by R. C. HOULES A Fair Way To Handle Capital Punishment

Now that the question of repéaling the capital punishment laws is being discussed all over the United States and the world, and especially in California, it might be well to analyze the sub-

Better Jobs

It will be remembered that Gov. Brown is opposed to capital punishment. He contends that it has not worked. He does not know, nor does anyone else, how many lives it has saved. It is just his opinion.

No rational person wants to see a man put to death if there is any other way of handling a man who is dangerous to human life and to society without the danger of his escaping or being pardoned and running up taxes. If there was some way of incarcerating the man who is dangerous to society other than putting him to death, that would be the ideal situation. The trouble with that is that he is too often released after he is put in prison for life, and it is an expensive burden on all society to keep him in confineme

The Democratic Market Way What would be wrong with telling those people who object to capital punishment that those who are in favor of it will be perfectly willing to have all those people who believe that capital punishment is harmful to society agree to form a corporation or an association and put up a bond that they will protect society against any danger that might come from letting a party continue to live; that they would be obliged to put up a bond of say $100,000 to be forfeited if they let the man escape, or one of the members selected by lot would be imprisoned for life to take the man's place. And if they stood to forfeit a bond of $100,000 if he escaped, and another $100,000 or $200,000 if he murdered another party, they would indeed be very careful about letting the man injure anybody.

One wonders just how much Gov. Brown would put up for such a corporation, if he wants to do away with capital punishment and thinks it is not working.

If that operation were put into effect, then those people who believed in capital punishment would not be obliged to work and sweat to keep the murderer confined and alive. They would then not be obliged to pay for something they did not think they needed. We would then have a democracy of a market where a man could spend the fruits of his labor as he saw fit rather that the way the majority or the state contended he should distribute it.

It is doubtful, of course, whether those emotional people could ever be gotten together to put up any money at all to take care of the The result would be, of course, that capital punishment would go, as it should if the law of nature or the survival of the fittest is to be a guide of life.

Even from a Biblical standpoint It is hard to condemn capital punishment. While the Bible says "Thou shalt not murder" or "Thou shalt not kill," as some translations make it according to Moses also is credited in the next Exodus 21:12 reads: "And he that smiteth a man so that he die shall surely be put to death", And Moses also is credited in the next chapter of Exodus, 22:18, as say-"Thou shalt not suffer, witch to live." The Septuagint Bible, that has just been published, which is the one Jesus is supposed to have used, makes Exodus 20:13 read: "Thou shalt not commit murder". So it is difficult a Biblical point of view. It also will be remembered that Jesus warned against taking up the sword when he said that "He that taketh up the sword will perish by the sword". But he also said, Luke 22:36, "He that hath no sword, let him sell his garment and buy one". Why would Jesus be advocating that a man buy a sword unless he expected him to use it in self-defense, and that is all capital punishment is intended to do-not to get e en, not to get not to retaliate, but to protect the inalienable rights that belong to every man. And the man who doesn't respect the inalienable rights of other people is, as John Locke said, "like a tiger,

The decision people make on Capital punishment will have much to do with the welfare and stability and the morality and the justice of society. Capital punishment is just like a policeman or a soldier killing somebody in self-defense who is attempting to kill the official or the soldier. If one is justified, cap-Ital punishment is justified.

NEW YORK - It is all over now and any imputation of the taint of publicity is, therefore, off it. Nor was any payola offered or received. What has happened is that a man I have come to know well, and who happens to own a store in Allentown, Pa., has conducted his annual contest for versatility in design and use in retail goods. Several times in the last few years I have studied the entries and found some useful, some amusing, some just plain junk, whatever he may have found or decided. I am not beholden to Max Hess, nor he tome, and I doubt that either of us will ever confront the other across a witness chair before a Congressional committee. I say with candor that he is a friend, and that he happens to own a store is neither persuasive nor important to me.

That being set out, and it seems odd that it must be made clear, let's get to the more piquant ideas submitted by manufacturers, inventors and designers.

Here is an item from Japan, which is a combination 16 - mm. camera and transistor radio. I don't know that camera fiends need the soothing influence of music while snapping pictures or that music lovers need to have photographic evidence of their peregrinations, but there it is. I once bought a combination cigarette case, lighter and folding foot-rule all in one, not from that store, and the more I think about it the more I am convinced that one of these combinations is no more bisarre than the pianos offers a combination symphonic organ and piano, an instrument you can use together or as organ or piano separately. A planist of some note in the concert field has told me that he doesn't quite understand how many musicians would be drawn to such an instrument but concedes that some might.

Also from Japan are field glasses into which a transistor radio has been built. We come, now, to an extension of the camera item. You might want a spot of music while sighting birds, if you are a bird - watcher, or if your wife is out on the lake with a notorious bachelor and wolf and you are incensed over this, a little music might be helpful to your nerves while keeping a field-glass eye on them.

peal for me, since I like miniatures and, also, see sense in a useful key-ring. This key chain has attached to it a miniature complete tool kit or you can get simplified model with miniature plier and screwdriver only. Out of Germany comes a flashlight pen which enables you to jot down notes at night with light on, notes in daylight without the light or you may use it as a simple flashlight without writing anything at a musical pocketbook, which plays tunes while you part with your money, surely a soothing item if you ever heard of one. and then there is a pen which you fill with water - but it writer with ink. Probably has a soluble ink pellet in it. Getting back to electrically - lighted objects, there is an umbrella with a flashlight ferrule on it. It keeps you dry and, at night, is a guiding light in the dark. Another fellow hogwild for lighted objects offers as odd and unexpected a combination as you could imagine: a lighted chicken - incubator that

Communist diplomats in East Berlin say President Eisenhower will meet a determined Nikita Khrushchev at the Paris summit meeting in May. They say the Soviet Premier is not kidding when he threatens to sign a separate peace treaty with East Germany if the West rejects his Berlin and Germany plans, Communist diplomats also say Khrushchev may demand a Four-Power Allied council to run West Berlin. This would give the Soviets a voiceand a veto - in West Berlin af fairs but East Berlin would remain under Communist control
