If we cannot redeem our paper money in gold it will eventually ecome worthless, just as the Confinental currency after the Revolution and the German mark in 1923 became worthless. I want to continue to quote from von Mises' book, "The Theory of Money and Credit", Under the title of "The Virtues and Standard", he writes: "The excellence of the gold standard is to be seen in the fact that it renders the determination of the monetary unit's purchasing power independent of the policies of governments and political parties. Furthermore, it prevents rulers from eluding the financial and budgetary prerogatives of the representative assemblies. Parliamentary control of finances works only if the government is not in a position to provide for unauthorized expenditures by increasing the circulating amount of flat money. Viewed in this light, the gold standard appears as an indispensable implement of the body of constitutional guarantees that make the system of representative government function" Then he relates how, gold was discovered in California and Australia, some people thought that gold was deflationary and recommended the abandonment of the gold standard. This error soon passed and the criticism of the gold standard subsided. Then von Mises remarks: "Even the most fanatical champions of inflation like to disguise their true intentions by declaring that they merely want to offset the contractionist pressure which the allegedly insufficient supply of gold tends to produce.

Yet it is clear that over the last generations there has prevailed a tendency of all commodity prices and wage rates to rise. We may neglect dealing with the economic effects of a general tendency of money prices and money wages to drop. For there is no doubt that what we have experienced over the last handred years was just the opposite, vir. a secular tendency towards a throp in the monetary unit's purchasing power, which was only temporarily interrupted by the aftermath of the breakdown of a boom intentionally created by credit expansion. Gold became cheaper in terms of commodities, not dear er. What the foes of the gold standard are asking for is not to reverse a prevailing tendency in the determination of prices, but to intensify very considerably the already - prevailing upward trend of prices and wages. They simply want to lower the monetary unit's purchasing power at an accele-'Such a policy of radical inflationism is, of course, extremely popular. But its popularity is to a great extent due to a misapprehension of its effects. the newborn infant can be the most crucial moment in its life. It is at this fleeting instant of time that doctors or nurses in hospital delivery rooms must determine clinically whether the child is normally healthy or seriously ill.

In the latter case, since ill babies can fail with split-second rapidity at this point, treatment must begin at once. Since speed is essential, the need for a simple, quick meth-od of clinical evaluation is

Dr. Virginia Apgar, chief of the division of congenital mal-formations of The National Foundation, parent organiza-tion of the New March of Dimes, began in 1952 to devel-op just such a method. What she invented is a mathematical in five seconds or less.

Dr. Apgar, former professor of anesthesiology at Columbia University's College of Physicians and Surgeons, recently joined The National Foundajoined The National Founda-tion to take a leading role in its attack on birth defects, the na-tion's biggest unmet childhood medical problem.
