Declares Europe Situation Critical

WASHINGTON, March 17. (AP) - President Truman told Congress today the situation in Europe is "critical" and asked a temporary draft law and universal military training. The President also urged swift congressional action on the Marshall program of economic help for Europe.

Mr. Truman went before a joint session of Congress in person to present a grim picture of world affairs and a major report on his foreign policy.

"The recent developments in Europe," he said, "present this nation with the fundamental issues of vital importance." He pointed then to the just-completed five-nation western European pact for common defense against attack.

He said of it: "This development deserves our full support. I am confident that the United States will, by appropriate means, extend to the free nations the support which the situation re-

"I am sure that the determination of the free countries of Europe to protect themselves will be matched by an equal determination on our part to help them to do so."

Speaks Very Plainly About Russia

Then, plainly speaking of Russia, Mr. Truman said: "The situation in the world today, is not primarily the result of the natural difficulties which follow a great war. It is chiefly due to the fact that one nation has not only refused to cooperate in the establishment of a just and honorable peace, but— even worse—has actively sought to prevent it."

The European pact Mr. Truman mentioned was announced officially less than an hour before he spoke. In it, Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg pledged each other military aid if one should be attacked.

Mr. Truman told Congress there are times when it is 'far wiser to act than to hesitate-" even though action always involves risk.

He said his recommendations at this time for action represent "the most urgent steps towards securing the peace and preventing the war."

The President stressed that the United States will continue to support the United Nations and will try every possible method of reaching international accord.

Says Time Has Come To Face Threat

"At the same time, we must not be confused about the central issue which confronts the world today. "The time has come when the free men and women of the world must face the threat to their liberty squarely and

And developments have reached the point, Mr. Truman said, at which America's position should be made unmistakably clear.

Mr. Truman then spoke of the high purposes of the United Nations charter, and added: "We cannot, however, close our eyes to the harsh fact

Lifting Lid On Supplemental Earnings

The Social Security administration has advocated a change in regulations which would permit those 70 years of age or above to work and still receive benefits.

Under existing laws, if such a person earns $15 or more a month in employment, he loses his benefits for that period. Considering that the benefits, at best, are not such as to glut the family coffers even under normal circumstances let alone in periods of inflation, there ought to be no objection to the commendable desire to supplement Social Security income.

This change ought to be made, and if solons want to hedge against the possibility of those who do not need aid receiving it simply because they attain the age 65, they might raise substantially the amount an individual could earn per month outside of social security benefits. The board would not place a limit on this in the case of 70 years or more. But in the case of the 65-70 age bracket, a maximum allowance of $40 is proposed. This is shooting in the right direction, but the aim is still a little low.

On Jan. 1 of last year, there were around 800,000 persons eligible to social security benefits who had never applied for them. One reason was that they were afraid to give up their earning power for the prospect of subsisting on what they would receive. Not all of them would want to quit working, no matter what the benefits, but perhaps more could afford to take a desired and well earned rest under liberalized

Tackling Problem From Different Angle

By April 1, dealers throughout the Unit-ed States are scheduled to receive their demonstrators of a new type of automohile. This one differs in many respects from traditional cars, but notably in its three-wheel design.

Conceived and manufactured by Gary Davis of Van Nuys, Calif., the car, which bears his name is all-aluminum, making it only half as heavy as other cars. Yet it is reported to get 35 to 60 miles per hour and will turn on an unbelievably small amount

Davis, of course, is enthusiastic about his machine and resents any comparison between it and midget cars. The aviation lines of the vehicle, he says, may make it appear smaller than it actually it. Be that as it may, we'll leave the decision up to the American public.

Regardless of what the decision is, Mr. Affairs Of The World-DeWitt MacKenzie

Davis already is due credit for boldness in breaking with tradition, not in the threewheel idea (which isn't entirely original with him), but in manufacturing. Instead of trying to do business as automotive concerns have been doing in all these years, with a few refinements added from time to time, he worked it the other way around. With a machine with about half the conventional number of parts, he was able to tool each 82-foot assembly line for about $150,000 against five and eight million dollars for comparable lines in traditional automotive plants.

When you can cut investment and overhead in this proportion, it's possible you're getting on the trail of something, and which may be passed on to the consumer. So, without any brief for the product, the initiative to attack a problem from a different angle is commendable.

Japanese Invented Iron Curtain

He stole the idea, along with several others, from one of his predecessors in the dictator trade. The real inventor was another strong man, named Iyemitsu, who did the same things to Japan 500 years ago that Stalin is doing to Russia today. Their methods are so much alike that if you transplanted a Russian from 1948 Moscow to 1648 Tokyo he would hardly notice the change.

For example, the attitude toward foreigners.

The Japanese thought of that one a long time ago.

First, they banned virtually all foreigners from the country. Those remaining were confined to a small island off Nagasaki and never permitted on the mainland. By decree, there was to be no conversation between a foreigner and a Japanese except through the official interpreters. The Japanese law said that "all such conversations are to be reported im-ties, who will transmit them to the Daimyo." It was the same with foreign literature. In modern Russia only those non-Russian books that serve a propaganda purpose ever reach the ordinary reader. In medical Japan only those scientific works on medicine, armaments, etc. that were useful in learning western techniques were permitted. No Japanese, in that day, was permitted to leave Japan. The penalty for attempting it was death. The average Russian, in theory, can go abroad. But in practice no Soviet citizen leaves except on an official mission.

Through their wives and families, who usually remain behind the Soviet government has a pretty good guarantee of the loyalty the Russians who go abroad. In precisely the same way Iyemitsu decreed that the wives and families of his officials were to be left in his capital for the and the only barometer of his period each year when the officials were allowed to be away States is his ability to govern from it.

As a result of the earlier dictator, Japan became the "hermit kingdom" and fell far behind the rest of the world. It never recovered.

Headaches are part of the cost of living in a democracy. We have to sweat through all of them. And in a democracy all sides have their say, which sometimes makes the headaches worse while they last.

Right now we have some huge headaches, huge problems without easy answers. And there's a lot of disagreement about them. Let's take them one at a time.

go higher? Maybe. Nobody is sure. Will we have a depression? Nobody knows.

If we do, our foreign program would fall apart. We wouldn't have money to help stop the Russians from taking over in other countries. 2. We're heading into a hot political campaign. President Turman's leadership is being hit from three sides:

By Henry Wallace-who dislikes Mr. Truman's foreign policy; by southern democrats-who dislikes his proposals to give Negroes greater rights; by republicans-who say they can do things better.

The Russians are counting on election-year confusion here to help them push into western Europe. But that's where they might be wrong.

We've had elections before in times of emergency without that kind of confusion.

At a conference with General MacArthur's public information officer, Mr. Frayne Baker, in October, 1946, Mr. Baker stated that any material that any occupation or theatre official chooses to classify is protected by the rules of military security and that a correspondent can be such material under the articles of war. Mr. Baker at that time agreed to prepare a statement of General MacArthur's policy concerning the status of correspondents assigned to his headquarters. Despite repeated subsequent requests Allied correspondents in Japan have yet to receive these statements turt pleases us; the newsreel informs us; the trailers interest. Then the comedy - it does not amuse us.

Decline Of Film Cartoon

The customer is characteristically dubious over modern comedies and cartoons. Where smiles once greeted familiar characters, now the comic creation is met with knitted brows. A strange turn has come to the universal sense of humor.

would the movie clientele become that they would cease to appreciate the brand of humor known as slapstick and personified by the Three Stooges, Charlie Chase and Edgar Kennedy. So revolt was hatched. Evolution (?) in comedy might be set in the middle 30's with t' ? creation of Max Fleicher's "Betty Boop." In the first cartoons there were few characters, somtimes only two. There was a plot, though light, and the scenes were concluded with an "ending." Gradually other personalities devolved - among them Walt Disney's likable Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck and Pop - Eye the Sailor. The charfound humor in the repetition of these motifs, The movement continued to move. From these sane exponents of comedy grew gleeful caricatures of animals aping the antics of man. After this idea a long, lanky rat and a ridiculously obese mouse may be associated with Abbott and Costello. In portraying the "humor" of modern civilization a mustached stupid character on a bony horse rides up to a wide boulevard in the midst of desert sands. On either side the highway stretches into visible infinity; confidently the cowboy starts across - only to be smashed by an auto swishing past. No opportunity for absurdity is overlooked by the humor artists.

Less than five years ago the third bird hatched. A dry-humor man named Pete Smith started an entirely new trend in comedies. Smith uses ordinary situations from ordinary life and treats of them in the joking manner. He is poking fun at the typical man and his habits. Though sometimes exaggerated, the scenes are seldom absurd or pointless. He does not attempt to confound the moviegoer with witticisms. Whether this is another step in revolt remains to be seen.

Now riding the crest in this so-called new humor, current cartoons have no general plot. When there is a possibility of a plot in early scenes, subsequent ones snuff it out. So the moviegoer stews through a reel or two of wierd activity among a dozen disassociated figures, who in most instances, end up by chasing each other. The greater the crescendo of action, the "funnier" the story becomes, until a completely new character appears, shrugs his shoulders and quips: "Exciting isn't it?" Whereupon those in the audience are supposed to grasp their sides in uncontrolled giee. I don't get it. - LEATRICE

Claire's Old Skeleton

NEW YORK - Dorothy Claire is a rather young lass to admit having had a skeleton in her closet, but m there it was all right.

six months have passed since she took over the leading feminine role in "Finian's Rainbow" that perhaps no one ever will recognize her prominent part in that national kilocycle nuisance. "I'm not ashamed of all those singing commercials," she said, getting up some of the Irish inherent in the role she plays on stage, "They paid well, and all the time I was doing them I was singing with bands, anyway." Indeed she was. With Bob Crosby's, Sonny Dunham's, Bobby Byrne's, Boyd Raeburn's and even the late Glenn Miller's. Very commendably, too, take my ear for it. I heard her many

"But I kept hearing about the dignity of the legitimate theater so much that I hoped the story of those commercials wouldn't crop up."

Someone assured her a few days ago that her supposedly dire past was at least as artistically pure as most young ladies of her professional persuasion.

I wondered if her band singing and radio warbling mightn't have been difficult to forget, particularly since they didn't involve acting to any large de-

"Was I nervous!" was Dorothy's rhetorical comment. I knew the atom bomb was falling I couldn't have been any more nervous. At least a bomb wouldn't take any more than a hundredth of a second. But there I was getting set to take over a part which required my presence on stage practically evening, with seven songs and two reprises! "But it wasn't the singing that made me nervous. It was the acting. I never acted in my life until Lee Sabinson and Bill Katzell (the producers) saw me singing at the Strand Theater and offered me the contract. I thought they were kidding. But then, the minute the orchestra started playing my first song the night I opened, I was calm.

She looked demurely at me and spoke in a tone which belied her next words. "Singing," she said sweetly, "is my racket!"

Born in La Porte, Ind., Dorothy won an amateur contest as part of a sister team which grew into a quartet, but she ultimately struck out on her own. One thing she disliked about the new job was the fact that she had to dye her lovely blonde tresses red to fit the role. Her husband, Emmett Carle, a musician, didn't like it at first either. "But he does now," Dorothy added.
