United Way's campaign drive reaches 31 percent at latest check-in meeting

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Pampa United Way boosted its campaign pledges to 31 percent of the $332,000 goal at the check-in Thursday, thanks in part to IRI International pledging 10 percent of the goal, or $33,101.

The Thursday meeting was the fifth check-in for the campaign, headed this year by Jack Gindorf. It was held at the Pampa Meals on Wheels offices in the First United Methodist Church and co-hosted by Meals on Wheels, High Plains Epilepsy Association and Pampa Family Services.

Also recognized Thursday were employees of First National Bank, who reported 100 percent participation and pledges of 10 percent above last year's pledges.

The total amount of pledges stands at $103,875.

"Things are looking up," Gindorf said following the tally of the day's check-in.

However, Gindorf said he was concerned about an attitude he has seen in Pampa during the last two weeks. "This concerns me more than whether we meet our goal or not," Gindorf said.

He explained that he believes some people have lost sight of a positive attitude. He said concerning the United Way that there are a number of excuses volunteers have heard and a number of doors have been slammed in their faces.

"We have lost our positive attitude," Gindorf said.

He said some of the excuses people have been giving for not contributing to United Way are "times are tough, my prison contributions are due and the price of oil is going up."

But Gindorf said, "Those are things that happen in the world every day... We need to tell about the good things that are going on in United Way, that's the story we have to tell."

Each of the three agencies sponsoring the check-in was given a chance to speak briefly about their programs.

Betty Brown with High Plains Epilepsy Association said the organization has been an agency since 1972. Brown, who went to work in 1975, said the agency has been a part of Pampa United Way since 1977.

The United Way funds 100 percent of the epilepsy association's program, which services about 90 people in Pampa each year.

"We provide virtually anything regarding epilepsy needs," Brown said, such as medication, testing, counseling, transportation, specialized services and referrals.

Brown said her association appreciates the American Red Cross, another United Way agency, for providing office space.

"I'd like to express my appreciation to everyone working in the campaign," Brown said. She also said Gindorf was doing a "splendid job" as campaign chairman.

Dr. Bin Gilbert with Pampa Family Services said Texas ranks 47th or 48th in services it provides to people with mental illnesses. He said his agency is a mental health center servicing Gray, Roberts and Wheeler counties.

"We provide evaluation, diagnosis, treatment, after-care services and are a screening agent for state hospitals," Gilbert said.

All work done by the agency is kept confidential and the agency works closely with other psychiatric facilities in the Panhandle.

"We are greatly appreciative of the support from United Way, not just the dollars, but support you give us to boost our morale," he said.

Ann Loter, director of Meals on Wheels, said she believed every director of a United Way agency could speak for a long time on the needs of their respective programs and the people served by the programs.

However, Loter said instead that she wanted to publicly recognize a number of people, including the board of directors for her agency, office staff, kitchen staff, and "each and every United Way volunteer."

Meals on Wheels, which provides a noon meal to numerous people in the city, has a $109,000 budget in 1990-91.

"You can see how heavily we depend on you," Loter said. "We really cannot do it without you. We appreciate every call you make and every hour you make on our behalf."

Loter described the people served by Meals on Wheels as "ordinary people in extraordinary situations, situations not of their choosing."

She then presented a slide show, set to music, showing people who are served by the program each week.

"I'd like you to meet these folks," she said. "You are making a difference in their lives."

The Pampa United Way campaign continues through this month with the last check-in scheduled for Nov. 1.

Lawmakers tailoring own budgets as Bush stance remains blurred

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Lawmakers of both parties are churning out their own budget plans, and Democrats and Republicans seem headed for a fight over how America will bear the pain of deficit reduction.

Budget proposals sprouted all over Capitol Hill on Thursday as members of Congress, frustrated by President Bush's blurry position on taxing the rich, began honing packages on their own.

House Democrats worked on a plan that would hit the wealthy hard, while Republicans refined a proposal that included a cut in the capital gains tax.

"It's up to Congress," said House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif. "We're kind of moving on that kind of approach."

The frenzy of budget-writing was aimed at finding $500 billion worth of tax boosts and spending cuts for the next five years that Congress could send to Bush by Oct. 19. The government's legal ability to spend money ends that day, and the president has vowed to allow a government shutdown like the one that occurred last weekend unless lawmakers send him a budget he likes.

Just a day after the full House Ways and Means Committee produced one plan, the panel's Democrats worked on another that raised income taxes on the rich and eased the burden on the poor and middle class. It contained no reduction in the capital gains tax, but Democrats said they might add one.

"This plan is both bold and fair," said committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill.

House Republicans crafted their own measure. It would lower the capital gains tax rate to 15 percent and boost the income tax rate on the wealthy from 28 percent to 31 percent. The capital gains tax - applied to profits on sales of property and other investments - now is handled the same as other income and has a top rate of 33 percent.

Bush said he favored the swap, but was giving up on it because of tenacious opposition by Democrats.

"The meter is running, but look, I can't dictate to Congress," he conceded.

That sent Republicans back to the drawing board.

"We've got to give our guys something to be for," said House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill.

The Ways and Means plan, and the Democratic and Republican alternatives, seemed headed for a clash on the House floor next week. Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said Democrats and Republicans were itching to show what they stand for.

"There's a great deal of desire on the part of members to express their views about what their preferences would be if they weren't constrained by compromises," Foley said.

Things seemed less partisan in the Senate, where Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, refined his own proposal in an effort to draw GOP support. The new plan dropped proposals to cut the capital gains tax and raise income taxes on the wealthy.

The latest version would limit itemized deductions for people with incomes over $100,000 a year; raise to $125,000 the maximum amount of annual wages subject to the tax that finances Medicare; and allow monthly premiums paid by Medicare beneficiaries to rise more slowly than budget summit negotiators had proposed last month.

Rostenkowski's plan would impose a 33 percent income tax rate on the wealthiest Americans - the same tax rate already paid by those who are almost as well-to-do.

The rich would face a 10 percent surtax on income surpassing $1 million. The minimum tax paid by the wealthy after all exemptions and deductions, now 21 percent, would rise to 25 percent.

The plan also would increase the gasoline tax by 3 cents per gallon, 8 cents less than the full Ways and Means proposal. The federal tax on gasoline now is 9 cents per gallon.

Barker: Teen rehabilitation causing problems

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Gray County's director of juvenile probation and the director of Genesis House are exchanging accusations this week over the caliber of teen-agers housed at the facility and the level of problems they cause for the city.

Ed Barker, supervisor of the county juvenile probation department for seven years, charged this week that two Genesis House runaways' involvement in a local burglary ring is only the latest example of the rehabilitation center unleashing the state's delinquents on Pampa.

Lois Still, Genesis House director, alleged that Barker is "out of touch with reality" and has a vendetta against the home she began 20 years ago for troubled youth.

Barker said his experience is that Genesis House takes in many severely troubled youth who commit crimes while in Pampa, for which local taxpayers must bear the burden.

"These kids are not Gray County kids," Barker said. "They are from someplace else and they were in Genesis House and are now out of the realm of Genesis House rules and guidelines and Genesis House wants taxpayers here to pay $75 a day (each) to transport them (to the regional juvenile detention center in Amarillo)."

"It doesn't take a mathematician to figure out that (for the two Genesis House runaways involved in the burglary ring) they want us to pay $150 a day for two kids. Ten days of that is $1,500 of Gray County taxpayers' money. (Gray County Commissioners Court) only budgeted $2,400 for the whole year for residential juvenile services. That would have busted fifteen-hundred of it before I had ever gotten out of the gate."

Barker said he has told officials from the Texas Youth Commission, one of the agencies placing youths in Genesis House, that "Gray County taxpayers are not going to pay when (Genesis House) is the recipient of TYC's daily fees. Why don't you ask Genesis House to pay?"

"(A TYC representative) said, 'Oh no, they wouldn't pay it over there,' and my question was, 'Why should we pay it when we are the scapegoat for Genesis House kids who steal cars, break into homes and run off from here?'" Barker continued. "Her answer was that Gray County kids are at other places and they pay for them there."

However, Barker said Gray County has absorbed all expenses for its youths who get into trouble and are sent to homes in Hollis, Okla.; Waco and Lubbock.

"They have never been an expense to anybody in another county," Barker stated. "So I guess I chafe a little bit with Gray County getting stuck with Genesis House tallows."

Barker estimated that "90 percent of what happens with Genesis House kids is never reported, whether it be car thefts, burglaries of homes, stealing something, most of it is never reported to the newspaper."

Barker said, "When those two (Genesis House) kids assaulted the teacher at the high school last year, I immediately had them taken into custody. Genesis House and TYC wanted us to put them in Potter County juvenile detention center and I refused to do it. That crime was never handled in our court because they drove from Lubbock and picked them up. Why should we pay when they bring in kids from other places who commit crimes here?"

Barker said when a Genesis House resident set fire to the girls' dormitory during the summer, "They wanted us to put the ringleader in Potter County (detention). She wound up being in there for about 10 days and it would have run us about $750. I personally think that if Genesis House is going to get state funds, they ought to pay to hold those kids in juvenile detention and for any type of transportation. And if, down the line, there are property losses, they ought to be responsible for them."

"If your child or mine went out and destroyed something, as their legal guardians, we would be responsible," Barker said. "If Genesis House is getting these funds, they ought to be responsible for paying for some of the damages their kids cause."

Still took exception to Genesis House residents being referred to as criminals, though she conceded several have committed crimes while here.

Barker said Genesis House has runaways virtually every month. This year police have taken reports of 15 runaways.

With Genesis House handling approximately 35 teen-agers a year, that puts the runaway rate for the year at 42 percent, with two months to go.

Gunfire kills Egyptian parliament speaker, three guards

By NEJLA SAMMAKIA
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) - Gunmen today killed the parliament speaker and three security men outside a downtown hotel. The attack came after the government warned that terrorists might strike to punish Egypt for its opposition to Iraq.

There was no claim of responsibility for the attack by gunmen on motorcycles, but the interior minister said he suspected Egyptian Moslem fundamentalists or foreigners.

Rifaat el-Mahgoub, 64, speaker of the People's Assembly and the second ranking politician after the president, was shot as he sat in the rear of his chauffeur-driven Mercedes. Interior Minister Abdel-Halim Moussa said. The gunmen then fled as other security men returned their fire, Moussa said.

The shooting occurred as el-Mahgoub's car drove by the Hotel Semiramis Inter-Continental, a block from the U.S. Embassy. The speaker was heading for a hotel about 1 1/2 miles away where he was to meet a Syrian delegation.

Moussa told reporters that four young assailants attacked el-Mahgoub's vehicle and an accompanying security car from two Suzuki motorbikes.

Three escaped on the bikes, he said. They rode through a nearby underpass in front of the hotel, speeding against the traffic on the one-way street.

The fourth ran into a densely populated area nearby and disappeared. He wounded two bystanders who tried to stop him, Moussa said.

The minister, confirming earlier reports, said two security men were killed in el-Mahgoub's car and another in a security car traveling behind him.

An hour after the shooting, el-Mahgoub's black Mercedes sat outside the hotel, its rear window and right front window smashed. One of the two slain bodyguards in the car lay in the front seat, his head torn apart by gunfire.

A second car - a Peugeot - was stopped about 200 yards away, a man's body hanging onto the roadway from the rear seat. That man also was identified as a member of a security detail traveling with el-Mahgoub.

All streets were blocked around the 28-story hotel, one of the newest and poshest in Cairo. Police at the scene said little, but a bystander who said he saw the attack reported that an unknown number of assailants fled on motorbikes.

At the Interior Ministry, responsible for Egypt's domestic security, Col. Sayed Rashad said he knew nothing more than that a black Mercedes had been attacked.

He said Interior Minister Abdel-Halim Moussa was at the scene.

The shooting occurred 90 minutes before Moussa was to have briefed reporters on the outcome of a national referendum on Thursday. The balloting was to decide whether President Hosni Mubarak would be allowed to dissolve the People's Assembly and call new elections.

Moussa warned before the referendum that Iraqis and other Arabs had infiltrated the country to destabilize the government through terror attacks including assassinations. Egypt has led Arab opposition to Iraq's annexation of Kuwait.

Barker

Still admitted that 1990 has seen a lot of runaways, but said such incidences have been unusually high.

Statistics provided by Pampa police, coordinated with Genesis House figures, indicate that over the last four years, on average, one in every four youths helped by Genesis House has run away.

"I've got report after report of kids running away from there," Barker said. "Not every one of them commits a crime. But Genesis House is of no particular value to Gray County, yet we suffer from having to transport and house and feed these kids and deal with the messes that come from those kids living here."

"As far as Gray County supplying services for the kids of Texas, we don't supply that, except to our own kids," he said. "But as far as Genesis House, that's big business over there."

Barker said the entire concept of rehabilitation, such as is offered by Genesis House, is generally not effective, in his opinion.

However, officials from the facility claim a 75 percent success rate.

"The recidivism rate is very high, whether it's Genesis House or any other group home in the state," Barker charged. "They were committed to TYC and they were then sent to Genesis House. The best studies on rehabilitation of the criminal mind is that rehabilitation is very unsuccessful, though our system says that's what we do, rehabilitate."

Still took exception with numerous comments by Barker, including the suggestion that Genesis House is dealing with criminals.

She admitted that most Genesis House youths had been drug users, but said they "are not addicts." She also said teen-agers there are not criminals, but rather misguided teens who are helped back onto the right path.

Still said that over the last 20 years, the type of teens Genesis House deals with have not changed that much.

In spite of the fact that teen-age murders are now commonplace in the state, increasing the level of serious crimes youths are involved in, Genesis House's charges have not become a more intense breed of juvenile delinquent, Still stated.

"They are kids that are expected to do well under supervision," she said. "They are not hardened criminals in any case. They are totally supervised. The only place they can get drugs is in our public schools. Our two (most recent) runaways were this type of young people."

Those two juveniles ran away on Sept. 28 and were not picked up until 11 days later, when they were charged with participating in a local burglary ring.

However, Still said Genesis House informed Pampa police of tips they had regarding the two boy's whereabouts, 1111 1/2 S. Hobart, the same address where they were later picked up.

"On October Third we called Katie Morse, the juvenile officer and told her that our kids had been seen at 1111 1/2 S. Hobart," Still said. "She told me that she set up a surveillance and our kids were not seen anywhere. We assumed they had gone on home."

Regarding the burglary ring, Still said she believes the two Genesis House youths were unfairly singled out because they are charges of the state. She also said that local authorities compound Genesis House problems by not coming down hard on those who harbor runaways.

"It says here that this is a teen burglary ring," Still said, pointing at a copy of The Pampa News. "Why didn't they do anything to the adults living in that house? Don't tell me they weren't involved."

Police have said that numerous teen-agers and adults live at the residence in a "casual" arrangement. Officials also said they cleared adults at the residence of any involvement in the burglary ring.

"Our kids found out about that place at (Pampa High) school," she said. "One of the boys (who lived on South Hobart) gave one of our boys a joint to smoke. Our kids didn't do anything until they got with kids at that school. That's no reflection on the school. But (the newspaper) makes it look like we're bringing a criminal element in here to put on Pampa. That's not true. We try to protect our kids from some of the things going on here in Pampa."

"Pampa is a great place to live, but we need somebody to tell the whole story. I'm saying that our law enforcement should flesh out these places. Pampa kids know where to go to get in trouble and they tell our kids."

Still said if police would be tougher on adults who involve juveniles in drugs and/or crime, there would be less crime in the city. She also said Barker is wearing blinders regarding the amount of drug abuse and teen-age crime in Pampa.

Genesis House board member Ray Hupp, also a city commissioner, and Still recently visited Barker seeking support of a state grant for drug counseling in the city.

Still and Hupp both charged Barker with denying there was a drug problem in the city.

Barker, on the other hand, said Hupp wanted him to confirm untrue statistics regarding the number of drug-plagued youth he personally has dealings with.

"I'm not saying there is not a drug problem," Barker said. "I'm saying that I couldn't confirm what they wanted me to confirm so they could get more state money, another big grant. And Ray Hupp just got furious with me."

Still said of the encounter, "Mr. Barker has a grudge against us and I don't know why. We have always wanted to work with him. He is not facing reality, though, as to how serious the problems are in Pampa, if he thinks (Genesis House) kids are bringing in all of this stuff from the outside."

"I would like for Gray County to support us," Still said.

"Of TYC's request that Barker arrange transportation and detention facilities for the two Genesis House youths involved in the burglaries, Still said, "This was a Pampa place that these last two were staying at when they got into this. And it was with Pampa kids, so (the TYC) felt Pampa police should drive them over to (the detention center in Amarillo)."

"If there is a problem with Pampa or Gray County, we will absorb the cost immediately," Hupp promised. "That hasn't been a contested issue that I know of."

However, Barker alleged Genesis House has not been willing, up to now, to "clean up their own spills."

"Our problem with Mr. Barker is that he told our counselor there were no drugs in Pampa unless Genesis House kids brought them in," Still said. "I'm not sure that he understands the true extent of the drug problem here," Hupp said.

Barker said he was well aware of the existing problems, but that those included ones involving Genesis House residents.

Administrators from Pampa High School said their experiences with Genesis House residents have generally been quite positive.

However, several teachers privately expressed concerns about dealing with certain young people from the facility.

"There are some kids from right here in Pampa that teachers have reservations about, though," responded Principal Daniel Coward. "The problems certainly aren't limited to Genesis House."

Officials from the Pampa Police Department declined to speculate on the amount of problems caused by Genesis House youths, citing only statistics that showed runaways from the facility.

Because juvenile records are protected by law, an actual picture of the number of crimes Genesis House residents commit, compared to the per capita comparison of crimes committed by Gray County youth, was unavailable.

Barker said while he is not opposed to Genesis House, he is opposed to "them washing their hands of these kids the minute they get into trouble."

"Suddenly they become our problem," he asserted.

Still responded, "That is no problem and I don't know why he is making it a problem. (The two involved in the burglaries) have been sent back to TYC, but that place (1111 1/2 S. Hobart) is still there and our next group is going to meet those same people and be enticed by them. Those people were harboring teen-agers and there is not one thing can I do about it. Their hands are not even slapped."

Police arrest arson suspect in fatal apartment complex fire

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Police say a man charged with setting a fire that destroyed an apartment complex, killing a 15-month-old child and injuring nine persons, was angry over an uncollected $8 debt.

Bruce Wayne Campbell, 30, of Austin was jailed on $75,000 bail and charged with arson. The fire early Thursday morning ripped through the La Villita apartment complex and left about 50 people homeless.

Police believe the fire was sparked by a flare gun belonging to Campbell, who seen arguing with tenants over an $8 debt before the fire began, said homicide detective Michael Huckabay.

Police said they would continue searching through the rubble of the complex in search of others who were unaccounted for. They said charges against Campbell, a former tenant at the complex, may be increased to homicide.

Witnesses told police they had seen Campbell, who had been a boyfriend of a former manager at the complex, with a flare gun outside the apartments minutes before the fire broke out just before 2 a.m.

Firefighters said a flare gun fired into kerosene could cause such an intense fire.

The body of the 15-month old child was found Thursday afternoon. Witnesses said the infant was a girl.

The child's parents suffered burns and were in critical condition at Brooke Army Medical Center's burn unit in San Antonio, officials said.

They were first taken to Brackenridge Hospital in Austin where officials identified them as Emmett Jackson, 34, and Diathia Reeder, 35. Spokeswoman Robin Griffin said the man and woman were burned over 75 percent to 80 percent of their bodies.

Terri Valko, a resident at the apartments, said she saw Ms. Reeder running away from the apartments.

"All of her skin was on fire," she said.

Fire officials used shovels and even got on their hands and knees looking for victims, witnesses said.

Sally Muir of the city's Emergency Medical Service, said reports from the scene had identified four others who could not be accounted for, "but that is not to say they were in the rubble."

Ms. Muir said investigators were using a diagram drawn by a resident of the complex to try to account for occupants.

Two people were admitted to Brackenridge. Ms. Griffin identified them as Jesus Silva, 26 who was in fair condition and Blanca Gonzales, 19, who was in serious condition.

Ms. Muir said Ms. Gonzales, 6 1/2 months pregnant, and Silva jumped from a second-story window. She said the woman suffered from smoke inhalation, and Silva had a fractured wrist.

A spokesman at Saint David's Hospital said two people were treated and released. Ms. Muir said three people also were treated at the scene.

Austin firefighter Zig Vreeland said 27 trucks and 71 firefighters battled the blaze.

A six-block area surrounding the fire was blocked off as firefighters doused the fire in the two-story, 24-unit apartment complex.

One man said he threw rocks at windows to wake people.

An emergency shelter was set up at an elementary school to house those left homeless by the blaze, officials said.

Police said the fire started in an apartment that was vacant. Police spokeswoman Gail Phillips said Campbell had lived in the apartment at one time.

No damage estimate was immediately available.

The first alarm came in at 1:58 a.m. and it had reached five alarms by 2:15 a.m. It was extinguished before 5 a.m.

Williams, Richards exchange salvos in rare joint appearance Thursday

By DARRYL EWING
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Democrat Ann Richards says she's gaining on Republican Clayton Williams in the polls for governor, and she says that's because Williams' mouth keeps getting him in trouble.

The Williams campaign has been plagued by his comments about rape and being "serviced" by prostitutes.

On Thursday, he called Richards a liar during a rare joint appearance.

Williams used the appearance before the Greater Dallas Crime Commission to lash out at Richards for trying to link him to a federal investigation into alleged drug money laundering.

As a crowd of more than 1,000 filed into a ballroom at the Loews Anatole hotel, Williams told a companion about the planned confrontation, then walked to Richards' side of the dais and stepped up to her.

She extended her hand, but he refused to shake it.

"I'm here to call you a liar today," Williams said.

"I'm sorry, Clayton," Ms. Richards responded.

Williams interrupted: "That's what you are. You've lied about me; you've lied about Mark White and you've lied about Jim Mattox (two of Ms. Richards' primary opponents.)"

"I'm going to finish this deal today, and you can count on it," he said.

Ms. Richards said, "That's too bad... not very sportsmanlike."

Richards defeated White and Mattox in a bitter Democratic primary.

When asked if he had indeed called Richards a liar, Williams responded: "Yes, I did. The truth hurts."

Asked why he refused to shake hands, Williams said, "A handshake is a sign of trust. I withdraw that trust."

"There is a line that she's crossed. The latest assault on my bank is so unreasonable that it's time to throw down the gauntlet."

The two candidates had not faced each other at the same event since mid-July.

"His campaign has not been able to shield him as much as they would like," Richards said. "When he talks he gets in trouble."

At a news conference Wednesday, Richards cited a newspaper report which said federal agents were investigating allegations against a Houston loan broker, Lloyd G. Williams Jr., who reportedly has done business with Clay-Desta National Bank, the Midland bank owned by the Republican nominee.

Richards responded to Williams comment simply by saying, "I think it was unkind."

But she added: "I guess I don't understand what he means that I've been lying."

"I think it's important that Clayton Williams tell the people of Texas exactly what kind of businessman he is."

Williams' press secretary Gordon Hensley said Clayton Williams "has answered questions in a very forthright manner. He said he does not know the man (Lloyd Williams)."

Lloyd Williams, no relation to the GOP candidate, said Wednesday he had nothing to do with alleged money laundering and that he was puzzled by the inquiry. He also said he didn't know Clayton Williams and only met him once, at a fundraising event last spring.

Lloyd Williams told the Houston Chronicle he had acted as an FBI "operative" for more than 10 years. "Why they are now coming at me, I don't know," he said.

Richards suggested that the investigation may be why Williams won't debate her. She also contends that she has gained up to six points on her GOP challenger in the latest polls.

"I think we have the momentum, and we're going to peak just right," she said.

Richards says she's gaining on Williams because "we're now on an equal playing field" and because she's been able "to tell my side of the story" in campaign ads.

The Chronicle reported this week that Lloyd Williams' primary source of income comes from working with auto dealers to arrange financing for car buyers with credit problems.

Last June, Lloyd Williams began arranging such loans through Clay-Desta National, the newspaper reported.

The Chronicle said investigators are looking into alleged laundering of drug proceeds through Fallbrook National Bank and Columbia Savings, both closed last year by federal regulators.

In other developments Thursday:

•Democratic lieutenant governor candidate Bob Bullock reported adding $1.7 million to his campaign war chest, $600,000 more than GOP opponent Rob Mosbacher. The figures came from Bullock's campaign finance report filed with the secretary of state. Mosbacher had reported raising $1.1 million between July and the end of September.

•Kay Bailey Hutchison, Republican candidate for state treasurer, said she would seek to control state debt that has risen dramatically in recent years. "State debt is now increasing at a 400 percent rate each three years... There is not an effective, independent debt management system in place," she said.

•The campaign director for GOP Court of Criminal Appeals candidate Oliver Kitzman criticized incumbent Democrat Sam Houston Clinton over a study that said Clinton votes to overturn convictions 64 percent of the time in key cases.

'Democrats Day in McLean' set for Saturday

McLEAN — McLean Democrats will be out in full force on Saturday in an attempt to stir up interest and support for Democratic candidates in the upcoming general election on Nov. 6.

Calling it "Democrats Day in McLean," party activists have planned a number of activities to put their candidates in touch with voters.

According to Democratic precinct committeeman Bill Graham, a number of area candidates and their families will be on hand to join local Democrats in the day's events.

Beginning at 4 p.m., a community-wide canvass of households will take place with door-knockers fanning out to every street in McLean. Anyone interested in joining the door-knocking should come to the Lions Club at 3:30 p.m. Saturday for instructions.

At 5:30 p.m., a 20-car caravan will depart from City Park in McLean to parade through the streets of the town in the spirit of an old-time "whistlestop" campaign.

The caravan will actually stop after its route through the city at the town center where an old-fashioned rally atmosphere will be the backdrop for candidate speeches at the bank parking lot.

Following that, there will be a covered-dish dinner at 6:30 p.m.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

German milestone worth celebrating

Another milestone was marked earlier this month in the end of the Cold War: the unification of Germany. The country, for the first time in history, has a successful, prosperous democracy, although the old East Germany is being rebuilt. Germany's first experiment in democracy, the Weimar Republic of 1919 to 1933, ended in hyperinflation and Hitler. But several heavy loads weighed down on Weimar: the humiliation and war reparations following Germany's incompetently run money supply, and little experience with democracy.

Today's Germany has no such loads, and is strongly inoculated against a new Hitler. Germans, hyper about reintroducing hyperinflation, tightly control the money supply. By most accounts, they want to be peaceful leaders of a worldwide free market, not goose-stepping tyrants. And they know that a new war would bring mass destruction to Germany's densely populated territory.

Demographic reality also would prevent Germany, should it go beserk, from doing much damage. Its population of 80 million is one-third that of the United States, half that of Russia (as distinct from the Soviet Union). Its economy is only one-fifth that of the United States. Even more telling, the German birth rate is just 1.1 per woman, half the maintenance reproduction rate of 2.2. That means Germany's population is shrinking rapidly, and there just wouldn't be enough young men to use as cannon fodder in a new war. If this trend continues — and there's no sign it will stop — a century from now Germany's population would be half as large. And if neighboring Poland's population continues to grow, in a century Poland would have more people.

So the rest of the world has little to worry about a united Germany becoming an international predator. Instead, Germany will probably act as an anchor of the unified European economy, using its immense financial resources to convert to a free market first the former East Germany, then the newly freed communist countries of Eastern Europe, and finally Russia, probably after it has separated from the satellites that make up the crumbling Soviet Empire.

How does the United States fit in? Despite all the action in Europe and Asia, we continue to maintain the world's largest integrated economy. And despite the repressive 1986 immigration law, our economy remains more open to the invigorating new blood of immigration than does any in the world. It is to the United States, not Germany or France, that aspiring young Chinese, Indian and Korean computer minds go to work out their inventions. America must only make sure it doesn't sabotage its own competitive position through immigration controls, protectionism and high taxes.

As to Germany's unification, Americans should hoist a schooner of beer and shout, Prosit!

But the judges had changed

WASHINGTON — Thirty-odd years ago, Eric Sevareid of CBS recorded an interview with Justice Hugo Black. Today, in the week that will see David Souter succeeding William Brennan on the U.S. Supreme Court, one telling moment of that interview may usefully be recalled.

Only a few years before the interview, the court had decided Brown v. Board of Education. In that landmark case, a unanimous court put an end to state laws enforcing racial segregation. Sevareid gently needled his subject. After all, he noted, 60 years had elapsed between the Plessy case of 1896, upholding the rule of "separate but equal," and the Brown case of 1954, in which the rule was summarily abandoned. In this period, Sevareid remarked, the Constitution had not changed by a relevant comma. How could the meaning of the Constitution have changed so dramatically?

Black tented his fingers and smiled. In the soft accents of Ashland, Ala., he made a reply for the ages. "That's right, Mr. Sevareid," he said, "that's right. The Constitution hadn't changed — but the judges had changed."

When Souter takes his seat, unless all the commentators are greatly mistaken, we will embark upon a period in which the Constitution significantly changes. The key words of the Constitution will not have changed. The 14th Amendment still will speak of "liberty" and the First Amendment still will prohibit an "establishment of religion." But the composition of the court will have changed.

Souter went out of his way during his confirmation hearings to lavish praise upon the departed Brennan. This was lapidary stuff, not to be taken seriously. Brennan and Souter look at the Constitution from opposite poles.

James J. Kilpatrick

Over the past 10 years at least, Brennan brilliantly led the liberal wing. The warmth of his personality combined with the sharpness of his mind. Brennan's gift was to charm the birds out of the trees. He could count on Justice Marshall and Blackmun almost all of the time; he could win Steven's vote most of the time. In six of the 37 cases that were decided 5-4 in the 1989 term, Brennan picked up the vote of Justice White to put together a winning coalition.

With his resignation, Brennan leaves a vacuum behind. The laws of physics do not apply. Nothing is going to fill the vacuum. Marshall is 82, a burned-out volcano. Blackmun will be 82 in November; he was born to follow, not to lead. Stevens, at 70, has none of Brennan's easy manner; he has a way of writing dissents in a tone of petulant carping that gains him neither friends nor respect. The liberal wing barely flutters.

This will become clear as the term moves along. Most casual observers of the high court see only the formal, written opinions. There were 129 of these in the past term. The unseen often counts for as much as the seen. Under the court's traditional procedure, an appeal will not be accepted unless at least four justices vote to put it on the docket. Four affirmative votes are often hard to come by. On Monday of last week, the court granted only 27 petitions for review — 27 out of 1,200 petitions that were pending.

With Brennan no longer on hand to vote for review of really touchy cases, a number of sensitive issues may not be taken up at all. Lower court decisions will be left in force. On other questions, dear to the conservative heart, Souter may cast a fourth vote to hear the cases argued.

The shaping of the Constitution begins behind the locked doors of a Friday conference. Here the court sets its agenda and the chief justice assigns the writing of majority opinions. Here in conference the first impact will be felt of a changing of the judges.

One other truism should be kept in mind. Historically, justices have refused to be tied. They will not be tied to ideology or to the presidents who chose them. Given life tenure, they are responsible to no one.

Their only restraint, as Owen Roberts once remarked, is their own sense of self-restraint. Souter predictably will serve in this tradition. If he proves as consistently conservative as Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, those of us in the conservative camp should not complain.

Tides ebb and tides flow. Over a period of 35 years, extending roughly from 1935 through 1970, liberals could look forward to a term of court in a sense of pleasant anticipation. Their justices set the agenda. Earl Warren and Bill Brennan wrote the key opinions. They effectively changed the Constitution. With Souter aboard, it's the conservatives' turn.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Oct. 12, the 285th day of 1990. There are 80 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 12, 1492, Christopher Columbus discovered America as his ships arrived in the present-day Bahamas.

On this date:

In 1861, the Confederate ironclad Manassas attacked the northern ship Richmond on the Mississippi River.

In 1870, Gen. Robert E. Lee, the Confederate military commander, died in Lexington, Va., at age 63.

In 1915, addressing the Knights of Columbus in New York, former President Theodore Roosevelt criticized himself by dual nationalities (such as "German-Americans" or "Irish-Americans"), saying, "There is no room in this country for 'hyphenated Americanism.'"

In 1933, bank robber John Dillinger escaped from a jail in Allen County, Ohio, with the help of his gang, who killed the sheriff.

She came in just to say thanks

It was hot, muggy day in San Juan Capistrano, Calif., when Deborah Anne Turner's '78 station wagon blew a tire on the California freeway and crashed into a center divider fence, thus flattening a second tire.

Turner's first thought was her six small youngsters in the car. Were they all right? They were all right.

But everything else was wrong. Her husband had left her. She had to get one of the children to the dentist, so she had to take all six.

She had no money in her purse and almost none to her name.

How would she ever afford new tires? And retrieve the car from the towing company? And how would she ever get little Daniel to the dentist?

She just sat there and cried. California State Highway Patrol officer Steve Beeuwsaert is a seven-year veteran of CHiPS. He's heard an encyclopedia of hard-luck stories. But there was something about this distraught mother and her children and their predicament.

It was hot, humid afternoon, but the youngsters sitting in the disabled car were quiet, polite. Even the one with the sore tooth did not complain. Tried, instead, to comfort their mother.

Well ...

Officer Beeuwsaert invited the mother and the youngsters into his patrol car. He drove them to the dental appointment in El Toro. And there in the dentist's office, the officer made out a personal check — for $200. He handed it to Turner. He said, "I hope this will tide you over." Turner started to cry again. And the officer was gone.

Now it's 17 days later. It's time for the 2 p.m. briefing for 75 officers of the B-watch.

When Officer Beeuwsaert walks in, his fellow officers are seated — but across the podium at the front of the room is a banner. The banner reads: "Officer Beeuwsaert is the greatest." And then he sees other familiar faces — Jennifer and Benjamin, Katherine and Adam, David and Daniel. And then their mother steps to the front of the room and, fighting back tears, she relates the experience of three weeks ago.

A devout Mormon, Turner then sang, "You Are Not Alone." And she said she is reestablishing her life as a professional baby sitter. She thanked Officer Turner again — he was bashful, blushing, embarrassed — and the little ceremony was over.

Commander of the Capistrano area, Capt. Steve Malone, says he's proud of Officer Beeuwsaert. Say's he's a good example.

And Capt. Malone said, "We've never before had anybody come in just to say thanks."

Bush must find way to bridge gulf

By ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON — The two major holidays at the end of each year have virtually universal significance in our society — but the upcoming Thanksgiving and Christmas will be especially important for President Bush.

It will be on those occasions that domestic pressure will begin to mount to "bring the boys (and girls) home" from the Middle East, where more than 100,000 U.S. troops have been dispatched to contain further aggression by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

Bush almost certainly will not be able to satisfy the demands of an increasingly impatient nation by Thanksgiving. Moreover, a withdrawal by Christmas is only marginally more likely.

Assuming that the president is belatedly sensitized to the domestic political considerations involved (which he was not on Labor Day), he would not make his traditional holiday retreats to the family compound in Maine.

Indeed, White House officials already are hinting of a Bush visit to the troops on Thanksgiving. That will buy him some time, but the confrontation with Iraq is rapidly assuming the characteristics of a stalemate.

Hussein, a despot cold and calculating enough to routinely order the summary execution of subordinates suspected of being less than absolutely loyal to him, has emerged as a formidable opponent. Specifically, he appears not to be intimidated by either the military buildup or the trading blockade.

Bush's brilliant orchestration of those measures has gained him global acclaim. His initial strategy of producing an awesome show of force without the use of force was precisely the bold yet restrained response the situation required.

His earlier efforts to build a base of shared trust and confidence with other heads of state had been belittled by some observers. But that approach paid off when a dazzling display of personal diplomacy produced major commitments of political, military and financial support from dozens of other nations.

But nobody knows whether Iraq's will was strengthened or weakened by the eight years of deprivation its people endured during the war with Iran. Thus far, there is no reason to dispute Hussein's claim that his country is prepared for additional sacrifice and suffering.

Moreover, the economic sanctions imposed against Iraq are likely to produce only mixed results. Exports of crude oil, which earlier accounted for 95 percent of its foreign exchange earnings, appear to have been almost totally stanching, depriving Iraq of $80 billion per day in revenues.

But clandestine imports of goods needed for Iraq's survival — by dhows, the small trading boats that ply the Persian Gulf, and by trucks and camels entering the country through remote border crossings — are likely to continue.

Supplementing those products are food and other commodities on hand when the embargo was initiated and stocks plundered from conquered Kuwait. The best available estimates suggest that, with rationing, Iraq can sustain itself under current conditions for six to eight months.

In this country, Bush may be able to successfully deal with the current standoff on Thanksgiving and Christmas in 1990 but he almost certainly cannot finesse its perpetuation to Easter and Memorial Day in 1991.

Thus, if there is no movement toward a negotiated settlement, the only other alternative for the president is to seek a provocation — if not a pretext — to launch military operations to reclaim Kuwait and constrain Iraq, probably early next year.

The Defense Department reportedly estimates that deaths of this country's military personnel in such a war could be in the 20,000-30,000 range. In addition, there would be many more non-fatal casualties in the Middle East as well as terrible economic and psychological costs at home.

Diplomatic resolution of the crisis obviously is preferable. But if Hussein is perceived to have wrung any concessions from Bush, the Iraqi leader becomes an even more intolerable future threat in an already unstable region.

Budget, bonds and big shots: Will New York City be saved?

By PETER ALAN HARPER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Vast budget gaps, bond-rating woes and finger-pointing by big shots — New York's crisis has all the marks of the city's near-bankruptcy 15 years ago. But fiscal watchdogs say there won't be a reprise of 1975.

That was the year New York pleaded for a federal rescue and the Daily News scored with the headline "Ford to City: Drop Dead."

It was the year 25,000 city workers, including 5,000 police officers, were laid off, 8,000 substitute teachers were fired and services were slashed.

This year, the headlines trumpet fiscal warnings that seemingly are as perilous, as the economy goes downhill regionally and nationally.

Mayor David N. Dinkins, 10 months in office, is plugging a $1.8 billion budget deficit just three months into the fiscal year and grappling with a gap for next year.

The first week of October epitomized the city's struggle to limit spending without gutting services.

First, the city gave teachers a 5.5 percent raise in a one-year contract settlement. Critics said the amount was too generous and would set a bad example for negotiations with 250,000 other city workers.

Responding to a summer crime wave, Dinkins let loose a criminal justice plan with a $1.9 billion price tag. Leaders in the state Legislature promptly said they would block the taxes Dinkins called for to finance the package.

Dinkins then imposed a hiring freeze and said he was considering laying off 15,000 workers because of declining revenue.

The jobless rate in the city hit 7.9 percent in September, up from 6.2 percent in August.

To top it off, Standard and Poor's announced Tuesday it has placed the city's $13 billion in general obligation bonds on "credit watch," meaning the city's bond rating might be lowered. Bond markets have been tumbling since, forcing higher borrowing costs on the city.

Then came the name-calling. Former Mayor Edward I. Koch accused Labor Commissioner Eric Schmertz of helping teachers take Dinkins "to the cleaners."

Schmertz said Koch was indulging in "monumental bitchiness" and had been involved in the most corrupt administration since Jimmy Walker's in the 1920s.

Dinkins had to weather bad publicity over a headboard for his bed as he was urging belt-tightening. The headboard reportedly cost $11,500. The administration said that whatever the cost, it would be covered privately.

So how bad is the situation, compared with 1975?

"Not the same, not as bad," said Edward V. Regan, state comptroller. "In those days in 1975, the city was unable to borrow, basically unable to pay its bills in a lot of ways."

Hyman C. Grossman, Standard & Poor's managing director, said, "We expect (the city) to pull it out, but we have a bigger question mark, which is why we have a credit watch."

"The situation is lousy, it's awful, but it's not calamitous," said Herbert Bienstock, who was director of the local U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics from 1962 to 1980 and heads a Queens College research unit.

The major differences between then and now, the analysts agreed, is that the city was not prepared to handle the crisis of '75.

Harrison Goldin said that when he became city comptroller in 1974, the city "didn't have the foggiest idea" where its money was. As it turned out, some was in shoeboxes tucked in closets, where Goldin said he found billions of dollars worth of deposits from contractors and negotiable municipal bonds.

The city, he said, "didn't have the basic information to run a corner candy store."

State orders insurance firm, to stop AIDS test

By FRED PIERETTI
Associated Press Writer

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — In the first case of its kind in New Jersey, the state is ordering a Texas-based insurance company to stop selectively testing for AIDS when issuing policies.

State Insurance Commissioner Samuel Fortunato ruled Thursday that the Midland National Life Insurance Company must end a practice that requires prospective customers in certain parts of New Jersey to take a blood test for AIDS, or Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

Midland's requires the blood test for those living in communities within 10 zip codes in northeastern New Jersey, portions of central New Jersey, eastern Monmouth County, and parts of Ocean County.

Fortunato said Midland ordered the screening for prospective customers in those areas who applied for policies exceeding $100,000.

Gov. Jim Florio criticized Midland's policy as discriminatory.

"It means that if you live in Ridgewood or Westfield, Newark or Paterson, or Toms River, you have to get an AIDS blood test," Florio said. "But if you live in Trenton or Princeton, or Cape May or Pennsauken, you don't have to get tested for AIDS to buy that policy with Midland. That's discrimination."

Insurance department spokesman Jo Astrid Glading said Midland had the right to require the blood test for AIDS before issuing a policy, but that the company had to require the test of all prospective customers. Glading said it was the first time the department had acted against a company for geographic discrimination.

Fortunato said state insurance guidelines prohibit an insurance company from requiring a blood test "based solely on information concerning an individual's lifestyle."

William A. Rigsbee, president and chief executive officer of Midland, said he had not seen the order and would not comment until he had.

"All insurance companies do blood tests," Rigsbee said. "It's just a routine underwriting requirement."

Midland, which was incorporated in Texas but is headquartered in South Dakota, has 20 days to request a hearing before an administrative law judge. After the hearing, the commissioner may levy fines of up to $1,000 for each violation.

Midland's requires the blood test for those living in communities within the following zip code prefixes: 070, 071, 072, 073, 074, 075, 076, 077, 087 and 088.

After 17-year-battle, woman still left out of victory

By JON MARCUS
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — A woman bugged about paying toll charges just to talk to her daughter six miles away has won a 17-year battle to get the phone company to change its rate structure. But she won't fully share in the victory.

Estelle Simon, 70, of rural Sudbury, can call her daughter's town of Marlboro for free, but Sudbury residents still will be charged for calling Lincoln, which shares a high school with Sudbury, because of how the system is wired.

"Can you believe this?" Simon said in an interview this week. "I blew my top."

In fact, there will still be a charge to call the local crisis line six miles away in Acton.

"People who are about to commit suicide are not going to make a toll call," Simon scoffed.

Simon decided to take on AT&T — then the largest corporation in the world — in 1973 when her daughter moved a toll call away to neighboring Marlboro.

"I realized there was a lot wrong with the telephone company," she said.

Waging battle singlehandedly in rate hearings and regulatory proceedings before the state Department of Public Utilities, Simon argued that small-town residents were subsidizing the phone service of people in big cities.

All paid the same $9 for basic service, but big-city dwellers could reach more phones for free. Until 1984, in fact, customers in 93 communities, including Sudbury, were even charged for calls within the same town.

Thanks to Simon, New England Telephone Co. on Oct. 19 will eliminate toll charges for calls between neighboring exchanges and reduce rates for other in-state calls. The ruling affects more than 100 exchanges around the state.

Public Utilities officials had said during the battle that Simon's case was so well documented that New England Telephone would probably be forced to overhaul its whole rate structure.

"It was very flattering but, at the same time, my heart sank," she said. "Here we were fighting with the phone company to give relief to 4,200 phones, which is all we had in Sudbury. Now we were talking about thousands of phones and millions of dollars, and I knew they were going to fight that much harder."

Under the new rates, a four-minute morning call from Brimfield to Williamstown in western Massachusetts on a weekday will fall from $1.11 to 23 cents. A four-minute call at the same time of day from Boston to New York costs 87 cents over AT&T.

The phone company also eliminated the toll for calling Marlboro. Simon said she recently paid about $100 a month in calls to her daughter.

But basic service went up $3, and dialing Lincoln will continue to cost extra in Sudbury, about 15 miles from downtown Boston. The day rate for calls to Lincoln will be 19 cents for the first minute and 9 cents a minute after that.

That's because of the wiring configuration between the towns and billing problems, the phone company said, an argument used against Simon for 17 years.

"There are people who are saying, 'Gee, I wish you could have included this town or that town.' But you can't get the approval of all of the people all of the time," said New England Telephone spokeswoman Roberta Clement.

Simon said her battle with the phone company is over.

"I see no reason for me to go downtown and tell the whole story over again," she said. "All they have to do is look at the case. They know I'm right."

Before she stepped out of the ring, however, Simon forced New England Telephone to stop misleading advertisements that promised toll-free calls between all bordering communities.

"They do these things," said Simon. "But nobody fights back."

Saddam making final turn of screw on foreign diplomats

By TERRIL JONES
Associated Press Writer

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Saddam Hussein is starving the last foreign diplomats from their circled compounds in Kuwait, a triumph in his campaign to turn the invaded emirate into the 19th province of Iraq.

The Dutch, Italian and Polish embassies, among the compounds besieged exactly seven weeks ago today, have withdrawn the last of their diplomats from Kuwait City in the past week. The Belgian and German governments say they will follow suit shortly.

The announcements leave the Americans, British, Canadians and French as the only holdouts among Western missions. Only a few other nations appear to be staffing their embassies with diplomats.

The remaining diplomats are surviving mainly on canned food and occasional loaves of bread carried in by local staff. But they are surrounded by Iraqi troops enforcing a blockade of supplies. In most cases, water and electricity have been cut off. The holdouts are not expected to last long.

The ambassadorial standoff reflects the international confrontation of the Persian Gulf in microcosm. Saddam's forces have been locked in a war of nerves and attrition with representatives of many of the countries that have sent troops and equipment to counter the Iraqi president.

After Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2 and annexed the neighboring oil emirate, it ordered all embassies in the emirate to shut down by Aug. 24 and began surrounding holdouts that day.

Iraqi authorities said foreign countries would be represented in Baghdad, Iraq's capital. The embassy staffs in Kuwait would lose their diplomatic status and privileges.

Initially, dozens of embassies balked, refusing to recognize Iraq's annexation of Kuwait and desperate to help their stranded nationals. However, as the Iraqi siege set in, the remaining diplomats have trickled out.

They have said the departures are temporary, and some of them have announced that the embassies remain technically open. But it's only a technicality.

At the U.S. Embassy, 10 diplomats — and an unknown number of American citizens who took refuge — are eking out a living from canned goods and perishables stored there before Iraqi tanks rolled into Kuwait City.

Life at the embassy is "kind of hot, stuffy and boring," a U.S. official in Washington said Wednesday. U.S. diplomats "are still there because we don't recognize the annexation, we will not recognize an order based on annexation, and we want to help American citizens."

About 500 Americans are stuck in Kuwait, many in hiding and several reported to be desperately ill. About 100 of them have been deployed by Iraq at strategic installations to serve as human shields against any foreign attack.

Living conditions at the U.S. embassy are wretched. Power and water have been severed for more than a month, forcing the Americans to forgo baths and boil water from the swimming pool to drink.

Ambassador W. Nathaniel Howell, deputy ambassador Barbara Bodine and the other Americans are using outside latrines.

They sometimes sleep outdoors at night to keep cool, despite swarms of mosquitoes.

The first "LAKE MEREDITH Morning Madness FUN FISHING TOURNAMENT" is this Sunday at Lake Meredith, starting at 7:30 a.m. and lasting until noon.

You may enter the Bass category and/or the Walleye category. Entry fee is only $15 per category, and if 100 anglers enter, first place will pay back $500.

WARNING: the walleye and the bass are both feeding in less than seven feet deep water so trying to guess which category of fish that will bite your bait can be difficult.

Live bait and trolling are permitted at this fun tournament. Register any time Saturday at Snows Bait Shop in Fritch or Sunday morning at Cedar Canyon from 5:30 a.m. until official start time at 7:30 a.m.

Call me at 353-3654 for more information.

LAKE BAYLOR RESULTS

Fighting a windy cold front and 62 other fishermen, veteran Amarillo angler Tommy Pugh won the Lake Baylor Big Bass contest with a 5.60 lb. black bass. Pugh, owner of Amarillo Hydraulics, used a "secret" plastic lizard and, at the weigh-in, declined to reveal any clues as to color or brand as he pocketed $1,625.

Dumas angler Richard Beilue caught a 5.24 lb. black bass good for second place and a pay day of $447 for his efforts. He used a black jig with black trailer. Amarillo fisherman Ira Burris caught a 4.90 lb. beauty and placed third with a total payback of $261.

Other top finishers were:

- 4th - Jay Friemel of Canyon, 4.44 lbs.
- 5th - Danny Murdock of Memphis, 3.64 lbs.
- 6th - Jerry Graves of Claude, 3.36 lbs.
- 7th - De Francis of Amarillo, 2.97 lbs.
- 8th - Tim Hollis of Amarillo, 2.85 lbs.
- 9th - Jerry Dandridge of Amarillo, 2.53 lbs.
- 10th - Gary Rogers of Amarillo, 2.35 lbs.

WHITE RIVER RESULTS

Fishing was extremely tough for all fishermen except Claude City Commissioner and expert angler Jerry Graves, who beat out some 50 anglers to take home total prize money of $500. Jerry caught a total of 9 lbs. on an "old worn out" buzz bait and was one of only two anglers to catch a tournament limit of three fish.

Second place went to Bob Haynie of Lubbock, who weighed in three bass for a total of 4.34 lbs. and earned $117 for his efforts. Third place went to Lubbock fisherman Elbert Dehay with two bass weighing 2.86 lbs., good for $67 in prize money.

Other top finishers include Richard Beilue of Dumas (2.78 lb.), Craig Graham of Lubbock (2.58 lb.), Cotton Collins of Claude (2.49 lb.), Roy Meredith of Lubbock (1.97 lb.) and Keith Cox of Borger (1.90 lb.).

Pampa looking to take district victory tonight

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Tonight's homecoming contest between the Pampa Harvesters and Hereford Herd could decide who wins District 1-4A, though the district schedule only begins tonight.

The Herd comes into Pampa with a surprisingly bad 1-4 record. Pampa is a respectable 2-2, with both losses coming to teams ranked among the best in the state.

It is Pampa's best chance in almost a decade of knocking off the Whitefaces and taking the inside track to the district title.

However, Coach Dennis Cavalier said he is warning his team against being overconfident.

"I'm trying to sell to our guys that this is the first of five legs in a marathon race," Cavalier said. "There are plenty of pitfalls. Hereford can say, though, that if they beat Pampa tonight, they have a good chance of winning district."

He added, "I believe Hereford has an attitude of renewal coming into tonight's game. The season starts over with district play tonight. I expect a tremendous, emotionally-charged Hereford team."

Cavalier said Pampa hasn't played such a big game in which they had a good chance at victory in a very long time.

"I hope our kids don't lock up," he said. "We've been confident to the point they had lost perspective. We had a team meeting last night, though, and I hope we took care of that."

The only injury the Harvesters will have to overcome going into the 7:30 p.m. kick-off is to two-way lineman Matt Clark.

"He will be less than 100 percent," Cavalier stated. "He twisted a knee Wednesday in practice."

Harvesters and Borger tie in first round of match play

The Pampa Harvesters golf team tied with Borger after the first round of match play in a three-game scheduled series.

Playing Thursday at the Huber Golf Course in Borger, Pampa and Borger each amassed 2 1/2 points in the first round of scramble play with five two-man team matches.

"It's match play all the way," said Coach Frank McCullough of the series.

The match series with Borger will continue next Thursday, Oct. 18, at the Pampa Country Club, with the final round scheduled Thursday, Oct. 25, at Hidden Hills Golf Course in Pampa.

Thursday, Pampa won two matches, lost two and "had the other," Coach McCullough said.

tonight, Caprock (0-5) travels to Randall (0-5) and Dumas (0-5) at Borger (2-3). Cavalier expressed surprise at the Demons' lack of success this season, but said both they and Caprock still have a chance at the district title.

Other games around the region tonight include:

Class 2A

Highland Park (5-0) at Canadian (2-3); 7:30 p.m. Before its all said and done, somebody might steal Cinderella's glass slipper, but it won't happen within the confines of Canadian's attractive stadium. Highland Park 28, Canadian 14.

Clarendon (2-3) at Panhandle (5-0); 7:30 p.m. The Panthers have gone from the ranks of the good to the reigns of the great. That status should remain comfortably intact tonight. Panhandle 42, Clarendon 6.

Class 1A

Memphis (1-3) at Shamrock (1-3); 7:30 p.m. Neither team has much sparkle this year, but Shamrock has more horses than the Cyclones. Shamrock 14, Memphis 7.

Gruver (1-4) at Wheeler (4-1); 7:30 p.m. Folks in Mustang Land are feeling a bit of the old zeal from the state championship years, as their horses are off to a very good start. The Greyhounds will do nothing to break Wheeler's stride tonight. Wheeler 32, Gruver 6.

Six-Man

Miami (2-2-1) at Follett (1-4); 7:30 p.m. If Miami wants this one, it's theirs for the taking. Miami 42, Follett 36.

Lefors (3-2) at McLean (5-0); 7:30 p.m. Look out, Pirates; McLean is on their way to another banner season. McLean 56, Lefors 6.

Groom (5-0) at Higgins (1-3); 7:30 p.m. Higgins is better than their record indicates and Groom is not used to such success. Look for the upset of the night here. Higgins 28, Groom 27.

In the action, Harvesters Kyle Sparkman and Zach Cambern were defeated by their Borger competitors; Mark Largin and Trae Walls won their match; Cory Stone and Ryan Handley won their match; Brandon Brashears and Will Carlisle lost theirs; and Matt McDaniel and Jay Earp won their round "and finished in the dark," McCullough said.

"It's just a fun type situation for the kids," he said of the series, adding that it allows the golfers to play each other's courses and see competition in different types of matches without the pressures.

The second round in the series will feature two-man low ball play, and the final round will be individual match play.

Reds hope to cinch series spot tonight

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Baseball Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) - There aren't many secrets left between Zane Smith and the Cincinnati Reds.

Smith is scheduled to start tonight for Pittsburgh in Game 6 of the National League playoffs against fellow left-hander Danny Jackson with the Reds leading the best-of-7 series 3-2.

The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette in today's editions reported that manager Jim Leyland might start right-hander Ted Power against Cincinnati.

"It's not 100 percent sure, but it's 99 percent," the Post-Gazette quoted Leyland as saying. "The Reds have eight extra position players. We have eight extra pitchers. Why not take advantage of that."

But Pittsburgh vice president of public relations Rick Cerrone said early this morning that Smith was still the Pirates' scheduled starter.

In seven previous starts against the Reds this season, Smith has given up 20 runs and 54 hits in 47 1-3 innings. Some pitchers haven't lasted seven starts in a career.

Smith was the losing pitcher in Game 3 when the Reds beat him 6-3 on a three-run homer by Mariano Duncan and a two-run shot by Billy Hatcher.

"This will be my eighth start of the season against Cincinnati, and that can be bad," Smith said Thursday night. "They're familiar with what I throw, and it's a negative."

Smith made four starts against Cincinnati for Montreal, losing twice. After being acquired by the Pirates on Aug. 8, Smith was 2-0 in two starts against the Reds.

He was 6-2 in 10 starts for the Pirates, yielding only nine earned runs in 75 innings. But in Game 3, he gave up five runs in five innings.

"I'm glad to have another chance," Smith said. "People would remember that one time and forget how well I pitched this season."

Smith, who is eligible for free agency, spent five seasons with the Atlanta Braves and was 1-12 in 1989 before being dealt to Montreal.

"When you're on a losing team, you become a defensive pitcher," Smith said. "I would have liked to have seen what I could have done with a full season with the Pirates."

The prospect of the Nasty Boys - a trio of Cincinnati relief pitchers - coming in the game has the Pirates a bit defensive at the plate.

"I don't think we need a miracle or anything, just some big hits," Bobby Bonilla said.

The Pirates didn't get many big hits from their big three of Andy Van Slyke, Bonilla and Barry Bonds in the first five games. The trio combined to go 12-for-55 (.218) with no homers and five RBIs.

"My loss in Game 3 showed that sometimes when the big guys don't come through the other guys have to pick you up," Smith said. "I shut down the middle of their order, but Duncan and Hatcher come up with home runs."

Eight times in postseason history a team has rebounded from a 3-1 deficit - and Pittsburgh has done it twice, in the 1925 and 1979 World Series.

"We just have to pull a Kansas City," Van Slyke said. "They were down 3-1 to Toronto in the playoffs and 3-1 to St. Louis in the World Series."

Van Slyke was on the Cardinals when the Royals rallied to win the last three games of the 1985 World Series.

Jackson, who like Smith has a history of arm trouble, was the winner in Game 3. He gave up two runs and seven hits in 5 1-3 innings.

Oakland A's relaxing until World Series

By TIM LIOTTA
AP Sports Writer

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) - Sit back, relax and wait. That's all the Oakland Athletics have left to do until the World Series.

Having overwhelmed the Boston Red Sox with a four-game sweep in the American League, the A's were rewarded with a day off Thursday. The team will resume their relentless drive for a second straight World Series championship with a workout today.

"I think we've felt it stronger (about winning) this time," said Oakland pitcher Rick Honeycutt. "I think all year we've used the problems surrounding the earthquake to motivate us. This year we felt we were going to go out, win it and enjoy it."

"Last year it was tough getting any pleasure out of winning because there were catastrophes all around us."

So, on the their last leg, the A's get six days to rest up and get their ship in order. Like they need another edge.

Rest up, freshen the pitchers, soothe the bumps and bruises accumulated over the last seven months, scrutinize those scouting reports on the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Cincinnati Reds.

"I can just imagine the A's sitting back on their couches this weekend, relaxing and waiting to see who they're going to play," said Pittsburgh's Barry Bonds after the Pirates forced a sixth game in the National League playoffs.

"Meanwhile, we're out here still going at each other's throats."

Over the next six days, Jose Canseco's hand will hopefully improve. Maybe his back, too.

After striking out in the fifth inning, Canseco was pulled from Game 4 with pain in the middle finger of his right hand.

His back has been bothering him almost all season. He had a cortisone shot with two weeks left in the regular season.

"I am real concerned (about Canseco's condition)," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said after Game 4. "... Hopefully, we can get him physically ready for the World Series."

Dave Henderson's knee will get that much stronger. He did not start the first two games of the playoffs because La Russa still had concerns about it.

Walt Weiss, who was knocked out of playoffs with a sprained right knee in Game 2, will have his status re-evaluated before the start of the World Series.

Don't count on seeing Weiss, however.

La Russa is always extremely hesitant to play injured players over healthy ones, and Mike Gallego did an excellent job filling in for Weiss the last two playoff games.

Maybe the rest will invigorate the Oakland bats. The A's became the first team since the 1919 Cincinnati Reds to win a postseason series without hitting a home run.

The A's had six days off after their 1988 playoff sweep of the Red Sox and they subsequently lost as heavy favorites in the World Series. They were beaten in five games by the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Don't expect a repeat of that let-down.

"What hurt us there was our inexperience," Oakland slugger Jose Canseco said. "We thought we were going to run over everyone. I think we had three or four days off because they were playing their division championship. I think we took it for granted because of our inexperience. We didn't take batting practice the way we should. We really didn't concentrate."

Red Sox president backs Clemens '100 percent'

BOSTON (AP) - Boston pitcher Roger Clemens, accused of threatening to "get" Terry Cooney, was not directing his anger toward the plate umpire, according to Red Sox president John Harrington.

"We've heard both sides of the story. Who knows what was said? We're behind Roger 100 percent in this," Harrington is quoted in today's Boston Globe as saying on the flight from Oakland to Boston after Wednesday's game.

"His position is that he was not directing his anger toward the umpire, and we believe him and we're behind him."

Richie Phillips, executive director of the Major League Umpires Association, on Thursday said Clemens threatened to get Cooney after being ejected.

Clemens threatened Cooney "three times as they were taking him off the field. He said he would find out where Cooney lives and would get him," Phillips said from his home in Philadelphia.

"The umpires in the crew told me. It's bizarre," Phillips said. "Clemens was arguing every call he didn't (agree with). He knew what he was saying was cause for ejection."

The star pitcher was ejected from the fourth, and as it turned out, final game of the American League playoffs in Oakland for shouting obscenities at Cooney. At the time, the Red Sox were losing 1-0 in the second inning.

The Oakland Athletics won the game 3-1, sweeping the playoff series in four games to advance to the World Series for the third straight year.

Phillips said he planned to ask American League president Bobby Brown to look into the matter, and Harrington said he plans to talk to Brown about ejecting a player from such an important game.

"It will not be in the form of a complaint, but I'm sure he's anxious to hear what we have to say," Harrington said of Brown. "Both sides have to be more tolerant of each other in these situations."

Brown was at the game in Oakland and will review tapes and read Cooney's report of the incident before deciding whether Clemens should be fined or suspended.

Harrington said that despite the controversy, the Red Sox are "going to work hard all winter" to sign Clemens, whose contract expires after next season.

"It's something we can't wait on. We have to get going on it right away," Harrington said. "We have some other pressing things, but getting Roger signed is our biggest priority."

Dr. Harvey Dulberg, a Brookline sports psychologist, told the Boston Herald it was likely that Clemens' outburst could have been predicted.

"We're talking about a guy from a small town in Texas in the pros a number of years (six), and the feeling is, 'As Roger goes, so go the Red Sox,'" said Dulberg.

"He's going out there knowing he's got very little margin of error with the team not hitting. There was the expectation that he was to carry the team."

"When there's that kind of buildup, that amount of pressure, everything in an athlete's life becomes exaggerated."

Dr. Sam Osherson, a Cambridge psychologist, said athletes in Clemens' position have pressures from themselves, teammates, management and fans.

"Imagine the pressures. I would imagine it's a very difficult situation for anyone in a high-pressure situation, with everyone's hopes riding on them," he said.

"We ask an awful lot of these men," he said. "These teams cover our hopes and dreams."

Jamerson inks pact with Houston Rockets

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Rockets hope No. 1 draft pick Dave Jamerson will live up to the assessment agent Dave Termini has given his client.

"Dave will do fine, he's got a big heart and a nasty attitude when he has to have it," Termini said Thursday after Jamerson signed a 4-year Rockets contract worth a reported $3.5 million.

The Rockets are hoping Jamerson will become the outside shooting threat that has been missing from their lineup in recent years and Jamerson is not lacking in confidence he can fill the void.

"The role that I'll fill on this ball club, I feel I'll be able to fill," Jamerson said. "But I don't feel any pressure, I feel confident that I can carry the load."

Jamerson had been seeking a contract worth $1 million per year before the Rockets took all offers off the table last week. They got together again early this week and worked out a deal.

"There was a determination on both sides to get the job done and move forward," Rockets general manager Steve Patterson said.

(AP Laserphoto)

Dave Jamerson, right, speaks with the media Thursday after it was announced a four-year deal had been worked out with the Houston Rockets. At left is general manager Steve Patterson. Jamerson's contract is worth a reported $3.5 million.

The Rockets would like Jamerson to show the shooting touch he used to average 31.2 points at Ohio University last season, third among NCAA Division I scorers. Jamerson had individual consecutive games of 60 and 52 points against Charleston and Kent State. Jamerson needed only 31 minutes for his 60-point performance, a Mid-America Conference record.

Jamerson said he felt he could learn quickly but didn't know if he'd be ready for the Rockets' exhibition opener tonight against the Philadelphia 76ers.

"I wanted to be here June 28 (for summer camp) but business is business," he said. "I'm just really happy now that this is all behind me and I can concentrate on basketball."

"It would have been an advantage to be here in the summer but it doesn't take me long to adapt. Eventually the cream will rise to the top."

Guard Vernon Maxwell, who has two years remaining on his contract, is still holding out in a contract dispute with the Rockets.

"It's two separate issues, one has nothing to do with the other," Patterson said.

Jamerson finished his career at Ohio as the second all-time leading scorer in MAC history with 2,336 points and he set an NCAA record for most 3-point baskets in a game when he hit 14 of 17 against Charleston Dec. 21, 1989.

UT facing tough renegade Texan in annual clash with Oklahoma

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — There's nothing tougher than a renegade Texan.

And that's what the Texas Longhorns will be facing on Saturday when they meet the fourth-ranked Oklahoma Sooners and quarterback Steve Collins of Ennis.

Collins was recruited and dropped by the Longhorns. He didn't like it.

"They did get me tickets for the OU-Texas game," he said. "They told me later they weren't going to recruit me anymore. Texas never appealed to me anyway."

Collins is being pushed by freshman Cale Gundy, who came off the bench to rally the Sooners to a 31-17 victory over Oklahoma State last week.

Collins, a sophomore, is adept at running the option. "Last week's game didn't shake my confidence," Collins said.

Gundy is a better passer, so if the Horns stop the Sooners' patented Wishbone offense on Saturday then Gundy might be in the game.

"I throw the ball better but Steve is the best runner," Gundy said. "In fact, he'd make a good tailback."

Pete Gardere's touchdown pass in the last two minutes defeated the Sooners 28-24 last year.

Before Texas' surprise last year, the Sooners hadn't lost the annual Red River rivalry in the Cotton Bowl since the Longhorns were victorious in 1983.

Texas coach David McWilliams said last year's win gives the Horns hope again.

"Psychologically, you feel better about going in against them knowing that last year you beat them," McWilliams said. "Most of the guys on this team have been in this game and knows what kind of a game it will be."

For the 24th time in the 45 years since World War II, Oklahoma enters the game undefeated. On seven occasions, Texas has spoiled the Sooners' perfect record. The 3 p.m. CDT game will be nationally televised (ESPN).

Johnny Walker, who caught the winning 25-yard touchdown pass with 1:33 remaining, said the Sooners are thinking national championship if they can get past Texas.

"This is a very, very big game for OU," he said. "They've got a great shot at the national title if they beat us."

Texas is 2-1, losing to Colorado but defeating Penn State and Rice. Both Gardere and Walker return to take on the Sooners again.

Oklahoma has a 34-14 victory over UCLA and a 52-10 slaughter of Pittsburgh in its five victories.

McWilliams admits Texas has a better team than the 1989 version.

"We are much better," he said. "We played and beat Oklahoma and that has to help our confidence."

Texas leads the series 48-32-4. The game will be sold out for the 45th consecutive year.

TCU Horned Frogs item for curiosity

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The Texas-Oklahoma game might have the nation's attention but it's the Texas Christian Horned Frogs who will be the hottest item of curiosity this weekend in Southwest Conference football action.

After an opening loss to Washington State, the Frogs have defeated Missouri, Oklahoma State, Southern Methodist and Arkansas on successive weekends to compile enough points to reach a status as the 28th-best team in the nation.

The Frogs will be on regional television when they take on the Rice Owls at high noon in Amon Carter Stadium. The Frogs are eight-point favorites over the Owls.

In other SWC games, Southern Methodist is at Baylor in a 1 p.m. CDT clash, Texas A&M is at Houston in a 4 p.m. game, and Arkansas entertains Texas Tech in a 4 p.m. game.

Baylor is an 18-point favorite over SMU, Houston is a five-point choice over A&M, and Arkansas is an eight-point pick over Texas Tech.

The Oklahoma-Texas rivalry begins its 85th edition at 3 p.m. from the Cotton Bowl with ESPN's cameras trained on the action. The game is a sellout for the 45th time. Oddsmakers favored Oklahoma by eight points.

Texas Christian has captured the nation's fancy with its comeback victories and a 54-26 drubbing of the Razorbacks in Little Rock. Over 2,000 fans greeted the Frogs at Meacham Field at 1 a.m. when TCU returned from Arkansas.

TCU coach Jim Wacker is worried the Frogs will still be celebrating the victory over Arkansas when the ball is kicked off against Rice.

"We told the team they could enjoy the Arkansas victory until Monday," Wacker. "It was fun. But at a certain point you have to put it in the record books and move on."

Rice's last victory over TCU in Fort Worth came in 1986 and the Frogs have won six of the last eight meetings, including three in a row.

Rice gave Houston a 22-20 scare before falling and lost 26-10 to Texas last week.

Houston is ranked 12th and Texas A&M is No. 20.

The Aggies defeated Houston's run-and-shoot offense the last two years when Andre Ware was the quarterback.

"They look about the same to me," said A&M coach R.C. Slocum.

"David Klingler's arm is every bit as good as Ware's, particularly throwing the long ball. We won't be going into the game awed by their scheme."

Tech coach Spike Dykes said he doesn't relish playing Arkansas after it was battered by TCU.

"I'm sure they're going to be breathing fire," Dykes said. "They scare the devil out of you."

Indiana catches Ellenberger

By SUZANNE GAMBOA
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO (AP) — Norm Ellenberger wanted to talk fishing, but Bobby Knight baited him to Indiana instead.

Ellenberger, who spent three seasons working for close friend Don Haskins at Texas El-Paso, said Thursday that he had accepted a job as an assistant basketball coach at Indiana.

Ellenberger said he was offered the position when he called to chat about Knight's recent fishing trip.

"It was a friendly chit-chat thing. That's how it came out," Ellenberger said. He said that he and Knight had talked about working together "over the last six years."

Ellenberger stepped down at New Mexico at the start of the 1979-80 season when a transcript-fixing scandal unfolded. Many of his players were declared ineligible and Ellenberger was convicted on 21 of 22 counts of fraud and filing false public vouchers, fourth degree felonies. He was giving one year unsupervised probation.

The NCAA found the school guilty of 31 rules violations and gave the Lobos basketball program three years of probation.

Ellenberger spent 1 1/2 years as coach of the Albuquerque Silvers of the Continental Basketball Association and also coached a women's professional team for a short time.

Most schools wouldn't hire Ellenberger despite his 134-62 mark at New Mexico.

But Haskins took a chance and took Ellenberger on as a volunteer assistant in 1986. Two years later, the university agreed to make him a paid, part-time assistant.

Last year, Haskins suffered from chronic laryngitis and handed the reins to Ellenberger, who led the scrappy Miners to the Western Athletic Conference tournament championship and an NCAA bid. They lost to Minnesota in the first round.

Ellenberger is leaving UTEP as Haskins enters his 30th season as Miners' coach.

"I leave only with his blessing," Ellenberger said. "He just said, 'Get after it,' without reservation. That makes me feel good. If you're in this business ... and you have a chance to work with the likes of Don Haskins and Bobby Knight, you'd better do it."

Haskins said in a statement released by UTEP: "This is a step in the right direction for Norm."

Ellenberger, a Fort Wayne, Ind., native, said his departure is not related to an NCAA inquiry into the UTEP basketball program.

Just call 911

Travis Elementary fourth graders (from top) Justin Roark, Stacy Huddleston and Vanessa Fisher were winners in a poster contest sponsored by Rural Metro, Pampa's ambulance service, in celebration of Emergency Medical Service Week. EMT's from Rural Metro visited the fourth grade classes at Travis, and instructed students about using the 911 emergency response system. The children were given a tour of the ambulance, and a lesson on emergency life-saving procedures. These winners will join others from Pampa schools in a trip to Amarillo's Don Harrington Discovery Center.

Book helps parents protect children from toxic plants

NEW YORK (AP) — John and Dolores Alber sold plants by mail and from a retail shop in St. Louis when their first child was born.

They thought they knew a lot about the flower business — until they tried to learn whether their child would be safe around the indoor plants and cut flowers they owned and sold.

They spent two years researching the subject and had enough information to write a book, the recently-published "Baby-Safe Houseplants & Cut Flowers," (Genus Books).

It lists common and botanical names of 200 houseplants and garden plants likely to come inside; principal toxins active in the plant, if any; plant parts likely to contain toxins; a description of the plant and a description of effects of toxins on the body.

It will tell you, for instance, that sweet-smelling, innocent looking lily-of-the-valley (convallaria majalis) contains glycosides that act much like digitalis, the drug used to treat heart ailments. When ingested in large enough quantities it can cause a slowing of the heart and heart rhythm disturbances.

It also contains irritant saponins that can cause burning in the mouth, nausea, vomiting and abdominal pain. When cut and brought indoors, even the vase water can become toxic.

It will tell you that the spider plant (chlorophytum comosum) and corn plant (dracaena fragrans) are considered harmless. Yet no plant is harmless to a toddler or infant if he can choke on the leaves.

The Albers also suggest that you display your houseplants safely. There are those that shouldn't be in the house at all, those that may be displayed on a high shelf, and those that are considered safe.

They implore you to teach your child never to eat nonfood plants. According to the American Association of Poison Control Centers, nearly 100,000 children accidentally ingested plants last year, requiring treatment. If your child requires a hospital visit, take the plant, or a sizable chunk of it, with you.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Pain of wife's confession still hurts after 20 years

DEAR ABBY: Prior to my marriage, my wife-to-be told me that she was not a virgin. (I was.) We now have been married for more than 20 years and have a wonderful family. My problem is that I have never forgotten that my wife did not wait for marriage before sharing her bed. Even though I have had counseling, I still feel pain in my heart when I think of my wife in the arms of other men. To this day, I would marry my wife again, but I wish that God would have granted her the wisdom to keep silent as to her earlier men. Please do not disclose the city I mailed this from, as I do not want to embarrass my family. Just sign me ...

TORN HEART

DEAR TORN HEART: Please quit torturing yourself. Perhaps the following letter will do for you what counseling did not. Read it twice. Then read it again:

DEAR ABBY: I am happily married to the finest man who ever walked in shoe leather.

My childhood and adolescence was not a very pretty one. I had been sexually abused by family members and had been in four different foster homes by the time I was 17. I grew up very fast, if you know what I mean. I waited on tables to put myself through college. It took me five years, but I graduated — but I'm getting off my story.

I met a beautiful young man who was studying for the ministry. We were exactly the same age. Within a year, he asked me to marry him. I thought I had died and gone to heaven.

We've been married for three years. On our wedding night, I told him I would answer any questions he had, and started off by telling him I wasn't a virgin.

He said, "As far as I am concerned, you were born the-day we met. What you have done before we met has nothing to do with me."

I MARRIED AN ANGEL

DEAR ABBY: This afternoon, when the newsboy delivered our paper, my husband invited him in, in order to tip him. I happened to be in the room, so my husband said to the boy, "Meet my wife — but don't laugh!"

Over the 40-some years we've been married, he's used this kind of introduction innumerable times, and everyone laughs. I do not think this kind of introduction is amusing and have told him time and again, to no avail.

Today, however, I felt that I had really had enough and I told him so. His defense: "You have no sense of humor."

Abby, how would you judge this?
HAD ENOUGH IN WISCONSIN

DEAR HAD ENOUGH: It's your husband who has no sense of humor. But that's not all he lacks; he also lacks sensitivity, compassion and respect for his wife of more than 40 years.

People sometimes laugh out of embarrassment, shock, or the inappropriateness of a remark. Dear lady, if your husband has some positive qualities to offset the obvious negative ones, please rush them to me so I can sleep better tonight.

Don't put off writing thank-you notes, letters of sympathy, etc., because you don't know what to say. Get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send a long, business size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Button up overcoat on vacation homes

By POPULAR MECHANICS
For AP Newsfeature

With the nip of fall in the air in some parts of the country, many vacation homeowners are buttoning up their summer retreats until next season.

Here are some steps to consider: Looking first at electrical appliances, begin by cleaning out your refrigerator and unplugging it. Then prop the door open to prevent the molds and mildews associated with closed, dark spaces.

Next shut off your water heater. If it's an electric model, interrupt the current at the disconnect panel or main service panel. If it's a gas model, you'll have two choices. You can either shut off the gas entirely, or shut off only the burner and leave the pilot on. While a pilot light will consume a few dollars in gas (approximately $30 through the winter), shutting off the gas completely may cause your heater's thermocouple to fail.

Your dishwasher will also need attention, not because it's likely to freeze, but because evaporation of the water held in its base may cause the seals to shrink. If you will be gone only a short while, pour a coating of vegetable oil onto the standing water. The oil will seal the water surface and slow evaporation.

Clothes washers and water softeners will not likely be a problem, but your garbage disposer may rust. Soak a rag with sewing machine oil or gun oil and lay it in the disposer so that it covers the bottom of the drum. Apply a little oil directly to the cutter blades. When you return, remove the rag and pour a liberal dose of grease-cutting dish detergent into the disposer, then rinse.

If you plan a partial shutdown of your home, you'll be providing enough heat to keep the water lines from freezing, so you won't need to drain your fresh water piping. To keep bacteria down, shut off the water supply with the piping fully charged. If you have city water, shut off the valves on both sides of the meter. Then loosen the meter unions and drain the meter. Wrap insulation around the exposed portion of the service pipe.

If your home is supplied by a private water well, shut off the valve located on the house side of the pressure tank, and shut off the power to the pump. Then drain a few gallons of water from the tank.

The water that is held in your fixture traps is all that prevents sewer gas infiltration. Even with a partial shutdown, you need to protect these traps from evaporation. The best solution is Dowfrost RV.

Start by flushing your toilet with the water supply shut off beneath the tank. Sponge the tank dry and replace the bowl water with Dowfrost up to the normal water level.

Then pour a cup of Dowfrost into each sink and tub drain and two cups into any floor drains, shower traps and your clothes washer stand pipe to protect its trap. This will give you burst protection in a power failure, but will also provide the evaporation inhibitors needed to maintain trap seals.

TRANSFORMERS

"HE IS NOT HERE, BUT IS RISEN..."

Our Lord gave his life on the cross... and then he arose from the grave. He conquered death and provided a way that men might be saved.

As the powerful electricity may be transformed, the Lord has power to change men's lives.

"And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God."

Honor the Lord... enter his house with praise and thanksgiving.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny, the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Zion Lutheran helping group to raise funds

Members of the Aid Association for Lutherans (AAL) branch at Zion Lutheran Church in Pampa have joined forces with members of Southside Senior Citizens to help the organization raise funds for a new building in which the group can meet.

They will co-sponsor a fund-raiser barbecue at Marcus Sanders Park on Saturday, Oct. 20, from noon to 5 p.m. for a $5 donation per adult and $2.50 for children.

"This has been a goal they have been working on for quite a while," noted Joy Thomas, local AAL president. "It's a project worthy of our community's support and participation."

Thomas said AAL will match all money made through the barbecue, up to $500.

"This is called 'Helping Hands,' which is designed to help non-profit organizations," Thomas said. "We were shopping for a place or group we could help and came across this."

Tickets for the barbecue are available on a donation basis from Southside Senior Citizens Center, Post Office Service Station, Pampa Pawn or from members of the center.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: When the Counselor comes, whom I will send to you from the Father, he will testify about me. (John 15:26 NIV)

As an elementary school child, I lived in a large city, and the opportunities to go on field trips to businesses were only as limited as the teachers' and room mothers' good sense and courage.

My childhood nickname could have been "Kid Chocolate" for I would have gladly lived on a diet restricted to chocolate; I'd have died of malnourishment, but I'd have died happy.

So, my all-time favorite field trip was the one my class took to a Milkyway candy bar factory. I remember standing on a walkway and looking down into an enormous vat of melted milk chocolate. A huge paddle stirred lazily through the scrumptious goo and sent up a scent of chocolate that was downright intoxicating to a chocoholic.

But the best was saved for last; at the end of the tour, each of us was given a Milkyway candy bar. It wasn't the first Milkyway I had ever eaten, but coming on the heels of the sights and smells of the day, it was the best one I ever ate.

The salvation experience is a field trip into the realm of the spiritual. The tour guide is the Holy Spirit. By a supernatural process only God understands, the Spirit penetrates through all that is sensate and corporeal, locates your soul core, and speaks to you there. He gives you spiritual vision and reveals to you the truth of Jesus Christ as Savior.

In a sweep of revelation, He convinces you of heavenly absolutes which otherwise are absurdities. He is the viewer through which you may look into God's heart and find your place. The vision defies cognizance and leaves you intoxicated with God's glory.

But the Holy Spirit is not through yet; he saves the best for last! On the heels of this heavenly high, He offers Christ's saving grace to you. Reach out and accept Jesus; how sweet he is!

If you are seeking salvation, read John 3 in a New Testament. If you are in need of spiritual counseling, contact a clergyman of your choice.

Missionary, arts evening set Sunday

Faith Christian Center will host a missionary from France and an evening of the arts on Sunday.

John and Nancy Cox are teachers and evangelists of the word of God with a heart to reach France with the Gospel.

John was born and raised with a Roman Catholic background. It was in 1977 that he realized his life was empty and without Jesus even though he had gone to church all of his life. After being born again and baptized in the Holy Spirit, God called John into the ministry.

While attending Christ for the Nations Bible Institute in Dallas, he met his wife, Nancy. He has served as associate pastor and ministered in many churches.

Nancy was born again when she was nine years old and knew God was calling her into His service at age 12. Though she knew Jesus, he did not become the Lord of her life until 1982 when she was raised from a deathbed.

Nancy attended Calvary Bible

John and Nancy Cox

School and Christ for the Nations Bible Institute. She has been involved with teaching children, training teachers, street evangelism and ministering with her husband.

Pastor Ed Barker and the congregation of Faith Christian Center, 118 N. Cuyler, invite the public to attend the 10:30 a.m. service on Sunday.

In addition to the missionary couple, Faith Christian Center will present "An Evening of the Arts."

At 6 p.m. Sunday, an evening of drama, Christian ballet and special musical numbers will be presented by the youth department at Faith Christian Center.

Retreat scheduled for women

The 11th Annual Panhandle Christian Women's Retreat will be held Oct. 19 and 20 at the Bishop Quarterman Conference Center (formerly the Episcopal Conference Center) located north of Amarillo.

Mira Somerville is the guest speaker for the retreat this year. She will bring four lessons on God's plan of salvation, which will include such topics as knowing the will of God, dealing with adversity, and service to God.

Somerville, who is 80 this year, has been teaching womens' Bible classes in the Panhandle area for many years. She is the widow of the Rev. H.A. Somerville, who retired from the Amarillo Bible Church, then returned to a teaching ministry in Pampa in 1969 when the Bible Church of Pampa was formed.

Deadline for registration is Sunday, and there is a fee, which includes meals and sleeping facilities.

For more information call Pat Kennedy at 669-3006, or Janice Hoffer at 665-6166.

The Conference Center is seven miles north of downtown Amarillo on U.S. Hwy 87/287. Take the Cherry Street exit, turning right (east). Follow the conference center signs to East Cottonwood Drive, which ends at Bishop Quarterman Conference Center.

Church calls for 'oil-free Sunday'

ELGIN, Ill. — In response to the current crisis in the Persian Gulf, the Church of the Brethren has joined with other Christian groups in calling for an "oil-free Sunday" on Oct. 21.

During this oil "fast," congregations will focus on the nation's dependence on petroleum and the consequences of this dependence for the entire world.

On Oct. 21, church members are encouraged to give up their normal use of gas- or oil-fueled vehicles. Alternate means of transportation include walking, bicycling, car-pooling, or using mass transit to attend worship.

The call for an "oil-free Sunday" was issued by the Church of the Brethren's peace team, in conjunction with Christian Peacemaker Teams — an initiative of the Church of the Brethren and several Mennonite bodies — and in consultation with the Peace With Justice Week Office and other related groups and agencies.

"The current conflict is over resumes — who has them, who needs them, and what price will be paid to get them," said David Radcliff, the church's peace consultant. "In this case, it is clear that our nation is willing to go to war to keep the oil flowing.

"From a Brethren point of view, all war is wrong," said Radcliff. "In this particular case, we are committed to making whatever lifestyle sacrifices are necessary to stop our country from going to war. In the event of further escalation, we will be there not to fight, but to bind the wounded, shelter the homeless and foster reconciliation."

The Church of the Brethren has contracted with the Maryland Department of Health and Human Services to provide resettlement services to at least 50 refugees from the Persian Gulf, if needed.

The church's New Windsor (Md.) Conference Center and the denomination's refugee office will provide food, housing, medical services, cultural orientation, English lessons and employment orientation.

The 151,000-member Church of the Brethren, headquartered in Elgin, Ill., traces its history to 1708, when the Brethren movement began in central Germany. Along with the Mennonites and the Quakers, it is one of the historic peace churches, conscientiously opposed to all war.

Catholic scholars say blocking dissent harms church

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In a period of hardening Vatican demands for doctrinal conformity, two top American Catholic thinkers have zeroed in on a specific case of enforcing it, and cried foul.

They say the action was unjust in the first place, and that continuing academic complicity in it is harmful not only to the victim but to Roman Catholic higher education and to the church itself.

The protest amounts to a challenge both to ecclesiastical authorities and to administrations of Catholic universities.

It comes after a recent tightening by the Vatican of prohibitions against dissent, but focuses on a 1986 case against the Rev. Charles Curran, a prominent moral theologian ousted from the Catholic University of America.

Arguing the ouster was carried out by unjust means, the Rev. Richard P. McBrien, theology department chairman at the University of Notre Dame, and the school's noted Christian ethicist, the Rev. Richard A. McCormick, charge:

"Continuing exclusion of Father

Curran from Catholic college and university theology faculties represents complicity in the original injustice."

The two scholars say efforts have been made by various Catholic theology departments to get Curran on the faculties, but "he has been positively excluded by upper administration."

Writing in the Sept. 8-15 issue of the Jesuit-edited national Catholic weekly, America, the two scholars say:

"We regard this exclusion as a continuing complicity in the original injustice done to Father Curran and as harmful not only to him but also to Catholic higher education in this country and to the church."

Most of Curran's theological colleagues "would give their proverbial right arms to get him" on their faculties, but the resistance comes from "upper administrations which are afraid," the article says.

"It is at once unintelligible and inexcusable that Catholic educators who know better should now have assumed the disturbing role of accomplices to the original injustice — an injustice not only to Father Curran but to Catholic higher education and the church he continues to serve so faithfully," the article adds.

The Rev. George W. Hunt, America's editor in chief, said he expected the essay to cause a great deal of reaction both in ecclesiastical and educational circles.

Curran was ousted after some of his views on sexual ethics, such as defending contraception, were denounced by the Vatican's doctrinal arbiter, Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger.

Ratzinger ruled him neither "suitable nor eligible" to teach Catholic theology. More than 750 American theologians signed a statement supporting Curran's stature in his field.

In the last three years, he has held teaching posts at secular institutions, at Cornell University, the University of Southern California and now Auburn University.

At issue in the case was "not the right of the church to teach and to defend its teaching against error, but the proper scope and use of that right," the article contends.

It says Vatican interventions in such cases have been "improperly and unjustly exercised" and flout "rights recognized in modern societies" by such practices as these:

Both prosecuting and judicial authorities are combined; the accused has no access to documents touching on charges; the proceedings are in secret; there is no right of appeal.

"In brief, the institutional structures and procedures are unfair to start with," the article says.

The authors say Catholic higher education could repair some of the damage to itself if a prestigious Catholic university such as Notre Dame, Boston College or Georgetown University offered Curran a theology professorship.

But the administrations are "intimidated by the actual or potential opposition," McBrien and McCormick write.

Mother's murder reflects painful life beneath rhythms for 15-year-old drummer

By LARRY NEUMEISTER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Larry Wright wanted a drum set, but his mother had money only for drugs. So one day he took the subway down to Times Square, flipped over a plastic bucket and began pounding it with battered drumsticks.

He hoped for coins, maybe $10 or $20. But as strangers watched this sinewy youth whale away - sweat pouring from his shirtless torso, tiny bits of wood and plastic flying - they proffered dollars instead of quarters.

By day's end, the kid from Harlem, who had never taken a music lesson in his life, had made $300.

That was about two years ago. He kept coming back, day after day, playing for hours at a time. He played faster and faster, built up his callouses and broke dozens of buckets.

He got some breaks: appearances in music videos by Phil Collins, Fine Young Cannibals and Jane Child, and a short documentary on public television.

This summer Wright, now 15, caught the eye of filmmaker Spike Lee, who featured him in a Levi's jeans commercial, playing his bucket and meeting his hero, drummer Max Roach.

But last month, at his moment of triumph, the drug scene claimed his mother's life.

Police say Marilyn Wright, 34, was waiting in line to buy drugs when she was shot during the attempted robbery of a drug dealer in her apartment building on West 138th Street. She died in the hospital 12 days later.

Detective John Grenawalt, who interviewed Mrs. Wright in the hospital, said there had been no arrest in her shooting. He added, incredulously, "To this day, I have yet to get a phone call from her family."

The family seems to accept her death as an awful - but not altogether surprising - consequence of her drug use and the neighborhood they live in. Larry and his grandmother, Margaret Cook, still live in the building.

Mrs. Cook was sitting on a folding metal chair on the sidewalk across from the building one day recently when she talked about her grandson. She is a slight woman who holds her arms close to her as she talks.

Larry gave most of his money to his mother, she said. "As soon as he made it, she took it, and it was going to the dope man, might as well tell the truth."

When Larry's father bought him a drum set for Christmas, "momma took care of it," the grandmother said. She chuckled at the absurdity. "I can talk about it. I can't hurt her now. She's resting."

"Some rich lady heard him and bought him a real expensive set," she continued. "Don't ask what happened to that one." Relatives and friends sitting with her nodded knowingly and joined the chuckling.

After his mother died, Larry appeared at her wake with his drumsticks and a bucket and set them down outside the door of the funeral parlor.

"He didn't really realize what happened to his mom until he saw her laying down in a coffin," said Monte Detioger, 23, who befriended Larry a year ago and now is his manager. "When I saw him looking at his mom, he was crying. He was like screaming inside."

Drumming came early and easily to Larry. His mother used to say he began tapping on things when he was 3 months old; his uncle, Bernard Mercer, says the baby always headed straight for Mercer's tambourines.

"He was just crawling in diapers. He couldn't walk yet, or talk," the uncle said. "He'd bang on the TV screen. He'd bang on the wall, on the refrigerator, anything."

Larry himself remembers tapping on floors when he was 3. Later came table tops, garbage pail lids, trees, bottles, cups and eventually, plastic buckets - the five-gallon size used to package wallboard compound and other products.

Which is what he was looking for on a recent day at 46th Street and Broadway. He scrounged several buckets from a construction site, knocked out the residue and was ready to warm up.

He tapped out various beats on the bottom of the bucket, gradually playing faster and louder. He threw in strokes to the side and rim to produce different sounds. Using his right foot to rock the open end of the bucket up and down against the sidewalk, he created a thumping bass beat.

Many drummers could imitate his rhythms with a little practice, but Larry's listeners marveled at his speed and precision.

At the point in his solo where a theater audience might applaud, Larry's new fans reached into their pockets. Most approached his bucket slowly and respectfully, depositing a dollar as carefully as they would at church.

"He's playing his insides out," marveled a tourist from Massachusetts. A commuter from New Jersey bought a can of Coke and set it down next to the sweating Larry. A young woman said she had seen him on television and wanted to marry him. Others gave him kisses.

"The kid's a prodigy," said a man from San Francisco.

Max Roach agrees. "He's phenomenal. The thing that fascinated me about him was the way he sequentially set up his rhythms to create music on that bucket. The way he put his accents in, you knew he wasn't just banging. Even though he would switch from eighth to 16th to 32nd notes, it was still musical," he said.

Roach spotted him coming out of Macy's one day. "There was a crowd around him. I heard these rhythms coming out and I stood there with the crowd for about 20 minutes. I was really impressed. The fact he had the strength that he could do this, probably for hours, and he made sense with it. Just that bucket. He's very musical."

And quite unprepared for success.

Detioger, his manager, describes Wright as a "street kid," with little education or understanding of people.

"He tries to be a man, but he's not," Detioger said. "He doesn't know anything about life. He's earning $200 a day banging on a bucket in Times Square. He said, 'Look Monte, I don't need to go to school, look at how I do.'"

Since his mother's death, though, Wright has returned to school for the first time in two years and says he's saving his money. His goal, he says, is not to be in a band but to become a star soloist.

"I'm good enough to become a star, I know that," he says. "I'm always playing my drums. That's the only thing I think about. I don't let nobody get to me." And he adds, "If I didn't have that talent, I'd probably be locked up somewhere."

In the background is the memory of his mother and her fate. Mercer, his uncle, says that for all her troubles Marilyn Wright forged a special bond with her son; she was honest about her drug problem, and warned him to stay clean.

"He's my life," she told an interviewer last year. "He's my whole world." In reality, however, drugs always rivaled Larry for her attention.

Mercer recalls the scene at the hospital, after she had been shot. "As they were getting ready to take her upstairs to her room, she looked at all of us and said, 'Take care of my son.' Then she started crying with this real cry, like I never... like she used to cry when she was a little girl."

Smoking ban canned at rehabilitation center

By CLAUDIA COATES
Associated Press Writer

ALIQUIPPA, Pa. (AP) — When Robin D. was in her late 20s fighting heroin addiction, Gateway Rehabilitation Center allowed smoking. She kicked heroin, but she couldn't kick cigarettes.

Last summer, Robin died of emphysema. She was 43.

"That just pushed me over the brink," Gateway's co-founder and medical director, Dr. Abraham Twerski, said.

Her death strengthened his determination to help alcoholics and drug users stop smoking cigarettes, which he noted kill more Americans than all other drugs combined.

So last October the 139-bed center 20 miles northwest of Pittsburgh repainted its yellowed walls and banned smoking by patients and staff. But after effectively treating drug and alcohol abusers for 18 years, the ban lasted just eight months.

"It was easy to write a policy. It was hard to make it work," Neil Capretto, director of treatment, said.

At first, Gateway treated nicotine like any other mood-altering substance. "You use — you're kicked out," Sharon Eakes, director of therapy programs, said.

Patients, whose last names are abbreviated to protect their privacy, argued and pleaded. Alcoholic Joe M. begged through tears to be admitted to Gateway's relapse program and be allowed to smoke, and Ms. Eakes had to turn him away.

Fuming patients demanded the right to smoke. During one community meeting, one patient threatened to call in the American Civil Liberties Union, Ms. Eakes said.

Leeann Unidas, patient evaluator, remembered the feeling among patients as: "Not right now. I can't do everything at the same time."

Gateway held its ground and many patients held theirs, smoking on the sly under the threat of dismissal. And they lapsed into addictive behaviors:

- Family and friends smuggled in tobacco.
- People drove up to the center at odd hours, dropped off packages and sped away.
- A black market developed in which a single cigarette sold for $3 to $5.
- Nicotine products were hidden in toilets, ceilings, radios and even body cavities.
- Patients went AWOL to walk to the corner gas station to buy cigarettes. "They were sneaking out at night, climbing out of windows," Capretto said.

The risks were great. For some,

Gateway is the last chance to salvage a relationship with a spouse fed up with drug abuse or to keep a job where the boss has warned to dry out or move on.

Knowing what was at stake and seeing toughness fail, administrators softened and allowed illicit smokers two warnings before cutting them loose. But the change just created an extra level of bureaucracy with lists of patients warned once and twice. The smoking and dismissals continued.

The policy grated on staff members, too. Employees who quit smoking felt the same pressure and frustration as the patients. Among the workers were recovering drug users who didn't appreciate being treated like addicts again.

"It was as if they were being told their recovery didn't count," Ms. Eakes said.

Sympathetic staffers pretended not to see patients smoking, Ms. Eakes said.

For her, the last straw came when a convict ordered by the court to lose his addiction was kicked out of Gateway. He had been caught walking down the road to K mart for cigarettes, she said.

The man went back to jail — for smoking.

By May, the dropout rate had tripled and the non-profit treatment center was losing money. More importantly, values were at stake. The quality that Gateway tries hardest to instill in patients fighting addictive behavior — honesty — was being undermined.

Today, Gateway holds to a tenuous compromise, created in part after officials learned at a convention last spring that other "smoke-free" clinics allowed smoking in restricted areas. Patients are not permitted to smoke during lectures or group therapy, which take up most of their time. But they may smoke in their leisure time in a designated area outdoors.

"That's going to hurt a lot of people," said Darryl S., a coal miner who managed to kick alcohol and cigarettes in a four-week program at Gateway.

"Every few days, I think about it," he said. "You do something for so long. You pick a cup of coffee up — well, a cigarette goes with it."

Now proudly nicotine- and alcohol-free, he spends more time with his family and rides a bicycle nearly every day.

It could take years, but Twerski hopes to try again to establish a truly smoke-free clinic.

"We're looking as to what happened. It's all very recent. We've got to do our homework," he said. "I still hope to go for the full loaf."

Israel's holy sites at center of political swirl

By G.G. LABELLE
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Marchers at Haram a-Sharif carried a symbolic coffin draped with an outlawed Palestinian flag. Jews, who call the site Temple Mount, swayed in prayer at the Western Wall nearby.

Again, the site revered by three religions is at the vortex of a political firestorm.

Tens of thousands of Jews heeded the Israeli government call Thursday to come to the Western Wall, also known as the Wailing Wall, to dance at the end of the Sukkot holiday and to support Israel's control of the holy site.

The area held holy by Jews, Christians and Moslems played host Thursday to political demonstrations after Monday's riot in which 19 Palestinians died from police gunfire.

At the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, built where Christ is believed to have been buried, Palestinians mounted a sit-down strike.

Women in traditional Palestinian black dresses decorated with embroidery sat in the courtyard of the church, while other Palestinians sat inside the white stone building.

On Monday, Arabs at Haram a-Sharif began throwing stones down on Jews praying directly below at the Western Wall.

Israeli police moved in tear gas, rubber bullets and live ammunition. By the time it was over, about 140 Arabs and 30 Jews were injured, in addition to the 19 Palestinians killed.

On Thursday, Arab Christian clergymen, walked from the 11th Century church to Haram a-Sharif. The clerics, who included Greek Catholic Patriarch Lutfi Laham and Anglican Bishop Samir Kafity, went for small cups of unsweetened Arabic coffee. They drank with Moslems in a traditional gesture of mourning.

"We came here to share with our brother Moslems their great grief, and we pray to God to grant this land peace and to preserve this Islamic shrine," said Bishop Basilus of the Coptic

A small boy waves the Israeli flag in show of support during a mass rally marking the end of Sukkot Festival at the Wailing Wall in the old city of Jerusalem late Thursday. At least 35,000 religious Jews answered a call by the government to assert control over Judaism's holiest site.

Church. The reverence for the site by both Jews and Moslems was at the heart of the rioting that enveloped the area Monday.

As Jews held their daily prayers at the West of the rioting that enveloped the area Monday. The group, called the Temple Mount Faithful, wants to build the so-called Third Temple on the site of the Jews' two harvest festival of Sukkot, a rumor spread on the Temple Mount above that a group of Jewish zealots planned to march there.

The group, called the Temple Mount Faithful, wants to build the so-called Third Temple on the site of the Jews' two ancient temples, the last destroyed by the Romans in 70 A.D.

However, the site is now occupied by two 7th and 8th Century mosques — Al Aqsa and the Dome of the Rock. Moslems believe it to be the spot where the Prophet Mohammed ascended to heaven on a white stallion.

The site is the holiest in Islam outside Saudi Arabia. The Western Wall, the remnant of the last ancient Jewish temple, is the most revered site to Jews.

Both are in Jerusalem's Old City, which Israel captured from Jordan along with the West Bank in the 1967 Middle East war. Israel later annexed the area.

As the Christian clergymen visited the Mount on Thursday, hundreds of Moslems marched for hours around the Dome of the Rock carrying a coffin covered by a black, white, green and red Palestinian flag.

The chanted "Allahu Akbar!" — God is great — and "We will redeem the martyrs!"

Convicted madam may testify against head of failed Texas thrift

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A convicted madam is en route to Texas and may testify against Vernon Savings and Loan chief executive Don Dixon, who allegedly looted the since-failed thrift, her former attorney said.

Karen Wilkening, who ran a $250-per-session call girl ring in San Diego for six years, is supposed to be available for a court appearance Monday in Dallas under a federal judge's order.

"She has anticipated for some time that she could be called as a witness for the prosecution in the Don Dixon trial," Wilkening's former attorney, Steve Carroll, said Thursday. "Whether or not she testifies depends on what information she has."

Jury selection in Dixon's fraud trial is scheduled to begin Wednesday. He is accused of spending several hundred thousand dollars of Vernon funds on prostitutes, hunting trips, political contributions, yacht trips, antique cars and a rented beachfront house in northern San Diego County.

Wilkening has been serving a 44-month sentence for prostitution-related charges at the California Rehabilitation Center in Norco. Prison officials said Thursday she was no longer there, but refused to comment on her whereabouts.

"She was taken out to court on Oct. 4 and has not returned," said CRC spokesman Paul Hamrick, who declined to elaborate.

Sheriff's deputies based at the Mansfield Law Enforcement Center, a detention facility near Dallas in neighboring Tarrant County, were assigned to participate in Wilkening's transfer, according to Fish's order. But Mansfield officials said Thursday that Wilkening wasn't there.

Court records show that U.S. District Judge A. Joe Fish in Dallas ordered federal marshals on Sept. 27 to move Wilkening to Texas from a California prison to "testify in the (Dixon) proceedings."

"I received a document from the U.S. attorney's office informing me that they wanted her in Dallas on (Oct.) 15th," Carroll said. "I have no idea why she left so early except to give Dixon's attorneys time to meet with her."

Wilkening, whose clients included prominent San Diego businessmen, was subpoenaed last year to testify before a grand jury investigating the failure of the Dallas-based thrift. She also has confirmed that she supplied prostitutes for Vernon executives when they were in San Diego.

Court documents allege that an estimated $10,000 was spent on San Diego prostitutes for three Vernon parties in June 1985 at the rented house in Solana Beach.

Dixon, a former Del Mar financier, has denied the charges against him. Defense attorneys insist he wasn't involved in arranging payments for prostitutes.

A former Wilkening employee told a San Diego newspaper several weeks ago that slain prostitute Donna Gentile attended a June 21 party at the Solana Beach house, where Vernon executives allegedly held an all-night bash.

"I knew that (Vernon) gang really well," she said. "They spent a lot of money and had a lot of parties on yachts."

The former Wilkening employee said she also had been asked by the FBI earlier this week to testify in Dixon's trial.

She identified Gentile previously from a full-face police photograph and remembered seeing her with three other prostitutes who allegedly were hired by another source to entertain Vernon executives.

Gentile's strangled body was found two days later. She was the first of 43 women, mostly prostitutes, who have been murdered in San Diego County. Their deaths are being investigated by a police task force, whose members have said the unsolved murders likely are the work of more than one serial killer.

Gentile, whose slaying reportedly will not be part of the federal court proceedings in Dallas, sometimes worked as a police informant. She had testified before a city civil service commission investigation police misconduct shortly before her death.

Her nude body was found dumped in a remote part of eastern San Diego County. Gravel had been packed in her mouth and her clothing was stacked neatly on top of her, suggesting to authorities that the killer wanted to silence Gentile or send a message to others who might testify at the hearing.

NEW YORK (AP) — Bruce Willis doesn't want to forget his humble beginnings, so he still pays rent on a rundown Manhattan apartment.

"To me, it's a reminder of where I came from. That's one memory I don't want to lose," Willis said in the Oct. 14 issue of Parade magazine. Before there was "Moonlighting" or "Die Hard" and "Die Hard 2," Willis supported himself in New York by working as a bartender and security guard.

He earned a combined $10 million for the two "Die Hard" movies.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Producer Steve Tisch and Roy Orbison's widow, Barbara Orbison, are working on a movie about the rock 'n' roll pioneer.

"I liked that Steve saw the picture the way I saw the picture, a story with heart and inspiration, about a man's journey and not just about rock 'n' roll but the human side of it," Mrs. Orbison said. Orbison was known for such rock classics as "Pretty Woman" and "Only the Lonely."
