'Harvester' yearbook named as one of best in the nation

The 1989 Pampa High School yearbook has been recognized as one of the top 2 percent of all yearbooks printed last year by Taylor Publishing Co., the nation's leading publisher of school yearbooks.

And the 1990 yearbook has also received special recognition, Lynda Queen, yearbook advisor at PHS said. It has the distinction of being the only book to be published by Taylor that has incorporated every program Taylor makes into its production.

Taylor judges all the yearbooks it produces for excellence in cover design, theme development, page design, copywriting and special page design. The 1989 Harvester was selected for excellence in special page design. Examples of the Harvester will appear in The Yearbook Yearbook, Taylor's annual volume of the best in yearbook design and copywriting.

"These yearbooks go through a rigorous selection process," said Bruce Gerrity of Taylor's marketing department.

"This year we looked at more than 8,500 yearbooks from across the country. We can choose only about 150 books, so our standards must be high."

The majority of the 1990 book was done on Page Setter, a pilot program done on the Macintosh SE with disks shipped to Taylor to be printed on the Linotronic printer. The 1990 Harvester was also chosen by Taylor as a sample yearbook to be displayed across the nation.

The 1989 yearbook received top ratings from the Texas High School Press Association, the Interscholastic League Press Conference and the Columbia Scholastic Press Association.

Co-editors of the 1989 yearbook were Misty Guess and Jancee Thompson. Jesaka Long was managing editor of the book, which had a theme of "Special Delivery," using a postal look.

Co-editors of the 1990 yearbook are Guess and Long. Guess is the daughter of Mike and Brenda Guess. She is a senior, who plans to attend Texas Tech University and major in mass communications.

Long, a junior, is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Long. She won first place in District 4-A UIL feature writing as a freshman and has advanced to regionals the past two years.

Guess and Long, along with Laura Gilbert, senior Little Harvester newspaper news editor, will attend the Columbia Scholastic Press Association at Columbia University in New York with their advisor, Lynda Queen, on March 20-25.

Austin man shoots wife, daughter after watching 'Revenge' movie

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin man who apparently watched a movie the night before about a man who beat his wife after she had an affair shot and wounded his estranged wife and pregnant 14-year-old daughter and then killed himself, police said.

Police said Bartolo Botello Jr., 33, shot himself in the head Thursday seconds after wounding his wife, Judy Botello, 31, and their daughter, Vera Botello, who police said is three months pregnant.

The shootings came a day after Judy Botello had talked to police about seeking a protective order against her husband. Police said she had made an appointment for next Tuesday with the Travis County attorney's office to discuss seeking the court action.

Mrs. Botello told officers that her estranged husband had threatened violence against the woman and her family for leaving him, according to police Sgt. Michael Huckabay.

The teen-ager was unconscious and listed in critical condition late Thursday with a gunshot wound to the back of her head at Brackenridge Hospital. Her mother was in fair condition with a wound to her left hand and left thigh.

"It was one of those domestic (cases) that culminated in somebody getting killed," said Huckabay. "He wanted her back, and she didn't want to go back."

The Botellos separated last week, and Bartolo Botello bought the .25-caliber handgun used in the shootings about 3 p.m. Wednesday at a South Austin pawnshop, Huckabay said.

Police said Bartolo Botello took a bus to Austin News Agency Inc., where his wife worked as a clerk, early Thursday and forced his wife to come outside to her parked car, where Vera Botello was sleeping.

"I watched him pull her by the hair, very violently," said Jim Cochran, manager of the office. "It was just a real bad scene."

Mrs. Botello was shot inside the car and the daughter was shot as she ran from the car, witnesses said.

Huckabay said witnesses told police that the couple had argued before they separated and Botello had accused his wife of cheating on him.

Botello apparently saw the movie Revenge Wednesday night, Huckabay said. Officers found a ticket stub in his pocket.

Bush victim of hostage hoax in efforts to call Rafsanjani

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush was the victim of an elaborate hoax last month when he tried to speak by phone to Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani to discuss the release of U.S. hostages in Lebanon, the White House says.

An impostor, and not Rafsanjani or a representative of his government, was on the other end of the line, officials said.

"We don't really know" who was behind the prank, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said. "This was the first time that this has happened."

Fitzwater and other White House officials said the bizarre chain of events began when a man identifying himself as an Iranian government official called the White House to say that Rafsanjani wanted to talk to Bush about U.S. hostages held in Lebanon.

"The call came in, a number was given for us to call. We were suspicious and began checking," Fitzwater said. "But, ultimately, the president needed to make the call as part of the check. He did make the call."

The initial call came to national security adviser Brent Scowcroft, White House aides said.

The episode was first reported Thursday by CBS News.

Fitzwater said the fact that the call turned out to be a hoax is unfortunate, but that Bush — who frequently speaks to foreign leaders by telephone — remains determined to "talk to anybody, anytime, any place" to try to gain the release of the hostages.

Eight Americans, including Terry Anderson, the chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, and 10 other Westerners are being held hostage in Lebanon.

Most of them are believed to be held by factions loyal to Iran.

The disclosure of the hoax came amid a flurry of recent reports on hostage-related developments. However, U.S. officials have said they are unable to cite any actual movement toward freeing the hostages.

Although he was tricked once, Bush would do the same thing again if he thought it would help win the release of the hostages, his spokesman said.

"If a call came through at some future point that we believed was real, he would take it," Fitzwater said. "The president has made it known he's willing to talk to Iran at any time. And the ball is in their court. So it's up to them to signal a willingness to talk."

The Bush administration contends that Rafsanjani's government has influence with those holding the hostages.

Fitzwater said the administration has let Rafsanjani know "through diplomatic channels as well as publicly, that we're willing to talk whenever they're ready. And they have come back and said, 'we're not ready.'"

Fitzwater declined to go into details of Bush's conversation with the unknown caller.

Vice President Quayle leaves for tour of South America

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle left today for a tour of South America, saying he wants to listen rather than lecture about how the United States can help its hemispheric neighbors with economic development.

The vice president's trip revolves around two inaugurations — Sunday in Chile and March 15 in Brazil.

But he also will stop in Venezuela, Barbados, Argentina and Paraguay for talks on Latin debt and trade problems and on President Bush's push to win acceptance for Panama's U.S.-installed government.

Quayle departed Andrews Air Force Base outside of Washington shortly after daybreak for the flight to Caracas, Venezuela.

In briefing foreign reporters on the eve of today's departure for Caracas, Quayle offered no specifics on what the United States can do to help the Latin countries with their massive debt and inflation problems.

He said he wanted to hear ideas on trade and economic development from those countries' heads of state.

"It's very important to solicit their ideas," Quayle said.

"At times the United States gets accused, perhaps justifiably so, of lecturing. I'm not visiting Latin America to lecture. I'm visiting Latin America to listen, to get their ideas."

He said the administration is prepared to turn its attention more to economic affairs in the hemisphere, now that democratic elections have sparked political reform in country after country previously ruled by dictators.

"Political development has been successful in the hemisphere, but we have not been as successful as we'd like on economic development," Quayle told reporters.

Two countries Quayle will visit, Brazil and Argentina, are among the most severely handicapped economically. Brazil's $115 billion foreign debt is the largest in the developing world.

Argentina is beset by demonstrations and strikes resulting from its 8,000 percent inflation rate.

There has been little progress, except in Mexico, on the Bush administration's so-called Brady Plan to ease Latin American debt by getting commercial banks to forgive outstanding loans.

The other goal of Quayle's trip — seeking acceptance of the Panamanian government installed when the U.S. invasion toppled Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega — still faces resistance.

Both Chile and Brazil refused to invite Panamanian representatives to their inaugurations.

Like other Latin governments, Chile and Brazil condemned the Dec. 20 invasion as a violation of Panama's sovereignty.

Many Latin governments contend Panama's President Guillermo Endara needs to gain legitimacy through a vote of Panama's citizens or its congress.

But U.S. officials insist that the Latin resentment over the Panama invasion is fading.

"We're moving toward hemispheric-wide acceptance of the Panamanian government, general acceptance. These sorts of things will be worked out," said Quayle's press secretary, David Beckwith.

He noted Endara's recent call for a vote on proposed changes in the constitution.

In Brazil, "It is likely that the new government will examine the matter in a new light," said one Brazilian diplomat, referring to the upcoming inauguration of Fernando Collor de Mello.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., is accompanying Quayle as part of the U.S. delegation to the Chile inauguration of Patricio Aylwin.

Kennedy was a leading critic of human rights violations under outgoing Chilean President Gen. Augusto Pinochet.

Quayle will meet with Pinochet, who insisted on retaining control of the country's 60,000-man army even though he will not be president.

Bush unveils new policy for transportation plans

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new Bush administration policy calls for more user fees, toll roads and local government help for a transportation system that it says is "beginning to break down."

President Bush and Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner unveiled the "national transportation policy" Thursday at a gathering of industry officials — many of whom already have found reason to criticize it.

A 108-page draft of the policy covered a wide range of issues affecting air, land and water transportation.

Its overall goal is to maintain the U.S. transportation system as "the finest in the world." However, it said "there are increasing signs ... that the system is beginning to break down."

Anyone looking for a far-reaching program such as the Interstate highway system begun in the Eisenhower administration is likely to be disappointed.

The policy statement outlined no strategy that would involve major federal funding beyond that already called for in the president's budget.

It proposed that users, including airline passengers and motorists, pay more of the cost of building, maintaining and administering major transport systems.

The draft set out six key goals:

- Maintain and expand the nation's transportation system by shifting major responsibilities onto local governments and encouraging more private investment, while concentrating federal funding on projects of "national significance."
- Foster a "sound financial base" for transportation, emphasizing user fees "as the key element to financing the federal share of transportation expenditures," as well as spending some of the billions of dollars in the aviation and highway trust funds.

- Keep transportation businesses strong and competitive by deregulating the trucking industry and further deregulating other transportation sectors, including repealing railroad employee liability and retirement laws opposed by the rail industry.
- Ensure that the transportation system supports public safety and national security.
- Protect the environment and the quality of life by reducing pollution emissions by motor vehicles.
- Advance U.S. transportation technology for the 21st century by encouraging research into high-speed rail, magnetically levitated trains, tiltrotor aircraft and "intelligent" vehicle and highway systems that use computers to increase safety and efficiency.

Proposals that shift more of the cost to users are raising concerns in the aviation, mass transit and trucking industries.

Skinner had described the policy to industry groups, and some people outside government saw drafts before it was released.

The Transportation Department began working on the proposal shortly after Skinner took office early last year, holding 117 hearings in 48 cities to get suggestions.

The American Public Transit Association said the policy was "long on advice and short on help."

"The administration's policy would give Uncle Sam junior partnership in the traditional intergovernmental alliance that has underwritten mass transit for more than 25 years," the group said in a statement.

The Air Transport Association said it generally supported the new policy but opposed an airport head tax that is included. Bush called for such a fee, as well as other user charges, in his fiscal 1991 budget.

The American Trucking Association objected to Skinner's call for more toll roads and to the lack of a detailed plan for spending the $10 billion surplus in the highway trust fund, collected from federal gasoline taxes.

Gray County's 1990 senior spelling bee champion Joyce Osborne, left, is congratulated by junior champion Nick Scott, following the county spelling bee competition at Lovett Memorial Library this morning.

Eighth-grader wins county spelling bee in nine rounds

Eighth-grader Joyce Osborne spelled her way through nine rounds of competition at Lovett Memorial Library today to become the 1990 Gray County Spelling Bee champion.

Osborne, daughter of David and Janyce Osborne of Pampa, represented Pampa Middle School at the event, which also featured top spellers from the city's six public elementary schools and St. Vincent's elementary school. Although the competition is open to any student in Gray County, spelling bee officials said only Pampa schools participated this year.

After the other competitors were felled by misspelled words, the competition centered on Osborne and Lamar fifth-grader Nick Scott. Scott faltered on the word "intercept," which according to the rules of the spelling bee had to then be correctly spelled by Osborne.

Undaunted, Osborne spelled the word, then went on to spell "jackrabbit" correctly to win the bee. Scott, as runner-up, was named junior champion. The entire competition lasted approximately 20 minutes.

Also competing in the county spelling bee were Arvin Bhatia of Austin Elementary, Melissa Butcher of Baker Elementary, Jennifer Meadows of Horace Mann Elementary, Katy Fortin of Travis Elementary, Ryan Davis of Wilson Elementary and Fabian Silva of St. Vincent's Elementary. Each of these students were winners of their respective school-wide spelling competitions.

Osborne is now eligible for competing at a regional level at Mary Moody Northern Hall at West Texas State University in Canyon at 1:30 p.m., April 7. Winner of this event, which features spellers from the Texas Panhandle, parts of New Mexico, Oklahoma and Kansas, will go on to the national spelling bee in Washington, D.C., this summer.

Osborne as senior champion and Scott as junior champion will receive prizes from the spelling bee's local sponsors the Amarillo Globe-News and West Texas State University. Both the senior and county junior champions will be able to attend the regional competition as guests of the sponsor. In the event that Osborne cannot compete at the regional spelling bee, Scott will represent Gray County.

Nursing home cleared of cited deficiencies

A Pampa nursing home was cited in a recent report by the Texas Department of Health's Bureau of Long Term Care on actions taken on facilities for deficiencies.

Pampa Nursing Center, 1321 W. Kentucky, was one of 14 facilities in Texas listed in the report for the period Dec. 9-15.

According to the report, the punitive action cited against Pampa Nursing Center was a "proposed decertification or denial of certification."

The report said the purpose of the visit was, "Resurvey — propose to deny certification effective Feb. 1 due to two repeat deficiencies and two serious deficiencies in emergency physicians and cold bedrooms."

However, Melba Marcum, administrator of the nursing center, said this week that the alleged "deficiencies have been corrected" and the nursing center has been cleared since Jan. 3.

Marcum said one of the deficiencies cited included an incident when a resident fell in the middle of the night and a physician who was consulted gave instructions for the nurses to give the patient Tylenol and bring her to his office the next morning.

Marcum said the officials with the Bureau of Long Term Care indicated the doctor's instructions should have been overridden and the resident should have been taken to the hospital's emergency room.

"It wasn't anything we did wrong. We relied on the physician," Marcum said.

The nursing center administrator said another deficiency cited was when an inspector found two of the center's 50 rooms at 69 degrees, instead of the required 72 degrees. Marcum said that correction was made immediately by changing the thermostat.

Marcum said the actions taken against the nursing center are really not "punitive" although they are termed that way. She said the actions are more of a form of non-compliance notice.

Gramm to be at Pampa airport

U.S. Senator Phil Gramm will be in Pampa at noon Saturday for a campaign rally at Perry Lefors Airport to endorse the 13th Congressional District candidacy of State Rep. Dick Waterfield.

Gramm said in a news release, "I am proud that Texas has candidates of Dick Waterfield's caliber willing to serve in Congress." He added, "Dick's experience in business and agriculture clearly qualify him to represent the hard-working men and women of West Texas." Waterfield presently serves as representative in the Texas House for the residents of District 88. He is a lifelong resident of Canadian and a farmer and rancher.

Waterfield is opposed in the Tuesday Republican primary by former Congressman Bob Price of Pampa. The winner of that race will face U.S. Rep. Bill Sarpaluis, D-Amarillo, in the Nov. 6 general election.

RRC candidate allegedly threatened by truckers

AUSTIN (AP) — Democrat Clint Hackney, a candidate for Texas Railroad Commission, said he will not back down from his proposal to have random drug tests for truck drivers despite threats from anonymous callers who say they are truck drivers. "I'm not going to be intimidated to stop this random drug-testing program," Hackney said Thursday. "We're going to have safe transportation in Texas," the former Houston legislator said.

Hackney said some of the callers threatened to organize politically for his opponent, former U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger, in Tuesday's primary.

Asked if he felt physically threatened, Hackney said, "When you receive a call by a truck driver asking specifically where you live, then that driver hangs up, you're going to be concerned."

Krueger's campaign spokesman Jon Massey said Hackney has latched onto the issue for political reasons and that there are constitutional questions about whether random drug testing can be done.

But Hackney said most truckers agree with his proposal to randomly test truck drivers at weigh stations and entry points.

Hampton Rogers, a spokesman for the Texas Motor Transportation Association, a trucking company trade group, said Hackney's ads unfairly portray truck drivers.

"There are drivers who are under the influence, but the vast majority are professionals who don't drink or use drugs," Rogers said.

Rogers said the association supports drug testing programs, but that random testing is being legally challenged.

Sheriff investigating robbery attempt

A composite drawing of a suspect in an attempted armed robbery Wednesday evening is scheduled to be developed this afternoon, said Gray County Sheriff Jim Free.

Free said a person attempted to rob the Taylor Mart on West U.S. 60 between 9 and 9:30 p.m. Wednesday.

However, after pulling a knife and demanding cash, Free said, the suspect fled without any money.

The suspect is described as a black male, around 5 feet, 6 inches tall and in his early 20s.

Anyone with any information on the case can contact the sheriff's office at 669-8022.

Drug question dominant theme at Democratic gubernatorial candidates' debate

By ROD RICHARDSON
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The final Democratic gubernatorial debate before the March 13 primary was not the blood bath many political observers had predicted it would be.

But once again, the dominant theme for Thursday's debate was the fact that the front runner, Ann Richards, still refuses to answer "yes or no" to the question of whether she's ever used illegal drugs.

One of her chief opponents, Attorney General Jim Mattox, says Ms. Richards has already taken herself out of the race by failing to answer the question.

"I think Miss Richards has disqualified herself from consideration as the Democratic nominee," Mattox said after Thursday's debate. "Not because of what she has or has not done but because of her lack of candor on the issue."

"You see I think the Republicans will exploit her and the Democratic Party if she were to be the Democratic nominee. But I don't think she'll be the nominee so I don't think we'll any to worry about it."

Richards, a recovering alcoholic, said Mattox and former governor Mark White have to attack her character because they can't criticize the work she's done as State Treasurer.

"I think that these guys are really stretching and reaching because they cannot fault my performance," Richards said.

"In this particular dialogue for the gubernatorial race, the question has come up about exactly what I did and when I did it and my response has been that my message to the people out there, that I want you to get help and you can put your past behind you," she said.

But Richards has not stood by idly. She recently launched a more aggressive television campaign directed at White and Mattox.

White and Mattox said they don't like the ads, which question the integrity of both politicians. In one ad, White is accused of helping his Houston law firm make money through his political connections while he was still in the governor's mansion.

"I was sickened this week by a couple of slurs that were made," White said. "But I feel we've answered them fully."

The drug issue took another turn Thursday, when all but one of the seven candidates said they would submit to a drug test before the Tuesday primary if asked.

Richards also said she would be happy to take a drug test before the primary but maintained that she is the only Democrat capable of defeating Republican front runner Clayton Williams.

"I think the important thing is the polls have consistently shown that I'm the only candidate in this primary who can defeat any of the Republicans that are running," Richards said.

But Mattox said he, too, can beat Williams. In fact, Mattox felt confident enough after the debate to borrow a line from one of Williams' television ads.

"I think I can beat Clayton Williams," Mattox said. "I'll stand toe to toe with him. And I'll tell you this if anybody tells you that there's going to be a Republican in the next governor's position you tell them they don't know Jim Mattox."

Although the three top three Democratic candidates fired several verbal shots at each other Thursday, all agreed after the debate to support the winner of primary.

"I think the Democrats are going to be unified in November," Richards said. "I don't think there's any question about that. We've all made a commitment and we've all signed a pledge that we will support the victor out of this primary."

The debate, sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Texas and KDFW-TV, was the first to include so-called minor candidates. They are: Theresa Hearn-Haynes, 35, of Houston; Earl Holmes, 75, of Hawkins; Ray Rachal, 49, a certified public accountant from Stafford, and Stanley Edward Adams Jr., 54, of Austin.

Adams and Rachal called for decriminalization of illegal drugs. "I think the stuff should be decriminalized, it should be made available so cheap that nobody can make any money...and it should be taxed," Adams said.

Rachal said he had not used illegal drugs but that he would not be willing to take a drug test. "Too many people right now are trying to destroy this lady over something that is not much more serious than a bad traffic accident. We're overreacting."

The questions ranged from education funding to prisons to the environment.

Mattox said he supports a lottery for education funding. Ms. Hearn-Haynes, asked about her support of a lottery, said 80 percent of lottery revenues should be earmarked for education, and the money closely managed.

Clements: Several sessions may be needed on school finance reform

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says the May 1 Supreme Court deadline for changing the school finance system isn't meaningful as long as lawmakers are working on the problem, but a spokesman for poor school districts says he's wrong.

"We think the Supreme Court was very serious in setting that deadline, and the deadline is to enact an equitable system, not to just be in Austin working on it," said Craig Foster, executive director of the Equity Center, which includes school districts that successfully challenged the state's current public education funding system.

"Assuming they were serious, the state would stop distributing state funds" if a new plan is not in place by the deadline, Foster said Thursday.

But Clements said he will keep lawmakers in special session until they pass a school finance reform measure that doesn't require new taxes, even if that takes five 30-day special sessions. He has promised to veto any tax increase.

"I don't think the deadline has any significance," he said, adding with a chuckle, "They may lock me up in jail. They may come get me, but I don't think that has any significance."

"As long as the court really feels that we're trying to do something, and we're meeting in session and so forth, why I don't think that the deadline in itself has any particular significance," said Clements.

Clements called a 30-day special session beginning Feb. 27 after the Supreme Court ruled that the current school finance system is unconstitutional because of funding disparities between property-rich and poor school districts.

"I'll go for a fourth and fifth" special session, if that's what it takes to get a school finance reform bill that doesn't require new taxes, Clements said.

The court said lawmakers should devise a system that is fairer than the current $13.5 billion one, which relies on a combination of state aid and local property taxes, with some federal funding.

The leading Senate plan to deal with the ruling — backed by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby — would cost $817 million in new funds next school year. A measure being drafted in the House would require an estimated $450 million over current spending the first year.

Foster said there is no way to reform the finance system without injecting new money, over and above the $200 million that Clements said could be raised by shifting funds from other parts of the state budget.

"If the governor wants to keep the Legislature in session until they come up with a plan that doesn't require new taxes, they will be in Austin forever," Foster said. "There isn't any such thing."

Some lawmakers have said that school districts could be forced to raise local property taxes if enough state money is not put into education reforms.

The House is working to produce a plan to provide a quality education while guaranteeing fairness and accountability, said Tim Conger, spokesman for House Speaker Gib Lewis.

"The speaker considers any deadline that will jeopardize the ability of the public schools to open in the fall serious," Conger said.

The Legislature adjourned until Wednesday, the day after the primary elections.

Lewis said the House could debate an education measure as early as late next week, and Hobby said the Senate would take up its bill the following week.

Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, a sponsor of the House school finance reform plan, and Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, sponsor of the Hobby-backed Senate bill, predicted school finance reform legislation will end up in a conference committee to hammer out differences between the House and Senate bills.

The lawmakers said a second special session is likely.

Also Thursday, the Senate passed a resolution urging the Texas Education Agency to appeal a state Supreme Court ruling that declared invalid a law making it tougher for teachers to rise on the career ladder. The ladder rewards teachers with higher pay based on the quality of their work.

The House passed the same resolution Wednesday.

Ted Lawson

Lawson seeking post as Republican on Railroad Commission

Ted Lawson, 50, a native Texan is seeking nomination for the Texas railroad commissioner in the Republican primary on Tuesday.

Lawson, of Odessa, said his working experience in the oil fields and in the trucking industry makes him qualified for the position.

"I am not a politician," Lawson said in a news release. "I am a businessman with a business administration degree from Sul Ross University, and a taxpayer just like you."

Lawson said oil and gas are an integral part of the Texas economy and added he wants to help revitalize it by continuing to find new markets for the state's supply of natural gas.

"I want to see our rig count go up, new stores opening. I want to see equipment going back to work instead of to the auction block. I want to see Texans going to work instead of to the unemployment office," he said.

Lawson graduated from Midland High School in 1958 and from Sul Ross State University in 1962. He is an oil field contractor and is married to Anne Lawson.

Lawson, visiting in Pampa earlier this week, said he has been trying to reach all parts of the state in his bid to become railroad commissioner, adding that it kept him quite busy because of the size of the state.

Haitians protest killing of schoolgirl

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Opposition parties called on Haiti's military leader to quit after thousands of people shouting "Liberty!" set cars and tires on fire to protest the army's killing of a schoolgirl.

Three people were killed in the nationwide protests Thursday, including a soldier beaten to death by a mob.

Two other people were killed and at least 15 others were injured in clashes with soldiers on the fourth straight day of unrest in the impoverished Caribbean nation.

The protests were triggered Monday after the army killed 11-year-old Rosaline Vaval Monday in the town of Petit Goave, where about 10,000 mourners attended her burial Thursday.

About 3,000 people, shouting "Liberty!" and slogans against Haiti's leader, Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril, marched on the Presidential Palace. Soldiers then fired in the air and beat demonstrators with billy clubs.

"The will of the people is for Avril to step down," said a communique released Thursday night by a coalition of 11 opposition parties that earlier had called on Haitians to

Stormie Jones says she's recovering well from her latest surgery

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Encouraged by friends, family and a little voice inside her, the world's longest surviving heart-liver transplant patient said Thursday she's bouncing back following her second liver transplant.

"I guess it's just hope," 12-year-old Stormie Jones said during a news conference at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh. "There's a thing in the back of your head that says, 'Get up.'"

Cuddling a stuffed koala bear that accompanied her to the operating room last month, Stormie said she hopes to return to her home in the Fort Worth, Texas, suburb of White Settlement within a month.

Once home, she said, she'd like to take a bath and go to bed.

Stormie, dressed in sweat pants and a Children's Hospital sweat shirt, teasingly sparred with her mother, Lois "Susie" Purcell, during the news conference. Speaking softly, she said she disliked being in the public eye and media interviews.

Although she and her mother are optimistic her body will accept the new liver, Stormie said she understood there's a remote chance of rejection within six years.

"They told me I might be having a little rejection, which made me mad," she said.

Mrs. Purcell said she credits Stormie's seemingly fast recovery to FK-506, an experimental anti-rejection drug developed in Japan. Researchers say the drug is more powerful and causes fewer side effects than cyclosporine, the anti-rejection medicine the girl had been taking since her historic heart-liver transplant on Feb. 14, 1984.

Stormie said she had hoped the first round of transplants would be her last.

"I thought I wasn't going to have any more problems again, but I guess I was wrong," said the sixth-grader.

Stormie received a second liver Feb. 20 because the first transplanted organ was damaged by hepatitis caused by an unknown virus.

"It hurts to see her go through this again," said Mrs. Purcell.

The day after her second transplant, Stormie returned to the operating room to stop internal bleeding, which occurs in about 10 percent of all patients receiving a second transplant.

"I thought, 'Now what are you taking out?'" Stormie said.

Stormie has been playing with other children at the hospital, reading books and building a wooden doll house.

Amnesia victim may have had different identities

ANGLETON (AP) — An Angleton man, believed to be suffering from amnesia, may have lived under different identities in California and Washington, D.C., before he was found wandering in Kansas, authorities say.

Melvin Wolf, an Angleton appliance repairman, had been known as John Doe since he was found Oct. 19 wandering the streets of Topeka, Kan., without identification. He told authorities he didn't know his name or what he was doing there.

His identity surfaced last month after two relatives saw a television report on his plight in Milwaukee, where he grew up. Wolf had left Angleton in August, telling relatives he was going to Washington to take care of personal business.

Authorities said since then, a television viewer reported Wolf also may be Jim King, an insurance salesman who disappeared from Burbank, Calif., in 1978. Another report said he may be a short-order cook named Robert J. Hart, who vanished from Washington at least three years ago.

"You can call it interesting. I'd call it bizarre," said Rick Selig, the Topeka clinical therapist who worked with Wolf to help him regain his memory before he returned to Angleton this week.

Selig, who has been using hypnosis to treat Wolf's amnesia, said he believes Wolf's personality could accommodate changes that would have allowed him to live under other identities.

"From what I know of Melvin, he is a man who gets fed up easily," Selig said. "When he does, he distances himself."

Authorities said Jim King left behind a wife and two children when he disappeared from Burbank in 1978 under suspicious circumstances.

Burbank police investigator Kathy Speirs said King is suspected of embezzling an undetermined amount of money from his employer, an insurance company.

Ms. Speirs said King has been listed as legally dead for several years, but the case was reopened after an insurance company employee identified the Topeka amnesia victim as King. Authorities now are seeking Wolf's fingerprints and personal records to prove or disprove the allegation.

Wolf arrived in Angleton from California three years ago, but relatives said he did not recognize the green van he drove here when he saw it Tuesday.

A Washington restaurant worker told Topeka police investigator Bill Huffnir he saw a similar television report and the amnesia victim was Robert J. Hart, a former short-order cook at the restaurant.

But Washington police have no missing persons report filed on Hart.

Wolf's family, who are shielding him from the press while he recovers, said they doubt Wolf and King are the same person.

"When we saw the pictures, it didn't even look like him. We don't know what happened. Nobody does," said Charlie Caskey, Wolf's brother-in-law.

Selig suspects Wolf is suffering from psychogenic amnesia brought on by great pain or stress. He said he did not believe Wolf is faking the amnesia to hide his past.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political graft from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Inflation index only a matter of numbers

Is double-digit inflation returning? In January, wholesale prices jumped 1.8 percent, the steepest increase in 15 years. That would work out to an annual rate of more than 20 percent. Well, two clarifications must be made.

First, there's a big difference between a rise in wholesale prices and a rise in inflation. Wholesale prices always fluctuate; that's the nature of business.

But inflation involves the long-term rise in prices paid by consumers. Inflation is caused by changes in the supply and demand for money and is classically defined as too much money chasing too few goods. When the supply of money increases more than demand increases, the currency is de-based and inflation ensues; but when the supply of money increases less than demand increases, then deflation occurs.

In past time, inflation was prevented by pegging a currency to an unalterable standard, such as gold or silver. A dollar, say, was always worth a certain amount of gold. Nothing could change that.

In recent times, governments have revoked the gold standard, backing a currency only with their own reputations. Governments with relatively good economic reputations have a strong currency with low inflation; governments with a weak economic reputation have a weak currency with high inflation, sometimes even hyper inflation.

A government can flood the world with its currency, thereby sparking inflation. Or it can cut back on its currency, causing deflation. And if a government collapses, its currency becomes worthless. As East Germany now collapses economically and politically, its money has become all but worthless. This has prompted moves by West Germany to work for a currency union, replacing East German marks with strong West German marks.

A second thing must be remembered about prices: many things affect them in the short term. The January wholesale price increase in the United States was almost entirely caused by a bad spell of cold weather most of the country suffered through the holidays. This drove up prices for fuel oil and produce, much of that limited by crop damage.

In contrast, what economists call the "core rate of inflation" rose just 0.1 percent in January. This indicator excludes food and energy, whose prices tend to fluctuate wildly. Says Economist Allen Sinai of the Boston Co.: "Without food and energy, commodity price inflation was very low." Consumers, says Sinai, will continue paying high prices for fuel and vegetables for a few months. But prices "will diminish in coming months." That's good news.

Raining on Chamorro's parade

WASHINGTON — Well, what do you know: Ronald Reagan was right all along in Nicaragua. If it had not been for the former president's unrelenting support of the anti-communist Contras, the Feb. 25 election never would have happened.

That is the first observation that comes to mind in a euphoric hour. Reagan is a stubborn man. He took a terrible drubbing from the liberal media for sticking to his guns.

Over and over he asserted that the Sandistas had betrayed their own revolution. Against powerful opposition in Congress and in the press, he insisted that if pressure only were maintained, a combination of military and economic measures would bring dissatisfaction to a point of critical mass.

Reagan's incessant pressure, belatedly helped by neighboring states in Central America, at last forced Daniel Ortega to the wall. He no longer could resist the demand for a free and fair election. In the end we saw a landslide.

What will we see now? One of the memorable characters in the old L'il Abner comic strip was a gloomy fellow named Joe Bfistlk. A little rainy cloud forever was suspended above his head. This correspondent often feels like the morose and pessimistic Joe. Once again, in a jubilant moment, let me venture a suggestion that the jubilation be restrained.

Violeta Barrios de Chamorro assuredly deserves all the congratulations that are flowing her way. This courageous 60-year-old widow, a political novice, took on Ortega's overconfident regime and turned the festering hatred of the Sandistas into an outpouring without precedent. Over the past year we have witnessed Marxist governments toppling, one after another, but none through democratic elections.

James J. Kilpatrick

She faces formidable problems — problems more intractable in many ways than the difficulties faced by another inexperienced and courageous widow, Corazon Aquino, in the Philippines. These cannot wisely be minimized.

Let us suppose, putting aside Joe Bfistlk's funeral cloak for a moment, that Mrs. Chamorro's inauguration proceeds as scheduled in April. This is a heady assumption, for assassination is a way of death in Nicaragua. Her husband, editor of the anti-Sandinista La Prensa, was such a victim.

But now she is President Chamorro. What of the army that Ortega created? It is the largest in Central America — large enough to terrify such neighbors as Honduras and Costa Rica, large enough to make her democratic victory a mockery.

What of the Sandinistas' police? Under the notorious Tomas Borge, the bureau of internal security created block committees that spied upon the people and kept them in fear. Will these armed troops peacefully demobilize, lend their allegiance and effectively disappear? It seems unlikely.

Power is addictive. The men around Daniel Ortega have enjoyed all the privileges and perquisites of power for the past 10 years. Ortega himself has been amazingly gracious — so far — in accepting his humiliating defeat. Will his ousted comrades be equally complaisant?

There is also the matter of the Contras, 15,000 of them, mostly passing a restless time in Honduras. They rightfully may anticipate some significant role in a new, anti-communist government, but how are they to be accommodated?

Within her own winning coalition, President Chamorro must cope with ambitious factions. Fourteen political parties, so-called, competed in that Sunday's elections. Can these noisy minorities be halted and reined?

Nicaragua's economy is a wreck. Inflation reportedly is running at an annual rate of 1,600 percent. The most basic foods are in short supply; public utilities are unreliable; a decade of civil war has left roads, bridges, medical facilities, water supplies in ruin. Ortega's attempts at collectivization have crippled agricultural production. If the politically unsophisticated peasants expect early relief, they are doomed to disappointment.

If the incoming president's government is to succeed, it will need massive transfusions of aid from the United States. Moral support and friendly telephone calls will not suffice.

Yet if it should appear that Mrs. Chamorro is too dependent upon Washington — that she is a puppet dancing to the strings of President Bush — her popularity could dissolve like a bubble. Bush has to worry over aid to Poland, aid to Panama, aid to Hungary and Romania. His budget for 1991 is $150 billion in the red. Where is the money coming from?

Call me Gloomy Joe. Events of the past year make the heart leap up, but experience says, slow down. Literally and figuratively, a millennium is still some years away.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, March 9, the 68th day of 1990. There are 297 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 9, 1989, the Senate rejected President Bush's nomination of John Tower to be defense secretary. The 53-47 vote was the first time in 30 years that a president was denied his choice of a Cabinet member.

On this date:

In 1661, Cardinal Jules Mazarin, the chief minister of France, died, leaving King Louis XIV in full control.

In 1796, Napoleon Bonaparte married Josephine de Beauharnais.

In 1822, Charles M. Graham of New York was granted a patent for artificial teeth.

In 1860, the first Japanese ambassador to the United States, Niimi Buzenokami, and his staff arrived in San Francisco.

In 1862, during the Civil War, the ironclads Monitor and Virginia, formerly the Merrimack, clashed for five hours to a draw at Hampton Roads, Va.

This horse dances in the dark

Horses are beautiful animals and the devotees of each breed are convinced that theirs is the most beautiful of all.

The Arabian is something else again. Arab horse breeders and riders speak of their splendid animals as "most noble," with blood lines dating back to prehistory and with endurance/performance that sounds like fiction. They tend even to romance the sweeping curve of the Arabian's neck.

In the Arabian desert it was common practice for the animals to share the tents of their owners. Thus was inbred a disposition of docile gentleness more typical of pets than mounts.

Katy, Texas, is Houston's horse-country. It was there that a purebred Arabian stallion named Bask Elect, a chestnut with an electric blaze and great promise, was born.

March 3, 1985, the stallion, being shod, spooked and fell, banging his head against the barn wall. Immediately he rose to his feet — apparently unhurt but totally blind.

A shock swept through the great stable. Young trainer Martha Murdoch was devastated. Bask Elect, her favorite, now sightless, was helpless.

Unwilling to have this beautiful animal put down, she summoned veterinary specialists from everywhere. "A nerve had been severed by the blow to the head," they said. "Bask Elect would never see again."

But Martha rejected hopelessness, sought and got permission to purchase the blind stallion. With much loving care, she began to restore his equilibrium, and one day she lifted herself onto his back and began to guide Bask Elect out of the barn and into the arena.

Today it's been five years since the accident. Bask Elect, constrained in the paddock, in front of a crowd begins to strut. Nobody in the grandstands is ever told about the handicap.

Miss Murdoch fears it might influence judging. But the public charisma of this gallant horse soon earned him the stable name of "Cheese" or, for short, just "Cheese."

His first showing in English Pleasure class he placed second. The next day he placed first. By the conclusion of that event — ridden and driven — "Cheese" was named Overall Show Champion. And one woman in the grandstand applauded so hard her wedding ring broke!

In the five years since, dancing in the dark, Bask Elect has won 15 show championships, two regional championships. First at Scottsdale, Ariz., and, last year, Reserve National Champion!

Veterinarian Ralph Johnson, with acupuncture, has now restored a fraction of the stallion's sight in one eye.

But when one reflects on the "heart" this handsome horse had to have — to allow a human to steer him where he could see nothing at all — it credits both the stubborn love of the gentle trainer and uncommon courage of the horse.

Bask Elect has now sired sons and daughters who've won seven championships on their own; two of them are national winners.

In Louisville in October, Bask Elect will go for the ultimate prize — Grand Champion of the Grand National — trusting loving hands on the reins while dancing in the dark.

Is there a solution for South Africa?

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

As South Africa's white government and the nation's black majority approach the bargaining table, the position of various prominent spokesmen for the blacks is simple: They demand universal suffrage and a common voters' roll in a unitary state. Since 68 percent of the population is black, this would quickly result in total black control of the society.

The 5 million whites (and also the 3 million coloreds and 1 million Asians, about whose desires and fears the American media tell us little) will assuredly never consent to such an arrangement. But State President F.W. de Klerk is not seeking to negotiate for nothing, and the question therefore arises: What outcome is he seeking?

The National Party, which dominates the government, has never looked favorably on proposals for radical partition of the republic into half a dozen sovereign ethnic states, and seems unlikely to be heading in that direction now.

Instead, there are indications that what de Klerk has in mind is a compromise along the lines of the so-called "Natal indaba." This is a plan for a multiracial government for the large South African province of Natal, which was drawn up in 1986. It signifies lies in the fact that it was accepted by representatives of all of the major political groups in Natal: English-descended whites, Afrikaners, blacks (meaning, in Natal, the Zulus), Asians and coloureds.

Under the indaba, there would be a two-chamber provincial parliament, the first chamber of which would consist of 100 members elected by proportional representation. This chamber would choose the provincial prime minister, and would undoubtedly result in majority black control. But the second chamber would consist of 50 members in five groups of 10, each group elected by the voters in one of the groups listed above.

Legislation would normally be initiated by the executive and first approved by the first chamber; however, if a bill "affects the religious, language, cultural or other rights" of one of the five groups, it would have to be approved not only by a majority of the chamber as a whole but by a majority of that particular group's 10 representatives in the chamber.

Whether a bill required such approval could, if necessary, be appealed for final determination to the provincial Supreme Court. A comprehensive bill rights would be incorporated in the provincial constitution, which could only be amended by procedures which (again) would give special protection to group interests.

De Klerk has steadfastly refused to outline the government's negotiating position in advance, but various remarks he and others have made are suggestive and would accord with the concept of the Natal indaba. De Klerk himself, for example, has firmly refused to abandon the principle of dealing with South Africa's population on the basis of its ethnic "groups" — a principle preserved in the Natal indaba.

And just the other day, Gerrit Viljoen, the powerful minister for constitutional affairs, who will probably represent the government in the forthcoming negotiations, spoke vaguely but favorably about "structural guarantees" that the whites would require, involving the establishment of "specific bodies, such as councils, legislative bodies or parts of legislative bodies, or specific provisions about voting on certain sensitive matters."

That certainly sounds like an allusion to the protective mechanisms of the Natal indaba, and if so, it confirms the essential seriousness of the government's offer to negotiate a political solution.

What is unclear is whether the black leadership, and especially those segments of it close to Western or communist opinion, would accept such a compromise, or prefer to stand pat in the expectation that the whole nation will ultimately fall into their laps. If so, South Africa's agony may be far from over.

Police claim sons gunned down parents in Beverly Hills mansion

By LOUINN LOTA
Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — A Hollywood executive and his wife were gunned down by two sons who stood to inherit more than $10 million, police alleged in announcing one son's arrest and an international hunt for the other.

In an eerie twist, the one still at large had co-written a screenplay — which his mother helped type — about a son who kills his rich parents.

Lyle Menendez, 22, was arrested Thursday and charged with his 19-year-old brother Erik with the shotgun slaying of his father, Jose Menendez, and mother, Mary Louis "Kitty" Menendez.

The couple were slain in August while watching television in their Beverly Hills mansion.

"I've been in this business 33 years and I've heard of few killings as savage as this one," said Police Chief Marvin D. Iannone said.

Police were seeking help from the State Department and Interpol to detain Erik Menendez, believed to be in Israel playing in a tennis tournament.

Jose Menendez, a 45-year-old Cuban immigrant, was chairman of Live Entertainment Inc., a video and music distribution business affiliated with Carolco Pictures Inc., producers of the Rambo movies.

Investigators dismissed earlier speculation that organized crime was behind the slayings because of alleged business links to Menendez' company.

Iannone said the investigation uncovered physical evidence that linked the sons to the killings. The probe also focused on a vanished computer record concerning Menendez' will.

Menendez and his wife were killed by shotgun blasts at close range as they watched television in their library one evening. Their sons reported the killings, saying they found the bodies after a night out.

Nothing appeared to be stolen from the Spanish-style, $5 million home. And nothing indicated that the killers forced their way in.

"The focus became very clear over the past few months that the sons did it," Iannone said. "We were just waiting for the glue, binding it together."

Police on Thursday served search warrants to seize the records of a psychologist who had worked with the Menendez family. Some forms of communication between psychotherapists and their clients are protected under law. It wasn't known what records were seized by police.

Authorities Thursday refused to give a possible motive in the killings.

"Who knows what really goes on in families?" Iannone said.

Under terms of the parents' 9-year-old will, the sons share an estate worth $10 million to $17 million. A $400,000 life insurance policy also has been distributed to the sons.

In the months after the killings, Lyle Menendez traveled the country, making investments and buying stores, particularly fast-food franchises, said Iannone.

Lyle Menendez was arrested Thursday afternoon as he was preparing to drive away from the family mansion.

LBJ biography upsets aides of former president

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The people who worked for Lyndon Johnson in this town are buzzing — and often furious — about a new biography of their old boss that says he stole his election to the Senate in 1948.

"Why, why, why would a man want to spend this much of his life writing about a fellow that he can't stand and whose reputation he is so passionately bent on destroying?" demands an injured Jack Valenti, an aide in Johnson's White House.

"I think it is a dishonest biography," says Bob Hardesty, who used to write Johnson's speeches and helped him write his memoirs. "I don't think it pretends to be fair. I think it is the work of a man with a burning, unnatural hatred for his subject. It only presents a dark, evil, negative side of Lyndon Johnson."

The book, Means of Ascent, by Robert Caro pictures a youthful Johnson who is willing to do almost anything to appease an all-consuming political appetite.

It is the second of Caro's projected four-volume LBJ biography. Caro already has devoted 14 years to the task. The first volume met with equal hostility from some Johnson fans. One book critic said it demonstrated "enraged animus against Lyndon Johnson."

The new volume is just out, but excerpts ran in the New Yorker magazine and they were the talk of Washington's Texas community.

Ex-Texas newspaperman Bob Mann, now teaching at Emory & Henry College in southwestern Virginia, says this week's mail brought three sets of Xeroxed copies of the excerpts from friends who were afraid he might miss them.

Caro, in the book's introduction, acknowledges that he paints a portrait of a despicable person.

While "bright and dark" threads run through most of Johnson's life, Caro writes, no bright thread is visible in a period when Johnson "was all but totally consumed by his need for power and by his efforts to obtain it."

The book covers the years from Johnson's 1941 defeat for a Senate seat in a rigged election to his 1948 victory — by 87 votes — in a 1948 Democratic runoff over an enormously popular former governor, Coke Stevenson.

The theft by Johnson of that primary election has been fixed in Texas lore for years, but Caro provides new evidence.

The book also says Johnson pulled strings in Washington to enhance the power and value of a Texas radio station that made him a millionaire.

And it says Johnson made shamelessly political capital from his war career — which amounted to flying under enemy fire for only a few minutes, then accepting a Silver Star from Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

"He didn't seize the Silver Star," says Horace Busby, a Johnson associate for 20 years. "MacArthur, who was a political general, gave it to him to curry favor with Franklin Roosevelt, who liked Johnson. What was Johnson to do — throw it back?"

As for LBJ's stolen election, Busby says: "Johnson went before a statewide electorate seven times after that and it was never a factor."

Caro's critics say his legwork is meticulous and his writing thrilling, but his viewpoint warped. They say he finds little good — or balanced — to say about Johnson and nothing bad in Stevenson's record, despite his touch of racism.

History buff Jeff Patterson, an aide to Rep. Mike Andrews, D-Texas, says Stevenson comes across as "Saint Coke."

"Caro sets out to make Johnson look like a real jerk," says Patterson. "Give me warts-and-all, but don't try to overdo it."

Political reporter David Broder, reviewing the book in The Washington Post, said Caro's Johnson is "a complete scoundrel!" and "a lying, cunning, utterly unprincipled operator."

Caro did not respond to messages asking for a reply. "We don't want to respond to a single review," said Paul Bogaards, publicist for Alfred A. Knopf, which has printed 250,000 copies of the book.

Former Johnson aide Lloyd Hackler says Caro "puts more emphasis on the negatives — and God knows Johnson had those — than on the positives," but adds: "It's probably the best job of research that anybody has ever done on Johnson."

Valenti calls Caro's work "this loathsome book" — but admits he read every word of the serialization and now will proceed to read the book whole.

Valenti mourns the impact the book is likely to have on Johnson's place in history.

"Caro writes engagingly and that torments me," he says. "This may become the definitive Johnson biography."

But Hardesty says he has no such worries: "Over a period of time, when the historians have their say, he'll come out a full-bodied figure, flawed but an attractive man who had a great impact on the country."

North takes stand today in Poindexter trial

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Poindexter's lawyer says the former national security adviser may be guilty of bad memory but did not deliberately lie to Congress about secret arms shipments to Iran.

Oliver North, a former National Security Council aide, takes the stand today as testimony opens in Poindexter's trial before U.S. District Judge Harold Greene.

In an opening statement Thursday, defense attorney Richard Beckler denied that Poindexter engaged in a criminal coverup of the Iran-Contra affair, declaring that he was acting under President Reagan's orders.

Beckler said Congress was fully informed of North's secret Contra resupply network and that Poindexter labored to provide Congress the story of the Reagan administration's Iran initiative once it became public during November 1986.

"Why would anybody have to hide and deceive?" asked Beckler. "The answer is that Poindexter didn't have to hide. The answer is there was nothing illegal."

Earlier Thursday, prosecutor Dan Webb said, "John Poindexter and Oliver North decided to rewrite the history of the Iran-Contra affair" through a conspiracy of "coverup, deception and concealment."

Poindexter and North tried to cover up a 1985 shipment of Hawk missiles to Iran and the diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan rebels to "avoid tarnishment of the Reagan administration," Webb said.

But Beckler told the jury Poindexter simply forgot when he gave incorrect information to members of the House and Senate intelligence committees about his involvement in the November 1985 Hawks shipment.

The then-national security adviser told the congressional committees that he found out about the delivery in January 1986, when in fact he had known of the shipment at the time it occurred.

"After 30 years in the U.S. Navy and the White House they want to nail him on a five-week mistake" for obstruction and making false statements to Congress," Beckler told the jury, nearly shouting.

Hours after making the alleged false statements, Poindexter tore up a politically embarrassing presidential finding which depicted U.S. involvement in Iran arms sales as a straight arms-for-hostages deal. The December 1985 finding retroactively authorized the November 1985 CIA-assisted shipment of Hawks from Israel to Iran.

"Sometimes you do things to protect" the president, Beckler said. "When you work for the president of the United States, part of your job is ... to protect the president."

Poindexter is charged with conspiracy, two counts of obstructing Congress and two counts of making false statements to cover up North's military assistance and fundraising for the Contras and U.S. knowledge of the Hawks shipment.

"What was driving this man was not a conspiracy, but ... the orders of the president of the United States," said Beckler. "He met with him sometimes seven days a week, sometimes four, five and six times a day. And he was carrying out the policies of the United States and that is what this case is about."

It is not about criminality."

North met with members of Congress on Aug. 6, 1986, and denied assisting the Contras militarily. Poindexter later sent a message telling his aide, "Well done."

Prosecutor Webb told jurors that North lied at Poindexter's direction during the Aug. 6 meeting. Webb said Poindexter later congratulated North on lies that the prosecutor said "worked like a charm."

Lithuania to vote on secession plan

MOSCOW (AP) — Lithuanian nationalists said today their republic's legislature still plans to vote this weekend on whether to secede from the Soviet Union, contradicting an early report that the move had been postponed.

Lionginas Vasilyauskas, spokesman for the Sajudis people's movement, said the Supreme Soviet legislature will vote on a declaration of independence Sunday. Sajudis members have a two-thirds majority in the newly elected legislature.

He disputed a report by Eduardas Potashinkas, an editor at Lithuanian government-run television, who said the group's governing council had decided to put off the vote at a meeting Thursday night.

Potashinkas, who has previously supplied accurate information, said nationalists had dropped plans to vote on a declaration this weekend and instead seek the proclamation "in the nearest future."

The Lithuanian parliament is scheduled to meet Saturday, with a secession vote on the original agenda.

A vote on a proclamation of independence would bring the Baltic republic into conflict with the Kremlin. President Mikhail S. Gorbachev had warned this week that Lithuania would own the central government about $34 billion in convertible currency for investments made in the 50 years since the Kremlin absorbed the once-independent state.

Tass quoted Lithuania's president, Algirdas Brazauskas, as saying such a payment "would be an extremely difficult task."

Education secretary 'saddened' by angry lawmakers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos says he's made the same speech dozens of times, advocating fundamental changes over "pitching money" into troubled schools, but it wasn't until he took the message to his home state legislature that people responded with angry attacks.

Democratic and Hispanic leaders in Texas say they're disappointed with Cavazos, a native Texan and the first Hispanic ever appointed to a president's Cabinet, for suggesting to a joint session of the Legislature that money isn't the answer to problems with the state's schools.

Cavazos says he's saddened by the attacks but insists the lawmakers are wrong on this one and that he's sticking by his call for reform over spending.

"What I got yesterday in Austin ... was people who felt the solution was more dollars. It was quite a confrontation down there. I was very disappointed that the whole issue had to be focused on resources," Cavazos said in an interview Wednesday.

Three Hispanic legislators left the House chamber during his speech Tuesday, and another confronted him afterward and then disrupted the secretary's news conference to raise heated objections to his stance.

The Legislature is under court order to reform a school-funding system that discriminates against poor districts. The order resulted from a lawsuit brought by the predominantly Hispanic Edgewood School District in San Antonio. The legislators are attempting to put together a new school financing package.

Cavazos said it's the first time he has been attacked by fellow Hispanic leaders since becoming a member of President Reagan's Cabinet in September 1988.

"I wonder if they would have been as angry if the person who delivered that address as secretary of education had not been Hispanic," he said. "It saddens me — not because it was a personal attack — but because people I have so much respect for take that kind of tactic, in front of television cameras and reporters."

Cavazos was confronted as he walked from the House into a reporters' meeting by Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, who then interrupted the secretary's news conference to take issue with his remarks.

"I feel betrayed and I feel embarrassed that the secretary of education — a minority and from Texas — would not take a more aggressive position regarding the needs of education," Truan said Wednesday.

Truan, chairman of the Senate Hispanic Caucus, said Cavazos is "lacking in commitment to the children of our state and of this country by the comments he made here yesterday, and I regret that."

Truan said he had hoped Cavazos, the former president of Texas Tech University, would be an advocate for the poor and disadvantaged. "But he certainly didn't come across that way yesterday. He came across more as a propagandist of the Republican philosophy and not as a dedicated educator," Truan said.

Al Kauffman, attorney for the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, said Cavazos' comments will not help those working on behalf of the property-poor school districts that waged the Edgewood vs. Kirby legal battle that led to the court-ordered reforms.

Kent Pogue, superintendent of the Kingsville Independent School District, where Cavazos went to school, said he disagreed with Cavazos' contention that more money is not needed for public schools.

"By disagreeing, I'm not saying that money is the answer, but money is needed to provide a quality education," Pogue said.

Gov. Bill Clements, a Republican who has repeatedly vowed to veto any new taxes for school finance reform, applauded Cavazos' comments.

"He's a great educator, he's a great Texan, he's a fine guy," Clements said. "I liked everything he had to say."

Some lawmakers branded Cavazos — who doesn't state a party affiliation — as a mouthpiece for the Bush administration.

"That wasn't a speech for education, that was an apology for Republican policy," said Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, chairman of the Senate Education Committee.

Cavazos said he has made the same speech dozens of times and taken his message before several congressional committees, yet "no one has been angry with me until this came up the other day."

His chief of staff, Chino Chapa, questioned whether "a lot of the complaints were grandstanding in front of the cameras. ... It's more than a coincidence the primary elections are a week away."

Cavazos said he was pleased, however, that he finally has "someone's attention to these issues" and vowed to "continue on my track ... as long as I'm secretary of education, and probably after."

State highway employee dies after being struck by lightning

LINDEN (AP) — A state Highway Department equipment operator was killed and another man injured when lightning struck a steel beam during intermittent rains.

Joe Delbert Pate, 30, of Linden, was pronounced dead at Linden Municipal Hospital shortly after the lightning strike at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, said Tommy Jones, supervisor of the department's Linden Maintenance Division.

The bolt struck a hoisted steel beam and slithered down a chain Pate was holding, Jones said. Pate, an equipment operator who had been with the Highway Department for more than 12 years, had just picked up a chain and was placing it on a trailer, Jones said.

Dion Berry, of Parker County, Texas, who had purchased the beams from the Highway Department and was working alongside Pate, also was hit by lightning, said Marcus Sandifer, a spokesman for the Highway Department.

Berry was listed in stable condition at Linden Municipal Hospital's intensive care unit, a nursing supervisor said. She wouldn't say what Berry's injuries were.

The lightning bolt hit during intermittent rains that have drenched North Texas this week. Pate's was believed to be the first lightning death in Texas in 1990.

Pate was loading I-beams, used for bridges, from a stockpile onto a trailer known as a float. The chain was wrapped around the beam, which was hoisted by a tractor used for clearing ditches and loading heavy materials.

The beams are about 21 inches thick and 25 feet long.

Public counsel asks Supreme Court to order full hearing on Bell rates

AUSTIN (AP) — The state advocate for utility consumers, who claims Southwestern Bell is earning $595 million in excessive profits a year, asked the Texas Supreme Court this week to force the Public Utility Commission to proceed with a full hearing on the telephone company's rate case.

The PUC has set an expedited hearing schedule, beginning March 19, that will focus on a proposed settlement in the case that supporters say is worth $1.2 billion in customer benefits over four years. A second hearing is planned if the settlement is not approved.

The dual-hearing process means parties supporting the settlement "get another whole hearing if they lose," while those who oppose it do not, said Assistant Public Counsel

John Laakso.

The Office of Public Utility Counsel, which represents residential and small commercial ratepayers, and a coalition of cities served by Southwestern Bell are among settlement opponents. They have said it does not go far enough, nor reduce local residential rates.

Most of the parties in the case support the settlement, including long-distance companies, the PUC general counsel and various cities.

Laakso also said setting rates based on a partial settlement does not meet state legal standards for utility regulation.

Assistant Attorney General Steve Baron, representing the PUC, said he had not seen the petition filed with the Supreme Court and had no immediate comment.

MOUNTAIN TOP

"MOUNTAIN TOP EXPERIENCES" . . . It is not yet vacation time, however that time is approaching and we start remembering the wonderful feelings and experiences of our last trip to the mountains, and now we can start to plan new adventures.

That closeness, and the exciting feeling when worshipping the Lord is often referred to as a "MOUNTAIN TOP EXPERIENCE." We invite you to come worship the Lord in his house, and receive the joys of being close to God. Attend church this week.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

'Women in Bible' series continues

AMARILLO - The next Ladies' Majella Day will be held from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Thursday at the Bishop DeFalco Retreat Center, 2100 N. Spring.

Father Bob Curry will continue his series on "Women in the Bible." There will be two presentations about sad stories in the Old Testament - Hagar: The Rejected Woman and Tamar: Wisdom Violated. In these presentations, Father Curry will explore women's roles, injustices they endured and lessons that can be learned from their courage.

All women are invited to attend the series. The cost for the day is $10, which includes lunch. For reservations, call the Bishop DeFalco Retreat Center at 383-1811.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: For God, who said, "let shine out of darkness," made his light shine in our hearts to give us the light of knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Christ. But we have this treasure in jars of clay to show that this all-surpassing power is from God and not from us. (2 Corinthians 4:6-7 NIV)

I've never decided for what specific purpose God put me on Earth, but I know for sure I'm not supposed to be a mathematician. I learned that great truth in high school algebra. If I had all the givens written out in prepared equations, I could apply the rules and work the problems.

However, thought problems were my Waterloo. If I had to apply algebra to practicalities and determine the equation from the facts, I might as well have put my pencil down and prayed; at least that way I would have had a chance at a miracle.

I had an excellent algebra teacher. He was good about patiently talking me through the problems, step by step. As long as he was talking me through and drawing me pictures, the equations were perfectly obvious and logical. But as soon as I was on my own, all his clarity and logic seeped out of my brain, and I was hopeless again. On the rare occasions I managed to work a thought problem correctly, it was a tribute to my teacher's teaching ability rather than to any expertise on my own part.

The more I study the Bible and the more I learn, I am increasingly made aware that everything scriptural, everything holy, everything of God is 100 percent purely spiritual in nature.

Until we Christians present ourselves in a purely spiritual state, we are handicapped in our understanding. We can read the Scriptures and follow the surface rules that are laid out so clearly. But we hit a spiritual block when we try to isolate the spiritual from the physical and intellectual so we can get down to the nitty gritty of spiritual revelations and practicalities.

God is good to guide us through his plan and our problematic journey. And as long as we feel his touch and presence, the solutions are clear.

However, as soon as we try to do it on our own, we lose our way. The little glimmers of spiritual understanding we do attain are a testimony to our Teacher rather than to any expertise on our own part.

God's instructions to us are to the whole persons he created; but our listening must be done with our soles.

St. Mark CME to sponsor dinner

St. Mark CME Church, 406 Elm St., is sponsoring a fish dinner beginning at 11 a.m. Saturday. The event will continue until the fish is sold out.

Fish and trimmings are $3.50 a plate. Pastor H.R. Johnson invites the public to the dinner.

Religion roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — Nelson Price, for 15 years head of the public media division of United Methodist communications, has been named president and chief executive officer of the Vision Interfaith Satellite Network.

He succeeds Wilford Bane, who has been VISION's chief executive officer since the start in 1988 of the network by 22 religious groups — Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish.

Price, who had helped get religious leaders behind the new network, calls it "one of the bright hopes for ecumenical and cooperative efforts in this country."

Evergreen

Gospel trio to sing Sunday

Evergreen, a gospel trio made up of Janae Harris, Russell Ball and Wendel Christenson, will be singing at Pampa Chapel, 711 E. Harvester on Sunday.

The group will perform at 11 a.m. Evergreen ministers in churches throughout the United States, singing a wide variety of music including southern gospel, classic hymns of the church and original compositions.

Pastor Howard Whiteley extends an invitation to the public to attend the ministry.

Revival scheduled next week

The Community Christian Center, 801 E. Campbell, will host a revival beginning with the 10:45 a.m. Sunday service. The revival will continue through Saturday.

Morning sessions will be from 10:30 a.m. to noon on Monday through Saturday on "Gifts of the Holy Spirit." The evening services will begin at 7 p.m. each day.

Speaker for the revival is John Hutchinson from Waco. Hutchinson graduated from The Assembly of God College in Waxahachie in 1956. He was the pastor of churches in from 1956 through 1984 in Wagoner, Okla., Afton, Okla., and Bartlesville, Okla.

He was called to the evangelistic field in 1984. He has held crusades, since 1984, and been an evangelist in Israel, West Africa, West Indies and Mexico.

Pastor Richard Burress of Community Christian Center said God has been using Hutchinson to restore homes and families and to see people healed and saved.

Burress extends an invitation to the community and surrounding cities to attend the revival.

Puppet workshop set for Thursday

Professional puppeteers will be in-Pampa next week to conduct a school of puppetry at the Bible Church of Pampa.

Puppet skills can be fine-tuned at the workshop to be held from 6:30 to 10 p.m. on Thursday at the church, 300 W. Browning.

A free demonstration of a musical system - music reinforcement software - will be given from 1:30 to 3 p.m. on Thursday at the church. The pre-packaged system allows churches to use fully-orchestrated music, similar to taped accompaniment tracks for congregational singing, soloists or choirs. The music is designed to either stand alone or enhance a church's existing instrumentalists.

The school of puppetry is $15 per person and the school features demonstrations of both live and pre-recorded programs. There are six different classes to choose from and hands-on training with a puppet behind a stage.

The school is for beginning puppeteers as well as veteran puppeteers. Those who attend the school will receive personalized instruction from professional puppeteers, a choice of the puppetry courses relating to specific interests, a school of puppetry handbook and a diploma certifying completion of the courses.

People attending the school of puppetry next Thursday at the Bible Church of Pampa can learn to work puppets such as the ones shown above.

Superintendent of Catholic schools to leave her post

AMARILLO - Sister Mary John Lindner DC, superintendent of Catholic schools in the Diocese of Amarillo for the past five years, will leave the post upon expiration of her agreement with the diocese, according to Father Allen F. Bruening, chancellor.

"Sister Mary John is being offered new opportunities and challenges to further her professional life in her apostolic service by her religious community, the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul," Father Bruening said.

The Daughters of Charity are active in health, educational, and social service ministries. Councilors of the community, in consultation with the individual member, strive to encourage each member to use her individual gifts and talents to serve the needs of the Church the best way possible. Within the next few weeks, after consultation with Sister Mary John, the community will decide on her future position.

A testimonial dinner to honor Sister Mary John for her many contributions to stabilizing Catholic education in the Diocese of Amarillo is being planned in May.

There are 11 Catholic schools in the Diocese of Amarillo, seven in Amarillo and one each in Pampa, Borger, Dalhart and Hereford.

Some religious groups say souls at stake in debate on abortion

By DAVID BRIGGS
Associated Press Writer

Hell hath lost much of its fury in the modern age, some sociologists say.

The most commercially successful television preachers talk more about the joys of salvation than the perils of hellfire, and many Western Moslem leaders cringed when Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini promised a spot in heaven for whoever would send British author Salman Rushdie to hell.

But fueled by the nation's most explosive social issue, some would-be modern-day prophets who believe that abortion involves the murder of innocent children have revived the idea of hell, and say there are actions that endanger mortal souls.

Like their predecessors in American social movements from abolition to prohibition, "Evangelicalism has become engaged in a public battle for the soul of the nation," said the Rev. Paul Schenck, director of the National Clergy Council, a suburban Buffalo, N.Y.-based coalition of clergy opposed to abortion.

Most people still contemplate going to heaven when they die, but few dwell on the other possibility, say some religious leaders and sociologists.

When a New York bishop recently told Gov. Mario Cuomo he was in danger of going to hell because of his public support of legalized abortion, no one, including Cuomo, "trembled as a result of it," said Martin Marty, a professor of religious history at the University of Chicago.

The Rev. Richard McBrien, a theologian at Notre Dame, said the Roman Catholic Church since the Second Vatican Council in the early 1960s has moved from a negative view derived from St. Augustine — that the race is damned and only a few will be saved — to a perspective that mankind is "essentially a saved community from whom a few may be lost."

Brother Ihsan Babgy, acting secretary general of the Islamic Society of North America in Plainfield, Ind., said in Islam, despite what Khomeini reportedly said, "Nobody knows for sure who is going to heaven or hell."

Before 1952, Marty said, as many as half of Americans believed in hell. Since then, he said surveys revealed only from 8 percent to 13 percent of Americans "thought of hell as in any way a possibility for them."

But some religious leaders are concerned that personal responsibility has been thrown into the fire as well.

"In Western culture, we don't like to believe we are personally accountable to anything greater than ourselves," Schenck said. "While many preachers of a popular Gospel worry about the reaction to referencing hell, I think they also worry we are on a path of self-destruction...."

In an interview, Auxiliary Bishop Austin Vaughan of New York reiterated his position that if Gov. Cuomo dies without repenting of having supported publicly funded abortions, "he'd run a serious risk of going to hell."

"I think it's a serious sin if a person contributed to an abortion taking place with full knowledge," Vaughan said.

"There's no way as a Catholic you could believe that anyone has the right to kill a baby." Vaughan's remarkssion of a San Diego bishop to excommunicate a legislator who was an outspoken advocate of legalized abortion have to be seen in the "context of a greater amount of self-confidence and assertiveness of Catholic bishops in exercising their pastoral responsibilities over Catholics in public office," according to the Rev. Richard Neuhaus, director of the Institute on Religion and Public Life in New York.

Others are concerned that it crosses the line demarcating religion from partisan politics.

McBrien said the bishops appear to be selective in their political criticism, and he chided the hierarchy for not taking President Bush to task for not pressing for a constitutional amendment to ban abortions the way he did to prevent the flag from being burned.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

Two interesting alliances might be formed in the year ahead that could have important ramifications. Valuable knowledge may be gained through one contact, while a new group of friends may be acquired through another.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today you might have to make an important decision that could effect others as well as yourself. Fortunately, your judgment is excellent and that which you decide should be wise. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your workload might be a trifle heavier over the next few days, but it can be substantially lightened if you use your head as well as your back. Begin to formulate your game plan now.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Others may have to take a back seat socially today when a dominating character who wants the whole stage alone enters the scene, but not you. You'll be more than a match.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A critical family matter can be resolved today if the discussion is conducted in a matter that will allow all to get their two-cents worth in. Everyone's input is important.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) People you'll be involved with today might not grasp the essence of ideas as quickly as you will. Take time to render explanations when necessary.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't leave anything to chance in your commercial dealings today. Insistence upon a complete disclosure of relevant facts will make the difference between profit and loss.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) People who are not usually very supportive will be cooperative today if you approach them properly. Let them know how much you appreciate their help and how they can gain as well.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Things will have a way of working themselves out to your ultimate advantage today if you can keep your impatience in check. Focus on your goal, not your emotions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Projects or enterprises you personally manage or direct today have excellent chances for success. Delegate as little as possible and only to persons whose talents you trust.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be flexible today where your ambitious objectives are concerned. Goals you establish can be achieved but not necessarily in the ways you first envision.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Trade upon your past experiences today so that you do not waste time on methods or procedures that have proven to be unworkable. Much of value can be accomplished if you use your head.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) There's a possibility you could be more fortunate in financial matters today than you may be tomorrow. Don't let things dangle where a profit can be turned.

Pampa Bridge Club has selected Hospice of Pampa as their charity of the year and Clarendon College, Pampa Center will be offering Introduction to Bridge classes beginning Mar. 27.

Bridge club deals the cards for benefit of Hospice of Pampa

Pampa Bridge Club has selected Hospice of Pampa as their primary charity for this year according to Pat Leach, club president. The American Contract Bridge League (ACBL) has chosen the National Hospice Organization as the national charity for the year. The national organization will receive grants of $100,000 each year in 1990 and 1991. The National Committee for the Prevention of Child Abuse was chosen as the secondary charity and will receive grants of $50,000 in 1990 and 1991. Pampa Bridge Club, sanctioned by ACBL, is obligated to sponsor at least six charity games per year.

Proceeds from the first three games must go to the ACBL and proceeds from the other games to the club's charity of choice - this year Hospice of Pampa. In past years the Club has donated funds to Boy's Ranch, Girls' Town, Genesis House, Pampa Day Care Center, Pampa Senior Citizens, Latch Key Kids and Meals on Wheels. Pampa Bridge Club meets three times per week in Room 11 at Clarendon College, Pampa Center for their bridge games - Sunday at 2 p.m.; Thursday at 10 a.m.; and Monday at 6:45 p.m. The games are open to the public and arrangements for partners can be made by calling Verdalee Cooper at 669-2813 for Sundays; Marquerite Ward at 669-7543 for Thursdays; and Ethel Clay at 669-9513 for Mondays. Playing costs are only $1.25 per day. A ten-week beginner bridge course will be offered by Clarendon College, Pampa Center beginning Mar. 27 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Instructor will be Norma Tarbet. The basic course will use standard American bidding procedures. Defensive play as well as declared and dummy techniques will be stressed. For more information regarding the class contact Tarbet at 665-5476.

PFAA piano concert set for Sunday

Pampa Fine Arts Association will present Judith Felton in recital on Sunday, Mar. 11 at 2:30 p.m. in St. Matthew's Episcopal Sanctuary. Felton has been acclaimed as a concert pianist on both sides of the Atlantic. Her unique sensitivity as an artist combined with her outstanding interpretative gifts create an ever-increasing demand for return engagements. Since graduating from Harvard University where she majored in music, Felton has continued her piano studies with two exponents of the teaching of the internationally famous Tobias Matthay - in London with Hilda Dederich and in the U.S. with Frank Mannheimer. An unusual feature of her program will be a correlated slide show during the playing of Mussorgsky's "Pictures At An Exhibition." The performance is open to the public with an admission charge of $2 at the door.

Girl Scout Week - Mar. 11-17

The 78th anniversary of the Girl Scouts - the world's largest voluntary organization for girls - will be celebrated on Mar. 12 with Girl Scout Week being celebrated Mar. 11-17. Pampa Girl Scouts and Leaders have special activities planned all week in honor of the occasion. Scouts and Leaders will attend area wide churches together to celebrate Girl Scout Sunday, Mar. 11. On Monday, Mar. 12, Leaders will help deliver Meals on Wheels and on Monday evening all Junior, Cadette and Senior Girl Scouts, Leaders and their families will host a banquet at M.K. Brown Auditorium. Tuesday plans include troop donations of Girl Scout cookies to various United Way agencies. Daisy and Brownie Girl Scouts will participate in a Girl Scout Birthday Party at St. Matthew's Parish Hall on Wednesday. The girls will be bringing books, all wrapped for gift giving, to be distributed later to the Community Day Care Center and Tralce Crisis Center. On Thursday, adult leaders will honor each girl in their troop by placing a sign in their yard proclaiming a "girl scout lives here." "As the world changes and

Main has a wide range of professional experience in Girl Scouting, holding key posts at the local and national levels. She has worked for Girl Scout councils in several states including Iowa, Kansas, and Texas, serving as executive director, field executive, training director and director of public relations and fund raising. In her prior appointment as assistant national executive director, Main played a leading role in increasing Girl Scout membership to its present total of 3.1 million, the highest in 15 years. Main was also responsible for implementing a corporate planning and management system for Girl Scouts and for developing an acclaimed series of management monographs that are used by a number of outside organizations including for-profit groups. Main's priority as National Executive Director is to "strengthen and increase Girl Scout Membership by reaching out to all girls in our wonderfully diverse country."

Younger branch of family wants parents uprooted

DEAR ABBY: My husband is 72 and I am 71. We have yearly check-ups and are both in very good health. We live comfortably in our own home, with no mortgage and no debts. Our neighbors are very friendly, and we also have relatives living in this city, where we have lived happily for more than 50 years. Our daughter and her husband, who are both physicians, live in Oregon. They are worried about our advancing age and want us near them. They say the little house next to them is now for sale and they want to buy it for us, in case at some point we have an emergency and need their help.

We are very appreciative of their kindness and have told them time and again that we are happy here, but they insist that we would be better off living next door to them. We want our daughter and her husband to fulfill their lives as we did and quit worrying about our future. It would be difficult for us to move at our ages, but they are very insistent! We respect your opinion, Abby. What should I do?
 HAPPY IN FRESNO

DEAR HAPPY: Your children's concern for your welfare is admirable, but I think you'd be making a big mistake to give up your home and relocate because "at some point" you may need their help.

Dear Abby
 Abigail Van Buren

Older people fare best in familiar surroundings. So assure your children that you appreciate their generosity and caring, but you prefer to stay in Fresno, where you are happily and securely rooted. ***
 DEAR ABBY: My wife and I travel in a van with our two standard poodles. In mild weather they can stay in the van overnight, but when it's very hot or very cold, we cannot leave them in a closed-up van, so we put them in a kennel. This is quite expensive, and not satisfactory when we take long trips. Can you tell us where to find a directory of overnight accommodations that allow dogs to stay in the rooms with their owners? We realize there are probably not many, because dogs can be destructive, dirty or noisy. Our vet knows of no such directory. Thank you for any help you can give us.

 WOODBURY, CONN.

DEAR WOODBURY: The American Automobile Association (AAA) has a list of hotels and motels that allow pets. Contact your local office for more information. I am reminded of this charming message one reader saw framed and hanging near the registration desk in a small hotel: "Dogs are welcome in this hotel. We never had a dog that smoked in bed and set fire to the blankets. We never had a dog who stole our towels, played the TV too loud or had a noisy fight with his traveling companion. We never had a dog that got drunk and broke up the furniture. So if your dog can vouch for you, you're welcome, too."

Reserves play major role in Rockets' win

HOUSTON (AP) — The Seattle SuperSonics are the latest NBA team to trip over the Houston Rockets' bench.

Akeem Olajuwon scored 30 points and got eight rebounds Thursday night, leading the Rockets to their fifth straight victory, a 111-97 decision over the SuperSonics in The Summit.

The Rockets bench contributed 36 points and 21 rebounds that kept the Rockets in command throughout the game.

"Once again, we had good contribution from our bench," Rockets coach Don Chaney said. "The difference right now is when one or two guys aren't getting the job done, then someone off the bench is doing the job."

Larry Smith got a season high 16 rebounds in 29 minutes; Mike Woodson scored 15 points and Vernon Maxwell added 11 points in reserve roles.

"I can be more aggressive now that I'm healthy," Smith said. "Because I've always been a starter before this year, I need more floor time to be better and I'm getting that now."

The Rockets took a 39-37 lead with 7:21 to go in the second quarter and didn't trail the rest of the game, leading 58-53 at the half.

Olajuwon scored 16 points in the third quarter when Seattle made its most determined run. Houston outscored the Sonics 35-31 in the third quarter and held them to 13 fourth quarter points.

Houston finally pulled away with a 10-2 surge that ended with the Rockets leading 105-92 with 4:49 left in the game.

The SuperSonics committed 26 turnovers and blamed their miscues for the loss.

"Tonight we had a lot of self-inflicted wounds," said Seattle's Michael Cage, who scored 20 points. "Several times we just stepped out of bounds or lost the rebound or lost control of the ball."

"Our turnovers allowed them to build on their lead and put the icing on the cake."

The Sonics are playing without key players Xavier McDaniel and Dale Ellis, both sidelined with injuries and they couldn't overcome the turnovers.

"The Rockets are playing great but we should have won," Seattle coach Bernie Bickerstaff said. "They got their fast break from our 26 turnovers, this is a game the Harlem Globetrotters would be proud of."

"That's totally out of character for our basketball team. I'm disappointed with some of the things we're doing on offense with the basketball."

Dana Barros added 19 points for the Sonics including two of three 3-point baskets. Cage also led the Sonics with 14 rebounds.

Boerne faces Dallas Lincoln in 4A finals

AUSTIN (AP) — Of all the top-ranked teams Port Arthur Lincoln has battled in the state tournament, the most unlikely of all finally erased the Lincoln's perfect slate.

The unheralded Boerne Greyhounds pulled off a major upset Thursday night by defeating Lincoln 59-55 in overtime in front of 10,677 screaming fans.

When David Shivers hit a jumper in the lane with 14 seconds remaining, the Bumblebees suffered their first ever loss in a state tournament game.

UIL boys' state tourney

Boerne, 28-7, will now face Dallas Lincoln in the 4A finals Saturday. Dallas Lincoln defeated Fort Worth Boswell 79-67 in the other semifinal game.

No. 1 ranked Port Arthur Lincoln, 29-6, came into the game with a perfect 10-0 record at the state tournament with five state titles in the 80's before the Boerne upset.

Boerne led from early in the first quarter until Terry Miller drilled a three-pointer to give Lincoln the lead 41-39 with 1:13 left in the third quarter.

However Chad Chase made both ends of a one-and-one to tie the game at 41-41 after three quarters.

Boerne grabbed a 50-48 lead in the final period, but Ronald Campbell made four straight charity shots sandwiched around a Chivers layup to make it 52-52 and send the game into overtime.

Robbie Shivers started off the extra period with a three-pointer for a 55-52 advantage, but Kelvin McKyer hit a free throw, followed by two from Vincent Shelvin to tie the game again 55-55 before Shivers' short shot.

Shivers, who came in with a 30-point average, finished the contest with 16 points after sitting out most of the game in foul trouble.

The 6-6 Campbell finished with 18 points and 15 rebounds to lead Lincoln.

Dallas Lincoln outscored Fort Worth Boswell 14-2 in the final 4:57 to break open a tight game and slide past the Pioneers in the first 4A semifinal.

In a tug-of-war struggle that turned into a scoring battle between Lincoln guard Willie Black and Boswell postman Tom Etchison, neither team held more than a six-point advantage until Lincoln made its run late in the contest. The game was tied 11 times and was 40-40 at halftime and 56-56 after three periods.

Black spearheaded the Lincoln attack with 19 points, while Etchison poured in his average of 26 points and swept the boards for 10 rebounds.

State tournament veteran Lamesa will be vying for its fourth championship in 10 tries when it meets No. 1 ranked and unbeaten Navasota in the Class 3A finals.

Lamesa destroyed Gonzales 100-69, while 34-0 Navasota downed Gainesville 54-35 in a battle of tournament newcomers in the other 3A semifinal.

Using cat-like quickness and a smothering full-court trap, Lamesa, 30-6, established a new Class 3A tournament scoring record by hitting the century mark. The Golden Tornados shattered the previous mark set by Phillips in 1956. The two teams also combined to break the aggregate high score game of 165 set by the same Phillips team against Webster (84-81).

It was the first time a team has scored 100 points in a state tournament game since Conroe defeated Corpus Christi King 107-76 in a semifinal game in 1985.

Senior Dwight Mason connected on 15-of-25 shots and had 34 points for Lamesa. Kirk Mathis paced Gonzales, 32-6, with 22.

Kevin Baker had 16 points for Navasota, while Paul Oatts was the only Gainesville scorer in double figures with 12.

Moulton will try to avenge a loss in last year's state finals when it takes on Santo Saturday in the Class A championship.

Moulton, 33-5, handily defeated Vega 67-43, while Santo held off a last-minute Brookeland comeback bid 82-80 in the other semifinal game.

The Santo-Brookeland combined score of 162 is a new class record for aggregate points, which was previously held by four different teams at 160.

Harvester golfers 12th after first round at San Angelo

SAN ANGELO — The Harvester golf team shot a 331 at Bentwood Country Club Thursday to move into 12th place after the first round of the San Angelo Boys' Classic golf tournament.

But, according to Pampa coach Frank McCullough, the Harvesters' score is likely to improve considerably during today's second round at San Angelo Country Club.

"The scores can't really be compared after one day," said McCullough, whose team took fourth at the state tournament last May in Austin. "Due to construction on the course, San Angelo Country Club is playing to a par 68. It's usually a par 71, and that's why the scores are lower than at Bentwood."

Indeed, all of Thursday's top 10 teams played at San Angelo Country Club. Today, those teams will play at Bentwood, while Pampa competes at San Angelo.

Golf roundup

"It looks like some of these teams beat us to death on the first day, but they didn't really," McCullough said. "One coach said our scores could improve by as much as 8-10 strokes per man on Friday. The weather was beautiful today (Thursday), and if the weather is decent again, we'll get a good comparison of courses."

Ryan Teague, competing in his first golf tourney since the end of the basketball season, led the Harvesters with a score of 76, followed by Matt McDaniel with 80. Mark Wood, also playing in his first tourney of the year, shot an 81, while Jason Harris had 94 and Jay Earp 96.

"No more than they've played, I was tickled to death to see Ryan and Mark shoot 76 and 81 and for Matt to shoot 80," McCullough said. "We need another guy to shoot 80 and we'll be right in there with a respectable score."

See today's Scoreboard for team standings after one day. Final results will be published in Sunday's edition of The Pampa News.

The Pampa High School girls golf team is also competing in tournament action this weekend.

The Lady Harvesters travel to Hereford today for the first round of the Hereford Invitational. The tourney will conclude Saturday. Results will be published Sunday.

Volunteer workers are needed at the new Hidden Hills golf course at 9:30 a.m. on Saturday.

Workers are asked to meet at the pro shop. One restroom needs to be finished and painting will be done on both restrooms.

Men and women are needed, so bring a paintbrush or roller and be ready to spruce up the new buildings. Work will also continue on the fence around the course.

Players' union rejects Fay Vincent's plan

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — The players' union, which dismissed Commissioner Fay Vincent's offer to open training camps in exchange for a no-strike pledge, and team owners appear headed in different directions with the scheduled opening day of the season just 24 days away.

Vincent announced his proposal during a news conference Thursday as negotiations remained in a stalemate over salary arbitration. The union called the commissioner's idea "silly" and "a public relations stunt."

"We are not, unless there is some miracle, going to resolve this in the next several days," Vincent said Thursday night.

"When I came here this week, I really thought it would get done," Phil Bradley of the Baltimore Orioles said. "It really looks bad now."

The union wants half the players with between two and three years of service made eligible for salary arbitration. Owners have proposed a $4 million bonus pool for those players. Neither side will consider the other's offer.

"We are dismayed with their proposal. We are dismayed at their reaction," Milwaukee owner Bud Selig, chairman of management's Player Relations Committee, said after Vincent's announcement.

"Some would say this suggests owners are still not interested in making a settlement," union chief Donald Fehr said. "That is my view."

In 1976, owners locked out players on Feb. 23, but Commissioner Bowie Kuhn ordered camps open on March 17. Vincent said he is reluctant to end the lockout by using the authority to act in the "best interest of baseball."

"I do not like the idea of the commissioner of baseball opening camps," he said. "It is something that should be achieved by agreement."

The lockout is in its 23rd day — equaling the second-longest work stoppage in baseball history — and 224 of 410 exhibition games have been canceled. The sides have agreed that players must be in camp by Monday if the season is to start as scheduled on April 2.

"I guess, we've been naive enough to keep thinking we're going to reach an agreement," American League president Bobby Brown said.

The sides talked into the night on Wednesday, the 31st session since negotiations began Nov. 28. The PRC met on Thursday and, according to Vincent, wasn't interested in the union's plan.

Huston leads Honda Classic

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — A solemn decree from golf's officialdom forced John Huston to abandon some equipment that had been ruled illegal before he took the first-round lead in the Honda Classic.

It wasn't his clubs that the U.S. Golf Association found contrary to the Rules of Golf. No problem there.

The ball was OK, too. It was Huston's shoes that were found to be in violation of rule 14-3B, said the USGA, the rule-making body for golf in this country.

Huston was informed of the ruling moments before his tee time on Thursday. He made a hasty trip to the pro shop, purchased a pair of more conventional — and, presumably, approved — footwear and went about the business of shooting a 68 in howling winds.

That score is listed as four under par on the TPC at Eagle Trace but was, according to Mark Calcavecchia, much better than that.

"On a day like this, that 68 is really more like a 65 or 64," the British Open champion said.

"With winds like this, anything under 75 is a good score," Calcavecchia said of the gales that gust-ed to 45 mph. "It was not unplayable, but it was very, very tough."

It was tough enough that 26 men in the field of 144 shot 80 or higher and only six broke par 72.

Calcavecchia and Tim Simpson, both playoff losers last week in Miami, were among them.

Calcavecchia ran an 80-yard wedge shot into the cup for an eagle-2 on the 14th hole, the critical shot in a round of 70 that put him alone in second.

"It hit the hole, did a 360 around the cup, hung on the front lip, then fell in," he said. His wife Sheryl, who was serving as his caddy, "dropped the bag, just let it fall over. She couldn't believe it."

Simpson was in a group at 71 with Gil Morgan, Mark Brooks and Joel Edwards.

Two-time U.S. Open champion Curtis Strange, making his first start in this country in two months, had a 74.

Payne Stewart, the PGA titleholder who has been second in this event in each of the last three seasons, shot 75.

John Huston tees off on the 18th hole Thursday.

Scalpers cash in at boys state basketball tourney

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas schoolboy basketball tournament has become such a "hot ticket" that scalpers reportedly are selling tickets for twice their original price of $35, which is good for the 15-game program.

Bailey Marshall, University Interscholastic League director, said, "If 'hot ticket' means state tournament tickets are being scalped, I'd have to say there is some of that going on."

Marshall said two years ago, ticket scalpers were getting $50 to $75 just prior to the tournament's last game — the 5A title match between Houston Sam Houston and Fort Worth Dunbar.

"I guess, in some ways, it's a pleasant problem to have because it does indicate there is intense interest in the tournament. There is no law against scalping in Texas, but we are looking for ways to decrease the abilities of people to scalp tickets to the tournament," Marshall said Wednesday.

The UIL has contacted state athletic associations in such states as Kentucky and Indiana, where high school basketball has huge followings, to see how they deal with the scalping problem, he said.

"Hopefully, they can give us some ideas that will cut down our problems with it," Marshall said.

He said the UIL has about 10,000 tournament tickets to sell, at $35 apiece, and the only restriction is that each purchaser is limited to six tickets.

Advance sales began Jan. 12, and the 1,500 tickets available in the lower level of the 16,231-seat Erwin Center were sold the first day, with apparently about one-third going to scalpers, he said.

"We could have sold 20,000 in the lower deck if we'd had that many," Marshall said.

Other than the some 10,000 sales on a tournament-ticket basis, the remaining 6,000 seats are held for the 20 schools at the tournament and are sold on a session basis — $4 for adults, $3 for students.

Tickets for the finals on Saturday go on sale after finalists are determined Thursday and Friday.

Jazz snap Bulls' win streak

By The Associated Press

The Utah Jazz have a secret for success. The Jazz, however, did nothing to hide it Thursday night in beating Chicago 98-94 to snap the Bulls' nine-game winning streak.

Utah's formula for beating the Bulls was to get the ball to their big men.

Karl Malone led the Jazz with 27 points and Thurl Bailey had 22. "Our secret is to kick the ball inside," said Utah coach Jerry Sloan, who played 10 seasons for the Bulls. "We've got the big guys to work inside."

The loss was only the Bulls' third at home in 26 games. It was Utah's ninth victory in 10 games and improved their road record to 15-14. Utah (43-17) leads second-place San Antonio by four games in the Midwest Division.

Utah's starting front line of Malone, Bailey and Mark Eaton combined for 55 points, while the Bulls' front line of Scottie Pippen, Horace Grant and Will Perdue had 32.

"We wanted to get the ball inside," Malone said. "That's what we're best at. If we just keep doing what we do best, we'll keep winning."

The Jazz let Michael Jordan have his way, and he scored 43 points.

The Bulls battled back from a 73-54 third-quarter deficit to 96-94 with three seconds left on two free throws by Jordan. But Malone, who hit 13 foul shots without a miss, converted two with two seconds left.

"We were concerned about blowing it down the stretch," Sloan said. "They took up the middle and forced us to shoot outside." Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "The referees pretty much said they weren't going to call any light contact fouls inside. And that is Utah's game."

Payton leads all nominees for AP Player of the Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Oregon State's Gary Payton and Kansas' Roy Williams lead the list of finalists for The Associated Press' college basketball awards.

Payton, who led the Beavers to the regular-season Pac-10 title averaging 26.1 points and 8.4 assists per game, was the top vote-getter among the 12 players on the ballot for nominees for Player of the Year. There was a three-way tie for 10th place.

Among the others nominated were Loyola Marymount teammates Bo Kimble, the nation's leading scorer at 35.3, and Hank Gathers, who died earlier this week after collapsing on the court for the second time this season. Gathers led the nation in scoring and rebounding as a junior last season and he was averaging 29.0 points and 10.8 rebounds this season.

Lionel Simmons of La Salle, a close friend of Gathers', moved to third place on the all-time Division I scoring list this season and led the Explorers to a season-best 28-1 record with the only loss at the hands of Loyola.

Others on the list included: Derrick Coleman of Syracuse, Dennis Scott of Georgia Tech, Chris Jackson of Louisiana State, Larry Johnson of UNLV, Doug Smith of Missouri, Alec Kessler of Georgia, Steve Scheffler of Purdue, and Rumeal Robinson of Michigan.

Moulton, who lost in last year's finale to Fannindel, used its inside height advantage to dispose of Vega and end its perfect season at 29-1.

Patrick Henke, a 6-4 sophomore who was an all-tournament selection last year as a freshman, led Moulton, 33-5, with 18 points and eight rebounds.

Vega was led by Cody Walker with 16 points and nine boards.

Some games people play have changed as time goes by

By MARK KING
Sulphur Springs News-Telegram

SULPHUR SPRINGS (AP) — Whatever happened to the Wheel-O? Or pogo sticks, yo-yos, tops, marbles, Lincoln Logs, erector sets, Tinker Toys, Pick-up Sticks, Slinkies, and that old rainy day thriller Parcheesi?

Those toys belonged to a different generation from today's youngsters — a generation that probably didn't spend as much time in front of the television — or hunched over the controls of a video game.

Video games weren't around then, but doll houses, Superballs and BB guns were.

Kids today play with things like Nintendo's Game Boy (the latest rage in hand-held video games). With some slight modifications, you could probably program it for automatic pilot duty on interstellar space missions.

Nadine Cawthorn, who has been in the five-and-dime business for more than 48 years, talked about some of the toys one can't find anymore.

Mrs. Cawthorn worked 42 years with Duke and Ayers in downtown Sulphur Springs, until Perry Bros. bought them out. She then managed the Perry Bros. Sulphur Springs store for six years. Mrs. Cawthorn still occasionally works for other Perry Bros. stores and she has seen a lot of toys come and go; and a lot of kids grow up.

Several decades ago, before cars were being made of plastic, things were made differently. "Back then it was all metal toys and tractors were the big thing," Mrs. Cawthorn said. "Back in the 40s every little boy had to have a little Ford tractor.

"Now children have some of the crudest, wildest-looking toys," she said. "All of those space generator things...I'd be scared to let my children play with them."

But things are safer (?) now. Plastic toys don't come with sharp edges like the metal toys used to. And things that were really sharp, like knives, can't be found in the toy department anymore.

Mrs. Cawthorn said toy departments used to stock pocket knives. "We would just have rows and rows of them, but you just don't have those anymore in a five-and-ten."

What you can find, though, is plastic things that look sharp, like the Battle Beasts Warrior Weapons; "Battle for the fun of it." Or you can buy cute things like the Commando Forces Uzi; "First to protect." Do mercenary magazines have things like that for adults? You bet they do.

Some toys that were never sharp, but have faded away nonetheless, were things like paper doll sets, doll beds and assorted doll house accessories.

"We haven't had doll beds down at Perry Brothers in a long time," Mrs. Cawthorn said. "I still think people could sell those little wooden dressers."

Another type of wooden toy that is hard to find now is the series of musical instruments that stores once stocked.

"The last year that I worked at Perry's we were talking about how we couldn't get the little wooden guitars any more," Mrs. Cawthorn said. "They were real pretty...I think they'll come back."

Stores also stocked metal horns and drums at one time. Now all the musical toys are plastic. The little guitars sound like bags of marshmallows with rubber bands wrapped around them when you pluck the strings.

And the old thrillers Parcheesi and Chinese Checkers are virtually unknown now, Mrs. Cawthorn said. "Chinese Checkers — boy, they were a hot thing back then."

Now you can pick up a copy of the board games Solarquest: The Space-age Real Estate Game, or Trivial Pursuit: The Genius Edition.

Give me "A Million Bucks" in play money any day. You don't have to be a genius with "A Million Bucks" in your pocket. You can hire a genius who will probably tell you that investing in one of Saturn's moons is the best way to manage your money.

Some of the toys that have transcended the generation gap, and can still be found in Perry's, are things like Bang Caps, with the cowboy firing two six-shooters on the end of the box; little rubber monsters and rubber balls; the paddle ball (looking, sadly, smaller and cheaper), the Duncan Yo-Yo; slingshots (plastic and metal now); checkers; and Milton Bradley's Operation Skill Game "Where You're the Doctor."

Bubble kits, tea sets, jump ropes and packages of plastic cowboys and Indians are still there, too. The little plastic, noise-making lawn mower sits quietly on a shelf, waiting for a vigorous child to run around the house with it, driving a poor parent crazy.

Brandon Whisenhunt, 6, of Sulphur Springs, checks out a space theme toy in a local department store recently.

"Toys are a mystery," Anita Penner, a Perry clerk, said. "You never know what kids want."

Ethel Winton, another Perry clerk, said her grandson got excited over a wooden clothespin. "Momma," the 4-year-old said to his mother, "Can I have this snapper?"

Ms. Penner said, surprisingly enough, the Hula-Hoop was still a strong seller. Notwithstanding the availability of a Hula-Hoop, though, Ms. Penner said that one little boy was disappointed in the toy selection her store offered.

"He offered 'to hire on and buy all the toys,'" she said.

Fender: band member's death stirs memories of own battle with drugs

EL PASO (AP) — Tejano singer Freddy Fender says he doesn't think the death of one of his band members is drug-related, but the tragedy has stirred memories of his own previous struggle with drugs and alcohol.

Fender, 52, who calls himself a recovering alcoholic and former drug addict, said Wednesday he suffered a deep loss from the death of his bass guitar player Johnny Garcia because he has tried to be an example to others.

"I am a recovering alcoholic and drug addict and it's my commitment to other drug addicts and other drunks to help them, because it's going to help me ... If there is any person that is anti-drugs and anti-booze, it's me," Fender said in a phone interview from Branson, Mo.

Garcia died Sunday in Horizon City, a community on the outskirts of El Paso. Fender said he was surprised to learn that officials thought Garcia's death was drug-related because he had not seen Garcia use drugs.

El Paso County Sheriff's Sgt. Marvin Ryals said Tuesday that Garcia was driving with other band members around the community Sunday when he collapsed. Efforts to revive him at a local fire station failed and Garcia, 38, was pronounced dead at an El Paso hospital. Fender was not with the band at the time, said Ryals of the criminal investigation division.

Fender said the group had stopped at a Horizon City truck stop and was sleeping in the band's bus. He said some of the band members went out for drinks, while he remained behind and slept. Fender was awakened the next morning by a phone call from police telling him what happened, he said.

Fender said a county medical examiner told him Garcia died of a heart attack. Sylvia Ponce in the medical examiner's office said Wednesday the office is awaiting toxicology tests and had not made a ruling on his death.

Ryals said Garcia's death appeared to be drug-related based on information his office received.

Fender, best known for his country-Western hit "Wasted Days and Wasted Nights," saw his career plummet when he drank heavily and used drugs. Since entering a treatment center Aug. 26, 1985, he has tried to rebuild his career. He recently acted in the Robert Redford film "Milagro Beanfield War" and now expects to release a new single in July.

But he hasn't forgotten his struggle. He knows exactly how long he's been sober.

"Four years, six months and nine days,"

Fender said he has strict rules against alcohol and drug use by his band members and crew and does not allow drinking on the band bus.

Mother's advice to eat balanced diet still holds

By MARY MacVEAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans know a balanced diet is the healthiest one, but they don't eat that way, according to a national poll.

Moderation seems to be a tough prescription to follow.

"Americans are surprisingly knowledgeable about nutrition and health, but when it comes to translating facts into food choices, most still opt for quick fixes and the latest health fads," Nancy Wellman, president of the American Dietetic Association, the nation's largest group of food and nutrition professionals, said last week at a news conference to announce results of a Gallup survey.

Ninety-five percent of those polled said balance, variety and moderation are the keys to healthy eating, and 83 percent said they were fairly or very concerned that what they eat might affect their health.

Sixty-four percent said they were eating more fiber, and nearly half said they had increased their intake of calcium.

Nearly three-quarters said they were trimming fat from their diets and roughly two-thirds reported cutting out saturated fats, cholesterol and fried foods. But only 8 percent said they were eating more vegetables, while 15 percent said they'd added fish oil to their diets.

"Despite their awareness of basic nutrition principles, many consumers seem to view food as medicine," said Margo A. Denke, a nutrition research scientist at the University of Texas. "They think adding or eliminating a particular food or ingredient will automatically prevent or cure illness. Such an approach is not only unrealistic, it can also prove harmful."

Part of the trouble is a perception that there are "forbidden foods," which seems to make people crave the foods they try to do without and then feel all the guiltier when they splurge on them.

"Prohibition of food creates guilt," Wellman said. "And guilt destroys good intentions and can lead people to actually overeat or binge on those forbidden foods."

Thirty-five percent of those surveyed said high-fat foods cannot be part of a healthy diet.

"The thing that surprised me is that people are still going to extremes not in their best interest, particularly women who are eliminating dairy foods when there are good, tasty low -and even non-fat foods in that category," Wellman said in a telephone interview.

She also cited a "continuing misconception that red meat cannot be part of a healthy diet."

"The advice most moms gave out about a moderate, balanced diet remains 'useful and durable,'" Wellman said.

"One of my favorite special-occasion treats is a hot fudge sundae," she said. "I realize I can't have one for dessert every night, yet it would be off-base to think I could never eat one."

The Gallup Organization conducted the telephone survey of 772 American adults Dec. 11-28 for the ADA and the non-profit, food industry-funded International Food Information Council. The poll had a margin of error of plus or minus 4 percentage points.

The ADA and IFIC published a pamphlet, "10 Tips to Healthy Eating," available free by sending a stamped, self-addressed business-sized envelope to: 10 Tips, P.O. Box 1144, Rockville, Md., 20850.
