Bush signs budget bill before voting in Texas

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — President Bush cast his vote in his home state of Texas today after signing a $492 billion tax-raising budget bill that was a campaign albatross for many fellow Republicans.

Bush and his wife, Barbara, waited in line behind other voters for about 10 minutes this morning at a polling place in a nursing home near the hotel they use as a legal residence.

He waved aside reporters' questions, saying only "good to be home," as he left the polling place to return to Washington, where he will spend the evening in the White House.

The president signed the budget package Monday night at his Houston home. The late hour guaranteed that the news would not make prime-time news broadcasts and also would miss the deadlines for many newspapers that voters would be reading on Election Day today.

In a statement, Bush called the hard-fought budget compromise "the centerpiece of the largest deficit reduction package in history and an important measure for ensuring America's long-term economic growth."

He said that in the agreement, "No one got everything he or she wanted, but the end product is a compromise that merits enactment."

The president and his wife Barbara were voting today in their adoptive home state before returning to Washington to watch tonight's election returns from the White House.

Bush spent the home stretch of the campaign trekking to eight states and urging voters to go to the polls and prove wrong the pundits who say the electorate is depressed and disgusted.

On Monday, Bush made a day-long swing around Texas with GOP gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams.

The deficit-reduction plan approved by Congress last week includes $140 billion in new taxes that Bush agreed to, but that election-conscious Republicans found hard to swallow. The plan also included a number of government spending cuts.

The president continued on Monday to emphasize upbeat themes at the urging of some advisers that he try to look more "presidential."

But his election-eve speech to a ballroom full of Republican loyalists was interrupted by about four anti-war protesters who chanted, "No war for oil." The audience shouted them down and they were quickly ushered from the room.

The outburst gave Bush an opportunity to repeat his rationale for sending more than 200,000 U.S. troops to the Persian Gulf region.

"They got it wrong," he said, referring to the protesters. "What we're doing is not anything about war for oil. What we're doing is standing up against naked aggression."

Bush's appearances have increasingly attracted anti-war protesters around the country.

In the closing days of the campaign, the president's senior advisers have been divided on how Bush should conduct himself, with some recommending that he take off the gloves and bash congressional Democrats, as he did in Oklahoma City 10 days ago.

But sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said that approach, favored by White House chief of staff John Sununu and some high Republican Party officials, appeared to backfire. They concluded that Democrat-bashing was not helping Bush's popularity, which has floundered with his wavering positions on tax and budget issues coupled with the slumping economy.

The sources said Bush's former pollster, Robert Teeter, and his 1988 media consultant, Roger Ailes, persuaded the president to be more positive.

That approach was evident Monday, when Bush traveled with Williams to Tyler and Waco.

While still accusing Democrats of wanting to raise taxes on "every working man and woman," Bush said he was tired of "the cynics, these Washington pundits ... telling us everything that's wrong with the United States."

He said people should vote and "show us what's right about it."

Bush tried to shore up Williams' support, which has flagged with recent gaffes. Williams admitted knowing nothing about the one proposed constitutional amendment on the Texas statewide ballot, a measure dealing with gubernatorial appointment powers.

Williams also has had to fend off criticism that he paid no taxes in 1986, a year when he said business was bad and he had no income.

But Bush said of Williams: "I know of his sincerity. I know of his integrity. And he will be a great governor of the state of Texas. And I'm going to vote for him early tomorrow morning."

Rosco is friendly, but he's an enemy of drug users, Pampa Optimists learn

By LARRY HOLLIS
Managing Editor

Rosco is generally a friendly dog who enjoys being petted and meeting people. But to drug users, he may become one of their toughest enemies.

Pampa Police Cpl. Dave Wilkinson brought Rosco to the Pampa Optimist Club Monday evening to demonstrate the drug dog's hunting skills. Though trained in similar manner to a bloodhound, Rosco's main duties are searching out hidden drugs.

The 18-month-old Labrador retriever, originally from Sarasota, Fla., was trained in Kansas for the detection of narcotics and other drugs, and for tracking purposes. It was in Kansas that Rosco met his partner, Wilkinson, who spent several weeks there getting acquainted with the dog and becoming trained in using Rosco to search for drugs.

"These dogs are good, and the more you work with them, the better they get," Wilkinson told the Optimists assembled for their regular weekly meeting. "They do have their on and off days, though, just like humans."

Wilkinson said Rosco and Pampa's other drug dog, Shadow, another Labrador retriever assigned to Pampa Police officer Tracy Norwood, receive weekly training sessions in addition to being taken out for drug searches.

"This dog is just like a human being, you have to keep his skills up," Wilkinson said. If the dog is not trained regularly, he may lose his drug hunting skills and then have to be retrained, he explained.

The police officer, who also is in charge of Crimestoppers for the Pampa Police Department, said it takes eight months to a year for the dog handler to gain the complete trust of the dog. The handler has to learn to "read" the dog and understand his signals indicating that the dog has located the hidden drugs.

"You've got to know what he's doing," Wilkinson said.

Sometimes during a search of a house or other location, the dog knows the drugs are there but may have to be told to "indicate on it," he said. Sometimes the dog is eager and gets tired of the regular search pattern and either may have to be let go to indicate on the drugs or be restrained to maintain a more thorough search.

Wilkinson said the drug dogs are trained on the major drugs — marijuana, heroin, cocaine and others. The dogs are trained initially to go hunting for a hidden ball, with petting and other rewards given for finding the ball. Then drug scents are placed on the balls to get the dogs acquainted with the smell, and then the balls are replaced with hidden drugs, Wilkinson explained.

The drug dogs, like bird dogs, are trained off their retrieving instinct. And they can become quite aggressive when they find the hidden substances, scratching furiously or even making noises when the drugs are located, he said.

Drug dealers and users often try to cover up the smell of drugs, either by placing them with some other odorous substance or even placing them inside containers.

But the dogs have noses sensitive enough to recognize the drug

Saudi Arabia: UN does not restrict use of military force to recover Kuwait

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

CAIRO (AP) — Saudi Arabia's foreign minister today warned Iraq the United Nations has not restricted the use of military force to liberate Kuwait.

Prince Fahd's assertion at a news conference in Jiddah, Saudi Arabia, as he saw Secretary of State James A. Baker III off to Egypt marked a hardening of the anti-Iraq coalition.

"We would like a peaceful settlement, but that option is in the hands of the Iraqis," the foreign minister said.

He confirmed, meanwhile, that

King Fahd and Baker had devised a joint command in the event of war.

U.S. troops defending Saudi Arabia would be under the joint command, but if the Americans go into combat elsewhere in the Persian Gulf they would take orders only from U.S. commanders.

Saud said Baker had not discussed military options with the Saudis during his talks Monday in Jiddah.

However, Saud said the U.N. resolutions demanding that Iraq give up Kuwait do not foreclose force.

"The United Nations has not put any restrictions on what actions the United Nations would take to implement this," Saud said.

In Cairo, Baker was seeking reaffirmation of Egypt's role in the U.S.-led coalition against Iraq.

He met with President Hosni Mubarak, who has sent about 14,000 troops to defend Saudi Arabia and may double that number and also planned to meet in Cairo with Chinese Foreign Minister Qichen Qian.

The Bush administration needs the support of China, a permanent member of the U.N. Security Council, for further economic and political moves against Iraq — or military action, if that is taken — to reverse the occupation of Kuwait.

Voters in Precinct 8 go in and out of Austin Elementary School this morning, braving the cold weather to cast their ballots.

Cold, windy weather doesn't keep voters from casting ballots today

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Cold, windy weather that blasted into the Texas Panhandle this morning has yet to dampen the spirits of the registered voters who want their voices heard in some hot races throughout the state and in the county.

As of about 10 a.m. today, at least 2,159 people had cast ballots in the first three hours of voting in 13 of the 14 voting precincts. Precinct 6 could not be reached to obtain those figures. That figure is almost 16.5 percent of the registered voters.

Another 16.65 percent of the registered Gray County voters, or 2,185, cast ballots during the absentee voting period.

The 33 percent voter turnout, counting absentee voting, through 10 a.m. today was high for Gray County, election officials said, and a steady stream of people continued to flow into most of the polling places. Polls opened at 7 a.m. and will close at 7 p.m.

Local meteorologist Darrell Sehorn said the surge of cold air that hit Pampa this morning should keep temperatures in the 30s today and Wednesday, with a high in the 20s tonight.

"We're looking at another developing low pressure in the upper air in the southwest part of the country," Sehorn said. "It's similar to last weekend."

Precipitation in the next couple of days could be translated into snow, with some likely to begin tonight, he said. "It doesn't appear it will be a big amount; we could get an inch or so," he said.

The low this morning was 38 degrees, recorded at 6:15 a.m. By 9 a.m., the temperature had dropped several degrees and by mid-afternoon today, the temperatures should be in the lower 30s.

The wind blowing out of the north today at 20 mph and gusty could make the wind chill factor down below zero by tonight, Sehorn said.

Last Thursday, a high of 83 degrees was recorded, then the weekend cold front moved in, but Monday's high was back up to 66 degrees.

By Friday, the cold weather system that invaded the county this morning should be leaving and bring temperatures back up in the 50s. Weekend temperatures should be around 60 degrees in the Texas Panhandle, Sehorn said.

The front will bring cooler temperatures and some rain into North Texas by Wednesday, according to an Associated Press story. The front was located along a line from Grand Island, Neb., into the Oklahoma Panhandle early today.

Cold weather is expected to reach northern portions of South Texas by Wednesday.

Regarding the voting in Gray County, following is a list of the precincts and the number of people who had voted as of about 10 l.m. today.

- Precinct 1, Lefors Community Center — 83.
- Precinct 2, Baker School — 108.
- Precinct 3, Grandview-Hopkins School — 38.
- Precinct 4, Alanreed School — 19.
- Precinct 5, Lovett Library, McLean — 161.
- Precinct 6, Howard's Laketon Store — not available.
- Precinct 7, Horace Mann School — 190.
- Precinct 8, Stephen F. Austin School — 348.
- Precinct 9, Woodrow Wilson School — 235.
- Precinct 10, Lovett Memorial Library — 75.
- Precinct 11, M.K. Brown Auditorium — 300.
- Precinct 12, Lamar School — 77.
- Precinct 13, Courthouse Annex — 200.
- Precinct 14, William B. Travis School — 325.

inely hoping to see a peaceful outcome."

Baker, leaving the Saudi mountain resort of Taif earlier Monday after talks with the exiled emir of Kuwait, said the situation was changing.

"This crisis is entering a new phase," he said, "and while we are still seeking a peaceful political and diplomatic solution, we have to put ourselves in a position where we would be able to exercise any options that might be available."

Baker is on a seven-country trip designed to test support among Arabs, Europeans and the Soviets for military action against Saddam.

Panhandle Bird Watch

by Jan Elston

Aren't the changing colors of the trees beautiful this autumn? In his book, The Habitat Guide to Birding, the author, Thomas P. McElroy Jr., gives an interesting discussion about fall and winter bird populations:

"The preparation for the onslaught of winter begins as the lush growth of summer slows and the cooler days of autumn become more noticeable. Leaves build a corklike separation of cells at the base of their stems; the leaves are sealed, and chlorophyll is no longer produced. Without the dominant greens, other pigments present in the leaves now appear.

"The yellow carotene in the leaf cells of the aspens, birches, and shaded sugar maples gives them a golden hue. The sugar-rich cells in the leaves of maples, oaks, and sumacs bring out the varying shades of red and purple, their brilliance depending upon the amount of exposure to the sun.

"Bright sunny days and cool nights produce autumn's most colorful displays. Frost crystals penetrate the cells of the separation layers and loosen the leaves, which flutter to the ground and are gradually returned to the soil."

This time of the year large flocks of migrating Chipping Sparrows seem to enjoy coming into town to feast on grass and weed seeds and tiny insects in lawns and flower beds. These birds don't seem particularly frightened of humans, and will sometimes let people walk up quite close to them, but they are careful to keep an "escape route" open, staying fairly near trees or shrubs.

Chipping Sparrows are about 5 inches long (about an inch shorter than House Sparrows). The most distinctive feature about them is their rust-colored cap. The reddish crown, with a white line over the eye, a black line through the eye, and black bill are good field marks. The breast is not spotted or streaked.

One interesting bit of information I read about Chipping Sparrows is that they are also called "Hairbirds," because of their habit of lining their nests with hair. In the past they utilized horsehair, but with the decline in the use of horses, Chippies take any hair available and have even been reported to pluck strands from the coat of a sleeping dog.

Usually before we actually see these birds, we notice some movement in the grass, and can tell some kind of bird is feeding there—then we become aware that there are several, and with binoculars we are able to identify them. Sometimes we aren't aware that they are around, until we walk near them, and the entire flock flies to the nearest tree, chirping softly. Watch for these interesting little birds in your yard.

Chipping Sparrow

Today we received a newsletter from the Texas Panhandle Audubon Society, which is reorganizing in Amarillo, and will have its first meeting Thursday, Nov. 8.

The meeting will be at 7 p.m. at Amarillo Public Library (downtown at 413 E. 4th St., across from the Civic Center).

The TPAS has plans for field trips, birdwatching expeditions, community projects and speakers on local and regional concerns.

The newsletter of the TPAS is called The Prairie Horned Lark, and it is well-written and informative. One interesting feature is a report of unusual sightings in the Panhandle. This gives us an idea of which birds to be watching for.

Listed in the newsletter are upcoming field trips and meetings. Those TPAS field trips are really a lot of fun. The first time we went with those people, we knew next-to-nothing about birds, but we took our binoculars and our bird book, and we had a great time. Scheduled upcoming events are:

Nov. 10: Field trips to Palo Duro Canyon State Park. Meet at the park entrance at 8 a.m. This will be an introductory survey of the more common resident birds and early winter arrivals.

Nov. 15-18: Fall meeting of the Texas Ornithological Society in Lubbock. Ken Seyffert will be leading a field trip in Caprock Canyons State Park on Saturday, Nov. 17. Meet at the park entrance at 8 a.m.

There will be a lot of hiking, so take your lunch. The park is three miles north of Quitaque. The hike will be into the South Prong, which is vividly depicted in the October issue of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Magazine.

Woman married to bigamist has problems

DEAR ABBY: My husband is an American, but I was born in the Philippines. Wilbur is 51 and I am 36. We've been married for eight years, and he adopted my two children. (I was a widow.)

Yesterday I got a telephone call from a woman who said, "Hello, my name is Mary Elizabeth ()," and her last name was the same as mine, so I said, "Oh, you must be related to Wilbur." She said, "Yes, he's my husband."

I was so shocked I could hardly speak, then I told her that Wilbur was also my husband. She was very surprised and said she hadn't seen him in many years, but she wanted a divorce so she could marry someone else.

Abby, Wilbur never mentioned that he was married before. Anyway, I took her number to give to Wilbur. When he came home, I told him about Mary Elizabeth, and he just laughed and said he had not thought of her for a long time. Then I said, "Maybe you have yet another wife who would like a divorce?" To my surprise, he said, "Yes, I have. Last I heard she was in San Antonio, Texas, but if she doesn't bother me, I won't bother her."

I asked if he had any children. He said, "No, my first wife gave me a vasectomy for a wedding present."

Abby, now I worry about whether our marriage is legal. He's a kind and decent man, owns his own business and has been a fine father to my children. We were married by a Navy chaplain. But are we really married? Please tell me what to do.

VERY WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: Your husband should see a lawyer. He has at least two marriages that need to be dissolved before he is free to marry you.

DEAR ABBY: Please help settle a family argument. My husband thought "Traci," our 14-year-old daughter, was spending too much time on the telephone, so he gave her a five-minute limit on all telephone calls. I think this is unfair.

I equate Traci's telephone calls with "hanging out," as we did on street corners before we had telephones and lived near enough to walk to our friends' houses. Therefore, my heart is not really into enforcing Dad's five-minute rule—especially since we have "call waiting." Your opinion, please.

TRACI'S MOM

DEAR MOM: First, some pertinent unanswered questions: How are Traci's grades? Has she been neglecting anything of importance in order to "hang out" on the telephone?

The telephone to some teenagers is a lifeline, so since you have "call waiting"—and if Traci hasn't been neglecting her homework and chores—imposing a five-minute limit borders on cruel and unusual punishment. I think Dad should lighten up.

DEAR ABBY: I am a bandleader who frequently gets requests to play a song in honor of a wedding anniversary. I always get a laugh when on the occasion of the first anniversary I play "Night and Day."

For the fifth anniversary, I play "Saturday Night."

For the 10th anniversary, I play "Once in a While."

For the 25th anniversary, I play "Now and Then."

For the 50th anniversary, I play "Thanks for the Memories."

Any suggestions for anniversaries over 50?

Thanksgiving date set by Congress

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Thanksgiving Day, on Thursday Nov. 22, follows a tradition started by the Pilgrim fathers at Plymouth, Mass., in 1621.

But, according to researchers at Hallmark Cards, Thanksgiving was not always a national celebration. For 150 years after the Pilgrims, it was observed only sporadically.

The day was officially proclaimed by President George Washington in 1789, just for that year, and once again in 1795. President Thomas Jefferson actively opposed Thanksgiving during his two terms, 1801-1809. In 1863, President Abraham Lincoln made the present date for Thanksgiving official, but on two later occasions President Franklin D. Roosevelt changed it. In 1941, a joint Congressional resolution set the fourth Thursday in November as the permanent Thanksgiving date.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'll grasp the essence of ideas today, but not necessarily their entirety. This is because your focus is likely to be on your own concept instead of on what you're being told. Scorpio, treat yourself to a birthday gift.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This is not an especially good day to go shopping for expensive merchandise. Your desires for instant gratification could distort your value judgment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Disengage yourself from ideas or plans today about which you do not feel certain. Don't complicate your life by speeding down a road that is probably a dead-end street.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In order to expedite production today you might experiment with some untested methods or procedures. Tying with the unknown could create problems for you instead of resolving them.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) When carousing with friends today you might feel socially obligated to foot the bill instead of splitting the costs equally. Don't be stingy, but, on the other hand, be realistic.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) There is a possibility you may be subjected to more domestic tensions than usual today. If you treat events emotionally, instead of logically, it'll contribute to everyone's discomfort.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Make every effort to subdue your impulsive inclinations today. Be sure your mind is in gear before your mouth starts talking and watch out when you get behind the wheel and go buzzing around town.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today will not be devoid of financial opportunities; although they are apt to be rather elusive. If you hope to capitalize on advantageous developments, don't blink your eyes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your possibilities for succeeding in a commercial endeavor are somewhat limited today. This is because you might deliberately involve yourself with people who can't make effective contributions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In spite of your better judgment, there is a chance today you may do something that does not serve your best interests where your career is concerned. Watch your step.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your friends might find you a trifle difficult to deal with today, because you may say one thing and do another. Instead of having them wonder what you'll do next, stick to your word.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In order to fulfill meaningful objectives today, continuity of purpose is essential. If you attempt to do things in fits and starts, you'll merely have a lot of beginnings with no endings.
