Shevardnadze: Secessions would cause destabilization of internal Soviet structure

Bush sends Congress $1.23 trillion budget

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush today sent Congress a $1.23 trillion budget for next year that slows the growth in military spending and calls for no general tax increase as part of a plan to cut the deficit by half.

Bush proposed hefty spending increases for the 1991 fiscal year in space exploration, cleaning up the environment and the Head Start preschool program.

He recommended cuts in Medicare, college student loans and farm subsidies, among other domestic programs.

sewer sludge problem. In fact, in some cities the problem is so severe that mountains of waste pile up 25 to 30 feet high for thousands of acres.

"We're looking at a joint venture in a year to a year and a half in Honolulu to take all their yard waste and sludge for $35 a ton," Urbanczyk said. "They can burn it in their incinerator for $200 a ton and still they have to find a place to bury the ash.

"If they are smart, they will go with us."

Urbanczyk said markets for the compost are virtually unlimited. Countries all over the globe are using the rich soil to mix with sand and turn deserts into rich, irrigated farm land. Corporations such as Dole and Del Monte are seeking all the compost they can buy for fertilizer on their crops.

"The only downside is the education process is so slow," Urbanczyk said. "It's been more economical to dig a hole and cover it up. It's not that way anymore and we have a solution to their problem.'

In addition to building the Scarab, Urbanczyk is also involved in cooperative ventures that put him into the operating phase of landfills.

'We're currently talking with a contact out of San "I got a patent in 1977 and we started building and Diego to move 1,000 tons an hour (of municipal waste) selling machines around the world," Urbanczyk out of the Northeast and compost it in Mexico," he said.

City officials from Pampa recently acknowledged they are exploring the possibility of a cooperative venture with Urbanczyk that would create a regional composting, recycling and baling operation in the city.

Mayor Richard Peet recently noted that not only would such a plan extend the life of the city's landfill, it would be a chance for meaningful economic development for the area.

Landfill experts from New York City to Los Angeles and Minnesota to Houston, when contacted about the virtues of Urbanczyk's machine and ideas for a total reclamation effort, had nothing but praise.

"Our only problem has been the politics," said a city manager in a midwestern city who asked not to be named because of conflicts in that city over waste issues. "There is short term cost in this. It costs money to build this kind of operation.

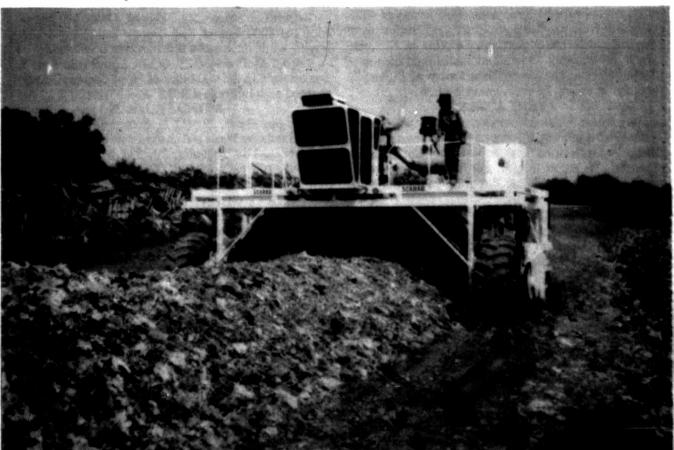

"The problem is that no city council that's in for a year or two wants to go to taxpayers and say, 'We raised your taxes to pay for this thing that will extend the life of your landfill 50 years, help save our planet and that, a few years down the road, is going to make us some money on selling the recyclables.

"It's a question of doing the right thing. To be honest, most cities want to do the cheap thing. Right or wrong has nothing to do with it."

A city manager in the Panhandle, while refusing to respond to such comments on the record, agreed if his name was withheld.

"Here's the Catch-22: How can I choose between something that costs, say $100, and works to save our planet, and something that costs $50 and maintains the status quo?" he asked. "It's easy to get self-righteous

Questions raised concerning broken-bones research with greyhounds

By DONNA CASSATA Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - New questions are being raised about Army-sponsored research on animals following the removal of a review panel member who ty. voiced concerns about bone-breaking experiments on retired greyhound dogs.

"The public would be outraged at the excessive amount of tax dollars that are being wasted on research which does not contribute to human health," Jan Polon said this month, shortly after her removal from the voluntary post on the animal use committee at California's Letterman Army Institute of Research.

Polon, an occupational therapist and the lone public representative on the review panel, had expressed opposition to several animal experiments over four years.

The California Democrat urged Corby to reconsider his decision, "since it is certain to be perceived as punitive action which only elevates public concern about what is going on at LAIR."

A spokesman at the Presidio said Polon was simply let go, and Army officials, in letters to Boxer, have steadfastly defended the experiments.

George Thomas Kohoutek, 38, of Aspen, Colo., was being held without bail today in a Dallas jail.

Kohoutek, who has been convicted twice of driving while intoxicated and has several other such cases pending against him in Colorado and Dallas, was arrested Sunday afternoon at his parents' home in Dallas without incident, police said.

Kohoutek was charged with killing Rafael Caracheo, 26, who police believe was struck intentionally by a hit-and-run driver on a Dallas street Saturday morning.

Witnesses said the driver of a late-model red Jeep Cherokee made a U-turn after passing Caracheo on a street, then drove over the median into oncoming traffic, sped up and ran him down.

Caracheo was dragged on the Jeep's hood more than 100 feet before being thrown into a street sign, police said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

They both should give us our tax cuts

By now you've probably gotten your first 1990 paycheck, and noticed the huge gouge taken out of it. The gouge is from the increased Social Security payments you're making. The funny thing is, though, that the money is going neither to pay current Social Security recipients, nor pay for your own retirement.

Instead, the new tax is going into the Social Security Trust Fund. The fund is supposed to be held for the baby boomers, who will start retiring in about 20 years. But Congress has already borrowed against the money; in other words, it's spending the money. When the baby boomers start retiring, Congress will either have to raise the money through yet more taxes, cut the promised Social Security benefits or cut other spending.

To counter this obvious flim-flam, New York Sen. Daniel Moynihan has proposed returning to you the money seized under the new tax. He wants a payroll cut that would save the average employee about $300 in 1991.

This is a great idea and should be adopted posthaste. Unfortunately, the picture is complicated by two things. Sen. Moynihan has used his proposal for a demagogical attack on wealthy taxpayers and on President Bush's capital gains tax cut, which supposedly will help only the wealthy.

In fact, any tax cut helps all people: wealthy, middle class and poor. Bush's capital gains tax cut will create jobs for the unemployed; and Sen. Moyihan's payroll tax cut will put more money in the hands of laborers, who, in turn, will spend the money on goods that will bring profits to the rich, which can lead to the creation of more jobs. We must always remember that we are all in the economy together. And that just as any tax hurts everyone, so any tax cut helps everyone.

The second complication is that Bush opposes the payroll tax cut. The White House says the Social Security tax hike is needed to help reduce the federal deficit. This is the same old root-canal Republican economics; it's also a delusion. The whole nature of the Trust Fund is not to help the deficit by allowing Congress to borrow against it, but to serve as a trust for the retirement claims of the baby boom generation. Now, since the money is clearly not being held as a trust, it should be refunded to taxpayers.

Bush is also foolishly offending one of his main constituencies, libertarians and consersavtives who strongly favor the tax cuts. Says David Boaz of the libertarian Cato Institute: "The White House is making a big mistake. Bush is giving the Democrats the tax cut issue, the position that has been most successful in winning the presidency over the last three decades."

Perhaps Bush's opposition can be turned to good advantage in the end. Democrats such as Moynihan can trade the payroll tax cut for Bush's capital gains tax cut. One side can say it helped the "rich" while the other side can say it helped the "workers," even as all Americans gain.

The best thing for the economy now is for the White House and Congress to get in a bidding war to see who can give us the biggest

How not to treat a lady Marine

In July 1988, the Marine Corps court-martialed a sergeant named Cheryl Jameson. A drill inspector (DI) at Parris Island, S.C., she pleaded guilty to charges of engaging in a lesbian relationship with a former recruit. She was sentenced to a year in prison, demoted to private and dishonorably discharged.

This is not a column about Jameson. This is a column about another woman in the Marines, former Staff Sgt. Christine Rene Hilinski. After 11 years in the Corps, she too was effectively bounced out. She was deprived of her supplementary pay as a drill instructor and subjected to a negative report in her file.

What was Hilinski's offense? She testified with her opinions, and when her opinions did not match their opinions, so much for Sgt. Hilinski. Off with her head.

In February 1989, seven months after the trial, Hilinski left the Corps. A few weeks ago she filed suit in an obscure defense agency, the Board for Correction of Navy Records. She asks for restitution of $1,320 in back pay as a DI and for restoration of her good service record. Under the circumstances it is little enough to ask.

This is what the record shows. Year after year, from the time of her enlistment in 1977, Hilinski received outstanding evaluations. She rose steadily through the enlisted ranks. From 1982 through 1984 she served as a drill instructor at Parris Island. Hér commanding officer said of her:

"Sgt. Hilinski contributes a maturity, dependability and knowledge of recruit training that sets her apart from her peers. Quietly aggressive and always professional, Sgt. Hilinski provides stability in a pressurized environment ... Her intuitive and intellectual capabilities, when combined with her growth as a Marine is limited only by billet as her potential is profound."

In January 1987, Hilinski began her second tour of duty as a drill instructor. A year later she was made depot inspector. Her fitness reports were in the same vein. "Her judgment is outstanding." "She consistently displays exemplary bearing."

During a period of four months in 1987, Hilinski shared DI duties with Jameson. Just before the court-martial, Jameson's defense attorney interviewed her. She was subpoenaed to testify as a character witness. On July 14, 1988, Hilinski appeared before the court-martial. Q: Did you have an opportunity to observe Sgt.

Jameson's performance of duty?

A: Yes, sir. Q: How did she do in performance of those duties?

A: Very well, very competent drill instructor.

Q: Would you be willing to work with Sgt. Jameson again?

A: Yes, very much so.

Counsel asked a leading question: "You certainly don't agree with what she has pled guilty to, what she has done?" Hilinski responded, "Sir, I am not even sure what she's being charged with."

Q: OK, she's being charged with having ahomosexual relationship with a recruit after the recruit graduated.

A: Well, since the homosexual affair didn't happen while she was training the recruit, then I have-no bad opinion of that. On cross-examination, the prosecutor asked a truthfully before the court-martial. Her superiors thorough knowledge of recruit training, result in sarcastic question: "So, homosexual activity" had no interest in truth. Their sole concern was consistently sound judgment ... This NCO's between superiors and subordinates, in your opinion, is OK in the Marine Corps?"

A: No, sir, it is not.

Four days later Hilinski lost her DI job. Spokesmen for the Corps do not deny that she was disciplined in retaliation for her testimony, but they put it differently: She was relieved of her duty "as a result of loss of confidence by her superiors." Hilinski had "condoned" a drill instructor's sexual relationship with a recruit.

Nan Hunter, an attorney with the American Civil Liberties Union in New York, has taken Hilinski's case. She challenges the Corps' action as an unconstitutional violation of the sergeant's right of free speech. Of course it is.

And the vindictive action is something more. It will have a chilling influence on every Corps witness before a court-martial hereafter. This simply is no way to treat enlisted personnel. Somebody's higher-up head should roll.

Electric car is in our future

We're going to have us an electric car! There are Americans who believe that indus-

Fewer people now using food stamps, analysts say

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - The number of poor Americans has food stamps, a paradoxical decline that's no surprise to participants.

Participation declined to an average of 18.8 million in 1988 from 19.8 million in 1980, while the number of people living in poverty rose to 32.5 million in 1987 from 29.3 million in 1980, according to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, a non-profit research group based in Washington.

'The cost is immaterial," Urbanczyk insisted. "Whatever it is, you will have to pay it - kind of like gasoline. People have to have a place to get rid of their trash. the problem, you are only burying it. We have a natural decomposition process."

While Urbanczyk is not the only one in the world building composting machines, reports from around the nation, even from city officials who have not gone to the Scarab, seem to indicate he is doing it best.

He scoffed at reports that one composting firm advertises they use chemicals to aid the decomposition

You don't need them, so why charge the city for because of the latter. But people around here still don't them?" he asked. "All they are doing is buying chemicals for $6 a barrel and selling it back to the city for $30

"I've got credibility because it's a better solution,"

Recycling and composting are clear trends for the '90s, much of it do to poential savings for municipalities. In Texas, for example, landfills have to pay 50 cents per ton to the state tipping fee for all waste that is

Material that is recycled or composted is not under

"But when you landfill, you are not taking care of the fee requirement, resulting in tens of thousands of dollars saved by converting.

But this coming trend has led to claims by some of a worldwide glut of compost and recycled paper by early in the 21st Century.

Urbanczyk discounted such philosphical nay-saying, adding that he has gotten past the "maybes" and seen nearly unlimited market potential that is merely waiting to be exploited.

Scarab's reputation as a company has grown steadily as governments all over the world and magazines all over the nation have witnessed firsthand that Urbanczyk's claims are more than idle talk.

Officials in Sumter County, Florida, where the Scarab is a mainstay of their waste management, predicted that it will only be a matter of time until virtually all landfills go to such a plan or close down.

In the Panhandle of Texas, such predictions are seemingly correct. While most cities, even the smallest ones, currently operate their own landfill, within a year, it is speculated by the Texas Department of Health, only 11 will continue to operate.

Information from the TDH suggests it will simply be too expensive for cities under 50,000 to continue to operate. Hence, they will close or become regional sites for the cities that do.

"We have to look at which is the most cost effective," said Pampa City Manager Glen Hackler. "If we see it's less expensive to ship it somewhere else, we'll do that.'

Since virtually every city in the state, and most in the nation, are contemplating and/or negotiating regarding the future of their landfills or the use of some other city's, few city officials were willing to go into detail.

But, the bottom line was clear: the city that can economically build a regional facility will make money off handling trash from those not so creative or willing to go to the trouble.

Another bottom line cannot be ignored, however: "I want control over how much tipping fee I pay," said a city manager at a recent meeting in Perryton to discuss munipal waste. "Most cities want you to sign a contract where you have no long-term control over the tipping

"If it's cheaper to go to Pampa, I'll go there. If it's cheaper to go to Amarillo, bye-bye. My only concern is getting the least expensive deal.

Hackler said Pampa, in exploring the possibility of becoming a regional facility, must weigh the claims of a contractor and who has control over tipping fees against such talk by most cities.

Since recycling and composting require at least 200 tons of waste a day to be profitable, Hackler needs more than just a handshake agreement that cities will bring their trash here.

But other cities want to keep their options open, seeking the best deal they can get for taking trash there. "It's a challenge," Hackler admitted. "You don't move very fast when you have to balance these kinds of things. You are careful about what you do." For a recycling operation, several options are open to cities. They include compulsory division of yard waste, glass, plastic and white goods in the home. Fifteen states currently mandate some form of source sep-In Massachusetts and Washington State, McDonald's hamburger chains have source separation as customers throw their garbage away. Plastic containers go in one bin, par and food in a third.

Cooperation is, one would suppose, up to each customer. But a regional manager in Boston, Mass., said, "The environment is the number one issue in our world. No one can dispute that. Just because you go out for a Big Mac, that hasn't changed. We're just doing our part."

McDonald's has begun advertising the fact that it is recycling foam hamburger containers into playground equipment. A corporate spokesman, eager to turn environmental concern into a McDonald's commercial, nonethless pointed out that the corporation is voluntarily "doing the right thing."

Nathan Hopson, city public works director in Pampa, said after compostable and recyclable materials are separated from waste, a process of baling allows for longer use of a landfill for the 20 percent of trash still Compactors force the fluids out of waste, reducing problems of toxic runoff of liquids into groundwater. Then the trash is baled and set into landfill pits that are squared. More trash can be placed in each pit, extending the landfill's life.

Even if Pampa's landfill becomes a regional site, taking in 200 tons of trash a day instead of the current 65 tons, the landfill, using baling, recycling and composting, will be extended from 30 more years of life to 100, Hopson and Hackler said.

Adding to the attraction of such a plan is the fact that the Environmental Protection Agency recently slapped the city of Denver, Colo., with a multi-million dollar fine for operating its landfill irresponsibly.

Toxics leaking from the facility were found to be polluting the atmosphere.

"I'm not some activist, but it's a matter of reality," Urbanzcyk said. "We've got to find something to do with all this trash. And if the EPA finds you are polluting, well ...'

Urbanczyk concurred with others who suggest the EPA is looking to make landfilling so expensive other alternatives must be accepted.

'Cities don't come to me until there is a crisis," he said. "Then, I don't have to sell them. They know this is necessary and it's just a matter of doing it the best and the most cost effective. If I can't do that, they shouldn't use me."

Urbanczyk's company has already brought 15 new jobs to the White Deer/Pampa area and he predicts he will double that in a year.

If Scarab and Pampa reach an agreement, the economic development could be even greater. Not only will the city be dealing with its portion of a global trash problem, it will also bring jobs to the area and extend the reality of recycling and composting as unavoidable trends of the future.

Trends which may extend the life of the planet's natural resources by hundreds of years.

Targeting fats likely to help weight loss

Specialists lately are focusing on ever, than 100 percent for a while." two factors: exercise and dietary fat.

"Overall if there's anything people agree with among nutritionists, it's that you should cut back on dietary fats," said Dr. Helene Swenerton of the cooperative extension nutrition office at the University of California, Davis.

Ron and Nancy Goor and Katherine Boyd, authors of The Choose to Lose Diet (Houghton Mifflin, $17.95), advise, "Don't focus on total calories ... or sugar ... or starch. Focus on fat."

Eat pasta and potatoes, they say. "Carbohydrates are the good guys." Because fat is often a big component of food that's not real nutritious corn, for example, has 99 to 214 fat anyway, and because it's more calorie-dense, it's a good target for dieters. "Fats are twice as concentrated as carbohydrates or proteins," said Jayne Newmark, a dietician at the Arizona Heart Institute and a spokeswoman for the American Dietetic Association. One gram of protein or carbohydrate has four calories; one gram of fat has at least nine.

The Choose to Lose Diet works on the principle of a fat "budget." The dieter determines, based on height, desired weight and frame size, how many fat calories can be consumed daily. Then, as long as the dieter stays within the budget,

"You need to eat some fat," Newmark said. "But it is easy to get too much, because it tastes good." In children, especially, fats should not be drastically reduced, because they are needed for proper

> Still, dieting is dieting and means cutting down, though very-low-calorie, unsupervised diets are considered dangerous by many physicians.

Choose to Lose, which includes calorie and fat tables and recipes, recommends no fewer than 1,000 calories a day, and no more than 20 percent of the calories as fat. A typical American diet is 35 percent to 40 percent fat.

The authors list foods with high fat concentrations and those without, lists that could surprise some people. They include fast foods and frozen "diet" dinners that get as many as half their calories from fats. Although all fats have the same caloric content, experts say saturated fats, such as butter, contribute to other health problems as well. They recommend olive and other vegetable oils.

But while people can take some action, "with respect to weight control, we don't have the answers," Swenerton said, noting that 98 of 100 people regain weight they lose and that many people are misled by diet promises.

"One kind of misinformation is that obesity is just from eating too much," she said. "That's only part of the whole picture," which also includes exercise, psychology and daily. Fat and cholesterol can be reduced by substituting fish, poultry without skin, lean meats and low-fat dairy products for fatty meats and whole-milk dairy products; by choosing more vegetables, fruits and cereals, and legumes; and limiting oils, fats, egg yolk, and fried and other fatty foods.

Diets low in cholesterol and saturated fats are associated with low risks and rates of atherosclerotic cardiovascular diseases. High fat diets are associated with a high incidence of some types of cancer (especially of the colon, prostrate, and breast) and probably obesity.

Fatty acids differ in their effects on health. Saturated fatty acid and cholesterol tend to increase total and low density lipoporteins (LDL) serum cholesterol, and therefore, lead to athersclerosis and increase the risk of coronary heart disease for those persons sensitive to cholesterol. The main dietary sources of the saturated fats are coconut, palm and palm-kernel oil. Dietry cholesterol is found mainly in eggs and organ meats. A further reduction of saturated fatty acids to only 8 or 7% of the total calories is recommended and that monounsaturated fatty acids and complex carbohydrates be substituted. Reduction of cholesterol intake to 250 to 200 mg., or less per day may also be more healthful (for some persons).

Monounsaturated oils help to both increase the amount of the good" high density lipoprotein (HDL) cholesterol and decrease the "bad" low density lipoprotein (LDL) cholesterol. Olive oil and canola or rapeseed oil are the best know sources.

Polyunsaturated fats cannot be made by the body and are of two types: omega-3 and omega-6. The omega-3's are found in cold-water marine fish such as salmon, mackerel and some plant oils such as soybean and canola. The omega-6's are polyunsaturated fats found in corn, safflower, soybean, cottonseed, sunflower seeds and peanut oils. The polunsaturated and monounsaturated fatty acids (and carbohydrates) lower the LDL serum cholesterol when it is substituted for saturated fatty acids, bu they are more effective in reducing elevated blood triglyceride levels. Fish oil supplements are not recommend as there is not enough evidence they are beneficial and long term effects are unknown. Polunsaturated fatty acids do not need to be increased in the average U.S. diet.

High fat diets may lead to obesity since dietary fat is converted to body fat more efficiently than other sources of calories. A 30% fat level in the diet does not cause any risk of nutrient deficiencies and may provide more health benefits.

Every day eat five or more servings of a combination of vegetables and fruits, especially green and yellow vegetables and citrus fruits. A serving is 1/2 cup cooked or 1 cup raw. Also increase intake of starches and other complex carbohydrates of eating six or more daily servings of bread, cereal and legumes. Carbohydrates should total more than 55% of the calories. A servings is 1 slice or 1/2 cup cooked.

Diets high in plant foods have been found to be associated with a lower incidence of coronary heart disease and cancer, although the reason for this is not fully understood. Such diets are usually lower in total cholesterol and saturated

3. Maintain protein intake at moderate levels. According to USDA recommendations, this could roughly translate to approximately two 3 ounce servings of lean meat, fish, poultry or equivalent alternatives daily for an adult in a well balanced

4. Balance food intake and physical activity to maintain appropriate body weight.

5. The Committee does not recommend alcohol consumption. For those who do drink alcoholic beverages, the Committee recommends limiting consumption to the equivalent of less than one (1) ounce of pure alcohol daily. This is the equivalent of two cans of beer, two small glasses of wine, or two average cocktails. Pregnant women should avoid alcoholic beverages altogether.

6. Limit total intake of salt (sodium choloride) to 6g. or less. Limit the use of salt in cooking and avoid adding it to food at the table. Salty, highly processed salty, salt-preserved, and salt-pickled foods should be consumed sparingly.

7. Maintain adequate calcium intakes. A serving of milk is equal to one cup of milk which is about 300 milligrams (mg.) of calcium.

Children 1-10 years old and males and females 19 years and older need at least 800 mg. of calcium daily (equal to almost 3 cups of milk). Menopausal women may need more.

Male and females 11-18 years old need 1,200 mg. (equal to about 4 cups of milk daily.)

Pregnant teenagers need the equivalent of 5 or more cups of

8. Avoid taking dietary supplements in excess of RDA for one day. 9. Maintain an optional intake of fluoride, particularly during the years of primary and secondary tooth formation and growth. For more infomation of diet and

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I don't know how or when it got started, but there's a custom at most golf clubs that I think is absurd. When a golfer makes a hole in one, the drinks are on him! (Or her.) Some clubs have a "Hole in One

Club" — it's a kind of insurance to defray the cost of the drinks when a guy makes a hole in one and can't afford to treat every guy in the club to a drink. (All the members have to

I once heard a guy say, "Hey, John, you owe me a drink!" (It was for a hole in one John had made the previous year.) However, many golf ubs don't have a "Hole in One Club," so the "lucky" golfer gets stuck.

I would like to turn this custom around, and I need your help, Abby. Ask the golfers out there how they feel about this custom. I'm sure you will get a large enough response from golfers to get them to thinking about it and, let's hope, initiate some sort of action in their own clubs to eliminate this custom

DOUGLAS WHITE, ORANGE CITY, FLA.

DEAR DOUGLAS: I asked my brother-in-law, Morey Rubin, who shot a hole in one at Canyon Country Club in Palm Springs last year (his feet haven't touched the ground since). He said, "It's a thrill of a lifetime; I've yet to hear a guy complain about having to buy drinks."

How do you other "hole-inoners" out there feel about that custom?

DEAR ABBY: My son, his wife and their 3-year-old daughter are visiting me from out of town, which prompts my first Dear Abby letter. The problem: My daughter-in-law is still breast-feeding the child! It just doesn't seem right that a 3-yearold child should be running after her mother, lifting her mother's blouse and asking to be breast-fed. Frankly, I find this behavior revolting, and I don't know how much longer I can keep my mouth shut.

The child seems too attached to her mother. I don't want to cause a fight, but I really am concerned about the child. Abby, is it emotionally healthy for a child this age to still be nursing?

GROSSED OUT GRANDMA

DEAR GROSSED OUT: According to a spokesperson for the La Leche League International, it is not abnormal for a 3year-old to still be breast-feeding. Generally, that is when most (but not all) children are finishing their breast-feeding cycle.

A child of that age needing to nurse more than twice a day may be experiencing a need other than physical hunger. Perhaps she wants more attention from her mother, and breast-feeding is the only way to get it.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please put in a good word for all the unfortunate children who were born in December? I am a grown woman, but I have always felt slighted because as a child, I would get a combination birthday-Christmas present. I recall asking my mother if she

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - First repeat, then "three-peat."

The San Francisco 49ers took care of their second straight Super Bowls in overwhelming style Sunday with a 55-10 humiliation of the Denver Broncos. With that sizable piece of history in their pockets, they can go after the third in a row, something nobody has.

"Three-peat, that's our slogan," guard Guy McIntyre said. "I've got a lot more fingers to wear rings."

The 49ers have four rings in as many tries, tying the record held by Pittsburgh. But the Steelers, Miami Dolphins and Green Bay Packers never got past two consecutive Super Bowl wins. That is next season's goal for these world-

"Each is sweet," Joe Montana said. "Let's go get another.'

"It's tough to repeat," added Matt Millen, a Super winner with the Raiders and the 49ers. "It's got to be really tough to 'three-peat." Who is going to stop them when:

— Montana is throwing the way he is. — The defense is stifling opponents.

 Everything else is in synch. "They can be stopped, but it takes a perfect game by whoever is doing it," Broncos linebacker Simon Fletcher said. Instead, it was the 49ers who were nearly perfect Sunday, as they were all season, particularly in the playoffs.

"It would be hard for any team to be better than this team, the way it's played this year," Montana said.

It would be almost impossible to be better than Montana, the league's Most Valuable Player who earned a record third Super Bowl MVP trophy by going 22-for-29 for 297 yards, with three TDs to Jerry Rice, one to John Taylor and one to Brent Jones.

Montana was 65 for 83 for 800 yards and 11 touchdowns in the postseason. He had his best performance under the most trying circumstances after a television report that three white quarterbacks had tested positive for cocaine use and the league had covered it up.

"We were very supportive of him," McIntyre said, meaning on the field — Montana was not sacked for a loss in the playoffs — and off it. "You see him year-in and year-out going out there and playing sore, or beat up or whatever. So, when something like this happens, you have to stand behind your player.'

Montana, of course, was far from the only 49er standing tall. He was just the most visible, and he set eight Super Bowl records.

"He's the greatest quarterback of all time," said George Seifert, who won his first Super Bowl as head coach after three as an assistant. Only Baltimore's Don McCafferty won the Super Bowl as a rookie coach.

Montana has one of the great offenses of all time around him. He has Rice, who caught TD passes of 20, 38 and 28 yards, setting a one-game record for scoring catches. He has Roger Craig, who scored on a 1-yard run, giving him four career touchdowns in the Super Bowl, tied with Franco Harris and Rice. Craig also set a career record with 20 pass receptions in his three Super

He has Tom Rathman, a fullback with the hands of a surgeon whose rushing and receiving were a key element in the unstoppable onslaught. He had two short rushing touchdowns.

He has John Taylor, who wasn't quite as heroic this year as last, when he caught the winning touchdown with 34 seconds to go. But he did have a 35-yard TD reception.

Montana has Brent Jones, whose only reception was a 7-yard score that made it 13-3 after one period. There is that solid offensive line, which took nearly all season to come together, then was a fortress in the playoffs. Montana also had a defense that shut down everybody. John Elway can testify to that. In three Super Bowls, Elway has had three decent periods. None of them came Sunday, when he was 10-for-26 for 108 yards, with two interceptions, a fumble and four sacks.

"It's disappointing," said Elway, who came off his best playoff outing in the AFC title game.

Landry say it's fitting the ex-Dallas Cowboys coach was voted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in his first eligible year.

"He sure as hell is appreciated more now than he was a year ago," said former Dallas Cowboys president Tex Schramm, referring to the inglorious firing of Landry by new team owner Jerry Jones.

Landry learned of the honor while playing golf in Austin Saturday at the same club where Jones 11 months ago told him he was being replaced.

"It's really a great thing that it could come to him now, you know, fresh off what's happened the past year, and it's something where I'm sure there wasn't a dissenting vote in the room," Schramm said. Landry will join former Lilly as the only Cowboys in the Hall of Fame.

Landry and the six other nominees will be inducted in Canton, Ohio, on Aug. 4. Also on the induction list are Franco Harris and Jack Lambert of the Pittsburgh Steelers, Miami quarterback Bob Griese, Oakland Raider defensive great Ted Hendricks, Buck Buchanan of the Kansas City Chiefs and Bob Saint Clair of the San Francisco 49ers.

"Tom Landry is the greatest coach of all time," Staubach

During his tenure, Landry led the Cowboys to five Super Bowls, winning two, 13 division championships and a career record of 270-178-67 He also compiled an NFL record of 20 straight winning record and his contribution to football," Lilly said. "But also for his contributions to the game of pro football, to the entire state of Texas and the country as a whole as someone everybody could look up to.

"That's what Tom Landry was all about. He was a great coach, a great man and still is. I think I speak for several hundred of us who played for him when I say that," Lilly Denver Broncos coach Dan Reeves, a former assistant coach under Landry, said, "I respect him a heck of a lot more now than when I worked for him, and I had a heck of a lot of respect when I worked for him.

"There's no question (that) if Coach Landry was involved in the game still, he'd be successful now.'

But, Landry apparently has no plans to rejoin the fray.

"I really feel comfortable out of coaching right now,' he said.

Longhorns' Mays

AUSTIN (AP) - Travis Mays, Texas' all-time top scorer, says his injured hand may be better by Sunday when the Longhorns meet Southwest Conference foe Arkansas.

Texas is 14-4 overall and 7-1 in the SWC, second only to the Razorbacks.

"We'll just have to wait and see," Mays said. "I want to play and I am doing everything I can do to get ready to play. Hopefully, I can be ready to go against Arkansas.'

Longhorns coach Tom Penders says he doubts Mays will be ready to play against Houston Tuesday night? "Travis is our MVP, offensively and defensively," he added.

Mays, who leads the Southwest Conference with a 24.8 average, sat on the bench with an injury to his shooting hand as his teammates struggled past Rice 96-84 Saturday night.

Mays hyperextended his right index finger when he tried to brace a fall just before halftime in Thursday night's 109-100 loss to Arkansas. He sat out the second half against the Razorbacks, finishing with one point.

"His hand is better, but it's still sore," Penders said. "I seriously doubt he will play Tuesday."

Dressed in jeans, a turquoise shirt and a Panama hat, Mays couldn't even lift his finger and bruised knuckle to help the Longhorns, who shot poorly and trailed Rice by two points at the half.

Strong non-district schedule gave White Deer girls a big lift

By L.D. STRATE Sports Writer

It was unexpected, but not all that surprising in the py with the Does' lot. unpredictable District 3-1A girls' basketball.

White Deer had started district play with wins over first started. I felt like we Lefors, 50-31, and Groom, 57-43, and weren't supposed to have that much trouble with Claude, which was 0-2 against the same two teams.

Does' coach Doug Porter may had a premonition about the meeting with ing Claude.

"It's (the district race) not over, not by a long shot," Porter said right after the 2-0 start.

How right he was. The Does hit only 11 of 27 foul shots as Claude claimed a 46-43 win Friday night in the White Deer gym.

"It was one of those nights. Claude had three girls foul out, but we just couldn't hit our free throws," Porter said. "We also couldn't hit our shots from the perimeter. It was a White Deer rally to win by

Razorbacks making strong bid to sweep SWC

AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The Arkansas Razorbacks are making a strong bid to sweep unbeaten through the Southwest Conference basketball race, but they still face a dangerous game in Austin next Sunday against the high-scoring Texas Longhorns.

The No. 6 ranked Razorbacks beat Texas 108-100 last Thursday in Fayetteville on national television (ESPN) and will meet the Longhorns again before the national TV cameras (ABC) at 1 p.m. in the Super Drum.

Arkansas defeated Alabama- Tech coach Gerald Myers Birmingham 109-95 on Saturday night in a non-conference road game as Todd Day scored 25 points. The Hogs are 17-2 overall and 8-0 in league play.

In other games:

-Texas stayed in second place with a 96-84 victory over Rice while leading scorer Travis Mays sat on the bench said no team can commit 19 with a finger injury.

-Houston downed Texas A&M 108-90 in interim coach John Thornton's first loss.

-Southern Methodist handed Texas Tech its eighth straight league loss with a 52-44 victory.

—Baylor won its first league game in two-year-old Ferrell By DENNE H. FREEMAN Center with a 63-60 victory over Texas Christian.

Texas is 7-1 in SWC play followed by Houston at 5-3, Rice 4-3, Texas A&M 3-4, TCU 3-5, Baylor and SMU 2-5 and Tech 0-8.

In another big league game this week, Houston is at Texas for a nationally televised (6:30 p.m. ESPN) game with the Longhorns on Tuesday.

On Wednesday, Baylor is at SMU, Texas A&M is at Texas Tech, and Arkansas is at Rice. On Saturday, SMU is at

TCU in a noon (Raycom TV) game and Baylor is at Texas A&M. It's been a tough season for Myers was so upset at the Red Raiders loss to the Mustangs that he threw his towel in the stands and closed the lockerroom.

However, he came out and turnovers and live to tell about

"It was the same old story," Myers said. "I didn't think anybody wanted to talk to my guys, the way they played." Texas proved it could play without Mays. "Travis is our MVP and we're a good team with him, but we're not bad without him," said Texas coach Tom Penders.

Baylor got its long-awaited first win in its new arena and Bears coach Gene Iba did it against his cousin, Moe Iba, coach of the Horned Frogs.

"I don't enjoy beating him and I don't think he enjoys beating me," Gene Iba said. "Families should never have to play each other but that's what we are paid to do.

"As far as winning at Ferrell, I'm happy, but I don't care where we get a win. We can get them on the moon as far as I'm concerned," he Houston had its best performance of the year in beating A&M.

'We might have played our best offensive game," said Houston coach Pat Foster. "I don't know how good we are. I hope we're finally getting it together."

Thornton said "We knew Houston was capable of playing that way. I'm just sorry they did it against us."

Young Muscovites learning principles of capitalism under the golden arches glowing golden arches shimmering in the winter gloom.

Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) - Fur-hatted Muscovites have been offers more than a Big Mac and fries - although that's a and consumerism in the middle of Moscow. It's West-

One of the budding Soviet managers of the Moscow McDonald's, which will open Wednesday, shows staff how to package a meal for customers.

The McDonald's also is a first taste of what Mikhail Soviet sources. A glittering McDonald's is just about to open, and it S. Gorbachev's perestroika can offer. It is capitalism place to eat - things Communism hasn't offered many

> The grand opening is Wednesday, and 18-year-old Oleg Mukhin is learning how to smile.

"We're supposed to smile all the time – people will think we've gone loony!" said Mukhin, one of the 630 people hired to run the restaurant.

They also are being drilled in such strange Western habits as actually greeting customers and saying, the planning, but Gorbachev's encouragement of people waiting forever, such as the 17-year wait for a warmer East-West relations, foreign investment and modernization made it possible.

If all goes well, McDonald's will show some Soviet tables where rice and fatty meat are sold by surly work-how it's possible to live."

It may also teach Mukhin something he thinks he needs to know for his future. "Where else can you or a small drink, a youthful Soviet crew chief tells his study capitalism and get paid for it?" he asks.

Unlike nearly every other foreign firm that has come to Moscow since the Cold War started warming up, McDonald's will be for Soviet citizens, not just privileged foreigners with hard currency.

McDonald's of Canada says it spent $50 million to enter the Soviet market, building not just a restaurant but its own dairy, bakery, sauce kitchens and meat-pro-room, I don't need six papers and five signatures," marcessing plant to ensure steady supplies, primarily from veled dairy manager Alexander Omenchenko.

George Cohon, chairman of McDonald's of Canada and the man behind this 14-year quest, said customers ern efficiency, friendly service, a clean, brightly lit will pay about three rubles - about two hours' pay for an average Soviet worker or a starting McDonald's employee - for a famous "Beeg Mak."

But even the king of the fast-food franchises can't promise Muscovites a quick bite to eat. Police Maj. Gen. Nikolai Myrikov, better known in the neighborhood for directing roundups of dissidents on Pushkin Square, stopped by last week to plan crowd control for a line expected to stretch so far that it will take a couple of hours to get to the door.

Still, it will be a "real" line in Soviet parlance, a The restaurant near Pushkin Square was 14 years in line that moves, as opposed to the dozens that just keep phone. As the biggest McDonald's in the world, it is designed to serve 1,250 people an hour.

A second McDonald's, out of a planned 20, will sell people that life is not all dim cafeterias with greasy for hard currency and cater to a foreign community that would rather pay more than stand in line.

The hamburger chain also will give hundreds of McDonald's, says Mukhin, "is for people to see young people unique experience in the management and sales techniques of the capitalist West:

> — Don't ask the customer if he or she wants a large trainees. Say, "Large?" to encourage greater spending, — Everyone learns every job in the store, something that would boggle the mind of the Aeroffot cashier who is incapable of quoting a price on a flight because her only job is accepting money.

- "If I want to take a screwdriver from the store-
