Masked Men Beat Negro, Carve 'KKK' On Chest

Strung Up By Heels

HOUSTON, Tex. (UPI)—Four masked men kidnaped a Negro at random from a Houston street Monday night, eat him with a tire chain laced with "hooks," carved the triple "K" of the Ku Klux Klan on his chest and tomahawked and hanged him up down in a tree.

The Negro was Felton Turner, 27, an unemployed welding worker. Doctors treated his wounds at Jefferson Davis Hospital and pronounced him in "good condition."

The attack upon Turner was the first reported since Negroes became a series of aildown strikes at segregated lunch counters Feb. 27 in Greensboro, N. C.

Sitdowns spread to West Virginia, Ohio, Alabama, Tennessee, Virginia and Texas. The Texas sitdowns, of which there have been three, have all been in Houston, near Texas Southern Negro University.

Capt. Weldon Waycott of the Houston Police Department's homicide squad took personal charge of the hunt for the men who kidnaped Turner, and the FBI entered the case at least indirectly.

"We are maintaining liaison with the police," FBI special agent H. O. Hawkins said. Turner said there were four men when they kidnaped him, but when "KKK" was carved on his body and he was hanged from the tree, three took part. It was believed that the fourth at that point acted as lookout.

They apparently never did intend to kill Turner. He played conscious and they tied him so he could play in the rope that he was able to free himself before the men left the scene.

This was Turner's own account of what happened:

"They had white handkerchiefs over their faces. They ordered me to get into the car and lie on the floor. I offered them my life, but they wouldn't take it. They said they didn't want any money and they had been paid to kidnap a Negro. When I was in the car, they beat me with a chain. It was part of a tire chain and it had hooks on it.

Brainy' Atlas Takes 6,300 Mile Ride

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—A mighty Atlas missile streaked into the sky today carrying the craftiest set of guidance "brains" yet devised for an American intercontinental ballistic missile.

The Soviet premier was reported to be greatly impressed with the American standard of living, cars, drive-ins, ice boxes and housing during his trip here last September.

Though he has boasted Russia will pass the United States economically in a few years, Khrushchev was said to feel privately that this will be a tremendously difficult task.

He was believed to have high respect for U.S. military strength and to concede that this country could devastate Russia in any war. It is said that one man who does not attach great weight to the "missile gap" is Nikita Khrushchev.

Ike May Find A 'New' Khrushchev On Visit

WASHINGTON (UPI)—When he goes to the summit and to Moscow in the next few months President Eisenhower may find a changed Nikita Khrushchev, softened in some ways and hardened in others toward the United States.

The Soviet premier was reported to be greatly impressed with the American standard of living, cars, drive-ins, ice boxes and housing during his trip here last September.

Fog, Rain Cover Texas

By United Press International

Cloudy skies, fog and drizzle covered wide areas of Texas today and temperatures were expected to continue rising slowly.

Only extreme West Texas reported fair skies early today. Drizzle fell throughout most of Central and West Texas east of the Pecos Junction, San Antonio and Laredo reported fog.

The Weather Bureau said the drizzle would end by noon, but scattered showers should develop this afternoon in Central and East Texas. Gradual clearing from the west was expected by late Wednesday.

The state forecasts called for cooler air to move into North Central, Northwest and Southwest Texas Wednesday. Showers were expected for East, South Central, and North Central Texas through Wednesday.

Commission Hears Loading Zone Reports

Pampa city commissioners paid monthly bills in the amount of $18,411.87 at their meeting this morning in City Hall.

Commissioners also voted to recommend two names to the city traffic commission to replace Dale Thut and Bob Banks, who resigned.

Commissioners discussed the report of the committee on loading zones, and voted to notify everyone who has a loading zone at their place of business that if they wish to keep the loading zone they must file a written request with the Commission.

Still Selecting Dalton Jury

Selection of jurors in the Warren Raymond Dalton murder trial was tabled at 6:30 p.m. yesterday, with only four jurors picked.

They are R. R. Sloop, Pampa; Mrs. George F. Saunders, McLean; Shelby J. Ruff, Pampa; and Jim D. Ward, Pampa.

Selection of jurors was refused again this morning. Sheriff Rufe Jordan and Deputy Shirley Nichols were sworn in to find more veniremen, if necessary.

Yesterday's selections used up 31 of 35 veniremen on the list.

School Board In Secret Meeting

Another in a continuing series of secret school board meetings was held yesterday afternoon in Pampa Junior High School to discuss written policies of Pampa High School concerning smoking in the building, manner of dress and marriage, among other problems.

As far as could be ascertained, this was all that was discussed at the impromptu "conference," as Superintendent of Schools Knox Kinard described the meeting, to which neither press nor radio was invited.

Present at the 4 p.m. meeting was high school principal, L. J. Edmondson, assistant principal Paul Payne, high school counselors Mrs. Ruby Carps and Miss Evelyn Milam, board members, Kinard and Homer Craig, schools business manager.

The group agreed to leave the above mentioned problems to each school administration and decided against a written policy in such matters.

Rough And Tumble Battle Seen

Intra-Party Disputes Mark First Primary

MANCHESTER, N.H. (UPI)—The nation's first presidential primary in New Hampshire today forecast a rough and tumble election year.

Republicans crossed swords with Democrats. Democrats fought Democrats and both made charges against each other.

Last-ditch campaigning found Vice President Richard M. Nixon repudiating statements made by his campaign manager, Gov. Wesley Powell. Powell had charged Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts, Nixon's Democratic rival, with being soft on Communism and favoring recognition of Red China.

Kennedy denied the charges and Nixon issued a statement saying both he and Kennedy were "unalterably opposed" to Communism.

Powell stuck by his charges and called Nixon's statement "ill advised." Kennedy called on Powell to resign as Nixon's campaign manager following "that kind of repudiation."

Kennedy also had a brush with his Democratic opponent, Paul C. Fisher, at the University of New Hampshire where Kennedy was scheduled to make an address. Fisher demanded equal time.

When Kennedy finished speaking, the stage curtain dropped as Fisher rose to speak. Kennedy interceded and the curtain was raised to allow Fisher to address the group.

Sen. Norris Cotton (R-N.H.) said he considered Kennedy a "patriotic man" and predicted he would poll a heavier than normal vote for the Democrats.

No Strong Action Against Cubans

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The State Department was reported reluctant today to take any stronger action against Cuba than the verbal dressing down given by Secretary of State Christian A. Herter.

Informed sources said Premier Fidel Castro's latest anti-American charges had not changed the administration's view that economic reprisals would do more harm than good.

The administration feels, it was said, that any economic crack-down on Cuba would hurt the people rather than the Castro regime and might alienate other Latin American countries.

Herter Monday denounced as "baseless" Castro's implied charge that U.S. officials were behind the explosion of a munitions ship in Havana harbor Friday.

He told Cuban Charge d'Affaires Enrique Patterson that Castro's "unfounded and irresponsible" remarks had made the United States "increasingly obligated to question" the good faith of the Castro regime's claims of wishing to improve U.S.-Cuban relations.

Press Pouring Out A Steady Blast At U.S.

HAVANA (UPI)—Cuba's pro-government press, television and sound trucks in the streets kept up a steady barrage of anti-American attacks all through Monday.

The attacks focused mainly on Premier Fidel Castro's indirect charge that the United States was to blame for the explosion of the French munitions ship La Coubre in Havana harbor last week. The charge was denied by the State Department.

Anti-American spokesmen went as far back as 1956 to blame President Eisenhower for offering condolences when Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza was assassinated, and for admitting the fatally wounded Nicaraguan to a U.S. hospital in the Panama Canal Zone.

Participants in an afternoon-long telephone sought to discredit Ramon Jimenez Rebolivar, a radio commentator who said Castro's charge might be premature, by hinting that he was involved in the murder of an alleged ex-mistress 28 years ago.

President To Speak Tonight

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Eisenhower is expected to appeal to the nation tonight for better understanding of Latin America to strengthen the bonds of friendship within the hemisphere.

The President will deliver a 15-minute report at 7 p.m. e.s.t. over all major radio-TV networks on his two-week trip to Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Uruguay and Puerto Rico. He returned to Washington Monday.

Eisenhower may give Republican congressional leaders a preview of his speech at a White House conference today.

He will meet with them at 8:30 a.m. e.s.t. to discuss the legislative situation.

Senate Democrats in the House planned a strategy session today to map their fight against civil rights legislation in their chamber. There has been speculation that some House-passed bill might be the solution to the Senate deadlock.

Others favored waiting until hoped-for public displeasure with the talkathon built up more backing for their attempt to cut off the debate.

The new all-inertial guidance system was a "passenger" only on the scheduled 6,300-mile flight over the Atlantic Ocean. Experts called it an "important step forward" in development of the Atlas as America's most formidable war weapon.

Irked At Filibuster Tactics

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson irked by Southern filibuster tactics, today designed to wear down and worry the Dixie forces.

However, Johnson was understood to be prepared to let the Southerners talk for at least another week or so before trying to choke off the million word talkathon with a rarely used cloture petition.

Johnson's new plan was designed to keep Southerners close to the floor day and night. The Southern strategy has been to leave only two or three Dixie lawmakers in the chamber and then demand a quorum call through the night to rout out civil rights backers.

Dipping into his parliamentary bag of tricks, Johnson had the Senate vote at 4 a.m. to adjourn for five minutes. But the vote had no significance because the five minutes was up before the roll call was completed.

In another "keep 'em guessing" maneuver, Johnson walked about the chamber asking lawmakers if they were ready to vote for cloture.

It was known that he planned other votes in the small hours of the morning to keep the Southerners close to the floor. As part of the same strategy, Sen. Kenneth B. Keating (R-N.Y.) raised the question of invoking a little-known rule deducting a senator's pay for each day he is not present.

Senate liberals were agreed to try a cloture move but were split over when to make the attempt. Some civil rights backers in both parties felt the gear effort should be made immediately, even if it meant failure for the present.

Others favored waiting until hoped-for public displeasure with the talkathon built up more backing for their attempt to cut off the debate.

Southern Democrats in the House planned a strategy session today to map their fight against civil rights legislation in their chamber. There has been speculation that some House-passed bill might be the solution to the Senate deadlock.

Dairy Products, Ham In Plentiful Supply

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department has placed these items high on the plentiful foods list for April:

Cranberry products — to lighten and brighten any meal or odd-hour snack. Abundant stocks of sauce and tangy juice are available.

Ham — Traditional for Easter will be plentiful, along with other pork items and broiling or frying chickens.

Other plentifuls — milk and dairy products, eggs, shrimp, rice, carrots from Texas, California, and Arizona, "sugary" dates, and canned freestone peaches.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department advises gardeners to roll out the welcome mat for the lady beetle when she shows up in the spring.

The lady beetle helps keep the garden clean by eating destructive aphids, scales, and other soft-bodied plant-feeding insects. Both the larva and the adult lady beetle devour the fast-multiplying aphids.

The most familiar lady beetles are bright reddish-yellow with one or more black spots on each wing cover and the black ones, which have one or more red spots. Less well known are the numerous tiny black varieties.

Many of the lady beetles are native to the United States. But one notable import, the small, reddish-brown Australian lady beetle, has done a fine job of fighting the cottony-cushion scale on U.S. fruit trees. The department said this Australian beetle was imported to help save the California citrus industry from destruction by plant pests — and she did the job.

Velo 'T-Man' Proposition

Members of the City Traffic Commission met yesterday at noon in the Fine Room of the Pampa Hotel.

The group held a brief discussion on whether to put the "T-Man" program into effect; then voted unanimously against it. The "T-Man" program is one discussed some time ago at both the city traffic commission and city commission meetings, whereby persons would observe and report unofficially on another person on traffic violations.

A committee composed of George Thut, Bob Hudson and Claude Wilson was appointed to study traffic and parking needs adjacent to Pampa schools, and the group was directed by Traffic Commission Chairman James Hart to report at the next monthly meeting.

Three persons escaped injury early this morning when a police car on an emergency run, and a private automobile crashed at the intersection of Hobart and Foster Sts.

According to investigating officers, the police car, driven by Patrolman Ralph Almqvist, had just received an emergency call to a cafe on Foster and was turning onto Foster from Hobart. The police car, reported to be traveling approximately 15 miles per hour, skidded on ice and crashed into the side of an automobile driven by Mrs. Helen Sims Cain, 1417 E. Francis.

Conner said the boys are also being questioned about the burglary last night of Stapleton's Book and Saddle Shop on E. Frederic, where 10 pocket knives and two pairs of boots were taken.

Panel Discusses Topic Of Education At PTA

The program discussion "Education Whose Responsibility?" was introduced by Mrs. Derrel Hogsett of the Woodrow Wilson PTA meeting held Thursday evening in the school auditorium. Panelists were Josephine Williams, fourth-grade teacher; Jay Channel, teacher; Mary Ellen Church of Christ; Mrs. Mae Mae Walters, junior high student counselor; and Mrs. M. Sims, parent.

The first speaker, Mrs. Williams, said that "a teacher's responsibilities are many, but they can be successfully fulfilled with the help of parents and the community. Almost all children who do poor school work come from homes where there is no interest in school work. The foundation for good school work is laid at home from the minute of the child's birth."

She continued, "Parents who do not read and who read to their children seldom complain that 'Johnny can't read.' In homes where there are books and magazines; where visits to the library are routine; children are eager to learn to read."

"On the foundations that parents build at home, teachers must carry on with responsibilities as trainers of children. Teachers appreciate children who are sent to school with an attitude of trust and confidence toward their teachers and the things they are being taught. I believe that teachers can fulfill their responsibilities, if parents send youngsters to school each morning mentally alert, physically fit, spiritually inclined and properly disciplined. Mrs. Williams concluded by saying, "Let us keep the P and T in PTA working together."

Minister Channel, the next speaker, said that Webster's dictionary gave this definition of education: "discipline and growth does not come from the classroom entirely; it involves the home, the whole and total environment of the child. A self-educated person is one who educates himself and anyone who is educated did it himself. A person must have religious and social training to develop into a good citizen, who can rise to the responsibility of our age. From Luke 2:52, he quoted: "And Jesus advanced in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and men."

Mrs. Walters, student counselor, said, "The responsibility is my response to the ability given to me by God. If we adults will assume our responsibilities, then our youth will assume theirs. Quoting from a passage from Texas Declaration of Independence, Mrs. Walters read: "It has failed to establish a public system of education, although possessed of almost boundless resources and although it is anxious in political science that unless a people are educated and enlightened it is idle to accept the continuance of civil liberty or the capacity of self government."

She went on to say that John Dewey once said, "Since learning is something the pupil has to do himself for himself, the initiative lies within the learner; the teacher is the guide and director; he steers the boat, but the energy that propels, must come from those who are learning."

In closing Mrs. Walters said that "It is the job of the school to give facts and methods, but parents can instill the will to learn."

Mrs. Sims, mother of three sons and one daughter, began her talk on the parent's responsibility by saying that it was her responsibility to send her children to school mentally alert, physically fit, spiritually inclined and properly disciplined. She said that no home failed to put its signature on the child, whether it is a good home or a bad one. She closed by saying, "If I create the proper atmosphere at home, I have gone a long way toward fulfilling my part as a parent in Education. . . Who Responsibility?"

During the business meeting conducted by Mrs. E. A. McLennan, she announced the City Council sponsored study course will have a meeting on Mar. 10, in Sam Houston School.

Mrs. Helen Davis' fifth grade was announced the winner in room count; Mrs. Allen Coker's second grade, second; Mrs. W. A. Rankin's fifth grade, third.

Special guests welcomed at the meeting were Mrs. James Lewis; PTA District 19 president Mrs. Julian Key, City Council PTA president; Mrs. E. L. Henderson distributed questionnaires asking what type

DEAR ABBY . . .

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I've got mother-in-law trouble. But not the kind you usually hear of. I am 32 years old and my mother-in-law is in her middle forties.

She kisses me hello and good-bye when I am only going into the next room. She cuddles up to me and wants me to dance with her. And the look in her eye is not maternal. My wife thinks her mother is only kidding. But, Abby, she is NOT kidding. I am afraid to be alone with her. How do I chill off the old lady without starting a family fight?

SCARED

DEAR SCARED: I have yet to meet the 32-year-old man who couldn't run faster than his mother-in-law. Be your own sweet self but don't over do it. It still takes two to tango.

DEAR ABBY: I have an encouraging message for those readers who are married to wife-beaters. Get a nice, big dog. It doesn't have to be pedigree. Any hound of programs members would like next year.

Floyd Smith, school principal, expressed appreciation in behalf of faculty members and school employees for the baked goods which had been given them this week by the PTA.

Mr. Smith, as chairman of the nominating committee, submitted a slate of officers, which were elected by the group present as follows: Mmes. Sam Goodlett, president; E. L. Henderson, vice president; Jay Lickey, secretary; Bill Sims, treasurer; Larry Parsley, historian; Buri Graham Jr., parliamentarian; John Bewer, city council delegate.

One nomination was made from the floor for Mrs. Derrel Hogsett for City Council representative; buy on written ballot Mrs. McLennan and Mrs. Brewer carried the majority of votes.

Dope prize was won by Mrs. Kenneth Walter.

will do as long as he's intelligent enough to have loyalty to the person who feeds him. I feed mine three pounds of horsemeat a day. But he's worth his weight (110 pounds) in horsemeat.

My husband has a very mean temper and used to take it out on me with regular beatings. Since I've had this dog, everything has changed. If any husband so much as raises his voice to me, the dog lets out a low, angry growl and displays a splendid set of long canine teeth. Then my husband backs off.

PROTECTED

DEAR PROTECTED: Why not try to find out the cause of your husband's bark rather than depend on your dog's bite? A wife who needs a dog to protect her against her husband doesn't know the "art" of what she should.

DEAR ABBY: We have some good friends who visit us frequently. They have a child who is intelligent, pretty and completely obnoxious. She barks, squeals, and runs around the floor on all fours. When she is told to be quiet she throws herself at her parents, kicking, biting and butting them with her head. They have absolutely no control over her, but brag in front of the child about how "rough and tough" she is.

Would you, for the child's sake, tell the parents that they should not allow this otherwise lovely child to grow up like a wild animal? Or should we break off the friendship with the parents?

DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: For some strange reason, most parents can accept any kind of criticism—except that which concerns their children. Tell them how you feel, but be prepared to lose their friendship.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MRS. M.B.A.: Don't try to fight fire with fire. Fight fire with water, and I don't mean tears. One heaping bucketful should cool him off.

What's your problem? For a personal reply, write to Abby in care of this paper and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Send for Abby's pamphlet, WHAT EVER Y' TEEN - AGER WANTS TO KNOW, in care of this paper. Enclose a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 25 cents in coin.

Dual Winner

Miss Joyce Prock won first in two categories in the Piano Festival held Saturday at West Texas State College in Canyon. Entered in Class II, Miss Prock placed first in both solo playing and sight reading. Her solo was Golliwog's Coke Walk (Debussy). She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Prock, 1320 Duncan and piano student of Mrs. Fidelia Yoder. She was one of ten students in the Panhandle area, out of 200 entries, who earned this dual honor.

Sleep Lulling Advice Offered By Winkin', Blinkin' And Nod Expert

Woman To Woman
By PATRICIA MCCORMACK
United Press International
NEW YORK (UPI) — Married men and single women have the most trouble slipping off to the land of winkin', blinkin' and nod at night.

Norman Dine, whose business is putting people to sleep, said so in an interview. His say-so is based on 30 years in the sandman role. His sleep-lulling advice and contraptions issue forth from Dine's "Sleep Center" in New York City.

The "professor of beducation" sized up the problems of married men and single women.

"Apparently," he said, "they have problems so difficult to solve that the problems encroach on the right to sleep. The underlying cause of the insomnia is an inability to solve pressing personal or job problems. Some of the problems are emotional."

Married women and bachelors, as Dine figures it, have fewer of the problems that plague the problem sleepers.

Through the Light Sleepers' League of America, Dine has been passing out this formula for a good night's sleep:

Create a sleeping room that will minimize physical tension;

Select a bed and accessories that will minimize physical tension;

Release your physical tension before retiring.

Among other things Dine invented a push-button bed with a split personality. It is a king-size double bed that—at the touch of a button—becomes twin beds.

"It must be exactly the right warmth—98 degrees—as in nature's prenatal bath," the lady says. "Relax in it for just 20 minutes, no more and no less. Then pat yourself dry, don't rub, and slip right into bed."

More than 2,000 persons ring up the Lullaby Lady, daily.

It was invented to response to a request from a married woman some years ago—and exactly to her specifications.

Ten A Year
The first time around, the bed was a custom and one-of-a-kind affair. Dine said he sells 10 of the $900 beds a year now.

The "sandman" has been campaigning for the sleep rights of married couples. "Every married person," he said, "has a right to sleep, peacefully, with his or her mate."

Each partner, he said, is entitled to six inches of uncontested space on each side and at the foot. This requires a bed at least five feet wide.

Husbands usually are more expansive than wives and the solution in most cases is a duplex bed—a 54-inch bed for him and a 42-inch bed for her. The beds are made up with separate sheets but with common blanket and spread."

Dine also sponsors a Lullaby Lady who helps—via the phone—to send insomnia to dreamland. The Lullaby Lady's number—when dialed—pays off with a one-minute message about the tranquilizing bath Dine invented.

"It must be exactly the right warmth—98 degrees—as in nature's prenatal bath," the lady says. "Relax in it for just 20 minutes, no more and no less. Then pat yourself dry, don't rub, and slip right into bed."

More than 2,000 persons ring up the Lullaby Lady, daily.

Process For De-Salting Sea Water Cheaply May Have All Deserts Blooming In Decade

By RICHARD GERSHMAN
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK (NEA) — A new process developed in Israel for de-salting sea water cheaply may make the world's deserts bloom within the next 10 years.

This is the hope held out by Dr. Alexander Zarchin, a Russian refugee who has been working on the process in Israel since 1956, and David Karr, president of the Fairbanks Whitney Corp., which has the world rights for constructing the plants.

Two such plants are scheduled to be completed in Israel this fall at Elath on the Gulf of Aqaba. Just back from Elath, Karr said each will produce 500,000 gallons a day, at a cost of 40 cents per thousand, "the same cost for drawing fresh water from a well."

The biggest problem in desalination has been getting the cost down to equal the cost of natural water. All of the various methods currently used—distillation, chemicals, the electrical-membrane and freezing—have run from one dollar a thousand up.

The Zarchin process also uses the freezing method, in which the pure water becomes ice and the salts drop down into brine and are pumped out.

The difference in this operation, Karr explains, is "three key parts" — still held secret although the process is patented — which permits the water to be frozen with a much smaller output of energy.

"When we achieve full and regular industrial production," Karr states, "the cost of water under this process should run only 20 cents per thousand gallons."

"Our goal by 1965 is to create enough plants to produce a billion gallons a day of fresh water throughout the world."

If that goal is achieved, and the process can produce water as cheaply as fresh water, it would mean a life and land-saving miracle for millions throughout the world. The water consumption in the U.S. alone is 250 billion gallons a day, and it is expected to reach 600 billion by 1980.

The cost of building a million-gallons-a-day plant, running it and maintaining it over a 20-year period would only be $600,000 to $700,000, Karr estimated.

Since the publication of its December, 1956, agreement with the Israeli Government, the company has received nearly two dozen inquiries from city and national governments. They include Ghana, northern Mexico, Jamaica, Libya, Hong Kong and a French bank representing a French company in the Sahara.

Negotiations also are underway to construct a plant in the southwestern section of the U.S. sometime early in 1962.

Under the agreement signed with the Israeli Government, a jointly owned company was established, registered in Israel, to develop and market the process, with 80 per cent of the stock owned by Fairbanks Whitney and 20 per cent owned by Israel. Fairbanks Morse, a subsidiary of Whitney, and one of the top manufacturers of water and water-pumping equipment, would manufacture the needed materials at its plants in Beloit, Wis., and Kansas City, and assist in constructing the plants.

Zarchin, now 62, developed his first desalination innovation in 1931. The Soviet Army used it to build equipment in desert areas in Turkistan. Then he was high on the list of favorites. The government gave him a medal.

Later the Soviets learned Zarchin had registered another innovation under the initials of a Zionist organization, and he was sentenced to the home of all Soviet fallen angels — Siberia. He was mobilized into the Red Army in World War II, but escaped with his wife to Israel when peace came.

There he continued his work and eventually hand-built a pilot plant near Tel Aviv to test the new process. By September, 1959, the process had been judged successful and the word went out to U.S. manufacturers through the American-Israeli Chamber of Commerce. Israel had no industry of the size that could turn out the plant and equipment needed.

A hurried trip to Tel Aviv by F.W.'s Karr and an engineer, and a peek by the engineer at Zarchin's secret process, convinced both of its value.

'Maverick Margaret' Picks Man With Chin

By TOM A. CULLEN
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

LONDON (NEA) — Princess Margaret was born to defy convention, and now, after a tough struggle, she has at last won the right to be herself.

"This is the feeling here following the announcement that the princess is to marry Anthony Armstrong-Jones, a commoner. Every generation of British royalty, it is pointed out, produces a maverick, one who longs to kick over the royal traces and to express his or her individuality.

Princess Margaret is said to be such a maverick. So is her Uncle David, the Duke of Windsor, who gave up the British throne for "the woman I love." When a re-throw-back to an age when men and women were more independent and less concerned with courting public favor.

Now that the princess has decided for the photographer with no titles in front of his name, the public here is glad that she has remained true to her nature. They are happy that their "Princess Margaret is and will remain a maverick."

The Times of London may think that there is "no recent precedent for the marriage of one so near to the throne outside the ranks of international royalty and the British peerage."

But The Times ignores the Duke of Windsor who, as Edward VIII, was forced to abdicate when it became known that he intended to marry a commoner, Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

In every way 1960 will be a critical year for Margaret.

This coming August the princess will celebrate her 30th birthday. This was supposed to be a confirmation in her spinsterhood, and the press here was getting ready to crown her as an "old maid," or to consign her to a nunnery.

The princess, herself, lent color to the belief that she might end up an old maid by remarking, shortly after the birth of Prince Charles:

"It looks as though I'm destined to be known as 'Charlie's Aunt.'"

Once again the princess has fooled press and public.

From her early childhood — long before the Peter Townsend affair — Princess Margaret was marked out to be different. For one thing, she has a much wider range of interests than is commonly found among royals. Had she not been a princess, Margaret could have made a success in a half dozen careers, according to those who are close to her.

The dutiful round of planting trees and laying corner stones was never really hers, as anyone who has watched her tackle these chores can testify.

Usually she seemed withdrawn, a trait which most attributed to her unhappy love life, after the Townsend episode.

She would probably have been happy as a concert artist, for she is devoted to music, and as much at home listening to opera as she is in enjoying jazz. She might have made a career as a writer, or in any other field connected with the arts.

She is deeply interested in religion, but not merely on the ceremonial side, though she is a regular church goer. Ever since the death of her father, she has sought to relate religion to her own personal problems.

Princess Margaret is not to marry one of the "chinless wonders."

This is one reaction here to Margaret's engagement to photographer Anthony Armstrong-Jones.

The "chinless wonders" are the eligible young Britons with titles and receding jaws with whom the princess has been paired ever since she broke with Group Capt. Peter Townsend four years ago.

The public was slightly nauseated by the "Margaret Set," as these young aristocrats came to be known. They were considered an aimless, ill-mannered lot.

Armstrong-Jones, 29, is a man of considerable charm who has made good in the profession of his own choosing.

He is, besides, good-looking in a conventional way, sandy-haired, blue-eyed and of slight build. He is not much taller than Princess Margaret's five feet two inches.

He is a casual dresser, going in for suede jackets and drain pipe trousers rather than the dark suits and bowler hats which most of the princess' escorts have worn.

Toby's background is described as "upper middle-class with aristocratic connections." All of this is to the good, as far as the British public and press is concerned. As The Guardian points out: "It is a fairy-story romance of the and to those of the people and serves.

This showed particularly when she renounced marriage with Townsend, a suit that was looked upon with disfavor by the Church of England because of the R.A.P.'s divorce.

Now that the princess is to find happiness of her own the nation has cause to rejoice.

young man, looking for his living like countless other young men, who has won the hand of the princess.

"In a world too often harsh and drab, the sudden coming true of the most charming of fairy stories will warm hearts everywhere."

The Daily Express, too, applauds the democratic spirit of the engagement:

"Many outworn traditions are being put aside. The Queen's sister is marrying a young man who has made his way in the world by his own talents and industry."

"What could be more in tune with an age when the wind of change is blowing and work is honored among men and women?"

Actually, Tony is not exactly working-class. He went to the right school for mixing in royal circles — Eton. And in 1948 he went on to Cambridge University, but after two years he was forced to leave, having failed his exams.

Tony learned his trade from Baron, the court photographer, who died in 1956. In Baron's studio young Armstrong-Jones met the famous, and they, in turn, began to take notice of his work.

It was not until he photographed the Duke of Kent on his 21st birthday, that the Queen's future brother-in-law became firmly established as a society photographer. How did Tony wangle that all-important commission?

"I just wrote to the duke as one old Etonian to another and asked for a sitting," he explained afterwards.

Tony had known the princess for over a year, and their friendship had already ripened into romance when he took the official photograph of Princess Margaret for her 29th birthday last August.

The picture was harshly criticized by the press. One critic described it as a "somber, largely out-of-focus study, which seems a poor way of picturing a beautiful girl."

Neither the critic nor anyone else had any way of knowing that it was the study of a young woman in love. It is unlikely that the press will have the opportunity again to criticize Tony Armstrong-Jones' pictures. He's already backed up his photographic business.

Political Electricity

In a year jam-packed with high-voltage election issues, the quiet death of one not-so-old partisan dispute has attracted little notice. This is the atomic power issue, summed up by the Democratic platform of 1956 in these words: 'The United States is lagging in the world race for nuclear power, international prestige, and world markets.'

The change of heart came into focus only this week as the Joint Committee opened its annual hearings on the state of the atomic energy industry. Three major developments, it turns out, have helped to cool off what was once a super-heated issue. These involved changes in foreign programs, in relations between the Joint Committee and AEC, and in domestic commercial power projects.

'The American Earth'

"This is the American Earth" has reached our desk. This is a beautiful book by Ansel Adams and Nancy Newhall which, in the poetry and majesty of its story and illustration, presents a most effective piece of propaganda. The book was prepared under the sponsorship of the Sierra Club of California, which is the society founded by John Muir, the great naturalist, back in 1892.

'Why The U.S.S.R. Must Succeed'

Here is the continuation of Frank Chodorov's explanation as to why so many of the government agencies are trying to gear-us-into the belief that Russia is likely to succeed. Under the heading of "The Common Sense Approach", he writes: "Since we who have to foot the bill are in no position to challenge the information or misinformation emanating from the Kremlin—and supported by American propaganda—the best we can do is to fall back on common sense and principle. We know from the evidence of the ages that slaves are poor producers. That is the same as saying that when the worker is deprived of the right to possess and enjoy the fruits of his labor—which is private property—he has no interest in production, and his output will tend toward the minimum of mere existence. That is a universal truth. True, he may produce a little more to avoid the lash of the master's whip, but that little more cannot constitute prosperity. Therefore, since the denial of property is the basic tenet of communism, we can assert without fear of contradiction that Russian production is necessarily limited and that there is no possibility of its matching capitalistic production. There is no competition for us there—unless we persist in going socialistic."

"We know, too, that it is a matter of principle with communists to lie. They have made it plain in all their authentic literature since 'Das Kapital' that truth is anything that promotes the cause of communism, and if a statement favorable to communism is contradicted by fact, the fact must be denied, altered, or hidden. That is dogma with all true communists. Why, then, should we accept any claim they make without demanding supporting evidence, and evidence not of their own making? Would it not be wiser to begin by doubting every statement they make? Taking that as our guide, we should judge every statistic they produce, every promise they make, every word they utter as to its importance to the cause of communism; what may be true to them may not be true at all. "If, on the other hand, we continue to let on the assumption that communists can be believed without question, if we heed our own people who have a vested interest in the 'race' with Russia, what will be the result? We shall spend ourselves into a socialist regime. We shall give our own government more and more power to do with our wealth as the bureaucrats see fit, and in the end our political and economic system will approximate that of the communists. In other words, the communists will match or exceed our accomplishments, not because they have progressed but because we have retrogressed."

This is how Edmund Burke expressed that freedom was based on a moral foundation: "Men are qualified for civil liberty in exact proportion to their disposition to put chains upon their own appetites; in proportion as their love of justice is above their rapacity; in proportion as their soundness and sobriety of understanding is above their vanity and presumption; in proportion as they are more disposed to listen to the counsels of the wise and good, in preference to the flattery of knaves. Society cannot exist unless a controlling power upon the will and appetite is placed somewhere; and the less of it there is within, the more there must be of it without. It is ordained in the eternal constitution of things, that men of intemperate habits cannot be free. Their passions forge their fetters."

Wife Sees Hubby In Every Role But The Right One by HENRY McLEMORE This column is aimed at young men who are about to get married. When a young man is about to get married, he usually is very flustered. He has so many things to think about. Will the ring tarnish or turn green before the honeymoon is over? If he spends that much on the honeymoon, how in the world will he ever be able to buy Mary the carpet sweeper she has her heart set on? Are his in-laws serious about coming for a visit after he and Mary are estabtalents, if any, were those of a porter and — to use a word I despise — a scribbler. I was mistaken. In our years being together she has asked me to do everything but write for newspapers. When a leak develops in the roof, I am the fellow asked to get up there and fix it, shingle that has slipped its moorings. When the sink gets stopped up who does she call? A plumber? No, ma'am. She calls me, and directs that I go to the kitchen and fix things in order again. Who is supposed to make a back yard a Garden of Eden flower? Not a gardener, I can assure you. I am supposed to hold three green thumbs, a green ink finger, and the touch-of-Lady-Burbank. And the truth is, I couldn't grow a turnip with the help of the Department of Agriculture. Oh, yes, I am, in my wife's mind the ideal errand boy. A boy who jumps as strong as those of a limbo and a chest of steel. No distance is too far for me to gallop no weather too bad for me to brave. Young man, please get your "tended's" mind straight on what you are. If you are a judge at cat show tell her that.
