Israel, Egypt Cease Fire

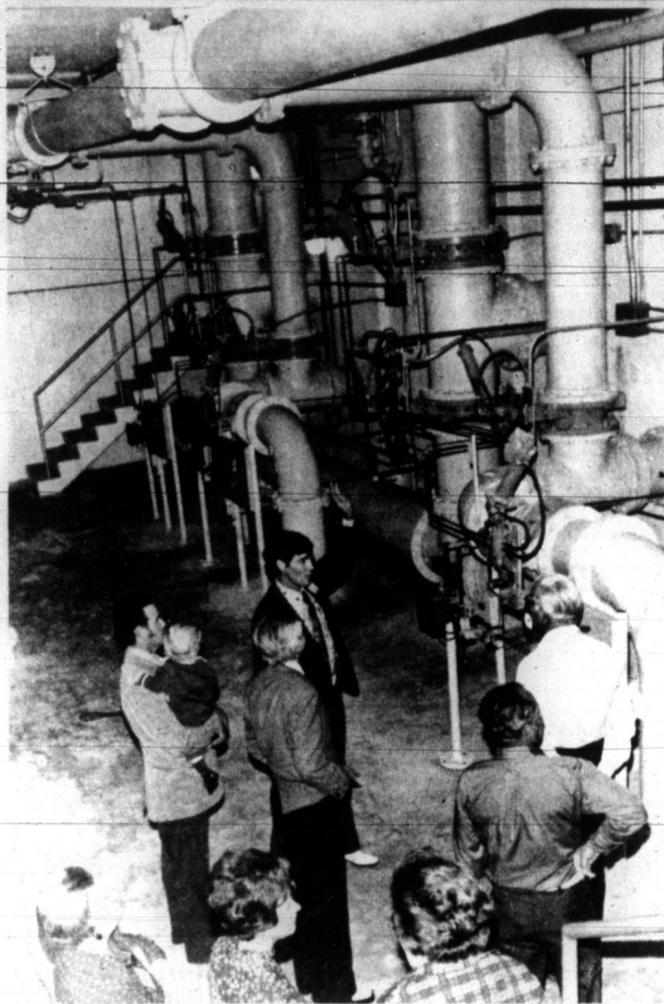

By United Press International
The United Nations cease-fire ending the 17-day Middle East war officially went into effect between Israel and Egypt today at 11:50 p.m. CDT.
Both sides had agreed in advance to stop fighting where they stood under pressure from the United States and Russia.
There was no immediate word that the fighting had actually stopped.
Syria, the main combatant on Israel's northern front, was silent. Iraq, with 12,000 troops helping the Syrians in the north, rejected the cease-fire.

The cease-fire deadline set by the United Nations was 6:50 p.m. (11:50 p.m. CDT), 12 hours after the Security Council in New York passed the joint resolution sponsored by the United States and Russia calling for an in-place truce and peace negotiations.
The cease-fire left Egyptian troops on the east bank of the Suez canal. The Israelis said the Egyptian penetration was three to five miles deep but the Egyptians said it was up to nine miles.
However, Israel succeeded in driving a wedge across the canal into Egypt which it said was 475 square miles and within 45 miles of Cairo. The Egyptians said it was much smaller.

Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev to Tel Aviv to confer with Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir on the situation. His apparent aim was to reassure Israel.
Cairo Radio announced acceptance by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. The Iraqi news agency said that Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin flew to Cairo for his second meeting in a week with Egyptian officials.
Iraq had earlier announced its rejection of the cease-fire.

but the principal Arab combatants are Egypt and Syria. Syria had not announced its decision.
Acting at the joint urging of Russia and the United States, the United Nations Security Council early today adopted a unanimous resolution, with only China not taking part in the vote, calling for a cease-fire within 12 hours and Arab-Israeli talks for "a just and durable peace."
The resolution called for a cease-fire in place and both sides were using the last hours before it took effect to improve their positions.

The military command said its war machine was holding about 300 square miles of Syrian territory and 475 miles of Egyptian land on the west bank of the Suez Canal when the Security Council proposed the truce.
The strike into Egypt, stretching to within as close as 45 miles of Cairo.

President Planning Bill Veto

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the midst of renewed uproar over Watergate, President Nixon faces another legislative test in the coming days over his anticipated veto of a bill to regulate his war-making powers. He probably will win.
An unlikely coalition of administration loyalists and antiwar congressmen is expected to help sustain the veto, expected Tuesday or Wednesday.

It is anticipated Nixon will argue that the bill would tie his hands in situations like the current war in the Middle East. It would limit to a maximum 90 days the length of time a president could deploy U.S. troops overseas without specific congressional assent.
Many liberals oppose the bill because they believe it would write into law more presidential power to make war than now exists in the Constitution, which says that only Congress can declare war.

As the experience in Vietnam demonstrated, the lack of a formal declaration of war did not deter three presidents from committing Americans to combat.

The bill, intended to deal with the anomaly, would permit a president to commit U.S. troops to combat under certain conditions for 60 days without approval from Congress and for another 30 days simply by declaring he cannot withdraw them any earlier.

The House gave final congressional approval to the bill Oct. 12. The vote was 238-123, three votes short of the two-thirds necessary to override. The Senate vote was 75-20, well over the necessary two thirds, but that chamber was not expected to get a chance to vote on an override because it was expected to be defeated when the House votes first next month.

Among the 123 House members against the bill were several of the more outspoken antiwar congressmen who got unusual help from GOP Leader Gerald R. Ford, R-Mich., whom Nixon nominated hours later to succeed Spiro Agnew as vice president. Nixon would receive considerable support from other loyalists among the 238 who voted for the bill but would not vote to override a veto.

Nixon Stakes Presidency On Actions Over Tapes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon is staking his presidency in a gamble he can persuade the nation he was within his rights in rejecting a court order for his Watergate tapes and firing prosecutor Archibald Cox.
Nixon's action has raised Watergate to the white heat of crisis and for the first time his impeachment is openly discussed in Congress as a possibility, even among its instinctively cautious senior members.
Congressional leaders are assaying the national mood, following a weekend of drama, before embarking on so drastic a course.

In any event, Nixon already has come under heavy criticism from the Democratic-controlled Congress. His position was weakened by the resignation under duress only 12 days ago of Spiro T. Agnew from the vice presidency.
Senior White House people speaking for Nixon predict the citizenry will come around to his support when prestigious Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., in his role as "verifier," issues his report comparing what he heard on the tapes with what the White House says they contain.
Nixon May Go On TV
Nixon may go on television, aides said, to rally support and stave off a move in the House to impeach and in the Senate to try him for "high crimes and misdemeanors."

Speaking on a not-for-attribution basis, White House officials say Nixon came to feel Cox was biased and "intolerable" and had set himself up as "a fourth branch of government." They said Nixon now thought it was a mistake ever to agree to permit such an office to come into being.
So when Nixon proposed the Stennis verifier compromise and Cox rejected it and threatened to seek a court order holding Nixon in contempt of court, Nixon had Cox fired.
Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson, who had promised Cox total independence, would not issue the dismissal order and resigned instead.
Deputy Attorney General William D. Ruckelshaus, another loyal workhorse of the administration, likewise refused because "my conscience will not permit me to carry out your instruction to discharge Archibald Cox." Before Ruckelshaus could quit, Nixon fired him.

FROM LOCAL CITIZENS

Nixon Move Gets Varied Reactions

The furor caused by Saturday night's firing of special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox and the departures of two top officials of the Justice Department continued today to be a chief topic of conversation.

To get a sample of how Pampans felt about President Nixon's weekend blockbuster action, The News quizzed a number of persons this forenoon.

They had this to say about it: Atty. Harold Comer — If we're going to remain a government of laws rather than men, I feel the President ought not be permitted to place himself above the courts. If we allow this to continue, then we're in no better shape than the dictatorships of Latin America.

State Rep. Phil Cates — I continue to be shocked and surprised. There seems to be trouble on all levels of government. It is my hope that Watergate, the vice president's resignation — and even the scandals in our own state government will serve to emphasize the need for more individual participation by the people in our governments from the court house to the highest office.

Mayor R.D. Wilkerson — If Mr. Nixon thinks he took the proper procedure, then I'm with him. Talk of impeachment is unreal and I think a lot of wordage being handed out by persons in high places is purely political.

Mrs. Ruth Osborne — I believe the President has the right to fire whom he hires, but I also think Mr. Cox could have helped a lot in clearing up Watergate, so in that respect I think Mr. Nixon let the congress and the people down.

G.R. Greer, 321 N. Perry — He (President Nixon) knows what he's talking about. He gave an order and Cox wouldn't follow it so he was right in firing him.

Mrs. Elaine Cooper, 1037 S. Barnes — I was astounded, but since he's been cleaning house up there, maybe it's time he did something about himself.

Mrs. Fred Neslage, 2005 Charles — I feel that the President should have at least given some warning, and I really don't feel that he has given the complete truth in the matter. The decisions he has been making lately have destroyed the confidence of the world in the American nation.

Charles Hall, 1300 E. Foster — I feel like Nixon should be able to do whatever he wants to; he's President, right or wrong, and it's his decision. Personally, I think he was right in firing Cox.

Mrs. Libby Shotwell, 1312

Duncan — I think that the president had a perfect right to fire them because if you do not cooperate with your superior officers, there is no other alternative.

Benny Horton, 1917 Zimmers — I think he was wrong; he's trying to hide something. Otherwise, why would he be so tight about letting the tapes loose.

Mrs. James Trusty, 1927 Holly Lane — I was really surprised and shocked.
Jim Cambell, 1330 Williston — The President had the authority and the prerogative to do what he did. You will find that liberal congressmen and forces that were not elected in 1972 are the ones who will push for impeachment. They couldn't win then and now they are using a handful of national TV commentators to undo what the people wanted done. Some of those in the national news media are the nation's biggest danger today. They are a monopoly.

Warren Fatheree, 1014 N. Wells — President Nixon is the boss. He hired them and I think if he feels they're not doing the job he wants them to do he has the right to fire them. It is regrettable, though, with Watergate and the vice president's resignation, that these incidents keep happening to add to the turmoil.

AT AUSTIN

Local Group To Attend Rural Resources Meet

AUSTIN — Five representatives from Gray County will be among more than 1,500 delegates who will gather here Tuesday to review the state's rural resources and lay the groundwork for developing and utilizing those resources more fully for a better Texas.

Attending from Gray County will be Foster Whaley, county agent; Paul Bowers of the Grandview Community; Harris Brinson, new assistant manager of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce; Mack Wofford, Pampa city manager; and Rex McAnelly, manager of Moody Farms and Pampa Chamber of Commerce president.

The occasion is the Governor's Conference on Rural Development, the first of its kind in the state.

The conference will be conducted in the Austin Municipal Auditorium, with registration beginning at 8:30 a.m.

Conference theme is "Planning Today for Tomorrow's Balanced Growth."

Gov. Dolph Briscoe will deliver the keynote address. He will speak on "Planning for a Rural-Urban Balance."

Other speakers will be Dr. John E. Hutchison, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service; Texas Commissioner of Agriculture John C. White; Roy B. Davis, chairman of the Texas Rural Development Commission; Dallas County Judge W.L. Sterrett; and U.S. Congressman W.R. (Bob) Poage, D-Tex.

Moderating the conference program will be Reagan Brown, special assistant to the governor.

Reception Welcomes Doughton

Members of the Pampa High School Band said farewell to band director Harris Brinson Sunday and welcomed Jeff Doughton, his successor.

A reception for Brinson and Doughton was attended by more than 350 persons from 2 to 3:30 p.m. in the High School Bandroom.

Brinson was presented with an attache case, pen and pencil set and a digital time clock for his desk on his new job as assistant manager of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce.

The presentations were made by Band Club officers Larry Harris, president; Pam Adams, vice president; Debbie Heinrich, secretary; and Connie McDonald, historian.

Dr. James F. Malone, school superintendent, spoke briefly and reviewed Brinson's tenure at the high school since 1966.

Doughton, the new band director, assumed his full time duties today. He came to Pampa from Stratford.

AT TEL AVIV Kissinger Arrives For Peace Talks

TEL AVIV (UPI) — U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger arrived just after noon today for meetings with Israeli leaders on his proposed cease-fire in the Middle East war.

The Nobel Peace Prize winner for his efforts to end fighting in Vietnam arrived from Moscow less than six hours before the cease-fire deadline ordered by the United Nations Security Council at a special session early today.

"What he is going to take up with the Prime Minister (Golda Meir). I don't know," one U.S. official said. "There could be some gentle arm twisting about Israeli reservations or he might just be reassuring her that Israel is safe" in accepting a truce.

The U.N. cease-fire call, hammered out by Kissinger during two days of talks with Soviet officials in Moscow, was accepted by Israel only on the twin condition of a total prisoner exchange and immediate negotiations between Israelis and Arabs, including guerrilla groups.

He Refuses Questions
Kissinger refused all questions by newsmen when he arrived, stepped off the silver and blue U.S. Air Force VIP jet onto a red carpet, shook hands with Foreign Minister Abba Eban and left in a black limousine flying the flags of both countries for downtown Tel Aviv.

The visit to Israel was not announced until after Kissinger's plane was in the air from Moscow following his weekend meetings.

American Embassy officials said Kissinger planned to stay in Israel only a few hours and hoped to take off again at 7 p.m. (12 p.m. CDT) seven minutes after the U.N. cease-fire deadline, but would stay longer if the situation required.

He was accompanied by assistant State Secretary Joseph Sisco, President Nixon's specialist on the Middle East.

Brinson Assumes Chamber Position

Harris Brinson assumed duties today as assistant manager of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce in charge of industrial development.

Brinson left this morning along with Foster Whaley, Gray County agriculture agent, to attend the Governor's Conference on Rural Development in Austin tomorrow.

The Texas Rural Development Commission has just completed an extensive review of problems involved in developing rural resources. With the recent growth and development of agri-business in the Top O' Texas area, it is believed there is great potential in this field for the Pampa area.

A seminar is scheduled in Amarillo Thursday, Oct. 25, sponsored by the Southwestern Public Service Co., with people in the Panhandle area involved in industrial and economic development. Larry Miller will be in charge of the one-day conference which Brinson will attend.

Mrs. Lois Steward has temporarily taken over the duties of Mrs. Marguerite McLeod, deceased. Definite arrangements will be announced as to filling the position probably next month, according to E.O. Wedgeworth, chamber manager.

The chamber office is busy this week with final details of the chamber's annual banquet scheduled for Tuesday night, Oct. 30, in the Heritage Room of the M.K. Brown Auditorium and Civic Center. The banquet has been a sell-out for the past two weeks. People who have reserved tickets and have not picked them up should do so by Thursday of this week.

Arrangements have been completed for the art exhibit from the Cowboy Hall of Fame to be held over Wednesday following the banquet from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in order that those people who could not get tickets for the banquet may have an opportunity to see the famous art collection.

McMinn's Winner Again

D.R. McMinn of 528 Hazel, who predicted correctly 12 winners out of 12 weekend football contests and missed the score on the Pampa-Caprock tie-breaker by only six points, was this week's winner in the Pampa Daily News football contest.

Mainly About People

Top O' Texas Republican Women's Club will meet Thursday, Oct. 25, at 9:45 a.m. with Mrs. Bernard Johnson, 1900 Dogwood.

Pampa Duplicate Bridge Club will have a club tournament at 7:30 p.m. today in the Quivira Room at Coronado Inn. All duplicate bridge players are invited to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. J.D. Boland, 801 E. Francis, attended open house at Northwestern State College, Alva, Okla., Saturday, as guests of their nephew, Mike Jones, formerly of Pampa, and Miss Elda Hart, of Laverne, Okla. Also in attendance were Mike's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Jones, and grandfather Herbert Morehead, of Greensburg, Kan., all of whom are ex-Pampans.

McMinn, who seems to have a habit of winning the contest, guessed Caprock to beat Pampa, 21-12, while the actual score was 22-7.

Vera McMinn of 332 N. Dwight placed second by picking Caprock to down the Harvesters, 13-10. She also predicted the 12 winners correctly.

Bill Smith, 610 N. Gray, did not miss a winner and picked the Harvesters to defeat the Longhorns, 13-10, earning himself third-place money.

The 12 games besides the Pampa-Caprock and WTSU-Utah State tie-breakers were Texas A&M over TCU, Texas Tech over Arizona, SMU over Rice, USC over Oregon, Purdue over Northwestern, Missouri over Oklahoma State, Dolphins over Bills, Bengals over Chiefs, Cowboys over Giants, Lefors over Perryton JV, Stinnett over Canadian and Sunray over White Deer.

Manager's Mother Dies At De Leon

Mrs. Julia Wofford, 65, mother of City Manager Mack Wofford, died at 10:30 a.m. Sunday at her home in De Leon, Tex.

Death followed a lengthy illness. She is survived in the immediate family by two sons and two daughters.

Funeral services for Mrs. Wofford were scheduled for 3 p.m. today in the Higginbotham Funeral Chapel in De Leon.

STREETWALKERS RE-ZONED PANAMA CITY (UPI) — Immigration director Termostoles Arjona says authorities this year have "relocated" nearly 7,000 foreign prostitutes who roamed the city streets with tourist cards.

He estimated the number of foreign prostitutes still active in the city at about 1,000. The rest have been deported.

Now You Know By United Press International

Every state except Oregon, which uses normal criminal proceedings, provides for the removal of executive and judicial officers by impeachment.

Five people were charged with affray and one other with disorderly conduct early Sunday morning following an incident at the intersection of Frederic and Tignor Sts.

Charged with affray were Patsy L. Turlington, 29, 413 Doucette; Lillie Carol Walden, 24, and James Michael Walden, 28, both of 600 N. Russell, and Judy Lynn Hassler, 19, Skellytown.

Disorderly conduct charges were brought against Phillip Ray Hutchinson, 32, 1102 E. Francis.

According to the incident report, Sgt. Roy Denman of the Pampa Police Dept. attempted to break up a fight between the three women and the Walden man.

While attempting to separate the parties, the report said, Sgt. Denman had to subdue the man by force.

At that time, the report continued, the three women turned on the officer, scratching him and tearing at his clothes.

While Sgt. Denman was trying to get the four people involved in the fight into a patrol car, Hutchinson allegedly came out of a crowd that had gathered around and interfered with the arrest.

Sgt. Denman at that time told Hutchinson he was under arrest for disorderly conduct, the report said.

Police Officers Discover Troubles At Affray

After twice asking for help from the crowd in getting the five into the patrol car, Denman went to the car and called for assistance on the radio.

Li. Gene Aufleger of the police department responded to the call. When he arrived, the report said, he placed Hutchinson under arrest and started taking him to a patrol car.

On the way Hutchinson allegedly turned and began fighting. When Sgt. Denman attempted to aid in the arrest, two men allegedly held him.

Another man then helped Li. Aufleger subdue Hutchinson, the report said. The five people were then taken to the police station.

All parties in the incident were released on bail Sunday.

Science Today

By DEE SIEGELBAUM
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) —
Picture this:

You're driving along at 80 miles an hour when a transparent red flashing sign appears on your windshield reading "slow down."

There isn't a patrol car around so you keep going at 80 — when you notice all the other cars on the highway are giving you a wide berth. And you realize there's another red flashing sign on the rear of your car, telling everybody on the road you're a hazard.

You arrive home in record time only to find that a computer has picked up your code number and has a traffic ticket ready for you.

Science fiction? Not according to Dr. T.C. (Charles) Helvey, professor of cybernetics at the University of Tennessee, who says all this could be as commonplace as the traffic light in the next decade.

Test for Each Driver
Helvey says computers will set speed limits in the future for every car, every driver, on every highway at all times.

The scheme is called "highway traffic optimization for the 1980s" and was the subject of a national conference held here recently.

Helvey says the goal of traffic control is maximum speed with maximum safety for minimum cost. Optimization means coming as close to the traffic ideal as possible by using cybernetics, the science of interactions.

In such a system speed limits will be determined by pre-testing each car and driver to see how fast they can safely go. A specialized "mini-computer" will be installed in each car to keep tabs on the driver and road conditions. Sensors in the roadbed, and in the steering wheel, gas pedal and brake pedal will feed the minicomputer the information it needs to adjust to changes in the performance of the car, the driver or the road conditions.

For instance, if you're driving

In Reverse?

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — A Des Moines man miffed at having to pay a cover charge at a local bar while his wife got in free said he would like to end all types of "ladies nights" because they discriminate against men.

Michael Hoffman, 26, said he filed a sex discrimination complaint with the Des Moines Human Rights Commission last week after he and his wife went to the Daily Planet bar in downtown Des Moines.

Hoffman said he and his wife did not enter the bar after they found out he had to pay $1 to get in while she would be admitted free because it was "Ladies Night."

"This is sex discrimination in reverse," Hoffman said. "This is disparate treatment toward males."

a big new limousine the professor says you'll probably be able to go 100 miles per hour on the highway in safety—provided you've been classified, or licensed, as a 100 miles per hour driver—and that's where the pre-testing and road conditions are good.

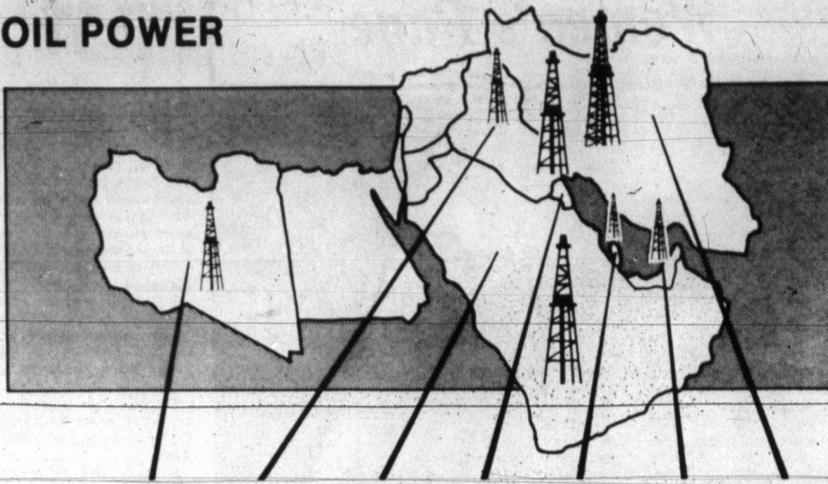

Computer Will Warn
But if you go out and celebrate getting your 100 miles per hour license, you'll probably turn into a 40 or 50 miles per hour driver—and that's where the red flashing sign comes in.

Under the program a driver would have to put his metal license into a slot in the mini-computer or the car won't start. The license will give the computer the information about what the driver's performance should be—and will tell the central computer if he's slipping up consistently.

When the driving performance drops below a "tolerable" level, the computer will lower the "safe" driving speed. The flashing sign will come on—alerting you, other drivers, and traffic patrolmen to the fact that you're not driving as well as you tested.

If you slow down to a safe speed the sign will go off; but if you don't—a traffic ticket will arrive at your home as surely as the monthly telephone bill does now.

OIL POWER

	LIBYA	IRAQ	SAUDI ARABIA	KUWAIT	QATAR	ABU DHABI	IRAN
Barrels a Day	2.2 million	1.4 million	6 million	3.3 million	480,000	1 million	5 million
Reserves (in Barrels)	25 billion	36 billion	145 billion	66 billion	6 billion	18.9 billion	55.5 billion
Revenues	$1.6 billion	$954 million	$2.3 billion	$1.1 billion	$226 million	$497 million	$2.1 billion

More than ever before, oil is a critical factor in the Mideast crisis. The United States, which produces around 75 per cent of its oil needs, could survive without Arab supplies, but Japan and Western Europe, importing around 70 per cent of their fuel from Arab countries, could not. This situation provides a powerful diplomatic weapon for such countries as Libya, Iraq and Saudi Arabia: the threat of bringing much of the industrial world to its knees by withholding critical supplies of fuel.

Investment Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Despite the market's downward trend over the past few sessions, selected issues have responded decisively to individual earnings announcements, says E. F. Hutton & Co. "Although these pockets of strength and weakness may be causing some confusion cross-currents, they also serve to show that the market has become more fundamentally news-oriented than it has been for some time," the firm continues. Since third quarter earnings have been stronger than expected, "the favorable responses by many issues have helped the overall market to sustain its upside momentum..." it adds.

U.S. dollar in August 1971, major countries adopted the floating rate system which "has weakened the monetary discipline required for curbing inflation and is also damaging economic cooperation," says the Fuji Bank Ltd. of Tokyo. "It is feared," the bank continues, "that world trade as well as the currency system will become chaotic unless a fixed exchange rate system is established sooner or later." It suggests a new international monetary order with a number of key currencies, including the yen, fixing the exchange rate as the dollar once did.

Evidence suggests the economy hit a peak in August and the stage is set for lower inflation and a sustained growth in production and profits, says First National City Bank. "The new path will be rocky at first," the bank continues, with a substantial cooling off in business activity up through the first half of 1974, accompanied by an upsurge in unemployment and a decline in profits. If monetary and fiscal policies remain within the boundaries of moderate restraint, "the downturn in the economy will be mild as downturns go," it adds.

A 1 1/2-pound strand of new ultra-fine steel wire would stretch from earth to the moon.

Homosexuals aren't sick; love and let love

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Another advice columnist insists that homosexuals are "sick." She says: "Thousands of homosexuals have written asking me where they can get straightened-out so they must consider themselves twisted, or they wouldn't be asking for help. Occasionally I hear from homosexuals who are at peace with themselves, but they are few and far between. I believe the majority of homosexuals would be straight if they were really free to choose."

What say you, Dear Abby? L. A. TIMES READER

DEAR READER: I say if a heterosexual had been raised to believe that his preference for the opposite sex was "sick," twisted, abominable, sinful, and a disgrace to his family, he would ask for help on how to "straighten himself out," too.

Homosexuality IS a problem because an unenlightened society has made it a problem, but I have received letters by the thousands (not just "occasionally") from gay people telling me that they wouldn't be straight if they had a choice. All they ask is to be allowed to love in their own way without facing the charge that they are "sick and twisted."

I say, love and let love.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 57-year-old grandfather, happy in a third marriage, which, though turbulent at times, has lasted for 16 years.

I must comment on a letter you printed about this virgin who married a widower and objected to sleeping in the same bed in which he slept with his former wife, now deceased. So disturbed is she by the memories her husband must have of that bed, she disposes of it behind her husband's back. And YOU approved of her getting rid of the bed! What about the man himself who are out of your minds. Both about the man and wife? Were not his lips, his arms, and everything else also used in making love to his first wife?

How can she kick this wonderful old love-filled bed out into the street as used merchandise and yet sleep with the man who is also used merchandise?

The logic of the female mind I shall never understand.

FRANK IN PHOENIX

DEAR FRANK: Move over. Freud admitted that he couldn't understand it either. But I'll bet a lot of women (including this writer) understand it.

DEAR ABBY: May I answer "STUCK," regarding the nervy couple who drop in at dinnertime regularly several times a week?

This happened to us, too, and here is how we handled it: When they appeared at our door we said: "Come in—we were just about to have dinner, but we weren't expecting company. Make yourselves comfortable in the living room, and we will join you AFTER dinner."

A few times of this treatment should get the message across to the "nervy" couple, and you'll soon be (as my husband and I are) . . . "UNSTUCK"

CONFIDENTIAL TO N.C.: No one said it better than Horace Mann: "Generosity during life is a very different thing from generosity in the hour of death; one proceeds from genuine liberality and benevolence, the other from pride or fear."

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Write to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 122 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Cal. 90212 for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

Oswald: "Just as football players look for tell-tale signs by an opponent that may indicate his course of action in a particular situation, bridge experts study each other for patterns in bidding and play. In the old days when there weren't many experts we really clocked one another."

Jim: "It works today. I was declarer against a pair that must be rated fairly near the top, but not at the top. West cashed two hearts and shifted to the jack of diamonds. I won; drew trumps with two leads and led my deuce of clubs."

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, OCT. 23
Your birthday today: Today the Sun changes sign, enters Scorpio at 9:31 a. m. E.D.T. Those born earlier are Librans. The time of changing signs is different in other years. For both Librans and Scorpions, the oncoming year closes out a long cycle. Old accounts are settled; resources are converted to readily usable forms in preparation for an adventurous new age beginning to dawn. All of today's natives possess the knack of unconscious preparation for the unexpected and the unlikely, function best single-handed.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Older people need your encouragement or perhaps material assistance, while close associates, mate, tend to bickering. You'll be glad you manage both pressures with so slight a reaction.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Realize that obstacles in your way are merely tests of your ability to cope with life rather than any form of malice. Your patience with the quibbles of others sets you apart.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Listen and learn; do not offer premature comment. Some situations have to get worse before they turn to an upward course. Even loved ones deserve a vacation, a chance to miss you.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Impatience is the drift pattern today. Before crowding anyone, look to see what your showing will cause. Let younger people figure things out for themselves.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: In a variable, mixed sort of a day like this, take nothing for granted. Minor problems pop up where least expected, mostly because friends and relatives forget promises.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Recent enterprises should begin to show results. In handling cash, particularly purchasing, the conservative approach is almost mandatory. Bargains are available if you search.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: You are abruptly at peak of your cycle of energy, confronted with a full range of questions from all sides. Select for relative importance; settle for what can be had, and go on.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Today's mood ranges from overconfidence to confusion, depending on how well you have governed your impulses in recent weeks. Turn a new leaf with the end of the workday.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Finances, particularly in family situations, come up for review. Your position is not as static as you thought. A step up or down is quite possible, and not just from your own action.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Where you feel the urge to make issues clear and draw lines of decision, you merely encourage a challenge and obstinate resistance where none would arise if you didn't push.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: There's a delicate balance between your temptation to intervene in the affairs of others and their impulse to mix into your ventures. It is better to spend the day on the move.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: You have much help from those who wish to stay out of the center of attraction. The more stable your friends, the less likely they are to try drawing on your support.

UPSILON RUSH
Members of Upsilon Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi hosted their final fall rush party recently. The theme centered around a chuckwagon dinner beginning with salsapilla and western appetizers served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Wyatt.

Western hospitality was then continued in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Danny Strawn, where homemade chili, cornbread and tossed salad were served in tin plates. Compliments to Mrs. Vickie Moose for sharing her chili recipe.

The party concluded with a demonstration by Harold Taylor of an original western stomp.

Guests and members attending were Msrs. and Mmes. John Radcliff, Jerry Murray, Dwight Chase, Danny Hoggatt, Calvin McConnell, Perry Moose, Jewell Snider, Danny Strawn, Harold Taylor, L. W. Wendling and Dennis Wyatt.

BAPTIST WOMEN
A new group to study current missions was organized Wednesday, Oct. 17. This group met in the home of Mrs. Jack White, 2364 Aspen.

Mrs. White acted as chairman of the group and she led the "Call to Prayer." Mrs. D.B. Jameson led the opening prayer.

The group will be taught each month by Mrs. James A. Poole. She began by teaching from a book about current mission work in Kenya, Africa.

The next meeting of this group will be Nov. 21, in the home of Mrs. Kenneth Box, 2330 Navajo Road.

Members organizing and attending were: Mmes. Dewayne Barrett, Jameson, Poole, Box and White.

The study was dismissed with prayer by Mrs. Box.

EL PROGRESSO CLUB
The El Progresso Club toured the Amarillo Art Center Oct. 9. Conducting the tour was Mrs. Bob Tucker. Lunch was served in the Amarillo Student Union Building.

The next meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. Tom Perkins, Oct. 23. Mrs. Quentin Williams will present the program on the Islands of the Pacific.

Those present for the tour were Mmes. Glen Dawkins, Carlton Nance, O.K. Gaylor, Roy McMillan, Kermit Lawson, Glenn Radcliff, J.G. Morrison, and Max Presnell.

SKELLY CLUB
The Skelly Club met recently in the home of Mrs. Gary Gortmaker, hostess and Mrs. Roy Thurmond, co-hostess.

The Halloween theme was carried out in the decorations. A game prize was won by Mrs. Edna Chapin.

The next club meeting will be Nov. 13 in the club house for members and their families in the form of a Thanksgiving Dinner.

Those attending were Mmes. Richard Mills, Edna Chapin, Elmer Nichols, John Anderson, Irvin Brown, R.E. McAllister, Roy Thurmond, Tom Veale and hostess.

SKELLYTOWN TOPS
TX TOPS Club No. 255, Skellytown, met recently in the Library with members being weighed in by the weight recorder, Sadie Lane.

Margaret Fox was crowned weekly queen for a loss of 3½ lbs. and received the fruit basket.

Minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Naomi Fox.

Barbara Easley, was crowned three months queen for a loss of 10½ lbs. She received a cash award. Sadie Lane was crowned queen for the month of September and she received a cash award.

The meeting closed with an inspirational thought by Margaret Simmons.

Those attending were Mmes. Margaret Simmons, Barbara Easley, Fannie Coleman, Odell Hassler, Margaret Fox, Naomi Fox and Sadie Lane.

The women of WMU of the Skellytown First Baptist Church met in the Fellowship Hall for their regular weekly meeting recently.

The meeting opened with prayer by Mrs. Bill Thompson. Mrs. Walt Shair read the prayer calendar and scriptures Isaiah 28:14-22.

The lesson on current missions "Women's Work in Kenya," was taught by the new director, Mrs. Irvin Brown.

Having parts on the program were Mmes. Lillie Baker, Clyde Horner, Clarence Kaiser, and Gene Pace. Mrs. Milton Thompson offered the prayer.

Mrs. Clarence Kaiser read the minutes of the last meeting and Mrs. Jackie Cooper gave the closing prayer.

Attending were Mmes. Milton Thompson, Jackie Cooper, Gene Pace, Walt Shair, Bill Thompson, Clyde Horner, M.L. Mills, Lillie Baker, Irvin Brown and Clarence Kaiser.

Senior Center Corner

By LINNIE LESTER
53 Seniors enjoyed their weekly party at Lovett Memorial Library Thursday. Altrusans present were Mrs. Louise Sewell, chairman, and Mmes. Lora Dunn, Lillian Snow, Marian Jameson, Ruth Sewell and Ila Poole.

The El Progresso Club was hostesses and those serving cake and coffee were Mmes. Ruth Reichart, Stella Gaylor, Gladys McMillen and Ida Perkins.

Door prizes were awarded Mrs. Benham and Jay Evans. Mrs. Pearl Slater is visiting her daughter in Guymon, Okla., while nursing a broken arm. We miss you, Pearl!

Helping Mrs. Rosalie Wedge celebrate her 80th birthday last week were her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Cheek of Cleveland, Okla., and Mrs. Lloyd Yeats, Midwest City, Okla.

Mrs. Murell Kingery returned home from a visit with her son and family at Booker, Tex., and a daughter, Mrs. Dick Kierl and family of Amarillo.

Mr. and Mrs. James Burgess are visiting his sister in Corpus Christi.

Woman Battles Occult Course

SEABROOK, N.H. (UPI) — Mrs. Blanche Bragg has begun a battle against a local high school course on mysticism. She says it could lead to devil worship.

The 35-year-old mother has asked the School Board to drop the elective course in mysticism and the supernatural being taught at the Winnacunnet Regional High School in Hampton.

She has filed a petition with 46 signatures to "register a complaint against the course." The board has agreed to review the course.

The elective literature class covers telepathy, witchcraft and reincarnation among other topics. The class outline also calls for students to hold seances. Mrs. Bragg said. Dream interpretation and extrasensory perception are part of the curriculum. Students are asked to relate their own experiences with the supernatural during the course.

Mrs. Bragg said she believed witchcraft was "a religion in itself" and should not be taught alone.

"The thing that bothers me is that they teach witchcraft in the school and I can't go in there and teach what I believe," the conservative Baptist said. "I think that's unconstitutional. If they teach one religion, they should teach all religions."

Mrs. Bragg said she feared any relationship with the occult and our youth. "I do definitely believe there is a devil. If you read the Bible it says there is an evil force. Witchcraft and seances can't be of God so they have to be of the devil," she said.

Mrs. Bragg's 17-year-old son was in the course last year but after two weeks she took him out.

'Brain spurt' theory could lead to revamping of education system

By Jay Bushinsky

TEL AVIV, Israel — (NEA) — An American scientist working here says that children would learn better if the educational system were restructured to coincide with four "spurts" in brain development.

While working at Brandeis University in Massachusetts from 1970 to 1972, Herman Epstein says, he discovered that the brain "spurts" — periods when the brain's cell structure becomes more complex — occur at ages 2, 6 or 7, 11 and 15.

Now his experiments with laboratory animals at Tel Aviv University and with preschool children have led him to suspect that biological reasons dictate that educa-

Halloween Caution

NEW YORK (UPI) — Halloween bulletin to all drivers: —Use extreme caution and drive much more slowly Halloween. Excited, the trick-or-treaters may dart into the street. The time you need to see, to brake, to halt in time may not be long enough to avert tragedy.

—The American Optometric Association says even the most cautious motorists, driving at 20 miles per hour often cannot prevent a Halloween accident. Not enough time to avoid the child who runs into the street without looking.

—In some urban areas motorists must watch out for hell-raising directed at them at stop signs. Some trickers in the past, for example, tossed bags of flour at cars or sprayed them with shaving cream or paint.

—Be on the lookout—for your safety and that of others.

HERMAN EPSTEIN

tors should invest maximum effort to teach new ideas, processes and concepts before a growth spurt begins rather than towards the end of the spurt.

Thus, he argues, the U.S. government-sponsored Head Start preschool program, designed to help "culturally disadvantaged" children compensate, may be doomed to failure because the children involved are in a mental "trough" at that stage of their lives.

The brain's first growth spurt occurs around age 2 and continues until age 4, Epstein says. "If you start before the big growth spurt you can have success that is very different than if you start at the end of the growth spurt. I have found the studies of programs one before age 2, all were phenomenally more successful than anything after that time."

Many of Epstein's concepts are based on the work of Lev Vigotsky, a Soviet scientist who died in the 1930s that the fusion between the thinking and languages processes occurs at about age 3. Unsuccessful fusion, Epstein says, means a child is functionally retarded and limited to thinking in concrete concepts without the ability to do more than react to specific, immediate stimuli.

This might mean, Epstein theorizes, that malnutrition early in life could permanently handicap the brain's capacity for abstract thinking.

Another Epstein hypothesis is that children can begin new "thinking programs" only with great difficulty at junior high school age, so that it might be better to remove them from school for three days a week or so at that age and let them gain work experience while continuing to develop such basic skills as reading and writing.

HUNTER/FATALITIES

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Hunter fatalities in California in 1972 totaled 79 with 10 fatalities, according to the State Department of Fish and Game.

Bridge expert must make herself forget

ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — There are some who have to train themselves to remember and there is Rixi Markus, one of the world's great bridge players, who has to train herself to forget.

A woman who can recall 150 deals hand by hand and who needs to be given only the first cards to recite many of the hands in a championship does not, as she says, want to "overburden" her mind.

One day recently the Mrs. Markus her opponents never get to see in competition, a gracious old world hostess radiating easy charm and friendly warmth, took time off from a crowded schedule of tournaments and authorship to discuss her new book, "Common-Sense Bridge" (Random House). She had passed a sleepless night with toothache but no one would have guessed it.

The new book carries forward Mrs. Markus' belief that tournament or money bridge is a game where the prizes tend to go to those whose play is bold and aggressive and imbued with "killer instinct." "Handle your partner with great care," she says. "Be polite to your opponent but show no mercy." This bold philosophy does not seem to square with the pleasant lady who was a 13-year-old pre-war bridge prodigy in Vienna, and she likes to tell about another woman player who, after an informal chat over cocktails, exclaimed: "You're so nice — away from the bridge tables, I mean."

"A lot of people say things like that," she said, not at all displeased. "When they say they like me socially but are inclined to hate me in competition, I always reply that I don't want to be liked at the bridge table. I'm most anxious to make friends in the bridge world but I am more interested in being respected and feared during play. Frankly it gives me a great advantage."

Mrs. Markus considers "Common-Sense Bridge" a "different" kind of bridge book and one that gets closest to imparting the kind of play that took her to European and world championships. It is aimed at the middle grade player, "the millions who have played for years, have reached a certain standard and gotten stuck. This will help them out of the rut. The average player longs to be a Master. Not everyone can make it but this will help."

Over giant asparagus spears and the first fresh Scottish salmon of the season she was asked what steps she would suggest for improving the play of the ordinary bridge enthusiast.

"Play with players who are better than you are," she said. "Watch the play at first class tables. Play for stakes so high that it will hurt you to lose. If you cannot afford to lose you will watch your step and learn to discipline yourself. Make a special effort not to take risks at the start of play. A game is easier if you start with a few successful hands."

"Learn to count cards. Counting must become automatic. You hold five spades, four hearts, three diamonds and one club; therefore the other players must have the missing eight spades, nine hearts, ten diamonds and 12 clubs. Listen to the bidding and you will already have some information about the cards held by the other three players. Then one player will become declarer, and his partner's hand will go down after the opening lead."

"Now you can see 13 or 14 more cards so you have only to discover the other 25 or 26. After each subsequent trick two of these cards will be accounted for. If you concentrate on counting these cards will be accounted for. If you concentrate on counting and accounting for all these cards — even the small ones — you will be very close to becoming a champion."

Mrs. Markus' photographic memory would be a help and so would the run-of-luck which she says, thankfully, has been with her a very long time. In addition a knowledge of psychology is helpful. Her proficiency in this field is such that it has been suggested she hypnotizes her opponents.

"I don't really," she said, "but that kind of reputation can be very helpful."

RAINED OUT

HOUSTON (UPI) — The smallest crowd in the history of the Astrodome—3,317—attended a baseball game between the Houston Astros and the Cincinnati Reds during the 1973 season. The poor turnout was attributed to a tropical storm which caused heavy rain in the area.

Pampa Woman Chosen For World Who's Who

Mrs. Kermit T. Vicars, 1418 N. Russell, is the recipient of a certificate attesting to outstanding achievement and is the subject of commendation in The World Who's Who of Women.

Her biography and photograph will appear in the commemorative Volume I, published in 1973, by the International Biographical Centre, Cambridge, England. A copy of this comprehensive reference giving recognition to the accomplishments of women, will be placed in leading libraries and archives of the world.

Her name has also been put forward for inclusion in the commemorative Tenth Edition of the world-famed Dictionary of International Biography, scheduled for publication in the Winter of 1973. Copies of this four-volume edition will be housed in the private libraries of sovereigns, presidents and prime ministers throughout the world.

Mrs. Vicars gained recognition through her professional, civic and community work. She has been active in the Federation of Women's Clubs, where she won several awards for the Buena Park, Calif., Junior Woman's Club, of which she was a charter member.

A beautification program for street-parkway plantings on which she served as chairman in 1953 is still being used by the Planning Commission of that city. Since then the town has grown from a small country village of some 5,000 population to a metropolis of 70,000.

Her professional work includes three years as a library assistant; seven years as secretary to the principal of an elementary school; two years as secretary to the director of Fullerton (Calif.) Junior College School of Nursing with campus and Orange County Hospital; and bookkeeper secretary-receptionist for Buena Park High School.

As the area grew she went into real estate work as a saleswoman and property manager for an Anaheim building contractor.

Deserting the congestion of the metropolitan area of Southern California, the Vicars moved inland to Elsinore in 1964. Mrs. Vicars soon found employment as part-time assistant bookkeeper for Erie Stanley Gardner of Temecula, world-famed author of the Perry Mason stories and many other writings.

The past several years she worked as assistant manager for the developer-owner of a 11-space, deluxe mobile home park on the shores of Lake Elsinore.

In this capacity she acted as rental agent, social director, and community coordinator, as well as secretary-bookkeeper. She was instrumental in organizing numerous recreational programs for over 200 tenants, kept them informed of and encouraged their participation in civic affairs.

She also organized and supervised much group participation in charity drives, in which the people of the mobile home park donated many hours of work stuffing and addressing envelopes. With their help she solicited and distributed items for needy families, secured transportation to medical facilities and visited and attended to many of the needs of medically indigent hospital patients.

In 1969, Mrs. Vicars turned her interest to writing and became a charter member of the National League of American Pen Women, Lake Elsinore Branch. Her accomplishments in this line include publicity articles to trade magazines that helped to gain recognition of mobile home dwellers as worthwhile, first-class citizens who can make vital contributions to a community.

Branching out from there to historical research, she wrote a weekly column about the history of the locale for a local newspaper.

A story by Mrs. Vicars, "Whispered Tales of the Hangin' Tree," was published in "Facts, Myths and Personalities of California," in 1973. She is a contributing editor for another historically oriented publication, "The California Scene," under the sponsorship of NLPW, Lake Elsinore Branch.

Ill health of family members necessitated the move back to Pampa. In June, 1972 Mr. and Mrs. Vicars bought the home of the late C.C. Dodd at 1418 N. Russell and moved in August, 1972.

Mrs. Vicars is now employed as bookkeeper for Dr. Frank W. Kelley at the Kelley Clinic. However, she is still very interested in historical research and writing and concentrates as much time as possible to a study of the background of the Texas Panhandle.

She has been commissioned by Tracy Carey, president of the Pampa Historical Society, to do the history of the Vicars family migration and pioneer days in Pampa. She is also doing research in her own family history that has been documented back to 1679 in America with strong evidence of being descendants of Alfred the Great of England.

She is the daughter of the late Frank A. Nabors and Ola B. Nabors, 820 E. Campbell, Pampa. Her grandparents homesteaded near Sayre, Okla. in 1900, and she is gathering data of the endeavors, accomplishments and experiences of settlers of Western Oklahoma.

IN WHO'S WHO — Mrs. Kermit T. Vicars, 1418 N. Russell, looks at the certificate which she received after being selected for inclusion in "The World Who's Who of Women," published at Cambridge, England. Among other things, she has served as part-time assistant bookkeeper for famed mystery writer Erie Stanley Gardner, author of the Perry Mason series. (Photo by Terry Hanna)

Manager Williams: 'I Feel I Have To Move On'

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Writer
OAKLAND (UPI) — Sal Bando decided to give it one more try, one final shot. Quietly and inconspicuously, he sidled over to Dick Williams in the Oakland dugout as the A's players were being introduced before Saturday's sixth World Series contest here.

Bando positioned himself directly alongside his manager so he could be heard above the amplified introductions.

"Still gonna leave?" asked the A's team captain.

"I have to," Dick Williams replied, looking his third baseman straight in the eye.

"You won't reconsider?" "I can't," Mr. (Charlie) Finley asked me, to also, but I can't. I just can't."

Sal Bando reported the entire conversation between him and his manager—make that his ex-manager now—after the A's had swept to their second straight world championship Sunday by knocking over the New York Mets, 5-2.

Just Can't Picture It

"I just can't picture playing without him," Bando said about the 44-year-old Williams, who will sign on as manager with the New York Yankees within the next few days.

"You play three years for a man, and you get used to his ways, to all his moves. Now, when the new man comes along, I guess we'll see how good we really are," Bando went on.

Oakland's curly haired, 29-year-old field leader paused a moment in what he was saying, and when he continued, he went back to his conversation with Williams before Saturday's ball game.

"I was honest with him," said Bando. "I told him we'd miss him, especially me. He told me he was sorry, but he wouldn't reconsider."

Bando reflected again. He didn't say anything for a while, then he shrugged and said softly: "I just love the man."

Dick Williams wasn't the only member of the A's to announce he was leaving after Sunday's triumph. Second baseman Dick Green said he was quitting, too, after 10 seasons with the A's.

"It's a good time for me to leave," said Green. "I also think it's a good time for Dick Williams to go out on his own. Mr. Finley managed here. Now Dick has a chance to do it for himself the next place he goes."

Refuses to Be Pinned Down

For his part, Williams refused to be pinned down as to where exactly his next stop will be, although, after answering so many different questions, he did let the cat out of the bag a little by saying:

"I would love to go to New York."

Other than that, all Williams would say was:

"I feel I have to move on ... for the good of the ball club. For family reasons also. I have a boy who's a senior in high school now and there are other considerations that enter into my decision. But I repeat I have made no commitment with any club. I'm unemployed right now."

In another part of the A's clubhouse, Reggie Jackson, whose two-run homer in the third inning iced the contest for Oakland, was surrounded by newsmen. He also was answering dozens of questions.

One of them was "You gonna follow Dick Williams to the Yankees?"

Reggie Jackson's eyes lit up. "I'd love to," he said.

But he said it like a man who knows the only place he's going is right here.

Ed Sneed Takes First At Kaiser

NAPA, Calif. (UPI) — Maybe it was a good thing Jack Nicklaus and Tom Weiskopf decided to skip this year's Kaiser International Open.

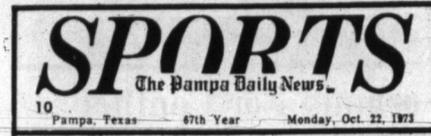

The Ohio State University graduates might have had difficulty with a fellow Buckeye, Ed Sneed—that's Sneed, not to be confused with Sam or J.C. Sneed.

The 29-year-old Sneed gave Ohio State another PGA winner Sunday when he defeated John Schlee on the first extra hole to win his first tour championship, the $150,000 Kaiser International Open.

Both Sneed and the gray-haired Schlee toured the rain-soaked 6,819-yard north course at Silverado Country Club in par 72s to send the tournament into its third playoff in seven years.

Sneed got on the green in two on the extra hole but Schlee, who earlier this year won the Hawaiian Open for his first PGA victory in eight years, got stuck in a bunker and that was it. The two had shared the fourth-round lead at 13-under-par 203 and wound up regulation play at 275.

Ed Sneed Takes First At Kaiser

The win, worth $30,000 nearly doubled Sneed's 1973 earnings. His golf bank account for the year totals $36,278.

"I guess I'm about to realize how important it is to win here," Sneed said of the victory, which makes him exempt from being a qualifying "rabbit."

"Now, I can budget my time."

For Schlee, the second-place finish, worth $17,100, boosted his yearly winnings to over $100,000, a first for him.

Hale Irwin, who started the round only a stroke behind the co-leaders, ran into bogey problems but still wound up alone in third at 11-under 277. Young John Mahaffey picked up $7,000 with his fourth-place finish 279.

Deadlocked for fifth place at eight under par were Jim Ferrell Jr., Lou Graham, Bert Yancey, Dan Sikes and George Archer, while Kaiser inaugural winner Kemist Zarley and a pair of Daves, Stockton and Eichelberger were a stroke back.

15 — Phoenix Suns NBA — Pacific Division

1972-73 finish: W 38, L 44 — 3d place

PROSPECTUS: Great players can sometimes hurt, or at least not help. It is a matter of vibes and attitude. Charlie Scott is a case in point. So is Connie Hawkins. Both play with the Suns. Both have been alternately moody and selfish, and generous and great. Scott is a guard who likes to shoot a lot and not worry his head too much about defense. Hawkins is a forward with the same slingshot and antipathy toward guarding somebody. Connie, previously the top scorer for the Suns, sulked when Scott came to the club from the ABA and began to fire away without proper respect for recent history — meaning Hawkins. Maybe new coach John MacLeod can get heads together in Phoenix. If he can, this can be a mean club.

FORWARD: Perhaps Connie, who is reputed to be one of the best players ever ("raped" because his best days were presumably seen in exile from the NBA), may be getting too old (even at age 31) to be the star he once was. He fell to 16 points a game scoring last season and at times didn't even seem to want to play. Once he even walked off the court during a game. Corky Calhoun and Lamar Green share the other forward spot. Together they are half of a Hawkins at his best. RATING: B minus

CENTER: Neal Walk had his best year as a pro (20 points a game, over 1,000 rebounds for season). Still not among league's best, though. Good team player. RATING: B plus

GUARDS: There is Scott. Sixth-leading scorer in the league (25.3 a game) but his field goal percentage (.446) was hardly among the best. Dick Van Arsdale (18.4) took nearly 700 shots less during the season than Scott in nearly the same amount of playing time. They both played in 81 games. Van Arsdale is a hard-nosed, driving ballplayer who is a winner. Clem Haskins is an effective backup. RATING: B plus PREDICTION: The Suns have had a handful of coaches over the last couple of seasons. Perhaps now MacLeod can take this obvious talent and restructure it — or whatever it is a successful coach does with a club.

QUARTERBACK Mike Phipps ran for two touchdowns and passed for two others as Cleveland clobbered Houston and new head coach Sid Gilman for the Oilers' 17th straight defeat.

VETERAN QUARTERBACK John Brodie relieved starter Steve Spurrier and completed eight of nine passes to ignite a sputtering San Francisco offense late in the first half. Brodie hit former Saint player Danny Abramowicz with passes of 54 and 23 yards to spark the 49ers to their rout of New Orleans.

FIRST-HALF PASS INTERCEPTIONS and long returns by Tom Hayes and Clarence Ellis set up touchdowns and sparked the Atlanta Falcons past the San Diego Chargers.

JIM PLUNKETT sneaked in for a touchdown from five yards out with a minute and 56 seconds left to pull out New England's victory over Chicago.

Oakland 'Survives'

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Oakland A's didn't win the World Series as much as they survived it.

They survived death threats on their MVP, they survived their unpredictable owner, they survived a manager who walked out as soon as the final out was made and they even survived the Mets' magic mystique.

Like a terrible swift sword, the Athletics struck with dramatic suddenness in the third inning Sunday to make the seventh game of the World Series an anticlimactic affair.

Two-run homers by Bert Campaneris, who isn't paid to hit homers, and Reggie Jackson, who is, gave the Oakland A's a 5-2 decision over the New York Mets in the final game of baseball's October Festival.

The victory means the A's are the first non-Yankee team since the 1929-30 Philadelphia A's to win the World Series for two straight years.

A's Aren't Appreciated
Because of all the turmoil surrounding the club, though, the A's aren't really appreciated as a baseball team.

"I don't think anybody knows how good a club we could be," said captain Sal Bando.

But Bud Harrelson, the Mets' shortstop, said, "You've got to respect them because they're professionals who won it for themselves despite all the bull they had to go through. I don't like Mr. (Charles) Finley because he doesn't treat his players well. But they're pros and they play for themselves."

Dick Williams, the Oakland manager, who finally tired of hassling with Finley, officially announced he's quitting as manager 20 minutes after the game ended. It was an open secret because Williams had told the players last Tuesday night.

Williams is expected to take the Yankee job and most of his players would like to go with him.

Jackson, who revealed he had received death threats in late September but had continued to play, received the auto given to the MVP for his nine hits and six RBIs.

As Jackson drank the victory champagne, he said, "what awful cheap stuff." He added, "but that figures on this club."

Finley Not as Exuberant

Finley, who suffered a recent heart attack, wasn't as exuberant as he was a year ago when he kissed his wife on top of the dugout in Cincinnati after the victory over the Reds. But he quietly congratulated the players in the Oakland clubhouse.

Ken Holtzman, who had walked in his only appearance at bat in the AL this season because of the designated hitter rule, started the A's rally with a one-out double off Met starter Jon Matlack. It was Holtzman's second double off Matlack in the Series.

The fine Met pitchers had kept the A's without a homer up to this point but Campaneris drilled Matlack's next pitch for an opposite field homer.

After Joe Rudi singled and Bando popped out, Jackson smashed a two-run homer into the right field bleachers.

That gave Holtzman a good cushion but Williams, who believes in the quick hook, brought both Rolie Fingers and Darold Knowles into the game to subdue rallies.

There was a strange atmosphere in the Oakland dressing room after the game. Manager Yogi Berra, when he went in to congratulate the A's, summed it up with, "This doesn't look like a winning dressing room to me."

And Berra, the former Yankee, has seen more than his share of winning dressing rooms.

man, and you get used to his ways, to all his moves. Now, when the new man comes along, I guess we'll see how good we really are," Bando went on.

Oakland's curly haired, 29-year-old field leader paused a moment in what he was saying, and when he continued, he went back to his conversation with Williams before Saturday's ball game.

"I was honest with him," said Bando. "I told him we'd miss him, especially me. He told me he was sorry, but he wouldn't reconsider."

Bando reflected again. He didn't say anything for a while,

Bengals, Vikings Win In NFL

By United Press International
The Minnesota Vikings and the Cincinnati Bengals are obviously not too old to use "schoolyard tricks" in this age of conservative game plans.

Both used the old-fashioned razzle-dazzle play of another era Sunday to catch their opponents flatfooted and record victories in National Football League competition.

The Bengals used a double reverse to bewilder Kansas City defenders as Cincinnati scored a 14-6 victory over the mistake-riddled Kansas City Chiefs.

Wide receiver John Gilliam scored two touchdowns, catching the Eagles' defense out of position both times, to help the Vikings down Philadelphia, 28-21, and stay unbeaten in the NFC Central Division.

Trailing, 3-0, in the second quarter, the Bengals pulled off a double reverse with quarterback Ken Anderson winding up with the ball. He then fired a 30-yard pass to Bob Trumpy for a touchdown and a 7-3 lead which Cincinnati never gave up.

Gilliam Leads Vikings

Gilliam, who also set up two touchdowns with key catches of Fran Tarkenton passes, sent the Vikings ahead early with a 44-yard touchdown on a double reverse and they kept the lead the rest of the way. Gilliam also swamped the New York Giants, 45-28, and Atlanta destroyed San Diego, 41-0.

Monday night Oakland is at Denver.

Dallas' defense set up three touchdowns with a fumble recovery by Larry Cole, an interception by Lee Roy Jordan and a blocked punt by Billy Joe DuPree and D. D. Lewis scored with another punt blocked by DuPree to carry the Cowboys to victory over the Giants.

Charley Taylor caught seven passes for 153 yards and a touchdown as the Washington Redskins avenged their loss earlier this season to St. Louis and beat the Cardinals.

Quarterback Marty Domres, starting his first game of the season to give Baltimore some offensive spark, scored one touchdown and passed 66 yards to Glenn Doughty for another to lead the Colts over the sagging Detroit Lions.

Fourth-Quarter TD

Substitute quarterback Terry Hanratty passed 16 yards to Ron Shanklin for a fourth-quarter touchdown and Roy Gerela tied his own club record with four field goals as the Pittsburgh Steelers overcame a series of mistakes to defeat the Jets.

Quarterback Mike Phipps ran for two touchdowns and passed for two others as Cleveland clobbered Houston and new head coach Sid Gilman for the Oilers' 17th straight defeat.

Veteran quarterback John Brodie relieved starter Steve Spurrier and completed eight of nine passes to ignite a sputtering San Francisco offense late in the first half. Brodie hit former Saint player Danny Abramowicz with passes of 54 and 23 yards to spark the 49ers to their rout of New Orleans.

First-half pass interceptions and long returns by Tom Hayes and Clarence Ellis set up touchdowns and sparked the Atlanta Falcons past the San Diego Chargers.

scored on a 24-yard pass from Tarkenton and gained 116 yards from pass receptions in the game.

Everybody was asking Vikings' Coach Bud Grant about the reverse, which fooled everyone in Minnesota's Metropolitan Stadium.

"It's about time we got something out of that play," he said. "We tried it six or seven times last year without much success."

The Los Angeles Rams joined the Vikings as the only undefeated team in the NFL with a 24-7 victory over the Green Bay Packers.

Rams' quarterback John Hadl threw a 46-yard touchdown pass to Harold Jackson, David Ray kicked field goals of 40 and 44 yards, and Ram defensive end Fred Dryer nailed Green Bay quarterback for two safeties—an NFL record for one game.

Other Games

In other games, Washington drubbed St. Louis, 31-13. Miami stifled Buffalo, 27-6. Baltimore edged Detroit, 29-27. Cleveland buried Houston, 42-13. Pittsburgh topped the New York Jets, 26-14. New England squeaked past Chicago, 13-10. Cincinnati beat Kansas City, 14-6. San Francisco annihilated New Orleans, 40-0. Dallas

John Barnhill Dies

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (UPI) — John N. Barnhill, head football coach at Tennessee and Arkansas and Arkansas' athletic director for 21 years, died Sunday following a lengthy illness. He was 70.

Barnhill, who compiled a 57-22-5 record as a head coach at Tennessee and Arkansas, was the man credited with luring Arkansas' current football coach Frank Broyles to the university.

Coach Barnhill was a good friend for over 25 years. Broyles said, "The opportunity for me to come to the University of Arkansas in 1958 was so inviting because of the great respect and admiration I had for him. I knew he could train me to become a football coach, and I will always be thankful for his help and guidance."

A native of Sevanah, Tenn.

Barnhill earned nine varsity letters at the University of Tennessee. He was all-Southern guard in 1926 and 1927 and was named in 1927 to play in the all-star game in Los Angeles.

He was the head coach of the Volunteers for four years, compiling a 35-5-2 record.

Arkansas hired Barnhill away from his alma mater in 1946. In his first season, Arkansas won the Southwest Conference championship. His teams never finished below .500 and he compiled a 22-17-3 record.

He was named athletic director in 1949 and held the position until 1970 when he retired. He was then named the university's athletic director emeritus.

During his tenure at Arkansas, Barnhill promoted the construction of War Memorial Stadium in Little Rock, where the Razorbacks play half their home games each year, and helped with the enlargement of Razorback Stadium on the Fayetteville campus. He also promoted the construction of a fieldhouse that was named in his honor, the campus' athletic dormitory and the creation of the Arkansas sports-radio network.

He was inducted into the Arkansas and Tennessee halls of fame and, in 1972, into the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics.

That gave Holtzman a good cushion but Williams, who believes in the quick hook, brought both Rolie Fingers and Darold Knowles into the game to subdue rallies.

There was a strange atmosphere in the Oakland dressing room after the game. Manager Yogi Berra, when he went in to congratulate the A's, summed it up with, "This doesn't look like a winning dressing room to me."

And Berra, the former Yankee, has seen more than his share of winning dressing rooms.

Kathy Finishes On Top Again

WACO, Tex. (UPI) — Kathy Whitworth has added another championship to her impressive list.

The leading money winner on the ladies pro golf tour picked up another $3,750 Sunday by winning the Waco Tribune-Herald Classic in a cakewalk.

Miss Whitworth fired a 3-under-par 69 to finish with a 7-under 209, four strokes better than runnerup Kathy Cornelius. Pam Higgins, Marilyn Smith and Sharon Miller.

Judy Rankin, the second leading money winner on this year's tour, finished 10th.

Miss Whitworth started the final round poorly, bogeying the first two holes. But she birdied the next three to take the lead, birdied the 10th and then coasted with eight straight pars to take the title.

Joel Grey: from cabarets to 'Cabaret' to cabarets

By Murray Olderman
STATELINE, Nev. — He's such a little guy and the delicately planned face with its bobbed nose is so ageless that Joel Grey automatically senses what's on the mind of those people out there in the bluish haze on the other side of the lights. It's a cabaret. And a cabaret is almost like home to him — whether the cabaret is in Cleveland or New York or Las Vegas or ping all over his head, Joel Grey (he Katz) has done a lot of living. And has a lot to remember. He remembers, for instance, that night in Buffalo, N.Y., more than a couple of decades ago. He was 20 years old. "I had just played the Copa in New York," he reminisces. "I was big. Big. And they sent me to Buffalo, Buffalo." "I laid such an egg, some drunk out there yelled out at father, Mickey Katz, was in it first as a Jewish dialectician out of Cleveland who moved west to California. Though Joel talks about an interest in art, his conversation always veers to performing. He has done it all. There have been a lot of brilliant kids like him. Multiple talents — singers, dancers, comedians. Mickey Rooney, Donald O'Connor. But none had ever won an Oscar until he did, for his portrayal of a 1920s Berlin master of ceremonies in "Cabaret."

"I am," says this slight little man, "an actor first." Yet he has just finished a song-and-dance routine, with a little bit of patter, that for 45 minutes diverted the 1500 people in the nightclub from the blackjack tables and the crap tables. "All my early success," he continues, "was as a kid in night clubs. And it hurt me. I never could get work as an actor. There's a stigma attached to working in cafes."

"I also got an ulcer." So one day when he was past 30 and already had a family and didn't want to put up with drunks who wanted "the broads back on," he just quit the fast-buck circuit and enrolled in the Neighborhood Playhouse in southern California to prove he could be a straight dramatic performer.

"I made a commitment to my own destiny," he says softly. "I did it for 10 years. It was very difficult. It was like burying myself."

And then a man named Fred Ebb came along and wrote "Cabaret" and Joel Grey had his chance — first on Broadway, then in the motion picture — and he was a star, a guy who could do more than a quick turn-in a different city every week. So what's he doing back here in a night club again?

The smile is a little condescending. "After 'Cabaret' it was my own choice. Working like this now enhances everything else. Today the desirable thing is to work in as many media as possible. This is only good. I feel very fulfilled."

And if some night he feels fed up, that there's more to being a performer than dragging people into gambling casinos, he has an out. All his personal appearance contracts, he insists, have cancellation clauses that allow him to quit if a good acting part comes along. Maybe when they do the life of Willie Shoemaker— (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

even here in the Alpine festung of Lake Tahoe. So when he starts prancing across the stage in kinetic gait, swinging his arms, projecting energy, flashing his eyes, pursing his lips in rehearsed gestures, he's ready for them. There's no gimmicky lead-in. He stops and stares down at them. "I know that all of you," he begins into his cordless mike, "have two questions." "The answer to the first is five feet six inches." That's how tall he is. "The answer to the second is July, 1931." That's how old he is. "Now let's get on with the show." For a guy who looks so youthful, with a pencil-slim body line and kinky hair flop-me when it got to be two o'clock in the morning, with a blizzard raging outside — he yelled, 'Get the bum off and get the broads back on.' He winces. The rejection still pains him. The worst experience of his entertainment career, he says. He's down in the bowels of the gambling casino, under the night club stage, and he has his own private corner dressing room with the TV set and the couch and the catered snacks. Like a star should. It's between shows. His daughter, Jennie, who is 13 and as tall as he is, is drawing rainbows on a big pad. Joel is wearing blue jeans and clogs, the kind that are open at the heel and thick wooden-soled. Show business is his shtick, his whole world, because his

Clean furnace cuts fuel bills

By Mr. Fix
If your furnace is not running at its maximum efficiency you are wasting fuel and money and not getting the kind of comfort you should from a heating plant. But if your heating plant is cleaned and checked professionally every fall your problems should be small.

The thermostat is the one control most people are familiar with. The thermostat switches the furnace on automatically when the temperature drops below the level at which you have set it. A well-insulated house adequately weatherstripped and caulked should be comfortable with a thermostat setting of 70 or 72 degrees. During the night you can lower that setting by five to 10 degrees, but not more. Lowering it will save you five to 10% on your heating bill. If you lower the setting too much, however, you wipe out the savings because it takes longer and uses more fuel to get your house warm again.

If people feel chilly drafts they will turn up the thermostat and waste fuel. Seal off all drafts as much as possible. Keep lamps and television sets away from the thermostat. The heat from these keeps the air around the control warm even though the rest of the house may be cold. The warm air prevents the thermostat from clicking on. If temperatures drop too low before the control goes on, or too high before it goes off, the thermostat isn't functioning properly. Take off the cover and blow out the dust. Pass a piece of plain paper between the contacts to wipe off dirt. If the thermostat is 10 years old or older consider replacing it.

Modern heating systems have motors. There is a burner motor on an oil-fired system, a blower motor on a forced air furnace, a circulator motor on a hot water system. Make sure these are properly lubricated. Two or three drops a year may be all they need. On a blower system, lubricate the fan. Check fan belts for wear. It's a good idea to keep a spare.

On warm air systems check the filter. If you can't see through the filter, replace it. Count on replacing filters at least once a month during seasons of peak use. Make sure radiators are clean. Vacuum them regularly. Dust off steam radiators. There's another control beside the thermostat. This is an on-off limit control that prevents the blower or circulator from going on before the air or water are hot. It also keeps the blower or circulator on for a while after the furnace has gone off to continue distributing the warm air or water for a few minutes. This control is on the furnace and the serviceman should check and adjust it in the fall. Find out where it is and how to make simple adjustments yourself when he services the furnace. Books

By United Press International
The Honorary Consul, by Graham Greene. (Simon & Schuster, $7.95)
Graham Greene, in fine fettle, takes us to an Argentinian backwater to tell his tragic-comic story of revolutionary ideals and deteriorating Englishmen in a Latin environment.

A British official, "The Honorary Consul," is kidnapped by revolutionaries who mistook him for the American ambassador, but threaten to execute him anyway if 10 imprisoned men are not freed. Dr. Eduardo Plarr, an old acquaintance, is drawn into the mess after he calls to treat the consul.

As usual, Greene writes superbly and is generally gloomy about the human condition. Also, as usual, the contradictions of religion and injustices of life are essential elements in the story. "In a wrong society," one of the revolutionaries tells Dr. Plarr, "the criminals are the honest men."

The dialogues between Plarr and the various characters often are tedious. There is just a lot of talk. But the book's people are rounded, full human beings with the unexpected twists of character that is Greene's forte.

Particularly interesting is the suffering priest who is struggling with his decision to kill the consul to save the 10 men dying in prison. "A saint would only have to pray, but I have to carry a revolver," he says in explanation. Joan Hanauer (UPI)

I Never Danced at the White House, by Art Buchwald. (Putnam, $6.96)
Pollution. Watergate. Election shenanigans. All tossed together in another marvelous Art Buchwald salad. The ingredients given the humorist-journalist over the last year were ideal for his jabbing style and he made the most of them in the tale of the five Henry Kissingers, the day Pat Nixon received her resignation form and others showing Buchwald at his bounciest.

Marilyn Beck's Hollywood, by Marilyn Beck. (Hawthorn $6.95)
Anyone who thinks Hollywood has vanished into the southern California megalopolis should read Beck's account of recent doings in filmland. Beyond the trite and the changing entertainment business, from a rundown of the skin flicks to whatever happened to Elliott Gould.

Mussolini's Italy: Twenty Years of the Fascist Era, by Max Gallo. (Macmillan, $9.95)
Gallo carefully combines his history of the Fascist state with his biography of its leading character to show both the myth and the reality of each. The result is the kind of history that gives more than places and dates—it also imparts understanding of why it all happened.

IN NOVEMBER ELECTION

Cities Could Gain Financial Relief If Voters Okay Plan

Editor's Note: This is the last of four dispatches detailing the nine proposed constitutional amendments being submitted to Texas voters in a special election Nov. 6.)

By ROLAND LINDSEY
UPI Capitol Reporter
AUSTIN (UPI) — Cities caught in a financial squeeze may get some relief if a proposed constitutional amendment passes Nov. 6 removing the ceiling on property tax rates. But the change could be a pain in the pocketbook for Texas taxpayers.

The amendment is one of nine being voted on in a special election. But because of the constitutional convention which convenes less than 60 days after the public vote, the amendments could be short-lived even, if they win voter approval, since the convention will rewrite the entire constitution.

Amendment No. 8 would remove the constitutional ceiling that limits cities of more than 5,000 population to property taxes of 2.5 per cent of the value of taxable property within the city.

The legislature would then have the responsibility of setting the cities' tax limits, although each municipality would be authorized by the amendment to levy sufficient taxes to pay principal and interest on any bonds voted by its citizens.

Would Help Cities
Proponents of the measure contend it would allow cities to get better rates on bonds issued, and would assure that cities in Texas could live up to their bond obligations.

Opponents argue, however, that cities are already overburdened, and that the amendment would open the door to higher city taxes.

Another of the proposed amendments — listed as No. 9 on the ballot — would grant the legislature authority to give property tax exemptions to non-profit water supply corporations.

A similar amendment was defeated by voters in 1969. The legislature that year attempted to exempt the water supply corporations from property taxes by statute, but the Texas Supreme Court held that invalid and said a constitutional change was required.

Could File Protests
Amendment No. 4 on the Nov. 6 ballot would require any new conservation and reclamation districts being created to notify the counties or cities in which they are located. The other governmental units could then file protests if they desired to legislation creating the districts.

The amendment would also require that legislation creating such districts conform to general laws on the subject.

The new proposal would also empower the legislature to alter the county and district courts' probate jurisdiction in the future by law, and to adopt rules governing the filing, distribution and transfer of probate cases between county and district courts.
