Better Jobs

The steel companies evidently believed that if they insisted on having the right to run their own property and really serve their customers and furnish more jobs to American people and stood for a fair deal, that the government would step in and fix prices and wages and it would be another step toward state socialism. It is hard to believe that they rationally believed that they were serving their stockholders and their customers and their suppliers and the general public to concede that the unions had a right to manage their production and that a man must belong to the union in order to get a job with the steel com-

> Of course it means higher prices for steel and most everything else, and, of course, it means there'll be fewer jobs, and, of course, it means that the unions eventually will be asking for a subsidy or for protective tariffs, which is a form of subsidy, in order to be able to sell in competition with foreign production, where, in most cases, people do not have to join a union in order to work, and where the employer has more of a right to manage his property.

It is an admission on the part of the management that they are not good trustees or stewards for their stockholders or the general To be popular these days, all willingness to draw comparisons public, or even for the working that is required is a willingness to and to show that many of our man in the long run. oppose Russian communism and to own neighbors are infected with

What good will it be if they keep wages up but kill a lot of jobs by doing so and raise the cost of living of everybody who has to buy anything that uses steel? They already had a wage considerably higher than any other wage for the same amount of skill. And it is absured for the managers to think that they know that business will be good in two or three years and wages should thus be increased.

It is a nice example of what happens when the government starts to pay tribute to any group, as we did in 1914 when we passed the Clayton Amendment to the Shermon Anti-Trust Law.

The minute you give any group a special privilege, its members are never satisfied. They begin to believe that they are better than their fellow man and have no roll, for instance, Is that stuff the in music, which is the item we regard whatsoever for his well-

> Natural Result when the youth of the land trained by the politicians it is only natural for the youth to grow up to believe that the politicians have superhuman ability to take care of them; it is only natural for them to grow up to believe in a bigger and bigger government and less responsibility for each and every individual.

When the parents, as is the case today, have to get consent from the government in order to educate their own children, rather than the state getting the consent of the parents to educate their own children, we're well on the way to state socialism-that is, etatism, which is a short.word for state socialism.

No libertarian, no voluntarvist objects to ownership in common if it is on a voluntary basis, but labor unions and state socialism -that is, etatism-are not on avoluntary basis. They've got the guns of the government back of them to force people to do as those in power dictate.

ful and colorful campaigner. As a veteran Illinois leader. Dirksen is well known throughout the Middle West; and in the GOP he has no peer as a resourceful and hard hitting stumper. No GOP congressional leader is closer to Nixon than Dirksen. Personally and politically their ties are far more intimate than with Dirk-William Knowland, Calif. Also being stressed is that Dirksen is not up for re-election this year. His term expires in 1963. In contrast, House Republican Leader Charles Halleck, Ind., an avow ed vice presidential aspirant, does have to run again this fall. He had a tough fight in 1958, winning by less than 5 000 votes, and may ex perience that again this year.

That big party for Dirksen's 64th birthday last week was definitely part of the build-up for his vice presidential candidacy. Among the guests were President and Mrs. Eisenhower Nixon, cabinet members and other party notables. The host was Ben Regan, former Illinois National Committeeman and head of a restaurant chain that includes the concession of the Senate restaurant.

Until the Eisenhower Adminis tration, Dirksen was prominent in the so-called "Taft wing" of the GOP. At the 1952 convention in Chicago. Dirksen was the late Ohio Senator's floor leader, and made a scathing speech against former Governor Thomas Dewey, who was in the forefront of the successful drive that nominated Eisenhower.

But as Senator, Dirksen has unswervingly supported the Eisenhower Administration. And as Sen ate GOP Leader, his relations with the President are almost as cordial as with Nixon.

NIXON FLASHES - Herber lein press secretary of Vice President Nixon, rushed to the Senate Press Gallery and held a 'background briefing' conference shortly after Labor Secretary James Mitchell announced the settlement of the steel strike. In giving newsmen an account of Nixon's backstage role in this agreement. Klein stressed that its main details had been arranged before Nixon flew to California for the Pasadena Tournament of Roses. As Klein related it, Nixon persuaded the steel executives to agree to come to terms at a secret meeting in a New York hotel. The details of this general understanding were then worked out in that

WHAT'S HIS LINE?-Inspired by a "desert spirit," German art instructor Fritz Hundertwasser painted unbroken lines around the walls and windows of his workroom at the State
Art College in Hamburg. He said he was aiming to create a "freer art atmosphere." He was going to free the atmosphere around the entire school with his "line" but school authorities: frustrated the plan. Frustrated Hundertwasser promptly quit his job.
