Alanreed leads area in TEAMS test results

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

The Texas Education Agency in Austin recently released the student performance results for the 1989-90 school year on the Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills, commonly called TEAMS.

Alanreed Independent School District recorded the highest percentage of students passing, who took the 1989-90 test, in this area.

In the Pampa Independent School District, the highest percentage was from Austin Elementary School with 97.1 percent passing. Mann Elementary had 94.9 percent passing, followed by Travis Elementary with 91.5 percent; Baker Elementary with 85.5 percent; Pampa Middle School with 81.8 percent; Wilson Elementary with 78.3 percent; Lamar Elementary with 75.6 percent; and Pampa High School with 67.3 percent.

The total percentage of those passing for Pampa ISD was 79.6 percent.

In the other school districts in Gray County, Alanreed reported five students taking the examination with 100 percent passing. Lefors had 52 students taking the test with 48 passing for a 92.3 percent passing rate. McLean had 68 students who took the test and 48 who passed for a 71.6 percent passing rate. Grandview-Hopkins had six students taking the test with five passing for a 83.3 percent passing rate.

In Carson County, White Deer ISD had 86.1 percent of the students taking the test who passed. Groom ISD had 88.5 percent of the students taking the test passing. Panhandle ISD recorded a total of 83.7 percent of its students passing.

In Hemphill County, Canadian ISD had 84.3 percent of its students who took the TEAMS to pass.

In Roberts County, Miami ISD recorded 89.8 percent of the students taking the test as passing.

In Wheeler County, Mobeetie ISD had 70 percent of the those taking the test to pass. In the Wheeler ISD, 80.3 percent of the students taking the TEAMS passed.

Kelton ISD recorded 80.8 percent passing the examination. Lela ISD had 83.3 percent passing the TEAMS. Shamrock ISD had a total of 77.6 percent of its students passing the examination.

In Allison ISD, 77.8 percent of the students taking the TEAMS passed. Briscoe ISD had 85.2 percent of its students who took the examination to pass.

Saudi Arabia orders expulsion of Jordanian, Yemeni envoys

By JEFF DONN
Associated Press Writer

Saudi Arabia Saturday ordered all but three staffers each to leave the Yemeni and Jordanian embassies, diplomatic sources in the Saudi capital said. The order reflected the deep rifts in the Arab world over the Persian Gulf crisis.

In Washington Saturday, top finance officers from the world's seven richest industrial democracies met to seek ways to stave off the specter of world recession as a result of soaring oil prices sparked by the gulf conflict.

Another flight of American civilians out of Iraq was expected Saturday. The State Department had said it was to be the last U.S. charter planned from Baghdad and it advised all Americans wanting to leave to sign up.

U.S. officials said the Boeing 707 will stop in London and continue to Raleigh, N.C., arriving Sunday.

In Beijing, at the opening of the Asian Games, Kuwait's team-in-exile won cheers Saturday from tens of thousands of spectators. Iraq, which took over Kuwait on Aug. 2, was barred from the event.

In another development, Nigeria announced Saturday it was joining other nations imposing U.N. sanctions against Iraq. Moslem fundamentalists in Nigeria have raised angry protest over the U.S. military presence in the Persian Gulf.

Word of the expulsion order against 20 Jordanian diplomats came from a senior Jordanian official in Amman. The diplomatic sources in Saudi Arabia said all nearly all the staffers from the Jordanian and Yemeni embassies would be expelled. The sources spoke on condition of anonymity.

Jordan and Yemen have been seen as weak links in the embargo against Iraq, and have failed to support the multinational force deployed in Saudi Arabia to protect the oil-rich kingdom after Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. Pro-Iraqi demonstrations have broken out in both Jordan and Yemen.

Saturday's economic gathering in Washington brought together finance ministers and central bank presidents from the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy.

The meeting comes as oil prices pushed above $35 per barrel Friday on the futures market, posting an all-time high. And the World Bank said a war in the Mideast might push oil prices to $65 a barrel.

The price was about $20 a barrel before Iraq invaded oil-rich Kuwait on Aug. 2 in a dispute over oil, land and money, bringing on a U.N. embargo against Baghdad.

The talks, with Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady and Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan as hosts, were being held in conjunction with the annual meetings of the 152-nation International Monetary Fund and World Bank.

Meanwhile, Syrian President Hafez Assad arrived in Iran Saturday for talks. Diplomats expected to focus on the standoff in the gulf and Western hostages in Lebanon, where both countries are influential. It was his first visit since Iran's 1979 Islamic revolution.

Assad is a rival of Iraq's Saddam Hussein. Iran and Iraq have made recent moves to formally settle their 1980-88 war, but Iran still opposes the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Saddam, in an interview published Saturday, blamed the U.S. buildup for Iraq's decision to annex Kuwait.

"Kuwait is now ours," the Istanbul daily Milliyet quoted him as saying. "We might have refrained from taking such a decision if the U.S. troops were not massed in the region with the threat of invading us."

Iraq's hostility toward Egypt, which has joined in the multinational military effort against it, was reflected in an official Iraqi newspaper Saturday. It warned that Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak will meet the same fate as his assassinated predecessor, Anwar Sadat.

The official Iraqi news agency, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, quoted the Al-Jumhuriya newspaper as branding Mubarak a U.S. puppet.

The incident came one day after official Egyptian media reported that Iraq had ordered the expulsion of several Egyptian diplomats, including the military attache.

Egypt has sent troops to the gulf as part of the multinational effort against Iraq.

Spain on Friday also announced the expulsions of several Iraqi diplomats.

Iraq's ouster of dozens of European diplomats from Baghdad came after the 12 European Community nations decided Monday to expel Iraqi military attaches in retaliation for Iraq's raids last week on some Western embassy compounds in Kuwait. Some European countries had ordered additional expulsions as well.

Pampa man injured in motorcycle accident

A Pampa man who had purchased a Harley-Davidson touring motorcycle on Thursday had an accident on the vehicle Friday on U.S. 60 at Kingsmill, according to the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Rex Lowell Berry, 36, 2600 N. Hobart D-3, was traveling west on U.S. 60 about 6 p.m. Friday when he ran off the road and hit the curb, according to DPS Trooper Lynn Holland.

Berry "rode the curb" 210 feet before he came off the motorcycle.

The cycle traveled another 45 feet before coming to a stop 12 feet north of the highway in a pile of rubble, which was left after a Kingsmill store burned.

The accident victim was transported to Coronado Hospital by Rural/Metro-AMT Paramedic Service. A hospital spokeswoman said he was treated and released from the hospital. Berry was wearing a helmet, which probably saved his life, the trooper said.

The large touring motorcycle's weight, along with the slight grade of the road, contributed to Berry not being able to get the cycle back up on the highway, Holland said.

Witnesses to the accident said Berry appeared to be traveling the speed limit when the accident occurred.

Witnesses, including the driver of a semi tractor-trailer, controlled traffic at the scene until law enforcement officials arrived. It was initially reported that the motorcycle had been struck by a tractor-trailer, but the investigation revealed it was a one-vehicle motorcycle accident.

President Bush refuses to rule out first strike against Iraqi forces

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush will ask Congress to bolster the Saudi armed forces with expanded military aid, but the White House says details of the arms package are still being worked out.

Bush also said Friday when asked if he and the United Nations would pledge not to be the first to launch hostilities against Iraq that he won't rule out a U.S. first-strike.

"I'm not making any commitments," he said. "There are so many contingencies. I've spelled them out. The treatment of American citizens is one thing that concerns me greatly. Possible use of terror is another thing that concerns me greatly," he said before leaving to spend the weekend at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md.

Bush will request early this week that Congress approve the expanded military aid to "provide Saudi Arabia with additional means to protect itself."

No figure was disclosed in Friday's White House statement, but reports have quoted administration officials as saying the arms package would involve $21 billion in sales.

However, The Washington Post quoted an unidentified source in Saturday's editions as saying the $21 billion was being scaled back under congressional pressure to about $10 billion.

The New York Times reported Saturday that the first phase of the sale would total $5 billion to $8 billion and include thousands of trucks and TOW antitank missiles. It said more controversial sales of F-15 fighter planes and M-1 tanks would be in the second phase next year.

In another development, administration officials said Bush would meet in New York with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze when they visit the United Nations. They will discuss the Persian Gulf situation, the officials said.

When asked Friday what prompted the new concern about Iraq and terrorism, Bush and his aides gave no specifics.

"There are no specific and credible threats" against Americans, White House spokesman Roman Popadiuk said when pressed.

Bush was asked if, in light of his concerns, he might move beyond the economic sanctions he's relying on to persuade Saddam Hussein to pull out of Kuwait.

"No, I'm just putting down several universally heralded markers," he said. "For example, treatment of hostages and the terror."

Bush said he was concerned about the recent meeting in Jordan of several Arab "radicals" who support Saddam.

"We hold Saddam Hussein responsible if there is any terrorist act against us," Bush said.

Popadiuk accused Saddam of either harboring or supporting well-known terrorist groups, including the Abu Nidal organization, the May 15 organization and the Palestine Liberation Front headed by Abul Abbas.

Bush said he was still waiting for Iraq to feel the bite of the economic blockade imposed by the United Nations.

"It's going to take a little time for that arrow to be effective," he said.

The president also said when asked if he was prepared to extend the embargo to aircraft, shooting down planes suspected of violating the embargo.

"We haven't crossed that. I'm listening to the discussion in our own administration," he said.

But he said if the international sanctions were expanded to include aircraft, "obviously the United States would do its part."

During an earlier meeting with congressional leaders, Bush received a general vote of support from lawmakers, but several said they had concerns about forgiving the $7 billion debt Egypt owes the United States, and about expanding arms sales to Saudi Arabia beyond the $2.3 billion request already sent to Congress.

Richards says Williams' hog-tying remarks offensive mudslinging act

By KELLEY SHANNON
 Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Democratic gubernatorial candidate Ann Richards says Clayton Williams' statement that he would rope her and "drag her through the dirt," "proves that her Republican rival isn't interested in a positive campaign."

"I'm told that Clayton Williams is going to herd me and hoof me in the dirt," she told Mexican American Democrats here Saturday, "but then he's referred to women as cattle before."

"The amazing thing to me is that they tell us one thing and then do another," she said, referring to Williams' calls to end the mudslinging in the hotly contested gubernatorial campaign.

"If she can't take the heat, she ought to get out of the kitchen," Williams campaign spokesman Reggie Bashur said Saturday. "This is the big leagues, this is the governor's race."

Williams made the statement during a recent visit to a Republican Party phone bank in Duncanville south of Dallas. Suburban publications in south Dallas said Williams, an oilman and rancher, told a supporter he would "head and hoof her (as in roping cattle) and drag her through the dirt."

The supporter, Eric Renth, told The Dallas Morning News that no one was offended by the remark. "It's like the Cowboys and the Redskins," he said. "You've got to psych yourself up for the game."

The Williams' campaign said Saturday the comments were made in the spirit of competition and criticized Richards for trying to make it an issue.

"If this quote was indeed stated, it was in the figurative sense of the kind of thrashing the people of Texas will give Ann Richards at the polls," Bashur said, adding that the campaign was not questioning whether Williams made the comment.

Bashur said Richards has said worse things about Williams, referring to her television ads that ran in August that said Williams was linked to shady business practices.

"They want to try to make it more than that because they are throwing any kind of mud they can," Bashur said.

Williams has come under criticism before for a comment in March likening rape to the weather. He said during a cattle round-up on his Midland ranch that if it's inevitable, women should "relax and enjoy it."

Later, Williams said that, as a young man, he was "serviced" by prostitutes in Mexico, but said that was all part of growing up as a young man in West Texas.

Also on Saturday, a caravan of Texas women leaders began a week-long journey to campaign for Richards with stops planned at 16 cities and towns.

Along the way, the group will be joined by several prominent women including Mrs. Lloyd (B.A.) Bentsen, wife of Sen. Bentsen, D-Texas and Judith Moyers, wife of Bill Moyers, journalist and former press secretary to President Lyndon Johnson.

Liz Carpenter, a former Johnson aide, kicked off the first leg of the trip, saying, "This is not men against the women. I really resent the inference that women won't vote for a woman. Women in Texas are not gutless wonders and we don't believe men are bullies... save one whose on a ranch in West Texas and needs to stay there."

Murder on fabled Appalachian Trail shakes residents and hikers

By DAVID MORRIS
Associated Press Writer

DUNCANNON, Pa. (AP) — The slayings of two young hikers along the Appalachian Trail have residents locking their doors and others heeding warnings to stay off the fabled route's Pennsylvania leg.

Molly LaRue, 25, seemed happy on her Maine-to-Georgia hike with a friend when her father spoke to her on the telephone two days before they were found dead in a lean-to earlier this month.

"She probably was never happier in her life," said her father, James LaRue.

Ms. LaRue, a teacher and social worker, chattered about the 2,140-mile trail and the reunion with her parents set for 10 days away, said LaRue, an Ohio minister.

The woman and her friend, Geoffrey Logan Hood, 26, also a teacher and social worker, were the eighth and ninth to be killed on the trail in its 50-year history. Ms. LaRue was stabbed repeatedly. Hood, from Signal Mountain, Tenn., was shot three times.

State police Thursday released a composite sketch of a suspect in the case. Investigators said the man was seen on the trail Sept. 11, about 14 miles from where the bodies were found Sept. 13. He did not appear to be a hiker.

Ms. LaRue and Hood, both veteran hikers, died more than 12 hours before they were discovered in the lean-to about three miles from Duncannon, said Perry County Coroner Michael J. Shalonis.

About 1,500 people use the trail every year. The last slaying on the trail was in 1988 near Shippensburg, Pa., about 38 miles southwest of Duncannon.

The killers in the previous murders were captured and convicted. The only other serious problem along the trail this year was a series of booby traps and suspicious fires on a 14-mile stretch in Tennessee.

Residents and hikers who regularly pass through Duncannon, about 10 miles north of Harrisburg, are shaken by the latest slayings.

"We usually never lock our doors," said Jim Doyle, who owns the Doyle hotel where Ms. LaRue and Hood stayed the night before they died. "Now we'll start."

Hikers are commonplace in Perry County, a largely rural area and the state's only county without a traffic light. Many hikers stay at the Doyle, making sure to sign the trail log at the bar before moving on.

Above the entry by Ms. LaRue and Hood, a hotel worker wrote: "Geoffrey Hood and Molly LaRue — Murdered on the trail 9-12-90."

Tim Yeoman, the hotel's bartender, remembers talking with the victims for two hours.

"You get to halfway know 'em, then all of a sudden you find out — bam — this person don't exist no more," Yeoman said.

The Appalachian Trail Conference, a voluntary group that keeps an eye on the trail, posted warnings along it urging hikers to skip the Pennsylvania portion until the case is solved.

Two hikers who arrived at the Doyle soon after the killings heeded the advice. But two men and a woman resumed hiking Wednesday after a brief stay at the hotel.

"I'm going to keep going, hopefully counting on the old theory that lightning doesn't strike in the same place twice," said Mark Powers, 23, of suburban Washington.

LaRue, from Shaker Heights, said he was pleased to hear that some hikers will keep going.

"Because it happens to one person, you shouldn't give up. That's just as much insanity as what happened to Molly," he said. "Two lives is enough. Let's not give them the trail, too."

No habla English too good, either

It has recently fallen my lot to travel to South America during October and November presenting programs on life in good ol' West Texas.

There is only one catch. I gotta learn Spanish. Those who know me, know I barely can communicate in English. What an opportunity, to sound stupid in two languages instead of just one.

Problem is, we in Texas don't speak English. We speak Texan. To go from Texan to English to Spanish is quite a complicated process. To go straight to Spanish is deadly.

Example: You want to say to people in La Paz, Bolivia, "I'm fixin' to fix you some turkey fries and mashed taters and okra, but I ain't got no gas in my pickup to get to the dad-gummed store to get the fixins."

As best I can tell, the translation has to do with driving around with your privates in a bowl of vegetables while eating the food of pigs.

How do you say in Spanish, "Sorry, but I ain't got no handle on your language 'cause I'm dumber than a stick"?

The tutor says, "No habla Espanol" will suffice. But it doesn't seem to carry the same inflection.

So far, I've got a pretty good grasp on "Hello, how are you?", "My name is Paco," "What time is it?", "How far is it to Barcelona?" and "Can you give me directions to the theater?"

But I suspect I'll have no idea how they are, my name isn't Paco and even if they tell me what time it is, I won't understand their answer. As best I can tell, Barcelona is in Spain, which would require more than just directions to reach.

That leaves the theater, which is probably showing some American movie dubbed into Spanish. Neato.

I had hoped that having my speech, "Life on the High Plains of Paradise," typed out in Spanish would save me.

Wroooooong! There is the little matter of pronunciation. I recently went to hear a Portuguese man giving a program on his country and understood just what deep doo-doo I was about to step in.

"Wee hopey ooh weya comey to tha cooontri of Partigal for a veeset," he told us. "Our count-tery ees viry bootifarfal wit weeny sists to sow."

"What the fire you reckon' that boy wuz sayin'?" A rancher sitting nearby asked.

"I think he was talkin' about their meals," I answered. "He mentioned somethin' about sittin' and havin' a weenie."

"Poor devils can't even afford no bugs over there," the rancher said, shaking his head.

My wife keeps telling me I know just enough Spanish to get thrown in jail, but not enough to get out.

"If I get into trouble, I'll just smile and nod a lot," I told her. "They may not think much of my Spanish, but they will be impressed with my courtesy."

Off Beat By Bear Mills

"They'll think you're an idiot with a twitch," she responded. "Actually, I'm beginning to grasp the essentials of this whole Spanish thing. 'Donde es la agua en botella,' means 'Where is the bottled water?'"

I can also insert "Pepto-Bismol," "the bathroom," "some real food," "somebody who speaks Texan" and "the nearest place with indoor plumbing" for "botella."

No wonder people in the rest of the world have such bad impressions of we of the U.S. of A. We all come across as dolts who can't speak our own language, much less somebody else's.

"Something you need to remember," the tutor said, "is that the people you will encounter will all have their own dialect and the meaning of some words may change."

"Uh-huh. Like what?"

"In Mexico, taco means food. In Argentina it means shoe leather and in Paraguay it describes a part of the female anatomy that you really shouldn't be discussing in public."

"That's it, I'm staying home." I can just see myself humming along, thinking I'm discussing the merits of Texas' highway system, all the while my hosts are wondering why I am talking about sucking root beer through my toes with a meat cleaver.

Fortunately, Latin people are known for their exceptional manners and ability not to laugh in your face for sounding like a gibbering idiot.

I keep telling myself it's way too early to panic. We don't leave for four weeks. That's plenty of time to learn Spanish, right?

On the other hand, if you hear of some crazy Texan starting a border skirmish in Uruguay because he called a general's mother a "wild root hog that enjoys eating boogers," you'll know it was me.

Don't wait for a telegraph, just send the bail money.

Judge won't reduce Keating's $5 million bail

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Charles H. Keating, central to the nation's savings and loan crisis, remained in jail after a judge decided he was a flight risk and refused to lower his $5 million bail.

Three former Keating underlings indicted with him on criminal fraud charges were released on bond Friday after a two-day hearing.

Superior Court Judge Gary Klausner rejected arguments that Keating had no reason to flee and that the prosecution failed to show the alleged crimes were serious.

Klausner noted numerous legal actions against Keating, an Arizona developer, and called them "significant reasons not to stick around."

"There has been a picture painted here ... of a person who has creditors knocking at the door," the judge said of Keating, former chairman of Phoenix-based American Continental Corp.

American Continental owned the failed Lincoln

Savings & Loan of Irvine, Calif. Bailout of Lincoln Savings is expected to cost taxpayers $2 billion.

The 42-count indictment alleges Keating and the others, former top officials of his companies, bilked investors by selling them worthless American Continental junk bonds at Lincoln branches.

All told, more than 20,000 investors are believed to have lost about $250 million on the bonds.

The others indicted are: Ray C. Fidel, 32, former president of Lincoln Savings; Robin S. Symes, 37, former chief executive officer of Lincoln Savings; and Judy Wischer, 42, former president of American Continental.

Klausner reduced the $1 million bails he set earlier last week for Fidel, Symes and Wischer. Fidel and Symes posted bonds of $100,000 each. Wischer posted a bond of $200,000, said sheriff's spokesman Rich Erickson.

Pontotoc shooting suspect captured; two bodies found

PONTOTOC, Texas (AP) — A gunman wanted in a store customer's death and a woman's abduction surrendered peacefully to authorities, who found the bodies of two others he is suspected of killing.

The arrest Saturday of Michael Joseph Griffith, 35, of Mason, capped a manhunt that began Wednesday.

Griffith, armed with a shotgun and rifle, was arrested at approximately 10:30 a.m. in a pasture about six miles north of Pontotoc, said Department of Public Safety spokesman David Wells.

An hour later, authorities found the bodies of Jesse Leon Parker, 30, and Joelle Porter, 31, both of Mason, in an abandoned farm house just north of Mason. They had been shot to death, Wells said.

Griffith broke into a vacant summer home in the southwest corner of San Saba County Sunday morning, Wells said. A friend of the homeowners who stopped by the house walked in on Griffith, who pointed a weapon at him, then fled, Wells said.

Griffith took the man's Jeep, which he crashed into a fence less than a half-mile from the house, Wells said. He set off on foot and was quickly apprehended by the authorities who had been combing the area on foot and by vehicle.

"He was kind of in an open pasture area when they were closing in on him and that's when he surrendered. He had been armed with a shotgun and rifle," Wells said. No shots were fired, he said.

Griffith was taken to Mason County Saturday, where an aggravated kidnapping warrant had been sworn against him, Wells said. It was unclear if additional charges would be filed Saturday, he said.

Griffith was wanted in connection with the abduction of a woman Tuesday from a Mason hotel room and the death Wednesday of Ivan H. Herron.

Police said Griffith earlier boasted of killing two other men who were reported missing by their families Tuesday, police said. Parker and Porter, whose bodies were found stacked in a closet in the farmhouse, were acquaintances of Griffith's, Wells said.

Griffith and the unidentified abduction victim were hitchhiking early Wednesday morning when they were picked up by Mary Ann Wells, owner of a shop in Pontotoc.

Ms. Wells took them to her shop, where she said the assailant bound and gagged her, then shot Herron once in the back of the head and twice in the back.

Police said two other men, including Mrs. Wells' husband, came into the store later and were herded into a storeroom before Griffith and the woman fled, authorities said.

The woman, who knew Griffith, escaped Wednesday evening and the next day led officers to the creek bed where she last saw him. She said he threatened to kill himself and that she heard gunshots as she walked away, Wells said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

The images of war lead to casualties

A year after President Bush declared that the war on drugs was his administration's top priority, it is possible to have honest differences of opinion about whether $11 billion worth of taxpayers' money has done much good. Anyone who noticed (oddly enough, few of the wire services picked it up) what Los Angeles Police Chief Daryl F. Gates told a Senate hearing recently should agree that calling the effort a "war" was an unfortunate metaphor.

Casual drug users "ought to be taken out and shot," said Chief Gates. He really did say it. Furthermore, when questioned in an interview outside the hearing room after making that provocative statement, the chief insisted he was not being facetious. "We're in a war," he said, and even casual drug use "is treason."

Thus does unthinking acceptance of what is essentially a metaphor lead to falling into a style of thinking that leads to statements that can only be described as fanatical.

It is commonplace to talk about the war on drugs, and the number of people who want it to be a real war, with lots of shooting and corpses, seems to be on the increase. But a moment's reflection will remind us that, whatever the trappings, the federal effort to control drug use isn't a war. It's an attempt to prohibit personal behavior most Americans consider harmful through criminal laws and penalties.

One may question whether criminal sanctions are justifiable or likely to be effective in this effort. But even the most dedicated opponent of drug use must concede that the federal anti-drug effort isn't really a war. There's no readily identifiable foreign enemy on whom we can declare war and against whom we can deploy troops, like Saddam Hussein.

The war metaphor is useful because it conjures up images of a maximum, sustained, "110 percent" effort, and facilitates calls for unity and unquestioning support of political leaders. But when we come down to Earth, what's really going on is an effort to prevent a minority of citizens from using certain chemicals the government believes to be harmful, some of which are addictive for some users. Presumably, the effort is justifiable because the government cares about those people and wants to help them, to "save them from themselves."

But when you get into the war mode, it's easy to forget all that. And before long you have ostensibly responsible public officials uttering frighteningly irresponsible drivel. Shoot casual drug users? Wasn't the anti-drug campaign supposed to have been about helping them? Is there any other way to justify the effort? Or was the impulse all along simply to punish behavior some leaders don't like, for no other reason than because they don't like it?

By prescribing the death penalty for people who use, for example, marijuana (he specifically said his comment was aimed at those "who blast some pot on a casual basis"), which has never, as a result of its own pharmacological properties, caused the death of a user, Chief Gates has truly gone around the bend. If he really believes it, he is unfit to hold any position of public responsibility.

Congressmen meet their match

Ask the average American what he thinks about politicians. Among the descriptions (fit for print), you'll get: self-serving, dishonest, thieves, hustler and liars.

Polls confirm this. These surveys show Congress ranking as just about the lowest of American institutions. What gets me is that, as soon as an important issue arises like health, unemployment or rising gasoline prices, to whom do we turn? It's that bunch of rascals we hold in lowest esteem.

We act as though Congress is competent despite their mega-blunders and demonstrated inability to perform their constitutional functions. Either we forget, believe they are capable of being rehabilitated, or we are fools.

Turn on C-Span and watch people testify before Congress. It's disgusting. You'll see Americans, appearing as witnesses, groveling at the feet of congressmen.

More offensive is how the congressmen address one another: "The most honorable gentleman from New York," or "the honorable gentlelady from Colorado." You'd think they were saints. Butter wouldn't melt in their mouths.

The truth is: Most of them are little more than arrogant petty tyrants who think we are servants and they are our masters, instead of the other way around.

But, once in a while somebody, other than Yours Truly, stands up to them.

Walter Williams

Last July, I wrote a column about a study commissioned by the Washington-based Capital Research Center (CRC). The report, written by George Mason University Professor James Bennett, is titled "Health Research Charities: Image and Reality." The nation's major health charities got a bit hot under the collar over the study, and their allies on Capitol Hill rushed to their rescue.

Benjamin Cohen, who works for Rep. Thomas Luken, D-Ohio, telephoned CRC President Willa Johnson. He proceeded to interrogate Johnson, asking questions like: Who funded the study? Did you get the money from the Tobacco Institute? Did you talk to the Tobacco Institute?

Johnson told him the funds came from the CRC general budget; only 9 percent of CRC donations come from private companies; yes, they touched base with the Tobacco Institute to see if they had information CRC could use.

Thinking Johnson was a wimpy woman,

Luken's man got nasty, extending the threat that Congress could subpoena her records. We can learn a lot from Willa Johnson's description of the exchange:

Willa: "On whose behalf are you calling?" Cohen: "What do you mean?" Willa: "I'm entitled to an answer." Cohen: "I've never been asked that question. I don't know how to answer." Willa: "Let me help you; are you making an official call on behalf of the subcommittee?" Cohen: "Well, ... I don't know how to answer that, it's too metaphysical."

Frustrated with Johnson's failure to cringe, Rep. Luken sent her a letter with more intimidating demands. She answered, explaining that as provided by the U.S. Supreme Court's 1957 ruling in Watkins v. U.S., a McCarthy-era case, if the congressman could not provide a legitimate purpose for his questions, she was not obliged to answer.

The lesson for us: When a politician — or any bureaucrat — wants information, ask: Under whose authority do you ask? What law obliges me to answer? What constitutional purpose is served by my answer?

Rep. Luken's attack on the Capital Research Center, suggesting bias to its income sources, is strange. Particularly in light of the fact that Luken gets thousands of dollars in speaking fees and political contributions from the health PACs.

At any rate, I'll bet Luken will think twice about his assumptions before he sets out to intimidate another woman.

Melvin is a great American

I'm not certain exactly when just about every service station started making you pump your own gas. I guess it was back in the early '70s during the first oil crunch.

I'm a bit of a dipstick when it comes to doing anything more with a car than turning on the ignition and pressing the gas pedal.

It's not that I'm above pumping my own gasoline, but it sort of makes me nervous. I'm never quite certain how to work the gas nozzle.

My greatest fear is that the gas nozzle won't automatically shut off like it's supposed to when the tank is full and gasoline will spill out all over the ground and all over me and some guy will toss a cigarette away and I'm instant fried Buddhist monk.

There's something else, too. There isn't anybody around to wash your windshield anymore, either.

If they're going to make you pump your own gas, certainly nobody is going to be friendly enough to come out and ask, "Want me to get that windshield?"

And, even on the rare occasions you find a full-service service station, if the attendant does attempt to clean your windshield, he will do a lousy job.

He will spray a little cleaner on your windshield and then run over it once with a squeegee and leave a lot of film, and instead of getting the bug goo off, he will simply smear it. Nothing worse than smeared bug goo.

All that to say I stopped into a service station the other day and I met Melvin Slaughter, an attendant there.

He had a shirt that had his name, Melvin, sewn above his left breast pocket.

Melvin told me he was 28 and he had been working at the station for three years.

Melvin Slaughter, as it turned out, is a great American.

I was in my red Blazer. I told Melvin to fill it with unleaded. He did, and then without my asking, he washed my front windshield.

A friend had borrowed the Blazer recently to drive to St. Louis. Half the bug population between Georgia and Missouri was dead and stuck on my windshield.

Melvin didn't wash my windshield. He attacked it. He sprayed on the cleaner and ran the squeegee through twice, and then he wiped the film off with a paper cloth.

But there was still some serious bug remaining, so Melvin got another paper towel, and one by one, he got the bugs off.

I mean he dug down there deep. Elbow grease, they used to call it. Melvin simply refused to leave a single spot on my windshield.

Then, if that wasn't enough, he went to the back window and did the same sort of job. I said to Melvin, "That's the best job I've had done on a windshield since gasoline was 30 cents a gallon."

Who was president then, Harry Truman?

Melvin replied, "I just try to do the best job I can. That's what they pay me for."

Melvin Slaughter made my day. Made me think perhaps friendly service isn't dead and gone. Made me feel like a person can still take pride in his or her job, no matter if it is doing his or her best to get bug goo off a windshield.

Isn't that what made this country great in the first place? Absolutely. That and unlocked restrooms.

I sort of miss them, too.

"Could I call you back?"

Safety regulations burden families

By VINCENT CARROLL

Any bets on which consumer group will be the first to recommend that everyone in an automobile be required to wear a helmet and fire-retardant jumpsuit?

Don't laugh. Such a law would save lives, and saving lives — at whatever cost or inconvenience — seems to be the single-minded fixation of our safety-obsessed times. We enjoy longer and healthier lives than at any period in history, yet we act like hostages trapped in a shooting gallery.

The latest evidence of this almost neurotic preoccupation with safety comes from the National Transportation Safety Board, which has petitioned the Federal Aviation Administration to require the use of child restraint seats for all infants and toddlers on airlines. (Currently children under 2 travel free, if held on an adult's lap.)

And in case the FAA balks, a couple of members of Congress have introduced a bill that mandates the special seats.

Families with small children can immediately cite you one problem with this idea: It will cost them a great deal of money. While in theory parents could use empty airline seats for their infants, they'd be foolish not to purchase extra seats in advance, especially if their own tickets were non-refundable.

And for what benefit? Well, according to a study by the Department of Transportation, infant safety seats could have prevented one death since 1978. At most.

More than one infant has died in an airplane, but always in crashes where no one around them survived, either. (Another estimate, by a Harvard researcher, suggests safety seats could save three lives in five years.)

Even these estimates are misleadingly high, for they assume that the same number of infants will fly after the seat requirement is in place as fly now. Economists Richard McKenzie and Dwight Lee, writing for the Cato Institute, expose the absurdity of this assumption.

Many families simply can't or won't absorb the extra expense. They'll stay home or — and here's the bad news — get in an automobile and drive to where they want to go.

As McKenzie and Lee point out, "automobile travel remains far more dangerous, at least 30 times more so in terms of death rate per mile traveled, for all travelers ... than air travel by all scheduled (large and commuter) airlines."

And now the kicker: "The resulting increase in automobile deaths, although quite small, could easily be several times ... the reduction in airline deaths."

McKenzie and Lee are the first to admit that their calculations are rough — but then so are the calculations of those claiming safety seats will save lives. The point is that the safety fanatics are willing, on the basis of precarious data suggesting little if any benefit, to impose a heavy cost on young families.

The airlines don't mind, of course. It's more money for them, perhaps $200 million. Flight attendants also endorse the neat logic of having everyone strapped in at takeoff and landing. Why the government should buy such a proposal, though, is a mystery.

Time and again, however, our regulators prove themselves indifferent to the financial impact of their decisions on families of average means. They'd rather siphon millions of dollars from American consumers than admit that sometimes the best regulatory action is none at all.

Genesis House staff, board appreciate aid

To the editor:
The boys and girls of Genesis House and the Board of Directors, administrator and staff of that organization received a real blow when our labor of several years (our home for girls) went up in smoke. Now we want to express our gratitude to the citizens of Pampa for their generous response to our immediate needs.
As soon as word of the fire spread, individuals, businesses, organizations and agencies were on the telephone asking what we needed and how they could help. Almost immediately we had a place for the girls to spend the rest of the night, and a large company known for its generosity made its town house available until longer term arrangement could be made. This "longer term arrangement" was also solved by a local citizen's gift of a three-bedroom, two-bath mobile home for our present and future needs.
That was not all. Local clothing, discount stores and department stores made available clothing and shoes for the girls as well as bedding, pillows and blankets. All they asked for was the size and how many.
With our kitchen destroyed, how could we feed our girls? Before we could struggle with the problem, it was solved for us by calls from restaurants: "we will feed the youths lunches and others will furnish dinners." Doughnuts were provided from the first morning by a local doughnut shop.
Our girls' home will be rebuilt just as it was before the fire. Thank you, Pampa—you are the greatest!

Lot of hype surrounds our economic recovery

To the editor:
Well, well! It looks as if we Pampans are finally on the "high road" to prosperity and overall economic well-being. If you listen to all city fathers, politicians and other hypesters, as they put forth their best possible scenarios, every one of us will have a chicken in every pot and two cars in every garage real soon now.
The "hype"—if you followed its course over the months when it was most in evidence—went about as follows: "Would you like to see Pampa on the road to recovery? If you do, support the construction of a golf course. This will bring prosperity almost immediately because we'll have big manufacturers beating paths to Pampa to relocate, bringing herds of well-to-do employees with them. Once we get one big outfit, others will follow," and so on ad nauseum.
So they got the golf course, opening it in May this year. We have had one "good" (?) report from the city manager to the effect that its receipts for the first two months amounted to $150,000. Fine! But don't forget that the course is still in the "novelty" state of being, and also that most of that income can be attributed to people buying in at the yearly membership rate of between $300 and $400 a pop; it doesn't take large numbers of members to multiply to 150 grand. So the income will probably remain more or less static for a year, or until membership renewals are due. Then the proof of the pudding will come bubbling to the surface, as we wait to see just how many renewals will materialize.
You can never base any conclusions on the initial results of the golf course's first year, and to hear even the merest hint of a large manufacturer's query about a new site (and you can bet such a query would be emblazoned in banner headlines on the front page of The Pampa News), don't forget the other shot in the arm of our economy—something which has also been given its full measure (overblown, actually) of hype from the old hype-masters at City Hall: the state prison!

Now here's the real keystone to prosperity—bribing the state to locate one of its hoosegows in Pampa. You'd think it would be the other way around, with the state bribing Pampa. But you find strange things in politics, haven't you noticed? However, the die has been cast, and in two years or so we'll begin to reap the bountiful harvest that we've been hyped-up to expect.
Let's hold it right there for a moment and have a show of hands by the folks who actually—and honestly—anticipate any increase in their income, or improvement in any way in their financial condition (this, of course, excludes those who will get the few jobs created by the new slammer). Speaking of those jobs, we were hyped into believing that the number would be 800 for a big prison, 400 for the type we were "awarded." But a city official told me personally that the number would be 302, and that you can figure that 30 percent of those jobs would be filled by Pampans. Big deal! About 90 jobs.
For those 90 jobs, we first have to "condition" the site so that it's acceptable to the state. This will cause us to issue bonds to the tune of $2.4 million, and these bonds will be paid off by the city fathers levying an increase of up to 10 percent on our utility bills. So gird yourselves, fellow Pampans, because once they put that sucker on those bills it will never, never come off!
When the bonds are eventually retired sometime in the distant future (estimates, at today's high interest rates, are

Wise County sheriff, others indicted

DECATUR (AP) — A grand jury Friday indicted the Wise County sheriff and two county investigators on misdemeanor charges following its three-month-long investigation of public corruption.
Sheriff Leroy Burch was indicted on an assault charge stemming from a Sept. 11 altercation with county attorney investigator Sam Lee.
Lee, a former deputy who arrested many of the men at a roadside park, was indicted on a misdemeanor charge of theft by a public servant.
Thomas W. Bishop, an unpaid investigator in the county attorney's office, was indicted on misdemeanor theft under $20 stemming from a June 1990 incident at a convenience store in Decatur.

that it will take 2 1/2 times the face value of the bonds to pay them off), the "fathers" will have many other applications for those extra funds being generated by the utility levy ... and they're like bulldogs when it comes to letting go of additional funds. Mark these words! Makes you wonder, sometimes, when you hear the United States described as a "free" country. Are we really free in every sense of the word? Not as long as there are only two things certain: debt and taxes, we're not! (Pun.)
People are already complaining that utility bills are too high, but "they ain't seen nothin' yet!" At this point, we can tie in the golf course, because the city is furnishing the water to keep the greens in condition. They have to buy the water from the Authority, and somebody has to repay that fee, so who better than the taxpayers and utility customers? Sock it to 'em! You have probably noticed that an increase has been mentioned as forthcoming in one of the articles in The News recently; and once mentioned, those things are quickly acted on.

Man saved from bull by professional help

To the editor:
There are not enough words of thanks and praise to say about how professionally the paramedics went about their job on Labor Day, when Royce Ayres lost his confrontation with Tornado — our favorite pet bull.
The ability to go about saving Royce's life with the raging, pawing, snorting bull only six to ten feet behind their backs, with only a three-strand barbed wire fence between them, was far above and beyond the call of duty.
Thank you, Deputy Toten, and all the police, deputies and animal control people who were there to help us get Royce out of the pasture and toward the hospital, and for staying to finish the grim job of putting Tornado to his final rest. To any people who feel the animal was wasted when meat is so vital to life, I would like to refer you to Exodus 21, verses 28 through 36, where God's law regarding this is thoroughly dealt with. Verse 28: "If an ox gore a man or a woman, that he die, then the ox shall be surely stoned, and his flesh shall not be eaten ..." My son discovered the scripture to help me resolve my guilt on this matter. Also, we learned that without proper bleeding, and after using tranquilizers, the meat would not be any good.
The emergency crew on hand with Dr. Benson at Coronado Hospital continued the life-saving process with speed and purpose. The Doctors Juan and Mohan did surgeries and called for Dr. Vincenti to help, doing some surgery on his own.
If the Intensive Care Unit was serving any purpose but waiting for Royce to appear, it did not show. They have responded to every crisis in his condition totally. As a result, we feel secure that Royce will live and be fine.
Thanks to the countless friends and family who have rallied to Royce's side to give their support, love, prayers and help.
I want to thank you all and ask for your continued prayers.

Pride and jealousy cost man his life

To the editor:
My name is JEALOUSY. Once again I have reared my ugly head in the little community of Pampa as the victor and it cost one young man his life. After the recent trial of Jeremy Teakell, INJURED PRIDE, PASSIONATE KISS and I, JEALOUSY, have discussed at length how we each played our part in costing Roger Miller his life.
INJURED PRIDE assured us that he has been instilled in many a young person's heart but never before had a young man lost his life as a result. PASSIONATE KISS also felt he was not the true reason for the senseless death of this young man. Then the three of us began to wonder what SORROW, CONSCIENCE AND JUSTICE were doing during this time span.
It was apparent to most of Pampa that SORROW certainly couldn't be found in the actions or heart of either Mr. Teakell or Ms. Budd. Perhaps the only place SORROW could be found was in the hearts of the family of Roger Miller.
CONSCIENCE was not apparent in Mr. Teakell either. If it had been, how could he have gone to school and made the straight "A's" his family was so proud of. (Of course, at this point and time we realize his family had to be proud of something, even though he had just murdered one of his peers.)
And certainly CONSCIENCE wasn't in the heart of the jurors, for had it been, Mr. Teakell wouldn't be walking the streets as though he hadn't a care in the world.
As far as JUSTICE, he took an extended vacation so that he wouldn't be a part of all of this.
Just remember, the young people of our community are our future. Do you want this type of individual who let us — JEALOUSY, INJURED PRIDE AND PASSIONATE KISS — destroy the life of three young people to be a part of that community?

As I heard recently, "it's a good thing Pampa got the prison, 'cause they are home growin' 'em" Think about it, Pampa.

19th Street needs some traffic control

To the editor:
This letter is concerning the stop signs and yield signs along 19th Street here in Pampa.
On countless occasions we have seen "near misses" due to people either running the signs or looking very briefly both ways while never stopping, sometimes at about 50 or 60 mph. We have called the police, the city commissioners and even the city manager, and nothing has been done.
There have been two wrecks in the last month resulting in injury. This is a regular occurrence. We would like to see something done about this before someone is killed or hurt beyond complete recovery. Several of us have small children who play outside and could be hurt right in their own yards.
Push has come to shove, and we will not quit until something is done. Maybe 4-way stop signs? And a little more patrol.

See big picture before condemning the store

To the editor:
I don't know where the people get off, by trying the best they can to close down a business that is trying to help this community. Ever since Hastings moved into Pampa, people have been trying to run it out because of the "satanic, perverted or occult" materials they supposedly carry. But what they fail to notice is all the Bibles the store carries, along with Christian books and music.
It's strange how people believe the first thing they hear and don't even give the store a chance. Churches boycotting because of the material the store sells, but they, by choice, block out the good and inspirational books, music and videos. Give Hastings a chance. Think about it. How many companies would invest heavily in a town that is headed downhill? Only those dedicated to helping the people!
Last week a lady wrote in, telling the whole town she "won't ever go there again" because of a song playing over the system. The song, "Only Women Bleed," performed by Lita Ford, explains how it seems only women get hurt when a relationship turns bad. If she would have taken time to listen to the whole song, then wouldn't have made a fool out of herself in the public park.
If narrow-minded people would just take time and see the "big picture," then this thing would be better. If you take time and go in, look at one of the sales flyers the employees hand out. Look at that and notice the "Don't Use Drugs" and "Just Say No!" on them. Then try to say the store is "bad for our town."

If you think about it, the store sells the same music found at other stores in town and has the same videos as any other video rental place, the same books that can be found at other stores in town. So why just Hastings? Just because Ricky Pfeil said so???

And that, my friends, is the BIG PICTURE ...

She claims the city is lying to citizens

To all the citizens of Pampa:
We have been lied to again!
Lie 1. Glen Hackler states that all the city employees got a raise while supervisors did not. Some employees got as much as 96 cents; that's right, 96 cents per month, while the supervisors got $400 bonuses and up.
Lie 2. Mr. Hackler states in the paper that we have qualified people in the city that we could promote. So he goes to Lubbock to get a new fire chief. I wonder if he will stay, like Bob Hart, Jack Chaney and Chief Eberz?

BUCKLE UP!

Lie 3. The city of Pampa says it will pay incentive pay for schools that an employee completes. It cuts the cross-training program and takes up to $200 per month from certain employees, ever after those employees were told that if the city discontinued the program, they would still get the money for going to the schools.
Lie 4. Mr. Hackler and the City Commission state that firefighters are lazy and don't do anything but sit around all day. Citizens, go by the Central and South Stations and see what the firemen have done to the upstairs at Central and the bedroom at South, some of it with their own materials.
Lie 5. The biggest lie of all. Glen Hackler states that the only reason that the firefighters are suing the city for is greed, and that they don't care about the citizens of Pampa. The firemen offered to settle with the city, but Hackler would not even talk about back overtime that is due them by law. As for not caring, Mr. Hackler and the commissioners, you weren't around to listen to the firefighters talk about what they might have done differently to try and save the life of a 13-year-old boy, which by my understanding was impossible.

I didn't see Mr. Hackler or the commissioners standing out in 100 degree weather on their day off, collecting money for charity.
People, I am sick and tired of City Hall patting their employees on the back with one hand and stabbing them in the back with the other. That is why I am writing this letter against my husband's wishes and also why I am not signing my name, although they will probably find out who my husband is and retaliate against him.

Constitution drafters performed task well

To the editor:
Monday, September 17, 1990, marked the 203rd anniversary of the signing in Philadelphia of the Constitution of the United States. On that date 39 men serving as the Constitutional Convention and representing 12 of the original 13 states placed their signatures to a draft copy of that document which has served this nation so well.
The signed document was forwarded to the government of the Articles of Confederation in New York City with the request that it be sent to the 13 states for ratification. The approval process required several months. The signing in July 1788 by New York and Virginia, the acceptance of the document was complete. The fundamental law of the nation began to function in 1789 and has ably served our government since that date.
The men who drafted the Constitution performed well, and we have the pleasure of remembering and appreciating their handiwork.

Why can't police treat all the same?

To the editor:
On Friday, Sept. 7, 1990, the city police department suddenly decided they needed some extra income. During the high school lunch hour, they converged on the high school (on foot) and started writing tickets for not wearing seat belts.
Now I realize it's a law you should wear seat belts, but why do we single out a group of young people? Even the passengers received tickets. It sure doesn't do much for my image of law and order, "to protect and to serve."
You see, some of the Pampa elite were not ticketed, they were simply pulled over, warned and let go. If we want the youth to respect the law, why don't they all get the same treatment? I personally believe in and wear my seat belt; it's not as easy to get a teen-ager to do so. I could give names of the ones who were simply warned and I'd love to sign my name, but I'm afraid my kid would receive further harassment. You see, they (the police) do that; it happened today, even Sunday, Sept. 9, 1990.

Jury finds minister, two followers guilty in beating during exorcism

HONDO (AP) - A minister and two followers who tried to "beat the devil" out of a man seeking guidance for money and marital problems face up to 10 years in prison over the attack.

Jurors deliberated about five hours Friday before finding the Rev. James Price, pastor of the First Assembly Church of God in Devine, and brothers Alvin Ray Nixon and Robert Leo Nixon Jr. guilty of false imprisonment during the exorcism.

The defendants, all from Devine, had been charged in state district court in Medina County with false imprisonment in the beating of Everett "Ray" Weimers, 44.

Judge Mickey Pennington ordered a pre-sentencing investigation and set Oct. 29 for sentencing. Each defendant faces a possible prison term of two to 10 years and fines up to $10,000.

Defense attorney Charles Butts said he hasn't decided whether to appeal the jury's verdict. He said the hospital workers' testimony was the most damning against the defendants.

A physician and nurse testified that redness on Weimers' face and soreness on shoulders were caused by trauma or blows. The doctor, who treated Weimers Jan. 29, testified he suffered facial trauma and a separated shoulder.

But the defendants had claimed that Weimers' face became red and he uttered an "unearthly scream" when Price placed his fingers on the man's forehead and invoked the name of Jesus Christ while the Nixons held him on the floor.

One woman testified earlier in the five-day trial that she also was subjected to violent exorcisms at the church.

Carol Matthews testified Thursday that the defendants slapped her, pulled her to the ground, restrained her against her will and broke a tooth during one of the three ordeals.

Weimers testified he repeatedly was slapped in the face, restrained and had his right shoulder injured by the men Jan. 29 as the three men uttered religious phrases in an attempt to "drive the demon" from him during an exorcism lasting almost three hours.

The defendants tried to "beat the devil" out of Weimers, prosecutors said.

Ms. Matthews quoted Price as saying evil spirits inside her would come "out of her birth canal." Weimers and Matthews told the jury that during the exorcisms olive oil was poured on and rubbed into their crotches.

Price on Thursday disputed Weimers' account. Price testified he and the Nixon brothers prayed for Weimers because of his marital and financial problems, but had never forcibly restrained or struck anyone during their prayer sessions.

The Nixons, supporting Price's version of what happened, said they viewed Weimers as a brother whom they would never harm.

Matthews, 37, of Natalia repeated Weimers' version of exorcisms when she was called as a rebuttal witness by the prosecution. She said her sessions at the church took place Jan. 7, Jan. 24 and Jan. 28.

"They slapped me in the face every time I tried to close my eyes. My head was smashed to the floor several times," said Matthews. "The next day, I was hurting from head to toe and couldn't get out of bed."

Two men sought in Tech student's death

LUBBOCK (AP) - Police have begun a nationwide search for two men charged in the death of a Texas Tech University freshman whose body was found in a Dumpster by a man rummaging for aluminum cans.

Stepbrothers Gary Winkle, 17, and David Ray Haggard, 21, both of Dallas, were charged in the death of Nanette Elaine Harrison, 18, of Dallas, said police Sgt. John Gomez. Lubbock County Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack said he signed warrants charging both men with capital murder.

Haggard is thought to have been Ms. Harrison's boyfriend, Gomez said.

A man rummaging for aluminum cans in a trash bin found Ms. Harrison's nude body Thursday in an alley several blocks from campus.

Ricky Lee Green, left, and defense attorney Suzie Johnson listen to testimony on the last day of sentencing deliberations during Green's capital murder trial Friday.

Jury sentences convicted killer to death by injection

AUSTIN (AP) — Ricky Lee Green was sentenced by a jury Friday to death by injection for the 1986 sexual mutilation slaying of a Fort Worth television advertising executive.

The jury took less than an hour before returning the sentence. Green, 29, sat silently as the sentence was read, just as he had throughout the trial. He faced either life in prison or the death penalty.

Green, who has confessed to three 1985 sexual mutilation slayings, was convicted last week of capital murder in the Dec. 27, 1986, death of Steven Fefferman, 28. His conviction faces automatic appeal.

Fefferman worked with KXAS-TV. He was castrated and stabbed repeatedly in his townhome after meeting Green and engaging in sex with him on a beach near Lake Worth, according to testimony.

The trial was moved to State District Judge Joe Drago's court in Austin because of extensive news coverage in North Texas.

Jurors this week heard testimony from a Fort Worth police detective on Green's confessions to the three other sex slayings. The jury was then shown graphic photographs of the victims.

In Texas, prosecutors seeking the death penalty are allowed to reveal pending charges or arrests against the defendant.

Allen Levy, Tarrant County assistant district attorney, said he had been confident the jury would sentence Green to death.

"I don't think it was necessarily a job of brilliant lawyering," Levy said. "The fact there was four corpses was a big help."

Defense lawyer Suzie Johnson said, "I never try to second-guess juries."

"They had a very bad job to do," she said. "I think the people we picked on the jury were intelligent and very conscientious ... I will not quarrel with the jury verdict."

Robert Ressler, a criminologist who formerly worked with the FBI's behavioral science unit, testified Friday for the prosecution, saying Green fit the profile of "the most dangerous of serial killers."

Defense attorneys called some of Green's relatives to testify that the family was a victim of abuse by their father, Bill Green. But the prosecution brought witnesses to discount the theory that the alleged abuse contributed to any later offenses.

Green's wife Sharon was convicted in February in one of the 1985 killings, that of Betty Jo Monroe, an Amarillo topless dancer who was stabbed, mutilated and beaten in the head with a hammer. She also pleaded guilty in the death of Sandra Lorraine Bailey of Fort Worth, who died from stab wounds and blows to the head.

Mrs. Green said she aided the slayings on orders from Green because she feared for her life. She received 10 years' probation in both deaths.

Green also was charged with killing Jeff Davis, 16, of Lake Worth, who was castrated and stabbed.

The four killings were uncovered in April 1989, when Mrs. Green called the Tarrant County Sheriff's Department to report them. She said she had kept the deaths secret because she was afraid of her husband.

Baylor moves to block fundamentalist control

By TERRI LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Baylor University moved Friday to insulate itself from a feared takeover by fundamentalists, creating a separate governing body not controlled by the Baptist General Convention of Texas.

In a new charter filed with the Texas Secretary of State and taking effect Friday, trustees established a separate Board of Regents with "sole management and control" of the 145-year-old school, the world's largest Baptist-supported university.

"This is an historic and courageous initiative by the Board of Trustees," said Herbert H. Reynolds, president of the 12,000-student school in Waco, about 75 miles south of Dallas. "This action will maintain Baylor's academic excellence and continue its worldwide Christian emphasis."

Previously, the state convention elected 48 trustees who were charged with running the school. Under the new charter, the trustees will appoint six members of the 24-person Board of Regents. The remainder of the board will be elected by the sitting regents.

"It will never happen," said the Rev. Joel Gregory, immediate past president of the state convention and a fundamentalist leader. "This is the action of an independent group of Baptist power brokers to take away Texas Baptists' largest institution."

"This will have nothing to do with the lines of the 'fundamentalist-moderate' debate," said Gregory, pastor of Travis Ave. Baptist Church in Fort Worth. "This will be a matter of 2 million Texas Baptists unwilling for the crown jewel of Texas Baptist life to be taken away by a group of self-perpetuating trustees."

The vote approving the new charter was 30-7, with one abstention, Chairman Winfred Moore told The Baptist Standard, the state convention's newspaper.

"Taking Baylor out of the eye of politics, not only in Texas but in the Southern Baptist Convention, will make it much easier for us to get on with our mission's involvement in this state and other places," Moore told the paper.

"Baylor will no longer be there to be shot at or defended."

The Rev. Phil Lineberger, president of the state convention, said he had not been aware the move was being considered, but said, "I have a great deal of confidence in the leadership in Baylor."

Reynolds warned earlier this month that fundamentalists planned to seek control of the school's board of trustees during the convention's annual meeting in Houston Nov. 13-14.

Fundamentalists already control the Southern Baptist Convention, the nation's largest Protestant denomination, electing their candidates as president for 12 straight years.

They have used the office's widespread appointive powers to place only like-minded individuals on most boards governing Baptist agencies and seminaries. Moderates claim they have been shut out of the church.

Fundamentalists believe in biblical inerrancy, holding that the Bible is without error in any form, whether it be in matters of history, science or religion.

Moderates maintain there is room for individual interpretation, and leaders have begun to discuss splitting from the 14.9 million member denomination.

Paul Pressler, a Houston judge who along with others was an early leader of the fundamentalist takeover, has said his displeasure with Baylor was behind his efforts.

At Baylor, the trustees will serve as liaisons between the school and the state convention and be responsible for "supporting and fostering the financial development of the university," the school said.

The initial Board of Regents will be made up of current trustees, who will elect their successors.

Joy Kerley

Pampa church to host ladies retreat

The women's ministry department of Hi-Land Pentecostal Holiness Church, 1733 N. Banks, will host a ladies retreat on Friday and Saturday featuring Joy Kerley of Teen Round-Up in Duncan, Okla.

Registration will begin at 5 p.m. on Friday and services will conclude around 3 p.m. on Saturday.

Kerley is a well-known speaker for many women's groups, such as Women's Aglow and Christian Women's Club. She has been teaching "The Creative Woman Seminars" since 1970. However, the theme for this retreat will be titled "The Incredible Worth of a Woman."

A video by Garry Smalley of the same title will be part of the late night events included in the services. Hi-Land Church invites all of the women of the area to come to the fellowship.

All meals will be included in the registration. If you want to spend the night, bring a bed roll and any snacks you want for the night.

On Sunday, Kerley and her husband, Bud, will conduct the morning and evening services at Hi-Land.

Registration for the retreat will be $20 in advance or $25 at the door. To pre-register, you can send a check or money order payable to Women's Ministry Department, Hi-Land Pentecostal Holiness Church, P.O. Box 1694, Pampa, Texas 79066.

Pampa Realtor receives appointment to district advisory council of SBA

LUBBOCK — Jannie Lewis of Pampa was among four new members who have been appointed to the Lubbock District Advisory Council of the U.S. Small Business Administration, according to Walter Fronstin, district director.

Lewis, a real estate broker who along with her husband Gene are owners of Action Realty here, received an appointment letter from SBA Administrator Susan Engleiter. Also chosen to the council were Kirk J. Folkner, research manager for the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce, Colleen L. Freeman, retired business woman from Lubbock, and Anita K. Looney, executive vice president of the Stamford Chamber of Commerce.

The new members join seven others whose terms have been or will be extended for additional two-year terms. They are Robert L. Prock, Abilene, chairman of the Lubbock Council; Oscar E. Dickerson, Aspermont; Rudy Arrendondo and Donald G. Smith, Lubbock; Majol D. Lemley, Odessa; Roger Robles, Midland; and Dave W. Wrinkle, Big Spring.

"The Small Business Administration, in expanding its mandate as advocate for the more than 19 million small businesses nationwide, can succeed only with the dedicated and voluntary support of its advisory council members," Fronstin said.

Functions of council members include their advice and counsel to SBA officials regarding economic conditions within their respective communities. They also consider and comment on current SBA programs and evaluate proposed SBA programs. Generally, they act as advocates for small business and as a channel for information between their local business community and the SBA.

The first semi-annual meeting of the council for fiscal year 1991 will be planned early this fall, Fronstin said. Matters of concern to small businesses may be channeled through the members for consideration at the meeting.

Like oil companies, seismic companies pool resources

MIDLAND (AP) — As the fortunes of the petroleum industry withered, a number of companies began to pool resources to lower costs and expand access to information.

One industry that is increasingly turning to data pooling is the seismic industry. One such seismic data pool has recently been established for the Permian Basin.

Pooling of existing surface seismic proprietary data is fairly recent. With the downturn in the oil industry, companies began trading existing data rather than buying group or speculative data, to reduce capital expenditures. Both small companies and large companies benefit from such data pools, according to Bill Enyart, domestic sales manager of Simon-Golitic, the consulting firm that formed the Central Basin Platform-Midland Basin Proprietary Data Pool in January.

"For a small company with little data, this is a way for them to have access to 1,000 miles of data," he noted. "Not a lot of small companies can afford to acquire 1,000 miles of data by conventional means."

And for larger companies, "the advantage is that they already have a lot of data — the more they contribute, the less they have to pay."

Enyart, based in Littleton, Colo., said that there are currently 17 companies involved in the pool with 1,000 miles of data committed to the pool and 1,300 miles submitted for the map. Companies can choose one of five levels of participation. For those contributing 10 miles of data, the entry fee is $20,000, with no reproduction discount. The entry fee for those submitting 20 miles of data is $15,000, with no reproduction discount. Companies adding 30 miles of data get an entry fee of $10,000 and a 5 percent reproduction discount, while adding 60 miles of data have an entry fee of $5,000 and a 10 percent reproduction discount. Companies contributing 100 miles of data have no entry fee and receive a 15 percent reproduction discount.

This is not the only data pool in existence. Enyart said he knows of four others that he has not been involved in, and he has been involved with putting together five data pools involving over 50 companies and 3,500 miles of seismic. The first pool he's aware of was a data pool organized by Echo Geophysical Corp. in the Powder-River Basin of Wyoming.

"We find areas of with a lot of activity and interest, and then we send out proposals and ask interested companies to submit proprietary data they might be interested in," Enyart said, explaining how he markets the pool.

Among the capabilities Simon brings to the pool are:

- Stratigraphic and structural seismic data processing; and
- Phase and character tie techniques.

Panhandle ISA to meet Sept. 24

Panhandle Section of the Instrument Society of America announced today that their initial program for the 1990-1991 year is set for Monday, Sept. 24, at 6:30 p.m. in the Golden Spread Building (Instrumentation Building) at T.S.T.I.

This meeting will mark the beginning of the chapter's 40th year as a chartered section of the ISA. Special emphasis has been made to make sure the Panhandle section is ready to meet the challenge of the 90s. A board of directors has been established to structure this development, with emphasis on member value, education, program enhancement, and the further development of the instrument business in the Texas Panhandle.

At the heart of the process is the section's involvement with T.S.T.I. instrument department. T.S.T.I. is a principle supplier of trained instrument technicians. The student chapter of ISA is a vital concern in the instrument department.

The instrument industry in the Texas Panhandle is a growing and dynamic portion of our local economy. There have been several large expansions of existing plant control processes in the Amarillo area with more planned for the 1990s.

The program is open to anyone interested. Cost of the meal is $5 and will be provided by the Student Chapter ISA - T.S.T.I.

NACE sets meeting in Borger Sept. 25

September meeting of the National Association of Corrosion Engineers is to be Tuesday, Sept. 25, at Sutphen's Barbecue in Borger. The evening will begin with a social at 6:30 p.m. followed by dinner at 7 p.m. Cost of the dinner is $8.

September program will be presented by Don Piatt of the North Plains Water District. He will speak on the "Ogallala Aquifer."

The National Association of Corrosion Engineers meets the last Tuesday of each month except June, July, August and December.

Austin School students write letters for Operation Desert Shield soldiers

Students at Austin Elementary School spent last week in a project to show support to U.S. servicemen stationed in the Middle East during the current Persian Gulf crisis, including writing letters and preparing a banner with student's names.

The students discussed the project in their classes and also used the school library to learn more about the Middle East area so the students can be more aware of what's happening when they listen to or read about news accounts of Operation Desert Shield in Saudi Arabia.

The letter-writing project concentrated on Private First Class Steve Thurman, stationed with the Army's 82nd Airborne Division, Company D. Private Thurman, a Pampa graduate, was called to duty in the Middle East in early August. A nephew, Austin Smith, is a second-grade student at the school.

The letters and a banner containing the student's signatures will be sent to Thurman and soldiers in his company.

Following are some of the letters written to Thurman and his fellow soldiers by students at Austin School:

Dear Steavin Thurman,

I hope you are fine up there. Well, I want to tell you that my brother is in mrrin's [marines]. But my mom did not want him to go. But that was his disgen [decision]. I hope you have fun.

Your friend,
Anna Reseniz

Dear Steve Thurman & Co.D.,
You are very brave to be there. Keep smiling!

Your friend,

Dear Mr. Thurman,

How are you? You are very brave to go to Saudi Arabia. I could never by brave enough to go there. All of us here at Austin Elem. hope you get home safely. Good Luck!

- Jill Michelle Day -

Dear, Mr. Thurman,

I sure appreciate what you are doing in operation desert shield. I hope Sadam dosen't use his chemical weapons. I bet you wish he would give up so you could come home. Be careful and safe, and come home soon.

Sincerely,
Grayson Lewis

Steve & Co.D.,

Thank you for going to Saudi Arabia to have war with Iraq. Its nice to know that Saudi Arabia is being protected by America. It is very hot there. Wish you had cold water to drink. Also some cola.

Irish edge Spartans

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Rodney Culver's 1-yard touchdown with 34 seconds remaining Saturday lifted top-ranked Notre Dame to a 20-19 victory over No. 24 Michigan State, the second consecutive comeback win for the Irish.

Notre Dame (2-0) got a 2-yard touchdown run by Ricky Watters with 13:13 left in the game to narrow the deficit to 19-14.

Rick Mirer, who completed 14 of 21 passes for 155 yards, keyed the drive with a 24-yard completion to Adrian Jarrell at the Michigan State 2-yard line. The ball bounced off the hands of Spartans linebacker Todd Murray at the 3 and into Jarrell arms.

Three plays later, Culver dove in for the score.

The Spartans (0-1-1) stunned the Irish with 12 quick points to post a 12-7 lead. They went 88 yards in 12 plays on their only possession of the third quarter, taking a 19-7 lead on Tico Duckett's 1-yard run.

UCLA tailback Brian Brown is upended by Michigan's Neil Simpson in first-quarter action.

Michigan routs Trojans, 38-15

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Jon Vaughn, the nation's rushing leader, ran for 288 yards and three touchdowns as No. 7 Michigan ran over UCLA 38-15 on Saturday.

Vaughn, a sophomore, became the first back in run-happy Michigan history to rush for more than 200 yards in consecutive games. He had 201 yards in the Wolverines' 28-24 loss to No. 1 Notre Dame last week.

Vaughn's third touchdown was his most spectacular. He was grabbed at the line by Roman Phifer, shook the tackle, broke up the middle and ran 63 yards. His first run from scrimmage Saturday could have been foreshadowing, when he went 43 yards over right guard.

Freshman quarterback Tommy Maddox gave a gutsy performance for UCLA (1-2), completing 26 of 46 passes for 351 yards and a touchdown. But he was harassed all day by Michigan defenders and had several balls dropped by receivers.

BYU polishes off San Diego State

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Ty Detmer threw for 514 yards and connected with Andy Boyce on three touchdown passes to spark No. 4 Brigham Young's 62-34 Western Athletic Conference victory over San Diego State on Saturday.

Detmer completed 26 of 38 passes in a duel of WAC passing artists. San Diego State's 6-foot-8 Dan McGwire, brother of Oakland Athletics slugger Mark McGwire, threw for 361 yards and three touchdowns. He completed 32 of 59 attempts, the latter a record for Cougar Stadium.

Detmer threw scoring strikes of 51, 17 and 12 yards to Boyce, and Peter Tuipulotu and Stacey Corley each ran for two scores as BYU (4-0, 2-0) pulled away from a 28-24 halftime edge.

San Diego State (1-2, 0-1) couldn't sustain its first-half punch, getting its only third-period points on a 39-yard field goal by Andy Trakas. McGwire's 1-yard pass to Kipp Jeffries in the fourth period accounted for the Aztecs' only touchdown after intermission.

Pampa netters drop District 1-4A opener

Hereford defeated Pampa, 14-4, in a District 1-4A tennis opener Saturday at the Pampa High School courts.

"Hereford has a good team, but we just didn't play all that well," said PHS coach Jay Barrett. "We're going to have to play a lot better against Borger or we're going to be out of the district race."

Pampa hosts Borger at 1 p.m. next Saturday in district action.

Results of the Pampa-Hereford dual are listed below:

Indiana demolishes Mizzou

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Vaughn Dunbar raced 80 yards untouched for Indiana's longest touchdown run since 1977 and Rob Turner scored three touchdowns, as the Hoosiers beat Missouri 58-7 Saturday, breaking the school record for points at Memorial Stadium.

Turner caught two touchdown passes in the first half and returned a punt 65 yards for a score in the third period.

Indiana set its scoring record with 37 seconds to play on a 9-yard run by freshman quarterback Chris Dyer after using reserves on offense for the entire period. Earlier in the period, Dyer had moved Indiana from its 35 to the Missouri two before turning the ball over on downs. The school record at the stadium, which opened in 1960, was 52 points set against Navy.

Colorado State defeats UTEP

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Brian Copeland ran for 142 yards and a touchdown and set up another score with a 55-yard dash, leading Colorado State to a 38-20 Western Athletic Conference decision Saturday over Texas-El Paso.

The Rams (3-1 overall and 2-0 in WAC play) spotted UTEP a 13-0 lead barely three minutes into the game, then rallied for touchdowns on four straight possessions. Fullback Todd Yert scored twice, and tailbacks Copeland and Tony Alford also scored — all on 1-yard runs.

The CSU defense then protected that lead with three interceptions, two of them in the final quarter in the end zone by Andy Byrne and Selwyn Jones.

Yert tacked on another 1-yard scoring plunge in the closing minutes.

UTEP (1-3 and 0-2) struck quickly, taking the opening kickoff and marching 79 yards in four plays, with quarterback Mike Perez's 46-yard run setting up tailback Kenny Brown's 4-yard TD run.

Moments later a CSU fumble gave the Miners possession at the Ram 23, and wide receiver Reggie Barrett ran 19 yards on a reverse for another TD with 11:37 left in the period.

But the Rams rebounded with four straight scores.

Harvesters fall to No. 1 A&M Consolidated Tigers

COLLEGE STATION — From start to finish, A&M Consolidated found out that their No. 1 ranking didn't bother the Pampa Harvesters that much.

A&M won the game, 27-7, Friday night, but the Harvesters played well against a team that has won 17 of its last 18 games and is currently ranked at the top of the Class 4A poll by both The Associated Press and the Harris Rating System.

"Pampa played us hard, right up until the end of the game," said A&M coach Ross Rogers. "They came in and played with a purpose."

After a scoreless first quarter, the Tigers starting taking command with 21 second-quarter points. Quarterback Tommy Preston threw two touchdown passes and 230-pound tailback Cliff Groce broke loose for a 69-yard TD run.

"The second quarter seems to be our quarter," Rogers said. "For the third week in a row, we haven't scored in the first quarter, but we've scored 40 some points in the second."

Overall, it wasn't one of A&M's better nights. The Tigers fumbles five times, with Harvester defenders Zach Thomas, Tony Bybee and Chad Augustine recovering three of them.

However, the Tigers scored again from long distance on Cloz McCain's 60-yard TD scamper in the fourth quarter, making it 27-0.

Pampa avoided a shutout with an impressive drive late in fourth quarter.

Starting on their own 38, the Harvesters drove to the end zone in 12 plays with running back Wayne Cavanaugh going over from the eight.

A&M had 16 first downs compared to 10 for Pampa.

Led by Groce's 155 yards rushing in a dozen carries, the Tigers had 433 yards in total offense. McClain added 83 yards in seven carries.

Pampa, which had 192 yards total offense, was led by Quincy Williams, who had 64 yards on 16 carries. Cavanaugh had 56 yards on 11 tries while Zach Thomas added 51 on 16.

"It was a good game against a good opponent," Rogers said.

A&M improved its record to 3-0.

Pampa, 1-2 on the season, plays at Lubbock Dunbar Saturday night with the game starting at 7:30 p.m.

Cowboys take on Redskins

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys travel to Washington with what coach Jimmy Johnson can boast in of no other NFL city — a winning streak.

The Redskins and Cowboys, both 1-1, meet Sunday at RFK Stadium with the Redskins favored by two touchdowns.

The Redskins saw their 13-3 loss to Dallas at RFK last year as the worst point of their second straight season out of the playoffs and cited it repeatedly as a reminder not to let down this year.

"That game was one of our lowest points of the season," said Redskins coach Joe Gibbs, who calls it one of the toughest losses of his decade in Washington. "Not because it was Dallas, but because of all the things that led up to it."

For the Cowboys, their Washington visit was the lone bright spot in a 1-15 season. "It was a good feeling to win a ballgame but we'd had such a disappointing season that it tempered any kind of excitement," Johnson said.

The Dallas-Washington game no longer bears the lustre of what was once one of the NFL's great rivalries. But the Redskins two straight losses at home have evened the series despite the Cowboys' recent mediocrity.

McLean, Groom remain unbeaten in 6-man play

Canadian 20, Shamrock 6
SHAMROCK - Canadian ruined Shamrock's homecoming with a 20-6 win Friday night.
 Shad Jergenson ran for two touchdowns while Paige Ford rushed for 83 yards on 11 carries to pace the Wildcats' offense.
 "I felt like our defense won the game more than anything else," said Canadian coach Paul Wilson.

"They played hard, hung in there and went after the football."
Chad Hall
 Wilson felt senior receiver Chad Hall turned in one of the most impressive performances.

"Chad played well at end. He made a couple of good catches for 48 yards and he also caught a two-point conversion pass," Wilson said.
 Canadian is 2-1 on the season while Shamrock dropped to 0-3.
 The Wildcats host Perryton at 8 p.m. Friday night.

McLean 55, Silverton 20
McLEAN - McLean broke open a close game with a 25-point second quarter to defeat Silverton, 55-20, in six-man action Friday night.
 The score was tied 6-6 at the end of the first quarter.

Dennis Hill, Cesar Looney and Christian Looney paced McLean's attack. Hill scored twice on a 44-yard interception return and a 30-yard touchdown run from scrimmage. Cesar Looney scored on a 46-yard pass from Christian Looney and then tallied the final TD of the game on a 50-yard kickoff return in the fourth quarter.

Christian Looney, McLean's sophomore quarterback, completed 5 of 6 passes for 110 yards and two touchdowns.
 Hill led McLean in rushing with 86 yards on 14 carries.
 McLean had 325 yards in total offense compared to 172 yards for the visitors.
 McLean, 3-0, travels to Harrold for a 7:30 p.m. game next Friday.

Spearman 58, White Deer 8
SPEARMAN - Unbeaten Spearman cruised to a 51-8 win over White Deer Friday night.
 Spearman improves to 3-0 while White Deer is winless at 0-3.
 White Deer's only TD came in the second quarter on Brandon Carpenter's 9-yard pass to Allen Mercer. Eddie Selvidge ran the conversion.
 Brian Beck rushed for 210 yards and scored twice for Spearman. Tim Dooley scored three times on runs

Football-crazed town shocked by playoff ban

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer
ODESSA, Texas (AP) - Students at Odessa Permian High School wear black every Friday to show support for their reigning state championship football team.
 On Friday, it looked like mourning dress.
 Odessa Permian, Class 5A defending champs and the nation's top-ranked high school team last year, will sit out the playoffs this year. The University Interscholastic League determined Thursday that the football team had practiced out of season this year, threw the Panthers out of the playoffs and suspended the coach for two games. The team is on probation for a year.
 Permian was turned in by the coach of its cross-town rival, Odessa High.
 "I don't think anyone can really believe it," said Brian Carberry, a Permian student. "No one knows what to say or do."

of 11, 3 and 15 yards.
 The Lynx chalked up 506 yards in total offense while the Bucks were held to 153 yards.
 The Bucks play at Booker next Friday night with the game starting at 7:30 p.m.
Wellington 20, Wheeler 7
WHEELER - Wellington defeated Wheeler, 20-7, Friday night in a battle of unbeaten teams.
 Wellington lifted its record to 3-0. Wheeler is now 2-1.
 Wheeler led at halftime, 7-6, on Mack Marshall's 74-yard run and Brandon Chick's PAT.
 Wellington bounced back to score in the third and fourth quarters on TD runs by James McIntosh.
 Wheeler hosts Quanah Friday night at 8 p.m.

Groom 47, Samnorwood 0
GROOM - Groom remained unbeaten with a 47-0 shutout of Samnorwood in a six-man contest Friday night.
 Robert Miller scored two touchdowns and rushed for 151 yards on 14 totes as the Tigers go to 3-0 on the season.
 Brian Baker also scored twice for Groom.
 "This was as well-rounded a game as we've played all season long," said Groom coach Jimmy Branch. "We drove the ball consistently and the defense played well together as a team."
 The Tigers host Cotton Center at 7:30 p.m. next Friday night in the annual homecoming game.

Guthrie 46, Miami 6
GUTHRIE - Guthrie handed Miami its first loss of the season, 46-6, Friday night in a six-man game.
 Miami did take a 6-0 lead in the first quarter on a 1-yard run by Melvin Seymour. Guthrie bounced back to take a 14-6 lead at halftime and then put together 24 points in the third quarter.
 Don Howard was Miami's leading rusher with 45 yards on three carries while Jason Ott added 40 yards on five tries.
 Miami is now 1-1-1 on the season while Guthrie is 3-0.

Lefors 33, Alamo Catholic 0
AMARILLO - Lefors boosted its record to 2-1 Friday night with a 33-0 win over Alamo Catholic in six-man action.
 Mickey Nunn rushed for 260 yards on 25 carries and scored four touchdowns for the Pirates. He also threw a 33-yard TD pass to Lee Villarreal.
 Alamo Catholic drops to 0-2.
 Lefors travels to Chillicothe next Friday night for a 7 p.m. kickoff.

Permian has one of the most storied football high school programs in the country. It is the subject of a just-released book that details the city's obsession with the team, an obsession that allowed the team to charter flights for road games and build a multi-million-dollar stadium that rivals some college arenas.
 News of the ban sent shock and worries of inner-city conflict through this town of about 85,000.
 "This is going to rip the city up," said Candy Dennis, a graduate of Permian who now works at Odessa High. "You are either in the Permian school district or the OHS district, and the rivalry is intense enough as it is. This is only going to make it worse."
 The decision blindsided Permian, also known as "MOJO," which has won five state titles and finished second four times. The infraction: holding supervised practice before Aug. 20.

Rams favored over winless Eagles and improved to 6-2 in Three Rivers Stadium this season. The Pirates' magic number for winning the National League East remained at nine.

Rookie left-hander Randy Tomlin (2-4) checked the Cardinals on six hits until Milt Thompson's one-out double in the eighth. Bernard Gilkey walked, Ozzie Smith grounded out and Belinda walked Felix Jose to load the bases.
 Ken Hill (5-4) ended a three-game losing streak despite walking four of the first five batters. He allowed five hits and two runs in seven innings, the first time in five starts he lasted longer than five innings.

Indians 5, Blue Jays 2

TORONTO (AP) - The Toronto Blue Jays stumbled again Saturday, losing to the Cleveland Indians 5-2 and falling out of first place in the American League East.
 Candy Maldonado and Chris James hit consecutive home runs in the sixth inning for Cleveland, which beat the Blue Jays 2-1 in 13 innings on Friday night.

 Toronto, which began the day tied for first with Boston, dropped one half-game behind the Red Sox, whose game against the New York Yankees was delayed by rain.

The Indians have won six straight games and 10 of their last 12 to pull within seven games of .500. Cleveland was just 2-8 against the Blue Jays before the weekend series.
 Jeff Shaw (3-4) allowed 12 hits but just two runs in 6 2-3 innings, striking out three and walking none.
 Doug Jones pitched the ninth for his 40th save in 46 opportunities.

Loser Todd Stottlemyre (13-16) allowed 10 hits and all five runs in five innings.

Cubs 4, Mets 3

CHICAGO (AP) - Ryne Sandberg's sacrifice fly scored Jerome Walton, breaking an eighth inning tie, and the Chicago Cubs dealt the New York Mets their fifth straight loss, 4-3, Friday.
 The defeat tied the Mets longest losing streak of the season and dropped New York three games behind the first-place Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League East.

Walton led off the eighth against David Cone (12-10) with a single. Walton then stole second and went to third when catcher Charlie O'Brien's throw went into center field. Sandberg hit a sac fly to score Walton.

Paul Assenmacher (6-2) pitched the final two innings. Assenmacher had given up a game-tying homer to Howard Johnson leading off the eighth.
 Cone allowed eight hits and struck out eight in 7 1-3 innings.
 Starter Steve Wilson permitted just three hits.

White Sox 4, Mariners 3

SEATTLE (AP) - Sammy Sosa drove in four runs with a two-run homer in the second inning and a two-run single in the fifth as the Chicago White Sox beat Seattle 5-4 Friday night before the second largest home crowd in the Mariners' history.
 A Fan Appreciation Night turnout of 55,679 included Baseball Commissioner Fay Vincent. The only larger Kingdom crowd in the Mariners' 14-year history was 57,762.

AP photographer remembers German blitz on London 50 years later

EDITOR'S NOTE - Bill Huggins, born in London, is a photographer and picture editor who retired from The Associated Press earlier this year. He was just starting to work when the German blitz on London began 50 years ago. Here are his recollections of those terrible days in a city under siege.

By BILL HUGGINS
For The Associated Press

LONDON (AP) - In 1938, in case war came, we were issued gas masks. Air-raid shelters were dug in the London parks.

In 1939, war came. In 1940, the bombing began.

We were never gassed but bombs fell all over London in the blitz of 1940-41, and in our streets in Forest Gate. That's part of the East End that got the worst of the bombing because the docks along the Thames River in that district were vital to the country's survival.

After a night of bombing, we went to work through streets where houses, shops and offices had been reduced to rubble overnight.

The ruins were still smoking. The people who had lived and worked in the buildings were searching for anything that could be saved. The streets were crisscrossed with firemen's hoses.

I had just left school at 14 and was a messenger boy with Barratt's photo press agency, delivering pictures to all the newspapers in Fleet Street.

At first, it had been a peaceful war. Our photos of the British army in France showed the soldiers doing nothing, apart from digging holes.

In April 1940, the Germans invaded Denmark and Norway and in May they overran Holland, Belgium and France. The German air force started to attack us and the air fighting in the Battle of Britain took place over our heads.

We went to an air-raid shelter near the office two or three times. But we soon began ignoring the warning sirens and carried on work as usual. People get used to things and it was exciting to look up at the trails in the sky and try to identify "ours" and "theirs."

The docks were first bombed on a Saturday afternoon, Sept. 7. I stood in our garden and saw a mass of black smoke to the south. By the time it got dark, the sky was red with the glow of the fires, a fantastic sight.

In October and for the next six months in the winter of 1940-41, the bombers came almost every night.

So many men were away in the military that anyone from about the age of 14 could be called on for duty as fire watchers. We put on tin hats and stood in doorways and on roofs watching for incendiaries, small bombs that started fires.

I was outside our house when an incendiary hit the wall and bounced into the road, showering flaming phosphorus.

It was the only time in the war when I was really scared. I got as far as picking up a sandbag but I felt helpless. Then a man ran up, took it from me and threw it on the burning bomb.

That was the nearest I came to being hurt, although bombs fell as close to us as 60 yards and broke our windows. A cap from one of our own anti-aircraft shells came through our roof but we weren't hurt.

A boy named Percy, who was a friend of mine and lived near us, came out of his garden shelter as a bomb fell. Nothing was ever found of him. All of his family died in the shelter.

The City, London's financial district, was heavily bombed on Dec. 29, 1940. The AP office, then in Tudor Street, was burned and our agency was damaged, mainly by sparks flying off St. Bride's Church, which was gutted.

London burned easily that night because it was low tide in the Thames and the firemen couldn't get water.

Everything was blacked out at night and there were no street lights, but I found you can see in the dark better than you think.

What impressed me, going home at night in the blitz, was the cheerfulness of the people who slept on the subway platforms seeking shelter from the raids. Thousands would go down at dusk when the Underground trains were still running and hold sing-songs.

The blitz on London and other cities killed 40,000 people, injured 86,000 and destroyed 2 million homes, 60 percent of them in London. But people took it in their stride. We grew up only a few years after World War I and as boys we used to play at Britons against Germans. By the time the war began, we were already conditioned to it.

Like thousands of other families, we had a government-issued Anderson air-raid shelter half buried in our garden, but we didn't like it. So my brother, George, who was still at school, and our sister, Maisie, who was older and worked in an office, slept under the dining table.

When Germany attacked the Soviet Union in June 1941, the bombing slackened off. It resumed again in 1944 after the Allies invaded France and the Germans began sending over flying bombs and rockets.

I was in a church parade in 1944 in Putney in South London when we were asked to help out at some houses hit by a flying bomb. We formed a human chain to remove the debris and look for survivors. Then the guy next to me passed on the crushed body of a baby.

I can see it now.

Historical Sculpture Wall ready for dedication

Only one brace remains, indicating the final work on the Historical Sculpture Wall depicting Panhandle Settlement and Heritage, with brands of area ranches in the background. The bas relief sculptures form an outline of the flag of Texas.

The Pampa Area Foundation for Outdoor Art will dedicate its Historical Sculpture Wall, located at the south east corner of M.K. Brown Civic Auditorium, Saturday, Sept. 29 at 3 p.m.

Guest speaker for the dedication is Byron Price, writer and historian, and executive director of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City, Okla. Master of ceremonies is Bill Arrington, vice president of the Pampa Area Foundation for Outdoor Art. Following the dedication, a reception will be held in the Auditorium foyer.

The Historical Sculpture Wall is the culmination of five years of planning and execution by many volunteers. The wall was originally the idea of Thelma Bray, conceived during planning sessions for the 1985 Texas Sesquicentennial.

A panorama of Panhandle history unfolds across the art wall, the first of four panels to be completed. Designed in the shape of a Texas flag, the artistic endeavor is the contribution of 14 area artists. The flag displays, in bas relief, scenes of area settlement and heritage from the time of the Indians and explorer Coronado, to the present. The flag is set into a background of cattle brands representing over 60 area ranches.

Sculptors Gerald Sanders and Reece Field assembled the design, pioneering and experimenting with building materials and procedures for nearly two years. Sanders and Field readily agree there is probably not another art form like it.

The flag design was the idea of Gerald Sanders. It was first shaped from styrofoam, which was then overlaid with canvas dipped in hot wax to make the mold. The flag of styrofoam was then cut into 15 sections and given to volunteer artists who molded their art works in clay.

Sanders and Field then built another mold out of rubber for each of the 15 sections, with backup molds made from plaster of Paris. To cast the sculptures, the men prepared a mixture of two parts finely crushed marble, and one part cement, which was then poured into the molds. Sanders and Field built a special table, which they dubbed the "shaker table" to shake the molds.

This process was designed to gently shake the molds, insuring that the special mixture would fill every part of the artists' designs. The cast pieces took three weeks to cure.

The project originally began in the Mack Enterprises building, and later moved onto Field's garage, which he had enlarged to accommodate the artwork. "He still couldn't get his car inside that garage," said Sanders.

During the hot weather siege in July, Sanders, Field, and James Hinkley began attaching the finished sculptures, and cattle brand plaques representing area ranches to the walls, which had been previously constructed and erected by Sawatzky Construction Company. The heavy sculptures were mortared to the wall, then held in place with special clamps which the men had devised out of two by sixes. Grout was applied around all the sections, then the panels were finalized with coats of a weatherproofing sealer. The City of Pampa installed ground lighting, and local business donated additional lighting and a flagpole.

In the week it took to mount all the sculptures and plaques, Sanders guarded the project by living in his recreational vehicle, which he parked at the location.

The Historical Sculpture Wall was financed through an auction, with works of art donated by area artists and donors, and a branding iron barbecue with donations from area ranchers. Ranchers donated $100 for each brand. Mrs. John Bowers was the highest bidder at the branding iron barbecue, donating $5,000 for the Bowers crossbar brand to be placed in the center of the Texas flag's star.

The second and third walls at the art complex will feature clay tiles made by area students. Students did etching or bas relief in the soft, clay tile, to depict scenes from the Panhandle, during five workshops taught by James Hinkley during the summer in White Deer, Skellytown, and Pampa. These tiles will be on display during the dedication ceremony and will be mounted on the art wall in spring. The elementary and junior high workshops were sponsored by PAFOA, and the Pampa Fine Arts Association.

Sanders has won numerous awards for his bronze sculptures and has taught several workshops sponsored by the Pampa Fine Arts Association. He has helped several local artists learn the lost wax method in bronze casting and paper sculpture. Sanders has exhibited throughout U.S. and in England. A retired telephone lineman, Sanders has been working in art as a hobby since childhood when he first began carving in wood.

Field has pursued sculpturing for the last ten years and has won show awards for his work in bronze. He is retired from Texaco, Inc. where he worked for 35 years.

Hinkley retired as a school teacher from the White Deer-Skellytown Independent School District in 1989. He holds degrees in Speech, Theater and Art from West Texas State University.

Fourteen artists have contributed bas relief sculptures depicting the heritage of the Panhandle for the art wall, including Sanders, with Indian, eagle and buffalo hunter; Field, Pampa Army Air Field pilot and airplanes; Hinkley, quilting and oil industry; and the late Jerry Richards, Plains Indian.

Other artists include Fauncine Mack, Coronado's exploration; Tim Gikas, a farm site; Evelyn Epps, covered wagons coming west; Darlene Holmes, longhorn cattle; Karen Bonnell, the chemical industry and Celanese; Lloyd Waters, windmill; Lois Minnick, a farm scene depicting soap making and plowing; Darlene Birkens, farming from the reaper to today's combine and plow; Gerald Dean Reagan, cowboys; and Jim Hollingswood, cowboy gear.

Officers of the Pampa Area Foundation for Outdoor Art are Curt Beck, president; Bill Arrington, vice president; Lilit Brinard, secretary; and Dan Ervin, secretary. Board members include Field, Hinkley, and Sanders, as well as Reed Echols, Ted Gikas, Peggy Palmiuter, Phoebe Reynolds, Greta Arrington, Jim Hollingswood, Harvey Nensiel, Amy and Prudencio Avendanio, Karen Bonnell, Darlene Holmes, Carolyn Copeland, E.L. Green, Lois Minnick, Wiley Reynolds, Janice Sackett, Marian Stroup, Roger David with Pampa Garden Club, Las Pampas Garden Club representative Thelma Bray, Darlene Birkens, Christine Campaigne, Fauncine Mack, and Georgia Mack.

From the left, artists Fauncine Mack, Lois Minnick, the late Jerry Richards, and Darlene Holmes work on the pattern for the flag design.

Annual Octoberfest on Lake Brownwood great experience for seniors

The "center" of attention! That's what mature adults 55 and over will be at the Texas 4-H Center on Lake Brownwood when hundreds will participate in the 10th annual Octoberfest during October and November.

Sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, five weeks are offered from which men and women alike may choose to attend:

- Octoberfest I - Oct. 2-5
- Octoberfest II - Oct. 9-12
- Octoberfest III - Oct. 16-19
- Octoberfest IV - Oct. 23-26
- Octoberfest V - Oct. 30-Nov. 2

Featured educational programs and activities offer a wide variety of topics to fulfill highest expectations of all who attend. Topics may include exploring insurance options, cooking demonstrations, new tax laws, floriculture and more.

Energizing and relaxing recreational opportunities will stimulate enthusiasm while all will welcome great fellowship and new friends, Octoberfest officials say.

Learning Centers will offer "hands-on" experience in a variety of areas such as oil painting, wind chime making, needlecrafts, furniture refinishing, country crafts, collectibles and more.

Boat rides and fishing on Lake Brownwood add popularity to the stay. Lighted tennis courts, horse-shoes, billiards, volleyball, shuffleboard, dominoes, and card and table games round out the event.

A special theme of "Bring in the Clowns" will provide a festive atmosphere to the facilities, officials say. Thursday night's theme party will be held "Under the Big Top."

Each weekly event is limited to the first 165 participants, 55 and older, at a nominal fee. Call your County Extension Office at 669-8033 for more information.

Pampa Adult Literacy Program seeking more volunteer tutors, offers workshops

By DEBORAH HENDRICK
Lifestyles Editor

In the United States today, there are 27 million adults who lack the most basic tool of communication. They cannot read.

Who are they, these people who cannot read? It could be a neighbor, or co-worker. A businessman, housewife, somebody's grandmother, a high school drop-out, a new single mother concerned for her child's welfare, or a factory worker who has been laid off. The despair and loneliness of illiteracy can drive people to be the opposite of all they could be, if they could only read.

Texas ranks 47th in literacy; only three states have an illiteracy problem more severe than Texas. But in the city of Pampa, there is reason for encouragement, because seven people who were formerly illiterate can now read, thanks to the efforts of the Pampa Adult Literacy Program.

The Adult Literacy Program began four years ago, with a small group of people sponsored by The Friends of the Library. Using materials designed by Dr. Frank C. Laubach, a Christian minister and literacy pioneer, there are now 24 volunteer tutors in the city of Pampa, diligently working with people who want to learn to read.

The Laubach method of teaching literacy skills uses four level of workbooks, which are self-paced. The individual studies at his or her own speed, meeting with the tutor for one-on-one sessions at Lovett Memorial Library as often as they are able.

Tutors and students generally work together about two hours each week. Students begin by learning the alphabet, then vowels and consonants. Simple sentences become thank-you notes, letters, and then job applications. The Adult Literacy Program pays for the workbooks, which cost $40 per person. No expense is incurred by the student, and complete anonymity is guaranteed for the student.

The volunteers for the Pampa Adult Literacy program also work with school students, when their help is requested by the school district, and they also spend time with the men and women who work at the Pampa Sheltered Workshop.

Vera Plunk, a volunteer with the Pampa Adult Literacy Program, said, "Many of the people who cannot read suffered disrupted educations as children. Their families moved around a lot, and they were never able to keep up in school because of the continual disruptions. They are bright, intelligent people, who have spent a lifetime compensating for their lack of literacy in other ways."

Some of the adults do have reading disorders, suffering from dyslexia, attention deficit disorders, or various developmental delays. Some people who have extreme difficulty in reading and writing activities have Scotopic Sensitivity Syndrome (SSS), which is related to difficulties with light source, glare, luminance, light wavelength, and black/white contrast.

The Pampa Adult Literacy screens individuals who may have visual disorders, but cannot afford the expense incurred if the student needs glasses or special visual lenses, and must then refer them to other agencies if the student cannot afford these items on their own. This can be a frustrating and time-consuming delay for the adult who has finally taken those important steps in reaching out for help in learning to cope with their illiteracy.

September is National Literacy Month. Governor of Texas, William P. Clements Jr. stated in his proclamation, "A vibrant Texas economy requires a well trained workforce. As Texas strives to develop a diverse economic base, we must be prepared for the demands of a changing workplace. A well-educated, adaptable labor pool is vital to our continued advancement in business and industry. . . Through the generous, tireless efforts of these gifted volunteers we are combating illiteracy in Texas. These citizens, who see a problem and take the initiative to solve it, carry on a tradition which has distinguished our great state."

In Pampa, the needs of the illiterate continue. Pampa Adult Literacy Program needs more volunteers. Presently there is a special need for two more bilingual teachers.

The Adult Literacy Program will be conducting training workshops for new volunteers on Friday and Saturday, Oct. 5-6 at Lovett Memorial Library. The workshops will meet from 6 to 10 p.m. on Friday, and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday.

Doye Massie and Beth Karr are coordinators for the Pampa Adult Literacy Program, and persons interested in attending the workshops may telephone Massie at 665-4387, or Karr at 669-7142. Instructors for the workshops are Margaret Sparkman, Jan Elston, Mary Jo Fiveash and Carolyn Winningham.

There is a small fee for the teacher materials, as the funds donated to the program from The Friends of the Library and Altrusa are spent entirely on students.

Harvest sweet potatoes in late fall, before hard freeze

SWEET POTATO HARVEST
When do you harvest sweet potatoes?

Generally, late in the fall, but before a hard freeze and before the soil temperature falls below 55 degrees F. A chilled sweet potato that has been below 55 degrees F. will not store. Lift to avoid cuts, bruises and broken roots.

Cure in a warm, well-ventilated place for two to three weeks. Curing is the fastest at temperatures between 80 to 85 degrees F. Skin of a properly cured root will not slough when rubbed firmly with the thumb. After curing, try to store in an area around 55 to 60 degrees F.

WHEN DO YOU HARVEST PEARS?

Questions sometimes arise as to when you should harvest a pear. When trees are loaded down, harvest needs to begin as soon as possible to avoid limb breakage.

However, early harvest leads to poor quality fruit. As a rule, harvest generally should be done in September. Several criteria can be used to determine fruit maturity. These are firmness, color and corking of lenticels.

While few homeowners have pressure testers, a crude measure can be done by hand. When the fruit changes from the firmness of a baseball to the feel of a softball, it is close to maturity.

The background color of a mature fruit will change from light green to a yellow color.

Probably the easiest indicator of maturity are the fruit lenticels. These are small "dots" or indentations on each fruit's skin. Lenticels on an immature pear are white; however, as cork cells develop, the lenticels become brown and shallow. The brown color in the lenticels is a good indicator that the fruit is ready to be picked and will ripen without shriveling.

After harvest, pears should be stored at room temperature until they soften. After softening, they can be canned, eaten fresh or stored in the refrigerator until used.

GARDEN CLEAN-UP REDUCES DISEASE

Homeowners can help prevent future plant disease problems in flower beds and gardens by practicing some simple preventive maintenance this fall.

Plant disease organisms usually overwinter in infected plant parts such as leaves, stems and rotted or dried up fruits. Removing infested plant material from flower beds or gardens will help reduce next year's disease problems.

Removed infected leaves and fruits from plants and prune stems or branches back six or more inches below the last sign of infection. Use disinfectant dip such as a 10 percent solution of household bleach for the pruning instrument to avoid mechanical spread of the disease.

Fall plowing can follow this clean-up. Deep burial of plant residues is one method of disease control that has been successfully used by farmers for many years.

Diseases can't be completely eliminated by clean-up practices, but gardeners and homeowners who clean up their gardens and flower beds in the fall will have fewer disease problems in the next year.

Dance auditions for Pampa Civic Ballet scheduled Sept. 30

Auditions for Pampa Civic Ballet will begin at 2 p.m. Sept. 30 at the Beaux Arts Dance Studio, 315 N. Nelson.

Area ballet dancers are welcome to audition for the company. The first performance of the year will be Dec. 1 in M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Dancers chosen to be in the company must be taking a minimum of two ballet classes per week from their regular teacher. Those chosen for the company will be ages 13 and up, with junior members to be chosen from 11 and 12-year olds.

Audition examiner will be Neil Hess of Amarillo, artistic director of the Lone Star Ballet and director of "TEXAS."

An audition fee will be charged.

Dancers selected during the audition will be required to attend all company rehearsals.

Pampa Civic Ballet Company is a non-profit organization which received its charter in December 1972. Jeanne Willingham of Beaux Arts Dance Studio is founder and artistic director of the company. Auditions are held each year in September.

The company promotes interest in ballet while preparing its members in dramatic arts and staging, as well as other aspects of ballet, according to Willingham. Educational workshop and guest teachers stimulate students toward further growth and advancement, she said.

Excellence in ballet is encouraged through scholarship awards. Throughout the years, several company dancers had won scholarships to the Ballet of the Southwest, School of American Ballet in New York, American Ballet Theatre, San Francisco Ballet, Boston Ballet, Harkness Foundation and Briensky Ballet School of Saratoga. The company has been recipient of local Ford Foundation grants.

Arizona center sets premiere

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) - "Whisper in the Mind," a play by Norman Cousins, Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee will have its world premiere in October at the Nelson Fine Arts Center at Arizona State.

The play will be directed by six-time Tony Award nominee Marshall Mason. Lawrence and Lee received a Tony Award nomination for "Mame."

Cousins is a former editor of Saturday Review and recovered cancer patient who has authored several best sellers on the premise that the mind plays a major role in healing the body.

The premiere is considered a major coup for the $16 million center. "Whisper in the Mind" will kick off the art complex's second full season with 12 performances beginning Oct. 4.

The production, though uncast, is expected to feature a number of Broadway and Hollywood actors.

Newcomers welcomed, reunions, and meetings fill week

Lots of new Pampans smiled as they managed the neat trick of emptying and disposing of packing crates. Remarks floating around center on how warmly Pampans receive newcomers, how friendly store and utility employees are. Churchmen have done their part, too. Let's welcome a few more new Pampans.

Ben and Sandra Mackay chose to live in Pampa, although Ben works at Phillips as an engineer, a recent graduate of the University of Utah at Salt Lake City. Sandra enjoys reading, sewing and shopping with a capital "S." Ben enjoys reading, playing golf and model airplanes. They have two children, Chris-8, and Michelle-3. Church membership is in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

P.S. That church boasts 12 new families.

Jerry, a treader for Halliburton, and Mary Jane Griffith, formerly of Perryton, already have the Chamber of Commerce approach to Pampa by bragging on all aspects of Pampa and how delighted they are to be here. Jerry and Mary Jane love to fish and travel. Tim, 15, and a freshman, is already in the swim of things at school. He plays basketball, baseball, runs in track and rides skateboards. Mary Jane, who was a school bus driver in Perryton, will be a school bus driver. They have three daughters, and nine grandchildren in Perryton. Their church preference is Baptist.

Randy, a bulk driver for Halliburton, and Jackie Burklow came from Perryton, too. Their children are Randy, Jr., Jason, and Nicholas. Randy enjoys sports with the boys, especially baseball. Jackie enjoys being with her children and gardening, with plans in the making for a beautiful yard next year.

Pampa Middle School has several new faces on campus.

Ronnie Wood, principal of PMS, and Dianne, a fifth grade teacher at Horace Mann, came from Floydada. The whole school, personnel, too, is excited about Ronnie's plans, all upbeat. Diane's sister is Karen Bridges, and her parents are the Wayne Heplers. Their son Kelly, a freshman at WT, was valedictorian of Floydada High last year, and Melissa, a sophomore at WT, is scholarly, too. They are members of First Baptist, where Ronnie is already teaching a Sunday school class. Expect great things to happen at Pampa Middle School!

Kellie Greene teaches sixth, and some seventh grade science. Her husband will join her later.

Barbara Kerbow, another sixth grade science teacher, taught in Tulsa last year, but returned to PMS again. Welcome home.

Usually a lady serves as the girls' coach, but this year Terry White, who came from Oklahoma, will be a girls' coach. He will also teach eighth grade English. Girls, he's single!

Janis Williams is a transferee from Travis Elementary. She will teach sixth and seventh grade English. Her daughter Peggy is a student at PMS.

Lela Kennedy, recently of White Deer, has been named receptionist at PMS. She has served as a substitute teacher.

Peeking at Pampa By Katie

Angie Noel teaches math and computer literacy, and her husband Brian is the assistant golf pro at the Pampa Country Club. Angie and Pam Barrett, the librarian, are cousins. Both like to play golf and ski. Angie likes to walk, read and paint; and Brian likes to hunt.

Cami Skaggs teaches seventh and eighth grade science. She is the daughter of Coach Dick and Carol Dunham, also teachers at PMS. Her husband Randy, son of Gaylene, is the new veterinarian in town. Both are Pampa High School graduates. They are members of First Baptist Church.

Jan Stroud, who graduated from college in May, teaches history and social studies in the eighth grade. Jan returned to school to complete her college work after her children were practically grown. Robin her daughter, is a PHS senior and Angie, another daughter, attends WT. Jan and her husband Jim, head of the data processing department at IRI, Int., are both PHS graduates.

Cay Warner, a Pampa resident for several years, is teaching English, and the Gifted and Talented. Mark is her husband.

Mike and Carol Shearer moved to Pampa when Mike accepted the position of principal of Travis Elementary School. He was formerly the assistant principal of the Carver Magnet School. On his first year to teach, he was selected as the best teacher in the fourth and fifth grades. Pam Crockett is a relative of theirs.

A warm Pampa "Welcome!!!" to all!

Fay and Charles LaBarr, and Robert and Doris Young attended a family reunion at Quartz Mountain near Magnum recently. About 28 cousins, aunts and uncles came from Tennessee for the big event. Fay recently hosted a luncheon for the Knife and Fork board in her home.

Coach Gary Richerson of White Deer took a team of cross country runners all the way to Hereford for a tournament last Saturday. The bad news was that no one else was there, because the tournament was scheduled for Sept. 22, one week later. They went back yesterday.

The Pampa High School Class of 1940 met Sept. 7 and 8 for their 50th year anniversary reunion. The Howdy Party was held Friday evening in the Chamber of Commerce building. Some had not seen each other since graduation.

The local area members of the class had been planning and working on the reunion together since early March. Virginia Harrison Archer and Thelma Osborn Bray were co-chairmen, with Bob Karr as secretary. Evelyn Morehead Johnson was in charge of decorations and refreshments for the Howdy Party, and for the Saturday morning coffee and get-together. The banquet was held Saturday night at the Pampa Country Club with James Evans making the arrangements.

Virginia had made name tags in the shape of megaphones with each person's picture as the looked in 1940. Virginia Archer, Evelyn Johnson and Leona Parks Sloan had made yellow mums with green ribbons for favors and table decorations for the banquet. The Howdy Party had pictures displayed along the walls as well as a large memorial poster of deceased members of the class.

Soren Jensen, of Bellevue, Wash., had put together a book that included biographic sketches of the class members. Soren also acted as emcee for the banquet.

Approximately 130 members of the 1939, 1940 and 1941 classes attended, plus several teachers that had taught in PHS in 1940.

Descendants of Paul and Sarah Corcoran gathered recently for their 13th reunion in 15 years. Paul's father was a soldier at Ft. Elliott, near Mobeetie. The Corcorans were one of the oldest families in Wheeler County. Friends and relatives came from Pampa, Lefors, Mobeetie, McLean, Dumas, Dalhart, Calif. and Wash. Seven children and representatives of two more families of the original children attended: Bill and Leitha Corcoran, Clara and Cotton Ridgway, Ariza and Annabell Corcoran, all of Mobeetie; Evelyn Riley and Earl, McLean; Maude Trusty, Lefors; Bessie Keeton, William E. and LaVerne Corcoran, Pampa; Verna Corcoran, Mobeetie; and J.F. Hanint and Louella, Calif. An important feature of the reunion was sharing the family tree book, which LaVerne started, and containing over 300 pages. Special recognition is due LaVerne for originating the idea of a family reunion. Nieces and nephews will continue the tradition.

Rev. Amos Meador had an unusual experience with a balloon. Here's the story. Last spring Mrs. Wyatt, in White Deer, had each of her second grade students write a letter and put it in a balloon. All of the balloons were turned loose at the same time. The balloon Rev. Meador found belonged to Carrie Bromlow of White Deer. He wrote to her, as requested, and she wrote him. Carrie was happy that a pastor found it, because she had just been baptized! Rev. Meador, gracious in every way, was happy to have a new little friend. Carrie's dad is a Post Office employee here in Pampa.

P.S. Rev. Meador, and his wife, the former Lois Fagan, were seen making their yard look spiffy clean and neat. While the Rev. mowed, Lois swept the long driveway. She REALLY swept it! They can't really be considered newlyweds anymore.

Annabel Wood and her daughter Shirley Shaw of Canyon recently attended Annabel's 67th high school reunion in Clay Center, Kan. Annabel, and five of at least 13 living classmates, rode a limo in the parade and had a blast. Annabel returned to college in 1965 at the age of 59, to complete her senior year. Then she taught eight years before retiring. She taught Sunday school class at First Presbyterian Church for three years, and for the local adult literacy program for two years before physical problems interfered. She is a member of the Civic Culture Club, Retired Teachers Association, Kappa Kappa Iota, plays bridge and reads constantly. While physical conditions may have hampered some of her activities, her mental capacity is phenomenal! She bright, sharp as a tack, and a joy to be around. You'll have to wish her a happy 84th birthday on Sept. 30.

Visiting last week in the home of Perry and Ruth Franklin were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kennedy, Knoxville, Tenn.; Jean Franklin, Amarillo; and from Pampa, Mr. and Mrs. Irl Smith, Mr. and Mrs. W.B. Franklin, Mr. and Mrs. W.O. Franklin, and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Butler.

About 40 guests and members of the Engineer's Wives organization attended a membership coffee recently at the Pampa Country Club. Hostesses, all officers, were Jean Andrews, president; Evon Imgarten, vice president; Pampa; Jo Ellen Long, vice president; Borger; Carol Miles, secretary; Borger; Billie James, treasurer. The mixer/ice breaker was a game of Bingo, in which each person had to visit around to get answers. An example of Bingo questions was: Lynn Cost of Borger was the only person there who was born in a foreign country, South Africa. In no time at all everyone knew everybody else. It was a fun morning.

Lynn Kurtz was in charge of the ladies' day for the Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ last week. Guest speaker was Doris Henderson. About 150 ladies from panhandle towns attended.

Spied Lacy Ayres and Faye Gallman out and about minus arm casts. All smiles? Yes, but aren't they always smiling?

Spied at a local grocery store were newlyweds Pam and Tim Dunham, and their two children Brandon and Casey. The kiddos were smiling, happy and as cute as can be. In fact, all four were smiling at each other, and glad to be aboard.

Mike and Nancy Ruff spent time in San Francisco on a fun trip while their daughters Carlyn and Julie stayed with friends. Another time Mike looked for a reason to fly to Dallas and found one. He took Julie and her friend Emily Hawkins to Dallas for a Saturday of shopping at the Galleria, Neiman Marcus and several other shops. Mike had fun and so did the girls.

Recently Mike went to Dallas to take a six-part exam in three days (!) to become a certified financial planner. Usually applicants study, take two parts of the exam, return home to repeat the process. Mike condensed his studying to cramming at night and taking tests in the daytime, for an exhausting three days. This is a broadening of horizons rather than a replacement of profession.

Mike and Nancy, like his parents before him, the late Shelby and his mother Margie, enjoy working together, something not every wonderful couple can do.

Dorothy Dodd Peacock Brown enjoyed visits from her family since early Aug. through part of Sept., all from out of state. Her son Ivan O. Peacock and wife, daughter and three grandchildren came from Simi, Calif. Another son Charles D. Peacock, wife, and son Stephen Peacock came from Omak, Wash. Son Bob W. Peacock and wife came from Culver City, Calif. All of the boys were native Pampans and graduates of Pampa High School. Dorothy returned to Pampa in retirement within the last two years.

See you next week, Katie.

Professionally clean fake furs

From AP Newsfeatures— Fake furs don't require a lot of maintenance, but a little care will reap years of wear.

You don't need to clean fake furs frequently, says Searle Blatt, president and chief designer of a company that bears his name. Instead, brush the nap like a fur. When it does require drycleaning, take it to a professional that specializes in fur.

Store your coat in a cool closet, but Dan Eisen of the Neighborhood Cleaners Association in New York cautions against storing fake furs if they are soiled. Also, do not store them in plastic, which will cause the pile to mat.

Never iron, press or steam fake furs, says Edward Oberhaus, senior vice president of Kaneka America, marketer of Luxaire modacrylic fiber. If the garment gets wet, hang it to dry away from heat in a place where it will not get crushed.

Operation Dear Abby/Desert Shield is a go

Dear Abby

family secrets to strangers. If you're pressed for details, don't lie; simply say it's a rather painful subject and you'd rather not talk about it. End of story. No need to elaborate.

DEAR ABBY: In December of 1987, I sent six Christmas cards to American servicemen through "Operation Dear Abby." I received an especially friendly response from 1st Lt. Tom Malone who was stationed in Germany. I answered his letter, and we became pen pals and really got to know each other well through our letters.

When Tom came home on leave in May 1988, we met for the first time. It was love at first sight, and on Jan. 7, 1989, we were married!

Yesterday, Tom left for duty in the Middle East, and the possibility now exists that these brave men and women may still be in the Middle East for the Christmas holidays. If so, it would be wonderful if they could be remembered through another "Operation Dear Abby" letter-writing campaign.

Thank you, Abby, for all you've done to make sure that the men and women in the military are not forgotten during the holidays.

YVONNE MALONE

P.S. Because of you, I can count myself among the proud sorority of Army wives.

DEAR YVONNE: Congratulations to you and Tom. Please read on:

DEAR ABBY: I've read many letters from the Army and Navy top brass commending you for the morale-boosting mail generated through "Operation Dear Abby." You deserve a whole bunch of "atta girls" for your efforts. This morning as I watched the news, it occurred to me that a blitz of mail would lift the spirits of those serving in the Middle East, 8,000 miles from home in a hot and hostile environment.

How about it, Abby? Can you check with the military honchos and ask if an "Operation Dear Abby/Desert Shield" can be mounted? Mail from home is a terrific morale-booster.

I am a long-married woman in my mid-50s who isn't interested in a romance, but if you can get the go-ahead for the project and publish the address, I promise to send 10 letters of encouragement and appreciation the day it appears in your column.

JEAN PUTT, LOS ANGELES

DEAR JEAN: Thanks to Sgt. Mary M. Ratliff, immediate clearance has been received from the Pentagon. Cards, letters and packages can be flown to those men and women serving in the Middle East.

I hope my readers will respond again. Service organizations, schoolchildren, grandparents, retired people, veterans — anyone who has the time and heart to write — please participate in this patriotic morale-boosting campaign. Address your cards, letters and packages for the Army, Air Force and Marines stationed on land to: Any Servicemember, Operation Dear Abby/Desert Shield, APO New York, N.Y. 09848-0006.

For the Navy and Marines on ships: Any Servicemember, Operation Dear Abby/Desert Shield, FPO New York, N.Y. 09866-0006.

DEAR ABBY: We moved recently, and when meeting people for the first time, we are often asked about our children. We have three sons. The two older ones have jobs with some prestige, but our youngest son was sentenced to prison a short time ago. He's had a history of mental problems from early childhood, which were always getting him in trouble with the police.

What should we say when we're asked, "How many children do you have, and what do they do?"
UNCERTAIN

DEAR UNCERTAIN: Say, "We have three sons. The two older ones are doing quite well, but unfortunately, our youngest son has had a history of mental problems, and he's trying to find himself."

There's no need to confide

DEAR ABBY: When I saw the letter about blood types, I had to write.

Three years ago, our son left this small Kansas town to drive, alone, to California. He called us the first night, the second night — then nothing!

My husband contacted the Highway Patrol, and one by one, I was asked for: a recent picture of our son, his driver's license number, his blood type and the license number of his car. Each question hit me like a physical pain. Some of the answers I did not know, and in the condition I was in, I could not even think logically enough to find them.

Thirty-six hours later, our son showed up on our doorstep! (He had changed his mind and returned home.)

Now, all of the information for each member of this family is safely tucked away in my desk — labeled and easily accessible.

JANE HATHAWAY, ST. JOHN, KAN.

DEAR JANE: Fortunately, your story had a happy ending, but there's a lesson in it for everyone. Thanks for sharing.

To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

New products designed to stop motion sickness

By RON GASBARRO
AP Newsfeatures

NEUTRAL AUTO

Years ago, my uncle hung a chain from the rear fender of his car. The chain was long enough to just touch the ground. He said it prevented car sickness.

I thought he was nuts. Recently, I was told that because an automobile has a metal body, the electricity generated by the engine cannot easily dissipate. Passengers exposed to high levels of electrical energy can experience headaches, drowsiness and nausea.

The Neutral Auto is a pair of small disks to be attached to the dashboard near each side window. The Windsor, Ont., manufacturer says they create an anti-static screen in the car so passengers stay alert and do not feel woozy. Like my uncle's homemade grounding device, Neutral Auto neutralizes the static electricity.

While not all car sickness is caused by weird currents — gasoline vapors are another cause — you might give it a try if car sickness is a problem.

The units have been tested for five years in Europe with success.

Neutral Auto is available through Hammacher Schlemmer, 1-800-543-3366.

SEA BANDS

Scientists agree that the cause of motion sickness lies in the delicate relationship between the eyes' focus and the inner ear's tiny balancing mechanisms. Normally both senses operate in perfect harmony. But in the air or at sea in turbulent weather, the eyes register little movement while the inner ear reacts to the shaking. The brain, receiving conflicting messages, gets confused. Motion sickness results.

Sea-Bands, from Sea-Band International in Boston, are worn on the wrist to prevent traveler's nausea through the Chinese practice of acupressure. They have a small button that applies slight pressure to a pressure point on the wrist.

I have read several research papers that agree these devices work. If you find motion sickness medication makes you drowsy, Sea-Bands may be the answer.

Soft pretzels are easy treat children can easily prepare

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Garden Magazine
Food Editor

Soft pretzels make a terrific snack. Thanks to refrigerated pizza dough, they're ready in minutes. Top with salt or seeds, as you prefer. In true Philadelphia pretzel tradition, serve them with hot brown mustard for dipping.

EASY SOFT PRETZELS

One 10-ounce package refrigerated pizza dough
1 beaten egg
1 tablespoon water
Sesame seed, poppy seed, coarse salt, garlic salt or onion salt Unroll pizza dough onto an 18-inch piece of lightly floured waxed paper. Roll dough into a 16 by 10-inch rectangle. Cut dough lengthwise into ten 1-inch-wide strips.

Shape each strip of dough into a circle, overlapping about 4 inches from each end and leaving ends free. Taking one end of the dough in each hand, twist at the point where the dough overlaps. Carefully lift each end across to the edge of the circle opposite it. Tuck ends under to seal. Place pretzels 1 inch apart on an ungreased baking sheet.

Stir together egg and water. Brush pretzels with egg mixture. Sprinkle with sesame seed, poppy seed, coarse salt, garlic salt or onion salt. Bake in a 350-degree F oven for 15 to 17 minutes or until golden. Serve warm. Makes 10 pretzels.

The Point Is Pets

by Ron Hendrick D.V.M.

Q: My dog seems to do a lot of scratching, licking at his feet, and chewing at various places on his skin, especially near his tail. Can he have some sort of allergy? If so, what can I do?

A: Yes, dogs (and cats) do have allergies. These range from contact allergies, to food allergies. The most frequent, and most common, one is Flea allergy. Dogs are often allergic to the saliva of the flea, the droppings of the flea, and the flea itself. Add in the movement of the flea, and you have one miserable dog, and usually, its' owner. I would recommend you check closely for fleas or evidence of fleas: small, black pepper-like specks that are flea "droppings," usually seen near the base of the tail. Many times the flea will have already gone elsewhere, either another animal, or hiding in grass or carpet, to lay more eggs, but the evidence will be left behind. A good bath, dip and flea collar should alleviate most of the symptoms. If this brings relief, keep in mind you still need to treat the environment: the house, yard, etc. to prevent reinfestation. If you don't feel fleas are your dog's problem, take him to your veterinarian. He is better equipped and trained to spot different kinds of skin problems. He might suggest a blood test to check out all the various things commonly cause allergies in dogs. Good luck.

Santana: Spirit of oneness theme for his new album

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — With his new album, Spirits Dancing in the Flesh, Carlos Santana wanted the same feeling of "oneness" experienced at the finale of the Olympic games.

"Every four years at the Olympics, you see people from all walks of life joining hands, dancing, laughing together, crying. I wanted to do the kind of album to create that spirit every day," he said in an interview at Columbia Records, where he has been since his first album in 1969.

As word spreads that Santana's in the building, it seems that every employee comes by to say hello and ask for an autograph.

The first video, for "Peace on Earth ... Mother Earth ... Third Stone from the Sun," he says, "shows the Earth is the womb and we are the babies. Forget about national anthems, flags and passports and get into one-family consciousness. That turns me on."

"The first part of that piece was composed by John Coltrane, the second by me and the third by Jimi Hendrix."

"I met Hendrix at a concert. He mentioned about joining my band. Musically, he knew the band was embracing something different than show business, that he was being put into. We were just kids, but he knew. I think he had enough of show business. He wanted to seriously play some music."

Tramaine Hawkins, for whom Santana predicts big things, and Bobby Womack sing on Spirits Dancing in the Flesh. Santana plays guitar.

This is the last album under his present Columbia contract and his thoughts are full of what he wants in a new contract — the chance to advise the company about non-mainstream records. "I don't want a big juicy contract with a lot of money. I would like to create a new branch in the company that deals with people in a different way than the predictable." Only college radio is open to experimenting with music programming, says the man of whom it has been declared, "He IS Latin rock."

"This company needs a branch of rebels and renegades," he says. "I want to work with them. There are a lot of bands not that predictable, the Fabulous Thunderbirds, Tracy Chapman, Bonnie Raitt, John Lee Hooker. Turn on the radio, it is very insulting. A lot of people don't want the same formula of canned soup. They want the real gumbo."

Outspoken and never at a loss for words, Santana says that Columbia Records would like him to repeat "Black Magic Woman" of 1970. "They treat you as a legend and don't put your new records in the stores. Every time I go on the road for the last five years, it's been sold out. People are waiting for the new thing we're going to play."

Carlos Santana

Santana found it frustrating to take The Healer, which he composed, and the soundtrack to La Bamba to Columbia and have them rejected. La Bamba came out on Warner Bros. and The Healer on Chameleon Records.

"I did a jazz album with Wayne Shorter two years ago. They haven't put it out."

He hasn't done music for a film since La Bamba.

"All the scripts they send me are demeaning to women. If I can't play music in front of my four sisters, Mom, wife and daughters, I won't play it. Thank God I'm in a position where I don't need to do it," Santana said.

Santana is touring the United States. Next year he plans to go to South Africa and South America. "I promised my wife some domestic rhythm time. The Lord gave us a daughter eight months ago. I need to watch her grow. I've tried all my life to balance my life. Salvador is 7, Estella 5, and Angelica Faith 8 months. I'm very grateful."

Love-Hate avoided working days to play music

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Love-Hate had played in New York the night before its vocalist, Jizzy Pearl, was to be interviewed.

"I was up till dawn," Pearl says. "If I'm a little less than glib, you'll know why."

Love-Hate, which the Los Angeles Times dubbed the best new band from that city since Guns N' Roses, is on tour, promoting its first album, Blackout in the Red Room, on Columbia. Pearl says, "We usually come away from a show with 20 to 30 people considering us their favorite band. That's the best I can hope for at this point."

The current single is "Why Do You Think They Call It Dope?" in which the only easily understandable lyric line is the title. Pearl says: "It raises the question of personal sobriety in our society. It's not pro or anti-drug. It has a few vulgarisms. I hope it gets banned. It seems to be the nature of bad publicity that it backfires on the people doing it. 2 Live Crew is laughing all the way to the bank."

"I like success. That's why I like Madonna."

"We always stress the fact our songs aren't a glorification of drugs. Some people say just saying it is glorifying it. That's a no-win situation. I watch a TV commercial where people play volleyball better when drinking beer. Isn't that a mixed signal? I don't play volleyball better drunk. Rock 'n' roll has traditionally been picked on as a bad influence."

Bassist Skid Rose painted the album cover several years ago. On one side, it shows what could be medicine men, with motifs of snakes, skulls, poison and a car in a tunnel, while on the other side are four headless, nude nymphs dancing in flames with snakes discreetly coiled around them.

Inside that psychedelia is a photo of the band, appearing wasted. The guitarist and drummer call themselves Jon E. Love and Joey Gold.

"I'm from Chicago," says Pearl, adding that if people remember the name Jizzy Pearl and chuckle at it, he's pleased. Before he was in rock, he was in the family air-conditioning business. "I hated installing them in attics and under porches, with the spiders. It's hard work."

When Pearl joined, the band had a song, "Love-Hate." It ditched the song but kept the title as its name. "I met them in 1985 through a mutual friend. They'd been playing together for some years. Their singer quit on a Japan tour. We've been together ever since."

"Before that, I'd been in several bands that had really gone nowhere. What attracted me to this group was a strong sense of commitment to music and all that goes with it, namely not having a day job. For us, it was really the only way to devote the required amount of time that we needed to rehearsing, going out at night, promoting, recovering from that night. It was a brutal lifestyle."

"In my opinion, the only way to make it as a musician these days is to give yourself no safety rope, so to speak. The only way passion will come out in your music is knowing that you have no choice. A lot of people think they can do a day job and rock at night. It isn't so. How do you compete with somebody like me, who devotes all his time to music?"

"Competition is very intense in L.A. On any given night, 40 to 50 live bands are playing. You rise above it and get stronger or get frustrated and give up."

"We never got close to giving up. We had been passed up by every single record company that existed. After a given period of mourning, we would write new songs and give it another shot. After three tries, we finally scored with Columbia Records."

Live, they don't play songs from their past. "A song may be new to the people, but to us, it has an oldness I don't really care for."

Though Love-Hate is a hard-rock band, Skid Rose, the principal songwriter, composes on acoustic guitar. "We hang together as friends," Pearl says, "as opposed to a band being a business venture for four guys that want a record deal, which is kind of cheesy."

"We went through like three or four years of abject poverty, living in a warehouse off Skid Row in downtown L.A. Experiences that we lived through definitely made us closer. We called it Soul House, the warehouse we all lived in and rehearsed in. Rent was cheap. It was a rathole, really. It has taken on a more romantic air, now that we don't live there any more. We tend to remember just the good times, as opposed to a plethora of bad."

"We said, 'Money is not going to change us.' You find out you don't want to live in a hole when you don't have to. You want to live in an apartment with running water like normal folks. We ended up getting apartments in Hollywood. We do still rehearse there."

"The band was never going to throw in the towel. If we didn't have a record deal, I'd still be living at Soul House, trying to have a career."

The tour has been across America, except for a month in Britain and Germany.

"I'm into a free and true expression of where you are and what you are," says Pearl. "The band has a clear idea of itself. I like what I'm doing. I'm not looking over my shoulder and copying someone else's act. What the band has is genuine."

"Everyone wants to have a blockbuster record. It makes life easier. We're happy where we are, hoping to get better gigs, have better songs, just be better."

"It's the key to survival."

State Fair trying to attract more from around Texas

By JAY JORDEN
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — It may be called the State Fair of Texas, but for 104 years most of the people through Fair Park's gates have come from North Texas.

Errol W. McKoy wants to change that.

"It is really the State Fair of all of Texas," said McKoy, a 25-year veteran of amusement parks hired two years ago to revitalize the fair. "We are continuing to build the fair up to where people are coming in from all over the state."

This year, McKoy trekked to Houston, Austin and elsewhere to entice interest. He hopes new food cookoffs, goat and other animal races, concerts and craft shows will help the fair become "the Disney" of such state events.

"We want to see the point where 40 percent of our business is coming from outside Dallas-Fort Worth," he said.

An estimated 125,000 people are expected on opening day Sept. 28 at Fair Park, with as many as 3.4 million visitors attending during the 24-day run.

"We feel like the fair has grown to the point that folks just can't see all of it in a single day," McKoy said, and fairgoers will find changes designed to make their stay more comfortable.

A survey showed visitors wanted more rest areas and scheduled times and places where they could sit and watch special events.

"They said they didn't know enough about some events at the fair until they were already happening," McKoy said.

So several free concerts, an animal carnival, arts and crafts and other scheduled events are being added to an already lengthy schedule that includes a laser light show, automobile exhibits and two college football games.

"People appreciate the fact they can be entertained and take a load off at the same time," McKoy said. "The same theory holds true at the theme parks. With the fair visit an average of about 6 1/2 hours in length, people need that kind of respite to see more and do more."

Rest areas with seating, shade and hanging baskets and show locations with bleachers have been added at the 277-acre fairgrounds. The spruced-up midway of more than 60 rides features the Texas Star ferris wheel, 212 feet in diameter.

With the theme of "Showin' Off!", this year's fair will feature the U.S. Marine Drum & Bugle Corps of Washington, D.C. in its opening ceremony. Unlike past fairs, a downtown parade will be at noon on opening day instead of on a Saturday.

"Last year, we had in excess of 3.4 million people at the fair, and 24 days without a drop of rain," said Nancy Wiley, director of communications. "That may be too much to ask for two years in a row, but with a break in the weather, we ought to be somewhere in the 3.4 million figure."

The fair is distributing 900,000 free tickets to school children, and several North Texas area districts will take a holiday to attend before the event's last day on Oct. 22, Ms. Wiley said.

The fair fare also includes world champion freestyle skiers, bike stunt riding, a Christian music concert and cookoffs for chili, barbecue ribs and pinto beans. In a special concert, ZZ Top will perform with Santana and the Steve Miller Band.

Other concerts are planned by the Charlie Daniels Band, Ricky Skaggs, the Fabulous Thunderbirds, Marshall Tucker and more as part of the fair ticket price.

And the national touring company production of the musical Cats returns to the Music Hall during the fair.

Aside from some wartime years when Fair Park served as soldiers' temporary encampment, the event has been held every year since 1886. In those years, the fair has been visited by presidents ranging from William Howard Taft to Woodrow Wilson.

The 52-foot-tall Big Tex who greets visitors with announcements of fair events gets a new shirt this year, said Wiley.

"The last one had a burnt orange color and the Oklahoma people felt bad about that," she said, referring to the University of Texas' school color and rivalry with OU. "This year, it's cream colored with blue trim."

Texas faces Oklahoma in the Cotton Bowl on Oct. 13, while Grambling University plays Elizabeth State on Sept. 29.

A nightly parade includes lighted theme floats, the Budweiser Clydesdales and marching bands.

"We began the process of lighting the parade last year," said Wiley. "This year, we improved what we had started."

With all the changes, McKoy said he doesn't want to lose the charm of a state fair.

"We are continuing to devote more time and dollars and spruce up, with more flowers and hanging baskets," he said. "We do not want to be a theme park, but we want to be a very classy state fair."

The year ahead represents a good achievement cycle for you, but you're going to have to work hard to get what you want.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A social involvement in which you aren't too eager to participate could actually turn out to be enjoyable. The problem isn't with the event, it's with you. Major changes are ahead for Libra in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Success is likely today where a joint venture is concerned, but the problems might come with the distributions of the rewards. Be sure everyone involved is treated fairly.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Reason, rather than force, must be used in any testy developments with which you have to deal today. Let your logic dominate your aggressiveness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It's important you have a voice today in matters that could cost you out of pocket. This is an area where others should not be allowed to make decisions for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Strive to be cooperative and think of yourself as part of a team in your involvements with friends today. If you are self serving, you'll stand out like a sore thumb.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You could be very lucky today in fulfilling your ambitious objectives, provided you don't go off on tangents. If you waste your energies on side issues, you won't reach your expectations.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The behavior of someone you like could prove frustrating today, but you'll have the wisdom and judgment to cope with it philosophically without damaging the relationship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Even though you'll have the ability to size up situations accurately, there is still a possibility you may take some measures today that do not serve your best interests. Abide by your evaluations.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A well intentioned friend might tell you something for your own good today which you'll not receive objectively. It's wrong to blame the messenger for the bad news.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You could be a bit luckier than usual today in matters that are meaningful to you materially, but your luck has its limitations, so don't push it too far.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A collective venture in which you're presently involved requires good team players. If you have to deal with a prima donna, it might be wise to send in a substitute.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your chances for achieving an important objective looks good today, provided you keep a low profile. If you are too visible, competitors might shoot you down.

University of North Texas plans gala celebration for 100th birthday

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

DENTON (AP) — In jeans and black tie, boots and blue suede shoes, the University of North Texas celebrates its 100th birthday next month with a song in its heart and money on its mind.

The school, noted for its music program, has invited some 20,000 of its closest friends to whoop it up at a Texas-sized gala offering something for everyone.

Celebrity graduates invited to participate in the $500,000 bash are 1971 Miss America Phyllis George, RoboCop star Peter Weller, Pulitzer Prize-winning author Larry McMurtry and singers Don Henley, Ray Wylie Hubbard, Trini Lopez and Michael Martin Murphy.

Christened the Centennial Extravaganza, the event is designed to showcase the School of Music and celebrate the university's evolution from a sleepy country school to the ninth largest institution in the South.

"This evening is very important in terms of trying to get across many messages about us, the central message being that this is an institution with enormous potential ...," Chancellor Alfred Hurley.

Since its founding in 1890, the school has gone through several role and name changes, most recently in 1987 when North Texas State became the University of North Texas.

UNT itself now has a student enrollment of about 27,000 and ranks fourth in the state behind Texas, Texas A&M and Houston.

With more than 1,400 music majors, many from foreign countries, UNT's College of Music is now one of the largest professional music programs in the world.

It is internationally known for its Grammy-nominated One O'Clock Lab Band, symphony orchestra, A Cappella Choir and Center for Experimental Music and Intermedia.

And if the bash raises an expected $1 million for scholarships, so be it.

"To our knowledge, this is the first event of its kind to be hosted at the university level," Hurley said.

"This is the biggest event ever for North Texas," said UNT regent Lucille "Lupe" Murchison of Dallas, whose idea it was.

Tickets range from $5 to $5,000, depending on your level of generosity and your preference for beer and hot dogs or exquisite wines and exotic food. Wear the uniform of your era.

Regardless, you'll get a seat for an evening of song and dance with music from the Gay '90s, Roaring '20s and the Big Band era right on through Ella, Elvis and Willie.

The celebrity invitation list includes a number of former students who have won acclaim as musicians, politicians, fashion designers and artists.

The Centennial Extravaganza activities will begin at the University of North Texas on Oct. 18.

The celebrity alums also include such well known sports figures as former National Football League stars "Mean" Joe Greene and Ray Renfro and pro golfers Don January and Sandra Palmer.

"Over the years, North Texas has had quite an array of people who have done very, very well," said Robert Blocker, dean of the College of Music and campus coordinator for the event.

Two of the best known alums, television journalist Bill Moyers and singer Pat Boone, claim previous commitments.

Bankrolled with a $500,000 gift from an anonymous donor, the centennial party stems from an idea by Mrs. Murchison, an eminent social lioness and co-chairman of the gala with fellow regent Billie Parker of Fort Worth.

"She was determined to bring to the attention of the people of Texas and the nation what is going on here," Hurley said.

The centennial offered a perfect setting, he said, and the donor made it possible.

"We sensed the opportunity to call attention to what the university is doing and to help us focus people's attention on our potential to serve the region and the state," Hurley said.

Nearly 1,000 students have a role in the festivities, involving not only musicians, singers and dancers but a laser show, lighted floats and a giant fireworks display.

Fashion-design students are designing and producing some 3,000 costumes while students in the hotel and restaurant management program will prepare and serve the formal dinner for VIP patrons.

Jazz groups and other student musicians are lining up to perform at parking lots while visitors await shuttle buses.

"We want a really, really festive atmosphere," Blocker said. "And even though it's entertainment, our job is to tell a story. We're going to do that with music, dance and drama."

"And I'm telling you, it's going to be first-rate."

After the show, UNT's celebrated One O'Clock Lab Band will provide music for VIP dining and dancing under a tent designed to accommodate 2,000.

Visitors without VIP tickets or tastes are invited to a homecoming dance across the street from Fouts Field, the football stadium where the party is being staged.

Coordinating the production is Dallas-based Starlight Entertainment, which has produced Orange Bowl halftime shows and the Cotton Bowl Parade. It also furnished strategic and artistic counsel for the opening and closing of the Seoul Olympics.

Blocker said the donor wanted through "pageantry and festivity ... to celebrate the accomplishments of the past and what we know will be a future marked by success."

The show, with six distinct segments, is designed to trace UNT's evolution from its horse-and-buggy beginning as Texas Normal College and Teachers' Training Institute to its role today.

Hurley said the show also will kick off the public phase of UNT's first capital fund raising campaign, with an initial goal of $35 million.

"I underscore initial," he added, as private fund-raising efforts already have raised half that figure.

Under Hurley's presidency, alumni donors have increased from 1,000 to 10,000 and the moribund university foundation is again fully operative. In Hurley's eight years at the helm, admission standards have been raised three times.

"By the year 2000 we intend to be well on our way to becoming a major national research university," he said.

So strike up the band. It's party time.

Joe VanZandt

The fairly general rains in the Gray County area were certainly welcomed by area farmers and ranchers. The rains will give wheat farmers moisture to plant on although a few fields had already been dry sowed.

Early planted fields of wheat that have already emerged need to be watched closely for armyworms. A field close to Pampa had high levels of armyworms just before the rains started — maybe the rain helped reduce their numbers, but there were a lot of small worms present. Nearly all wheat plants in this field had noticeable feeding damage.

Our immediate area can consider ourselves lucky as a lot of the Panhandle missed out on the rains last week.

Farmers will be busy sowing wheat as fields dry, and also corn harvest is under way as corn grain moisture declines. This rain should help irrigated sorghum farmers as this should furnish adequate moisture for the remaining watering process.

WOODWARD TOUR

Plans to see the latest in grass and beef cattle research at the Southern Plains Range Research Center Station at Woodward, Okla., on Oct. 11 have been arranged in cooperation with the Hutchinson County Extension agent, John Fields.

This will be a really interesting tour by private automobile as we will see a lot of grass research under way on Old World Bluestems (Plains, Spar, Ironmaster), Eastern Gamagrass, Big Bluestem and Texas Bluestem.

One of the tour guides will be Dr. Chet DeWald, agronomist, who heads up most of their grass research — he will help answer a lot of your tough grass questions.

We will also view some of their beef cattle research and hear about some of their research proven management practices by Dr. Phil Simms on their experimental range.

We plan to leave the Gray County Courthouse Annex around 9 a.m. and return late in the afternoon Oct. 11.

Please call us by Oct. 1 to let us know if you are considering going on the day-long tour. Producers from neighboring counties are welcome to travel with us; just contact John Fields, Hutchinson County Extension agent, at 878-2884, or Joe VanZandt, Gray County Extension agent, at 669-8033, so we will have an estimate of how many will be going.

We can still take you if you show up on Oct. 11 before departure time, but we would like to get a preliminary estimate for planning purposes.

RAINFALL ANALYSIS SOFTWARE AVAILABLE

Imagine being able to analyze monthly rainfall records with the simple touch of a computer keyboard.

It's possible with a new software program from the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Long-term rainfall characteristics, including a three-month index, are calculated and compared to current rainfall conditions, according to the software's developer, Larry D. White.

"Rainfall is a key element that determines the success or failure of management decisions of agricultural producers," said White, who also is an Extension range specialist.

"Each management decision must be weighed against the risk of insufficient or excess rainfall," White said. "Producers who use rainfall information should be able to improve many management decisions."

The program utilizes a maximum of 100 years of monthly rainfall data. Results are presented as follows: average monthly rainfall, standard deviation of the average monthly rainfall, maximum annual rainfall, median annual rainfall, current annual rainfall (to date), three-month average rainfall, median three-month average rainfall, current three-month rainfall (to date), and the current three-month average rainfall as a percent of long term.

Results are printed in tables and graphs. Analyses performed by this program can help maintain rainfall records and determine any deviation from normal.

"The program is menu driven, so that few spreadsheet skills are necessary. A manual with each step from data entry, calculation and printing is included. Anyone interested in interpreting rainfall data will find the program user-friendly and invaluable," White said.

"Combining rainfall monitoring and analysis with other management records allow adjustment to potential crisis situations or opportunities," he said.

Actual rainfall records for each ranch or farm location are more accurate than using results from a weather station miles away. However, weather station data may provide a longer-term analysis and may help identify likely trends, White said.

Potential users must have installed the Lotus 1-2-3 software by Lotus Development Corporation, based upon requirements of templates.

The program's cost of $50 covers the expense of materials and any future updates.

Further information is available from White or from Dr. Tom Troxel, Extension livestock specialist, at the Texas A&M Agricultural Research and Extension Center, P.O. Box 1849, Uvalde, TX 78802-1849, telephone (513) 278-9151.

To order the rainfall program, call Donnie Smith at (409) 845-3929.

Cattle fed for slaughter market up 5 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — A monthly report by the Agriculture Department shows that the number of cattle being fed for the slaughter market as of Sept. 1 in the seven major beef states totaled 6.99 million head, up 5 percent from a year ago and 1 percent more than two years ago.

Feedlot inventories were up from a year earlier in Colorado, Iowa, Kansas and Texas. But they declined in Arizona, California and Nebraska.

Marketing of "fed" cattle in August totaled 1.67 million head, down 2 percent from a year ago and 7 percent fewer than two years ago.

The placement of new cattle and calves in fattening pens last month was reported at 1.74 million head, up 6 percent from a year ago and 5 percent more than in September 1988, the report said.

State feedlot cattle inventories are listed here for the seven states, which account for about three-fourths of the nation's beef. The first number is the number of cattle, in thousands, as of Sept. 1, and the second number is the percentage of a year earlier:

Arizona, 165, 96; California, 425, 92; Colorado, 680, 104; Iowa, 760, 110; Kansas, 1,420, 102; Nebraska, 1,540, 97; and Texas, 2,000, 119.

Meat packers used more in inspections

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says it may be ready to put into use within two years a controversial proposal to streamline beef inspections, including the notion of putting greater reliance on packing companies.

Officials hailed a report by the National Academy of Sciences as an important step in the development of the experimental inspection system for cattle slaughter plants.

The academy's report generally supported adoption of the Streamlined Inspection System for cattle — called SIS-C — but had some important qualifications for its approval.

For example, the report said, if the department does rely more heavily on private industry to maintain meat quality, the agency should "concentrate its resources on safety" to guard consumers against microbial and chemical contamination.

"The federal government should design its inspection programs to focus on contemporary health issues," the report said. "It should insist that industry comply with policies and procedures required to protect public health and foster public confidence in the safety of the food supply."

Although supporting the speeded-up inspection system for cattle, the report said the Food Safety and Inspection Service should develop methods for quickly testing carcasses for microbial and chemical contamination.

Farm bills could help soybean producers

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A marketing loan provision in the 1990 farm bills in Congress could help U.S. soybean producers recover a larger share of the overseas market, an Agriculture Department analysis says.

Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter says the marketing loan idea, along with higher price support loan rates for soybeans, would be too expensive.

Yeutter said last week in Chicago that a marketing loan program for soybeans would have "a major budget exposure" and that lawmakers should look it over carefully. The House and Senate have passed versions of a 1990 farm bill, each containing marketing loan provisions for soybeans. A conference is under way to iron out differences in the two massive bills.

Meanwhile, a report by the department's Economic Research Service sheds some optimism on the U.S. soybean situation and suggests "a more favorable environment" is developing for exports.

"Debate on the 1990 farm bill points to likely changes in policies affecting soybeans, while the growth of South American soybean production has slowed," the report said.

Further, farm price supports in the 12-nation European Economic Community are under budgetary pressures. Soybean meal exports by China, a major U.S. competitor, have slipped because of rising domestic use.

Economist Robert Cummings, whose report appeared in the September issue of Agricultural Outlook magazine, said the stagnant U.S. supply had been a major reason for the export problems of recent years.

Drought reduced soybean production in 1980, 1983 and 1988, he said. And farm policy, with higher price support loan rates in the early 1980s for grains and cotton — and no boost for soybeans — made those crops more attractive to farmers in some areas.

The 1985 farm law also put soybeans at a disadvantage relative to grains and cotton in some states, and the bean acreage continued to slide.

for the consumer market.

Lester M. Crawford, FSIS administrator, said the 11-month study by the scientific panel "confirms our ongoing commitment to modernize inspection at cattle slaughter plants is on solid footing."

Crawford said the report shows the experts agree the proposed system "is a single, successful step" toward an optimal scientific inspection program that was envisioned by the academy in a 1985 report to the agency.

Under traditional inspections, federal inspectors check bile ducts, heart, cheek muscles and numerous lymph nodes for disease and other abnormalities. They also are responsible for condemnation and disposition of diseased carcasses, as well as supervising the trimming of undesirable parts.

But under SIS-C, plant employees would incise heart and cheek muscles, position parts for inspectors and assume responsibility for some trimming. Inspectors still would be responsible for condemnation and disposition of diseased carcasses, and still would examine every head, viscera and carcass.

The streamlined inspection system is currently used experimentally in five meat plants using high-speed techniques to slaughter steers and heifers from feedlots.

The report said about 80 of the nation's more than 1,300 USDA-inspected cattle slaughter plants would be eligible to use the system. Those account for an estimated 80 percent of the fed cattle slaughtered

Agency officials said those include two Montfort plants, in Greeley, Colo., and Grand Island, Neb.; two Excel plants, in Friona and Plainview, Texas; and a National Beef plant in Liberal, Kan.

Foreign producers, meanwhile, boosted production and grabbed a larger slice of the world soybean market.

Many soybean farmers have favored a marketing loan program as a means of stabilizing production and regaining some of the lost export ground. Yeutter said he would like to see soybean producers have target prices and deficiency payments like those for wheat, feed grains and cotton.

But "budget considerations made that impractical, so oilseed producers turned to the marketing loan framework" instead, he said.

Cummings said in a telephone interview that it's understandable that farmers would like marketing loans.

For example, he said, if a commodity has a government loan rate of $2 per bushel, and the world market price as published by USDA is $1.50 per bushel, farmers can pay off the loans at $1.50 per bushel. Then, they can sell their crop at the world price of $1.50 per bushel.

That means a net of $2 per bushel, including the 50 cents made on repaying the loan at a lower rate, plus the value of the crop sold at the world price.

Cummings, in his report, said a soybean marketing loan program "would tend to maintain supplies at competitive market prices for export and domestic use whenever the world price dropped below the loan rate."

Generally, he said, marketing loans "discourage accumulation of government stocks" by moving products into commercial channels at prevailing market prices.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Prince enjoys the music of Michael Jackson, MC Hammer, Madonna and even Bruce Springsteen. But the music he likes best is his own.

"I like a lot of people's music, and I'm interested in what's going on, but I don't listen to them," Prince said in an interview in the Oct. 18 Rolling Stone.

"When I'm getting ready to go out, or driving the car, I listen to my own stuff," Prince said in the interview, said to be his first in five years. "That's the way it has always been."

Springsteen's rock may seem to have little in common with Prince's funk, but Prince said he respects the talent.

"I admire the way he holds his audience — there's one man whose fans I could never take away," he said.

CHICAGO (AP) — Millionaire hotelier Leona Helmsley and real estate magnate Donald Trump are having a war of words through Playboy magazine.

In an interview in Playboy's March issue, Trump called Mrs. Helmsley, convicted of tax fraud, "a disgrace to humanity" and a "vicious, horrible woman."

Mrs. Helmsley had her say in an interview in the November issue, calling Trump "a sick, sick, sick, sick boy" and a liar.

For example, Mrs. Helmsley said Trump actually paid $78 million, not the $30 million he claimed, for the St. Moritz Hotel in New York.

"The nerve of this S.O.B., the skunk," she said in excerpts of the interview released Thursday. "I wouldn't believe Donald Trump if his tongue was notarized."

Sentenced to four years in prison and fined $7.1 million, Mrs. Helmsley is free on $25 million bail pending her appeal.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — One of former President Ford's childhood homes is on the auction block.

The Grand Rapids Public Museum decided to sell the house after years of unsuccessful efforts to raise money to renovate it, turn it into a museum or to find a long-term benefactor.

Bidding opens at only $3,000, but museum officials have estimated the house would cost $51,000 to renovate. Interior walls and ceilings are cracked or deteriorated and the house needs major plumbing and electrical work.

Ford lived in the house from 1923, when he was 10, until 1930. He has endorsed the sale, which won't take place before mid-October.

A recommendation to make the home a historic landmark is before the city council. But historians say that may be a problem, as Ford lived in eight homes in the city he came to at age 2.

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Wayne Newton will appeal a federal ruling that overturned the singer's record $5.2 million libel judgment against NBC News for a 1980 broadcast linking him to organized crime.

Lawyers for Newton said the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals "overlooked or misconstrued" some evidence and interpreted other evidence unfairly in favor of NBC in its Aug. 30 ruling.

In a petition asking for a rehearing, the attorneys said that failing to overturn the verdict would "chill the rights of public figures to bring defamation suits against powerful media defendants."

The petition was filed last week, Newton attorney Morton Galane said Thursday.

A jury in Las Vegas found that NBC's story falsely implied that organized crime figures had helped Newton buy the Aladdin Hotel and Casino in exchange for a hidden interest.

It awarded Newton $19.3 million, but that was later reduced to $5.2 million, mostly in punitive damages.

ATLANTA (AP) — Former Mayor Andrew Young would like a spot in promoting the 1996 Summer Olympics, but not as the top administrator or a paid employee.

"I'm not going to be a Peter Ueberroth," Young said, referring to the managerial wizard who turned a $200 million profit for the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics.

Young, who was trounced in an Aug. 7 gubernatorial runoff in the Democratic primary, has been praised as the person most responsible for bringing the Summer Games to Atlanta.

"The saying goes that if the Lord closes a door, he opens a window," Young told The Atlanta Constitution by telephone from Tokyo, where the International Olympic Committee announced the winner on Tuesday.

"This time, the Lord closed a window and opened a door," he said.

Australia moves toward 21st century with three projects

By DENNIS PASSA
Associated Press Writer

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A commercial spaceport, a futuristic city and a 220 mph train are on the drawing board to take Australia into the 21st century.

And federal and state governments are pursuing a politically fail-safe policy by letting private enterprise take most of the economic risk for the projects, estimated to cost $24 billion.

Environmental, social and financial hurdles remain for the projects: — The Cape York spaceport hopes to launch U.S.-made satellites on Soviet rockets to take advantage of the rapidly growing commercial market.

— The city of the future, known by the unwieldy name of Multifunction Polis, is aimed at creating a high-tech center similar to California's Silicon Valley.

— The Very Fast Train would zip passengers the 650 miles from Sydney to Melbourne, Australia's two largest cities, in as little as three hours.

Officials are hoping for U.S. government approval for the spaceport, in northern Queensland state, to use Soviet Zenit rockets to launch American-built satellites.

The Cape York Space Agency, owned by Australia's Essington Ltd., has been waiting for nearly six months for Washington to decide whether to allow Essington's U.S. partner, United Technologies Corp., to take part in the project.

That would give Australian officials the go-ahead for a series of agreements with the Soviets to supply $308 million worth of rockets and technology over the next 10 years.

"It's all systems go, subject to Aboriginal and environmental issues being satisfactorily addressed," said Stephen Williams, general manager of the Cape York agency.

The 80,000-acre site at Temple Bay, 120 miles from the tip of the peninsula, is the traditional home of the Wuthathi and Kuku'au people and the site of the "Stingray Dreaming." Aboriginal legend says the pure white silica sand dunes were created when the stingray came to the area, flipped over and exposed its white underbelly.

The federal and Queensland state governments have approved the project, but say they will not commit funds to it and will ensure that Aboriginal rights and environmental concerns are considered.

Scientists and the government estimate the spaceport could generate $500 million in annual income, with nearly a third staying in Australia.

"Satellites are essential for environmental research, mining and exploration, financial services and sea safety," said Graham Harris, director of the government's Office of Space Science and Applications. "At the moment, we are almost totally dependent on overseas services. We can't afford not to be involved."

When the Australian government began looking for suitable partners for the futuristic city, a consortium of Japanese companies came knocking.

The city would revolve around three to five high-tech industries and provide homes for 150,000 to 200,000 people in Adelaide, in South Australia state.

At least six months of viability and environmental studies are required.

Environmental, route and speed factors seem certain to delay the Very Fast Train until late in the 1990s. Four major companies have formed a consortium for the project, estimated to cost $4.1 billion to $8.2 billion.

Victoria state, of which Melbourne is capital, has said it will not support the project if it chooses a coastal route, siding with environmentalists who are concerned about forests.

New South Wales state, meanwhile, says it won't back the project unless the train is guaranteed of making the 650-mile trip in three hours or less.

Regulators file suit against Neil Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators filed a civil suit Friday against President Bush's son Neil and other officers of the bankrupt Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan Association.

The suit, filed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., seeks damages of $200 million. The suit accuses the directors of "gross negligence," according to a statement by the agency.

"Our conclusion is that Silverado was the victim of sophisticated schemes and abuses by insiders and of gross negligence by its directors and outside professionals," FDIC Senior Deputy General Counsel Douglas H. Jones said in a statement.

Neil Bush served on the board of the institution from August 1985 to August 1988. It was seized by regulators on Dec. 9, 1988. The failure cost taxpayers an estimated $1 billion.

"We are seeking in this case to recover every available dollar for the federal deposit insurance funds and the American taxpayers," Jones said.

The suit was filed in U.S. District Court in Denver. It was released by the FDIC in Washington.

In addition to Bush, officials of the Denver-based Silverado named as defendants were: Michael Wise, chairman and chief executive officer; Robert Lewis, chief financial officer; Richard Vandapool, chief operating officer; Russell Murray, executive vice president; W. James Metz, who owned 88 percent of Silverado's stock, and board members Florian Barth, Richard Bunchman, Diane Ingels, Marjorie Page and Richard Vitkus.

Attorney general candidates battle over role

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Rep. Dan Morales and Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown are both former prosecutors who went on to fight crime in the Legislature.

But that's where the similarity ends between Democrat Morales and Republican Brown, facing each other in election for Texas attorney general.

They don't even agree on the job description for the state's top lawyer.

Morales, from San Antonio, says the attorney general should be an activist, working with legislative leaders and speaking on public policy issues.

He noted Texas has been embroiled in lawsuits in nearly every public policy area, including education, criminal justice and mental health.

"The attorney general ... in my judgment has sort of a comprehensive duty and obligation to involve himself in major areas of public concern," Morales said.

"It's not going to do simply to have another lawyer," he said. "We need an advocate."

But Brown, from Lake Jackson, charges that an activist style has made the attorney general's office too political under Democratic incumbent Jim Mattox, who is leaving office after an unsuccessful bid for governor.

Mattox calls himself "the people's lawyer."

The attorney general should stick to defending the state's laws and leave policy-making to the Legislature, Brown said.

Texans "want a lawyer to be in that job, not a politician, and they want somebody who will defend the state," he said. "And the people who work for the state want an attorney general who will rebuild that office into an effective law office again."

The winner of this race will take a place in history.

State records indicate there never has been a Hispanic attorney general in Texas, and a Republican hasn't held the post at least since Reconstruction.

The job is a big one. The attorney general is involved in antitrust, consumer, environmental and public health lawsuits. The office gives advisory opinions on legal matters, and administers the child support enforcement program.

District and county attorneys have the primary responsibility for criminal cases, but the attorney general can provide assistance at their request.

Both Brown and Morales have carried anti-crime measures in the Legislature, where Morales has headed the House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee and Brown has been vice chairman of the Senate Criminal Justice Committee.

If elected attorney general, Brown says he would create a "strike force" of state prosecutors to help local district attorneys in drug cases.

Morales says the attorney general should deal with problems underlying prison crowding litigation, such as prison capacity, early release and parole statutes, and education.

Both also have worked on other issues. Morales sponsored a $5.7 billion tax increase in 1987 that backers said was needed to fend off cuts in state services.

Brown, elected to the Senate in 1980, sponsored the state "Lemon Law" used by people with faulty vehicles. He also cites other achievements, such as legislation to protect sand dunes and a measure giving child support and visitation guidelines.

Because there is a constitutional prohibition against midterm legislators seeking offices for which they have raised the compensation, Brown had to overcome a legal challenge to enter the attorney general's race.

Morales Brown

The Supreme Court ruled that even though the attorney general's retirement pay was raised, that doesn't constitute an "emolument" and doesn't bar Brown from running.

Brown, 49, worked as a Brazoria County prosecutor for nearly four years before going into private practice in 1972. He says that's an advantage over Morales, who has less legal experience.

Morales, 34, worked as a Bexar County prosecutor in 1983-85, after a year in private practice in Houston.

He was elected to the House in 1984, and says he has provided free legal services to constituents since becoming a lawmaker.

During the campaign, Brown has been on the attack.

He's accused Morales of being a big spender in the Legislature, noting the $5.7 billion tax increase sponsored by the Democrat.

He's criticized Morales for voting this summer against a sales tax increase Brown supported for public schools.

And he's called Morales anti-business.

Morales says the tax increase is paying for important services, such as education and public health.

He points out that when he sponsored the measure, he said he wouldn't support another sales tax increase because he considers that levy regressive and too high.

Morales says he has support from business people. But he adds, "I am against irresponsible members of the business community."

Polls show Morales ahead. However, the race could be influenced by something Brown and Morales can't control: the top of the ballot.

GOP gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams is leading Democrat Ann Richards in polls, and Republican incumbent U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm is shown far ahead of Democratic challenger Hugh Parmer.

"If Phil and Claytie do as well as the polls are showing that they're going to do, then I expect that there will be some coattail effect," Brown said.

Morales said he isn't worried about that, optimistically predicting victory for Richards and a good chance for Parmer.
