Bush: Saddam Hussein must get out

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — President Bush mixed themes of war, peace and politics today, promising to drive Saddam Hussein from Kuwait while holding out the hope of bringing U.S. troops home "without a shot being fired."

Bush told a GOP rally: "Saddam Hussein must get out, and he must get out totally, and the legitimate rulers must be returned."

It was the fourth day in a row that Bush has pressed his verbal barrage against the Iraqi leader.

Bush said he had no apologies for raising the subject at one political rally after another, as he seeks to provide last-minute help for GOP candidates in next Tuesday's midterm elections.

"I'll repeat it today, I'll repeat it tomorrow and I'll repeat it the next day," Bush declared. Earlier, Bush had urged American hostage families to ignore Saddam Hussein's invitation to visit loved ones in captivity, calling it a brutal "ploy."

"I think those people should come home to visit with their families. I think they should be released from captivity," Bush said Thursday. He suggested the Iraqi leader had surpassed even Adolf Hitler in some forms of brutality.

Today, Bush told his Ohio audience: "Let me be very clear. There cannot be any compromise" short of total Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait.

Praising the more than 220,000 U.S. troops now stationed in the Persian Gulf region, Bush said: "I'll do my level best to bring every single one of them home without a shot being fired in anger. But we will not stop short of our stated objectives."

"We are the United States of America. We are standing for principle. And that principle must prevail."

"Brutality against innocent civilians will not be tolerated and will not stand," he said. "It is inhumane, it is wrong and it must not be rewarded."

The president appeared at a $50-a-person fund-raising breakfast and at a separate $2,000-a-couple private reception in an effort to help raise last-minute funds for Ohio Republicans in two close races.

Republican George Voinovich, the former mayor of Cleveland, is in a hard-fought battle against Democratic state attorney general Anthony Celebrezze in the gubernatorial race. Black Republican J. Kenneth Blackwell is in a tight contest against Charles Luken, the son of retiring incumbent Rep. Tom Luken, for the senior Luken's House seat.

Bush, in a nonstop campaign swing for Republican candidates that will end on Election Day, was to speak later today at GOP rallies in Rochester, Minn., and Sioux City, Iowa, before flying on to California to the night.

Several hundred protesters gathered in a square outside the Cincinnati hotel where Bush was speaking, bearing signs protesting U.S. Gulf policy, including, "Fund Education, Not War."

"I can share their concern," Bush said, noting the demonstrators in his remarks. But, he said "We are talking about brutal, naked aggression. We are talking about one country bullying a neighbor."

On Thursday, he likened the Iraqi leader to Hitler at campaign stops in Massachusetts and in Orlando, Fla.

"Iraq's brutality against innocent civilians will not be permitted to stand, and Saddam Hussein's violations of international law will not stand; his aggression against Kuwait will not stand," Bush said in Orlando.

As to Saddam's offer on Thursday to allow American families to come to Iraq and occupied Kuwait over the Christmas and New Years holidays, he said: "I see it as a ploy."

"I think people see it as rather brutal," the president said. "We have a notice out discouraging Americans from going there and that would hold."

Bush again voiced some frustration that international economic sanctions imposed after Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2 had failed to have a quicker impact.

"The sand is running through the glass," Bush said.

And while again raising grave concerns about the plight of the American diplomats and others who remain holed up in the American embassy in Kuwait City, Bush said: "I won't discuss what will or won't trigger an armed conflict."

He denied anew that he was speaking in a more bellicose fashion to divert attention from his domestic problems just five days before midterm elections.

"This is not a partisan effort that we're involved in here," he said.

Bush was asked whether he was exaggerating a little by saying Saddam was more brutal than Hitler and in suggesting the U.S. diplomats were being starved in Kuwait when other accounts suggested they still had food supplies, had dug a well and were growing vegetables.

"I don't think I'm overstating it. I know I'm not overstating the feelings I have," he replied.

"Hitler did not stake people out against potential military targets, and ... he did indeed respect legitimacy of embassies," Bush said.

Jean Martindale

Kent Sims

Martindale, Sims seek 31st District judge post

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Both candidates vying for the 31st District Judge seat have the opinion that the race will be a close one.

Jean Martindale, running on the Republican ticket, and Kent Sims, running on the Democratic ticket, both say their campaign expenses stand at about $15,000 each.

The two have practiced law for a number of years. Sims has been licensed as an attorney for 18 years, while Martindale has been licensed for 25 years.

The 31st District Court covers five counties — Gray, Wheeler, Hemphill, Roberts and Lipscomb. Of the 1,300 cases disposed of in the 31st District last year, 1,000 were in Gray County, where 60 percent of the voters in the district reside. Current District Judge Grainger McIlhenny is retiring from the office.

Martindale, of Pampa, believes he is the most qualified candidate based on his years of experience in the law field.

Sims, on the other hand, said, "My theory in this race is I'm not running against Jean Martindale, but running for the office based on my own qualifications."

"My past experience in public office is a little different. I basically feel as serving as county attorney for 13 years and being elected four times to that office that I know what the people are looking for in a public servant and I have fulfilled that position there based on what I feel is fair and positive prosecution of the cases that came before me."

While Martindale served for about seven years as a city of Pampa prosecutor and about three years as a municipal judge, Sims has served for 13 years as Wheeler County attorney and was appointed as Wheeler County judge for about a year in the 70s and then again for about a month this summer.

Martindale, responding to a letter to the editor printed last Sunday in The Pampa News, said Foster Whaley either "intentionally misled the people or failed to check the facts."

"As municipal judge we were trying misdemeanors to the jury," Martindale said. "We tried more cases to the jury than any other court, probably, in the Panhandle. Had he checked the record he would have found that Mr. Sims was never elected judge. He failed to determine the facts."

But Sims said he did not think Whaley's letter was meant to be negative. "I did not interpret that in the same way he (Martindale) did. I interpret it in a manner that Foster was pointing out the types of experience. Mine being in major misdemeanors where punishment can range to two years in jail and Jean's prosecutor experience being in municipal court where it's fine punishment only."

Martindale said that both he and Sims are qualified for the district judge position under the requirements set out by statute. However, he said voters should look beyond that and beyond judicial knowledge.

Martindale was born and raised in the Panhandle and worked his way through college. He attended the University of Texas and completed his degree at West Texas State University in 1962. He went to Baylor University Law School, graduating in 1965.

He's been married to Mary, a native of Pampa, for 33 years. "That, I think shows stability and maturity," he said.

The Martindales have two sons, Matthew, 22, and Russ, 19.

Sims was born in Pampa and raised in Wheeler. He graduated valedictorian of his high school class in 1964, went on to receive a civil engineering degree from Texas Tech University and graduate from Tech's law school in 1972. Following that he set up his private practice in Wheeler.

Both men have been involved in numerous civic and church activities. Martindale has been involved in the Boy Scouts program, held all of the Lions Club offices, was on the board of the Pampa Youth and Community Center, and has been on various boards at St. Matthew's Episcopal Church.

Sims has been a trustee at Wheeler United Methodist Church, past president of Wheeler Chamber of Commerce, past president of Wheeler Kiwanis Club, past lay leader, youth leader and Sunday school teacher at the church.

He is married to Andrea and combined, they have four teen-age daughters, Angelique, Gayla, Stacy and Anissa.

Martindale said he is seeking the district judge seat because he thinks it is the best job a lawyer can have. "I really am seeking the judge because I want to be judge, not

United Way campaign reaches 76% of goal

By BETH MILLER

The final check-in of the Pampa United Way campaign surpassed the 75 percent mark and brought a round of applause from those attending the gathering at the Pampa Community Building.

Instrumental in bringing that total from 41 percent to 76 percent at Thursday's check-in were the Hoechst Celanese active and retired employees plus the company's generous match to the employee donations.

Before Thursday, the total pledges to the campaign stood at $136,474. Thursday's check-in brought that total up to $253,766.18 of the $332,000 goal.

Campaign Chairman Jack Gindorf enthusiastically said, "I can visualize us beating this goal in the next two weeks."

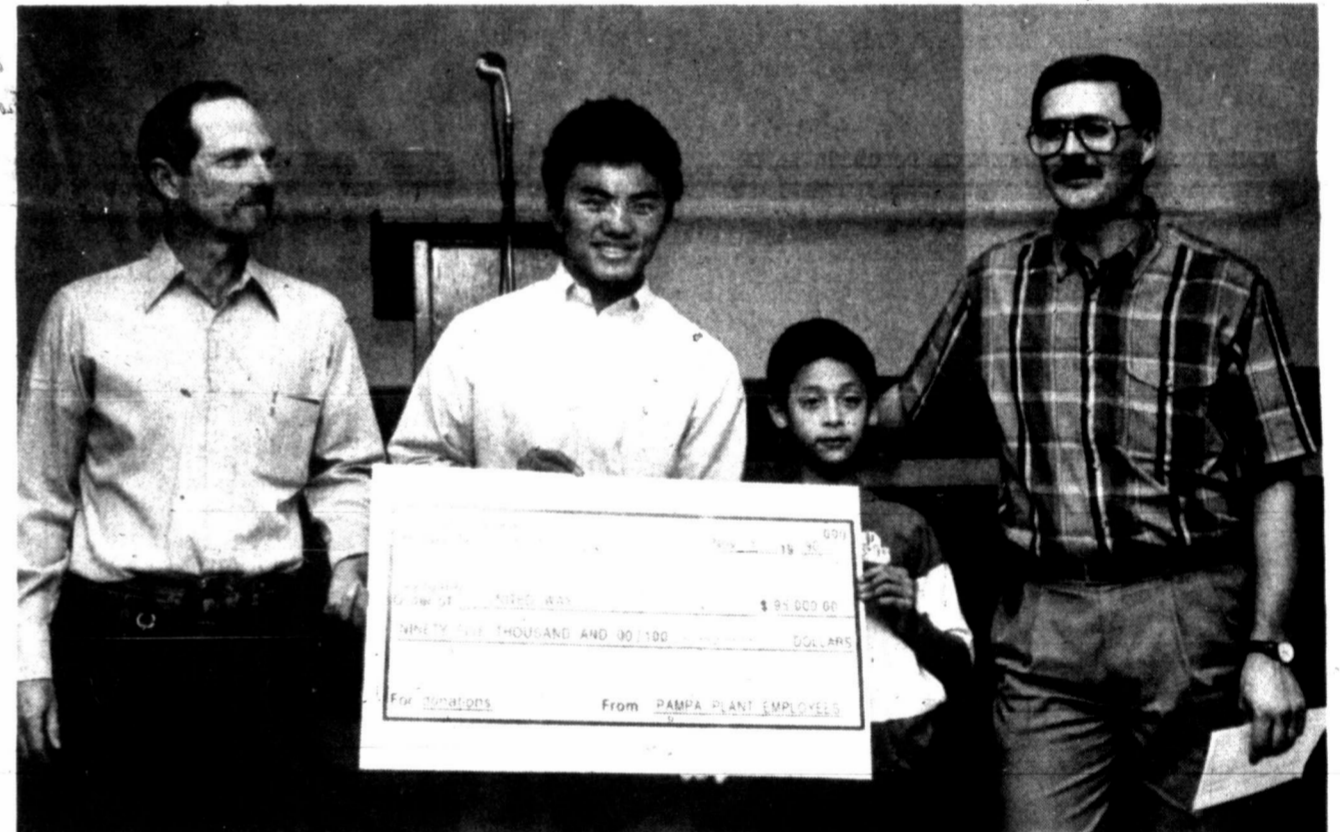

Gindorf announced last week that the campaign would be extended until Nov. 15 to collect a number of pledge cards that are still out in the community. Several major firms have not brought their pledge cards in, officials with the United Way said.

"We have a little way to go," Gindorf said after announcing the amount pledged to date. "We'll make that goal. I'm not worried about that one bit."

Gindorf called on a group of United Way volunteers to help with getting the last of the pledge cards turned in and to contact firms and individuals who have not been contacted.

Al Chapa, assistant administrator at Coronado Hospital, said an estimated 90 percent of the pledge cards from hospital employees have been collected with just under $12,000 pledged. The hospital employees increased their pledges over last year.

Last year, the average donation to the United Way by hospital employees was $45.50 a year per employee. This year, that figure stands at $47.50 per employee a year.

"The employees are beginning to support the United Way more and more. We're moving in the right direction," Chapa said.

Several of the United Way agencies are used first hand in the emergency room, Chapa said, giving hospital employees a view of how the agencies work.

"I hope the agencies grow, and I think they will as long as we have the foresight to look ahead," he said.

Chapa also commended Gindorf for his efforts in this year's campaign.

Gindorf said that the people and companies who contributed to the campaign are not just good neighbors, but are "good people." He said of Celanese that the company and its employees are more than "good people," but are "good friends."

Jim Duggan, Xuan Le and Carl Prater with Celanese presented a life-sized check to Gindorf for Celanese employees' and the company's matching contribution of a little more than $95,000. The three men were on the Steering Committee for the United Way campaign at Celanese along with Martin Garza, Terry Garner, Danny Hoggatt, Henry Dawes, Roberta Cavalli, Anthony Unruh, Kelly Everson and Jewell Snider.

Duggan said last year's goal for the employees at Celanese was $35,000. This year's goal was stepped up to $46,000. The employees surpassed that goal with 94 percent participation from the active employees for a total of $48,170 contributed by active and retired employees. With the match by the company, the total amount contributed by Celanese was $96,340.

"Celanese and Pampa have been friends for many years," Gindorf said. "Pampa would not be Pampa without Celanese."

Three candidates campaigning for Precinct 2 justice of the peace spot

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
News Editor

Three Pampans are seeking the Precinct 2 justice of the peace post to be decided in the Nov. 6 general election.

Incumbent Wayne Roberts lost the Democratic primary election, but has since filed as an independent write-in candidate.

Margie Prestidge, who served as Precinct 1 Justice of the Peace from 1971 through 1985, is the Democratic candidate on the ballot.

Neil Bailey won the Republican primary for Precinct 2 JP. She brings an educational background in business law and psychology to her campaign.

During his term as JP, Roberts said he feels he has made the office more open to the public. One of the major accomplishments of his term, he added, is the establishment of a Teen Court program. Since 1988,

Margie Prestidge

Teen Court has reviewed 114 cases. Roberts said he believes the light turnout in the primary election led to his defeat. "I didn't feel all my supporters went to the polls," he explained. "A lot of people won't even vote in a primary election." Bailey said that if she is elected she will do what she can to reverse laws written in 1960 which, though intended to protect the innocent, actually "coddle" criminals.

"I know a JP doesn't have much to do in writing laws, but I would like to help reverse those laws," Bailey said. One way she feels would be effective would be to set the bonds higher for repeat offenders. "I'd try to keep them off the streets a little longer," she said.

Prestidge said that she intends to make the office "workable for all people." She points out that her 300 hours of schooling related to the justice of peace and 15 years experience make her well-qualified for the position.

Roberts said he is updated on the current laws applicable to being justice of the peace. He recently attended two schools on inquests for a total of 23 hours in the past month. He has also 100 hours of state-required justice of the peace schooling and an additional 24 hours in elective schooling applicable to the job.

Bailey, whose educational background is in business law and psychology, says she would also have arraignments as early as possible in an effort to save the county money. "I would run the office in a most cost-efficient manner. I would also like to continue Teen Court. I think that's a worthwhile effort."

Precinct 1 justice of the peace from 1971 through 1985, Prestidge presently manages the Salvation Army thrift store on Cuyler Street. She has raised two sons, one who owns his own business in Pampa and the other who lives in Nebraska.

She feels that her ability to work well with all people is one of her skills that qualifies her for the Precinct 2 JP position. She believes that during her 15 years as a JP she upgraded the office to make it workable for all the people.

Roberts and his wife, Glenda, have three children and two grandchildren. They are members of

County commissioners hear citizen's plan for Lake Meredith desalinization

By BETH MILLER
 Staff Writer

Gray County Commissioners Court heard Thursday from a Pampa resident who is pushing for private residents to foot the bill for the desalinization of Lake Meredith. W.A. Morgan spoke on the issue, which he said can be accomplished for a nominal fee paid by customers throughout a three-year period.

The lake currently has 80 tons of salt per day trickling into the drinking water used by an estimated 400,000 people.

Morgan said that for five years there has been a known solution to the problem, which would cost $8 million to correct.

By tacking on a user fee each month for three years, Morgan said the problem could be solved. He said such a fee would cost less than two gallons of bottled water a month, or from less than $1 to $1.50 a month per customer.

"There is no reason why this could not be done with local funds," he said.

The source of the problem is in New Mexico, and therefore, Morgan said, the federal government would have to coordinate the project for it to be effective.

"People have said this is a federal problem," Morgan said. "This is not so, we can do something about it."

Morgan said the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority will be instrumental in the decision. He said his recent letters to the editor of local newspapers and his public speaking on the issue have been to try to get the public knowledgeable about the problem that he says the public can solve.

During the past five years, Morgan said customers have probably spent $5 million to $8 million buying hot water heaters.

On Sunday, when Congress passed the 1991 budget, plans to desalinate Lake Meredith were again put on hold, as they have been since 1984.

The bill would have provided construction of an $8.4 million project to divert salt from several brine aquifers that feed saltwater into a section of the Canadian River near Logan, N.M.

John Williams, general manager of the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority, told an Amarillo newspaper earlier this week that directors in the authority member cities of Amarillo, Lubbock, Lamesa, O'Donnell, Plainview, Borger, Pampa, Tahoka, Slaton and Brownfield will have to decide if Congress is still the road they want to take.

In a letter to the editor published Thursday in the Amarillo Daily News, Morgan wrote, "We have been sitting on our duffs waiting for the government to donate $2 million for this project. We have probably spent more than that amount on bottled water, high blood pressure medicine and new water heaters during the years that we have been begging the government to solve our problem."

Morgan also has written a letter to the editor published in The Pampa News regarding the issue.

In other business, commissioners tabled a request by Precinct 2 Constable Chris Lockridge for the county to purchase a vehicle for the office until after the general election. The reason for tabling the item is because Lockridge faces Mike H. Helton on Tuesday in the race for the seat and Helton has indicated he would not want a county-owned vehicle.

Items of action at the meeting included:
 • Unanimously approving $21,538.18 in bills and $121,925.91 in salaries.
 • Unanimously agreed not to pay a $4,169 bill for insurance on heavy equipment on the suggestion of Precinct 2 Commissioner Jim Greene, who said he thought by sending out for bids the price might be reduced.

The county will advertise for bids and open the bids at a Dec. 14 meeting.
 • Unanimously approved the following transfers: $51,300 from the general fund to the salary fund; $1,025 from the general fund to the law library; $8,100 from FM&LR to R&B Precinct 1; $12,700 from FM&LR to R&B Precinct 2; $8,600 from FM&LR to R&B Precinct 3; $8,000 from FM&LR to R&B Precinct 4; $4,903.68 from Lateral Road to R&B Precinct 1; $6,895.17 from Lateral Road to R&B Precinct 2; $5,831.67 from Lateral Road to R&B Precinct 3; and $4,785.60 from Lateral Road to R&B Precinct 4.

 • Recognized each of the four commissioners for the completion of 12 hours of continuing education.
 • Unanimously approved two inter-budget transfers in the budget of Precinct 3 Commissioner Gerald Wright, moving $6,000 from fuel to capital and $1,500 from paving to road material.
 • Unanimously approved the crossings of two county roads with pipelines.
 • Unanimously approved naming Essie M. Walters as the representative to the Public Responsibility Committee for Texas Panhandle Mental Health Authority.
 • Unanimously approved the sale of delinquent tax property on McCullough Street and at 520 W. Francis.
 • Unanimously approved submitting an office space lease proposal to the Soil Conservation Service.
 • Received a letter from the Texas Water Commission saying the lot where the new county jail and sheriff's office will be built is clear as far as the TWC is concerned. Several underground storage tanks were removed and the soil was tested and appropriate steps were taken to remove contaminated soil.
 • Unanimously authorized the county judge to sign a document amending the child welfare contract.
 • Received a letter of commendation about Tax Assessor-Collector Margie Gray from the Texas Association of Assessing Officers. Gray served as an association leader during the past year.
 • Held a pre-construction conference on the jail with the architect and general contractor. Plans are to get the construction under way next week after a few minor details are completed.

The group also voted 4-1 with Precinct 4 Commissioner Ted Simmons voting against to issue a change order increasing the jail's price by $26,000 to make the building more structurally sound and capable of holding a third floor. Simmons said he thought the third floor would not be needed, and if it ever was, he was in favor of building a minimal security facility elsewhere in the county to house minor offenders.
 Preliminary estimates by the general contractor, A&S Steel out of Amarillo, are that the facility would be complete by Aug. 16 of next year. However, that estimate does not include holidays or bad weather days.

Love birds take flight together, but are snared

Two little love birds sitting in a tree... k-i-s-s-i-n-g.

It must have been a case of love at first sight.
 A Pampa resident allowed her parrot to sit outside on its cage one beautiful fall afternoon earlier this week. When her husband went to put the bird back in the house, he saw that another parrot was sitting beside it.
 And as he watched, the two birds flew away together.
 Throughout the week, the two parrots have been sighted in several areas of the city. Animal Control officers chased the elusive birds for two days until they were finally captured Thursday.
 Sandy Burns, Animal Control director, said the Pampans' bird went into its cage. She then used the caged bird to lure the other parrot into the Animal Control truck with her.
 Burns is now trying to locate the owner of the other parrot. Anyone who is missing a parrot and thinks this parrot may be theirs may call the animal shelter at 669-6149. The parrot will be kept for three days, Burns said.

Stabbing suspect returned

Gray County Sheriff Jim Free and Deputy Bill Totten traveled to Nebraska this week and returned Thursday with a Pampa man wanted in connection with a July stabbing incident.
 Free said Donald Eugene Graham Jr., 33, 1007 E. Browning, waived extradition from Valentine, Neb., and was arraigned Thursday evening by Precinct 2 Justice of the Peace Wayne Roberts who set bond at $25,000.
 In the early-morning July 21 incident, Pampa police said Robert James Potter, 38, 319 N. Gray, was stabbed in the 300 block of East Browning.

 Potter was admitted to Coronado Hospital with multiple stab wounds including a slashed throat and punctured lung, police said at the time of the incident.
 A warrant for Graham's arrest was issued following the incident, but he could not be located until he was pulled over on a traffic violation in Nebraska. Police there ran a check of Graham's record and found he was wanted in Gray County, Free said.

Free said the round-trip mileage to pick up Graham totaled about 1,300 miles.

Sims, who lives on a ranch outside of Wheeler, said that stiffer sentences would help deter some from committing drug and alcohol offenses, but said that may not be the best answer.

"I think the real answer to drug and alcohol abuse is education. I think the courts can make a difference if you have something there to keep them from doing it, but education in grade school is where it starts," Sims said.

The two candidates both said that if elected no drastic changes would be made until they had time to evaluate the running of the office.

"I think it's important that the district judge, because of the volume of cases, be assessable to Gray County. Judge (Grainger) McIlhany has been great, but I think living in Pampa will be a real asset," Martindale said.

If elected, Martindale said he would like to serve three terms and then retire at the age of 66.

Sims said he would make his full-time office in Wheeler, where he resides, but make sure he is available when needed in Pampa or in any other county seats in the district.

Sims and Martindale said residents had been receptive to them and courteous in each of their door-to-door campaigns throughout the five-county district.

"I've been amazed at the courtesy of the people here and all of over the district," Sims said.

Richards: Williams a laughingstock for the state

By STEVEN L. ARTERS
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — With Democrat Ann Richards closing the gap in opinion polls and election day nearing, Republican gubernatorial hopeful Clayton Williams is getting help from the GOP's biggest guns.

Two new opinion polls today showed a tightening race.

A Mason-Dixon poll conducted for various media outlets showed Williams at 45 percent support and Richards at 43 percent; a Texas Poll showed the race 42-35 for Williams.

"Even if I was a betting man, I wouldn't place any bets on this one," James Dyer, who directed the Texas Poll, told the Austin American-Statesman.

Having already received an in-person endorsement from former President Ronald Reagan, Williams is scheduled to spend his final day on the campaign Monday stumping with President Bush.

He's also campaigned alongside U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm and began airing a TV commercial this week featuring first lady Barbara Bush and former Dallas Cowboys Tom Landry.

Williams says he appreciates the assistance. "I need all the help I can get," he said Thursday. "I'm very proud to tie to the administration. While George Bush may have been attacked, well, Lord, not me. I support his Desert Shield. He's my friend."

But Richards, campaigning in Texarkana, said Williams needs more than help from big-name Republicans. Williams has made Texas a "laughingstock" with his blunders, she charged.

"It's not just what's happening in Texas. Everybody is looking here and saying, 'What in the world is going on?'" Richards said.

Williams this week expressed ignorance of a proposed constitutional amendment he already had voted on affecting gubernatorial appointments. He later said he temporarily forgot the proposal. Other campaign gaffes have included Williams making a joke about rape, for which he apologized.

"It's just one sort of misstep after another," Richards said. She said the gaffes have helped her gain on Williams in polls.

"The one thing they (polls) are consistent on is showing that we are gaining. And as long as we're doing that, I feel very, very good about our possibility to win this race on Tuesday," Richards said.

The Mason-Dixon Poll was based on phone interviews with 824 likely voters between Monday and Wednesday. It had a margin of error of 3.5 percentage points. Since Oct. 11, that survey said, Williams' support has fallen from 51 percent to 45 percent.

The Texas Poll, conducted Oct. 19-29 by the Public Policy Resources Laboratory of Texas A&M

University for Harte-Hanks Communications, involved phone interviews with 622 likely voters and had a margin of error of 4 percentage points.

Williams attended a campaign rally at the Austin Opera House on Thursday night, two-stepping with wife Modesta and picking up the support of yet another name, former University of Texas football star Earl Campbell.

"I've been like a person in a closet and I don't say a lot about politics," Campbell told the rally.

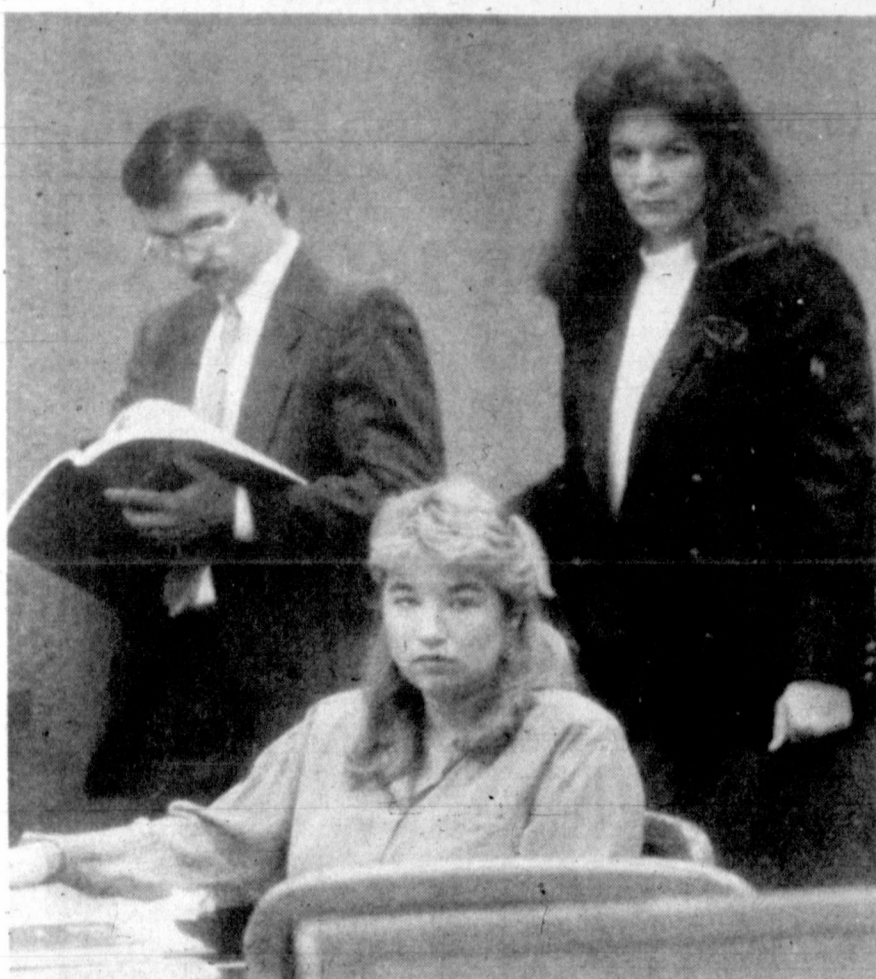

"I don't do a lot about politics. There's going to be a lot of people disappointed with what I've decided to do as far as politics are concerned, but that's their business. I think it's time I chose a side. I think Clayton Williams will be great governor, and I wish him and Modesta good luck," he said.

At an earlier rally at the University of North Texas in Denton, Richards took after Williams' proposal to put young drug offenders to work "bustin' rocks."

"The slogan 'has never made a lot of sense to me," Richards said.

"He said ... they're going to take these rocks and they're going to build benches and picnic tables," she said, laughing. "I laid a patio one time, and I would tell you that anybody putting a plate on that picnic table is going to have a mighty tippy deal."

Richards said more prison space is needed, but she wouldn't estimate how much.

Denise Wells, seated, waits while her attorneys Christopher Tritico, left, and Valerie Wells Davenport go over details in the trial concerning ticketing Wells for going into a men's restroom.

Trial continues for woman who used men's restroom

By WENDY BENJAMINSON
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The lawyer for a woman charged with illegally using a men's room at a concert says the case has generated so much attention because the issue "is something that's touched all our lives."

"It's not a gender-based thing. It's common fairness," attorney Valerie Wells Davenport said.

Attorneys seated a jury Thursday and began testimony in the trial of Denise Wells, a 33-year-old legal secretary who allegedly violated a city ordinance by using the men's room.

Ms. Wells has said she used the men's room at the concert out of desperation because the line at the ladies' restroom was too long. The case has had Wells a celebrity of sorts. Her bathroom trip has been the subject of national news coverage and she has made appearances on talk shows hosted by Johnny Carson, Geraldo Rivera and Joan Rivers.

The media interest continued Thursday. At one point, Wells went to the women's restroom and emerged smiling while nearly a dozen photographers clicked away.

Ms. Davenport, who also is Wells' sister, said the city's insistence on prosecuting Wells is "a silly waste of taxpayer money."

"Quite frankly, I always thought Texas was big enough to come to a lady in distress and dismiss charges like these," she said.

"We have four brothers. Denise grew up using the men's room," added Davenport, who has barred her sister from talking to reporters.

Attorneys selected a four-woman, two-man jury Thursday afternoon and began the trial with testimony from the off-duty Houston police officer who cited Wells.

Davenport said today's testimony would be "very entertaining." Witnesses would include an architect to testify on the need for adequate restrooms.

Assistant City Attorney Karl Rosette said he would have two more witnesses today, and Davenport said the defense then would present eight to 10 witnesses. The case was expected to go to the jury late today.

Wells faces up to a $200 fine if convicted of the Class C misdemeanor.

On Thursday, officer Daniel B. Ramsey said he was working as a security guard July 7 at a concert by country-western superstar George Strait at The Summit in Houston when he found Wells using the men's restroom.

Ramsey testified he removed three women from a line to a men's room after receiving two complaints from men about women using their facilities. He said when he returned to the restroom, he saw Wells coming out of a stall.

As she was coming out, Ramsey testified, "She said in a voice that could be heard to the front of the restroom, 'There — I left the lid up, just like y'all like it.'"

Ramsey said he escorted Wells out of the bathroom and cited her for violating a city ordinance that bars members of one sex from using a public restroom designed for members of the opposite sex in a manner calculated to cause a disturbance.

Under cross-examination, Ramsey said there were 20 women in a line stretching into the hallway waiting to enter the women's room, while the line of people waiting to use the men's room did not reach past the door.

"I think she was extremely embarrassed when she made that remark (about the toilet lid)," Davenport said during a recess.

Davenport said her client's defense in the trial would be based on a clause in the law saying the person intended to cause a disturbance.

"She was just trying to go to the bathroom, not cause a disturbance," Davenport said.

Her sister, she said, waited until intermission was over and again tried to use the women's room, but the line was even longer. Then, in desperation, she followed a couple into the men's room, while the other woman's date cleared the way.

"She violated a city ordinance," Rosette said. "She entered without the permission of the person in charge."

Gramm: War closer in Mid East

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, says increased brutality toward American hostages by Iraq's Saddam Hussein is driving the United States closer to war in the Middle East.

"If you look at the brutality of the Iraqis, where they have gone into hospitals in Kuwait, taken premature babies out of incubators, thrown them up against the wall and taken the incubators back to Iraq," he said, that's evidence of the danger.

"If you look at the way they have abused our hostages, I think it is clear that our patience is becoming strained," Gramm told reporters after a campaign stop here Thursday. "I think it is increasingly clear that there is a very real danger of a conflict here."

Gramm said the conflict has boiled down to the safety of Americans held captive in Kuwait since Iraq's invasion Aug. 2.

"I am hopeful that a peaceful solution can be found," Gramm said. "But as of right now, I think that it is looking more, and more dangerous, and quite frankly I don't see the peaceful road home."

Gramm said members of Congress must be careful not to make statements about the conflict that could endanger American lives.

"I don't want a situation where somebody in Congress leaks something and some American dies because of somebody being imprudent in terms of what they said publicly," Gramm said.

"So I think we need to make decisions based on the safety of our young Americans in the Middle East," he said.

Gramm, who is running for reelection against Democrat Hugh Parmer, said he is optimistic about his chances Nov. 6.

"If I win by one vote, I will be very thankful for that one vote," Gramm told about 125 supporters. "But if you want to give me a historic landslide victory, I'll take that too."

'Steel Magnolias' a must to see, reviewer says

By ELIZABETH CARTER
Guest Reviewer

Never have I enjoyed being in a beauty shop as I did Thursday evening during ACT I's dress rehearsal for Steel Magnolias.

Multi-talented Cindy Judson has, once again, proven her ability to create an outstanding production with her direction of Steel Magnolias, by Robert Harling. She has woven the cast, crew, technicians and scenery into a wonderful tapestry of emotional shades.

The play unfolds in a beauty shop which is so authentically appointed, the odor of a permanent color almost be detected.

As well as being highly entertaining, Steel Magnolias deals competently with the difficult problems of diabetes and dialysis.

The characterizations are well developed and their accents easily place the ladies in the deep South where, together, they share gossip, complaints, innuendos and troubles.

"Truvy," the shop owner, is played by Sandy Crosswhite. Sandy is an ACT I veteran who played Mrs. Boynton in Agatha Christie's Appointment with Death and directed the musical, Is There Life After High School. Sandy gives a sensitive performance in this role.

Sheila Luther is making her acting debut with ACT I in the role of "Annelle." Sheila is very convincing portraying a girl who undergoes a metamorphosis.

Having played "Connie" in Come Blow Your Horn, and served as a dance coach for I Do, I Do, Marquetta Wampler becomes the snooty "Clairee."

Another newcomer to ACT I theater goes is Kelly Yeary, who lives in Borger. Her adept portrayal of Shelby, a diabetic, is good reason to look forward to her future in ACT I.

Although she is already a well known Pampa personality, Dee Dee Laramore displays another talent in her stirring performance as "M'Lynn," Shelby's concerned mother.

Saucy "Ouiser," who drips with flashy jewelry even when wearing jeans, is played to the hilt by Carolyn Smith. Carolyn made her debut with ACT I in The Dining Room and was assistant director for The Nerd.

All of the characterizations are well developed and their accents place them in the deep South.

It is hard to think of a negative in this production because it is, beyond question, one of ACT I's best.

Theater patrons will be delighted with the new, well-planned arrangement of ACT I's theater facilities.

Performance dates for this dinner-theater show are Nov. 2, 3, 9 and 10.

Seeing Steel Magnolias is a must for anyone who loves to laugh or cry, and especially for the man who is curious about what goes on in a ladies' beauty shop.

Democrats angry over GOP election mailing campaign

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats are threatening to take Republicans to court over schemes they say are meant to intimidate minority voters in North Carolina, Texas and possibly elsewhere.

But the Republican National Committee countered that the threat is a scheme to drum up minority turnout on Election Day.

"This unsupportable scare tactic by the Democrats is nothing more than part of their annual get-out-the-vote plan," said RNC spokeswoman Leslie Goodman.

The North Carolina Senate and Texas governor contests are so tight that Democrats are counting on minority turnout to put them over the top.

Democratic Party strategists said Thursday they were trying to publicize the GOP mailings in order to counter the fear they may induce among voters. They acknowledged it was possible that a backlash could drive up minority turnout.

The Democratic officials requested an immediate Justice Department investigation into GOP "ballot security" programs and said they were contacting the court that issued a 1982 consent decree banning such tactics.

"We will move quickly on this. We're not about to abide it," said Paul Tully, political director of the Democratic National Committee. "We keep fighting this same stupid battle. It's enough already."

He and others said local and state Republican organizations were sending postcards with misleading or false information to heavily black sections of North Carolina and East Texas.

Party chairman Ron Brown said the GOP has used similar tactics through the past decade despite agreeing in 1982 and 1986 not to do so.

He told Attorney General Dick Thornburgh in a hand-delivered letter that activity in North Carolina and Texas "may be just the tip of the iceberg" and asked for a quick examination of possible civil rights violations.

Brown also reminded all 50 state Republican chairmen in a letter that the 1982 consent decree bars "ballot intimidation and ballot security activities." He noted that the Orange County (Calif.) Republican Party last year paid a $400,000 settlement after being sued for intimidating Hispanic voters in 1988.

Goodman said the RNC "has nothing to do with the ballot security program in North Carolina, Texas or anywhere else."

Rick Shelby, political director of the National Republican Senatorial Committee, called the flap "much ado about nothing." He said ballot security is a standard operating procedure in many campaigns and is just getting more publicity in North Carolina than elsewhere.

"It's merely an effort to ensure that it's a fair, honest election," Shelby said.

Among the evidence the Democrats presented Thursday:

— A copy of the postcard mailed to voters in heavily black North Carolina precincts, saying people must contact the Board of Elections if they recently moved and must have lived in a precinct for the last 30 days or they can't vote.

Brown said the postcards contained fraudulent information. In fact, the Democrats say, voters who have moved may either go to the Board of Elections before they vote or to the precinct in which they are registered on election day and get transferred to the precinct where they now live.

— Copies of postcards sent to elderly Texans in Gregg County who had requested absentee ballots. The cards urged them to "throw that mail ballot in the trash" and "walk proudly into the voting place ... in honor of the many who fought and died for your right to walk into the polls."

Brown said that in Texas, once someone requests an absentee ballot, they cannot vote in person without going through a complicated procedure to cancel the absentee ballot.

— A copy of a Helms fund-raising letter seeking money to conduct ballot security activities, and a copy of a GOP campaign finance reform proposal that listed ballot security as a party-building activity eligible for federal funds. The May 1990 proposal did not become law.

ACLU sues private club for refusing to admit black woman

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Civil Liberties Union has filed a lawsuit against a private club alleging discrimination because it refused to admit a black woman in September.

The lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court, alleges that Wanda "Mama" Hendrick, owner of the Western Kountry Klub, denied entrance to Lisa M. Pollard because she is African-American, a civil liberties union release said.

The action was brought on behalf of Ms. Pollard and alleges that she was denied access solely because of her race. The lawsuit seeks an injunction enjoining Ms. Hendrick from such conduct in the future.

Pollard, who lives in Grand Prairie, said Hendrick turned her away from the club Sept. 1 when she tried to attend a birthday party with three white friends.

Pollard said Hendrick told her she could not come in because she was black.

"I've never been denied anywhere because of my color," said Pollard, 29, who works in Fort Worth. "I thought it was a joke at first. This is like something that would have happened to my grandmother maybe, but not in 1990. It was very hurtful."

Hendrick, 68, of Venus, has said the nightclub has no black members, she says, because "I don't really have room for them."

Shelve sanctions for South Africa

South Africa's loathsome apartheid system, a web of government racial edicts, continues to collapse. This fact was trumpeted loudly last month by South African President F.W. de Klerk's visit with President Bush.

During the long, bleak years since 1945, when apartheid was made state policy, no South African president was allowed on American soil. Only the waning of apartheid in recent months had made de Klerk's visit possible. Just 100 protesters paraded by the White House to oppose the visit. If de Klerk's predecessor, P.W. Botha, had visited Washington just two years ago, very likely hundreds of thousands of protesters would have stormed Washington.

De Klerk deserves the applause he is getting. He has virtually dismantled apartheid, and he is preparing to give blacks and other minorities full citizenship. He has legalized the African National Congress and released from prison its leader, Nelson Mandela. As de Klerk said in Washington, "South Africa has embarked on a new road toward justice and democracy."

What can the United States do to help? One major thing: Repeal the economic sanctions imposed by the U.S. Congress in 1986. Britain recently repealed most sanctions, and Japan never really imposed them. That means these countries can benefit from trade and investment as post-apartheid South Africa's economy is ready to boom. At a time when the U.S. economy is turning downward, our companies should be allowed to export to this vital market, saving American jobs.

De Klerk diplomatically did not press the sanctions issue in Washington. He had said before his visit, "I'm not going hat in hand with the particular objective of getting sanctions lifted." But part of the reason for his visit was to improve Americans' perception of South Africa, and so prepare for the sanctions' removal.

According to the 1986 Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act, the sanctions can only be lifted when President Bush certifies that all political prisoners have been released and the 1986 state of emergency has been repealed. Most prisoners have been released, and the state of emergency remains only in Natal province. Clearly, South Africa is on the way to meeting the Act's requirements. This good-faith effort should be met by a repeal of the Act itself by Congress.

If that doesn't happen, de Klerk says the sanctions would "take care of themselves," meaning that the remaining political prisoners would soon be released and the Natal state of emergency ended — in which case, President Bush could unilaterally remove the sanctions. But it would be better if Congress, representing the American people, would remove the sanctions now by repealing the Act as soon as they return to session in January, and so give de Klerk's good work a sign of our approval.

"Tell me about it, Mikhail Hey, do you want to compare approval ratings?"

Good riddance to Congress

WASHINGTON — It is 1:17 o'clock on the morning of Sunday the 28th of October, and the U.S. Senate, the greatest deliberative body in the world, has at last adjourned. The House quit 15 minutes earlier.

On behalf of millions of fed-up citizens, let me say to the Congress, good riddance! Get out! Go home!

This has been the most disgraceful session of Congress in my memory, and my memory goes back a long way. It will be weeks before the country discovers exactly what has been perpetrated on the people in these last few days.

In the mad rush to adjournment, members were voting on bills they knew little or nothing about. They were voting on amendments that had not been printed. Through the device of "unanimous consent," they hustled surreptitious deals to enactment faster than clerks could record them.

At this juncture, any effort to analyze the deficit reduction act is an exercise in futility. During the wheeling and dealing, members wrote one little favor after another into the bill. Eventually a few experts on the Tax Code will fit the pieces together, but this will take time.

The act purports to reduce the 1991 deficit by $40 billion. It supposedly will lower the deficit over the next five years by something approaching $500 billion. Yes, sir. And the moon is made of blue cheese.

No Congress can bind a future Congress. Early in 1991 you may confidently expect a supplementary appropriations bill to relieve the pain of these phony deficit "reductions." There won't be any significant reductions — not as the word generally is understood. Congress doesn't know how to spend less in

James J. Kilpatrick

1991 than it has spent in 1990. Families know how. Businesses know how. The collective clowns of Capitol Hill never have learned such discipline.

One small item in the trillion-dollar budget will tell you how the congressional process works. In the small town of Strasburg, N.D., Sharon Eiseaman several years ago had a great idea. She would raise money to restore the boyhood home of band leader Lawrence Welk and would build a museum to the pioneers at the site.

The fund raising went slowly. Then someone suggested that maybe federal funds could be tapped. Ms. Eiseaman wrote North Dakota's Sen. Quentin Burdick. Burdick turned the matter over to his press secretary, Jean D. Brodshaug. She got in touch with Rocky L. Kuhn, clerk of the agriculture subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee. The subcommittee is chaired by — who else? — Sen. Burdick. Wheels turned.

Under the heading of a rural development grant, Kuhn proceeded to write the sum of $500,000 into the agriculture appropriations bill.

No hearings on the Welk boyhood home ever were held. No witness testified in the project's behalf. The printed record contains not one word of documentation explaining how the $500,000 would be spent. Kuhn simply pulled a half-million dollars out of thin air. Sen. Burdick is such a benevolent man.

That did it. At a time when the government is running more than $200 billion a year in the red — at a time when every tax dollar should be squeezed — a committee clerk takes his pen and writes a needless $500,000 into an appropriations act. A one, a two, a three, and our money waltzes away.

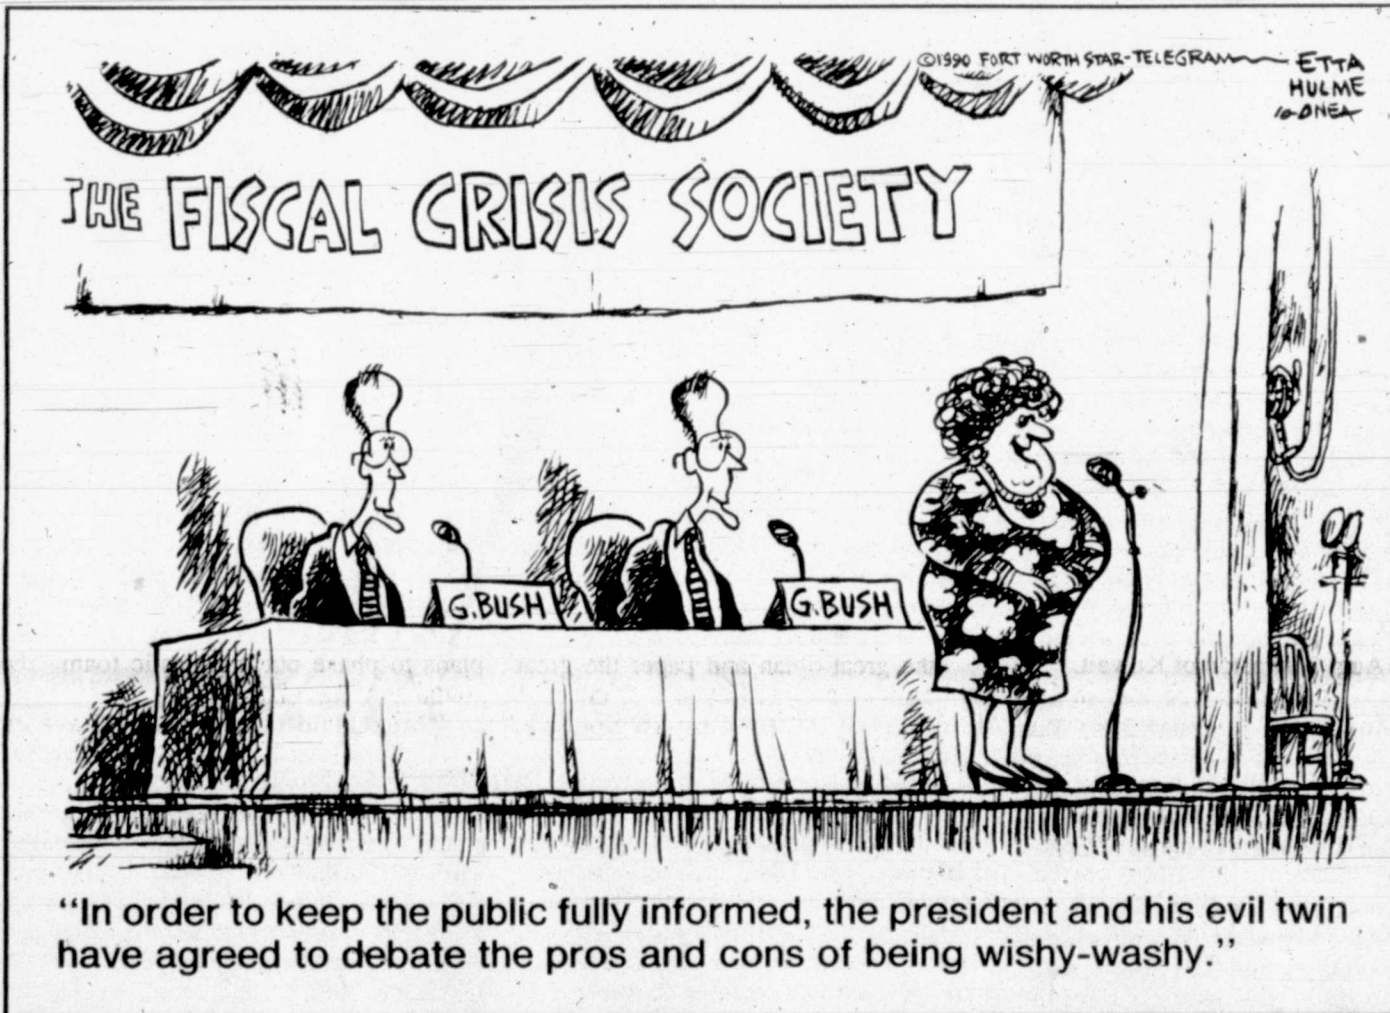

Burdick's imperial attitude pervades the legislative process. The senator is 82; he has served without significant distinction since he replaced Bill Langer 30 years ago.

He ranks third in seniority in the Senate; he is chairman of the committee on the environment. He looks like Jiggs of Jiggs & Maggie, but there is nothing comic about the power he wields. The $500,000 for Welk's boyhood home was just one item in $17.6 million that Burdick wrote into the bill for North Dakota.

What does this Congress have to show for itself? Mighty little. It passed a clean-air bill and a bill to aid handicapped Americans. These are good bills, but they will impose heavy costs on an already weak economy. There is something to be said for the immigration bill that passed on Saturday, Oct. 27. Otherwise the list of constructive accomplishments is pathetic.

The House has raised the salary of its members to $120,800 in January, with a further raise to $124,000 in October. Senators will get $101,000 in 1991 plus another $23,600 in potential lecture fees.

On that cheery note, as the weary members ride into a lucrative sunset, let us bid them farewell. Until noon on Jan. 3, when they return, the liberties of the people are secure.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Nov. 2, the 306th day of 1990. There are 59 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 2, 1917, British Foreign Secretary Arthur Balfour expressed support for a "national home" for the Jews of Palestine in a statement that came to be known as "The Balfour Declaration."

On this date:

In 1783, Gen. George Washington issued his "Farewell Address to the Army" near Princeton, N.J.

In 1889, North Dakota and South Dakota became the 39th and 40th states admitted to the union.

In 1930, Haile Selassie was crowned emperor of Ethiopia.

In 1936, the British Broadcasting Corporation inaugurated public "high-definition" television service with a broadcast from Alexandra Palace in north London.

In 1963, South Vietnamese President Ngo Dinh Diem was assassinated in a military coup.

In 1976, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter became the first presidential candidate from the Deep South since the Civil War to be elected as he defeated incumbent Gerald R. Ford.

Superman lives in Jack LaLanne

The world is witnessing a shotgun marriage between the sciences of medicine and nutrition.

A four-year study by our government's Office of Technology Assessment has concerned itself with "unconventional" treatment of disease. By that, it means mean nutritional remedies, herbal remedies and psychological remedies.

The researchers were unable to establish a cause-and-effect relationship in the treatment of cancer, for example, because of physiological variables. What works in one person might not in another; this confounds the clinicians. But the researchers did find enough evidence to recommend that Congress keep an open mind and that these "alternative treatments" deserve to be reviewed scientifically.

Jack LaLanne pioneered daily exercise and organic food in the days when nutrition was more a cult than a science.

Believing that one example is worth a thousand admonitions, he set about to practice what he preached.

That was in 1934. LaLanne was 21 when he opened his first walk-up health club.

LaLanne was 76 on Sept. 26 and his physique is as splendid now as when he was 21. Superman lives!

Paul Harvey

Over the years dramatically to focus attention on his regimen:

• He celebrated his 40th birthday by swimming from Alcatraz island to the Fisherman's Wharf in San Francisco — handcuffed.

• At 42 and on live TV, he did 1,000 push-ups in 23 minutes.

• At 43 he swam the treacherous Golden Gate channel towing a 2,500-pound cabin cruiser.

• LaLanne, at age 60, swam from Alcatraz handcuffed — and shackled — and towing a 2,000-pound boat!

• At age 70, he did the same thing, towing 70 boats carrying 70 people.

The man who was once called a charlatan, a fake, a fanatic, a health food freak, has outlived all his detractors.

LaLanne's handsome head of curly hair includes a few gray ones.

The rest of him seems more significant that anybody has been able to prove yet; LaLanne never counts birthdays.

He says: "I might be 30 or I might be 100; I just never think about it."

His daily routine includes two hours of weightlifting and one hour in the swimming pool.

In his home above Morro Bay in Central California he has built two gymnasiums that he shares with his wife Elaine.

She was a chain-smoker and junk-food junkie when they met 31 years ago. Today, she appears as streamlined and vigorous as he. Elaine has written her own book: Physical Fitness After 50.

In addition to LaLanne's several books and videotapes, he is releasing a new one this fall.

Muscleman Arnold Schwarzenegger says it was Jack LaLanne who brought "fitness out of the gymnasium and into living rooms."

Elaine, asked if Jack is as virile as he looks, just smiles.

Come to think of it, she smiles a lot.

Not all the poverty-stricken are poor

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

The strategy of the left is always to maximize, as far as possible, the sense of guilt felt by Americans generally for the plight of people poorer than themselves.

This has nothing to do with the charitable impulse, which is often found in people who don't feel the slightest personal guilt for the condition of the poor. It is simply the easiest way to build popular support for increasing the taxes of the relatively well to do and distributing the proceeds to the poor — a process politicians dearly love, because it generates votes.

One of the most important yardsticks employed by the left to quantify the numbers and plight of the poor is the Census Bureau's annual estimate of the number of Americans "living in poverty." "Poverty," for this purpose, is defined as the condition of any household with a "cash income" less than the official poverty threshold of $12,675 for a family of four in 1989.

Unfortunately for those who make their careers out of contending that America is going to hell in a handbasket, the proportion of Americans "living in poverty" in 1989 (12.8 percent, according to the Census Bureau) was the lowest for any year in the whole decade of the 1980s. The figure had been 13 percent in 1988, for example, and 13.4 percent in 1987.

But the situation looks even brighter if you take into account benefits to the poor that the Census Bureau systematically disregards.

I am indebted to the Heritage Foundation for pointing out that the bureau's fixation on "cash income" results in overlooking all sorts of non-cash assistance: food stamps, public housing and Medicaid, to cite just three examples. No wonder the Census Bureau's own data indicate that low-income households miraculously spend $1.94 for every dollar of "income" reported!

According to the Heritage analysts, "The missing welfare spending that is excluded from the official data on poverty totals $158 billion, or $11,120 for every "poor" household." Now you can see why in 1988 (the latest year for which these figures are available), the per capita expenditures of the lowest-income fifth of the U.S. population exceeded, after adjusting for inflation, the per capita income of the median American household in 1955.

Let's visit, in our mind's eye, some of these "poor" households. Would you have guessed that 38 percent of America's "poor" own their own homes, with a median value of $39,200, and more than 100,000 of them own homes with a value in excess of $200,000? Or that 62 percent of "poor" households own a car (14 percent own two or more cars), nearly half have air conditioning, 31 percent have microwave ovens and more than 22,000 have heated swimming pools or hot tubs?

But don't be misled into concluding that the War on Poverty has been a success. Thanks to misconceived welfare programs, the destruction of "poor" families has made huge strides. In 1959 only 28 percent of poor families with children were headed by women; last year the figure was over 60 percent.

That particular disaster is squarely attributable to the program called Aid to Families With Dependent Children, which provides money to female-headed poor families and thus impels the fathers to drop out of sight. If I knew precisely which liberal legislator dreamed up that catastrophe, I would call on him to crawl into the bushes like Samsonov after the Battle of Tannenberg and blow his brains out.

So don't shoulder a burden a guilt you don't deserve. Even the "homeless" are on the streets largely because the American Civil Liberties Union and its allies in the judiciary think it helps politically to have the existence of these people rubbed in your nose.

The American people are very nearly as generous as the liberals are slick.

October unemployment rate holds steady at 5.7 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's unemployment rate held at 5.7 percent in October even though the nation's manufacturing and construction industries continued to slump, the government said today.

Although last month's civilian jobless rate was unchanged from September's 5.7 percent, the Labor Department said the nation's job market continued to show weakness and widespread job losses.

The unchanged October jobless rate was a reprieve from recent months. Previously, the nation's unemployment rate had jumped three months in a row, rising half a percent from June's 5.2 percent rate.

Still, substantial job losses in construction, manufacturing and retail trade in October caused overall non-farm payrolls to drop by 70,000, the Labor Department said. Unlike the job declines in recent months, census workers accounted for only a tiny portion of October's job losses, with 7,000 census workers laid off, the government said.

When the unemployment rate holds steady despite the economy's failure to produce jobs or when businesses actually post job losses, analysts say it is because fewer Americans are entering the labor force.

October marked the third month in a row that more industries lost jobs than gained them, the Labor Department said.

Analysts who think the economy has slipped into a recession had expected the nation's jobs outlook to continue to darken, partly because of the turmoil in the Persian Gulf. The oil price shock and the threat of war has left American businessmen skittish about adding employees, analysts said.

"There's a buttoning up of the overcoats going on," said Robert Dederick, chief economist at the Northern Trust Co. of Chicago.

However, analysts have also noted that the economy had shown little signs of life even before Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

The 70,000-job loss in October followed a September payroll decline of 52,000 jobs, the government said. A year ago, the economy was producing nearly 200,000 new jobs a month.

The big job losses came in construction and manufacturing. Construction lost 80,000 jobs last month to reflect a continued deterioration in the housing market. Over the past five months, that industry has seen jobs tumble by 185,000, the government said.

In manufacturing, payrolls fell by 60,000 in October as that sector continued on a downward spiral that's been ongoing for 18 months.

Since reaching a post recession peak in January 1989, the manufacturing sector has lost 580,000 jobs, the government said.

More than 1.5 million displaced by gulf crisis

By CARL HARTMAN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 1.5 million people have been displaced by the Persian Gulf crisis, World Bank officials and other sources say.

And hundreds of thousands of workers from the Third World remain in Iraq and Kuwait. The numbers dwarf the approximately 1,000 hostages from the United States, 1,400 from Britain and 3,000 from the Soviet Union.

Hundreds of thousands of others are returning to their distant homelands, some as far away as the Philippines and South Korea, said officials at the World Bank, which coordinates aid at its Washington headquarters for the hardest-hit countries.

The foreigners were lured to the Middle East by the better wages that Iraq and Kuwait could pay because of income from oil.

The largest and most recent group forced from their homes are citizens of Yemen who have been living in Saudi Arabia, some of them for decades. The Saudi government is retaliating against Yemen because of Yemeni sympathy for President Saddam Hussein of Iraq.

About 2 million of the 12 million people in Saudi Arabia were Yemeni.

Artraud Hartmann, who works on the problem at the World Bank, told a meeting on refugees this week that the number of displaced Yemenis was about 500,000.

The World Bank is the biggest source of aid to the Third World, lending more than $20 billion last year. Its staff is speeding up loans to the countries badly hit by the gulf crisis and is expected to report in the next few weeks to its 154 member governments.

Peter Riddleberger, a bank spokesman, said many countries have been doubly hurt: they have lost the hard cash that their citizens used to send home from Iraq and Kuwait, and they now have to spend their own money and whatever help they can get on finding homes and jobs for them.

In addition, countries that import oil must pay the high prices brought on by the crisis. Some have also lost valuable trade because of the United Nations sanctions against Iraq.

Egypt is one of the hardest-hit countries. Ms. Hartmann estimated that 380,000 Egyptians have fled Iraq and Kuwait, with perhaps as many more to come. When the crisis began, there were up to 1.3 Egyptians in Iraq.

An additional 200,000 to 300,000 Egyptians worked in Kuwait and had an estimated $8 billion deposited in Kuwaiti banks, officials said.

Egyptians working in Iraq and Kuwait sent home more than $1.65 billion a year in hard currency, much valued in their country's cash-starved economy.

Jordan, Iraq's neighbor, has been hardest hit of all. A country of only 3 million people, it must try to absorb about 220,000 returning citizens. Many are professionals and skilled workers for whom there are no jobs in sight, Hartmann said.

Embargo forces change in diet, lifestyle in Iraq

By DILIP GANGULY Associated Press Writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraqis feeling the squeeze from the U.N. embargo are changing their eating habits, lifestyle and even rediscovering herbal medicine.

Three months after Iraq invaded Kuwait and the United Nations retaliated with the trade cutoff, Baghdad is beginning to feel its isolation. The pains, although minor, are adding up.

"You want to know if the embargo is effective. Yes it is effective," Information Minister Latif Jassim, told reporters. "You know we want to build our country but we cannot buy. We cannot sell anymore."

Faulty traffic lights in Baghdad can't be repaired because of a lack of spare parts. Many taxis and cars have broken windshields that can't be replaced.

TV announcers tell Iraqis not to waste food or overeat.

The lines at bread stores and government-run shops selling rationed food are becoming longer every day.

Restaurants are closing. At those that remain open, food portions have been reduced; a chicken leg now is served as two portions.

Merchants said prices have risen five to six times since the embargo, and the government has listed 12 lifesaving antibiotics that can be obtained only in state-run hospitals.

"We are encouraging people to use herbal medicine more and more. This is in many ways better than the Western medicine," said Hsan al-Rawi, managing director of the government-run herbal medicine section.

Western and Asian diplomats in Baghdad said it would take at least three months for the embargo to have serious impact.

Prior to the U.N. sanctions, Iraq relied heavily on food imports that cost an average $3 billion a year. The United States sold Iraq food valued at more than $1 billion a year, mostly wheat, rice, corn, vegetable oil, livestock and dairy products.

"To fight the embargo we are trying to change our food habits" said an Iraqi restaurant owner who spoke on condition of anonymity. "Before, we were eating rice both for lunch and dinner; now only once, for lunch."

There are signs that fresh and dried fruit have started arriving from Iran, once Iraq's fiercest foe. Iranian apples are in great demand in Baghdad's market.

Iraqi traders regularly visit Kuwait with bags full of dinars and come back with everything from cartons of Marlboro cigarettes to washing machines.

Since August, the Agriculture Cooperative Bank has provided credits worth about $30 million to farmers cultivating wheat, barley and what Iraqis call "other strategic crops," meaning basic food items.

'We are encouraging people to use herbal medicine more and more. This is in many ways better than Western medicine.'

Beer production has been curtailed so that barley used in brewing can be used as staple food.

The government has started 1,078 livestock farms to feed its 18 million people. Landowners have been told they could lose their land if they don't cultivate it.

The industrial sector has been hit hard, the Asian diplomat said. Many cement, tire, fertilizer and cigarette factories have closed or are working below capacity, he said.

McDonald's decides to eliminate plastic foam containers

By F.N. D'ALESSIO Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — McDonald's Corp.'s decision to switch from polystyrene containers to paper for its food products is being hailed by some — but not all — environmentalists.

"It is a mistake to make plastic the great Satan and paper the great saint," said Jan Beyea, a scientist at the National Audubon Society. "Both processes generate pollution."

A recycling company, meanwhile, lamented McDonald's announcement Thursday that it would start phasing out its clamshell-shaped containers — which had been blamed for filling landfills and depleting the ozone layer — within two months.

The fast-food giant had been playing a key role in educating the public about the need to recycle, said E. James Schneiders, president of National Polystyrene Recycling Co.

McDonald's just last week said it planned to expand an experimental plastic recycling program to all of its 8,500 U.S. restaurants.

"NPRC is disappointed to learn that McDonald's has decided to phase out its use of polystyrene foam packaging," Schneiders said.

But the non-profit Environmental Defense Fund, which had worked with McDonald's since August on plans to phase out the plastic foam containers, was elated.

"McDonald's understands that the future is green," said Frederic D. Krupp, the fund's executive director. "I think other companies will follow suit."

Several U.S. cities have banned the use of polystyrene foam, saying it contributes to landfill problems by lingering for years before disintegrating. The polystyrene production process also is suspected of harming the Earth's ozone level.

"Although some scientific studies indicate that foam packaging is environmentally sound, our customers just don't feel good about it," McDonald's Corp. President Edward Rensi said by telephone Thursday from the company's suburban Oak Brook headquarters. "So we're changing."

McDonald's said the foam containers will be replaced by paper products manufactured in a new process that will preserve the food's temperature and freshness.

Study indicates disrupted ovulation may be linked with rapid bone loss

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Subtle menstrual-cycle disturbances in women who have outwardly regular monthly periods could be an important underlying cause of bone loss that leads to fractures later in life, a study Thursday concludes.

The hormones estrogen and progesterone are essential for building and keeping strong bones, and their release in the body follows the menstrual cycle.

Doctors have long known that women who miss periods entirely, such as those who exercise strenuously or don't eat enough, risk weakening their bones.

But the new research suggests that far less obvious disturbances in the monthly cycle also are bad for the bones.

The study, conducted at the University of British Columbia, shows that women who do not ovulate, or release an egg, every cycle lose 4 percent of the bone in their spines annually, even though they menstruate as usual.

Jerilynn C. Prior, who directed the study, said stress and being too thin may disrupt ovulation, and women who regularly miss ovulation may need to take progesterone supplements to preserve their bones.

Women can have menstrual cycles that are regular in length and flow but still not ovulate. In such cycles, women produce normal amounts of estrogen but less than usual progesterone.

Some premenstrual symptoms may accompany ovulation. Prior said women can keep track of their ovulation by checking themselves for mild breast tenderness, which is a regular sign of the egg's release.

In the study, published in the New England Journal of Medicine, doctors monitored the menstrual periods of 66 women ages 21 to 42. One-third were runners preparing for a marathon, one-third were recreational runners and the rest were normally active non-runners.

The doctors expected to see more menstrual disruptions in the marathoners. Instead, they found that all the women had normal cycles 97 percent of the time, and ovulation disturbances occurred in 29 percent of their cycles. But the disturbances were no more common in the avid runners.

However, since the study was conducted on a small, carefully selected group, it is unclear whether ovulatory disturbances are anywhere near as common in the general population.

Highly conditioned athletes frequently stop menstruating entirely and are at high risk of losing bone and increasing their risk of fractures.

Dr. Deborah Riester of New England Medical Center in Boston, who is looking for treatments for these women, said she sees women in their 20s who have the bones of 50-year-olds.

"They think they are so healthy," she said, "but they are going to run into a lot of problems with fractures."

YOU ARE HEREBY NOTIFIED THAT THE HONORABLE EUGENE CHAMBERS, JUDGE OF THE 215TH DISTRICT COURT OF HARRIS COUNTY, TEXAS, GRANTED PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO WITHDRAW THEIR REQUEST FOR CLASS CERTIFICATION AND APPROVED THE VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL OF CERTAIN NON-CELANESE DEFENDANTS. THE COURT ORDERED PLAINTIFFS TO GIVE REASONABLE PUBLIC NOTICE TO MEMBERS OF THE POTENTIAL CLASS THAT PLAINTIFFS' CLASS ACTION ALLEGATIONS HAVE BEEN WITHDRAWN AND THAT THE COURT HAS APPROVED THE VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL OF CERTAIN NON-CELANESE DEFENDANTS AND THAT THE TIME IN WHICH A CAUSE OF ACTION CAN BE BROUGHT IS NO LONGER SUSPENDED.

Potential Class Membership

On February 16, 1989, Plaintiffs filed a class action seeking damages for alleged exposure to toxic chemicals and substances in and around the Hoechst Celanese Chemical Group, Inc. plant located near Pampa, Texas. The Plaintiffs sought to certify a class composed of Railroad and Subcontractor Workers who worked in the Hoechst Celanese Chemical Group, Inc. plant, including spouses and children of the Railroad or Subcontractor Workers who were directly or derivatively injured as a result of any chemical exposure to such workers. The class was also to include those persons who reside or have resided in and around the Hoechst Celanese Chemical Group, Inc. plant.

Class Action Allegations

The Plaintiffs allege that since 1952 the Hoechst Celanese Chemical Group, Inc. plant near Pampa, Texas, has been releasing toxic chemicals into the air which have been carried by the winds aloft to the surrounding areas, including the towns of Pampa, Kingsmill and White Deer and that the chemicals cover the ground surface of the area by means of wind, gravity and rain. Plaintiffs also claim that chemicals were released by means of spills, burying of toxic wastes and injection into unlined solar ponds, and that such emissions polluted the ground water.

The Plaintiffs have further alleged that the November 14, 1987, explosion at the Hoechst Celanese Chemical Group, Inc. plant near Pampa, Texas released a toxic vapor cloud. According to Plaintiffs, this toxic vapor cloud covered not only the plant area, but also spread asbestos fibers and cancer causing chemicals over the surrounding area including the towns of Pampa, Kingsmill and White Deer.

All defendants strenuously deny each and every one of these allegations, and have demanded that the Plaintiffs prove their allegations as required by law.

THE COURT HAS MADE NO DETERMINATION OF THE MERITS OF PLAINTIFFS' ALLEGATIONS.

NOTICE

You are hereby advised that if you or any member of your family have reason to believe that you may have a claim for toxic tort injury and/or damage to person or property resulting from the explosion, you should immediately contact an attorney of your choice. If you wish to join in Cause Nos. 87-60096-A and 87-60096, styled Bob G. Wilson, et al. v. Hoechst Celanese Corp., et al., you must do so before December 1, 1990.

For a detailed statement of the matters involved in this action, the pleadings, motion papers, affidavits, legal memoranda and other papers filed in this action, can be inspected at the Office of the District Clerk of Harris County, Texas, 301 Fannin, Houston, Texas, 77002, (713) 221-5721. Join Us In Worship

In The Church Of Your Choice

A move to worship GOD in His HOUSE is a

MOVE in the RIGHT DIRECTION

To attend Church is the first step in finding God.
To attend regularly is to continue in the right direction, and gives one an opportunity to understand God's will in his life. Now is the time to make your move. Choose the way that will lead you to God.

Attend Church

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

New Life Worship to host evangelist at Sunday services

Dwayne Harper will be the special guest speaker for the services this Sunday at New Life Worship Center, 318 N. Cuyler. Services begin at 10:30 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Evangelist Harper has had a wide range of ministry both in the United States and abroad. He has ministered in the lower 48 states as well as Alaska. He has also preached in the Philippines and Korea.

In the winter of 1986, he traveled to the Soviet Union on a fact-finding tour concerning "Religion Behind the Iron Curtain." He has also served as a pastor in Skellytown, Odessa, Denton, Port Lavaca and Cleburne.

His wife, Wanda, is a special education teacher in Cleburne. He has two sons, Michael, who serves as a youth pastor in Connecticut, and Stephen, who plays basketball for Athletes in Action.

Allen Poldson, pastor of New Life Worship Center, said Harper's message "should prove to be biblically enlightening and challenging."

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Worship the Lord in the splendor of his holiness; tremble before him all the earth. (Psalm 96:9 NIV)

Summer dawn holds its own unique splendor and an opportunity to spend delicious moments of private worship.

This morning I watched the sun rise over neighboring housetops. The crickets sang their grand finale, and the birds joined their morning songs to the concert. The trees were etched against a clear blue wedge of sky. The air was light and sweet, and a newly born Hibiscus bloom waved in the gentle breeze.

Awakening neighbors purposefully embarking into the new day added sparkles of vitality. In quiet solitude, I marveled at the love song God wove into his creation and designed to play in continuity for the duration of Earth.

I have no basis of understanding of how, in a soft moment of morning light brushing my little patch of ground, God allows me a glimpse of him.

Nor do I understand how his whisper wraps me in a peaceful sanctuary in the face of imminent world war and the universal presence of evil.

But I know I have a holy God, and I praise him in humble inadequacy and utter awe.

Cooley family to perform tonight

The Cooleys, a gospel music singing family, will appear at the First Free Will Baptist Church, 326 N. Rider St. at 7 p.m. today.

The family, Haskell, JoLee, Cason and Camissa, present a gospel music program called "A Time for Refreshing." They present gospel music vocally and instrumentally.

The family's style of music is easy-listening. In 1981, at the age of 2, Cason began singing with his parents. He also plays the trumpet. In 1989, at the age of 4, Camissa began singing on stage.

Several albums on which Haskell is pianist have been nominated for Grammy Awards by the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences. The Gospel Music Association and the Singing News Fan Awards have honored him by nominating him as Best Gospel Musician. JoLee's plays the bass guitar.

Most of the songs the family sings are written by the family and regularly make the radio stations' playlists across the country. The Cooleys' full-time music ministry takes them throughout the United States and to portions of Canada.

The public is invited to tonight's performance. There is no admission charge.

Soviets adopt new law on religious freedoms

By ALAN COOPERMAN
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet legislature last week adopted a new freedom of religion law, easing decades of strict prohibitions on religious instruction at home and in private schools.

The Soviet constitution officially permits freedom of conscience, but the new law re-emphasizes that political leaders cannot interfere with religious activities.

The law, adopted 341-1 with one abstention in the Supreme Soviet, specifies the government will finance neither religious activities nor "propaganda of atheism."

In the past, the government and Communist Party have actively discouraged religious services, repressed religious groups and sought to spread atheism.

The new law allows religious groups to set up "societies, brotherhoods, associations" and other fraternal groups.

It says religious organizations can send people abroad for spiritual study and receive foreign students in the Soviet Union.

The law guarantees the right to study and teach religion either individually or with others, and says local authorities can allow secular school facilities to be used for religious instructions after regular school hours.

Religious leaders, including Patriarch Alexi II, head of the Russian Orthodox Church, and representatives of the Seventh-day Adventist Church and the Soviet Jewish community, attended the debate.

Alexi, addressing the lawmakers, requested permission to set up a publishing house and use its income to repair broken down churches. The legislature had no immediate response.

Alexi, wearing a black clerical robe and white headpiece topped with a gold cross, urged the government not to come between the church and the people.

"The Russian church has already experienced attempts on a political basis to destroy the unity of religious life," he said.

Donations to religious organizations have been and remain tax-free.

The new law, however, cuts the tax rate from 69 percent to 35 percent on the profits of enterprises affiliated with religious groups.

Official tolerance for religion has increased dramatically since Mikhail S. Gorbachev came to power in 1985.

The number of Christian baptisms and reopening of churches has soared, the Russian Orthodox patriarch has met with the Soviet leadership for the first time in more than 40 years, and important religious centers like the Pechorsky Monastery of Kiev have been returned to the church.

New Christmas video cassette available

Wholesome, family entertainment with a strong moral message is the object of the new video cassette from Christmas Around The World.

"The Spirit of the Season" stars Ernest Borgnine as a grandfatherly storyteller. Borgnine, a veteran actor with many films and television appearances to his credit, is most often remembered in the title role of the award winning television play, "Marty" and as the star of the popular television series, "McHale's Nave."

Borgnine said of the video, "I really believe in the message of kindness and trust. If we can all practice a little more of that, the world will be a better place. I hope I've contributed something by taking part in this production."

The Christmas movie is divided into two stories: "A Thief's Christmas" is a drama about a thief who is mistaken for Santa Claus as he robs the home of a blind child. Overcome by the boy's faith in him, he comes to see life through the eyes of the child, and is redeemed. The second story, "The Gift," is retelling of the first Christmas with a twist: a shepherd mistakes a poor couple for the Holy Family and gives them his entire savings.

The video was funded by Harry Lloyd, president and owner of Christmas Around The World. Lloyd built his company on Christian principles and was eager to develop a family-oriented film to continue that tradition. The movie was produced and filmed in Kansas City, Mo.

"The Spirit of the Season" is a warm-hearted film with good production values and professional actors. The sets and costumes provide 19th century atmosphere to "A Thief's Christmas" and provide a proper setting for the first Christmas in "The Gift."

The video is available only through Christmas Around The World, a home party plan company that specializes in Christmas decor, holiday items and inspirational gifts.

Group sends Vietnamese gospel to Eastern Europe

By RHONDA DUEY
The Odessa American

MIDLAND (AP) — By now, sending Bibles to Eastern Europe is nothing new.

But some of the Bibles are.

Thousands of North Vietnamese work in Eastern European countries, and recently 5,000 of these workers received a slim paperback volume with a drawing of a path disappearing into mountains gracing its cover. The text is the Gospel of John in the Vietnamese language.

This small booklet is the beginning of an ambitious project sponsored by a group in Midland. Vietnamese Bible Inc. hopes to finish the New Testament, about 30 percent of the Bible, by the end of 1992. Then translators will begin on the Old Testament.

Leon Taylor, chairman of the board for VBI, became interested in the project through teaching and Bible study. "During the oil boom in the Midland-Odessa area in the late '70s and early '80s, I was an instructor at Midland College," Taylor said.

"As a result of nationwide advertising of the oil boom, there was an influx of Cambodian and Vietnamese families. They came for the jobs."

Taylor got to know several families through his classes and his church. Several years of discussion with Vietnamese pastors and theologians convinced him that a Bible was a necessity.

"The prominent Bible in use is a 1916 translation from the Chinese into regional Vietnamese," Taylor said. "Over the years this Bible has become extremely archaic. The churches are using it, but it's hard for the man on the street to understand."

What was needed was a Bible translated from the original Biblical languages, Greek and Hebrew, into modern-day Vietnamese. Taylor's interest in the work brought him in contact with several Vietnamese theologians who had the training and the desire to do the work.

"They have been trying to put this Bible together since 1956 in Vietnam," he said.

The theologians working on the project feel somewhat pressed for time, he added. "There's no more training going on for Vietnamese theologians. Most of them are older men. They're the last ones out of the country that are in touch with the language."

But the work can't be rushed. Daniel Dao Tran is one of the translators, and he said the work is slow and painstaking. "One of the problems is the nuances of the languages," he said in a telephone conversation from Los Angeles. "We're trying to convey a message from the original Greek to Vietnamese with all the contemporary expressions."

Tran said that constant consultations among the six translators are necessary, and other Bible translations, including English, French and Chinese, are required to help bridge the meaning gap. But the translators are equal to the task. All have at least one master's degree and many hold doctorates, Tran said.

Each member of the translation team is assigned a particular section of the Bible, Taylor said. After the initial translation, the section is put on a computer, printed out and sent to a three-man editing team, which makes corrections.

These corrections are then added to the computer text, and the section is again reviewed by all members of the team. So far three of the four Gospels are near completion.

Taylor said that the translators are being paid for their services. Money has been donated from the United Bible Society as well as many individuals and churches.

The State Board of Insurance presently uses unaudited information furnished by the insurance industry to set insurance rates for Texans to pay. Ann Richards favors having the State Board use independent data. That just makes sense. Her opponent opposes this measure. Ann has promised to appoint people to the State Insurance Board who will be just as interested in the people who pay insurance premiums as they are in the insurance companies which sell insurance. Vote for Ann Richards, the Democratic candidate for Governor, on Nov. 6.

Family services more important in military

By SUZANNE GAMBOA
Associated Press Writer

FORT BLISS (AP) — Operation Desert Shield has proved what Donna Santos has known for a long time: Family support services increasingly are becoming an integral part of the military.

Since the draft ended, the makeup of military forces has changed from single, young soldiers to married soldiers with children. And the consequences of such an Army have emerged as thousands of soldiers deploy to the Persian Gulf.

"Family assistance needs to be an important part of the mission," said Ms. Santos, director of Army Community Services. "The military needs to start looking at us in the same way they look at whether they have enough ammunition."

Santos said her office, which provides such services as budget counseling to soldiers' families and spouses, monthly fields about 5,000 requests for help.

Only in the last 25 years, since the end of the Vietnam War, have family assistance programs become a priority in the military, post spokesman Brad Rose said.

"We find many of those people who are eligible are not only married, but already have one, two or three children," Rose said.

And Santos believes that after Operation Desert Shield, military officials will recognize the need for more preparation of families for the possibility of deployment.

"After Desert Shield, I guarantee every ACS is going to say this: 'We need to be proactive,'" she said.

Soldiers are required to have prepared wills and powers of attorney for their spouses before they deploy. But some military spouses left alone find themselves inexperienced about running the household.

"That word dependent really makes me mad. ... I'm putting out the trash or something goes wrong with the car and I stop and think, he's over there and depending on me to keep things running," said Diana Barrego, whose husband is a member of the E2-7 11th Brigade. "I say, no, I'm not the dependent. My husband is depending on me."

The deployments seem to particularly affect spouses of lower rank enlisted soldiers, many whose pay qualifies them for food stamps.

Dagmar Fraser, leader of a support unit for the 233rd Transport Company, said spouses in her group have said they were forced to pawn wedding rings and microwaves and sell blood plasma to make ends meet.

"The majority of my ladies have tremendous financial problems. In the lower enlisted ranks, there's really not a lot of money to throw around so you buy a lot of things on credit. Their budgets are so stretched so if anything unusual happens there's just no money," she said.

Although many of the women in her group are aware of the Army Community Services assistance, she said many are embarrassed to seek help.

"I have told all of these girls they have to go to various places to get the help if they need it," Ms. Fraser said.

Fraser said she has been frustrated by Army red tape and had difficulty getting answers to her questions.

"Part of the point is that these women's husbands are serving their country, and they have to kind of lower themselves and go ask for food or assistance of some sort," she said.

Army officials said the problems in Fraser's group were not widespread and that Fraser had only visited their office once seeking help.

"We want people to come forward with these problems and to come to people trained to help them with these problems," Santos said.

"There are an awful lot of financial difficulties in the military just like there are in civilian life. Some people do well with their money, some don't," she said.

Army Community Services at Fort Bliss has set up a network of support groups with each unit stationed at the Army post.

Lewis denies allegations on law firm's tax payment

FORT WORTH (AP) — A San Antonio law firm that has a corner on government contracts for collecting delinquent property taxes has given $31,000 to five Texas politicians, with a third going to House Speaker Gib Lewis. Lewis denies any conflict of interest.

And partners with the law firm of Heard Goggan Blair & Williams say they only want "good government," not favoritism.

According to a Fort Worth Star-Telegram copyright story, the law firm has given about $31,000 to five state politicians, with about a third going to Lewis.

Oliver Heard Jr., one of the firm's partners, says claims of political favoritism are "unfounded rumor."

But Lewis has benefited from his relationship with the firm, the newspaper reports.

Recently, Lewis was able to get an extended deadline for taxes owed by a Fort Worth shooting range. The speaker owns about 50 percent of the business.

Heard Goggan, which has a reputation for tenacious collecting, pulled back from a lawsuit filed against the business, when asked to do so by the speaker.

The business owes about $11,000 in back taxes and penalties. Heard Goggan, which makes about $20 million annually for suing late taxpayers, also paid more than $5,000 of the business' late tax bill. In a statement issued to The Associated Press

Thursday Lewis' press secretary Tim Conger said the story was "filled with inaccuracies and false assumptions."

"... the taxes in question have been paid by the Speaker, not Heard Goggan Blair and Williams," Conger said. "The law firm did not pay taxes owed by Shooter's Palace (the shooting range)."

Conger said Lewis paid the taxes even though he, as merely an investor in the company, was not liable for the taxes.

The Lewis release also refutes the newspaper's statement that the Speaker contacted Heard Goggan asking why the business had been sued and demanding that the law firm pick up the penalties, interest and legal fees.

(Lewis) questioned why he should be held responsible for late penalties and interest when the company had not received notification that the taxes were due," Conger said. "After consulting with Heard Goggan, the law firm confirmed that the initial notice had been sent to an incorrect party and address. Upon confirmation of the mistake, the law firm agreed to waive the penalties and interest on the taxes owed."

The release calls suggestions that Lewis used his office's influence to avoid the penalties "unfair and (a) false assumption."

The firm has offices in Austin, Houston, Dallas, Fort Worth, Fort Bend, Denton, Angleton, Harlingen, Laredo, Brownsville, Conroe and Beaumont. Heard Goggan Blair & Williams has received 120 contracts from city and county governments to recover more than half of the $1 billion owed in delinquent property taxes.

At least 15 bills have been introduced since Lewis became speaker in 1983 that would have changed the tax collection law and placed millions of dollars in collections fees back into the coffers of government agencies.

Lewis assigned all the bills to the House Ways and Means Committee. None of them made it to a House vote.

Heard Goggan's political contributions include:

— $10,000 to Lewis in 1986.
— $7,000 to state Rep. Dan Morales, a San Antonio Democrat over the past three years. Morales is now a state attorney general candidate.

— $5,000 to former State Rep. Stan Schlueter of Killeen, who served as the state House Ways and Means committee chairman from 1983 to 1987.

— $2,500 to Rep. Hugo Berlanga, a Corpus Christi Democrat in the past three years. Berlanga is a House Ways and Means committee member and chairman of the Calendars Committee that sets the Legislature's agenda.

— $7,000 to Tarrant County Judge Roy English in the last year. English voted against the renewal of the law firm's contract with the county in 1989.

Pampa Area Art League opens annual 'Fall Classic' art exhibit

Entries are arriving and judging will begin Monday, Nov. 5, as the Pampa Area Art League opens its third annual "Fall Classic" art exhibit at the National Bank of Commerce in Pampa.

Original works of art in the following categories will be judged the week of Nov. 5-9: oil/acrylics, watercolor, pastel, drawing, sculpture, mixed media and photography. Winners will be announced and awards presented on Friday, Nov. 9 at a public reception in the main lobby of NBC.

Cash awards are given to Best of Show and to first, second and third place winners in each of the categories represented. Works by the winning artists will then be on display for the public during banking hours Monday, Nov. 12 through Friday, Nov. 16.

Well-known Panhandle artist James Ivey Edwards, head of the art department at Clarendon College, is awards juror for this year's "Fall Classic." Edwards, a graduate of West Texas State University, has been teaching art at Clarendon College in Clarendon for the past 12 years and at the Pampa Center for six years. A painter in oils and watercolors, he has sold over 3,100 paintings now hanging in private collections, museums, and galleries in 36 states and nine foreign countries.

The Pampa Area Art League was chartered in October 1987, and since that time has been working toward its goal of developing a regional arts center headquartered in Pampa. At present, the League plans to make the old Worley Hospital the location for the center, following an extensive renovation.

Former Pampa residents, Dr. and Mrs. Adolph Orina, donated the building, a Pampa historical landmark, to the League.

Preliminary plans include a main floor gallery for traveling exhibits, art competitions and invitational art exhibits; a permanent art collection on the second floor along with exhibit rooms for art clubs and individual artists, and classrooms for workshops, demonstrations and seminars on the third floor.

Mrs. Wiley Reynolds is president of the Pampa Area Art League, and Mrs. Harold Taylor is 1990 "Fall Classic" chairman.

Unmarried couples that live together can find breaking up very expensive

By CHANGING TIMES
The Kiplinger Magazine
For AP Newsfeatures

The legal system is struggling to catch up with the times, so there is still little consistency from state to state regarding the legal status of the millions of couples who live together. The law is changing all the time.

Cohabitation is still illegal in a few states — including Arizona, Idaho, Mississippi, North Carolina and Virginia — but the laws are rarely enforced.

The trouble for unmarried couples starts not when they move in together but when the relationship ends.

The law doesn't get involved with couples who agree on how to untangle things. But when unmarried partners disagree, the ground rules get complicated.

Unofficial relationships are governed by contract law, and disputes may be decided by a jury in civil court rather than by a family court judge. More important, unmarried partners don't have the same rights as spouses to share property or to receive alimony or maintenance payments.

That can make a dispute more unpleasant and expensive than a divorce. "You'll have to spend money to develop the relationship and rights that the law already gives married couples," says lawyer Henry Berman, of the law firm Fink Weinberger, in White Plains, N.Y.

It could cost the two of you at least $15,000 to take a dispute to court. And depending on the property you're fighting over, the cost may go up from there.

There are ways to avoid that kind of pain. At the very least, you can keep careful records of all significant expenditures and purchases you make while you and your partner are together. Keep canceled checks for items you believe you own and make sure all of your property is in your name. To really protect yourself, draw up a written agreement.

Before the celebrated California "palimony" decision in 1976 involving actor Lee Marvin and his live-in companion, courts in most states wouldn't enforce a written agreement between unmarried people. Since then numerous cases, involving heterosexual and homosexual couples, have strengthened the use of written agreements in court. And though they can be challenged like any other contract, explicit written promises can protect you.

The consequence of not having a written agreement is painful: Most courts refuse to infer an understanding from the actions of the partners. Even oral agreements are difficult to prove.

You can work out an agreement on your own or with the help of a mediator or lawyers. Written living-together agreements (LTAs) cover what you believe to be your property or what you should be reimbursed for should you and your partner split up.

Ralph Warner and Toni Ihara discuss the following points in their book, The Living Together Kit (Nolo Press):

— Whether either partner has rights to the property and income of the other. Many agreements deny rights to assets and income.

— Which assets each partner owns. List assets, along with their approximate value and the date you acquired them. If you keep assets in your name, your partner will have no automatic rights to them unless that is stipulated in the agreement. Many LTAs also specify that all earnings and appreciation on assets belong to the owner.

— Whose debts are whose. You are not responsible for your partner's debts unless you cosign for a loan, for example, or commingle assets or income, making it difficult to determine who owns what.

— If you have a line of credit or overdraft privileges on a checking account and your partner has access, you are liable, regardless of who uses the services. If the two of you have a joint credit card account, each partner is liable for the entire debt.

— The quid pro quo for the agreement. Like any contract, an LTA requires something of value on both sides. M. Dee Samuels, a San Francisco family lawyer, says that can be the sharing of any responsibilities. "They don't have to be equal, either," she points out. "If you provide homemaker's services and your partner provides the money, that's OK."

Services can include such things as entertaining, cleaning, gardening and doing the laundry. The only things that must not be included are sexual services, which the courts consider prostitution.

Spell out what each person will contribute to the household, whether it's money or services. Use percentages or dollar amounts and indicate what they apply to, such as the mortgage or rent, utility bills and household maintenance.

— How you will take title to assets you acquire while together. You can choose to own property individually, as joint tenants with the right of survivorship, as tenants in common or as a combination of each.

— You can pass your share of property owned as tenants in common to whomever you want in your will. But joint tenancy property automatically passes to the survivor, so that could cause problems if you split up and you could be making gifts to your partner that are subject to the federal gift tax.

— Whether you have a common-law marriage. If you live where common-law marriages are recognized and you do not want to be considered married, say so. (If there's no written agreement, create a document to cover just this point.) Then be careful not to introduce yourselves as husband and wife.

— How you will divide assets if you separate. Also specify whether either of you will be responsible to the other for future support.

— What will happen to the home you own together if you separate. Decide whether one of you will continue to live in the house and under what circumstances. If the house will be sold, how will the proceeds be split?

— Arrangements for the personal and financial care of any children, from this union or from others.

— Circumstances that would signal the end of the agreement. Typical circumstances are the death of a partner; marriage, either to each other or to someone else; or an agreement, in writing, to end the partnership.

— Whether you want to use a mediator to help solve disputes and forestall going to court.

Rape victim continues to suffer

DEAR ABBY: I was raped two years ago, and since then, my husband's parents have subjected me to some mean, thoughtless and outright vicious remarks. ("You must have said something or been dressed in a provocative way; women who get raped are usually asking for it.") As I write this, I am a nervous wreck, as my in-laws will be visiting soon and I am expected to join them for dinner. Abby, I simply cannot do this. I become physically ill at the mere thought of having to face these people.

My husband thinks I am being childish — that just having dinner with them is not a great sacrifice. Abby, I am 31 years old and, normally, a fairly rational person. I have experienced insomnia for almost two weeks worrying about this. I have considered taking a tranquilizer (I've never taken one in my life), or even smoking a marijuana cigarette (it's been years since I've done that), or having a few stiff drinks, but my in-laws are medical professionals and would know something was wrong.

I have considered running away to visit my brother over that weekend, but he lives 800 miles away. I would rather shave my head than face these people. My husband is usually very supportive of me. He insists that he loves me and that's all that matters. But if he loves me, how can he ask me to do this?

A NERVOUS WRECK
DEAR WRECK: First, you and your husband need more help than I can give you in a letter. There is a rape crisis center in your area, and it offers counseling. Please go there immediately. Both you and your husband should go.

Your in-laws are shockingly ignorant about the realities of rape, especially in view of the fact that they are medical professionals. Tell your husband that you are unable to deal with his parents' lack of compassion and, therefore, he cannot count on you for dinner that evening or any other evening that includes them, until you feel confident enough to be in their company.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A good friend of mine asked me to be her daughter's godmother. I told her I would love to do it for her and felt very honored to be asked.

Is there any financial obligation attached to this, Abby? I am not exactly sure what the responsibilities of a godmother are. Any information you might have covering this subject would be greatly appreciated. I need to know exactly what is expected of me.

WANTS TO DO RIGHT

DEAR WANTS: The responsibilities of godparents are essentially spiritual — so ideally, the godparents should be of the same religious faith as the parents. It is the responsibility of the godparent to see that the child is given religious training and is confirmed at the proper time. Additionally, the godparent should take a special interest in the child (as a near relative would). You should remember the godchild with a gift on birthdays and at Christmas, until the child is grown.

Godparents are not (as is sometimes assumed) obligated to give the child financial assistance, or to become adoptive parents should anything happen to the birth parents. The actual obligation is spiritual only.

DEAR ABBY: I am tired of people's complaints about barking dogs. Unless a person lives in the country with a couple of acres between houses, there is no way sounds can be eliminated, other than eliminating the dogs, cats, roosters, whatever.

People have gotten used to the sound of trucks, highway traffic, screeching tires, electric mowers, electric saws, airplanes, buses, sirens and dozens of other sounds — but let a dog bark, and all h--- breaks loose!

There's a barker across the street from us and a highway three blocks away, and I'll take the barker any day; I can't call the police about the highway noise.

JULIE IN TULARE

DEAR JULIE: You failed to mention that a barking dog discourages burglars — not only in the owner's home, but the neighbors' too.

What teenagers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Stocking shoppers use computers to find right product PARIS (AP) — French women have long held world renown for their fashion acumen, taste and style. Now their modish sophistication is being enhanced even further by interactive computers.

The computers, located in retail stores, provide hosiery shoppers with information on correct sizes, shades and styles to accommodate a variety of uses and occasions, notes Intermark Corp. of New York, designer-producer of these hosiery "advisers."

To assist shoppers find their way through the maze of products and sizes in the typical hosiery section, interactive computers are mounted on the shelves of the displays themselves. By touching an easy-to-use keypad, customers enter such details as their height, weight and reason for purchase.

The computer then makes recommendations on a liquid crystal screen on the most appropriate color, style and size to buy, and even provides a color-coded description of the package so that the customer can find it among the myriad products on display.

Red Raiders hope to spoil 'Horns Cotton Bowl hopes

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Texas coach David McWilliams may have only himself to blame for the Longhorns' failure to beat Texas Tech three of the last four years.

It was McWilliams who started the Red Raiders' current success over Texas as Tech's coach in 1986. That year, McWilliams' Red Raiders beat Texas 23-21 for only their second victory over the Longhorns in a decade.

The Red Raiders have not let up. McWilliams now finds himself with a 1-2 record against Tech since taking over at Texas in 1987. Tech's victory last year was the first in Austin since 1967.

But McWilliams says his old team's success against Texas is coming to an end.

"The difference between this team and the last two teams is that we have more seniors and more experience," McWilliams said of the 14th-ranked Longhorns. "When you have that, you really don't have to say anything."

Tech players say a win by the Red Raiders (2-6 overall, 1-4 in the Southwest Conference) this year would salvage their losing season and knock the Longhorns (5-1, 3-0) off the inside track to the Cotton Bowl.

"If you can't get up for this game, you don't have a pulse," said Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes. "This is about as big a game as there is for us."

"We were very fortunate to win the last two years," Dykes said. "I don't know if the best team won, but we will take it."

McWilliams said his players haven't forgotten the losses to Tech.

"It'd be foolish to say they are not thinking about it," he said. "Regardless of the outcome of the game — good or bad — you use it as a positive, as a motivational tool. Tech certainly has the last two years to use as positive motivation."

Last year's loss to the Red

Raiders sent Texas spiraling. The Longhorns entered the game ranked in the Top 25, coming off victories over Oklahoma and Arkansas and in the driver's seat to the Cotton Bowl.

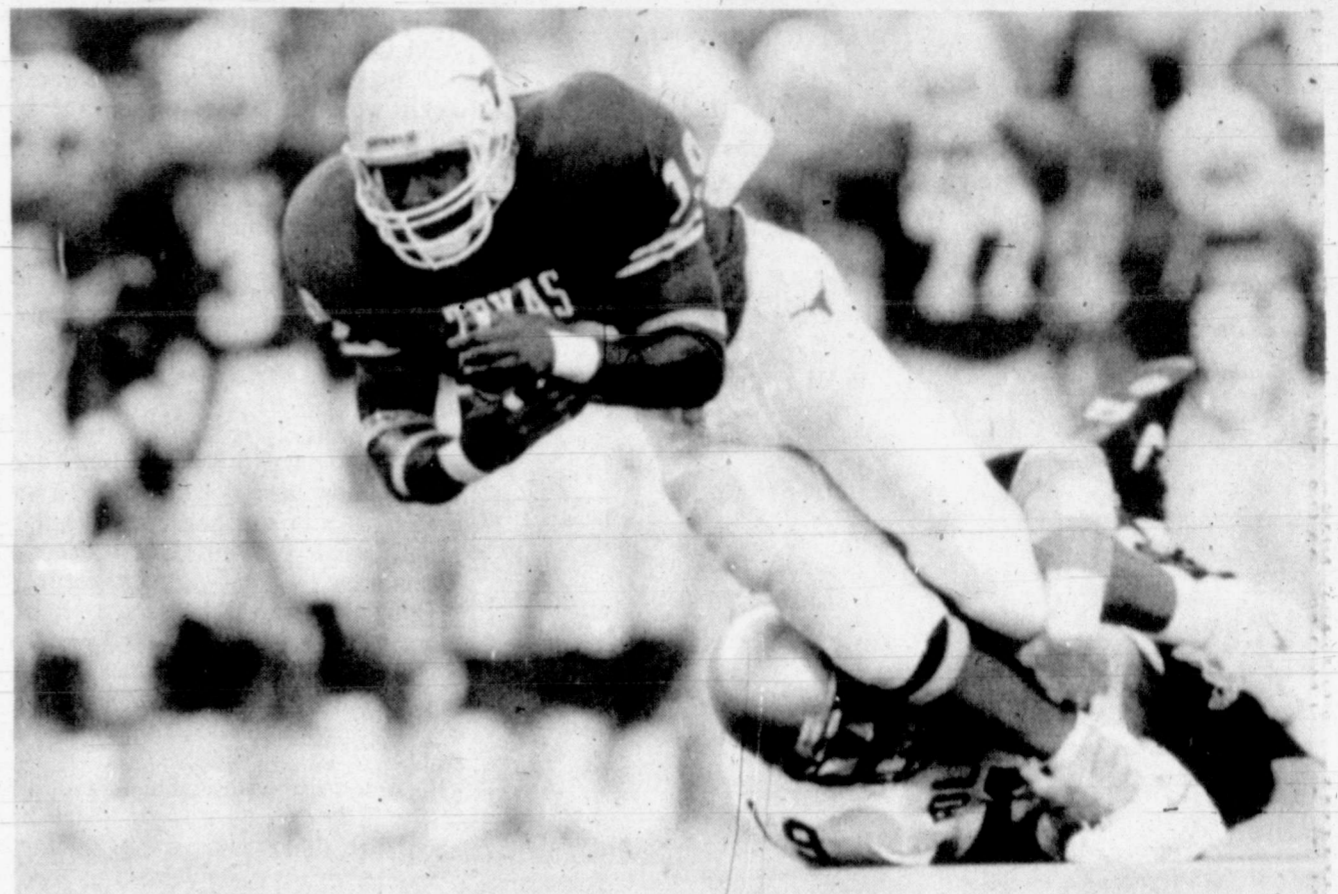

But Jamie Gill's 65-yard touchdown pass to Anthony Manyweather on third-and-26, late in the fourth quarter iced a Tech victory.

But this year the Longhorns lead the SWC in defense and possess a potent run-pass attack.

Longhorn defenders are allowing an average of 290 yards per game, including a meager 152 yards rushing.

The Longhorns ground attack is led by Phil Brown and freshman Butch Hladnot, who verbally committed to Tech last year before enrolling at Texas.

The passing attack features 6-foot-4 twin brothers Kerry and Keith Cash, who specialize in leaping catches in the corner of the end zone.

Pampa makes final home stand

Harvesters seek first playoff spot since '71

In most pre-season polls, Dumas was expected to challenge for the District 1-4A title this season.

However, the Demons have struggled all season long and have yet to win a game in eight outings.

"Dumas was highly-touted before the season started and everybody's been waiting for them to put it all together," said PHS head coach Dennis Cavalier. "We're just hoping they don't do it tonight."

Pampa and Dumas clash in a District 1-4A contest at 7:30 p.m. tonight in Harvester Stadium. It will be the final home game for the Harvesters, who are tied with Hereford for second place in the district standings.

Caprock, the league leader at 3-0, clashes with Hereford tonight and the Longhorns can clinch a playoff spot with a win.

"We've got our eye on the Caprock-Hereford game, but we also have to pay attention to Dumas. I feel like we have to win our last two games to make the playoffs."

The Harvesters are seeking their first playoff berth since the 1971 season.

Although Dumas is 0-8, Cavalier says the Demons have the biggest team Pampa has faced and their run and shoot offense can be dangerous.

Wayne Cavanaugh, who is averaging 9.8 yards per carry and has rushed for eight touchdowns. Running back Quincy Williams and fullback Zach Thomas are both averaging 5.0 yards per carry and have rushed for five and six touchdowns, respectively.

Dumas coach John Patterson is trying to find some positive answers to a dismal season.

"We've had good practices and have played hard in the games, but we just haven't been able to make anything happen," Patterson said.

Leading rusher is Dumas' pass-oriented offense is Jaime Valdez, who has ground out 380 yards.

"Valdez is a good ballcarrier for us, but we really don't run the ball that much," Patterson added.

Patterson said the Harvesters are well-balanced on both offense and defense.

"They seem to play very well together," Patterson said. "They've got an awfully good offense and they hold their own on defense."

Borger plays at Randall in the other District 1-4A game tonight.

Dumas certainly has the size. Santo Greenwood, at 340, and Brent Pirkle, at 250, man the offensive line.

Cavalier said Dumas' problems may have started before the district season got underway.

"Dumas played a tough pre-district schedule against teams like Monahans and Lubbock Estacado, but they were supposed to win their opener against Lubbock High and they ended up getting beat. That may have undermined their confidence," Cavalier said.

Pampa takes a 4-2-1 record into tonight's contest. In district, the Harvesters are 2-0-1 with the tie coming against Hereford.

"I've been really pleased with our practices this week," Cavalier said. "The players know they've got their backs to the wall and there's been a lot of intensity in practice."

McEnroe falters in Paris Open

By SALVATORE ZANCA
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — John McEnroe was in no mood to shake hands. Not after double faulting on match point in the richest indoor tournament of the year.

"I guess you can say I choked," McEnroe said.

No one could deny that. After coming back from a break down in the final set against Switzerland's Jakob Hlasek in his first match in the $2 million Paris Open, McEnroe watched his second serve at 5-6 in the tiebreak go long. A whistle went up from the Cyclops machine signifying a fault.

That was just the start of the whistling as the French crowd started their own form of booing — whistling — as McEnroe stomped off the court without shaking Hlasek's hand.

"I know John. So sometimes it is just that he is so upset that I am not taking it bad," Hlasek said.

McEnroe won the first set handily, but then slammed a ball into the net in the second game. Then, after the seventh game, he hurled his racket across the court that earned him a penalty point on his serve.

Still he won his game but lost the set, forcing a third set that eventually went to the deciding tiebreak.

"I stayed with him," Hlasek said. "You have to stay with him and stay cool."

With the match on the line at 5-all in the tiebreak, Hlasek had a service winner to take him to match point. Then McEnroe served once, twice and was out of the tournament.

It was the second time that Hlasek has knocked McEnroe out of the Paris indoor tournament. Two years ago, Hlasek won their quarterfinal battle.

"It's not easy to play McEnroe here because of the crowd and the pressure," Hlasek said. "But it's the second time that I've defeated him here and that gives me confidence."

Now Hlasek has a confrontation with Yugoslavia's Goran Ivanisevic today in a day packed with eight matches with the top three players in the world continuing on their collision course.

Stefan Edberg meets Aaron Krickstein, Boris Becker takes on Jim Courier and Ivan Lendl faces Jonas Svensson.

U.S. Open champion Pete Sampras is up against French qualifier Guillaume Raoux in the opening match of the day.

College program helps pro athletes obtain degrees

By PAUL A. DRISCOLL
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — When Jim Adduci settles into class with a bunch of 20-year-old college students, he feels a little odd. Same thing when he suits up in a minor league baseball clubhouse.

"Being 31 and in the minor leagues is like being 31 and a student," he says.

Nonetheless, Adduci got out the books this fall after packing up his glove and spikes at the end of the season with the Scranton, Pa., Triple A ballclub.

Like thousands of other athletes, Adduci cut short his college education to turn pro. Now he's trying to make up for it through an 80-college consortium that makes it easier for athletes to transfer credits, attend class, find scholarships and earn their degrees.

Adduci, an outfielder who spent a year in Japan and a couple of years in the majors, signed on last year at DePaul University for his final year of college.

His first three years of study were at Southern Illinois University, where he says he was an indifferent student waiting to be drafted by a major league team.

"My whole intention was to play professional baseball from the time I got out of high school," said Adduci, who is majoring in communications. "But there comes a time when you have to make a decision."

He began thinking about returning to school three years ago while with the Milwaukee Brewers.

"I was doing a good job coming in off the bench," Adduci said this week. "But I just sensed it was an insecure spot to be in — a 28-year-old bench player, not established in the big leagues. I thought at the time, now would be the time to plan for the years ahead."

He signed up for DePaul's Project Academics, which recruits professional athletes much the same way pro teams go after student prospects.

"I go to spring training and talk with all the athletes from rookie ball on up to the professional program," said Tom Kowalski, the program's director. "I have a really good relationship with the Cubs and White Sox and Milwaukee Brewers."

Chicago's hockey team, the Blackhawks, and its football team, the Bears, also are involved. The first athlete through the program was Todd Bell, a former defensive back with the Bears. He got his degree from Ohio State, where he played college ball, after finishing his course work at DePaul.

While athletes are required to do the same work as other students, the program does what it can to ease the way.

If the athlete can't get to registration because of his team's schedule, Project Academics will register him. If his sports schedule means he can't make a class, it will be videotaped for him.

The 80 schools in the program make it easy to transfer credits and get degrees from one school or another.

Gregory-Portland coach draws suspension

AUSTIN (AP) — Football coach reached the playoffs, and he did not think about it being a possible rule violation. He said, however, "Any violation we have in our program is my fault, and I'm the one who should be punished, not the kids."

In other cases of alleged violations, the UIL's State Executive Committee: Publicly reprimanded Sanderson football coach Gary Shackelford and placed him on probation for one year as a result of his pulling his team from the field with six minutes to go in a losing game at Van Horn on Oct. 12.

Refused to add its own penalty to a junior high school coach accused of recruiting a running back for the Judson Independent School District. Converse Judson High School, in the San Antonio area, currently is ranked No. 6 in 5A schoolboy football. On Oct. 2, the District 26-5A executive committee issued a public reprimand and probation for one year to the Judson football program and suspended running back Jerod Douglas from varsity athletics for two years.

Boxing, horse racing runs gamut of emotions

By ED SCHUYLER Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Go for Wand died trying. Buster Douglas should have tried dieting. A punch to the fighter's nose and the snap of the filly's ankle were the beginning and the end of sport's journey through the gamut of emotions. The one-punch knockout of James "Buster" Douglas by Evander Holyfield elicited anger, disappointment, disgust. The fatal breakdown of Go for Wand brought anger, sadness, admiration. The punch that knocked down Douglas was legitimate — whether he could have gotten up, only he knows. What disgusted fight fans was that right up to the time it happened, Buster looked like a man groggy from a nap following a big meal. What probably is the most prestigious individual title in sport went right to Buster's belly. He started the week as heavyweight champion and ended it just heavy. His gut was soft because his attitude was. The title he fought so hard to win on a 10th-round knockout of Mike Tyson wasn't worth fighting to keep. Douglas doesn't lack courage. He lacks pride. He took the money — $19.1 million — and waddled. Not only did he rob the fans, he robbed Holyfield of his due by not giving an effort becoming a champion. Tyson, overconfident and flat, did not lose to Douglas without a fight. Douglas robbed himself, too — his victory over Tyson now will forever be a fluke — but he didn't seem to care about that, either. History might have warned us that trouble was ahead in the Breeders' Cup. On July 1, 1975, Joe Bugner was booted in Britain for a lackluster effort against heavyweight champion Muhammad

Ali. Five days later, the great filly Ruffian broke down in her match race against Foolish Pleasure on the same Belmont track where Go for Wand would fall. Go for Wand died a champion while fighting off Bayakoa in a desperate stretch battle in the Breeders' Cup Distaff. There are those who say a thoroughbred's competitiveness is the conditioned reflex to the sting of the whip or at least the threat of being whipped. That seems, however, an unfair assessment. The strength, speed and grace of Secretariat or a Go for Wand cannot be born just from fear of the whip. Courage and heart will have to figure in the equation. You've got to have heart. The whip of criticism after Douglas weighed in at 246 pounds didn't make him turn tiger in a bid to beat Holyfield before physical condition, or lack of it, could become decisive. Curses accompanied both the downfall of Douglas and the death of Go for Wand. The anger at the death of Go for Wand, humanely destroyed on the track at Belmont Park, stemmed, however from a feeling of helplessness, from a sense of unfairness. People cried over Go for Wand. Yet while her death was heroic, there was a cold reminder that the heart of the sport she was bred to support is the parimutuel machine. Go for Wand was a losing bet. While trainer Billy Badgett was returning to his barn after the filly was put down, a man shouted at him, "You finished second today." At least that clod and others of his ilk got a run for their money even if they don't have the breeding to realize or admit it. Those who backed their faith in Douglas with their wallets came up empty on all counts.

Cowboys look ahead to bountiful draft

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys have tripled last year's sports output and coach Jimmy Johnson sees nothing but improvement down a road leading to next April's bountiful NFL draft in which they have three first-round draft picks. Dallas was 3-5 at mid-season and could have been at .500 if it wasn't for another Randall Cunningham football miracle which stole a 21-20 victory for the Philadelphia Eagles away from the Cowboys last Sunday.

Although Dallas is next to last in the NFL in total offense, Johnson said the Cowboys have avoided the panic button. "We're already a much better football team than the one we had when the season started," Johnson said. "The second half of the season I think we can show what we can do offensively. We'll still be inconsistent at times because we have some players who didn't go to quarterback school or training camp." Johnson was speaking of first-round draft pick Emmitt Smith of Florida, who made quarterback school but missed training camp; second-round draft pick Alexander Wright of Auburn, who missed some quarterback schools and training camp; fullback Alonzo Highsmith, who was obtained in a trade from Houston a week before the regular season began; and offensive guard John Gesek, who was obtained in a trade with the Los Angeles Raiders. "We had three motion penalties last week against the Eagles and they were against players we didn't have in training camp," Johnson said. "They were critical penalties, too. That's the kind of thing that causes you to be inconsistent. With another training camp we can get rid of those kind of mistakes." Smith is learning the NFL is tougher than the Southeastern Conference. He averaged 5.6 yards per rush in his career at Florida. For the Cowboys, he's averaging 3.6 yards per carry. "He's going to be a big-time back in this league," Johnson said. "But missing training camp hurt him a lot." Johnson has enjoyed this season much more than the last. Johnson, who was 1-15 in his rookie year, called it the worst coaching experience of his life. "It was miserable and I never want to go through another like it," said Johnson, who was used to playing for national championships at the University of Miami. Owner Jerry Jones had predicted Johnson would win as many games in the first third of the season as Tom Landry (3-13) did in his final year with the Cowboys. "I'm too smart to put my foot in my mouth anymore," Jones said before the season began. This week he said, "I feel better about our future than I've ever felt before. We're getting ready to take advantage of our opportunities. We're getting the financing set up to be aggressive in signing our draft picks." The Cowboys will have 17 draft picks in April, including three first rounders: their pick, Minnesota's pick in the Herschel Walker trade and New Orleans' pick in the Steve Walsh trade. Dallas has two second rounders, two third rounders, and two fourth rounders. They then have a pick in each round through the 12th. "We have more number ones than most teams will have in the next half decade," Jones said. In 1991, Dallas has two first rounders and three second rounders. "I like our position," Jones said. "The odds are we miss on fewer picks drafting high like we will be doing."

Moratorium imposed on WT

DALLAS (AP) — West Texas State University must wait at least a year before it can be considered for membership in the non-scholarship Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association, the league's board of directors said Wednesday. Presidents of the TIAA's eight member schools, who comprise the TIAA board of directors, were unanimous in their call for a 1-year moratorium on expansion, said Dr. Vic Morgan, chairman of the board of directors and president of Sul Ross State University. A special meeting in Dallas on Wednesday was prompted by an informal request through a TIAA member president on behalf of WTSU, league officials said. West Texas State, now an NCAA Division II school, is having financial problems with its athletic program. The school is in Canyon, about 20 miles south of Amarillo. "During this 1-year moratorium, we will conduct a careful analysis of the conference's future goals," Morgan said. Now in the TIAA are Sul Ross in Alpine, Midwestern State in Wichita Falls, Hardin-Simmons and McMurry in Abilene, Howard Payne in Brownwood, Tarleton State in Stephenville, Austin College in Sherman, and the University of Dallas.

"We are not closing the door to discussions with any school or group of schools that is interested in joining," Morgan said.

PMS teams close season with wins

Pampa middle school football teams closed out the season Thursday with wins over Dalhart. Pampa eighth grade, led by Matt Garvin and Dwain Nickleberry, won by a score of 42-8. Garvin scored three touchdowns on runs of 49, 72 and three-yards while Nickleberry scored twice on runs of 14 and 75 yards. Adam Clark scored two touchdowns as the Pampa seventh graders rolled to a 44-6 win. Clark scored on a 16-yard run and caught a 9-yard touchdown pass from Bret Manning. Other touchdowns were scored by Jason Guierrez, 7-yard run; Floyd White, 16-yard run; Rayford Young, 27-yard run and Cory Spencer, 46-yard run. Pampa eighth-graders posted a 7-0 record this season while the seventh-grade team went 6-0-1.
