Pampa school district considers 7 cent tax hike

By BEAR MILLS Staff Writer

Pampa public school officials are blaming a proposed 7 cent increase in property taxes on cuts in state eight million dollars away because of that aid and unfair evaluations by the state property tax

That is proposing the increase to support a proposed budget is costing us $690,000 in additional aid on top of all of $15.49 million for 1990-91. That is approximately $500,000 more than the 1989-90 budget.

"This is not good news, but it is a reality," Griffith said after the meeting. "We're in a position where we must raise teacher salaries every year due to state mandates. Our total budget is increasing by only slightly ly assessed and taxed. more than 3 percent. We are cutting 10 positions. Our

"Basically, there are three reasons we're losing state revenue," Griffith said. "We are a slightly more wealthy school district and the state is going to pull seven or

Griffith said an appeal by the Gray County Appraisal District was lost in Austin, meaning that when state aid is calculated, it is done at the level the state has appraised, not at the level Pampans are actual-such a loss without "seriously crippling the district." What's more, Griffith said, "The state of Texas is less than $1.18 cents by 1995 or they will lose hundreds of thousands of dollars in state aid. This is the legislation that was just passed."

Asked if his resignation to accept the superintendent's job in Goose Creek had anything to do with his willingness to support a tax increase, Griffith said. "That's certainly not true. Anyone can come and look at these figures and see that they add up. With the exception of Dumas, there is not a large system in the Panhandle that doesn't have a tax rate of over a dollar."

If the tax increase passes, Pampa's rate will be $1.06. Griffith compared that to rates of $1.22 for Canyon, $1.26 for Borger, $1.14 for Amarillo, $1.01 for Perryton and $0.85 for Dumas, which Griffith described as a property rich district.

You want your teachers to be paid competitively. We don't have the highest pay schedule, nor do we have the lowest. And we wouldn't want the lowest."

> In addition to the salary increases, Griffith said the 3 percent increase was because "we are required to remove the asbestos from our schools and all of the gas tanks from our transportation facility by EPA requirements."

> "We've got a number of expenses that we have no choice about," Griffith said. "We have had a lot of cuts in our school system to try and adjust to this," he stated. A public hearing on the proposed increase is set for

Rain, rain, come again

In top photo, heavy black clouds hang over U.S. Highway 60 west of Pampa at Kingsmill late Monday afternoon as a rain-laden system moved across the Pampa area. The clouds dumped almost an inch of welcome moisture on the rainstarved area over a short period of time, filling underpasses and gutters with run-off water. But in the calm following the storm, a spectacular rainbow (in photo at left) transversed the sky with blazing colors. More rain from scattered thundershowers are in the forecast, though at only 20 percent through Wednesday.

To tax or not to tax at landfills – that's a question still unanswered

By BEAR MILLS Staff Writer

An alert Pampan, concerned with taxes charged private citizens to dump their trash in the city landfill, has uncovered a contradiction in state law that is costing taxpayers around Texas who dump their own garbage in a regulated landfill.

Orville Whinery Sr. said he became alarmed recently when he went to dump trash in the city landfill and was charged tax on the dumping fee.

Whinery said, "I didn't mind the fee to go out and dump some trash, but when they start charging tax on your own trash, I didn't think that was right.'

Whinery said he wrote the Comptrollers Office asking about the situation. In a letter from Bob Bain, special assistant to Comptroller Bob Bullock, Whinery was told that if he were dumping his own trash, it could not be taxed.

If he were dumping someone else's trash, the tax would be due, the state official informed him.

Armed with that information, Whinery went to see officials from the city of Pampa.

"I took these papers up to the finance department of the city and saw John Horst and he said he would find out about it," Whinery said. "The Comptrollers office told him they would have to check into this and to go ahead and collect taxes on it until they were told not Horst, finance director for the city, confirmed the state's contradiction, noting the city has been unable to get a straight answer on the issue.

"When the ordinance was passed to start charging a gate fee, we contacted the Comptroller's Office for a ruling on sales tax and they sent us a copy of this letter ... to the city of sales tax on the gate fee," Horst

He said the letter included word-Legislature and tax code had not exempted landfills from collecting sales tax, even though some of those trash they already owned.

Horst and Public Works Director Nathan Hopson agreed it was unclear if what was being taxed was the trash, the land it was dumped on or the service provided by the city in having a landfill.

Oil spill threatens wildlife; salvage operation continues

SUSAN FAHLGREN Associated Press Writer

GALVESTON (AP) - More than spread today toward environmentally sensitive marshlands in Galveston Bay while crews continued to salvage oil from a nearly sunken barge.

Salvage crews worked around the clock to remove remaining oil from the vessel in the Houston Ship Channel. A patchy slick up to 15 miles long extended from the ship, with streamers reaching into the Gulf of Mexico.

Another barge involved in the weekend collision was safely grounded, and neither was leaking any more oil, the U.S. Coast Guard said.

"The vast majority of oil is in Galveston Bay, which is about the worst place to have it," said Coast Guard Chief Petty Officer Todd Nelson. "Any way that spill heads, it is going toward wetlands and estuaries, with unique species of herons, egrets, wading birds and nesting birds. And it is very probable that we are going to have impact on them soon."

> "We haven't gotten any reports of oiled birds yet," Nelson said. "But it's only a matter of time until we get those.

Crews transferred all the oil from a listing barge and pushed it aground near Eagle Point, said Nelson. The second barge quit leaking oil about 5 p.m. Monday, he said. Thousands of feet of collection booms surrounded the nearly sunken barge.

"It is holding up traffic and will continue to do that. It is unlikely that channel traffic will be opened up Tuesday," he said. "The salvor says that throwing waves at it might cause it to slide to the channel bot- truck, also used by the salvage bay. tom. It could then take weeks to AMARILLO (AP) - The daughter of a defendant in the nation's largest savings and loan fraud trial was pressured into a romantic relationship with a juror in the case, defense attorneys said in opening statements of her jury tampering trial.

'From day one, he chased her subtly and not so subtly," he said.

'She was worried and didn't know what to do. She does not want to blow him off because he stalks her and knows where her children are," Fawer said. Mark Nichols, an assistant U.S.

attorney prosecuting the case, contended Tomalin entered into the relationship to help garner support for her father, sometimes kissing Vera and talking about future romance.

"Ask yourself why Mrs. Tomalin was kissing Mr. Vera. Because she is in love?" Nichols said during opening statements.

"Or is it because her father is on trial, facing over 300 years in jail and more than $200,000 in fines?" Nichols asked.

Nichols said Tomalin actively sought meetings with Vera during the seven-month trial in Lubbock and led him to believe "she wanted him as much as he wanted her." Nichols said in the final month of the trial Vera "wanted to have sex" with Tomalin. "She said no, not now - later."

Congress setting a foreign tax trap

Like a buzzard circling over a wounded cow, our U.S. congressmen anticipate gorging on new taxes to be seized from foreign companies. The IRS testified before the House Ways and Means oversight subcommittee that foreign companies allegedly are defrauding the government of billions of dollars in taxes. It said that in 1987 45,000 foreign-controlled U.S. corporations took in $686 billion, but paid only 0.66 percent of that in income tax. In contrast, U.S.owned companies paid taxes at a 1.04 percent rate, nearly double the foreign rate.

Atop the list of foreign firms now being given third-degree by the IRS are the familiar Japanese bogeymen: Toyota, Nissan, Sony, Toshiba, Hitachi, Matsushita (Pansonic and Technics) and Yamaha. These are the kinds of companies our congressmen love to bash. The implication is that the wiley Japanese are buying up our fair country and not paying any taxes to boot.

Some avidly avaricious congressmen said they could seize another $50 billion in taxes from these companies. The Bush administration said the amount probably isn't that high. But at a time when tax increases of any sort are all the rage in Washington, it looks like these firms may get socked with at least another $20 billion or $30 billion in taxes.

Said Rep. Ray McGrath, a Republican of New York: "The outrage this committee feels ... I don't think I could overstate." Though congressmen are prone to hyperbole, Rep. McGrath is accurately reflecting the sentiment on Capitol Hill. After all, if the $30 billion-plus had actually been seized from these foreign firms every year in recent years, Congress could have spent that much more on special interest porkbarrel programs.

But we should realize what would happen, now, if this money is seized from these foreign firms. The economy, already wheezing, might dive into recession. The taxes would hit hard our consumers, who would pay higher prices for products. And thousands of American workers at foreign-owned factories would likely be fired. If the foreign-owned firms are taxed too much in the United States, they'll just take their factories someplace else. Latin America and Eastern Europe now beckon as places with shrinking governments and lowcost, talented labor.

The problem in the United States is not that foreign companies are taxed too little, but that domestic companies are taxed too much.

On a train that goes nowhere

Los Angeles, which is to the automobile what Rome is to Catholicism, is now trying to launch a reformation, giving up vehicles that run on roads for vehicles that run on rails. This month, it opened a 19-mile light line that is supposed to be only the first part of a 150-mile network stretching from the mountains to the sea.

Events like this have inspired public servants to flights of rhetoric. "I see this line as a candle in the darkness of our transportation nightmare out here,' said Ray Grabinski, a local transit official. "When you're sitting on a freeway and you're going about California, says that even if twice that many people 12 miles an hour, (the train is) going to look like space-age transportation."

Actually, the Los Angeles rail line has two important things in common with space travel: It's very expensive, and it will carry very few people. It's a Hubble telescope on wheels, but harder to fix.

The city of the future has mired itself in the past, repeating the blunders of other cities that have gone to great lengths to prove the futility of rail transit in communities that were built with the automobiles in mind. Before it's done, Los Angeles, like those other cities, is likely to find its candle in the darkness has burned mountains of dollar bills without lighting the way out of its transportation woes.

In 1980, the cost of the new rail segment, known as the Blue Line, was figured at $100 million. By the time it opened in mid July, the price tag was $877 million – a cost explosion to make the most brazen defense contractor gulp. Estimates of passengers have gone the opposite direction. Not long ago, transit officials predicted 35,000 riders a day by the end of the first year. Now they'll settle for 12,000.

ride the Blue Line, each trip will cost more than more than tripled, on average. $13 just in capital expenses – meaning that local taxpayers, in effect, will be paying each regular there's the cost of running the trains, only 5 percent of which will be paid for by fares.

If you've ever whiled away an afternoon parked on the Santa Monica Freeway, you might have been willing to pass out a fistful of $20 bills just to get a few of those cars off the road. Unfortunately, most southern Californians think the same way that riding the train is something everyone else should do.

But flat tires probably idle more cars every day in Los Angeles than the Blue Line will. If it generthan 6,000 roundtrip commuters - in a metropolitan area containing 13 million people.

use and air pollution as L.L. Cool J has on the League of Women Voters.

In this, Los Angeles is following the patterns of most other cities. The federal Transportation Department looked last year at 10 cities with new rail systems and discovered that only one had attracted even half as many passengers as predicted:

In some places, total mass transit ridership (on both buses and trains) actually declined, which is the kind of genius you rarely find, except maybe in a savings and loan regulator. Costs, you won't be surprised to learn, didn't shrink accordingly: They

So what are Angelenos supposed to do - resign themselves to commutes that will soon take longer commuter $6,750 a year to ride the train. Then than a network miniseries? USC's Gordon notes that the average auto trip to work in Los Angeles County took 24 minutes in 1967. Today, thanks to the hordes of auto addicts mindlessly clogging the roads, the same trip takes ... 22 minutes. That's because businesses that once would have located in the central city have gone to the suburbs to be more convenient to their employees.

If 22-minute commutes are too hard to bear, or gasoline consumption too high, or exhaust fumes too great, local governments in Southern California (and elsewhere) ought to put their money into ates 12,000 trips a day, that adds up to no more buses, which are cheaper and more successful than trains. things that work in hot weather are mules and fools. Call in hot. * DON'T WEAR ANY UNDERWEAR: This will enable you to avoid one of the really unpleasant circumstances that can occur during a heat

You can get what is commonly known as boxer bundle. The hotter it gets, the more your boxers will want to ride up. And before you know it, your boxers will be in a tiny wad and might even have to be removed surgically. * AVOID HOT WEATHER CLICHES: This won't make you any cooler temperature-wise, but it will make you cooler as in "That guy's really cool.

Look at his $650 sneakers." Some examples of hot weather cliches to avoid:

1. "Hot enough for you?"

"It's not the heat, it's the humidity."

"Gonna be a scorcher today." 4. "Hot, ain't it?"

5. "One of these days, I'm gonna own this construction company. Hand me another drink of that be reminded.

* DO NOT WATCH TELEVISION WEATHER FORECASTS: They will only make you more uncomfortable by saying things like: "Well, for the rest of the week there's no relief in sight. It's going to be hot, hazy and humid."

Television weather forecasts would be better if they told us things we didn't know, like why some idiots continue to jog in this kind of weather, how long you can remain in a cold shower before you begin to wrinkle and shrink, and speaking of relative humidity, how much you perspire while having sex with you cousin.

* DON'T GET INTO ARGUMENTS, THAT WILL ONLY MAKE YOU HOTTER: If somebody says something that is totally incorrect or offensive, let it go until December.

Then, look them up and say, "Look, you ignorant airhead, Miami is NOT the capital of Florida and my wife does NOT have thick, hairy ankles."

Dr. Grizzard must go now. It's his move.

Life-support decision is with states now

By SARAH OVERSTREET

It's been weeks since the Supreme Court denied a Missouri family's request to remove life support systems from their daughter, and newspapers all over the country are still filled with the story.

Columnists still analyze the court's decision and try to interpret what the decision will mean to all of us. Outraged readers still write letters to the editor, aghast at the misery Nancy Cruzan's family has had to endure these seven years since head injuries received in a car accident left her in a "vegetative" state.

Doctors say she is oblivious to her environment except for reflexive responses to sound. Her atrophying body lies day after day in a Missouri hospital bed, her family beside it.

We know that in the blink of an eye our own cars can go careening off a road like Cruzan's did, or that the torment of a terminal illness can leave us begging a frightened medical community to withhold life-sustaining measures.

In Missouri, state Attorney General William Webster fought the Cruzans' request to remove the feeding tubes from their daughter, but during the last legislative session, he joined with the family in support of a bill that would have laid out clear guidelines for state courts to follow in withdrawing life support when someone has not indicated his or her wishes before

WASHINGTON (AP) - Most bank and thrift customers are ill-equipped to evaluate the health of the institutions where they deposit their money, a top regulator said today in evaluating proposals for deposit Greenspan. insurance reform resources and ability to make informed judgments about commented favorably on strong capital standards. the condition of a bank," said L. William Seidman, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

"Even the best regulators, Wall Street types and financial gurus have a very poor record of foreseeing banking problems much in advance," he said in testimony prepared for the Senate Banking Committee.

Seidman, whose agency insures deposits at commercial banks and thrifts, avoided commenting on specific proposals to revise deposit insurance laws. But, he said any proposals designed to increase depositor oversight of banks "have their limitations."

In the wake of the S&L debacle, many conservative economists advocate scaling back deposit insurance. They argue that depositors, knowing their money was protected by the government, didn't care if they were putting it into institutions run by high flyers.

However, Seidman stressed requiring bank and thrift owners to risk more of their own capital as a way to reduce managers' temptation to take excessive risks.

"It seems appropriate that serious consideration its on the deal. should be given to phasing in higher capital requirements for banks," he said.

Seidman's views are broadly consistent with those offered in recent weeks by Treasury Secretary Nicholas about the Bluebonnet transaction. He is interested only F. Brady and Federal Reserve Chairman Alan in headlines."

Meanwhile, lobbyist Robert J. Thompson said he would refuse to honor a subpoena from Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, for testimony before the Senate Judiciary antitrust committee today about his role in arranging the purchase of a failed S&L by Arizona insurance executive James M. Fail.

Separately, a senior Treasury Department official suggested Monday that Congress could avoid voting on a $100 billion savings and loan bailout for 1991 until next year by passing a stopgap bill for no more than $10 not paying," "said Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio. Glauber said that under the stopgap plan, Congress and the administration would have to agree to exploit an error in last year's bailout bill that would allow $18.8 billion more in borrowing than Congress originally intended.

The proposal, which would postpone action on the Thompson, a former aide to then-Vice President larger appropriation until after the November election, was raised by Treasury Under Secretary Robert R.

Seidman, who also chairs the S&L bailout agency, the Resolution Trust Corp., said his agency would need to spend $80 billion to $100 billion in fiscal year 1991,

That includes $30 billion to $40 billion from taxpayers to cover S&L losses, on top of the $50 billion authorized in the 1989 bailout bill.

The trust corporation would need to borrow an additional $50 billion to $60 billion, which would be repaid as the government sells real estate and other assets inherited from failed thrifts, he said.

Another installment on the bailout will be needed in 1992, Seidman said.

By the end of September, the RTC will have spent $97 billion – $37 billion to cover losses and the rest to pay for S&L assets which will be sold, he said. The agency will need more money early in the October-December quarter, he said.

Coup attempt spoils tourists' foreign travel

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) - A Houston couple who decided to celebrate their 30th wedding anniversary with their first foreign vacation haven't gotten the romantic island getaway they planned.

"I feel like I've been a hostage here," grumbled Melvin Hazel on Monday.

"We're eating a good meal and no one's pointing any guns at me," said his wife, Darlene, confiding: "I have a lot of sense of adventure.'

They're among some two dozen Americans still stranded on this Caribbean island where Moslem extremists stormed Parliament and the state television building on Friday, seizing the prime minister and other officials.

Some of the Americans have since left the island on one of a few packed flights by regional carriers. But most have been unable to leave.

Lucy Hall, U.S. Embassy spokeswoman, said American visitors to the island were being contacted and assured their government was concerned about them.

"I just want to be somewhere else," said Chris Bigalkie, here on business as regional vice president of Drew Industrial Division. "We don't have anything like this in

They heard the volleys of gunfire and explosions and saw fire erupt from the state television complex, where rebels were holding hostages.

Hazel, who works in construction, said he and his wife, with three children in their 20s, wanted to celebrate their 30th anniversary in style. They had once met some Trinidadians who sang the praises of their island, and they thought this would be the perfect place for a long-delayed second honeymoon. They arrived Thursday and spent Friday sightseeing. But when their taxi driver returned Friday evening to take them to dinner at a seafood restaurant as they requested, he advised them not to go downtown because of the violence.

They scrubbed plans to visit sister island Tobago, and now are only anxious to go home.

'They really messed it up for us," said Mrs. Hazel.

Trial sparks debate over coroners' research

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - A coroner who dropped a dead infant head-first onto the floor as part of his research into skull fractures is being by Odom the same day.

sued by the child's parents for $2 million in a case that has divided doctors over such practices. Some coroners say such research has been carried out in morgues for years. Others say the permission of the next of kin should be required.

In the trial, which began last month, District Judge Hugh Brunson must decide whether state law allows coroners to conduct experiments not needed to determine the cause of death and whether approval from relatives is needed.

No state court has previously ruled on the issue. But state Assistant Attorney General Chuck Yeager said in an opinion last year that the law does not authorize such experiments without the permission of the next of kin.

Dr. Charles Odom, a deputy coroner for Lafayette Parish in southern Louisiana, was fired by his boss, Coroner Robert P. Thompson, who found out about the experiment on 4-month-old Christina Arnaud and informed the parents.

Dwayne and Ellen Arnaud are seeking damages for emotional suffering.

The trial, which is being held in Lafayette, 95 miles west of New Orleans, is in recess but resumes in August.

The baby died of sudden infant death syndrome in 1986, and an autopsy was performed Dr. Monroe Samuels, a medical examiner in Odom held the baby by the heels and dropped it onto a concrete floor. Findings from the experiment were later used in a manslaughter trial in Hawaii in which charges against a father accused of killing his child were dismissed.

Odom, now an assistant medical examiner in Dallas, testified in the Hawaii trial that he believed the experiments on the infant and on another baby's corpse proved that children could die from skull fractures suffered during accidental falls from the arms of an adult.

Testifying at the Lafayette trial, Odom said he regarded the experiment as proper and said such research is not uncommon.

While the primary purpose of an autopsy is to determine the cause and manner of death, there is a secondary purpose - "to gain medical knowledge and use that medical knowledge in the service of the living," Odom said.

Some doctors defended the practice.

"I think it's a good thing and a needed thing," said Dr. Terry Welke, Calcasieu Parish coroner. "There's a lot of knowledge brought about by experimentation that is not allowed on

Dr. Monroe Samuels, a medical examiner in Orleans Parish, said requests to experiment on corpses during autopsies are submitted regularly by medical schools and research centers in New Welke said that in his office, doctors have come in to practice techniques on cadavers before moving on to live patients.

But Dr. Sylvan J. Manuel, St. Landry Parish coroner and president of the Louisiana Coroners Association, was one of a number of coroners who said they knew of no experimentation unrelated to the autopsy being done in Louisiana.

"I don't think any of us are doing it, or should do it," Manuel said. "I don't think anything should be done without the permission of the family. If you're going to take something off the body - a fingernail even - you should have permission of the family."

Jefferson Parish Coroner Robert Treuting testified that experiments such as the one conducted by Odom help doctors and researchers perfect operating techniques and find cures for illness.

But he said it would be callous for the survivors to be told of experiments because it would compound their anguish.

Exxon, crew, Coast Guard focus of oil spill inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP) - Federal safety investigators are focusing on conduct of the Exxon Valdez crew, the company that hired them and the Coast Guard in determining what caused the nation's worst oil

A report by the National Transportation Safety Board staff was getting a final look at a public meeting today. The board then planned to vote on the probable cause of the March 24, 1989, spill of 11 million gallons of crude oil into Alaska's Prince William Sound.

The panel also was considering other possible conclusions stemming from the disaster that led to a $1 billion cleanup effort by Exxon Corp. Safety board reports are not made public until after the panel

With one vacancy on the fivemember NTSB, the possibility of a deadlock loomed on some issues, although reports normally are not brought to the final stage until members have had a chance to read them and discuss any disagreements with staff investigators.

The report covers drug and alcohol testing of the crew, the Exxon crew's operation of the vessel, Coast Guard traffic control, standards for staffing tankers and Coast Guard facilities that guide them, and government and private emergency response to the spill, said board spokeswoman Drucella

It does not, however, cover the cleanup operation, which is an environmental matter, she said.

Ms. Andersen said the board received no formal complaint or allegation about the blood alcohol tests taken on Joseph Hazelwood, the Exxon Valdez's captain, more than 10 hours after his ship broke Hazelwood's lawyers claimed last week that tests purportedly showing that his blood had a .06 percent alcohol content were botched and were followed by a coverup that denied him a fair trial earlier this year in Alaska. The Coast Guard standard for drunkenness is .04 percent.

An Alaska jury acquitted the captain of being intoxicated but convicted him on one misdemeanor charge of negligent discharge of oil, fined him $50,000 and ordered him to spend 1,000 hours cleaning Alaskan beaches. He has appealed the verdict.

Last week, the Coast Guard dismissed charges of drunkenness and misconduct against Hazelwood but suspended his license as a ship's master for nine months after he pleaded no contest to breaking Coast Guard rules.

The violations included drinking within four hours before taking command of the vessel and leaving the bridge to his first officer while the tanker was headed for jagged Bligh Reef, where it split open.

Safety board conclusions carry no legal force but are used as possible guidelines for congressional and other government action.

POUND RIDGE, N.Y. (AP) -As time goes by, some of us become shortcut gardeners — happy to have found ways to lighten the work load

Viewed from this angle, the novice toils unnecessarily with spade and hoe, machinery, heavy bags of fertilizer. The veteran lets nature do much of the work.

Back in the 1950s, a Connecticut gardener named Ruth Stout wrote a book called "How to Have a Green Thumb Without an Aching Back," which became the bible of the lazy gardener. Basically, what Ms. Stout did was to cover her vegetable garden with a permanent eight-inch layer of hay and dump her daily kitchen scraps on top of that.

Stout — a sister of detective story writer Rex Stout — also tossed leaves, grass clippings, uprooted weeds and other plant wastes on the pile, all of which gradually decayed and turned into rich topsoil. The thick cover called mulch — also stifled weeds. When planting, Stout pushed aside the mulch and, after the seeds sprouted, pulled it back around the

The process goes all year round. In winter, the kitchen garbage gets tossed on the snow. This is organic gardening with a vengeance. In effect, your compost heap is your garden, so you don't have to build up and keep a separate compost ideal labor-saving crop. heap. Practitioners never have to turn up the soil in fall or spring, never have to pull up a weed.

Now, grateful as we are to and still enjoy the fruits of the soil. \Stout, not all of us want to look at banana peels on the snow. Out in the county where I live, my vegetable garden is the first thing people see when they come up the drive. My wife is great for vegetables - sun most of the day and good drainage on a slight slope. But she draws a line at eggshells and coffee grains.

Sacrificing the garbage, a mulch gardener can still achieve pretty much the same results with a deep cover of leaves, grass clippings and with money — bales of salt hay available at nurseries. The yellow hay makes a pretty background for the vegetables. Wood ashes, or lime, occasionally mixed in with the leaves, insure against the danger of

Having eliminated tilling and weeding, a lazy gardener soon finds additional ways to reduce work. The plants themselves will help, if you know the ones you can count on. Perennials, like asparagus and rhubarb, need only the initial planting. After that they come up year after year. All you do is harvest

Most vegetables are annuals, however, needing to be sowed anew

Planted early in spring in my southern New York garden, broccoli produces a large head in late June or early July. After this is harvested, the plant keeps yielding side shoots, or florets, deep into the frosts of fall, with little or no attention from me. And broccoli ranks high on nutrition charts, a powerhouse of vitamins and minerals.

I save much work by letting tomatoes sprawl on the salt hay instead of staking them. And I include a few tomatoes of indeterminate varieties, like Yellow Pear, which yield all season long instead of all at once. Pole limas, unlike the bush varieties, also keep yielding until frost.

Many lettuces respond well to cut-and-come-again harvesting. At maturity, you cut the plant at near soil level and the stump will come back and give you another harvest. Plants like Swiss chard and New Zealand spinach also are seasonlong performers. A fine beet is Winter Keeper. It can stay in the ground for months and never lose its flavor. A gardener who prefers his exercise on the tennis court or golf course also learns to plant sparingly. Nine tomato plants will do handsomely. Who needs to lug baskets of produce out of the garden and then try to give them away to the Several people have asked about keeping their feeders up all summer, and we always encourage them to keep feeding the birds this way. The parent birds are teaching their. youngsters to fly, and they bring them to our tree, where the little birds sit and wait for the adult birds to bring sunflower seeds to them.

It's fun to watch the young birds fluttering their wings to attract the attention of their mother or father. as if to say, "Hurry! I'm starving!" Since House Finches raise several broods each summer, it seems they often are feeding their young, and early in the summer there are few grass and weed seed available; so they flock to feeders containing sunflower seed.

There are several varieties of sunflower seed, but the best kind to use in the Panhandle is the Black Oil variety which has the thinnest House Finches are natives of Southern California; but some were captured illegally and sold in New York as "Hollywood Finches." In 1940, when government agents moved in on the operation, 300 caged House Finches were released, and have been working their way West, ever since. One thing which may have contributed to there being so many in this area were the large fields of sunflowers, which are (Problems? Write to Abby. Facts about figs

NEW YORK (AP) - Dried figs from California's San Joaquin Valley are tasty and versatile. They can be enjoyed as a snack or used in a variety of recipes.

The California Fig Advisory Board in Fresno, Calif., says that ounce for ounce, pound for pound, dried figs are nearly 80 percent higher in potassium than bananas and are a good source of calcium. Figs are cholesterol-free, almost fatfree and virtually sodium-free.

California figs are high in dietary fiber, especially pectic and other soluble fibers, and are comparatively low in calories, with less than 40 calories in a large fig.

To chop whole figs, snip off stems, put in a food processor or a blender. Chop to desired fineness. Use a small amount of flour or sugar called for in the recipes along with the whole figs for best results.

To chop by hand, use kitchen scissors or a sharp knife; dip scissors or knife in hot water frequently to keep them from becoming sticky. Some ideas for using whole figs:

- FOR THE BROWN-BAG-GER: Chop 3 figs coarsely, mix with 1/2 pint low-fat cottage cheese or plain yogurt. Keep chilled and don't forget the spoon.

— FIGGY APPETIZER SPREAD: Combine 1/4 cup chopped, toasted almonds, 1 teaspoon dijon mustard, 10 chopped figs with one 3-ounce package of cream cheese that has been thinned with 1 tablespoon skimmed milk. Spread on crackers, bread or stuff celery sticks.

FIG FILLINGS: Slit and stuff with walnuts, almonds or pecans; peanut butter; plain or fruity cream cheese: cheddar or jack cheese: chocolate chips, peanut chips or butterscotch chips.

— BREAKFAST TREATS: Add chopped figs to your favorite cold cereal or slice 3 figs into a glass bowl, add 3 tablespoons uncooked wheat or oat cereal, a dash of salt, 3/4 cup water. Cook uncovered on high (100 percent power) in the microwave oven for 2 minutes; stir, cook on high for 1 additional minute. Let stand for 1 minute.

Kerry Sieh, a 39-year-old geologist, works in a trench along the San Andreas fault in Carrizo Plain, Calif., last month.

Geologist digs up ancient quakes to forecast future catastrophies

AP Science Writer

CARRIZO PLAIN, Calif. (AP) - On a barren windswept plain, Kerry Sieh digs trenches across the San Andreas Fault, trying to unravel the secrets of prehistoric earthquakes so he can forecast disasters.

Here, in the shadow of the Temblor Range, 130 miles northwest of Los Angeles, Sieh spends hundreds of hours 15 feet underground. Using a tape measure, finepoint pencil and laptop drawing board, he makes maps of beds of sediment in the walls of his trenches.

"I expose layers that go back hundreds or thousands of years, and I see where the San Andreas Fault has broken those sediments," said Sieh, a 39-year-old geologist at the California Institute of Technology.

"By dating those sediments with radiocarbon methods, I can tell when prehistoric earthquakes occurred. That helps me understand what is likely to happen in the Andreas break alone or in combination to

Over the past 15 years, Sieh's meticulous research helped alert millions of Southern Californians to a horrible secret once hidden in the Earth:

Los Angeles City Councilman Hal Bernson credited Sieh's findings for "triggering many of the measures we've undertaken as far as public preparedness is concerned." He cited a 1981 ordinance requiring reinforcement or demolition of thousands of vulnerable brick buildings.

California is quake-prone because it straddles two great plates that make up Earth's crust. Quakes happen as the Pacific plate grinds slowly northwest past the North American plate along the 700-milelong San Andreas and a network of related

The entire fault doesn't snap at once. Because of changes in rock type or bends in the fault, separate segments of the San cause quakes.

In the mid-1970s, Sieh's work indicated there was a 50 percent to 90 percent chance a great quake would shake Southern California within 50 years. Later research by Sieh and others prompted a formal forecast in 1988 by the Geological Survey, which said there was at least a 60 percent chance of such a disaster within 30

Sieh's early research indicated the next Big One would rupture the fault's Mojave segment, the segment closest to Los Angeles. A 1980 federal report estimated such a quake could kill up to 14,000 people, hospitalize 55,000 and cause $17 billion in

But Sieh's more recent findings suggest the Big One is most likely to rupture the San Andreas Fault's Coachella Valley segment, between the Palm Springs area and

Because such a quake would be more distant from Los Angeles, damage likely would be less than envisioned in the 1980

While Sieh's continuing studies changed details about the likely location of Southern California's next Big One, his work proved it inevitable, author John Nance wrote in the 1988 book "On Shaky

Ryan takes second shot at No. 300

By RICK GANO AP Sports Writer

MILWAUKEE - -Gary Sheffield wasn't even born when Nolan Ryan won his first major league game in April 1968.

But Sheffield, the Milwaukee Brewers' 21-year-old third baseman, could be part of baseball history tonight when the 43-year-old Ryan tries to become the 20th major league pitcher to win 300 games.

"He's great," said Sheffield, who walked four times in one game last season against Ryan.

"All I know is I'm scared. Last time he knocked me down four times. I didn't even want to go back up there. I'm a little shaky right now," Sheffield said Monday.

"I know he's going to come in on you, way in. One time he almost hit me in the face. I'll always remember that,'

Ryan wants to make sure Tuesday night is one for everyone to remember. His first attempt at No. 300 didn't turn out the way it was orchestrated.

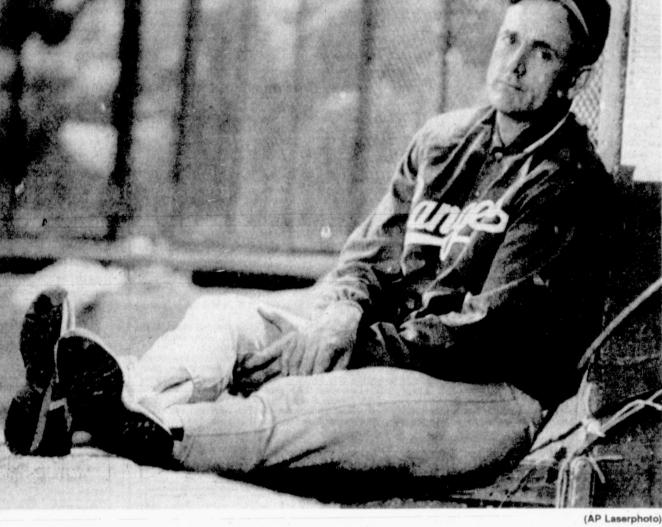

With a sellout crowd watching last Wednesday in Arlington, Ryan gave up three homers, seven runs and 10 hits to the New York Yankees. Texas won the game 9-7 in 11 innings, but Ryan didn't get a deci-

Now he gets another chance at County Stadium, and he doesn't want to prolong the quest.

"I'd like to get it over with as soon as possible. I don't want to disappoint people. I have a lot of people coming to this game. It's an inconvenience for them, but they want to be a part of it. They've shared in my career," Ryan said Monday.

"The only one I had to blame was myself. I made bad pitches. I hope that doesn't happen again. Because of that you probably do put more pressure on yourself.

"But you have to put it in perspective and take the approach that you go out and pitch the same. Prior to warming up, you are feeling pressure. But once you get into the game, you're concentrating on what you have to do."

head of the Big 33 Football Classic says disappointment in Tony Dorsett, who missed a speech before 1,000 people at a pre-game banquet, led to the cancellation of a halftime ceremony honoring the football star.

Dorsett on Monday said he knew about last Friday's banquet, retracting his statements of last weekend that he was ignorant of the event.

The Pro Bowl running back for the Dallas Cowboys and 1976 Heisman Trophy winner at the University of Pittsburgh was billed as the banquet's main speaker and honorary chairman.

"My agent said there was going to be some banquet and it would probably be nice if I was there, but I knew nothing about speaking," Dorsett said.

'We're disappointed because we went to great efforts to get Tony here, and he had been so cooperative in the past," Big 33 Executive. Director Mickey Minnich said.

Dorsett said he was never given an itinerary of Big 33 events. He said the driver hired by the game as HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — The a chauffeur offered to entertain him.
