Pampa officials get ready for prison bid process again

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

"The fox is out and the hunt is on."
That's how Red McNatt, executive vice president of the Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce, described the city's latest opportunity to win a state prison.
Last week the Legislature approved $130.1 million to build four new prisons, including one 2,250-bed maximum security and three 1,000-bed minimum security units.
Today, officials from the city, chamber and Industrial Foundation said they learned those four sites will be chosen from 20 previously submitted proposals on July 10.
"I'm not surprised it's happening because we had been given indication it would come down quick," McNatt said of the latest chance for the Pampa area to bring new jobs and economic opportunity to the area.
He said the chamber will begin preparing new pledge cards to be mailed this week to businesses and individuals who promised over a half-million dollars to a similar proposal to the state in 1989.
Bill Waters of the Industrial Foundation, City Manager Glen Hackler and State Rep. Warren Chisum, D-Pampa, each said today in separate interviews they believe Pampa's chances are better than ever for a corrections unit.
"Last week the prison committee - the city, Industrial Foundation, chamber of commerce and county - met to discuss the possibility of the prison selection process occurring in the near future," Hackler said. "At that time we were not aware we would be talking about 30 days."
He said that the "short fuse of less than 30 days" was surprising, but not overwhelming.

"Bill Waters is currently reconfirming commitments and options" on land purchases and buildings that were in the previous proposal, Hackler said.
David Nunnelee, information officer for the Texas Board of Criminal Justice said cities that did not have their previous proposals intact would be "left in a lurch" for the July 10 deadline, since prison officials were not planning to inspect new sites.
Nunnelee predicted that prior to July 10 the prison board will accept a "short list of six or eight" sites, narrowed from 20 current contenders.
Those cities or counties are Pampa, Dalhart, Lamesa, Big Spring, Angelina, Bell, Eastland, Karnes, Polk, San Jacinto, Starr, Pecos, Breckenridge, Eagle Lake, Hondo, Jasper, Seymour, Stamford, Wichita Falls and Woodville.
Chisum said he has also heard Levelland is being considered as a possible site.
Pampa was one of 12 finalists for six prisons awarded in November, but was not selected.
Chisum said he believes Dalhart is out of the running because it did not make the finalist list in November and has since sold their proposed site. He also noted that Wichita Falls had heavy local opposition to its proposal during the last selections.
"This is a very fast track," Chisum said of the prison board's next selections. "They said they had already looked at the sites and were going to be re-checking the proposals."
Nunnelee said the July 10 date was set because it is the first scheduled meeting of the prison board after the Legislature approved the new units. He said there is no guarantee the four sites will be chosen then, but that it would not be surprising.
"Whether or not the six or eight on the short list would be given the opportunity to make a presentation, I don't know right now," Nunnelee said.
However, he indicated selection would largely hinge on the written proposals already in the TDCJ's possession and confirmation that those proposals are still valid.
"It should take us in the neighborhood of 48 hours to confirm all commitments," Hackler said. "At that time we will tell the state that, yes, we are still interested."
Hackler said if local entities have the opportunity, they might modify the proposal slightly to improve chances of getting a prison.
"It was one of the stronger proposals submitted by anyone in the state," Hackler said. "But I would be remiss if I didn't say we might modify our game plan. I'm not certain you'll see a lot of changes in our proposal, but we are going to meet on Thursday and discuss our game plan."
He said it would be premature at the present time to say what those modifications might include.
Waters stated that local contributors to the prison effort, whose money will be used to purchase land for the site and prepare it for construction, would need to make up for at least $5,000 in pledge money from Jim Marcum.
Marcum, owner of Marcum Chrysler Dodge, has since moved to Denton.
Waters and McNatt said additional contributors will also be sought, and if any business or individual would like to make a pledge, only due if a prison is landed, they should contact the chamber office.

Of the previously submitted proposal Waters said, "The prison site itself is still viable with (Rex) McAnelly. It runs out in July. I intend to contact him this morning and make sure he will stay with us, and he's said he would."
"The Celanese option on land has expired by its own terms, but I talked with (plant manager) Brent Stephens and he told me it's only a matter of paper work to get that renewed, that Celanese in principal will stay with us."
"The Helton (Well Service) section, which is across the road to the west of the prison (site) has expired and I don't know whether or not it will be renewable by us."
That site included 580 acres of proposed land for agricultural use by the prison.
Another section of land south of town owned by the city and included in the last proposal has been leased, Waters said, but he stated there will be time to consider options regarding the property.
If Pampa is selected, Waters said ground will not be broken until 1991 and it will take three years to complete construction, based on prison sites in Amarillo and Childress.
Officials expressed optimism that a rumor out of Austin was true and the Amarillo prison is being considered as an intake site for West Texas. If that is the case, they said, it is possible the TDCJ will begin clustering prisons in the region as they have in East and South Texas.
They also noted that Coronado Hospital is frequently used by the Amarillo prison to treat prisoners and hoped that connection would endear the city to board members.
Nunnelee said he was unaware that Pampa was used for prisoner treatment and did not know how that might affect the city's chances.

Lefors holds hearing on grant application

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Last year's grant by the city of Lefors was to drill a water well and provide all the necessary accessories that go with that well, including transmission line, a pump house and water rights acquisition.
In mid-May, water rights to 40 acres of land, owned by Malouf Abraham Sr. of Canadian, were granted to the city of Lefors at no charge.
Gee said that donation should help the city be in better standing during the grant process this year.
This year's application is proposed to be basically the same as last year's with adjustments and updates made to the application, Gee said.
The mayor has initiated a new survey that he hopes will show there are more low- to moderate-income people living in the city now than when the last survey was completed in 1985.
If the city has at least 60 percent low- to moderate-income people who respond to the survey, the city's grant application will get a 30-point bonus added to it at the grading stage.
When the 1985 survey was completed, the city recorded 51 percent of the people responding to the survey as low- to moderate-income. The city must have at least 51 percent who are low- to moderate-income in order to be eligible for grant money.
For the survey to be valid, the city must attempt to contact 100 percent of the people residing in the city and must survey at least 70 percent of the people.

Low- to moderate-income families are determined by the following Housing and Urban Development guidelines for the number of people living in a residence followed by the yearly incomes:

• 1 - $16,250	• 5 - $24,650
• 2 - $18,550	• 6 - $26,100
• 3 - $20,900	• 7 - $27,550
• 4 - $23,200	• 8 - $29,000

The survey deadline is July 10 and Gee said he will work to complete most of the survey forms and the City Council will aid in the tabulation. The application deadline for the grant is July 24.
In other business, the City Council unanimously voted to transfer $10,000 from a reserve fund to the general fund to pay for work being done on the city's water wells.
The City Council also heard a report from Councilman Larry Fulton on a study he had completed on delinquent utility bill accounts. Fulton outlined the problem to the Council and proposed implementing a written policy for the utility bill payment.
No action was taken on the proposal, which is scheduled to be placed on the July 9 agenda for the City Council.
Fulton said there is an outstanding amount of $18,059.31 owed on water and gas bills in the city of Lefors.
Of that amount, $13,624.28 is from people who are at least two months behind on paying their bills, $3,468.03 is from people who have moved owing bills and $966 is from people who are delinquent at least one month on water and gas bills.
Of the 40 people who owe a total of $13,624.28, only 10 had made any effort in May to pay what was owed for the current month, Fulton said.

Fire boats spray water on the stern of the supertanker Mega Borg Monday afternoon in an effort to control the burning oil.

Waves break over tanker's stern as fire continues

By RUTH RENDON
Associated Press Writer

GALVESTON (AP) - Coast Guard officials today boarded the fire-ravaged supertanker Mega Borg in the Gulf of Mexico to determine if it had cooled enough to be sprayed with flame-smothering foam.
The Coast Guard also backed off its earlier reports that the Mega Borg, carrying 38 million gallons of oil, had begun buckling.
"There is no evidence at all of any structural damage," said Coast Guard Chief Petty Officer Gene Maestas.
The fire, which has been blazing on the 886-foot long vessel since Saturday, appeared to be diminishing this morning, Maestas said.
A probe team boarded the vessel early today to determine when foam could safely be used on the Norwegian tanker, Maestas said. He did not know how many team members were on board.
Crews said efforts to contain the oil leak apparently have been successful. The slick was 13 miles long and 5 miles wide today. The slick yesterday was about 15 miles long.
The Coast Guard said today they believed less than 2,000 gallons of oil was left in the water at the site 57 miles offshore from Galveston. The rest of the 10,000 to 100,000 gallons believed to have spilled since Saturday had either dissipated or burned off, officials said.
Most of what remained today appeared in a light sheen, with few heavy concentrations, Maestas said. None of the spill was expected to make landfall today, he said.
Nonetheless, the U.S. government asked Mexico to send some skimmers to help with cleanup operations if the situation worsens.
"We're in the planning stages for what may be a catastrophic incident," said Maestas. But he said the request was precautionary and the help might not be needed.
Crews at the scene today reported no signs of major structural damage to the ship, Maestas said.
Earlier, Coast Guard Petty Officer Howard Holmes had said part of the vessel showed signs of buckling because of the intense 900-degree blaze, the shifting cargo and the continuous stream of water being poured on the hulk. Today, the Coast Guard said only the deck was showing signs of damage.

Maestas said the firefighters aboard will try to determine the temperature on the Mega Borg to see if the foam can be used without more explosions brought on by the intense heat of the fire.
Foam, which smothers the flames, doesn't stop a buildup of heat and gases inside that can cause more explosions. Firefighters applying foam through a hose would have to eventually board it, and the steel on the deck might be too hot.
The foaming operation was delayed Monday because six fireboats spraying water couldn't keep the tanker's deck cool enough to prevent a flash fire or new explosions. Fireboats continued pouring water on the ship today.
On Monday, the Coast Guard said there was a slightly increased chance the ship could sink.
The rear has dropped more than 60 feet since the Norwegian tanker was crippled by explosions and fire.
The drop indicates either that the cargo had shifted or the ship was taking water, officials said.
The dropping stern "increases the danger of sinking but only incrementally," Coast Guard Chief Petty Officer Todd Nelson said. "We are not talking right now about sinking."
Rear Adm. William Kime, commandant of the Coast Guard, flew over the crippled ship and said that despite the setbacks, "We're cautiously optimistic."
However, Bob Schuller, a naval architect in Houston, said the dropping added pressure on the ship's structure and speculated the pressure could crack the ship or sink it.
The Mega Borg carries more than three times as much oil as was spilled by the Exxon Valdez off Alaska in March 1989 in the nation's worst oil spill.
Authorities, however, noted the oil spilled in Alaska was heavy crude, which doesn't dissipate nearly as rapidly as the light crude aboard the Mega Borg. Also, much of the oil spilling off Texas has evaporated or burned.

Poll shows Americans favor supercops to fight polluters

By GARY LANGER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Seven in 10 Americans say they would ban disposable diapers to protect the environment, and even more would outlaw the plastic foam flotsam of fast-food restaurants, a survey found.

The Media General-Associated Press survey found that most Americans want to elect statewide supercops to take on polluters. And they favor prohibiting cancer-causing pesticides and excessive product packaging.

The poll found strong support for an array of other strict environmental laws. Of those who live in neighborhoods where recycling is not mandatory, nine in 10 supported such a requirement.

Nearly 70 percent favored election of a state environmental sheriff, a proposal that comes before California voters in a November referendum dubbed "Big Green." Other steps in that measure also won wide backing in the poll.

For example, the California act would ban 19 widely used pesticides that cause cancer in laboratory animals; such a move was favored by 70 percent in the survey, "even if the risk to humans is very slight."

"Big Green" calls for a fee on oil shipping to pay for spill prevention and cleanup; in the poll, 80 percent supported such an effort, even if it raised oil prices. A separate proposal in California would restrict logging in old forests; 61 percent of those polled backed a ban on such timber cutting.

Overall, the survey found a continuing high level of concern about the environment. Four out of five respondents said pollution threatens the quality of their lives, and 75 percent said current anti-pollution laws are too weak. Most faulted state, local and federal environmental efforts.

The level of concern was essentially unchanged from a poll that asked some of the same questions a year ago. The new poll, conducted by telephone May 11-20 among a random sample of 1,143 adults, had a three-point error margin.

Just one-third of respondents expected pollution to decrease in the next 10 years, while 44 percent said it would increase. The rest expected little change.

Toxic waste disposal remained the greatest priority, with 65 percent saying it required "urgent government action no matter what the cost."

The related matter of drinking water pollution got the next highest priority.

The poll found strong support for trash-reduction measures that proponents say could ease pressure on clogged landfills. Among them:

- 88 percent favored "restrictions on product packaging to reduce trash."

- 84 percent favored a ban on foam plastic containers such as those used in fast-food restaurants.

- 71 percent supported a ban on disposable diapers.

The survey found some participation in the "ethical shopping" movement, which urges support for environmentally concerned companies. While a strong majority said they shop "mainly on the basis of price and quality," 19 percent said they consider the manufacturer's environmental record.

Ethical shopping was particularly supported by those with postgraduate educations - 30 percent - and those who called themselves liberals, with 27 percent participating. Among conservatives, 15 percent participated.

There was little such division on other issues. Concern about the environment, criticism of government measures and support for strong new steps crossed boundaries of ideology, age, income, sex and political party.

As in the previous poll, respondents supported several air pollution measures that have been suggested in California.

They include strict controls on power plants and bans on aerosol products, charcoal lighter fluid and non-radial tires, which release rubber into the air.

Pilot recovering after being sucked through window on British jetliner

LONDON (AP) - A British Airways pilot sucked out of his jetliner's cockpit when a front windshield blew out was held by his legs for a quarter of an hour while his copilot made an emergency landing in southern England.

"The window popped and Tim went out like a rag doll," said stewardess Susan Prince, who helped hold onto 41-year-old Capt. Tim Lancaster after the ordeal began Sunday at 24,000 feet.

Lancaster was hospitalized and suffering from shock, a fractured elbow, wrist and thumb as well as frostbite in one hand, Southampton Hospital said Monday. His injuries were not deemed life-threatening.

The plane, with a crew of six and 81 passengers, had been airborne for 20 minutes when the accident occurred. It was bound for the resort of Malaga, Spain from Birmingham in northern England.

When the windshield panel blew out and the drop in air pressure began to suck Lancaster out, purser Nigel Ogden was nearby in the forward galley, serving tea. He dashed into the cockpit and, as the pilot was disappearing, grabbed his legs. Simon Rogers, a steward, strapped himself into the pilot's seat harness and, helped by Miss Prince, held on to Lancaster as Ogden let go.

Blood was pouring from a gash in his right arm caused by broken glass.

Ogden and Rogers were treated at Southampton Hospital for cuts, and four passengers were admitted with shock. All were later released.

Rogers had held the pilot for 15 minutes while other crew members calmed passengers and gave Ogden first aid.

The pilot was so far out of the left windshield - the cockpit has two front windshields - that when the BAC 1-11 twin-engine jet eventually landed at Southampton Airport, firefighters were able to lift him out through it.

Lancaster was nearly naked. His uniform had been torn off and he was bleeding from being repeatedly slammed against the nose cone.

Copilot Alistair Atchison, with Lancaster hanging outside as winds at minus 20 degrees Fahrenheit blew into the plane, had donned an oxygen mask and put the jet into a steep dive to get below 10,000 feet where pressure drops to normal. He landed the aircraft at Southampton, 70 miles southwest of London.

Passengers in front seats said they saw the pilot hanging from the window as the crew struggled to save him and bring the aircraft down safely.

"There was a terrific bang and a rush of air so strong it seemed to part my hair," said passenger David Duncan, 35, a construction worker. "The cockpit door was blown off its hinges and I saw the near-naked pilot hanging out of the window covered in blood."

Thames Valley police said the windshield panel, 3 feet wide by 2 1/2 feet high, was found intact on a farm near Wallingford, 55 miles

A British Airways spokesman, speaking anonymously in keeping with British custom, said it's unusual for a windshield to shatter.

Environmental study planned for nuclear waste site

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) - The process of determining how the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant would affect human life and the surrounding environment in southeast New Mexico could begin this fall, said officials of a consortium that will monitor the facility.

Officials from New Mexico State, the University of New Mexico and New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology hope to present the Department of Energy next month with plans for early monitoring of WIPP.

WIPP is a DOE project to store defense-related plutonium-contaminated waste 2,150 feet below the surface in ancient salt beds 26 miles southeast of Carlsbad.

The waste to be stored at WIPP would come from 10 Energy Department sites throughout the country. The waste would be shipped to WIPP over 25 years.

The three New Mexico universities last fall formed the Waste Management Education and Research Consortium. Its goal is to conduct education and research programs to expand the nation's capabilities for dealing with issues related to the environment.

During a public hearing last Thursday in Carlsbad, consortium members proposed the creation of the Environmental Monitoring and Research Program (EMRP). The program, which officials said would cost $5 million to $6 million annually to operate, would monitor environmental and human conditions at the WIPP site.

J. Derald Morgan, dean of engineering at New Mexico State, said a final proposal on the program should be completed and ready for the DOE by July.

He said work on monitoring WIPP employees could begin by September.

The program would be housed in temporary facilities until $3.5 million worth of facilities such as a bioassay laboratory, a 10,000-square-foot environmental laboratory and data center can be completed.

Morgan said base-line data collected before WIPP begins accepting plutonium-contaminated waste

Rancher held at gunpoint by federales, has cattle rustled by drug smugglers

EDITOR'S NOTE - Associated Press newsman Dick Benke has spent three months researching drug trafficking and other crimes along New Mexico's border, particularly in the desolate Bootheel area and the frontier separating Columbus, N.M., and Palomas, Mexico. Following is the last of a three-part series from his visit along the border.

By RICHARD BENKE
Associated Press Writer

ANTELOPE WELLS, N.M. (AP) - Just across the barbed-wire border fence that separates William Hurt's vast 4H ranch from Mexico, a 200-acre cornfield concealed an estimated $40 million worth of marijuana.

The nine-foot corn was tall enough and thick enough that the marijuana planted between the rows could not be seen from the ground. The field was discovered by Mexican federal police flying over in an airplane, then-U.S. Border Patrol Agent Don Daniels says.

When the federales raided the Mexican plantation last Oct. 1, they also came onto U.S. soil and held Hurt, 34, and a friend at gunpoint for a tense 15 minutes on Hurt's land, Hurt and Daniels say.

A month later nearly 50 of Hurt's cattle were rustled into Mexico by men believed to be marijuana smugglers. He'd also had 20 head stolen in August.

Hurt says contacts in Mexico tell him he may have been rustled in November because the smugglers believed he told authorities about the cornfield.

"There's already been a threat against me. I was told it was worth so many pesos to see me gone. They (the contacts) said a million pesos, which figures out to be about $3,000," Hurt says. "I just look over my shoulder all the time."

But he says he never knew there was marijuana hidden in there.

"You couldn't see the marijuana through the corn," says Daniels, who retired from the Border Patrol late last year.

Corn was planted around a 15-foot-wide perimeter. Inside that swath, marijuana was planted between the rows of corn, he said.

"There was probably $40 million worth of marijuana growing in that cornfield," Daniels says, "a good 200 acres."

On Oct. 1, Hurt was running a generator on a stock-tank pump just across from the cornfield. He was accompanied by a visiting friend who is an assistant district attorney from Tucson, Ariz. Hurt was armed; he says he always carries guns since the drug smuggling and thefts started on his ranch.

As he drove away from the stock tank, Hurt says a truckload of Mexican men dressed in civilian clothing and carrying automatic weapons crossed through an open section of the border fence in their vehicle and confronted him at gunpoint.

"We were debating whether to go ahead and start shooting at them, and finally, one of them looks at me and says, 'Please, sir, step out of the pickup,'" in broken English.

"I'm saying, 'No, this is the United States. My land. And there was a lot of yelling going on. I wasn't going to back down a bit.'"

But Hurt acknowledges fear as he stepped from the truck.

"These doors don't turn bullets," he says.

The men told him they were federales but gave no identification, he says. They were released 15 minutes later.

He came back later that day and again the following day with a New Mexico state police captain and both times encountered federales at the fence.

He says the captain recommended that Hurt leave the ranch, but he wouldn't go.

Daniels says the 30 or 40 federales guarding the cornfield feared Hurt and his companion were drug traffickers attempting to retake the plantation.

"The way those things work in Mexico, when they raid one of those fields, sometimes those growers will try to band together and come back and try to take it back," he says. "They've had a lot of judicial police killed. They saw this truck coming down toward the border. I really can't blame them."

Hurt has recovered all but three of the cattle rustled in August but still is missing the 46 taken last November. Those cattle were rustled out the southeastern corner of New Mexico's Bootheel. The rusty 5-foot-high wire fence was cut precisely where his east-west boundary fence meets the north-south.

"If they go stealing $50,000 or $100,000 worth of cattle every two or three months consistently, they can put me out of business in a hurry. I don't know anybody who can stand to lose $1 million worth of assets a year," Hurt says.

But he adds: "I have no intention of leaving. I don't intend to move out."

New Mexico State Livestock Board investigator Mel Sedillo says a judge in Mexico issued an injunction preventing Chihuahua state judicial police from searching for the cattle or from questioning two suspects.

"They've got them (the suspects) under surveillance. They're watching them," Sedillo says.

Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, 4th District Court Judge Jose Librado Fuerte Chavez refused to discuss the injunctions when contacted by telephone.

Hurt says he has heard that several of his cattle are penned near Casas Grandes, about 100 miles south of his ranch. He says he believes there was official collusion in a coverup on the Mexican side and in the rustling.

"Somebody got paid to keep their mouth shut, turn a blind eye or something," he says.

Sedillo says Chihuahua state police have told him the suspected rustlers are known drug smugglers.

Hurt says the rustlers' horses' hoofprints matched tracks left by smugglers who have crossed his ranch previously.

Sedillo and Hurt say the rustlers apparently smuggled drugs from Mexico into the United States, then took the cattle on their way back to Mexico.

"The theft of these cattle coincides with the construction of a new packing house in Ascension," about 20 miles southeast of the Bootheel's Corner, Hurt says.

Hurt says the wire fence along his part of the border has been cut 12 times since November. He patches it every time he finds a breach.

"I've had more new cuts in the last year than I had in the previous three years, most in November, December and January," he says.

Rancher Joe Johnson, whose 42-square-mile Hard H Ranch fronts the border 30 miles west of Columbus, says there is frequent traffic onto his land as well.

U.S. investigators say marijuana and cocaine smugglers are packing contraband across the border on horseback and on foot.

"I've only seen one on horseback," Johnson says, "seen him in my binoculars. From a distance it looked like the horse had something (packed) on him. It was a man leading a horse on this side of the fence."

Hurt's family has ranched in the Bootheel since 1909. His 200-square-mile portion of the family spread used to be called the U-Bar.

Adjacent to the Gray Ranch, which is proposed as a national wildlife refuge, Hurt's spread also boasts Indian petroglyphs, cave paintings and abundant wildlife.

He expresses frustration that it may take Border Patrol agents up to three hours to get help to him. The Antelope Wells border crossing 30 miles to the southeast is the nearest official outpost.

"They tell you when you pay your taxes, 'Hey, we're providing protection for you.' Well, they're not. They don't provide anything for me down here. 'Course I guess if there wasn't some kind of U.S. government, there'd be a free-for-all down here. There almost is. Sometimes it feels like I'm just by myself."

Computer hackers tap porn into Internet

HOUSTON (AP) - Educators are worried about adolescents having easy access to a sophisticated pornography ring at the touch of the keyboards on their personal computers.

The Houston Chronicle reported that material found on Internet during a four-month period included hundreds of sexually explicit stories and pictures, intense discussions about freedom of expression and details of underground political strategy.

The tax-supported Internet also offered the scientific exchange it touts as its purpose, the newspaper reported.

Westbury High School student Jeff Noxon, 17, said his homework was rudely interrupted recently when he stumbled across the hi-tech porno setup.

Noxon glimpsed only part of an electronic catalog of erotic art and literature that offers titles such as "Cindy's Torment" and "The Education of Rachel."

almost any computer user with equipment common to most personal computers.

"There are a lot of 12-year-olds getting their heads filled with a lot of ideas they're probably not ready for yet," Noxon said.

Universities and other institutions use Internet as a research and educational tool, wiring their computers together in a network, allowing individual users to share information and expensive resources.

Each such network is then connected via phone lines, fiber optics or satellite to other networks, thus allowing the users to work together.

People are encouraged to experiment, said Rice University's Guy Almes, the primary director of Internet operations in Texas.

"There's no Gestapo watching over this thing," Almes said.

But because there are virtually no rules, the catalog of information includes voluminous pornography along with advice on recreational drugs, satanism, paganism and sex slaves.

Some of the activity on Internet probably violates state and federal obscenity laws, said Russel Turbeville, chief of the economic crimes-consumer fraud division of the Harris County district attorney's office.

But prosecution, he said, would be difficult.

"Where you start dealing with computer frauds especially, where you have thousands, tens of thousands, maybe a million victims, how do you deal with that in the indictment, and how do you prove things in court?" Turbeville said.

Honor students at Clear Lake High School will be able to access Internet beginning this summer. School officials know about the network's explicit content but they hope the honor system and the threat of a bad grade will discourage students from exploring forbidden territory.

The students have signed a form promising to use the tool as intended.

Panhandle Bird Watch

by Jan Elston

Ruby-throated Hummingbird

Those of you who didn't get to hear Dan True's program about Hummingbirds really missed a treat. He is writing a book about Hummingbirds, and gave us current information, some of which hasn't even been published because the research is just being completed.

We have already had an article about Hummingbirds in "Panhandle Bird Watch", but I feel that it is important to review some of the information from that article, and also give you additional information that you need to be aware of.

Texas leads the nation in the number of varieties of hummingbirds (19 different kinds); the Texas Panhandle has recorded 6 varieties — the Ruby-throated, the Black-chinned, the Broad-billed, the Rufous, the Caliope, and the Anna's. Ruby-throated Hummingbirds are 3 1/4 inches long, iridescent green above, whitish below, and the male has a brilliant red throat (or gorget), which shows when the sun hits it just right or when he displays as a territorial, courtship, or defensive maneuver. The Red-throated is among the earliest migrants; so it is a good idea to have your feeder up early—preferably by February, to attract early-arrivals scouting for sources of nectar. Hummers will return to the same yard, even if the feeders are empty. (Last year, on Christmas Day, an Anna's Hummer with a broken beak was at a feeder in Amarillo; so if you leave your feeder up all winter, there's a possibility that you might attract a straggler, perhaps from a late hatch.)

Here are some other guidelines to follow when putting out your feeder:

1. Use home-made sugar-water solution, mixed 1 part sugar to 4 parts water. Bring to a boil on stove burner, and boil 2 minutes. Do not heat water in microwave — they won't drink that, probably because of altered molecular configuration.

2. Use only the exact 4-to-1 ratio for preparing your sugar-water solution. Increasing the ratio of sugar makes the solution too concentrated for them; making it weaker than 4-to-1 doesn't give them enough sugar.

3. Use granulated Cane Sugar or Beet Sugar, but do not use honey, which is a likely medium for the growth of a fungus that can infect the tongues of hummers.

4. Don't use any food coloring or packaged hummingbird food, because Red Dye 2 and the preservatives in the packaged mix can cause damage to their livers. If your feeder has any red on it, they'll find it; so the coloring in the water isn't necessary.

5. Because the sugar-water solution tends to sour quickly, be sure to change the solution every 2 to 3 days during the hotter days, and at least once a week the rest of the year. Fresh sugar-water solution can be stored in the refrigerator for future use.

6. It is not necessary to keep your feeder completely full, unless many hummingbirds are feeding there. If you are trying to attract them, or if you have only a few birds feeding, it's probably better to have just a small amount of solution in the feeder. (We have a 16 ounce feeder; so I just pour in about 6 or 8 oz. of sugarwater)

7. Clean feeders thoroughly with hot water with a little vinegar added, to prevent mold from becoming established. Don't use detergent. Scrub the feeders with a bottle brush or a coffee-maker brush, and rinse them thoroughly before refilling them.

8. Any kind of feeder is all right—but be sure to keep sugar-water solution in it. Even if a sugar-water container is removed, hummers will continue to visit the site as they make the rounds of the yard.

Dan True is particularly interested in photographing nesting Red-throated Hummingbirds. Their nests are about the size of half a walnut, and contain two white eggs which are navy-bean size. They may produce 2 broods during a summer. If you could send a photograph of the nest, it would be most appreciated.

He is also interested in hearing about any species of hummingbird (other than the six listed in the third paragraph) which might appear in this area.

If you should find a dead hummingbird of any kind, place it in a plastic baggie, seal the bag, and put it in the freezer—then contact me. Identification can be made by the coloration of the plumage of the males, and by the tail feathers of either the males or the females.

Dan has asked us to note the date of the first arrivals, and the weather that day; then to note the date of their departure and the weather at that time. You may write me c/o the PAMPA NEWS, P.O. Drawer 2198, Pampa, TX 79066-2198, and I will send this information to Dan.

W. Cecil Steward

W. Cecil Steward, formerly of Pampa, and currently dean of the College of Architecture at the University of Nebraska in Lincoln will become the president of the American Institute of Architects in 1991, the first educator ever to assume the post.

Steward was elected first vice president/president elect at the AIA's national convention in Houston in May. He will assume the new office in December and become AIA's president in 1992.

He received a bachelor of architecture degree from Texas A&M, a masters in architecture from Columbia University and a diploma in planning and architecture from Ecole de Beaux Arts, Fontainebleau, France.

Steward attended Pampa public schools grades one through 12, graduating in 1952. He is the son of Lois Steward of Pampa and the late Weldon C. Steward.

On June 22 Steward will be traveling to the Soviet Union in conjunction with the "Design USA Exhibit" sponsored by the United States Information Agency, Washington, D.C.

Amarillo College Graduates Area residents honored during recent commencement ceremonies at Amarillo College include two McLean residents: Tina Louise Thomas, associate nursing degree and Mildred Ray George, who graduated in December with an associate nursing degree.

Terry J. Jones of Lefors graduated from the postal service administration program. Junior/Senior games set for June 13 in Central Park

Residents of Pampa Nursing Home and children from Kids Korner Day Care will come together on Wednesday, June 13 for the annual ARA Living centers' Junior/Senior Games.

Teams of residents and children will compete for medals in events such as wheel chair push, basketball throw and frisbee toss.

But according to Ina Gale Rowell, activity director, winning medals is not the highlight of the annual intergenerational event.

"The Junior/Senior Games provide our residents the opportunity to renew their ties to the community and to interact with children," Rowell said. "The residents teach them that laughter, friendship, and determination are ageless. By courageously competing in these events with the children as partners, the seniors set an example for all of us."

The Junior/Senior Games, free of charge, will be held at Central Park on the tennis courts from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Volunteers are needed to help during the games. For more information call 669-2551.

Boys taught to play piano win crescendos of praise

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Piano Lover" that one of the great joys of my life is that, at 81, I can still sit down at the piano and play "Dizzy Fingers" and dozens of other popular numbers as well as classical.

My parents forced me to take piano lessons when I was 10 years old. I had very little talent and I hated to practice, but I had to whether I liked it or not, so eventually I learned how to play. I didn't realize it at the time, but they did me a tremendous favor when they wouldn't let me quit.

Now that I am retired, playing the piano is my most rewarding hobby. I see many retired folks who are bored to death, with nothing to do but sit in a chair and rock endlessly. I love to walk, but due to a knee injury I got playing four years of college football, I can't walk as much as I'd like to.

Now, piano is my love. What a joy to play Broadway show tunes. I also love Strauss waltzes, Chopin, Debussy, Wagner, as well as those fast, showy novelty numbers.

I agree with you, Abby. Let the boy take piano lessons. It's a wonderful way to learn the basics of music. And by the way, nobody who knew me when I was young would ever take me for a sissy.

B. MORGAN SCHERER,
JOHNSON CITY, TENN.

DEAR MORGAN: Read on for a couple of other male pianists who are anything but feminine:

DEAR ABBY: I had to write in response to "Piano Lover," who wrote to say that her husband wouldn't allow her son to take piano lessons because he was afraid he'd become a sissy.

My son, Steve, now 18, started taking piano lessons when he was 8. He has such a passion for music, along with his God-given talent, and has entertained people for hours with his piano playing. It never once crossed our mind — or his — that a pianist might be considered feminine.

By the way, Steve is also a varsity

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

letter recipient in soccer and track. He lifts weights and is also in the top 5 percent of his class scholastically. He has a steady girlfriend, but other girls call him anyway. Believe me, Abby, this kid is no sissy.

STEVE'S MOM,
SELLERSVILLE, PA.

DEAR ABBY: I'm usually pretty quiet concerning people's opinions, but when they make brash and erroneous statements about guys who take piano lessons, that's something I won't stand for.

I am 16 years old, stand 5 foot 10 and weight 200 pounds. I played first-string linebacker and fullback in football, and I'm a first-degree black belt. I've been taking piano lessons for eight years, which has enabled me to learn how to play nine other instruments, and I'm definitely no sissy.

I'm not saying this to brag on myself; I just want to let that father know that his son can take piano lessons without threatening his masculinity. Sign me ...

Lovett Library Staff

September by Rosamunde Pilcher

The author of The Shell Seekers offers a warm novel of tradition and family, set in her native Scotland. Opening in May with plans for a birthday party to be held in the traditionally festive month of September, the novel traces the interviewing destinies of a far-flung cast of characters. As September approaches, the characters, coming from as far away as Spain and New York, prepare to make the pilgrimage to the small town of Strathcroy to attend boisterously disorderly parties, propose marriage, and end relationships.

Mercy by David Lindsey

A gritty, suspenseful tale of murder and perversion by the author of A Cold Mind. In Houston, Tex., where a serial killer is on the loose, detective Carmen Palma investigates the rape and murder of three women, uncovering evidence that each victim had been involved in the seedy world of sadomasochism. When help arrives in the form of an FBI agent who specializes in second-guessing serial killers, the two pursue the twisted butcher into the slimy recesses of the Houston underground.

The Golden Orange by Joseph Wambaugh

Now, after the Blooding, come the best-selling writer's first novel in five years. Forty-year-old former cop Winnie Farlowe wanders among the waterfront saloons of Orange County's glitzy Gold Coast until his misadventures draw the attention of a well-endowed, three-time divorcee named Tess. Seeking help in solving the mystery of her father's death, Tess leads Farlowe into the world of clubs, yachts, and mansions, where they both become the targets of a lurking killer.

Always and Forever by Cynthia Freeman

The best-selling author of The Last Princess explores the themes she has made uniquely her own. Amidst the rubble of post-World War II Berlin, Kathy Ross feels the stirrings of passion for physician David Kahn. His reticence and devotion to family, however, cause her to marry instead his dashing cousin Phil. The years that follow, filled with material goods and the appearance of happiness—as well as Phil's infidelity—lead Kathy to flee, but to hold on nonetheless to her dream of a fulfilling passion.

The Evening News by Arthur Hailey

The author of Airport and Hotel presents a sweeping novel about network television news. As a powerful television network and a lethal terrorist organization square off to do battle, anchorman Crawford Sloane and world-renowned correspondent Harry Partridge—rivals for everything from fame to Sloane's wife since covering the Vietnam War together—become enmeshed in the conflict. Surrounded by a realistic cast of characters that includes greedy executives, idealistic journalists, revolutionaries, and violent anarchists, the two men struggle to protect their families, their careers, and their lives from terrorist threats.

Masquerade by Janet Dailey

Another captivating tale by the author of Heiress and Rivals. A mysterious attack at the Carnival in Nice leaves beautifully Remy Jardin suffering from amnesia, but her tribulations are only beginning. Desperately attempting to come to an understanding of her situation, she is puzzled by the behavior of Cole Buchanan, president of her family's shipping company and her former lover. Her inquiries into the wreck of the Dragon are equally troubling. And her search for truth also threatens to expose family secrets that others would rather remain hidden.

Small Victories by Samuel Freedman

Seward Park High School in Manhattan—old, overcrowded, and serving the children of America's newest immigrants—has been ranked among the worst 10 percent of high schools in New York State. In the face of such odds, how do 92 percent of its graduates go on to higher education? The answer lies in dedicated teachers, one of whom, Jessica Siegel, is the subject of Small Victories.

Samuel Freedman followed Siegel through the 1987-88 academic year and not only saw a master teacher at work but learned, from the inside, just how a school functions amid staggering social problems.

Here are the personal stories of the students, the administrators, the teachers, and especially Jessica Siegel—energetic, determined, and impassioned. Small Victories is heart-breaking and genuinely inspiring, a book with important lessons for anyone concerned about the quality and state of education in America.

Rangers' Ryan hurls another no-hit masterpiece

Nolan Ryan is carried off the field after pitching his sixth no-hitter. Ryan and the Rangers beat the A's, 5-0, Monday night.

World champion A's latest victim

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Baseball Writer

After 24 seasons in the major leagues, Nolan Ryan's future is just as interesting as his past.

How many more no-hitters? How many more strikeouts? How many more victories?

Ryan, 43, answered one of those questions Monday night when he pitched his sixth no-hitter to beat Oakland 5-0 for career shutout No. 59. He has two more no-hitters than Sandy Koufax had and three more than Bob Feller.

Want more?

Ryan has pitched 12 one-hitters and 19 three-hitters. "I haven't gotten bored with no-hitters, yet," Ryan said. "I don't know how many more chances I'm going to get, but the way I've been throwing, it's certainly not out of the question that I'll get another shot."

Ryan opened the season on April 9 with five no-hit innings against Toronto. He pitched a one-hitter and struck out 16 White Sox on April 26.

Watching Ryan pitch a baseball game is like going to a museum to see a Van Gogh, or to the concert hall to hear a Mozart symphony. First, Ryan catches your senses and then your breath.

When Ryan is on the mound, history is right there with him.

He has pitched in four decades, and each of his 45 major league records seem to have a story to tell.

Of his six no-hitters, none may have been his best game.

"I still think one of the best games I ever pitched was against Boston," Ryan said in his slow Texas drawl. "I retired the last 26 hitters in a row."

"I led the game off with a walk, struck somebody out, and then Carl Yastrzemski hit a ground ball through the hole between short and third."

Ryan drops names such as Yastrzemski, Reggie Jackson, Hank Aaron and Willie Mays like friends trying to get together a softball game in Central Park.

He has struck out 44 MVP winners and 19 Hall of Famers, with more to come. Ryan has also fanned Bobby and Barry Bonds and Ken Griffey and Ken Jr. He also struck out brothers Jesus, Felipe and Matty Alou.

He is the all-time strikeout leader with 5,152 and six wins short of the magic 300 mark. Next on the strikeout list is Steve Carlton with 4,136.

To put it in perspective, for a pitcher starting out to reach Ryan's totals, he would have to average 20 wins and 343 strikeouts for 15 seasons.

Like Van Gogh and Mozart, Ryan has flaws in his youth, too.

The word of Ryan's 99-mph heat hit in the summer of 1966 when he struck out 272 batters in 183 innings while going 17-2 for Greenville, a New York Mets farm club.

But he couldn't find his control with the Mets, walking 344 in 510 innings over part of five seasons, and kept putting his blistered fingers in pickle brine. But Ryan did save a game in the 1969 World Series against Baltimore, his only championship ring.

The Mets traded him to California in 1971 along with three minor leaguers for aging infielder Jim Fregosi, and Ryan started his journey to Cooperstown while Fregosi prepared for retirement.

Lakers' Riley resigns

By JOHN NADEL
AP Sports Writer

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Stylish Pat Riley, the impeccably dressed director of Showtime the last nine years, has decided to take his act elsewhere, probably to the tube.

Mike Dunleavy, Riley's successor with the Los Angeles Lakers, will have a tough act to follow, both as a head coach and fashion plate.

Riley, who coached the Lakers to four NBA championships since taking over the team early in the 1981-82 season, had tears in his eyes as he bowed out of his job Monday at a news conference.

"It's just time for me at age 45 to move on," he said. "There are other things to do. There isn't anything specific I can say right now. I had a choice to make, a decision to make, as a person."

Accompanied by his wife, Chris, who also teared up, Riley said he was neither "fed up" nor "burned out" — just ready for a change.

"The last 10 years have been the greatest experience of my life," he said. "It was a wonderful decade of memorable experiences I've had. Basketball has been my life. I've been 20 years in this game."

"There are other things I want to do in my life. I don't want to be an old timer before I do them."

Riley, who still has two years left on his contract, is reportedly in line for a broadcasting job with NBC, which becomes the NBA's prime network next season. His decision to leave the Lakers confirmed rumors which circulated for several weeks.

Dunleavy, 36, an assistant coach for the Milwaukee Bucks the last three seasons, becomes the second-youngest head coach in the NBA.

Coincidentally, Riley was 36 when the Lakers hired him as head coach on Nov. 19, 1981, to succeed the fired Paul Westhead.

Riley guided the Lakers to an NBA-best 63-19 record this season and was named NBA Coach of the Year for the first time in his career. But Los Angeles was eliminated by Phoenix in five games in the Western Conference semifinals — the first time the Lakers didn't reach the conference finals since 1981, their final season under Westhead.

Under Riley, the Lakers went 533-194, a .733 winning percentage. They also went 102-47 in playoff games, the most playoff wins by one coach in NBA history.

Riley declined to comment on reports he was returning to the broadcast booth. NBC said it would have no comment on its NBA lineup until the finals conclude.

Riley worked as a color commentator with broadcaster Chick Hearn for two seasons before being hired as an assistant to Westhead in November 1979.

Pat Riley ends nine-year reign as Los Angeles coach. Riley may join NBC as a basketball announcer.

Costa Rica pulls off stunning upset

ROME (AP) — It was a grand day for Costa Rica's soccer team and Italy's security team.

The Costa Ricans, making their World Cup debut, stunned Scotland 1-0 Monday. Almost as lightly regarded as the United States in the soccer world, Costa Rica used a goal by Juan Cayasso and the outstanding goalkeeping of Luis Conejo to beat Scotland, which never has advanced beyond the first round.

Not even an estimated 15,000 Scottish "Tartan Army" fans in Genoa, including Rod Stewart and Sean Connery, could help the Scots.

"They showed great professionalism today," said Yugoslav Bora Milutinovic, who coaches Costa Rica. "It's incredible for me. They really deserved the win."

Ireland earned a 1-1 tie with England in the other game, at Cagliari.

World Cup

on the island of Sardinia. Italian authorities feared the game might be targeted by rowdies and result in violence.

Instead, the fans were calm all day, the game came off with no problems — except that it was dull and plagued by rain storms — and the strong security measures taken by police paid off.

Before the game, while fans sang and stomped their feet, more than 2,000 policemen stood guard. That bothered several fans. So did two helicopters hovering overhead and the presence of police with guard dogs standing 10 yards apart around the outside of the field.

"This is rubbish. I know they have to be careful, but this is over the top," said Paul Langford, 30, a sales representative from Bristol.

Candele lifts Astros past Dodgers

Fourth straight victory for Houston

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Casey at the bat has taken on new meaning for the Houston Astros.

Casey Candele got the game-winning hit for the second straight game Monday night with a two-run home run that lifted the Astros to a 5-3 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

On Sunday, Candele delivered a game-winning triple that gave the Astros a 4-2 victory over NL Western Division leading Cincinnati.

"This is great, it's a lot of fun to be involved," said Candele, who has played six positions for the Astros this season.

With Rafael Ramirez standing on second base in the seventh, Candele drove a pitch by Mike Morgan (6-5) over the right field fence to break a 3-3 tie and lead the Astros to their fourth straight victory, the team's longest win streak of the season.

It was the third homer of Candele's major league career.

"Maybe they turned the air conditioning up higher, I don't hit too many home runs," Candele said.

Morgan came into the game with a string of 24.2 innings without yielding an earned run.

He stretched that to 27.2 innings until fourth inning, when the Astros rallied to a 3-3 tie, highlighted by Ken Caminiti's two-run double.

The tie held until the seventh when Ramirez led off with a single to right field and was sacrificed to second by Rich Gedman.

Candele's homer gave Houston the lead for good and presented the victory to Larry Anderson (3-1).

The Dodgers didn't anticipate getting beat by Candele.

"He put him in there for defense, that just goes to show you, you're dangerous when you're swinging," Dodger manager Tommy Lasorda said.

Morgan said he didn't make the exact pitch he wanted to Candele.

"I tried to throw a cutter inside but I didn't get it inside enough," Morgan said. "He gets paid to hit. It's part of the game I'd like to have the pitch back but you live and learn. I don't accept losses, I just build on them."

Eddie Murray's two-run homer in the fourth gave the Dodgers a 3-0 lead before Houston's comeback.

Kal Daniels walked prior to Murray's eighth homer of the year and Hubie Brooks doubled and scored on Mike Scioscia's single for the third run.

The Astros rallied in the fourth on Ken Caminiti's two-run double and a run-scoring double by Eric Anthony to knot the game and set the stage for Candele.

"They stopped us after three runs," Lasorda said. "We just couldn't score any more."

The turning point in the game for Los Angeles came in the sixth inning when Murray doubled with one out and Brooks walked.

Scioscia flew out to the warning track to center fielder Eric Yelding, who ran far to his into right field to catch the ball.

He relayed to shortstop Ramirez, whose throw to third base caught Murray for a double play.

"That was one of the dumbest catches I've ever seen," Lasorda said. "That guy went a long way to catch the ball. That double play was a little unusual."

Levi - Invisible man on the PGA Tour

By BOB GREEN AP Golf Writer

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — For 14 years, Wayne Levi has been the ghost of professional golf, the game's invisible man.

"I like my particular style of life," the low-key Levi said after his front-running victory Sunday in the Western Open, his second tournament win in three weeks.

"I like to be able to walk through the airport or sit down and order dinner without a lot of people recognizing me," he said.

But Levi, one of the most underrated good players in the game today, admitted he may have to re-think his priorities.

The almost unchallenged victory over the strongest field of the year stamped him as a force to be considered in the 90th U.S. Open Championship this week at nearby Medinah.

Before my career is over," Levi, 37, said, "I'd like to win a major, and I guess the Open would be the one I'd rather win. And I guess this week would be my best chance."

He certainly goes into the national championship with the hottest current streak in golf.

The two recent triumphs gave him nine for his career. And that is more, for example, than the number of American tour events won by Greg Norman.

The Western Open victory also enabled Levi to join Norman, rookie Robert Gamez and PGA title-holder Payne Stewart as the only multiple winners on the American tour this year.

Levi opened the final round with a one-stroke lead, birdied the first two holes and led by margins ranging from 3-6 shots the rest of the way.

ing 69 and a 275 total, 13 under par and matching the Butler National Golf Club record set by Mark McCumber last year.

His task was eased by the mass collapse of would-be contenders on the final hole. Both Peter Jacobsen and Mark Brooks hit into the water and made double-bogey.

Tom Watson, who has won only once since taking his third Western Open in 1984, put two in the water and made triple-bogey 7.

Stewart finished second alone at 72-279. Jacobsen and Loren Roberts tied for third at 280, Jacobsen with a closing 68 and Roberts with a 71.

Brooks, with a 72, tied at 281 with Norman, who shot 70. Watson was next at 73-282.

Curtis Strange, who will seek a record-matching third consecutive U.S. Open crown next week, had a 70 and finished his final warm-up at 283, five under par and eight behind the winner.

He won by four shots with a close bogey at 16. Sheehan got the message.

"Somebody yelled it to me out of the gallery," she said. "It didn't change anything. I just wanted to stay under control."

As Okamoto fell back, Albers used a birdie-birdie-eagle run to get within three strokes of Sheehan with two holes to play. But Sheehan birdied No. 16 as well, and Albers fell back with a bogey at 18.

Deadlocked at 280 were Jane Geddes, Barb Mucha and Colleen Walker, who joined the career $1 million club.

Sheehan earned $97,500, which boosted her to second on the 1990 money winning list with $297,474, behind Pat Bradley. She remained sixth on the career money list with $2,195,346.

This tournament has been kind to Sheehan, who in eight appearances has earned $297,681. She also won in 1984 and twice has finished second.

Sheehan claims LPGA's McDonald's championship

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Patty Sheehan was disgusted with herself before she even took a swing in the LPGA's McDonald's Championship.

Because she had been improperly registered, she was locked out of the Lady Keystone the previous week in Hershey, Pa.

"I was down on myself enough ... to say, 'Alright, just pick yourself up and do something.' I had a feeling that I would play really well and at least be in contention."

She was more than in contention. She finished Sunday with a 1-under-par 70 for a four-shot victory.

Pat Bradley, who finished second at 284, earned $47,500.

Sheehan credited her second victory of the season and 22nd of an 11-year career to "perseverance and determination."

"Patience probably played a big part in this win," she said.

Okamoto, who came from three strokes back to tie Sheehan after nine holes on Sunday, eventually fell back to a four-way tie for second at 279 with Albers, Betsy King and Cathy Gerring.

Davis issues apology

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros first baseman Glenn Davis has apologized to the organization, teammates, fans and media for comments he has made about his future contract negotiations.

Davis said Monday some of his statements were taken out of context and he also faulted himself on other occasions for not making his meaning clear.

"I made a mistake and I'd like to restate myself and put to rest any misunderstanding about my contract," Davis said. "At this point in time, Glenn Davis is concerned about one thing, helping this team improve."

Davis earns $1,985,000 base salary on his current contract. He cannot become a free agent until 1991, but he told the Houston Chronicle on Thursday that he wanted a multi-year contract.

"I'm not going into next season without some kind of solution to this," Davis was quoted as saying.

Davis did not take issue with the Chronicle article but said later that media reports portrayed him as being egotistical and interested only in money.

"The more it started coming out, the more I saw that this was not Glenn Davis," Davis said.

"No one put me up to this," Davis said. "But after reading some of the things, I personally want to apologize to the team and to let everyone know that I don't think I'm God's greatest gift to the world."

Arkansas trustees may consider move to SEC

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — A potential move from the Southwest Conference to the Southeastern Conference may be on the minds of members of the Board of Trustees even if it's not on the agenda, a board member said.

The next UA Board meeting is set for Friday at Pine Bluff. The 10-team SEC, considering an expansion, recently asked Arkansas if it was interested in discussing a move.

Arkansas said it would listen to SEC overtures. Bart Lindsey of Helena said there may be no official discussion of the possible move, but board members will be talking about it during meeting breaks.

"It is certainly going to be on everyone's mind," Lindsey said.

Lindsey said. "I'm sure this will be discussed and we'll be made privy to some of those numbers."

Lindsey was referring to the potential increase in television revenues that would result from a change in conference affiliation.

The SWC has a five-year, $12 million contract with Raycom Sports and Entertainment of Charlotte, N.C., for 12 weeks of football and 12 basketball games and a $3 million deal with HomeSports Entertainment.

The SEC football package alone is reportedly worth that much. Also, SEC has a game of the week on WTBS, the Atlanta station carried across the nation on cable television systems.

Jim Blair of Springdale, chairman of the UA board, said he would feel some sadness if Arkansas moves to the SEC, because his father played football for the Razorbacks.

"I have to say I have some sadness if the world has led us to a place where historical tradition is swept away," Blair said.

Blair said the board won't have much to do with a decision to move anyway.

"Unless an individual campus is making a big, big mistake, we try not to interfere," Blair said. "However, the board will want to review any decisions the university makes in this matter."

The board trusts Chancellor Dan Ferritor and Athletic Director Frank Broyles, Blair said in an interview Sunday.

"I approach it from a business standpoint," he said. "You have 200 bad deals for every one good deal. You have to look at each opportunity."

Women set sights on governor's mansions in Texas, California

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The 1990 elections may not greatly increase the number of women in governor's mansions and Congress, but female candidates hope to smash a symbolic barrier by winning the top jobs in Texas and California.

Democratic governor nominees Ann Richards in Texas and Dianne Feinstein in California are the bright spots in a year that, at best, may bring incremental progress in electing more women to top-level offices.

Three women already are governors of smaller states, but claiming control in major states like Texas and California would "break a big thick glass ceiling," said Sharon Rodine, president of the bipartisan National Women's Political Caucus.

While numerical gains at the top are likely to be slim, more women than ever are running for state legislatures, statewide offices and Congress, according to the caucus. These candidates are receiving tens of thousands of dollars from a growing number of groups promoting women's candidacies.

But all eyes and a good deal of money are on California and Texas, where the new governors will have a strong hand in the redistricting expected to add up to 10 new seats to their congressional delegations next year.

"California and Texas are key in terms of presidential politics and reapportionment," said Jane Danowitz, executive director of the bipartisan Women's Campaign Fund. "These are not local posts. We are talking about chief executive officers for two of the largest entities in the country."

The practical, powerbroker aspects of Feinstein and Richards' victories would be matched by their symbolic import, many women say.

"Until we crack the stereotypical barrier of women as executives of major states, we will not have a woman in the White House," said Wendy Sherman, executive director of the Democratic EMILY's List, which supports women candidates.

Feinstein faces Sen. Pete Wilson in November and Richards is up against oilman-rancher Clayton Williams. Both women survived bruising primaries and are considered viable contenders.

"Those women have been through tough, ugly primaries and shown they've got what it takes to hold those offices," Rodine said. "Both of them are hungry for the job."

Two women governors are retiring this year - Democrats Madeleine Kunin of Vermont and Rose Mofford of Arizona. There are 11 others running for governor, including Republican Kay Orr who is up for re-election in Nebraska.

In addition to Feinstein and Richards, Democrat Barbara Roberts in Oregon is considered a strong contender for an open seat. Republican Arliss Sturgulewski of Alaska will be in the same category if she wins her Aug. 28 primary. Republican Barbara Hafer of Pennsylvania won her primary but has an uphill fight against popular Democratic Gov. Bob Casey. The other governor candidates, all facing primaries, are Republican Marlene Woodson-Howard of Florida, Democrat Joan Finney of Kansas, Democrat Evelyn Murphy of Massachusetts and Republicans Mary Mead and Nyla Murphy, who will face off in Wyoming's GOP primary.

Seven women are running for the Senate, which now counts two women among its 100 members. Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., is up for re-election, and Sen. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., comes up for re-election in 1992.

The one Democratic woman making a Senate bid this year, Josie Heath of Colorado, is expected to win her party nomination but faces a formidable opponent in GOP Rep. Hank Brown.

Three GOP women are quitting the House to run for Senate: Reps. Claudine Schneider of Rhode Island, Lynn Martin of Illinois and Pat Saiki of Hawaii. Saiki is given the best shot at winning; her Democratic competitor is Daniel Akaka, who recently was elevated from the House to the Senate upon the death of Democratic Sen. Spark Matsunaga.

Schneider and Martin are putting a scare into two entrenched Democrats, Claiborne Pell and Paul Simon. Longshot Senate candidates are M. Jane Brady, a Republican challenging Sen. Joe Biden, D-Del., and Republican Christine Todd Whitman, taking on Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J.

There are 28 women in the 435-member House, including three certain departures by those running for the Senate. There also is speculation that Rep. Lindy Boggs, D-La., whose daughter is very ill, may retire this year.

In addition, a few incumbent women in the House could be vulnerable, among them Democrats Jill Long of Indiana and Jolene Noeseld of Washington.

On the plus side of the ledger, California Democrat Maxine Waters is a shoo-in to win the seat being vacated by retiring Democratic Rep. Augustus Hawkins. There are a number of strong candidates among the more than 50 women running for Congress, and analysts are predicting a net gain of up to four seats.

The most encouraging sign to Rodine is the crowd of women running for statewide and state legislative offices that traditionally are jumping-off points for governor and congressional races.
