Bush summons Republicans to lobby for budget package

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush summoned nearly 60 skeptical Republicans to the White House today for some arm twisting and cajoling as he mounted a heavy lobbying campaign for a $500-billion deficit-cutting package.

Bush was meeting with the Republican lawmakers in three waves today.

His spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, said the sessions had one purpose: to make a strong pitch for the budget agreement unveiled over the weekend.

"We'll be talking in very strong terms to all the members about how important this is," Fitzwater said.

"He's going to be twisting arms and cajoling and telling people that if you are not supportive of this, we ask you to take another look and think anew," Fitzwater said.

In its two-day life span, the plan has drawn barbs from lawmakers — Democrats and Republicans — wary of voting for a record amount of tax increases and spending cuts in an election year.

Fitzwater also said Bush probably would make a television address to the nation to promote the budget accord and also planned to give speeches around the country in the coming weeks.

"He'll be all over the place," Fitzwater said.

"The president will go to the nation, he will go around the country in one speech after another and lay out what's in this package," Fitzwater said.

In addition to his three meetings with GOP lawmakers, Bush was to meet today with a group of business executives to promote the budget package.

Missing from the list of those invited to the White House today was one of the most outspoken critics of the compromise, House Republican Whip Newt Gingrich, R-Ga.

However, Fitzwater said that nothing should be read into the fact that Gingrich's name had been omitted.

Bush already talked to Gingrich, the spokesman said, "and we'll talk to him again."

"We're talking to everybody," Fitzwater said. "There are a lot of people who disagree with this, a lot of people have trouble with it and they need to be convinced. And we're doing our best."

On Bush's plan to go on television, Fitzwater said, "We don't have anything scheduled yet, but he has indicated he would like to go on TV." He suggested a prime-time address to the nation was possible — something Bush himself suggested on Monday.

"The deficit must be dealt with and it's not an easy fix," Fitzwater said.

"Everybody knew this deficit-reduction agreement was an ugly duckling," said Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee. "Nobody expected it to sprout wings and fly like a swan."

But Bush put an optimistic face on prospects of approval. "It will all work out. Everybody will do what's right," he told reporters.

Congressional leaders planned a series of votes over the next three weeks to etch the compromise plan into law. But reluctance to support the package comes from members of both parties.

Republicans are leery of its $134 billion in new taxes on gasoline, alcohol, tobacco, airline tickets, incomes of the wealthy and other items. They also complained that defense cuts of up to $182 billion were too deep and that domestic programs were not pared enough.

Numerous Democrats don't like the package's $105 billion in spending reductions for benefit programs such as Medicare and the fact that many of the taxes — such as those on gasoline and alcohol — take a deep bite out of poor peoples' incomes.

And lawmakers of both parties from cold-weather states are furious over the plan's inclusion of a tax on home heating oil.

Sensing that lawmakers would be more willing to embrace the plan if it was supported by the public, congressional Democrats called Monday for Bush to take to the airwaves to sell it to the voters.

"We've put together the pain," said Sen. Wyche Fowler, D-Ga., who was one of the bargainers during four months of budget negotiations this year. "Now it's his job."

Bush said he had not made up his mind about a television address. But speaking to reporters in New York, where he had gone to address the United Nations, he said, "If it would help, I would be glad to do that."

Republicans and Democrats from both chambers of Congress met separately as their leaders tried to gauge support. Vice President Dan Quayle and other top administration officials met with Republicans in an effort to find votes.

The leaders' goal was to line up a majority of votes for the plan from members of each party in the House and Senate, a result that would help shield incumbents who voted for the package from campaign attacks.

County officials discuss audit concerns

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Discussion of the management letter generated from the most recent Gray County audit took up a big share of the time at the Commissioners' Court meeting Monday.

Gray County Treasurer Scott Hahn joined the commissioners at the table and said he was prepared to respond to most of the 22 points addressed in the letter written by the auditor, David H. Smith, a Pampa CPA. The letter addressed the audit for 1988 and 1989 that was approved several months ago by the Commissioners' Court.

Smith noted in the management letter that several matters involving the internal control structure were noted that, in his opinion, could be "reportable conditions."

"Reportable conditions involve matters coming to my attention relating to significant deficiencies in the design or operation of the internal control structure that, in my judgment, could adversely affect Gray County's ability to record, process, summarize and report financial data consistent with the assertions of management in the financial statements," the management letter reads.

Following are the matters noted by the auditor, which are in bold face, and responses by Gray County officials:

1. There appears to be limited communication between the offices of the county treasurer and county auditor.

(a) Reconciled bank accounts may show different balances.

(b) Reports for the same period and activity may be different.

Hahn said the reconciled bank accounts showed a $10 difference for several months due to a hot check situation. Hahn said he got a hot check from a previous employee and then tacked on the $10 hot check fee. The $10 check then bounced and for several months the balances were different between the treasurer's office and the office of A.C. Malone, who is county auditor.

Malone also said that because different timing was used to record some figures, there were some differences, although in the end everything came out equal.

Because of "bugs" in the computer system, Hahn said, the reports generated might have been different, but the situation is straightened out now.

2. The duties and obligations of each of these two officials should be reviewed so that the responsibilities are kept more clear-cut and defined.

Hahn said that in his opinion the duties and obligations of his office are defined by law in the state. He also pointed out that there is really no way the Commissioners' Court or anyone else can tell them how to run their offices.

3. There is no control over cash received. Money (checks) is even occasionally left in the Treasurer's Office when no one is in there.

Hahn said, "I take some exception to that ... I submit that there is control over cash received."

The treasurer said he did agree with the statement that checks should not be left in the office unattended, and that has been taken care of.

4. Cash receipts are not prenumbered. Receipts are to be made in triplicate with the payer receiving a copy.

Hahn said that in an effort to save money he had quit ordering the triplicate receipt forms and starting using his own and then making copies. He said that problem has also been solved by handing the unnumbered receipts in bulk to the auditor's office and letting them prenumber the receipts.

5. Any office actually remitting cash money to the treasurer needs to have a system of verifying the amounts remitted (i.e., tax office teleprinter money).

East and West Germany prepare to be one again

By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press Writer

WEST BERLIN (AP) — The Western Allies of World War II lowered their flags today and surrendered occupation powers to authorities of a "whole and free" Berlin in a final formality hours before German reunification.

A new united Germany of almost 78 million people will arise at midnight with fanfare and celebration. The new nation will be a major economic power in Europe and the world, but it will also face tremendous challenges in rebuilding the shattered East Germany economy.

Buglers from French, British and American armies played as flags were lowered in front of Allied headquarters, a dark red-brick building where top generals and diplomats had just held their 618th and final postwar meeting.

"At midnight tonight, the task of the commandants will be done," the three Allied generals wrote in a letter to West Berlin Mayor Walter Momper.

"We three commandants will shortly leave Berlin, and we shall carry with us a feeling of satisfaction that our collective efforts have been successful. The Berlin which we leave will be whole and free."

In other developments today:

— Arsonists carried out overnight attacks on two of Berlin's largest department stores, causing extensive damage, police said. The attacks appeared to be carried out by radicals opposed to unification. No one was injured.

— Nationwide, Germans prepared for the party of the century to ring in unification. Beginning today were three days of fireworks, church services, ceremonies and parties to mark the end of 45 years of division with its symbol in Berlin, a city of 3 million people spliced by an infamous wall.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl will lead the revelers, who are expected to party into the early morning hours in Berlin and throughout Germany. Left- and right-wing extremists have threatened violence at the Berlin festivities.

Iraq boosts its military forces in Kuwait

By JOCELYN NOVECK
Associated Press Writer

Iraq has strengthened its forces in southern Iraq and Kuwait and has now deployed nearly half its 1 million-man army to defend the occupied territory, U.S. military sources said today.

In the Persian Gulf, meanwhile, the aircraft carrier USS Independence entered on a visit intended partly as a "show of force" against Iraq, a Navy officer said in Saudi Arabia.

The 79,000-ton carrier and several ships of her battle group passed through the Strait of Hormuz, the only gateway to the gulf, today and are now operating in the waterway, a statement from the Pentagon said today.

"The Independence and its escorts will remain in the Persian Gulf for a short period to conduct normal operations," the Pentagon said.

More Egyptian soldiers also were headed to Saudi Arabia today. Two ships passed through the Suez Canal headed for the Saudi Red Sea port of Yanbu. Canal officials said they carried troops and military hardware but gave no details.

At the United Nations, Iraq unexpectedly postponed its speech to the General Assembly on Monday just hours after President Bush hinted that an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait could help resolve Arab-Israeli tensions.

Iraq's U.N. Mission gave no explanation for rescheduling the address to Wednesday. Diplomats speculated, however, that Baghdad wanted time to evaluate Bush's message.

Earlier Monday, Iraqi Ambassador Abdul Amir al-Anbari praised

Bush for saying he preferred "a diplomatic outcome."

In his speech, Bush said Iraq's unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait could create "opportunities for Iraq and Kuwait to settle their differences permanently; for the states of the gulf themselves to build new arrangements for stability; and for all the states and peoples of the region to settle the conflict that divides the Arabs from Israel."

The U.S. military sources in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, said analysts estimate there are well over 400,000 Iraqi troops in southern Iraq and Kuwait, compared to 360,000 a week ago.

The numbers of tanks, artillery pieces and other heavy weapons have also been increased, the sources said, speaking on condition of anonymity. They gave no figures.

The Pentagon said last week there were about 3,500 Iraqi tanks in the "Kuwait theater." Most are believed to be in defensive positions, many dug-in behind earthworks.

The buildup of recent weeks is concentrated in areas inland from the Persian Gulf and in a crescent around Kuwait.

The Iraqis were also said to have reinforced their defenses along the supply lifeline from the southern Iraq city of Basra into Kuwait. The highway runs about 20 miles to the border and another 50 miles to Kuwait City.

U.S. and Saudi officials have stressed that the allied forces are in defensive positions to protect against an Iraqi invasion of Saudi Arabia.

But many analysts have discounted the possibility of an invasion in view of the buildup of U.S. troops, now around 165,000, in the kingdom.

Clements: Progress being made in drug war

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says Texas is winning some battles in the war on illegal drugs.

"Clearly, our state is in a far stronger position in the war on crime and drugs than it was four years ago," Clements said.

"We have made tremendous progress in the past four years ... And believe me, much remains to be accomplished. We cannot relax our vigilance," he said.

Speaking to a leadership conference of the Texas War on Drugs organization, the governor said Monday that his administration has made crime fighting a top priority since taking office in 1987.

He said the state's prison system has been expanded significantly, noting that a federal court finally ended years of monitoring the prisons. Some 30,000 prison beds are being added to the system.

Drug testing now is mandatory for drug offenders on probation and parole, and a new law prohibits juries from giving probation to criminals convicted of selling drugs to a minor.

Clements also hailed a new law allowing the state to seize money and property of drug criminals, saying it "significantly weakens the powerful profit motive behind drug trafficking."

The governor also said some progress is being made — and more action is needed — against drug smuggling.

"No one disputes the fact that Texas rivals even Florida as the preferred route for drug smugglers. Drugs are transported into Texas by land, sea and air ... 30 percent of all heroin, cocaine and marijuana entering the United States does so through Texas," he said.

A statewide program to pool law enforcement agencies' efforts has resulted in the arrest of 17,000 people and the seizure of $23.6 million in drug profits. More than $1.1 billion in illegal drugs also have been taken by authorities, he said.

"But our efforts to stem the torrent of drugs into our state cannot stop on the law enforcement side. We must also work to halt the demand for narcotics. That is why I have set aside $1.1 million for additional drug education programs," Clements said.

"We must shut down the drug dealers. We must educate our Texas youth and convince them of the hazards of drug abuse. We must extend a hand of help and concern to those who turn to drugs," he said. "The stakes are high. The future is in the balance."

Shamrock family overcome by gas leak

By BEAR MILLS Staff Writer

SHAMROCK - Action by police and firefighters here Monday morning apparently saved the lives of three people when carbon monoxide overcame them in their home.

Chief of Police Art Taylor said his department received a call around 6 a.m. Monday from Sherena Houston reporting a strong odor in the house, which is located only a block from the police department.

When emergency personnel from the police and fire departments and ambulance service arrived moments later, they found Mrs. Houston passed out on the living room floor.

Her husband, Pizza Hut manager

John Houston, was dazed and wandering in the den of the home, Taylor said. Their child Adam, a first-grader at Shamrock Elementary, was semi-conscious and crying for help, Taylor said.

"(Mr. Houston) apparently woke up and realized he was in trouble," Taylor said. "He got them aroused enough that his wife called the police department and asked for help. When police got there, the child was crying and not really conscience and the mother was on the floor."

"John was up walking around in the back den and he doesn't remember how or why he was there. He didn't know where he was at."

Taylor said a check by officials for gas leaks in the home was unsuccessful.

"We ran a check on the gas and can't find a leak," he said. "The people from the gas company also did a carbon monoxide test and it didn't show it to be that high. But the hospital did a blood check on them and the carbon monoxide in their blood was high. As of the last time I talked to the gas company, they still had not determined what had caused it, and won't turn the gas back on until a certified plumber will OK the house."

Taylor said efforts to trace the source of the carbon monoxide poisoning was still under way though press time today. All three family members were admitted to Shamrock Hospital for observation and treatment, according to hospital records.

Voters need to register this week for election

This is the last full week for non-registered voters in Texas to get registered to vote in the Nov. 6 general election.

And newcomers to the area who will have lived in Gray County for at least 30 days on the day of the election are eligible to register in the county this week and be eligible to vote, said Gray County Clerk Wanda Carter.

Carter said anyone new to the area, those who are not registered or those who need to change their addresses should contact the tax office on the first floor of the Gray County Courthouse.

does have records on the amounts remitted and that the auditor is welcome to check that bookkeeping anytime.

6. To aid in tracing an audit trail the following would be helpful:

(a) Attaching a copy of the check to the invoice it paid or writing the check number on the invoice.

(b) Showing the payee of jury checks on the computer rather than listing as jury fees.

Hahn said duplications of all checks and bills paid are kept. He also said that the payee of jury checks has always been shown and he was confused at that statement in the letter.

7. Contract labor payments are being included with salaries in some departments because contract labor has not been budgeted for. These should be accounted for separately.

8. Federal regulations should be reviewed in regard to contract labor and those who do not qualify should be hired as temporary employees.

Hahn said he definitely agreed with numbers 7 and 8 and steps would be taken to correct any deficiencies.

9. There is no accurate listing of fixed assets held by the county.

Malone said he will soon be asking for an updated inventory from all officeholders.

10. Purchases of fixed assets, including typewriters and such, could have a budgeted line item separate from repairs to aid in maintaining an inventory.

Hahn said that although the precincts do have separate line items, the courthouse does not. However, plans will be made to change that with the 1992 budget.

11. There is no listing of debt owed that can be readily reviewed.

Hahn said that is not "terribly critical" to a county, although it would be to a business.

12. To improve the clearing of jury checks, the checks could state "void after 90 days."

Both the county and district clerk said that when they order checks next time, they plan to have that put on the checks.

13. Checks are not prenumbered. The computer prints check numbers itself according to information given by the inputter.

Hahn said checks will be ordered prenumbered the next time.

14. All voided checks should be clearly marked as such and the signature area torn off and disposed of.

Hahn said one check out of "hundreds" was found by the auditing firm with the signature area not torn off.

15. The Appraisal District does not give any written verification of the adjusted assessed values or the taxable values it has determined to be correct with the billing tape given to the tax office.

No response was made to number 15, although County Judge Carl Kennedy pointed out that it was an "unrealistic request" because adjustments are constantly being made.

16. The monthly treasurer's report is to be a detailed report of money received and disbursed. At the present time, it consists only of totals.

Hahn said "detailed" is subject to interpretation. Hahn requested treasurer's reports from area treasurers, he said; and all 11 of the ones he received are consistent with what he does. He said Potter County's is only one page, whereas Hahn's is four pages.

17. The commissioners should periodically receive a full budget of all county operations to keep themselves familiarized with all facets of the county.

Hahn said the budget is available at any time upon request.

18. The district clerk personnel have had access to payroll functions due to the CPU being in their office and support personnel dealing with them over the phone. They still have access to the general ledger functions and would only have to be given the password by the support group to access payroll again.

Hahn said a password system is now in effect that corrects the problem.

19. Computer "bugs" need to be worked out on a timely basis:

(a) The budget comparison to actual does not pick up all the accounts.

(b) The accounts payable package should be capable of processing credit memos.

(c) The payroll clearing fund is maintaining an improper method of accounting for due to's and from's.

On 19 (c), Hahn said he did not have a solution.

20. Control totals should be kept on inputting of cash receipts and accounts payable to assure that data is entered correctly.

Hahn said that has always been done.

21. There should be a "due to" in one fund without an offsetting "due from" in the other fund. These figures should be reconciled on a monthly basis.

Hahn said in response to this that there is disagreement with the computer programmer and the auditor and he knows of no solution.

22. The holding of accounts in the general fund and fines and fees should be reconciled when the state reports are sent in. At a glance, it would appear at Dec. 31, 1989, that all the funds due the state were not remitted.

Hahn said all funds due the state are sent in, but a timing problem occurred when the auditors looked at Dec. 31, 1989. Although the period ended at the end of December, the payment was not due until Jan. 31, therefore it looked like money was not being sent in.

NARO schedules meeting in Fort Worth

By BEAR MILLS Staff Writer

FORT WORTH - "We'd rather drill in Texas than kill in Kuwait" is a major theme for the upcoming National Association of Royalty Owners meeting, which begins Thursday in Fort Worth.

The three-day conference will deal with recent price hikes in crude oil, which the NARO has gone on record as opposing.

"(Current pump prices) are not stable, and the yo-yo effect is not any incentive to go in and gear up for exploration," said Mary Badgett of Lubbock, chairman of the 5,000-member organization.

"After spending 30 years in public accounting, I know that one of the things critical to business is some stability. That is the thing that NARO is advocating, so the people in the oil business will have a fair idea what could be laid as long-range plans. You don't just go out to an oil field and turn on a pump."

Badgett said the last round of serious gas hikes resulted in the windfall profits tax.

She said, "When the windfall profits tax was in effect before, there was an average of nearly 40 percent taken from the profits of royalty owners, and it bankrupted nearly 50 percent of the domestic production in America," Badgett said. "U.S. Senator Bob Packwood, R-Oregon, will introduce such dreaded legislation soon."

Royalty owners from 34 states will attend the gathering, with speakers including Wayne Swearingen, a Tulsa-based national energy expert.

"He called the shots right in late 1970 and has been one of the nation's leading advocates for price stability," Badgett said.

Topics will also include horizontal drilling and the problems and opportunities that technology has created for royalty owners.

Badgett said that while advocates of foreign oil imports point to the "low cost," those prices are deceiving.

"If you look at true costs, Persian Gulf oil is costing us about $90 a barrel," she claimed. "With oil sitting in the ground in Texas and Oklahoma, it really is misleading to the general public what is involved when we rely so heavily on imported oil. If the domestic energy companies had some of the same cash the government spent in the Persian Gulf guarding ships, our domestic energy companies would be back on their feet."

Badgett said NARO supports an oil import fee to provide foreign oil incentives.

She stated that without some protection of domestic production and royalty rights, instability in the Middle East will continue to haunt domestic gasoline pump prices.

Kiwanians seeking pledge collections

Members of the Pampa Kiwanis Club are currently collecting pledges for the $23,000 in local monies raised for providing full-time drug enforcement efforts for the city.

City officials were notified recently that the Kiwanis' fund-raising efforts resulted in a sizable state grant to purchase two drug dogs and fund a handler.

Those dogs are currently being acclimated with their trainer, Cpl. Dave Wilkinson of the police department, in Kansas, according to

Chief of Police Jim Laramore.

"It is now necessary for us to present to the city ... the $23,000 outstanding citizens like you pledged to this effort," a Kiwanis letter being mailed to those making pledges reads.

Approximately half of the pledges had been received by Monday, which was to be the due date, said Thomas Grantham, president of the Kiwanis Club.

He said pledges could be mailed to P.O. Box 1053 in Pampa.

The three Western allies will keep troops in Berlin, however, until the Soviets finish withdrawing their forces from East Germany over the next four years.

At this morning's ceremony, the outgoing commandants - Maj. Gen. Raymond E. Haddock of the United States, Maj. Gen. Robert J.S. Corbett of Britain, and Maj. Gen. Francois Cann of France - congratulated their fellow Allies and Berliners for their determination to keep West Berlin as a democratic island in Soviet-held East Germany for more than four decades.

In a dizzying rush of events, the Berlin Wall was opened in November and the hard-line Communist government of Erich Honecker fell. Free elections were held in East Germany in the spring and voters sent the Communists packing.

Williams says he will push for ethics reforms if elected governor

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican gubernatorial hopeful Clayton Williams says that if elected, he will push for ethics reforms to reduce conflicts of interest among state officials.

Williams said he wants to limit campaign contributions, require meaningful disclosure by politicians and toughen enforcement of state ethics laws.

"If elected governor, I want to see a greater effort made in making elected officials more accountable to those they represent," he said.

Texas state government has been rocked in the past year with revelations about the clout of lobbyists on the Legislature. News reports have shown that special interest lobbyists spent more than $2.2 million during 1989 trying to influence lawmaking.

In addition, criticism has been raised about the state's lack of limits on campaign contributions, including those of lawyers to candidates for judicial seats.

Among Williams' proposals:

- Prohibiting officials from lobbying or doing business with their former state agency for a year after leaving office.
- Restricting the way officeholder accounts can be used, and requiring any surplus left when an official leaves his post to revert to the state to help fund ethics enforcement.
- Prohibiting payment of honoraria for speeches and personal appearances by officials.
- Requiring lobbyists to report in detail how they spend money, including the name of the officeholder benefiting and the amount of money spent. Current law only requires lobbyists to report a monthly total of their spending, and they don't name names.
- Limiting contributions of lawyers to judicial candidates to $5,000.
- Limiting political action committees to $10,000 per candidate during any election cycle.
- Creating a department in the Secretary of State's office to enforce ethics laws.

In other political developments Monday:

— Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Ann Richards picked up the endorsement of a leading Texas environmental group, as the Sierra Club said Williams would be an "environmental disaster."

Sierra Club officials said Richards has a long record of action on the environment, while Williams has all but ignored the issue.

"Clayton Williams ... has only recently produced an environmental platform, and so far it seems to be the best-kept secret of his campaign," said club spokesman Ken Kramer.

The Republican's campaign shrugged off the endorsement.

"The Sierra Club is a partisan political operation that has a miserable record of understanding the need of balancing legitimate conservation efforts with the legitimate need to maintain economic growth and job creation," said Gordon Hensley, Williams' press secretary.

— Rice University sociology professor Stephen Klineberg released a survey showing most Texans aren't willing to trade environmental protection for economic development, and that they support such proposals as forced recycling.

Despite Richards' endorsement by environmentalists, Klineberg said, it's not surprising she's not the front-runner.

"The most central, immediate concerns that Texans have is crime and drugs and the economy," he said. "What you find is a campaign in which the 30-second spots of Williams are much more directly speaking about, 'I've got a solution to crime.' 'Busting rocks' is one of the best known expressions in the state."

— Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Hugh Parmer criticized the federal budget deal reached in Washington and being supported by his opponent, Republican Sen. Phil Gramm.

"The results of the budget negotiations are a series of policies designed to balance the budget on the backs of senior citizens, middle-class consumers and Texans in particular," Parmer said.

New doctor opens office for internal medicine practice

Charles W. Sisk, M.D., opens his office for practice this week in the Coronado Medical building adjacent to Coronado Hospital. Dr. Sisk is a specialist in internal medicine, with an emphasis in the treatment of arthritis and rheumatism.

As a specialist in the treatment of arthritis and rheumatism, Sisk is qualified to use different types of treatments for the relief of arthritis symptoms. He uses immunosuppressive medications, joint aspirations and injection of joints among other treatments for the disease.

Sisk has been in private practice in Kansas City, Mo., since 1978. He served as an associate professor of medicine in the division of immunology and rheumatology at the University of Missouri Medical Center in Columbia, Mo., from 1975-78.

He has served as the director of medical and scientific affairs for the Arthritis Foundation in New York; research coordinator for the Department of Medicine and Surgery of the Veterans Administration, Central Office, Washington, D.C.; and assistant professor of preventative medicine at Kansas University Medical Center, Kansas City, Kan.

Sisk received his medical degree from the University of Illinois College of Medicine in 1960. He received a master of public health degree from Yale University School of Epidemiology and Public Health in 1965. He served a general rotating internship at Rockford Memorial Hospital and completed his residency in internal medicine at Kansas University Medical Center in Kansas City in 1964. He served a fellowship in arthritis at Yale University School of Medicine in New Haven, Conn., from 1964-65.

Betty Sisk, wife of Dr. Sisk, is a Pampa native and the daughter of Margaret Wells of Pampa.

Retarded Lubbock woman who was raped due to give birth

AUSTIN (AP) — A 32-year-old Lubbock woman who doesn't know where babies come from is about to have one of her own.

But the mentally retarded woman, who has an IQ of 12, won't get to raise her baby because that decision rests in the hands of state officials.

The woman was raped last spring while under the care of the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation. She is so profoundly mentally retarded that she does not even know she's pregnant.

The Lubbock State School resident cannot understand why she throws up her meals or why something is stirring inside her body. At times, she cries out, points to her abdomen and begins beating it with her hand.

State officials and police still don't know who raped the woman six months ago. Without the father's identity, the unborn child's risk for birth defects increases because of potent anti-seizure drugs the woman receives.

An abortion that state doctors recommended never was performed for reasons that no one explained to the family, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

"Not only did the state fail in allowing her to become pregnant, but it's gone downhill from there," said lawyer David Ferleger of Philadelphia, who represents the woman and her legal guardian, older sister Dori Wooten.

Defense rests case in trial of mother charged in child's death

GARDEN CITY, Kan. (AP) — Diana Lumbra took the stand in her murder trial after testimony from a pathologist who said a virus caused the death of her young son last May.

Ms. Lumbra, who also faces trial in Texas in the earlier deaths of three of her daughters, spent only about five minutes on the stand Monday and her testimony was mostly about health and life insurance policies.

Lumbra said she had tried to cancel life insurance policies on Jose and herself in February, saying, "I just felt like I didn't need it."

She also said she earned $7.10 an hour working at a meatpacking plant. Defense attorney Michael Quint rested his case after Lumbra's testimony.

The prosecution, which contends Lumbra smothered the 4-year-old boy, planned to present additional testimony today in an effort to rebut Dr. William Eckert, the internationally known forensic pathologist from Wichita.

A local pathologist who performed the autopsy on Jose Lumbra concluded the youngster had been smothered. Eckert examined the body after it had been exhumed, and he said the child died of "a diffuse viral infection involving the lungs and liver."

Eckert was challenged by Finney County Attorney Ricklin Pierce after testifying that while the boy's lungs, heart and liver appeared normal, a microscopic examination of tissue showed that a virus killed him.

"There was no evidence of trauma or injury," he said. "My opinion is that the agent of death was a viral infection."

Pierce recalled Eva Vachel, the pathologist who performed the first autopsy. She testified that the child's lungs, heart, stomach, esophagus, larynx, thymus and appendix were not buried with his body. She kept those organs, she said, and Eckert could not have physically examined some of the organs he recalled appearing normal.

Asked later about the apparent contradiction, Eckert said, "I thought I had a heart and lungs ... I would have to check my records again."

Eckert said all the organs he examined had been jumbled together in a single plastic bag.

Sociologist Linda O'Neill of Florida, who monitors Texas state schools for the court, said Texas violated court orders by not informing her of the assault within 48 hours.

"This is just a terrible tragedy," Ms. O'Neill said. "I'm contemplating recommendations to the court about a course of action that would help ensure the health and safety of the young woman through her pregnancy and postnatal care."

Ms. Wooten has filed a writ of habeas corpus — the first ever against a state school — in an attempt to force Texas to release her sister to her care. The state opposes the release.

"I feel she's in more danger at that school. How do we know the man who did this to her isn't out there right now?" Wooten said.

Lubbock police still have not interviewed all 14 suspects. Twelve of the suspects are state school workers.

Police believe they will not know who raped the woman until the baby is born and the father is determined through genetic fingerprinting with blood samples.

State officials say they believe the rape occurred outside Lubbock State School.

Wooten said she wants her sister placed in a hospital or some other type of 24-hour care facility.

"I can't bring her home because my husband is a suspect," she says. "They're keeping her away from me to protect her, but who is protecting her from them?"

Skiers, jet skiers clash over lake

DALLAS (AP) — Jet skiers and waterskiers here are battling over who gets to use Fishing Hole Lake.

"We don't want to control the lake. We just want to be able to have access to it," said jet skier Bob Bown.

The secluded public lake on the Trinity River has been home to the Dallas Water Ski Club since the early 1960s. For the past six years, the 40-member club has had exclusive use of the lake on weekdays.

Club members tightened their grip in February, when they reached a three-year agreement with the city that expands their use of the lake to weekends.

Water enthusiasts, particularly jet skiers, argue that Fishing Hole is the only public lake in Dallas with such restrictions. They also say the lake is too convenient to be limited to one group.

But city officials say the agreement was made in part to keep the lake safe.

"Safety was the main concern," said Richard Zavala, assistant director for the Bachman Lake region in the Dallas Parks and Recreation Department. "We found a number of ordinance offenses — drinking, improper boating procedures, things of that nature."

Ski club president Paul D'Alessandro said jet skiers or others may use the lake during restricted hours, if no club members are practicing.

But both sides say that if a ski club member shows up when jet skiers are on the lake, it can lead to a confrontation. Bown and Ron Harris, a jet ski buddy, complained that club members sometimes threaten jet skiers.

D'Alessandro conceded that there have been harsh words, but he said he urged skiers to call police before allowing a confrontation to become violent.

Firefighting grandmother accustomed to jokes

AUSTIN (AP) — Laura Matau says she long ago grew accustomed to jokes about being one of Austin's few female firefighters. Now they she's hearing a new name.

"They said they're going to call me Granny. It's OK. Better than some of the other things they can call me," said Ms. Matau, 34, one of 11 women among the Austin Fire Department's 753 firefighters.

Matau said hers is a nontraditional career that she has found rewarding for 13 years. And she says the job shouldn't cut into her time with Elizabeth Cheyenne Rowley, the baby girl born Sept. 13 to her son, Jeff Rowley, and his wife, Marjorie, both 19.

Matau said few of her male co-workers have questioned her ability. "Most of the men in the department are really great. They're willing to give you a chance. Then there are some old-fashioned guys ..."

The department has few women because "not too many women really apply," she said. "I think the public, in general, feels you have to be 6-foot-2 and 225 pounds to fill the job. It's just a misconception."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Let's let Johnny come marching home again

Despite the massive military buildup in the Middle East, the post-Cold War military stand-down continues. The U.S. Army will reduce its numbers has not yet been decided. The White House wants to cut 17,000 full-time soldiers, the Senate 40,000, and the House 68,500. Other services face similar, though not as drastic, cuts.

Across the world the need for American military forces declines. As West and East Germany unify, East Germany's once formidable military has dissolved, and Soviet Red Army forces are pulling out. Moscow has worked out a deal for Bonn to pay the Red Army for a gradual withdrawal over several years. But the Soviet Union is itself dissolving so fast that the Red Army may go home sooner.

Knight-Ridder reported recently that Red Army "soldiers are selling their automatic weapons at cut-rate prices to purchase West German products now available in East Germany." Red Army officers and soldiers are also deserting, and have been granted asylum by West Germany. The desertions should accelerate once East and West Germany unite on Wednesday.

In the Philippines, President Corazon Aquino has said she will order U.S. military bases there dismantled if no agreement is reached by January with the United States. "If there is no understanding," she said, "nothing will come of the bases such that by Sept. 16, 1991, they will have to leave." As usual, she wants more U.S. taxpayers' dollars for the bases.

This time U.S. negotiators should say, "Adios, Cory." Even though the U.S. military saved her government last year when our fighters buzzed positions of rebels trying to seize power, she has not been grateful. After her government was saved, she even snubbed Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney when he visited the islands. Since Filipinos don't want the U.S. military unless we bribe them to let us stay, it's time to leave.

Another place we could pull out of is South Korea. The South is now a rich capitalist land that far overshadows the socialist North. And the North's Stalinist leader, Kim Il Sung, is old. Upon his death the two Koreas likely will reunify. The Cold War is over there, too.

A pared-back U.S. military could still project force overseas, through adequate naval, bomber, and missile power, and through maintaining the reserves for emergencies such as the Mideast crisis. The founding fathers distrusted large standing armies, such as the Redcoats that George III had unjustly stationed on our shores. The founders designed our free land to base its defense on a well-armed citizen militia, like the Minutemen. The Cold War made larger standing forces necessary for a while. But we won that war. Now it's time to give the order, "Job well done. Dismissed!"

Silence is golden - and safer

Now that the members of the Senate Judiciary Committee have spent several long days relentlessly interrogating President Bush's nominee for the Supreme Court, I can provide the following complete list of everything the hearings have revealed about David Souter:

1. A little skimpy, I grant, but don't blame me. Actually, we did learn something about Souter, namely that he's not stupid enough to reveal anything of consequence about how he will judge the cases that will come before him on the court.

His responses to each senator's questions mostly served the same function as a senator's answer to a constituent's letter: not to define his own views, but to soothe and reassure. When judicial nominees are probed like candidates for office about their opinions on one explosive subject after another, they can hardly be blamed for behaving like candidates for office and speaking up for nothing more specific than truth, justice and the American way.

When asked about the issue on everyone's mind, abortion, Souter sewed up his lips, invoking a solemn duty to keep silent on a matter likely to come before him as a justice. But he wasn't about to mimic the protagonist of Herman Melville's story, "Bartleby the Scivener," who met every request with the same maddening reply: "I would prefer not to."

No, Souter is shrewd enough to know that the senators could be appeased with a little indulgence, letting them pretend they were fulfilling their obligation to rigorously inspect the nominee. He furnished them with evidence of his warm, fuzzy side, telling how he once represented poor clients for free and declaring that judges "have to be constantly aware that we cannot seal ourselves away." If Robert Bork had made himself as ingratiating as Souter, he'd be Mr. Justice Bork today.

The nominee accommodated his inquisitors with achingly sincere bromides on the role of the Supreme Court, which filled lots of time and resolved about as much as the NHL's regular season. In cases where vaporous generalities wouldn't suffice, Souter took a few positions that may have seemed admirably straightforward but in fact were calculated no to offend anyone, much less change any senator's vote.

Ted Kennedy didn't erupt in outrage when Souter allowed as how the death penalty isn't unconstitutional. Mobs didn't pour into the streets when he endorsed the unacceptable. President Bush didn't retract the nomination when Souter saluted the justice whose seat he is supposed to fill, William Brennan, as "one of the most fearlessly principled guardians of the American constitution that it ever had or ever will have."

Supreme Court confirmation hearings used to be uninformative because no one particularly cared what the nominee thought or else figured it wasn't permissible to ask him. Now they are uninformative because, though everyone is dying to know what the nominee thinks, no one has found a way to extract a truthful confession.

Some groups with strong views on abortion detected alarming signals coming from the nominee. Hearing the implausible news from Souter that "I have not made up my mind" on abortion (implausible, that is, unless he's undergone a secret lobotomy), the National Abortion Rights Action League said such open-mindedness was an intolerable affront to the rights of women.

Howard Phillips, head of the Conservative Caucus, read the same footprints differently - arguing that because Souter had served without protest on the boards of two hospitals which provided abortions, he was untrustworthy on the question of overturning Roe vs. Wade.

Neither side, in fact, can have the slightest confidence that it knows how Souter will vote on that question or on much of anything else. Souter obviously doesn't mind abortion too much or he wouldn't have served on those hospital boards, which could mean he'll vote to preserve Roe. On the other hand, accepting legal abortion doesn't mean he thinks the Supreme Court should have assumed the prerogative of decreeing it from coast to coast.

You want to know which way he'll go? Flip a coin. You'll have as good a clue as anyone.

Liberal activists wanted to make these proceedings a replay of the Bork hearings, in which a talkative, opinionated and charmless nominee let himself be talked into wielding the shovel that would bury his nomination. Souter has made sure they would follow the script drafted by Antonin Scalia and Anthony Kennedy, who knew they would never regret what they didn't say.

'Ban the barb' - it's time now

For years, I have wanted to write about those little plastic things they use to attach things to other things.

I realize that's a lot of "things," but the reason I've never written about those, well, things, is I didn't know what to call them.

But you know what they are. Let's say you buy a new pair of socks. You will find the two socks held together by a thin strand of plastic with a "t" on each end.

Before you can put your new socks on, you have to separate them by removing the plastic thing, which is basically impossible to do.

The first thing you do is attempt to pull the plastic thing out of your socks, but you're not that strong.

Your next idea is to bite the "t" off one end of the plastic thing, which will make it possible to pull it out of your socks.

An alligator couldn't bite through those babies. Then, you realize the best way to get the plastic thing out of your socks is to cut it with a pair of scissors.

But you never have any scissors handy. I'm not certain if I even own a pair of scissors.

I don't sew and I simply rip the coupons out of the paper by hand, so why would I need a pair of scissors?

I bought a new pair of white golf socks recently. Before I went out to play, I tried to pull the plastic thing out of my new socks so I could put them on. I tried to bite it. Then I tried to find a pair of scissors to cut it.

What I finally did was become angry and frustrated and then I took the plastic thing in my hand and attempted to rip it out of my new socks. I came out, but it left a large hole in my new socks.

I cursed those damn little plastic things.

As luck would have it, I was cursing those damn little plastic things in front of a friend of mine who was also going out to play golf.

Fred Burns of Atlanta spoke up and said, "I've got a company that distributes those things to department store."

Fiend, I said to him.

Fred Burns, whose company is called Atlanta Pricing Systems, said he got those damn little plastic things from the Dennison Manufacturing Company.

But at least now I had a chance to find out exactly what those damn little plastic things are called.

"They're called 'plastic barbs,'" Fred Burns told me.

"Let me ask you this," I said. "How do they get the plastic barbs into say, socks, when they are so difficult to get out?"

"They use something called a 'swift tacher,'" he explained. "It's like a gun. It shoots the plastic barbs into to product."

"Is there anything such as a 'Swift De-tacher' you could use to get the plastic barbs out?"

"Not that I know of," said Fred Burns.

Well, there should be. They put those plastic barbs in items we buy and then don't offer us any kind of way to get them out with anything resembling ease.

It isn't right. It isn't fair.

I've become so frustrated dealing with plastic barbs, I'm afraid one day I'm going to find a swift tacher and put it to my head.

Plastic barbs aren't right. They aren't fair. The plastic barb is the worst thing that's been put over the public since instant grits.

Write your congressmen. I'm writing mine. Ban the barb. It's a movement whose time has come.

Men's, women's standards differ

By SARAH OVERSTREET

The Baltimore Sun recently polled readers to find out who does the housework in marriages where both partners have full-time jobs. No surprises here: A whopping majority said it was the wife who did the bulk of the household chores.

Sociologist Arlie Hochschild made a 10-year study of this phenomenon, and in her book, "The Second Shift," concluded that their husbands don't. But as valuable as Hochschild's research is, I part company with her on a couple of her conclusions:

Hochschild says some men "play dumb" and act like they can't do housework - they burn food, forget the grocery list, can't find implements they need for chores - so their wives will decide it's simply easier to do it all themselves.

Hochschild also says that to avoid housework, men play the "needs reduction" game, convincing themselves they don't need the benefits housework gives them, such as ironed clothes, nice furnishings or good meals. Cap'n Crunch is just fine with them.

These conclusions may be partially rooted in fact; I certainly can't speak for men. However, I can see parallels in my own life. For instance, a male friend has been trying to teach me car maintenance, and while I try to pay attention to whichever whistles he's pointing to and remember what it does, sometimes I don't. So the next time I try to do a procedure or diagnose a problem, I may not remember how to do it.

A female quirk? No. I've been doing basic household repair all my life, and I sometimes give him advice in that arena. I simply have no frame of reference for automotive work, and every time he shows me something new I feel like I'm trying to cope in a foreign language. So why should I assume a man having trouble with Shake 'n' Bake directions is "playing dumb"?

I don't know that the idea of "needs reduction" is completely preposterous, but a lot of the men I know really don't give a hoot about ironed shirts, would as soon eat Pop Tarts as a breakfast comprised of all four food groups, and couldn't care less whether the front room has a coordinated decor or is turned into a miniature golf course.

I don't think it's worth my while to make enough money to buy a fancier house in a better neighborhood. Does this mean I'm putting on a "needs reduction" ruse, or that this simply isn't a priority for me?

I don't think these observations should qualify me for membership in the Eagle Forum, either. I've been in the trenches working full-time and doing more than my share of the housework. I understand the resentment and how hard it is to talk about it with a husband. I just don't think the average man is the villain here.

All of us, men and women, are pioneers in a new land that sprang from the monumental social changes of the last 30 years. We've had to virtually re-mold entire lifetimes of conditioning into new kinds of relationships that our parents didn't have and we didn't even envision. It hasn't been any day, at the beach for men, either. Their dreams, the expectations they grew up with of what their lives would be like when they became adults, didn't happen, either.

So where does that leave us? On a positive note, Hochschild says more couples than ever before say they want to share housework and are trying to do so. But one of the stumbling blocks is women's sometimes Herculean expectations. Just as many men grew up expecting not to have to do certain chores, we unconsciously accepted a "standard of dirt" handed down from mothers who had a lot more time to devote to making sure their toilet seats could earn a "sanitized for your safety" seal.

If we ever do share housework more equally, men and women have to come closer together in standards and expectations, as well as actual time spent behind a broom.

Lobbyist first to reap profits from dog tracks

HOUSTON (AP) — Austin lobbyist Nick Kralj has made three times as much money for himself in representing dog racing tracks than the state has made in revenues from pari-mutuel wagering. The state of Texas so far has collected $960,000 as its share of pari-mutuel wagers. Kralj, a Galveston native, has taken in at least $2.4 million from the industry, most of it from outside of Texas, The Houston Post reported.

Kralj has collected fees from out-of-state interests financing dog racing tracks in Corpus Christi and Harlingen and an application for a Galveston track. He's part owner of the soon-to-be opened Corpus Christi track and will be part owner of the Galveston facility, if it is approved. "I make a good living," Kralj said in a deposition taken for a Galveston County license. He said he received about $1.5 million from Florida's Hecht family, his partners in the Corpus Christi track and Galveston application. The Houston Sports Association also is involved in the Galveston application.

In addition, Kralj, once called "the father of greyhound racing" in Texas, said he was paid $580,000 from his Texas partners in the applications and $275,000 to $325,000 in fees for helping a British-backed investor group build the Harlingen track. And he's trying to put a gambling ship at Freeport. Kralj said Sunday he would not comment on his pari-mutuel efforts while the Galveston County application remains unsettled.

Kralj, a leading lobbyist for pari-mutuel gambling interests throughout the 1980s, now has an 8 percent interest in the Galveston County proposal and a trust for his children owns a 6 percent interest in the Corpus Christi track. Texans overwhelmingly approved pari-mutuel betting in 1987 and allowed for three greyhound tracks in the state.

Kralj represented the Hechts' interests in testimony about their initial Galveston County proposal when they were opposed by four other applicants. The group lost, but joined in an appeal that sparked a court order leading to the rehearing now under way.

The Hechts, whose properties include Flagler Dog Track in Miami, merged in the past year with HSA interests in obtaining the Galveston County license. They are proposing a site in La Marque.

But at the most recent hearings on the application, Florence Hecht, the Hecht family matriarch, testified, "I know nothing about Mr. Kralj."

Fred Havenick, president of the Hecht family's Southwest Florida Enterprises, said his group is not trying to hide Kralj, but he acknowledged "the board was not happy with him last time. They made that very clear."

At the initial hearing, Kralj testified about personal financial problems that made him late in paying property taxes.

If the new Galveston County application is approved, Kralj will not be the only one to benefit. His former business partner, Paul Jesko, would receive $250,000 from Kralj for purchasing a potential dog track site. Jesko is now in federal prison for selling the government $5 million worth of substandard wire used in missiles, ships, tanks and airplanes.

Jesko would get the money — most of it from the Hecht family — even though the group is now pitching a different site for the track. Kralj told the Department of Public Safety during its investigative hearing for the track last year that he had "severed his relationship" with Jesko on April 24, 1987.

The DPS said it "was unable to confirm any irregularities on the part of Nicholas Kelsey Kralj in his business dealings with Paul Henry Jesko," The Post reported. The investigators also said that as of June 1989 the Hechts had paid Kralj $914,853 to lobby for pari-mutuel gambling in Texas.

Brandley wants to go back behind bars — to preach

By MICHAEL GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Former death row inmate Clarence Brandley wants to go back behind bars.

Brandley, cleared of a 1980 rape-slaying of a teen-ager, said he wants serve as a minister for convicts who were once his colleagues. A week ago, Brandley preached his first sermon at a Houston Baptist church, saying he had been called by God to the pulpit.

"Now I believe I can go on with my life," said Brandley, 39, who in January was released after more than nine years on Texas' death row. "It's been a long time coming."

Brandley, 39, spent nearly 10 years on the Texas death row after he was convicted of the Aug. 23, 1980, rape-slaying of 16-year-old Cheryl Dee Ferguson at Conroe High School, where Brandley worked as a janitor.

During his time on death row, he came within five days of execution.

On Monday, the U.S. Supreme Court without comment refused to reinstate Brandley's murder conviction, which had been thrown out by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals last December. In January, Brandley walked out of death row while Montgomery County prosecutors took their appeal to the nation's highest court.

Brandley's lawyers contended their client had been a victim of racism. Brandley is black and Miss Ferguson was white.

"This is a true testimonial that, at least in the end, we have those avenues where we can correct injustices — but it was sure hard," said Brandley's attorney Mike DeGeurin.

Brandley's first trial ended in a hung jury. An all-white jury convicted him of capital murder in his second trial. A judge in 1987 recommended a third trial, citing discrimination against Brandley.

Brandley would not dwell Monday on the racial aspects of his fight. Asked if he harbored any resentment, he said, "That doesn't do me any good, that I have any animosity toward someone. That's not going to change anything. What's happened has happened."

"I've learned a lot of things. You

Monday's decision also marked a bitter defeat for Montgomery County District Attorney Peter Speers.

"In terms of pursuing the case, there's nothing I can do," Speers said. "I don't think there is another suspect in the case. I think the killer of Cheryl Ferguson has gone free."

Speers on Monday filed a motion to dismiss the case. It was signed Monday afternoon by State District Judge Lee Allworth.

Brandley's lawyers contended their client had been a victim of racism. Brandley is black and Miss Ferguson was white.

"This is a true testimonial that, at least in the end, we have those avenues where we can correct injustices — but it was sure hard," said Brandley's attorney Mike DeGeurin.

Brandley's first trial ended in a hung jury. An all-white jury convicted him of capital murder in his second trial. A judge in 1987 recommended a third trial, citing discrimination against Brandley.

Brandley would not dwell Monday on the racial aspects of his fight. Asked if he harbored any resentment, he said, "That doesn't do me any good, that I have any animosity toward someone. That's not going to change anything. What's happened has happened."

"I've learned a lot of things. You just have to be positive and sometimes go through some trials and tribulations before you really are able to appreciate what life is all about."

Brandley said he felt sympathy for Miss Ferguson's father and hoped the right person would be caught in the slaying.

"The facts are there and I can't make him believe what he doesn't want to believe. That sometimes happens when you get so caught up in racism and hate," Brandley said.

During the appeals, DeGeurin insisted white janitors who should be considered suspects in the slaying were ruled out merely because of race.

Brandley now is studying to become an electrician. He appeared at a news conference at his attorney's office Monday wearing a tool belt and a T-shirt.

"I feel like it's over," said Brandley, who learned of the high court decision when his fiancée called him on a job site.

Survey: Texans support laws requiring recycling

AUSTIN (AP) — Most Texans surveyed support required recycling and are unwilling to sacrifice environmental protection for business development, according to a Rice University report.

"Texans understand and believe that you don't get economic growth at the expense of the environment," sociology professor Stephen Klineberg said Monday.

The survey of 1,000 Texans was conducted July 28-Aug. 12, and had a margin of error of 3.5 percent.

When asked about their community's most serious problems, 49 percent cited crime, drugs and immorality; 22 percent, the economy, jobs and poverty; and 5 percent, environmental problems.

Others cited no problems, or other problems. But when asked specifically about environmental issues, 68 percent disagreed with the statement, "We should think of jobs first, and pollution second."

Eighty-five percent agreed that an industrial plant should be shut down if it can't comply with government pollution standards. Eighty-eight percent agreed people responsible for a factory knowingly releasing greater-than-allowed cancer-causing chemicals into the air should face prison.

And 63 percent of those responding would back up their beliefs with their money: They said they'd be willing to pay $200 more a year for purchases, if the funds were used for new pollution controls.

Texans also are willing to change the way they live, according to the survey.

While 56 percent said they often have saved cans, bottles or newspapers for recycling in the past year, and 28 percent said they sometimes have, 77 percent would back a law requiring such recycling.

Another 83 percent said they would support a law requiring a deposit on glass bottles sold in Texas, to reduce litter and encourage recycling.

Stronger government regulation to control industrial pollution was supported by 84 percent of those surveyed.

Fifty-three percent favored new taxes on coal and oil consumption to reduce emissions that cause global warming.

But Texans only were willing to go so far for the environment.

"The one exception to this universal environmental sentiment ... comes with the gasoline tax," Klineberg said. Sixty-two percent of those surveyed opposed higher gasoline taxes to encourage more efficient cars and more use of buses and trains.

Half of them agreed the state government was doing a fair job on the environment. Forty-five percent said they probably wouldn't vote for a congressional candidate they disagreed with on controlling pollution.

The Texans who participated in the survey live in various parts of the state.

Sixty-eight percent have lived in Texas for 20 years or more. Fifty-six percent were women.

Asked their political affiliation, 32 percent responded Republican; 31 percent, Democrat; 25 percent, Independent; and 12 percent other or don't know.

Bentsen blasted for heating oil tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — A leading New England Republican charged Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, left the region in the cold by pushing for a 2-cent per gallon tax hike on home heating oil.

Rep. Silvio Conte, the ranking minority member of the House Appropriations Committee, said he thought the budget agreement exempted home heating oil from the tax increase on petroleum products.

Bentsen acknowledged Monday that he objected to that exemption, which apparently was removed at the White House on Sunday before President Bush announced the pact.

"It's a question of equity, of ensuring that all regions of this country bear a fair share of the burden of reducing the federal deficit," said Bentsen, chairman of the tax-writing Senate Finance Committee.

"The guy's got no conscience. He's in the hip pocket of all those damn oil producers," Conte said of Bentsen Monday.

Both lawmakers joined Bush in announcing the budget pact, which will cut the federal deficit by $40 billion in 1991.

The extra 2 cents per gallon on home heating oil is expected to give the government $200 million over five years.

A typical New England household used 736 gallons of home heating oil in the winter of 1987, the latest for which figures are available, said Tom Welch of the Energy Information Administration. That household would have paid an additional $14.72 if the tax had been in place in 1987.

The tax in the budget agreement that will raise the most money is on gasoline, increasing 12 cents a gallon to give the government about $45 billion over five years.

One reason Bentsen decided to support such a sharp increase on gasoline was because home heating oil, dominant in a part of the country where less gasoline is used, would also face a higher levy, he said.

Your help is their hope.

Gunmen attack rebel Lebanese general's supporters, 30 dead

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Gunmen raked supporters of rebel Christian Gen. Michel Aoun with automatic weapons fire as they rallied at a candlelight vigil and police said today that 30 people were killed and 100 wounded.

Aoun blamed the Lebanese Forces militia of rival Christian warlord Samir Geagea, calling Monday's killings a "horrific massacre." He said President Elias Hrawi's Syrian-backed government was "equally responsible."

For his part, Geagea accused Aoun of engineering the bloodbath to win international sympathy as government troops tighten a siege around the general's enclave.

The rival forces of Aoun and Geagea battled for control of Lebanon's Christian communities earlier this year. Hrawi is besieging Aoun's strongholds in an effort to make him yield to government authority.

In a new attack today, snipers fired at pedestrians in the same spot as Monday's shooting, killing a civilian and wounding four, police said.

The earlier carnage occurred shortly before midnight at the coastal highway bridge spanning Nahr el-Maut, or Death River, five miles north of Beirut, police said.

They said about 5,000 Aoun supporters carrying candles demonstrated at the crossing to protest the weeklong siege of Aoun's enclave, where his 15,000 soldiers are headquartered.

"As they shouted slogans condemning the president and Mr. Geagea for the starvation blockade, gunfire suddenly erupted and the crowd panicked in a stampede," said a police spokesman.

"Some of the victims were trampled to death, but at least 22 died of gunshot wounds," said the spokesman, who cannot be identified in line with standing rules.

In his statement, Aoun said Hrawi, Geagea, Prime Minister Salim Hoss, Defense Minister Albert Mansour and Hrawi's army commander Gen. Emile Lahoud are "equally responsible for carrying out the massacre."

He called on the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France to withdraw their recognition of Hrawi's government.

Federal budget proposal draws cries of foul from those affected

By The Associated Press

The jeweler Cartier is crying foul, the elderly are worried and a liquor distributor says bootleggers are apt to move in on his territory because of the new taxes and cutbacks in the proposed $500 billion deficit-reduction plan.

"Bush sure made a big deal about reading his lips, didn't he?" grumbled Curtis Sine, a barber in Ottumwa, Iowa.

The plan unveiled Sunday calls for $134 billion in new taxes on gasoline, alcohol, tobacco, airline tickets and other luxury items and includes $105 billion in spending reductions for benefit programs such as Medicare.

Some around the country shrugged off higher taxes Monday, saying the deficit must be brought under control. Sine wasn't one of them.

"It sounds terrible, but frankly, I'd like the other guy to pay for it. I think generally that's how people think," he said.

Mark Sherman, owner of Spirit World liquor store in Omaha, Neb., said, "People are going to drink less and drink better. The actual gallonage we sell is going to go down."

And Jack Hooper, president of the Tennessee Wine and Spirits Co.,

a major distributor, said bootleggers will benefit from the higher alcohol tax. "We run the risk of making legitimate businesses more expensive," he said.

The taxes would be used to dig politicians in Washington out of "a hole which they dug through fiscal irresponsibility," said Virginia Gov. L. Douglas Wilder.

"The individuals who will bear overwhelmingly the burden of this 'agreement' are the majority of Americans — the hard-working middle class — and Americans in need, the poor among us," he said.

Joe Crosby, 71, of El Paso, Texas, said he's one of those people.

"I'm a disabled. I'm on Social Security and Medicare. They're hurting me when they do all of that," he said.

Ralph Destino, chairman of swanky Cartier, said smaller jewelry makers and retailers will be hurt. "This notion that somehow or other taxing jewelry is in the 'soak the rich' category just isn't borne out by the facts in this country," he said.

Bernard Hargrove, who sells boats at his Red River Marine in Heber Springs, Ark., complained of new fees on boats. "That's ridiculous. Let's charge them an annual fee to play golf or go watch a football game or whatever," he said.

Mando Guerra, a patron at Midtown Lounge in El Paso, Texas, wasn't concerned about the higher alcohol taxes but said his grandmother receives Medicare benefits. "It's going to hurt a whole lot of old people," he said.

The agreement would boost the federal gasoline tax from 9 cents per gallon to 21 cents by next summer.

"Look at this — I'm already paying $1.66," said Richard Coleman, a printer from West Haven, Conn., who was pumping premium unleaded at a station. The state has the nation's highest state tax at 22 cents a gallon. "They're hitting the middle class again."

Truckers cried foul. "A lot of these truck drivers operate just down to the bare teeth now, as far as profit margin is concerned. This is gonna hurt 'em," Bill Gussett said from the Flying J truck stop in La Grande, Ore.

Higher gas taxes don't worry Bob Muscatell, who sells motor homes and recreational vehicles in Santa Clara, Calif.

"I've always taken the position the RV buyers are not concerned about the cost of the gasoline," he said. "Even if (gas) costs $2 a gallon and you want to go on a trip with your family, it's still cheaper than flying and other means of transportation."

UAW heads to Ford Motor next

By FREDERICK STANDISH
AP Auto Writer

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers turned their attention to Ford Motor Co. today after the union's contract with General Motors Corp. won overwhelming approval from the UAW rank and file.

The UAW hopes to get Ford to adopt the contract with little or no change. Negotiations with Ford were to resume today for the first time since Aug. 28, when the union chose to focus on GM to set a pattern contract for the industry.

"We want to get on with this thing," Ford spokesman Dick Routh said Monday.

Workers at GM factories and offices in 29 states ratified the three-year pact 86,032 votes to 21,461, the union said Monday. Only a third of the 300,000 members eligible to vote cast ballots last week and Sunday.

The light turnout reflected satisfaction with the agreement, former UAW vice president Irving Bluestone said.

"When people are upset, that's when they come out to vote in droves," he said.

It's expected that Ford will be able to sign a parallel contract, perhaps within a couple of weeks.

Under the GM-UAW agreement, GM will spend up to $4.1 billion to guarantee the income of laid-off workers. The contract also calls for a 3 percent raise the first year and lump-sum payments of 3 percent in the following years.

Reports have said that if the income-guarantee provision is carried over to Ford, it could cost that company about $1.4 billion. Ford, however, streamlined its work force several years before GM and might have smaller obligations.

The story might be significantly different when the talks shift to Chrysler Corp., possibly by the end of the month.

Chrysler is in the worst financial shape by far of the Big Three and has said the GM agreement seems expensive. Later this month, Chrysler is expected to report what could be a third-quarter loss of more than $200 million.

The Big Three contracts cover about 463,000 workers in all. The contracts expired Sept. 14, but their terms were extended while talks continued.

CBS News' answer to 'Nightline' has a way to go

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "America Tonight," CBS' answer to "Nightline," has a way to go before it's more than an insomniac's edition of morning talk.

Monday night's premiere proved a once-over-lightly exercise, with too much crammed into too little time.

The 30-minute premiere included a 40th anniversary story on "Peanuts" cartoonist Charles Schulz and a promising segment called "The Engage." The creators will mercifully shun interviews with actors hawking movies.

"We hope to have some insights, to have some arguments and have some fun," said folksy Charles Kuralt, the show's anchorman in New York. Crisp, efficient Lesley Stahl is the program's anchor in Washington.

The show, which began at 11:35 p.m. EDT, could have dispensed with analyses, that added little to the world's knowledge, one on prospects for war in the Persian Gulf, the other economic reporter Robert Krulwich's light-hearted, although knowledgeable, look at the federal budget compromise.

"The Engage" is an occasional segment in which visiting experts and analysts discuss the day's hot topics. That can be dreary, but the first matchup of two former Reagan administration officials discussing the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2 proved an inspired, different sort of Washington forum.

Former Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Perle and former Navy Secretary James Webb made war, or the prospect of one, more than just a TV abstraction.

Hitler quote in newspaper causes campus commotion

HANOVER, N.H. (AP) — The Dartmouth Review, a politically conservative Dartmouth College weekly that has attacked women, blacks and homosexuals, is under fire for printing an anti-Semitic passage from Hitler's "Mein Kampf."

The student newspaper was distributed Saturday on Yom Kippur, the Jewish Day of Atonement and Judaism's most solemn day.

Dartmouth spokesman Alex Huppe said Monday a student petition drive against the newspaper collected more than 1,000 signatures, and a protest rally is planned for Thursday. The off-campus paper is not affiliated with the college.

The Dartmouth Student Assembly, which represents the 3,200 undergraduates, condemned The Review, and university President James Freedman accused the paper of "an act of moral cowardice" and a pattern of discriminatory attacks.

The passage from Hitler's manifesto was inserted, without attribution, into the credo on The Review's masthead:

"Therefore, I believe today that I am acting in the sense of the Almighty Creator: By warding off the Jews, I am fighting for the Lord's work."

Editor in chief Kevin Pritchett said the quote was inserted without the editors' knowledge. He said someone could have gotten access to the paper's computers.

"It was an ugly, awful, anti-Semitic prank," he said. "It caused a lot of hurt feelings. We at The Review are sickened by this."

The newspaper, in a statement, offered "heartfelt apologies to Jews at Dartmouth and to the Dartmouth community at large" and said it is investigating how the passage got into print.

Global economies would be casualty with direct hit on oilfields

By ROBERT DVORCHAK
AP National Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — For global economies, an empty barrel of oil can be as scary as the loaded barrel of a gun.

No shots have been exchanged yet in the Persian Gulf, but war jitters have doubled the price of crude oil to around $40 a barrel since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

In New York, the stock market has fallen 15 percent to its lowest point in 16 months. The Tokyo market is even worse, plummeting about one third to a level below the 1987 crash. In London, stocks are down about 14 percent.

So what happens if the real thing breaks out and bullets start flying in the world's richest oilfields? What if Iraqi missiles strike pipelines, pumping stations, oil ports or tankers in Saudi Arabia? What if poison gas or germ warfare scatters oilfield workers?

"It is not just thousands of lives that are at stake in a shooting war. There is a risk of a real cataclysm for the global economy," said Christopher Flavin, vice president of research at Worldwatch Institute, a policy research organization.

Worldwatch's projected casualty list means worldwide gas rationing, the financial collapse of developing countries, outright failure of the economic reforms in Eastern Europe and a severe shock to the world banking system.

Many experts believe doomsday anxieties are unfounded because Iraq is unlikely to knock out Saudi exports. The Iraqis repeatedly tried but failed to cripple Iran's Kharg Island loading terminal in an eight-year war, and Iran had nothing resembling the U.S.-led, high-tech shield protecting Saudi Arabia.

But Iraq has vowed to fight "the mother of all battles." The Strait of Hormuz could become choked with mines, terrorists could unleash hit squads and kamikaze pilots could fly missions against oil terminals or tankers.

And even though Iran fought a bloody war with Iraq, Iranians are again shouting "Death to America," so who knows what they might do?

Grab the financial flak jackets.

The World Bank estimates a shooting war would boost oil prices to $65 a barrel. Worldwatch said war could bring $80 prices, and the former Saudi oil minister among others said it might even hit $100.

Superexpensive oil would trigger a financial chain reaction. The immediate spike could mean gas pump prices of $2.50 a gallon or higher, soaring electric bills and higher airline fares. Prices would climb on oil-based products such as plastics, pharmaceuticals, synthetic clothing and asphalt.

There would also be the likely double whammy of recession. The United States, the world's biggest oil user, has 6 percent of the world's population and 3 percent of its oil reserves but consumes 26 percent of its oil.

In a pinch, people are less likely to make major purchases such as cars, houses, major appliances and discretionary clothing.

"A shooting war hits the consumer section very hard," said Roger Brinner, chief economist for DRI-McGraw Hill. "There's a double blow to the economy from oil price shocks: the direct hit of weaker purchasing power and a confidence shock."

"We were near a recession. We didn't need another shove in that direction," Brinner said.

One other nasty effect of recession is joblessness.

"Saddam Hussein is going to throw a lot of people out of work," said Joel Popkin, a consultant and inflation expert in Washington.

Popkin figures that every $10 increase in the price of a barrel of oil means a 1 percent increase in the consumer price index just in higher fuel costs, plus another 1 percent over six to nine months in ripple effects.

"If the conflict is protracted without a definite conclusion, oil prices are likely to stay around $40 for a year," Popkin said. "The country would definitely be cast into a recession of some magnitude, not just a shallow dip."

Complicating matters are budget and trade deficits, the savings and loan bailout and shaky banking.

Edwin Rothchild of Citizen Action, a Washington consumer group, said of the aftershocks of a shooting war: "You're talking about stag-flation of enormous proportions. It's going to be a disaster worldwide."

Hijacked Chinese plane crashes into two others, dozens are dead

By KATHY WILHELM
Associated Press Writer

BEIJING (AP) — A hijacked Chinese airliner crashed into two other jets and exploded after landing at an airport in southeastern China today, killing dozens of people, Chinese and Western officials said.

The hijackers were believed to have panicked and set off explosives after the Boeing 737 they had commandeered during a domestic flight landed at Canton's international airport.

The jet careened into an empty Boeing 747 on the tarmac then hit a Boeing 757 full of passengers that was about to take off for Shanghai, officials said. All three planes were Chinese-owned.

A Western diplomat in nearby Hong Kong said all 104 people aboard the hijacked plane were killed and some aboard the Shanghai-bound plane also died.

Hong Kong television broadcast pictures of the scene that showed two demolished planes surrounded by firefighting vehicles. On one jet, only the cockpit was intact.

A U.S. consular official in Canton quoted Boeing officials based at the airport as saying the hijackers had detonated a bomb, causing the plane to lose control.

The number of people on the Boeing 757 was not immediately known, and an official casualty toll was not released.

China's official Xinhua News Agency did not report the crash until about seven hours after the 8 a.m. collision.

It said only that a "passenger plane of the Xiamen Airline company was hijacked" and "landed in accident at the Canton airport." Xiamen is a subsidiary of China's national carrier, the Civil Aviation Administration of China, or CAAC.

The U.S. consulate in Canton said one American on the Shanghai flight was hospitalized and reported in good condition.

Casualties were rushed to at least five area hospitals and officials said they closed the airport soon after accident.

"Altogether several tens were killed," said an official at the Chinese Traditional Medicine University in Canton, capital of Guangdong province. A Taiwanese man was pronounced dead at his hospital.

Like other officials, he spoke on condition of anonymity.

The hijacked flight originated in the Fujian city of Xiamen, north of Guangdong province, and it was heading toward Canton when the hijacking occurred, officials said.

Officials: Man accused of torching abortion clinic apparently acted alone

CONCORD, Calif. (AP) — An abortion clinic fire that abortion rights supporters blamed on Operation Rescue apparently was started by a man accused of burglarizing a nearby veterans center, authorities said.

"He said he had no reason. He is not an activist. He has no opinion on abortion, pro or con," said police Detective Cleve Palmer.

"He may have done it to throw suspicion back on the protesters," Palmer said.

Authorities on Friday arrested David Brian Martin, 31, after recovering plants, a computer and some typewriters stolen from the Veterans Counseling Center the night of the Sept. 4 blaze.

Investigators also found at Martin's home wooden matches similar to ones found at the Planned Parenthood office, police said. Martin lives across the street from both the clinic and the veterans center.

Martin told investigators he was drinking and doesn't recall setting fire to the clinic, Palmer said. He was being held on $5,400 bail.

The fire did about $100,000 in damage to the clinic's waiting room, file room and laboratory.

Immediately after the fire, Planned Parenthood supporters said they suspected anti-abortion activists who had been picketing the clinic two to three days a week.

Operation Rescue denied involvement.

Louisiana officials set traps for killer bees

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — About 150 traps will be placed along the Louisiana coast as a precaution against a possible invasion of Africanized honey bees, state officials say.

The potentially dangerous bee, which has been moving north from Brazil since 1956, is now in Mexico and is approaching the Texas border. The bee could reach Louisiana by hitchhiking on ship cargo from Mexico, Central and South America, said state Agriculture Commissioner Bob Odom.

The Africanized bee closely resembles the European honey bee found in the United States. It is considered to be a threat to the honey industry because it pollinates poorly. It also is very aggressive and prone to sting in swarms.

Odom said that if the Africanized bee slips into Louisiana through a port, it will go undetected at first.

"Then, according to the experts, about a year after entry, their populations will explode," Odom said. "They will begin swarming and moving into new territory."

The traps will help alert officials to the bee's presence, Odom said.

About 100 traps will be placed at major deep-water loading points between Baton Rouge and New Orleans. About 40 traps will be placed along the Calcasieu and Sabine rivers in the Lake Charles area. The Iberia Parish area will have 10 traps.

Bees found in the traps will be sent to federal laboratories for identification.

Over the past 11 years, Africanized bees have been confirmed at U.S. ports in 22 cases, including seven over the past 15 months. The bees have been found in coils of rope, on the axle of a vehicle being shipped into the country, in the hold of a ship, on oil field pipe and in pier warehouses.

The bee, currently located about 160 miles south of Brownsville, Texas, was expected to have reached the U.S. border this summer, said Jimmy Dunkley, the head of state bee programs.

"Several explanations have been offered as to why they didn't make the Texas border this summer, including the hurricane that blew across northern Mexico last fall and the severe freeze in that area last winter," Dunkley said.

PRECEPTOR CHI members met for the first meeting of the new sorority year on Sept. 10, in the home of chapter president, Shirley Stafford. The program on "How Goes Your Business Meeting" was directed by Stafford. Several members showed their talents by participating in a skit about 'ways and means' projects.

Members will participate in the 60 year birthday celebration of Beta Sigma Phi by sending birthday cards to Beta Sigma Phi International.

On Sept. 17, chapter members met in the home of Ruth McBride. Davis Goosman, who is with CTS Behavioral Consultants lectured on the four types of personalities, and explained that 80% of all people are a blend of the four types.

Charlene Morris prepared and released information on each member's summer activities.

KAPPA ALPHA CHAPTER #3001 met Sept. 13 in the Red Cross meeting room. The business meeting was conducted by Vice President Elsie Floyd.

Floyd announced that the Rush calendar was complete, and the first Rush event would be a salad supper on Sept. 20 in the Energas Flame Room.

Service Director Dorothy Miller presented the service calendar for 90-91. Projects include delivering Meals on Wheels, hosting a Christmas party for Senior Citizens Center, a special project for St. Jude, and selling pecans to provide funds for a $500 scholarship, and other chapter, district, state and international projects.

Ways and Means Committee member, Eva Dennis, announced projects include a bazaar in October and flower delivery for Mother's Day.

The meeting was adjourned with the closing ritual and the next meeting will be Oct. 4 in the Red Cross meeting room.

Members of LONE STAR TRI-MATES, auxiliary to the National Guard met Sept. 17 at the home of Sharon Kennedy in Fritch.

Nancy Easley, president, conducted the meeting. Plans were made to sell Watkins products for the scholarship given each year by the Tri-Mates.

Easley appointed the following committee chairpersons: Jeannie Paige, telephone; Maxine Parker, hospitality and courtesy; Roberta Williamson, program; Linda Winkler, patriotism; Sharon Kennedy and Jeannie Paige, publicity.

Tri-Mates invite the wives of men in National Guard to attend the next meeting at Nancy Easley's home in Skellytown, Oct. 15. Birdie Ooley will be co-hostess.

Members of JUNIOR SERVICE LEAGUE held an invitation meeting Sept. 18 in the home of Pat Gentry. There were many guests in attendance. The event was hosted by the hospitality committee.

A general business meeting will be held Oct. 16 at 7 p.m., at 200 N. Ballard.

The PAMPA ART CLUB held its first meeting of the 90-91 season on Sept. 18, with a luncheon at the Pampa Country Club hosted by Mrs. C.B. Reece and Mrs. Ralph Collinsworth.

New officers are Mrs. Harold Taylor, president; Mrs. Leta Flynt, vice president; Mrs. W.H. Winborn, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Sophia Vance, historian; and Mrs. Graham Reeves, reporter-librarian.

In business, yearbooks announcing the programs and standing committees for the year were distributed, and names for the Christmas party were drawn. Gifts exchanged by members at the party are to be handmade by each member.

Mrs. Don Fletcher exhibited an oil painting which will be given away during the Pampa Fine Arts Association's Arts and Crafts Festival on October 14. Titled Bougainvillea a La J.Z., the painting is by well-known Southwest artist Joan Marron of Oklahoma City, Okla. The next meeting will be a workshop in the home of Mrs. Don Fletcher on October 2.

PAMPA CIVIC CULTURE CLUB met Sept. 18 in the Flame Room of the Energas Building. President Marilyn Butler welcomed the members to the first meeting of the year, and Lettie Smith, vice president, presented the new year books.

In business, members were reminded about the club's financial obligations by Treasurer Florence Rife.

The program included discussion of members' summer vacations. Hostesses for the meeting were Capitola Wilson, Teresa Reed and Marilyn Butler.

The next meeting will be a noon luncheon Oct. 9, with a program on "Nashville U.S.A."

The MAGIC PLAINS CHAPTER of the American Business Women's Association (ABWA) observed Sept. 22 as American Business Women's Day by releasing red, white and blue balloons with the chapter's name on them at the Veterans Memorial walkway.

The observance, which is the anniversary of ABWA's founding in 1949, provides a special occasion to recognize the many contributions that the nearly 48 million working women in the United States have made to the private and public business sectors.

The concept for the day of celebration grew out of a belief by ABWA's 81-82 National Board of Directors that the United States needed a national day which would recognize the achievements of not only ABWA's Magic Plains Chapter, but all employed women.

A U.S. Senate and House Joint Resolution recognizing Sept. 22 as American Business Women's Day was passed in 1983, and a proclamation by President Ronald Regan followed the same year.

A national, non-partisan, educational association, ABWA is dedicated to bringing together business women of diverse backgrounds and providing opportunities for them to help themselves and others grow personally and professionally through leadership, education, networking support and national recognition.

ALTRUSA CLUB OF PAMPA met Sept. 24, with President Joyce Williams welcoming members and guests to the annual Professional Women's Dinner.

The program "Like a Good Neighbor-Invitation to Service" was directed by Marilyn McClure, who introduced Altrusans who spoke about different service projects conducted by Altrusa. Mary Wilson spoke about the Pampa Senior Citizens Center, and their "Quiet Room" which Altrusa helped furnish; Betty Beyer presented information on Pampa Learning Center and the Day Care Center; and Dauna Wilkinson spoke about Tralee Crisis Center.

In business, Mary McDaniel discussed the upcoming golf tournament on Oct. 6 at Hidden Hills, the proceeds of which are to be used to fund service projects. There are still openings for golfers in the tournament.

Dinner music was provided by Myran Orr, Mary McDaniel presented the Accent "What is an Altrusan," and hostesses for the meeting were Helen Allison, Marilyn McClure, Pat Johnson and Joyce Simon.

Greeters were Judy Maze, Jean Scott, Marilyn McClure and Pat Johnson.

The next business meeting will be Oct. 8 at noon, Coronado Inn.

The TWENTIETH CENTURY CLUBS honored their new club presidents with a coffee in the home of Kay Lee on Tuesday, Sept. 25.

President of Twentieth Century Culture Club is Marion Fugate, whose club theme is "Take Time." Twentieth Century Forum Club president this year is Jane McDaniel, whose theme is "Believe or Not." Peggy Beckham is president of Twentieth Century, and her club theme this year is "Meet the Challenge-Make a Difference."

Hostess club for the meeting was Twentieth Century Culture with Johnny Thompson as chairman. Her committee members were: from Twentieth Century Forum, Kay Lee, Paula Chervenka and Faustina Curry; from Twentieth Century Culture, Mary Baten, Velma Lemons, and Betty Gordon; and from Twentieth Century, Chleo Worley, June McGahey, and Sherry McCavit.

The program was presented by Ann Jordan Davidson, curator of the White Deer Land Museum, and daughter of Mrs. Rufe Jordan, a past member of Twentieth Century Forum Club. She presented a review of a book by Willie Newberry Lewis, Willie - A Girl From a Town Called Dallas.

EL PROGRESSO CLUB met Sept. 25 at the home of Bette Bates, then traveled to Panhandle to visit the Carson County Square House Museum.

At the Senator Grady and Andrine Hazelwood Educational Building, club members were among the first to see a new art exhibit, HUNGERS 1990s: Not by Bread Alone.

The next meeting is Oct. 9, 2 p.m. at the Pampa Country Club. The program for the Annual Guest Day will be a book review by Anne Davidson.

BETA SIGMA PHI kicked off the new club season with a luncheon on August 25, with 57 club members in attendance, and entertainment by Steve Ross. The theme for the year is "Celebrate the Magic." Yearbooks and calendars for the new year were handed out to members.

Also in August was the Beta Sigma Phi style show, held at the Pampa County Club. Proceeds from the annual event are used to fund a scholarship.

The next fund raising event is a New Year's Eve dance at M.K. Brown Civic Auditorium.

On Sept. 21 members of Beta Sigma Phi held a Rush party in Energas Flame Room for prospective members. Members from all the chapters enjoyed visiting with each other and the guests.

Former drug user asks how much she should tell her child

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a beautiful baby girl. Naturally I want to do the best job possible of raising her to be a fine girl and woman. There is one question in my mind.

At some time in her life, I will have to sit down and talk to her about the importance of staying away from drugs. I need to know if I should ever use myself and my own experiences as an example. Abby, I have experimented with a variety of drugs and have learned firsthand how devastating they can be.

What influence do you think it would have on my daughter if she knew? Do you think she would be more determined never to use drugs? I have been "clean" for a number of years now, but I was heavily into drugs as a teen-ager. How much should I tell her?

SERIOUS IN SARATOGA

DEAR SERIOUS: Yours is a very intelligent question. I would not recommend using yourself as an "example." Your daughter might believe that because you have experimented with drugs and were able to rehabilitate yourself, it might justify her going that route.

If she asks you if you have ever experimented with drugs, don't lie; but don't volunteer your own experiences as a deterrent. It could backfire.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please tell me how long a married couple can correctly take to thank their friends and family for a wedding gift? A friend of mine who is supposed to be very knowledgeable on matters of etiquette said that a couple can take one year to send their thank-you notes for wedding gifts and still be considered within the range of good manners. She said, ideally, they should acknowledge their gifts as soon as possible — perhaps within a

Abby, what can be done to break a bad-luck spell?

HER FRIEND IN IOWA

DEAR FRIEND: The old "tradition" you refer to is merely a superstition, an old wife's tale, and has no basis in fact.

To believe that a marriage failed — after 13 years — because the groom saw the bride's gown before the wedding is sheer nonsense.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Two Large Problems" (overweight bridesmaids) prompted me to write.

I was a bridesmaid only once in my life. We were an odd-looking group. The bride was a size 12; her maid of honor was a 14. I was a 16. The groom had two sisters — one was a size 3, and the other was a 52. She had to have her dress made special, as did the flower girl, who wore a chubby 8.

There was never a doubt in the bride's mind about who she wanted in the wedding party — and it didn't matter what size they were.

I missed being a bridesmaid for my cousin because I was too short, too chubby and my hair was the same color as the bride's. All her bridesmaids had to be tall, thin and blond!

You were right, Abby. A wedding isn't a performance; it's a gathering of your nearest and dearest no matter what they look like.

Red Sox one win away from AL East title

Base hit by Evans scores winning run

By The Associated Press
In a lot of ways, Dwight Evans is what the Boston Red Sox are all about.

Evans has been with the Red Sox since 1972. He has played in two World Series and his team lost them both in seven games.

He was around in 1978 when Boston blew a 141/2-game lead to the Yankees in July and lost in a one-game playoff on Bucky Dent's three-run homer at Fenway Park.

But Evans is back again, one victory away from being on the American League East champions.

Boston clinched a tie for the East title Monday night as Evans snapped an eighth-inning tie with a run-scoring single to give the Red Sox a 4-3 victory over Chicago.

The win moved the Red Sox two games ahead of Toronto to with two games left for each team. The Blue Jays lost to Baltimore 6-3 and will be eliminated tonight if the Red Sox win or they lose.

The Red Sox, with Evans, also won the AL East in 1988, but have not won a World Series title since 1918, when a fellow named Babe Ruth helped them to it.

"This is great, just a great feeling," Evans, 38, said. "But we still need to win one more."

After the White Sox rallied for three runs in the top of the eighth off Dana Kiecker and Larry Andersen, Boston came right back.

Reliever Ken Patterson walked Wade Boggs to start the eighth. Barry Jones (11-4) relieved and was greeted by Ellis Burks with a single off the left field wall. Boggs, however, was thrown out at third by Ivan Calderon, with Burks taking second on the throw.

Mike Greenwell was walked intentionally and Evans followed with his third hit of the game, a ground single to center.

Jeff Reardon (5-3) got the victory by bailing out Andersen in the eighth.

Orioles 6, Blue Jays 3

Toronto moved within one game of elimination in the East as Baltimore beat the visiting Blue Jays behind the strong pitching of rookie Jose Mesa.

Mesa (3-2) gave up four hits and three runs in 7 2-3 innings. Kevin Hickey got one out and Gregg Olson finished for his 37th save.

Baltimore trailed 3-1 in the sixth run and has just two games left in his bid to become the first player to hit 50 since George Foster in 1977, and the first American Leaguer to reach the mark since Roger Maris and Mickey Mantle in 1961.

Angels 2, Athletics 0
California rookie Joe Grahe gave up three hits in 8 1-3 innings to beat Dave Stewart.

Grahe (3-4) walked seven but pitched out of jams in the second and sixth innings. Bryan Harvey got the last two outs for his 25th save.

Stewart (22-11) yielded two runs on 11 hits.

Twins 7, Mariners 5
Rookie Scott Leius had a two-run double in a five-run second inning.

Kevin Tapani (12-8) won for the first time since July 30 despite giving up four runs on 10 hits in six-plus innings.

Rangers 4, Brewers 2

Ruben Sierra's eighth-inning grounder drove in the go-ahead run as visiting Texas overcame sloppy fielding.

Julio Franco walked and Rafael Palmeiro singled him to third with one out in the eighth off Ron Robinson (12-5). But when Sierra hit a hard grounder to first baseman Rob Deer — who started the game in the outfield — Deer stepped on the bag and did not attempt a play at second or the plate as Franco scored.

Red Raiders face rugged road trips

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M game films look like horror movies to Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes.

"It scares ya," Dykes said. "(The game film) doesn't really help you. It puts you to say, 'My gosh these guys are really awesome.'"

Facing two consecutive road games against the No. 19 Aggies and No. 21 Arkansas, Tech does not have time to sulk over a 21-15 loss to Baylor and an 0-2 conference record, Dykes told his weekly press conference Monday.

"You don't have long to have your head down if you lose," Dykes said. "You better get ready to play. Our guys traditionally play at A&M good and I see no reason why we shouldn't (again)."

Tech (1-3) has won two of its last three games against A&M, which is coming off a 17-8 upset loss at Louisiana State.

"We are going to have to ... play a lot better than any time we have played this season," Dykes said.

"They have got great speed at the wide receivers, a super tight end, tremendous running backs, two good quarterbacks and two offensive lines you can't tell much difference in."

"They have got more weapons than Iraq."

Dykes said Tech will have to eliminate turnovers and execute the kicking game to compete with A&M.

The Red Raiders coughed up the ball five times against Baylor. Three of them were converted into touchdowns.

One of the turnovers, a blocked field goal attempt which led to a Baylor touchdown, was the back-breaker, Dykes said.

"You can't turn the ball over five times, miss two field goals and have another one blocked and still win a football game," Dykes said. "That's enough to choke a mule."

In addition to the blocked field goal, Lin Elliott missed attempts from 31 and 44 yards. Two weeks ago, Elliott kicked a 37-yarder with time running out to give Tech a 34-32 come-from-behind victory over New Mexico.

"The thing that won for us last week lost for us this week," Dykes said. "That's frustrating."

Quarterback Jamie Gill, who missed the Baylor game with a bruised knee cap, is expected to play against A&M, Dykes said.

"If he is healthy, he will go," Dykes said. "If Jamie is not OK, we will go with Robert Hall."

Hall, a redshirt freshman who guided the Raiders to victory against New Mexico, was 25-of-47 passing for 328 yards and a touchdown against Baylor. Hall, who started in relief of Gill, ran for another score, but was intercepted three times.

Dykes complimented his defense, which recovered four Baylor turnovers, and freshman wide receiver Lloyd Hill, who grabbed eight passes for 102 yards.

Safety in numbers for the Oilers

(AP Laserphoto)

Oilers' Ernest Givens caught a touchdown pass against the Chargers.

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers coach Jack Pardee decided there was safety in numbers against the San Diego Chargers.

Pardee used all of his receivers and running backs and they all caught passes in Sunday's 17-7 victory.

Warren Moon completed passes to eight receivers and three running backs, throwing for 355 yards and two touchdowns. Moon was hot and the receivers were getting open, Pardee explained.

"They started off pressing our receivers toe to toe," Pardee said. "The receivers had to get some separation from the DBs to give Warren a target."

Moon hit 27 of 46 passes and his touchdowns went nine yards to Drew Hill and 22 yards to Ernest Givens.

"All the receivers we started working in got a catch right away," Pardee said. "So did all the backs."

Rookie Tony Jones caught two passes and Leonard Harris, a preseason holdout, got his first catch of the season.

Running backs Mike Rozier, Lorenzo White and Allen Pinkett also were used.

"It's a luxury when you are using a one-back offense to keep three of them playing," Pardee said.

The victory evened Houston's record at 2-2 and they are beginning a four-game homestand in the Astrodome. Still, their task will be difficult — defending Super Bowl champion San Francisco visits Sunday, followed by AFC Central Division leader Cincinnati.

"It was a big win for us," Pardee said. "We're sitting here 2-2 right now and that's sure a lot better than being 1-3 with the 49ers coming in."

"We didn't have anyone playing a perfect game but everybody played hard and it was a team victory," Pardee said. "We are getting a little better and we're playing the world champions so we've got to get even better."

The Oilers now can envision themselves getting back in the race for the playoffs.

"We're playing catchup with Cincinnati," running back Allen Pinkett said. "It's time for us to make a move."

The Bengals (3-1) lost to Seattle Monday night.

Baylor's Teaff hoping for a better showing

WACO, Texas (AP) — After last season's game against Houston, Baylor coach Grant Teaff was seen walking off the field with a huge smile on his face and muttering to himself.

With this strange behavior coming immediately after a 66-10 thrashing, had the mild-mannered coach finally snapped beneath the pressure of big-time college football?

"I was just laughing coming off the field because I was thinking this is the most ridiculous thing I have ever seen," Teaff recalled Monday. "I had a big smile on my face, but it wasn't funny. What can you say about something so ridiculous?"

While the Cougars are putting up some Andre Ware-like numbers this season despite the Heisman Trophy winner's absence, Teaff said that last year doesn't have anything to do with this year.

"We gave them too many turnovers," Teaff said. "I was thoroughly embarrassed and humiliated. Golly, I would sure like to play better this year."

Coming into Saturday's affair with the Bears, 13th-ranked Houston (3-0 overall and 2-0 in the SWC), behind David Klingler, is fourth in the nation in total offense.

The Bears (2-2 and 1-0) are last in total offense and passing offense in the SWC. Baylor is, however, third in the conference in rushing, thanks mainly to Edwin Raphael's 243 yards.

On the defensive side, Houston is on the bottom in total defense, while Baylor brings up the rear in rushing defense. The Cougars churn out 523 yards a game on offense, but surrender 435 per game — 270 of that through the air.

While Houston used a Roman Anderson 32-yard field goal with 10 seconds left to trim Rice 24-22, the Bears are riding high after a surprise 21-15 victory over Texas Tech in Lubbock.

After senior quarterback Brad Goebel was likely lost for the year after breaking his right wrist early in the first half, redshirt freshman J.J. Joe guided the Bears to the victory, passing for 77 yards and running for 34 more.

"That ranked as a four-P in my rating system," said Teaff. "Preparation, patience, poise and perseverance. I guess you could even add a fifth P, persistence. It tested every aspect."

Joe was listed fourth in the spring, but will start Saturday.

"J.J. is a very heady youngster," Teaff said. "He has steadily moved his way up."

Despite a teaming of the conference's best and worst on offense, Teaff hasn't discounted the most obvious strategy in beating Houston. "I haven't ruled out outscoring them," Teaff said. "That's in the back of my mind."

Gonzalez solid hitting prospect for Rangers

By ARNIE STAPLETON
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Juan Gonzalez took one look at his rookie baseball card and laughed at the lanky lefty peering for a pitch.

"Look, Ruben," he said, handing the card to fellow Puerto Rican outfielder Ruben Sierra. "I never bat left-handed. Never have. Never in my life."

The card erroneously featured a reverse negative. Make no mistake about it, Gonzalez is a right-handed power hitter.

Gonzalez won't win any major league honors this year, and he won't even be considered for Rookie of the Year next season — only because he's accumulated too much time in two September callups with the Texas Rangers to be eligible. But Gonzalez is as good a big hitting prospect the American League has seen since Jose Canseco and Mark McGwire.

"He's something, isn't he?" Oakland Athletics manager Tony LaRussa said. "He's got the tools to become one of the best."

"I don't think he should be seeing any more time down in the minors. That's for sure," Rangers manager Bobby Valentine said.

"He's going to be a superstar," said Rafael Palmeiro, who along with Sierra and Julio Franco are trying to make Gonzalez feel at home in Texas.

"If we weren't here, it would be tougher for him," Palmeiro said. "With us here, he feels at home, and that makes a big difference. Him and Ruben, they're like brothers. They're always together."

And the last thing American League pitchers need is a Sierra protege, Palmeiro said.

Gonzalez, 20, led the American Association with 29 homers and 101 RBIs this season. He was named the league's Most Valuable Player and Rookie of the Year.

After going hitless in his first 11 at-bats for the Rangers, Gonzalez went on a 23-for-60 tear that included seven doubles, a triple and four home runs. A stiff back stifled the streak, but he's still hitting .289.

Gonzalez has sat out much of the season's final week after a magnetic renaissance image showed bloated disks in his back. Team doctors said the condition, perhaps related to an off-season weight-lifting program, is not considered serious and should subside with rest.

Texas deer hunters should have banner season

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The general whitetail season is good this fall after spring and late summer rains provided deer with plenty of cover and food, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department said.

But it may be tough to find deer during the first two weeks of the upcoming season because of the lush vegetation, biologists say.

"We have not completed our deer census yet, but most of the range in Texas is in good condition," said Mike Reagan, the department's assistant deer program leader.

"Deer movements should be reduced because of good range conditions, so hunters might see fewer deer. But these conditions should help them go into winter in good shape."

"Antler growth should be average to better than average in some areas, and deer numbers are still high enough that there will be plenty of deer to hunt," Reagan said.

Last year's whitetail harvest was 477,000, second only to the 505,000 whitetails taken in 1987.

The 221,000 antlerless deer harvested was the highest on record. The antlerless harvest has set a new record each year since 1984.

This year's archery season for deer is Oct. 1-31.

The general whitetail season is Nov. 3-Jan. 6 for most of Texas, while the South Texas season is Nov. 10-Jan. 13.

Mule deer season in the Panhandle is Nov. 17-Dec. 2, and in the Trans-Pecos it is Nov. 24-Dec. 9.

A special early antlerless-only firearm season for Angelina, eastern Houston, Nacogdoches (south of State Highway 7), Polk, Trinity and Walker counties is Oct. 20-28. This season isn't in effect in national forests. A special antlerless-only firearm season for whitetails in South Texas is Jan. 19-Feb. 3.

Here is a breakdown, region-by-region, of the deer hunting prospects as measured by Parks and Wildlife biologists:

EDWARDS PLATEAU
Hunters shouldn't see much change from last year. Max Traweck, P&W district leader from Kerrville, said there will be more than enough deer except in some western counties, particularly Val Verde.

Gillespie, Llano and Mason counties have a high density of deer, as well as Kerr County.

"Antlers look real good for the Hill Country because of the better range conditions," Traweck said. "There are too many deer in most counties for the habitat. Some of our fringe counties are pretty good as far as balancing the deer population and habitat."

SOUTH TEXAS
A drought that has plagued the area for several years has abated somewhat this year, and whitetail deer are in better condition than they've been in for some time.

"The northern part of South Texas probably is the best this country has looked in a long time. It's absolutely fantastic," said Rick Taylor, wildlife biologist.

Deer numbers are up somewhat from a good fawn crop with 50 percent survival. "Antler development looks real good. I've seen lots of good bucks throughout. Overall, it looks excellent," Taylor said.

The southern and eastern part of South Texas and along the coast, including Kleberg, Brooks, Kenedy, Jim Hogg, Cameron, Willacy, Hidalgo and Starr counties, still suffer dry conditions, said Randy Fugate, wildlife technician from Falfurrias.

The overall density will be about the same as last year's one deer to 25-35 acres, but fawn survival was lower toward the coast and higher in the west. "A lot of it (lower survival) is because of the dry times we've had," Fugate said.

Thousands of apartment dwellers are on the move - all at one time

By F.N. D'ALESSIO
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) - Synchronized leasing. A fancy name for moving hell.

Not enough vans. Not enough crews. Not enough room on the streets for thousands of Chicago apartment dwellers who pack up and head for new digs at the same time twice each year when their leases expire simultaneously.

Monday, Oct. 1, was one of those days. May 1 is the other.

"We started at 10 a.m. and it is now 4 p.m.," said Jim Marchesi, who had to maneuver his rental truck around four others on his North Side block Sunday. "I have only had to move about five blocks, and it feels like I have moved from five different countries."

So-called "synchronized leasing" has been around a long time, but most cities abandoned the practice. No one seems to know why it

Study links drinking to early death

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Women who took at least two alcoholic drinks a day were three times more likely than abstainers to die before age 65, a study found.

The difference was nearly two-fold for men in the study, which was based on a national sample of people who died in 1986.

For women, 40.7 percent of so-called heavier drinkers died before age 65 versus 13.2 percent of abstainers. For men, the figures were 42.3 percent versus 22.4 percent.

Even people classified as moderate or light drinkers showed higher death rates than the abstainers.

The numbers cannot be interpreted as indicating risks of early death because of the way the study was done, cautioned co-author Darryl Bertolucci.

The study began with people who were already dead, and it worked backward to classify them according to their drinking habits, rather than starting with people of known habits and following them to find their risk of early death.

Nonetheless, the study "does show a relationship that needs to be looked into," he said.

Bertolucci, a statistician at the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, presented the results Monday at the annual meeting of the American Public Health Association.

The study used data on the drinking habits during adulthood of 8,303 men and 7,158 women, ages 25 or older, obtained several months after their deaths from next of kin or other knowledgeable sources.

Those who had fewer than 12 drinks a year were classified as abstainers. Light drinkers were those who had averaged up to three drinks a week, moderate drinkers were those taking four to 13 drinks a week, and heavier drinkers were those who took two or more drinks a day.

Among men, 33 percent of moderate drinkers and 32 percent of light drinkers died before age 65. For women, the figures were 29 percent and 26 percent respectively.

As expected, cirrhosis of the liver was a more frequent cause of death in men for heavier drinkers than lighter drinkers or abstainers. Cancers of the trachea, bronchus, lung and esophagus increased with greater drinking for both men and women.

Similar increases were seen for suicide among women. But deaths from motor vehicle accidents were not related to drinking levels in either sex. Bertolucci stressed that the study focused on long-term drinking behavior, while traffic deaths might be more related to how much a person was drinking just before the accident.

Bertolucci said 25.2 percent of the men and 7.6 percent of the women in the study were classified as heavier drinkers, 17.1 percent of the men and 8.3 percent of the women were ranked as moderate drinkers, 27.2 percent of the men and 23.1 percent of the women were light drinkers, and 30.6 percent of the men and 61 percent of the women were called abstainers.

The percentages of heavier drinking were higher than those found in a 1987 national survey that put 14 percent of men and 3.1 percent of women in that category, he said.

lingered in Chicago, but many people believe it may have something to do with the city's weather.

"No one in their right mind wants to move in a Chicago summer or a Chicago winter," said leasing agent Tom Lucido.

"By May 1 it's usually warm - but not hot - and the weather really does change significantly from September to October. By Oct. 1, it's cool - but not cold."

Synchronized leasing, Lucido said, is horrendous.

"The typical nightmare is that you have a tenant whose lease expires Sept. 30, and they haven't moved out yet when the new tenant's supposed to move in Oct. 1," he said. "You end up with a tenant sitting out there in a moving van with no place to go."

Commonwealth Edison Co. and Peoples Gas Co. estimated that more than 50,000 rental units were up for tenant changes on or about Oct. 1. A similar number of moves were made about May 1.

"You can't get a truck. You can't get a mover. You can't get an elevator," said Joel Kline. "You're moving into an apartment someone's moving out of. You're moving out of an apartment someone's moving into. It's just terrible."

Kline was among the lucky. He got a four-day lease extension.

"It's been total chaos," said Dave Beard, assistant manager of a U-Haul outlet. "We never seem to have enough equipment come May and October. People get frustrated. There are attitude problems."

Chicago Student Movers, which uses leased trucks and a temporary work force of college students to provide inexpensive moving for apartment dwellers, averages 10 moves a day most months. It had 80 Sunday. More were lined up for Monday.

Some accuse landlords and real estate agents of clinging to synchronized leasing to manipulate the availability and price of rental housing, but Lucido maintained it really doesn't benefit building owners and managers.

"When the worst happens, and the October renter can't move in, you have to provide him with emergency housing - rent free - until you manage to get the old tenant out," he said. "By law, it takes 21 days to get eviction proceedings going, and the sheriff's department is always backed up three or four weeks this time of year, so you can wind up losing several months' rent."

Budget critics include challengers Bush backs

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The challengers President Bush most wants to see elected to the Senate were among the first to break with the president on the budget agreement he negotiated with Congress. "Muggers in pin-striped suits," cried Rep. Lynn Martin, the Republican trying to unseat Democratic Sen. Paul Simon. "They're back at your pocketbook again."

"Throw out the leadership of Congress," said Martin, apparently excluding Bush from the gang of "muggers."

Simon left himself a little more room to maneuver, saying, "The more I see of it, the less willing I am to support it."

The plan would enact permanent tax increases while leaving spending cuts up to Congress to enact in the future, complained Rep. Newt Gingrich, one of Congress' leading conservatives. Gingrich, R-Ga., also was upset that the plan did not contain enough measures to help businesses.

"We can do better for America," said Gingrich, the No. 2 House Republican. "This package will lose jobs, raise taxes and deepen the recession."

The cries of outrage over the compromise were bipartisan on Monday and came with certain swiftness from politicians running for higher office or suspected of harboring such ambitions.

"I'm opposed to it," said Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York, who could be Bush's Democratic opponent in 1992. "Every middle-class person will be forced to pay more for tobacco, gasoline, alcohol while the rich go free because President Bush promised the conservatives we wouldn't tax the rich people."

"Fiscal irresponsibility," said Gov. L. Douglas Wilder of Virginia, another Democrat.

Only last week, Bush campaigned in Illinois for Martin and in Michigan for Rep. Bill Schuette, who is challenging Democratic Sen. Carl Levin.

"My inclinations and leanings are that this is a bad agreement," said Schuette, who defended the president as having "gone the last mile" before being forced into the deal by "liberal Democrats."

An aide to Rep. Claudine Schneider, the Rhode Island Republican challenging Sen. Claiborne Pell, said Schneider was "evaluating it, studying it, trying to ascertain that no one group is being singled out."

Rep. Tom Tauke of Iowa, the Republican challenger to Sen. Tom Harkin, also was among those studying the package.

But Tauke spokesman Allen Finch had no hesitation about criticizing the compromise. "Half the summitters sought to protect defense spending, half sought to protect social programs and no one sought to protect the taxpayer," said Finch.

On his campaign swing, Bush threatened to put the blame squarely on the Democrats if negotiators failed to reach an agreement and the government ground to a halt.

"I will take that message to every state in the Union," he said.

But an agreement was reached and this week found the president switching from bashing Democrats to trying to persuade Republicans.

"I think this hurts the Republicans," said Lyn Nofziger, White House political director during President Reagan's first two years in office. "I think it's going to hurt our election chances next month."

Nofziger said the agreement "takes an issue away from the Republicans. How can they go out and say, by golly, we're not going to raise taxes."

Vice President Dan Quayle said that if an incumbent votes against the package, "there will be a lot of heavy water to carry on the campaign trail."
