, is twofold. First, the individual taxpayer must be given back his right to be held innocent until proved guilty, and IRS should seize no money until a taxpayer has first been given a fair trial. Second, Congress should simplify the tax code. Economist Milton Friedman has suggested that a flat income tax of about 15 percent for all taxpayers — the same rate would be assessed on all, with no deductions — would generate the same revenue as now. You could figure out your taxes on a postcard.

Of course, the best direction would be the privatization of government services, one in which the few remaining services were paid for voluntarily. But until we can institute such an honorable system, we at least can make tax collection simpler and less capricious.

A formula for better schools

Over the past 30 years, one report after another has documented the sorry state of public education in the United States. Two publications have just come to hand that suggest what can be done about it. And because the recommendations involve something besides "more money," they deserve your attention.

Everyone has heard the litany of shortcomings. Thousands of children drop out of school as functional illiterates. Test scores decline. In international competitions our high school seniors usually finish in last place. In such areas as history and literature, barely half of our 11th-graders make passing scores. And so on.

John W. Alexander, a retired professor of economic geography at the University of Wisconsin, recently summarized the thoughts of a lifetime spent in teaching. He calls his statement "A Strategy for Public Schools." His ideas are remarkably close to the ideas advanced in "Making Schools Better," a slim pamphlet published by the Center for Educational Innovation in New York City.

Some of Alexander's ideas are downright revolutionary. He would abolish property taxes for education and replace them with statewide income taxes. The states then would distribute funds to parents in the form of "school stamps," or vouchers, that could be expended only for education at schools of the parents' choice. The federal government would supplement the state grants in poorer areas of the country.

The idea of tuition vouchers is not new. In one form or another it has been advanced repeatedly, but it has gone nowhere. The teachers' unions hate the idea because it would lead to competition among individual schools. Another objection goes to the separation of church and state: Could the vouchers be used to send children to religious schools?

Set these old arguments aside. Of greater importance is Alexander's corollary idea of giving each individual school "the precious freedom of autonomy," with its own governing board of teachers, parents and students. This is exactly in line with the thinking of John Chubb and Seymour Fliegel in the pamphlet they have prepared for the Center for Educational Innovation.

Chubb is a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution. He was in charge of a massive study of 500 randomly selected high schools across the country. Fliegel formerly was deputy superintendent of East Harlem's School District Four. He brought a freedom-of-choice plan to the rundown and dispirited schools of his district and achieved amazing results.

From the mountain of data Chubb accumulated, he was able to draw conclusions on what works and what fails in public education. The study looked at such variables as per pupil expenditures, teacher salaries, class size, graduation requirements and homework assignments. In terms of academic achievement, none of these seemed to matter. There was no correlation.

But an intangible quality was found to matter greatly. The successful schools had a sense of academic vision. Teachers knew where they wanted to take their students. Strong principals, oriented toward education rather than administration, provided vigorous leadership. Teachers were left free to tailor their practices to the needs of their students.

"The key determinant, more important than anything else, turned out to be autonomy. Successful schools were relatively independent of external influence by administrators, superintendents, central office bureaucrats and union officials."

Fliegel pulled off his miracle in East Harlem by instituting a plan of parental choice at the junior high school level. Within District Four he established a wide variety of educational opportunities. Each school augments a core curriculum with offerings in a particular field — sports, performing arts, maritime studies, science and math. One school is almost a "military academy."

The results have been spectacular. District Four once was dead last in reading and math. No more. School attendance has soared, and the number of dropouts has plummeted. The principle of freedom of choice demonstrably works.

It may be an exercise in futility to fight for a plan of school based upon tuition vouchers. Never mind. The goal of greater autonomy and less bureaucracy is a sound goal. Moreover, it doesn't call for new billions of dollars. In the world of public education, it's a happy thought.

Trembling hands hold our lives

In Colombia, South America, the drug lords play for keeps.

They've just killed another judge who dared to challenge them. That makes three in two weeks. They've killed 250 judges in 10 years.

They've also triggered 260 bombs in the last three months killing hundreds of people.

It is this country that our President will visit on Feb. 15.

He is that determined to demonstrate his concern for the drug problem and his support for the Barco government.

The success of this regional drug summit should be the subject of worldwide prayers. We've tried everything else.

Members of Congress resort to frustration to their traditional response to every problem — throw some more of your money at it.

Sen. Joe Biden wants a billion dollars "to develop new treatments" for drug addicts.

Responding to drug-related crime in Washington, D.C., Congress has approved 700 more policemen for the district.

A New York federal judge, Robert Sweet, says our court system is so overwhelmed by drug cases that he sees no alternative but to legalize drug use.

Drug czar Bill Bennett says such a move would turn us into a "nation of zombies."

We already have a head start in that direction. A recent Gallup Poll reveals that one-fourth of U.S. workers know of co-workers who use illegal drugs on the job.

It's a terrible thing when a Brooklyn teacher of physical education is caught dealing drugs.

Or when a Chicago boy of 15 is caught carrying thousands of dollars' worth of cocaine and a machine gun.

But worse even than these frightening examples is the fact that 375,000 American babies were born in 1989 addicted to drugs. Many or most of them will be a life-long problem to themselves and to society.

Already our 5 percent of the planet's population consumes 50 percent of the world's cocaine.

And on-the-job misuse includes airline personnel.

The newly created Institute For A Drug-Free Workplace succeeded in getting our government to begin drug testing of aviation employees, but firms which have already tried such testing are painfully aware of the manner in which artful dodgers escape detection.

Also in 1989 the United States spent almost half of its anti-drug budget ($41 million) on drug crop control, yet the harvest increased.

It's time to get rid of our drug czar

By CHUCK STONE

The time has come, the walrus said/To talk of many things./Of shoes and ships and sealing wax/And clipping Bill Bennett's wings.

My paraphrase of Lewis Carroll's delightful doggerel may rhyme, but the issue is far more critical than clipping the wings of the nation's drug czar, William J. Bennett. What can the American people do to persuade President Bush to get rid of his taurine tornado before he goes the drug war into shameful impotence?

So far, Bennett has shown as much effectiveness as a drug czar as Manuel Noriega has displayed as a military strategist. Instead of enlisting the energies of the American people into fighting drug dealers, Bennett has antagonized most groups into fighting him.

A few weeks ago, Bennett spoke at Harvard University and sunk to the same reckless trashing of academia that characterized his tenure as secretary of education. Alluding to "the great public-policy debate over drugs," Bennett began by insulting his audience and accusing them of having "little to contribute ... and little that has been mentally distinguished."

The director of the National Office of Drug Control Policy may be emotionally distraught over the growing number of respectable voices in academia, the public sector, the judiciary and the legislatures urging the legalization of drugs. But he wins no converts nor does he add any new adherents to his cause when he rhetorically foams at the mouth instead of dissecting his opponents' arguments with hard facts and cold logic. And both of those persistently elude him.

I share his staunch opposition to drug legalization. The proponents of this monstrous surrender to criminals do not go far enough. Why stop at merely legalizing drugs? Why not advocate that we give every school-boy and girl some marijuana seeds, encourage them to grow marijuana plants in their backyards and turn our nation into a swinging cesspool of junkies!

Fortunately for all of us, the overwhelming majority of the American people oppose drug legalization. Yet, several eminent scholars have marshaled a copious array of facts and data to make a case for it. One of the most skillful is Dr. Ethan A. Nadelman of Princeton University. His scholarly articles advocating drug legalization have elicited praise and support from many prominent Americans representing a broad ideological spectrum. Bennett is afraid to publicly debate Nadelman. Instead, he has resorted to argumentum ad litteram, as he did at Harvard.

What little success America has achieved in its war on drugs to date is due to a combination of three factors: government agencies — the FBI, the Drug Enforcement Administration, Defense Department and Justice Department — all acting independently of Bennett's office; foreign governments' interdiction efforts, such as the sensational killing of a powerful Columbia drug overlord; and individual community efforts.

Community efforts, when they are well-organized, have been especially successful. They include community patrols in Providence, RI.; neighborhood volunteer groups in Houston; block clubs in San Francisco; "Brotherhood Crusades" in Los Angeles; Catholic priest-led boycotts of Chicago neighborhood stores that sell drug paraphernalia; Nation of Islam members in Washington, D.C.; low-income housing projects driving drug dealers away; and a powerful coalition of Kansas City, Mo., black men, the Ad Hoc Group Against Crime, which has helped to close down 54 crack houses.

To the collectivity of these combined efforts, William J. Bennett has not contributed what my grandmother would have called "doodly squat." His effectiveness with Congress is zero. Only George Bush believes he's doing a good job.

The time has come, the walrus said, to get rid of William J. Bennett — and let the people take over the war against drugs.

Soviet officers had warned Gorbachev against sending troops to Azerbaijan

By CAREY GOLDBERG
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Two senior Soviet officers in Baku warned President Mikhail S. Gorbachev hours before he sent troops into the Azerbaijani capital that an assault would turn the people against the army and ethnic Russians, a newspaper said today.

The two officers, top officials at a Baku military academy, said in a telegram Jan. 19 that bringing in troops would lead "to a total break in relations and put (the soldiers') families in danger," as well as "create a growth in the anti-Russian mood."

The telegram was reported in the Communist youth newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda.

Hours after the officers reportedly sent their telegram, Soviet troops stormed into the Azerbaijani capital to put down the nationalist uprising there and stop anti-Armenian rioting.

By latest count, 101 people have died since then, and more than 171 overall in the unrest that began with anti-Armenian riots two weeks ago.

Komsomolskaya Pravda said the dangers predicted by Col. A. Save-lyev and A. Rusakov have come about.

It added that more than 30,000 family members of Soviet soldiers have had to be evacuated.

The paper also ventured some of the first criticism printed in the official Soviet press of the troops in Baku, noting that dozens of people had been hospitalized with accidental shooting wounds blamed on the soldiers.

"We don't presume to advise the military, but after all, there are other means of 'imposing order,'" it said. "Professionals are needed, who know how to fulfill their tasks, but not at any price."

Also today, Azerbaijani activists said police had staged two raids on the Azerbaijani government's building in Moscow overnight and arrested a leader of the nationalist Azerbaijani People's Front, Ekhtibar Mamedov.

Activist Shain Gajiyev said commandos charged into the government mission at 3 a.m., searched it and herded some 40 Azerbaijani men into buses.

But he said all were released except Mamedov, who gained attention recently by claiming there were far more people killed in the assault on Baku than officials have said.

Police spokesmen said they had not been informed of any such raid, but a visit by an Associated Press reporter revealed several broken-down doors and a chaos of scattered documents in the offices.

In Baku, military commandant Lt. Gen. Vladimir Dubinyak said this morning the situation was "relatively calm," the Soviet news agency Tass reported.

Moscow's telephone connections to Armenia and Azerbaijan were down this morning, and operators said no calls could go through until at least evening. The areas are closed to foreign reporters.

Tass said that in the last 24 hours, 147 people had been detained in Baku either for breaking curfew or other violations, and two newspapers were banned by the military authorities.

It said troops had not used weapons on Thursday, but Komsomolskaya Pravda said two people were killed in Baku when an armored personnel carrier ran over a car.

Shooting also continued around a barracks where, according to some reports, Azerbaijani troops are fighting Soviets.

Military authorities have denied that the Azerbaijanis in the barracks turned against the army.

Strikes continued to paralyze much of Baku's transport and industry, but Soviet media reported that many stores had re-opened for the first time since the Jan. 20 assault. Azerbaijanis have pledged not to end their strikes until Soviet troops withdraw.

There were no reports on whether a cease-fire, agreed to Thursday by belligerents in the Nakhichevan region, was being observed.

The Soviet army has said it is prepared to enforce the peace in Nakhichevan, a section of Azerbaijan cut off from the main part of the republic and bordered by Armenia, Iran and Turkey.

Militants in Nakhichevan tore down hundreds of miles of border fortifications with Iran several weeks ago in a prelude to the latest clashes in the two-year-old dispute between the republics over Nagorno-Karabakh, a predominantly Armenian enclave in Azerbaijan.

Wind storms rip across Europe, leaving at least 73 people dead

By MICHAEL WEST
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — A storm with winds of up to 110 mph tore across southern England and Western Europe, killing at least 73 people in six countries as it ripped off roofs, caused buildings to cave in and brought trees crashing down on cars and pedestrians.

Britain, with 45 dead, was the worst hit Thursday. "London is virtually at a standstill," Scotland Yard said at one stage as air, bus, subway and train services halted and rain came through the wind-damaged roof of Parliament.

Police reports said 11 people died in Holland, six in France, six in Belgium, four in Denmark and one in West Germany.

The storm swept in from the Atlantic Thursday morning, cutting a trail of destruction across the continent before turning northeast and heading out into the North Sea at night.

A reactor chimney was blown down at the Paluel nuclear power plant in France. State-owned Electricite de France said the plant was shut down immediately and any possible hazards would be monitored.

In London, the storm ripped off roofs, scaffolding and advertising billboards. Pedestrians clung to each other trying to keep upright. About 250,000 people in western England were without electricity.

British Airways suspended flights from Heathrow Airport Thursday afternoon and ferry services were suspended across the English Channel and disrupted between Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Rail commuters faced long delays getting to London this morning as many trains were canceled and others were delayed.

Police said major British highways were open but some secondary routes were still blocked by fallen trees.

The Independent newspaper said insurers put early estimates of damage to property in Britain at more than $1.3 billion.

The Dutch coast guard reported a Soviet fishing vessel with 56 people aboard in trouble off the north coast. The Defense Ministry in the Netherlands said three navy helicopters and two lifeboats were in the area to offer help.

Those killed in Belgium included a woman and her child who died when a tree crashed on their car near Brussels. A man riding a bicycle was killed after he was swept under a truck in Torhout, western Belgium, in winds that peaked at 105 mph, authorities said.

Elsewhere in Belgium, where sea, train and road traffic was either halted or seriously hampered by the storm, a 72-year-old man who climbed on his roof to estimate damage was blown to his death in Sint Niklaas.

A 56-year-old man died from a heart attack after he also climbed to his roof in Horion-Hozemont.

Winds caused severe damage in West Germany, particularly in coastal Schleswig-Holstein and Lower Saxony states. A 53-year-old man was swept off his bicycle near Aurich in Lower Saxony and run over by a car, police said. The man was rushed to a hospital but died of his injuries.

Six people were reported killed in France, including a 12-year-old girl crushed when wind blew down a wall in a school courtyard, and 11 in the Netherlands.

Dozens of people were reported injured along France's northern coast and hundreds of thousands were left without power.

Police said winds that reached 110 mph blew roofs away, tore down power lines, chimneys and silos, and blocked roads with the rubble.

Dutch television said one of the victims in Holland was a man killed in Binnenmaas village while trying to secure his windmill against the storm.

Klaas Wiltling, spokesman for the Amsterdam police, described the city as "a madhouse."

CDC reports widespread flu epidemic

ATLANTA (AP) — A flu epidemic has hit the United States with outbreaks reported this winter "just about everywhere," a Centers for Disease Control researcher said.

A key indicator — a deaths-from-flu index — is at its highest level in at least eight years, CDC researchers said Thursday.

Flu is reported "widespread" in 18 states and "regional" outbreaks are reported in 17 more states, the CDC said in its weekly report.

Last week, 7.6 percent of 15,090 deaths reported to the CDC from 121 major cities were blamed on flu or pneumonia.

That "significantly exceeds" expected levels for the second straight week, said Dr. Walter Gunn, a CDC viral disease specialist.

"This qualifies in our definition as an epidemic," Gunn said.

The CDC's epidemic level is 6.7 percent. The 7.6 percent figure is the worst since the winter of 1981-82, Gunn said.

Most of the flu samples reported to the CDC this winter have been the type which researchers call A-H3N2. That was the predominant type in the 1984-85 flu season, when an estimated 57,000 Americans died from flu — 37,000 more than in the typical winter, Gunn said.

"As far as how many people will die" this flu season, "that depends on how long this peak is sustained," Gunn said. "With any luck, it will come right back down."

Flu symptoms should be careful not to treat them with aspirin, which has been linked in flu cases to Reye's syndrome, a rare but potentially deadly disease.

The 18 states with widespread flu outbreaks are Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Missouri, South Dakota, Nebraska, Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Oklahoma, Texas, Montana, Idaho and Arizona.

Odessan recalls life in the oil patch

By MARIA DE VARENNE
The Odessa American

ODESSA (AP) — Stretching his arms high above his head, then bending down toward the floor, John Kovach demonstrated his calisthenics routine.

"I do it every day, and it keeps the charley horses out of my legs," Kovach said.

He's known as "Johnnie" to his friends, a youthful name that belies his age of 90.

Kovach has seen all of the booms and busts in the oil patch during the 56 years that he's lived in Odessa.

He grew up in Kansas, but moved to Wichita Falls in May 1919 and landed a job with Continental Supply Co., an oil field supply firm.

"Business was booming. We didn't have good roads or many of them back then, so people just started building up towns in the fields near the wells," Kovach said.

He moved with the company, opening up new stores as the oil boom and bust cycles forced budding towns to grow, then die.

"I saw the Burkburnett boom, the Ranger boom, then I went on to Breckenridge," Kovach said.

Cable-tool rigs and wooden derricks started dotting the flat Texas landscape near Breckenridge in the early 1920s.

That's when Kovach met Carl Cromwell, who was drilling a wildcat well in Reagan County that later became renowned as the Santa Rita No. 1, the first oil well on University of Texas lands.

Cromwell purchased equipment to use while drilling the Santa Rita from Kovach's Continental store.

"That's my main claim to any pioneering — selling those supplies to Cromwell," Kovach said as his eyes lighted up.

After the Santa Rita started to gush, Continental sent Kovach to open a store in Best.

"We worked 24 hours a day. I lived over the store, and many times a customer would wake me up in the middle of the night to get supplies to keep the rig going," Kovach said.

"After the discovery of the Big Lake field, wildcatting took off in all directions," Kovach said, noting that Continental built stores in Big Spring, Coleman, Pyote and Hobbs, N.M.

"In those days we all used steam rigs, but the bad water caused the boilers to corrode up so fast that we converted to gas engines, then diesel engines, then diesel electric ones," Kovach said, noting that rotary rigs quickly replaced the cable-tool rigs.

The store in Best closed in 1934, and Kovach moved to Odessa, paying $750 for a house on Lee Street.

"Some people told me it was the first one ever built here. I don't know if it's true, but it sure was in bad shape so it might have been," Kovach said. The home was demolished years ago.

He continued working for Continental, moving up to division manager while working throughout New Mexico and Texas.

Kovach moved to his home in Golder Avenue before retiring from Continental in 1964.

"This was all pasture land when I moved here, and there wasn't a stop light in town," he said. "I never thought it would get this big."

Kovach has watched Odessa grow from an oil field town of 3,500 in the 1930s to a sprawling city of 99,900 today.

He also witnessed a technological surge in the oil industry along the way.

"When I first started out, you had two-man crews working 12-hour days on the cable-tool drilling rigs, and a lot of times the owner was the toolpusher," Kovach said.

"I made a lot of good friends in the oil fields. They're all good people, but they were characters. Some were wild as could be. They'd drink a lot, play a lot and work like hell," he said.

"Now I know very few of the new people that have taken over the oil industry. Most of the old-timers have passed away, and a lot of people left the oil industry when the last boom went bust," Kovach said.

Many of the independent oilmen went bankrupt or got out of the business during the mid-1980s.

"It takes 1,000 times the money or more to be in the business today than it did in the early years. It's a different ballgame today," he said.

"Everybody now has to have a high degree in geology or engineering. Now you push a button, and everything is computerized or automated instead of throwing a jaw clutch that would almost pull your arm off," he said.

"I've been retired for 25 years, but this new horizontal drilling technique looks very good," Kovach said. "It's the one thing that might bring some optimism back to the fields."

In body shapes, pears are healthier

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Having a big potbelly is bad for cholesterol, and this could explain why, when it comes to body shapes, pears are better than apples, according to a study published today.

"When patients come in, we advise them to lose weight," said Dr. Richard E. Ostlund Jr. "This paper suggests that more important than that is how the fat is distributed."

Researchers have long noticed that folks with big spare tires tend to have an especially high risk of heart trouble, but the reason was unclear. Ostlund's study, in New England Journal of Medicine, suggests that people with beefy hips and trim waists have higher levels of a protective form of cholesterol called HDL than do those with potbellies and small behinds.

The study of healthy elderly people, conducted at Washington University School of Medicine, found that body shape alone could account for a large portion of the differences in people's HDL cholesterol levels.

"This may have tremendous importance to the average American, because we all tend to bulge out in this way," said Dr. William Castelli, director of the long-running Framingham Heart Study in suburban Boston.

HDL — high density lipoprotein — is the so-called good cholesterol. The more people have in their blood, the lower their chances of heart attacks. Women typically have higher HDL levels than men. As they grow older, women also tend to put on weight around the hips, while men are more prone to growing big tummies.

Tummy fat surrounds the intestines, and its blood supply drains directly to the liver, he said. "The liver is sensitive to things that fat cells put out. The metabolism of the liver may be changed because of the intra-abdominal fat," including the liver's production of HDL.

The blood from hip fat, which is just underneath the skin, does not drain directly to the liver and so has less impact on the way it works, he said.

"The bottom line for the middle-aged and elderly is: Don't let that spare tire get you around the waist," said Castelli. "Get out and exercise and diet."

However, Ostlund said dieting is a hard way to tackle the problem, since fat patterns may be established at birth.

"It's very hard to change your waist-to-hip ratio," Ostlund said. "You can do it if you lose a massive amount of weight, but losing 10 to 20 pounds doesn't change it very much."

Judge denies request for leniency in fraud charge

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A request for a reduction in the sentence and restitution imposed on the former president of Southeastern Oklahoma State University for his convictions on fraud charges has been denied.

U.S. District Judge Ralph

Thompson said in his order denying the request made by Leon Hibbs, 59, that the sentence was not unreasonable, unlawful, unjust or inappropriate.

Hibbs was convicted in June on 38 federal mail fraud counts and one count of defrauding an insurance company. He is serving his sentence at a federal prison camp at Big Spring, Texas.

D.C. Thomas, Hibbs' attorney, had asked the court last week to have Hibbs' 10-year sentence and the $3.4 million restitution ordered by Thompson reduced.

Join Us In Worship

In The Church Of Your Choice

Man has been seeking the answer to many questions since the beginning of time. Volumes of books, and encyclopedias have been filled with facts in answer to this quest for knowledge. Even with all of this wealth of information, there is much to be learned, and man will never know all of the answers. However in spiritual matters, God has provided us with a book, filled with valuable information. This book is man's guide to his relationship with God. For a better understanding of God's word and his will for your life attend church, so that others may help you in this search.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: As he approached Jerusalem and saw the city, he wept over it and said, "If you, even you, had only known on this day what would bring you peace - but now it is hidden from your eyes." (Luke 19:41 NIV)

For a few, sweet years I had a rare gift - a mother-in-law whom I adored. In fact, I fell in love with Sadie before I fell in love with her son, and she returned my affection. Sadie had always dreamed of having a daughter, but as God would have it, I was her first chance to have one.

Sadie saw my marriage into the family as a chance to do all the mother/daughter things she had wanted to do for so long. Though her finances were very limited, she bought me gifts. I had mixed emotions about the gifts. I knew she gave them out of love, and I knew she had sacrificed something she could have had for herself in order to buy for me.

I appreciated her thoughtfulness and generosity, but I was raised to be sensitive to the limited resources of others and to never put them in a financial bind. As a result, I was uncomfortable with Sadie's sacrifice and anxious for her to know she didn't have to buy me gifts. Eventually, my resistance caused Sadie to stop giving me gifts except on special occasions.

Now that I'm "older and wiser," I realize Sadie gave gifts to me because she received joy from the giving. I greatly regret having deprived her of that pleasure.

We have a Savior who sacrificed to give us a gift. The price was awesome - his life; the gift is incomprehensible - eternity in his presence. He freely gives such expensive grace because he derives holy joy from the giving.

In our unworthiness, we are spiritually uncomfortable with Christ's sacrifice; in our discomfort, too often his gift is rejected.

If his generosity is resisted long enough, he eventually quits pressing his grace where it isn't wanted. Christ turns away brokenhearted, and the resisters spend forever in excruciating regret.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Men are far more likely than women to be asked to lead public prayers at Southern Baptist worship services, according to a new survey.

Men are asked 83 percent of the time to lead public prayers, while women are asked 15 percent of the time, according to the 334 pastors who responded to a survey sent out by the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board.

CHICAGO (AP) - The eight seminaries of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America are facing a financial crisis and need a coordinated effort to build their endowments, according to one seminary president.

Roger W. Fjeld, president of Wartburg Theological Seminary in Dubuque, Iowa, said four seminaries recorded deficits in the last school year, and six project deficits for this school year.

"Those seminaries which experienced deficits in fiscal year 1988-89 used up nearly half of their reserves in order to meet current expenses. The remaining reserves of those seminaries are likely to be used in the current year," Fjeld said at a board meeting of the church's Division for Ministry.

DUNEDIN, New Zealand (AP) - The Anglican Church in New Zealand has elected the first woman diocesan bishop in the world-wide Anglican communion. The Rev. Peulope Ann Bansall Jamieson is to head the diocese of Dunedin.

Her election came about a year after the election of the Rev. Barbara C. Harris as suffragan, or assistant, to the Episcopal bishop of Massachusetts. The Episcopal Church is among 28 national provinces of world Anglicanism.

Arab Baptists bring their militant evangelism to Texas

By JIM JONES
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH (AP) — The infectious, bouncy rhythms of Middle Eastern music soared through the chapel as an Arab Baptist revival meeting, possibly Texas' first, went into full swing.

"Halleluia, Fa-howal Ella," the small congregation sang in Arabic at University Baptist Church. "Wa Howa Alla-qualde Dow-man Yasued."

The words in English meant, "He is Lord and he is always in my heart."

The Rev. Fayiz Saknini, a Baptist evangelist who grew up in Nazareth, the childhood home of Jesus, pounded the pulpit in emotional free-wheeling Baptist fashion. But his words were Arabic.

"Life without hope is sad. It is hell on earth," Saknini said through an interpreter.

"Without Jesus we have no hope," he told about 50 worshippers at the meeting last fall.

The Arab revival was probably the first in Texas, said the Rev. Raouf Ghattas, pastor of the Arab mission at University Baptist.

Ghattas said the goal of the revival was to reach the growing Arab population that in recent years has increased to more than 30,000 in the Fort Worth-Dallas area.

Most Arabs are Muslims, he said, but many have a Christian background.

Ghattas, 43, grew up in a Christian home in Cairo, Egypt, as a member of the Presbyterian faith. Now he is a Baptist seeking a master's degree in theology at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth.

Ghattas wants to be a Christian missionary in the Middle East, serving with the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board.

But he hopes to reach fellow Arabs in this area, too.

A poster in his office at University Baptist, printed in Arabic and English, says, "We will not rest until all the Arabs of Fort Worth hear about Jesus."

The Arab mission, which has special classes in Arabic language and culture, has grown from five to 50 members since it was founded in 1985. Most of the growth came in the last year, Ghattas said.

Ghattas has an Arab Christian radio broadcast carried on KVTT-FM 91.7 at 6 p.m. on Sundays. He said it is the only Arab Christian program in the state.

Ghattas acknowledges that most Arabs in the area are Muslims, noting that there are five Islamic mosques in Fort Worth and Dallas.

"I have visited the mosque in Fort Worth, and I have very good relations with my Muslim friends," Ghattas said.

During the revival meeting, Shaun Shorosh, a native of Lebanon now studying at Southwestern seminary to be a Christian missionary, spoke softly into a microphone as he translated the Arabic words for English-speaking visitors wearing earphones. Those without earphones sat near Shorosh to hear his translations.

His wife, Amal Shorosh, also a seminary student, played the piano and sang with the church's music director, Nizar Haddad, who also attends the seminary. Shaun Shorosh's father, Fu'ad Shorosh, is a Baptist preacher in Tennessee.

Saknini travels the nation preaching and is an employee of the Southern Baptist Home Mission Board based in Atlanta.

"To reach Arab people, you have to love them," Saknini said. "You avoid insulting them by preaching negatively. If they are of Muslim background, you try to emphasize what you have in common with them."

When speaking to Arabs about Christianity, he uses Arabic words, such as "Allah" for God and "Yeshua" for Jesus.

All Arabs, he said, are born into a religious faith. Usually that faith is Muslim, but sometimes their background is in a Christian faith, such as the Coptic, Orthodox or Maronite Catholic churches of the Middle East.

Even if Arabs aren't practicing the faith they followed in the Middle East, they find it hard to change to a Western-style Christianity, Saknini said.

Many are skeptical of Western Christians, because they still remember learning about the crusades of the Middle Ages, when Arabs of all faiths were killed.

Also, they are affected by loyalties to their native Arab nations and know that Western Christians usually have supported Israel in Arab-Israeli political conflicts, he said.

Becoming a Christian convert often means sacrificing family ties, said Nomie Derani, a former Muslim from Lebanon who is a member of the Arab Baptist mission and a student at Southwestern seminary.

"My family hasn't spoken to me in nine years," she said.

During the revival meeting, Saknini, whose brother Fu'ad Saknini is pastor of the Baptist Church in Nazareth, had a reunion with the Rev. Finlay Graham and his wife, Julia, who retired in 1986 after 40 years as Baptist missionaries to Lebanon.

Finlay Graham was in charge of missionaries in the Middle East and founded the seminary in Lebanon where Saknini studied. Graham now is an adjunct professor at Southwestern Seminary.

"Our Muslim friends are militantly evangelistic," Graham said,

"and they are doing a lot more than Christians in many places to rehabilitate ex-convicts and fight drugs."

The greatest concentration of Arab Christians in the United States, Saknini said, is around Los Angeles, where there are more than 20 congregations.

Boston, New York, Detroit and Fort Worth-Dallas also have large concentrations of Arabs.

Saknini said the Muslim faith, which claims about 900 million adherents worldwide, is growing rapidly in the United States.

"The Arab nations are sending their petrodollars to win America to Islam," he said. "We can't take the Muslim religion lightly."

Yvonne Haddad, a Muslim scholar who is professor of history at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, said there are no accurate estimates of the Muslim population in the United States.

Conservative estimates say 3 million to 4 million, but some estimate as many as 9 million, Haddad said.

Ghattas moved to the United States in 1976. He was a nuclear physicist, working at Glen Rose's Comanche Peak nuclear power plant, before deciding to go into the Christian ministry.

He earned about $70,000 a year as a nuclear physicist, he said. Now he earns $12,000 a year as a mission pastor, paid by the Baptist Home Mission Board.

"Money doesn't mean a lot to me," he said.

Author Evelyn Christenson to lead seminar at Levelland

LEVELLAND — Evelyn Christenson, best-selling author who travels widely sharing Biblical principles on personal change, will speak Saturday, Feb. 10, in Levelland.

Mrs. Christenson, author of such books as What Happens When Women Pray and What Happens When God Answers, will speak on the topic "Lord, Change Me," also the topic of one of her books.

Her books have sold over 2 million copies.

The non-denominational seminar is open to all women throughout West Texas and is sponsored by 11 churches in Levelland and one in Littlefield.

The seminar begins with late registration from 8:15 to 8:45 a.m. and will conclude at 3:45 p.m. at the First Baptist Church, located at 510 Ave. C in Levelland.

"We'd like to invite all women to attend the seminar," said Debbie Davis, chairman of the seminar's steering committee. "Mrs. Christenson is a nationally known speaker who really inspires and encourages her audiences."

Registration fee is $9.50. Interested persons should contact officials at their church or mail a check to Flo Langford, seminar treasurer, at 1706 Ave. G, Levelland, TX 79336. She may be contacted at 1-894-3272.

Christenson conducts prayer seminars throughout the world and is a board member of Chuck Colson's Prison Fellowship. She also is the organizer and chairman of the board of United Prayer Ministries, a non-profit organization that operates a non-denominational prayer chain for the twin cities area in Minnesota. Christenson, the wife of a former minister, is a homemaker and grandmother.

"I struggled alone with God for 14 months, allowing him to change me," she explains in her book, Lord, Change Me. "All during this time, he was clearly putting the emphasis on me, not anybody else. God used seven methods to teach me how he wanted me to change and how he would provide the direction and the means for my changing. This is an on-going process of becoming more like Christ until we see him face-to-face."

Christenson's seminar will begin at 9 a.m. and will include six sessions with titles "Why Me, Lord?", "Changing Through Reading God's Word Devotionally," "Changing Through Studying the Bible," "Changing Through the Holy Spirit Recalling Scripture," "Changing Through Three Methods of Prayer" and "Four Sources of Wisdom Changing Us."

Seminar participants should bring a sack lunch. No nursery will be provided.

Sponsoring churches are the First Presbyterian, First Assembly of God, First Christian, South Plains, Grace Baptist, Fifth Street Baptist, St. Michael's Catholic Church, College Avenue Baptist, First Baptist, Word of Life, Church of the Nazarene and First United Methodist, all of Levelland, and the First United Methodist Church of Littlefield.

For more information, interested persons should contact their pastor, women's church group or Debbie Davis, chairman of the seminar steering committee, at 1-894-6915.

Instructors should not date students

DEAR ABBY: I speak from 15 years' experience supervising more than 100 graduate teaching assistants and counseling their students at Colorado State University. At best, a romantic relationship with a student is a conflict of interest. The instructor may be inclined to assign a better grade in an effort to enhance the relationship. Even if he's fair, the other students will suspect favoritism.

For the student, the conflict can be devastating. If she turns down a request for a date or refuses his advances, will it affect her grade? At worst, such a relationship can cross the fine line between poor judgment and sexual harassment.

The solution is simple: Instructors should not date students. If there is a mutual attraction, they should wait until the very end of the instructor-student relationship — when he is free to ask her for a date, and she is free to tell him to get lost. (Four of my teaching assistants eventually married former students!)

Does the end of the semester seem too long to wait? Too bad. That's professionalism. Psychologists shouldn't date their patients, and instructors shouldn't date their students, for similar reasons. So please, Abby, tell all those lovesick instructors out there to cool it until Juliet is in a less vulnerable position.

J.G. WADE JR.,
PROFESSOR OF CHEMISTRY,
WHITMAN COLLEGE,
WALLA WALLA, WASH.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR DR. WADE: You are obviously an expert on chemistry — of all kinds. And now let's hear it from the voice of experience:

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to "Heart of Texas," the 29-year-old college lab assistant who felt a mutual attraction to his pretty, bright student, was too wishy-washy; maybe I can share my experience.

While in graduate school, a fellow student (a good friend I'll call Dora) and I were enrolled in a course together.

During the semester, Dora became involved with the professor — a 40-year-old man. When the course ended, the professor ended their relationship. Dora was crushed.

I still remember going to Dora's apartment at midnight to talk her out of committing suicide. She's fine now, but it taught me a big lesson.

Students run the risk of getting hurt if they become involved with instructors. Likewise, professors' feelings can be hurt, too, not to mention the possibility of an unscrupulous student threatening blackmail for a better grade — or even money. Even though they both may be consenting adults, it's best to stay away from the other side of the desk.

JOE IN NEBRASKA

DEAR JOE: You're right. If a student and professor become mutually attracted, they should put their relationship on "hold" until she (or he) is no longer a student. If they're right for each other, it will last.

DEAR ABBY: You have always said, "There is no such thing as a 'stupid question' — if a person doesn't know the answer to something, it's smart to ask," so here goes:

I know that "B.C." after a date, such as "44 B.C.," stands for "before Christ," but what does "A.D." stand for, as in "1644 A.D.?"

STUDENT, KODIAK, ALASKA
DEAR STUDENT: The "A.D." stands for "anno Domini," which is Latin for "in the year of our Lord." (Incidentally, the "B.C." should be placed after the date, and "A.D." before the date. So your example should be "A.D. 1644.")

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for supporting the widow who started dating three months after her husband's death.

My mother lost her mate to cancer after a long illness. They went everywhere together for 35 years. Mother was very dependent upon him, and yet when the terminal verdict came in, she was the strongest member of the whole family. She refused to let Dad vegetate in a hospital. She learned how to nurse him at home. She held his hand day and night until he died and she never complained. (She said, "I would do it forever if I could.")

Abby, three months after Dad died, Mother met someone and started dating him, and I thank God every day for that man! They married less than a year later. Many people thought that Mother's marrying so soon after Dad's death showed a lack of respect for his memory. But her second marriage was not meant to replace her first; it was to be in addition to it.

This marriage has given us, her children, a friend — and our children a grandfather. It possibly saved our mother's life, and we dare anyone to say one word against her. She paid her dues.

NEW YORKERS

DEAR NEW YORKERS: You said it very well. Life is for the living. The time to show respect for one's spouse is while that spouse is living. I vote with you.

Revamped Broncos face tuned-up 49ers

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS — The 49ers' coach is new. So are most of the Broncos' defensive coaches.

San Francisco uses running back Tom Rathman on more pass patterns. Denver uses two new running backs, Bobby Humphrey and Mel Bratton, almost all the time.

Otherwise, the NFL champion 49ers aren't much different from the team that beat Cincinnati in last year's Super Bowl.

Otherwise, the Broncos are, well, vastly different from the team that lost the 1987 and 1988 Super Bowls.

The NFC and AFC champions took divergent routes getting to Sunday's game.

With the rather large exception of George Seifert replacing Bill Walsh as head man, the 49ers haven't done much more than tinker.

The Broncos revamped their defense and restructured the offense.

"Last season, when we finished 8-8, what was more of a concern was how badly we lost four of those games," Coach Dan Reeves said. "In previous years, we had been competitive even when we lost. We were not competitive in those four games."

"We evaluated the situation and knew we had to do everything we could to build it back up."

First, Reeves made the toughest decision, firing defensive coordinator Joe Collier and most of his assistants. Then he hired Wade Phillips to install a simplified, more aggressive defense.

"It was a very difficult thing to do, but a change that had to be made," Reeves said.

Next, the Broncos aggressively used Plan B free agency, under which players not protected by their teams could look for employment elsewhere, and wound up with three key contributors in cornerback Wymon Henderson and defensive end Alphonso Carreker, both starters, and backup receiver Michael Young.

"We had no idea with Plan B," Reeves said. "We couldn't prepare for it because we weren't sure about how it worked. But we always had been active in going after free agents and this was another avenue."

So, too, was the supplemental draft, through which the Broncos got Humphrey, who was coming off a career at Alabama cut short when he twice broke a bone in his left foot.

"We felt Bobby was a No. 1 pick," Reeves said. "Our doctors felt his foot would be OK. I didn't think he'd last but I guess there was a lot of concern about his foot."

"When we got him on the 17th pick, I wondered why others passed him up."

He needn't have concerned. Humphrey led all AFC rookies with 1,151 yards rushing.

Bratton was taken in the seventh round of the regular draft. The full-back missed a year after tearing up his knee in the 1988 Orange Bowl, in which Miami beat Oklahoma to win the national championship.

Denver coach Dan Reeves made some hard decisions when he overhauled the Broncos' defense.

Bratton didn't sign with the Miami Dolphins, who had taken him in the 1988 draft, and it wasn't until the 14th week of this season that he took over as the regular full-back.

"It's a great tribute to how hard he worked that Mel made it back," Reeves said.

Denver also traded down in the first round and, at No. 20, took Steve Atwater.

"We gambled a little bit with that move, but it paid off because Steve still was available and we got a No. 2 and a No. 5 and those players made the team," Reeves said.

Atwater solidified the secondary with his work at free safety. Warren Powers and Darren Carrington were the others involved in that deal who will suit up Sunday.

"It was something we had to do and that worked out for us," Reeves said of all the moves.

Netters open spring season on Saturday

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Editor

With last fall's regional playoff berth still fresh in the memory, Pampa High School's tennis team kicks off the spring season Saturday against District 1-4A foe Hereford.

Saturday's match is a fitting opener for the Pampa netters, whose only district setback in the fall was a 10-8 loss to Hereford. Pampa went on to defeat its next nine opponents, running its record to 9-1 overall to clinch second place in the district and earn a trip to regionals.

Once there, the Harvesters were defeated by top-seeded Waco Midway, 10-8, in the second round of the tournament. Pampa then downed Boswell High School in a practice match to finish the season with a 10-2 record.

It was the first regional berth for the Harvesters since 1985. Hereford, last fall's district champion, also bowed out of the regional tournament in the second round with a 10-8 loss to Lakeview.

Saturday's match is a chance for Pampa to even the score after last September's loss to the Herd.

"We want to use this match as a revenge match," said Pampa coach Jay Barrett. "Hereford handed us our first loss in the fall and we want to show that we don't have any anxiety about playing them. I think we were anxious the last time, but we've grown a lot over the season."

Unlike the last meeting between Pampa and Hereford, Saturday's showdown will have no bearing on the district standings. It will, however, have other, less visible effects.

"None of the matches really count until the district tournament in April," Barrett said. "What we're doing now is trying to get a good record for the seeding."

"Based upon the fall, we really have high hopes for the spring. I predict that of the 12 positions (that will qualify for the regional tournament), we have a good chance to get more than half of them. I think eight of our players have valid chances to go on to regionals."

While district standings are based upon team performance in the fall, competition is geared toward individual performances in spring tennis. In singles, the top two boys and girls from the district will advance to regionals, along with the top two boys and girls double teams.

District 1-4A is made up of nine schools, including Pampa, Hereford, Borger, Levelland, Frenship, Lubbock Estacado, Lubbock Dunbar, Randall and Dumas.

Saturday's matches are scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. at Hereford High School.

Below is a listing of Pampa's varsity players, their classifications and a schedule of matches:

Lady Harvesters battling Hereford for third

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Editor

When Pampa and Hereford met last on Dec. 19, the two teams were battling for third place in the girls' District 1-4A basketball picture.

That's still the case more than a month later as the Lady Harvesters prepare to host the Lady Whitefaces Friday night at 6:30 in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Entering the contest, Pampa trails Hereford by one-half game in the league standings. The Lady Harvesters stand at 6-5 in district play, 10-11 overall, while the Lady Whitefaces have a 7-5, 13-12 mark.

Friday's winner will take over third place with 4 games remaining.

Hereford defeated Pampa, 51-47, in the season's first meeting, although Lady Harvester coach Albert Nichols believes his team's performance was adversely affected by a circulating flu bug.

"I really think if we had been well in that last game, it would have been a different outcome," Nichols said.

This week, Pampa is fresh off a 61-59 loss to Panhandle on Tuesday, while Hereford suffered a 49-36 setback against league-leading Randall.

According to Nichols, Tuesday's game was a good indicator of where Pampa needs work.

"Our downfall was our free throws," Nichols said. "Anytime you shoot 22 free throws and hit only 11, you're not going to win the close game. If you look back over the games where we shot 70% from the foul line, those are the games we usually win."

In addition, the Lady Harvesters committed 10 more turnovers and attempted 20 fewer field goals than did Panhandle.

"I've harped on turnovers all year and they've come back to haunt us," Nichols said. "They killed us in our last two close games."

"As far as our shooting, we hit 55% from the floor, but we only took 44 shots," Nichols said. "We like to get 60 shots per game, so we've got to start going to the basket."

On Friday, Nichols is hoping to apply those lessons toward stopping the Lady Whitefaces, namely senior guard Stacy White and sophomore post Shantel Cornelius.

When Pampa and Hereford met in December, White took game-high scoring honors with 19 points, including two three-point shots. Cornelius, a 5-11 sophomore, finished with 12.

"We know what we have to do," Nichols said. "We've got to shut down that little guard (White) and that post player (Cornelius)."

Nikki Ryan poured in 17 points to lead the Lady Harvesters in that game, followed by Kristen Becker with 10, Sheila Reed with nine and Bridgett Mathis with seven.

Although the Lady Harvesters are a longshot for the playoffs, Nichols said he is looking forward to some top-knotch play during the last five games.

"We want to establish the momentum in the last part of the season and let it flow over into next year," he said.

Edberg, Lendl make a date for finals

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Stefan Edberg could only laugh when asked about the turning point in his Australian Open semifinals victory over fellow Swede Mats Wilander.

"The first point," he said with a smile, adding that he had "one of those days where I almost played perfect tennis."

Ivan Lendl might have given the same answer about his match with Yannick Noah, a 6-4, 6-1, 6-2 victory today that was only slightly less impressive than Edberg's 6-1, 6-1, 6-2 rout.

Together, defending champion Lendl and two-time former champion Edberg produced one of the most lopsided semifinals in Grand Slam history.

In the time it usually takes for one singles match, they disposed of their opponents and set up a date in the finals Sunday.

when the frustrated Frenchman charged the net, outdueling him from the baseline when Noah stayed back, and won in a tidy 1 hour, 47 minutes.

Lendl expects to use the same strategy in the finals, commandeering the baseline most of the time and coming to the net on occasion to keep Edberg guessing.

"Always when Stefan and I play, he will serve and volley and I play defense," Lendl said. I will try to fend him off. It depends on how much impression I make on his serve. If he holds at love or 15, he can take chances on my serve."

Edberg, handing Wilander the worst defeat in his 155 Grand Slam matches, put him away with merciful quickness in 1 hour, 22 minutes.

"I think I played as well as I could," Edberg said. "The key was I hit a lot of first serves today. I had great timing on my serves."

"Against Lendl, I think the key will be my serve again. If I can serve well and put a lot of pressure on him, I am always going to be able to hang in and get a chance in his serve games."

Edberg, the third seed, hit 80 percent of first serves in and put away 39 volley winners to Wilander's one.

"After a while you feel helpless," said the eighth-seeded Wilander, who left all his fight in his quarterfinals victory over No. 2 Boris Becker.

TV station reports NFL drug coverup League denies allegations, asks for names

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS — The NFL wants names. Joe Montana and John Elway say theirs aren't the ones.

Montana and Elway, the opposing quarterbacks in Sunday's Super Bowl, scrambled away from the shadow of suspicion Thursday after a Washington television station reported a league coverup of positive drug tests by three star quarterbacks.

San Francisco's Montana, who held a press conference just over four years ago to deny rumors of drug use, dismissed the WJLA report.

"I don't know anything about it," he said. "It doesn't concern me. I don't have a reaction. I know it's not me. In today's day and age, they're looking for a guy on top to take him down."

Denver's Elway said he wasn't worried about any drug list that might surface as a result of the report.

"I'm not going to be on it," he said.

The NFL angrily challenged the station to go further than the 14-minute segment it aired from consumer reporter Roberta Baskin.

"Name names," NFL spokesman Joe Browne said after the ABC affiliate claimed the NFL practiced "selective punishment," with some players disciplined while others are not.

"Where is the proof?" Browne asked. "If there are no names, there is no story."

The station claimed in its report that either the agents or the players involved confirmed that positive tests by the quarterbacks were ignored.

"One said the NFL simply ... 'forgot about it.' The second said he wasn't told. And the third said he was 'given a pass ... that a black defensive lineman might not have had."

Commissioner Paul Tagliabue, preparing for his State of the Sport address on Friday, appeared on CBS' "This Morning" and said, "The reports of preferential treatment are absurd. It's a smear on every white quarterback in the league, including the two great ones in this game."

"I don't believe they have names," Browne said. "I challenge them to put them on the air. If they name names, they have a better libel attorney than I thought they did."

Frank Herzog, the station's sports director, said WJLA had decided not to release the names because of issues of confidentiality, a policy the league itself has followed in the past.

Browne said the station's material was supplied by a former employee of Dr. Forest Tennant, the league's drug counselor, who sold a similar story to Sports Illustrated last summer.

"It has the same misleading information and the same half truths and rumors that were sold by the same fired employee of Dr. Tennant," Browne said.

Baskin's report quoted Gordon Griffith, identifying him as "the right-hand of NFL drug czar Dr. Forest Tennant ... part of his inner circle ... until a payroll dispute led to his being fired in June 1988."

Griffith said, "The team traiper may say to the quarterback, 'Hey there is a test coming up next Tuesday. Watch yourself over the weekend.' The black defensive lineman is not told the same thing."

That raised the issue of racism. Harry Edwards, a black sociologist who works as a consultant for San Francisco, derided the report.

"What does that mean?" he asked. "Was it a coverup? Was there anybody else? A linebacker? A wide receiver? An advisor? It's kind of a quagmire to pull out a category and say on top of it, 'They're all white.'"

The report charged that the NFL had a hit list and made an effort to get players like defensive end Dexter Manley and running back George Rogers, both blacks, out of the league, while other players were protected.

Browne denied those allegations.

"There is no random testing," he said. "To say players are targeted is absurd. The NFL has not covered up for anybody, whether the No. 1 player or the No. 45 player on the roster. There is no coverup and no preferential treatment. This is the lowest-rated TV news show in Washington, trying to make a name for itself."

"It took the station two months to report that of 30 suspended players, four are white," Browne said. "I could have told them that in two minutes."
