Voting

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Political map readers will watch the New Hampshire presidential primaries Tuesday for fresh clues to show where votors are heading in this presidential election year.

The clues could be provided by write-in-votes for president or vice president, or strong showings by supporters of presidential candidates other than Vice President Richard M. Nixon and Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.).

"The biggest and most powerful vested interest in Russian achievement is the American bureaucracy. Their jobs, depend on it. If the American people can be convinced, for instance, that in the so-called propaganda race these clever communists are out distancing us, the United States Information Service can wangle a sizable appropriation from Congress. Foreign aid does not spend itself; thousands of agents all over the world must work hard to get rid of billions. The huge State Department thrives on this so-called competition from the Soviets. How many government jobs would lose justification if it were demonstrated that Russia is about as competitive to unhampered private enterprise as high school football team is to a professional eleven?"
