Scott Augustine, right, a graduate of Pampa Learning Center now in the U.S. Navy, visits with PLC lead teacher Betty Beyer about the benefits the alternative high school provided him.

Navy basic training grad grateful for alternative learning center aid

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

When Scott Augustine dropped out of Pampa High School in 1987, his life lacked direction and purpose.

Now, three years later, Augustine says he is a new person, thanks in large part to Pampa Independent School District's alternative high school and the United States Navy.

Augustine graduated from Pampa Learning Center in September. He then joined the Navy and has just completed boot camp.

Following graduation from basic training, Augustine returned to Pampa to prepare for his advanced naval schooling, which begins Dec. 20.

One of his first stops when he got back to Pampa was the PLC to thank his teachers for the opportunity at a second chance.

Looking back on the last several years, Augustine now says that two years as a high school dropout was enough to show him his life was going nowhere.

"I look back and wish I had never dropped out and that I'd continued my education," Augustine said. "Anybody not in school now should get back in. My diploma has really helped me."

He says that most people do not realize the true benefits of a naval career.

"It's a lot easier and a lot better than anybody told me it would be," he said. "It's not as hard as everybody said it would be. Like everything else in life, it's a matter of just putting your mind to it."

Even though the Middle East crisis still presents a threat of war, Augustine is glad he joined the Navy.

"It's scary to think about war, but that is one reason you join the military, to defend your country and fight for the things you believe in," Augustine said. "I hope we don't go to war, but if we do, I'll go, too."

Autopsy scheduled to determine cause, time of death of victim of Alzheimer's

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

An anthropologist has been called in to assist with an autopsy on the remains of Robert French, according to Gray County Sheriff Jim Free.

French's body was recovered Sunday morning by Free and deputies from Gray and Hutchinson County in a heavily wooded area 20 miles north of Skellytown.

Almost two years had passed since the Alzheimer's victim was reported missing by his family in Pampa.

Free said a hunter originally discovered the remains on Sunday, Dec. 2, while he was stalking deer, and reported it to authorities on Saturday, Dec. 8.

Because of the condition of the remains, Free said Dr. Ralph Erdmann, a pathologist, has requested an anthropologist assist in determining time of death and cause.

That autopsy is being conducted in Lubbock.

Because all that was recovered was a skeleton, Free said Erdmann told him typical autopsy procedures would be useless in determining the circumstances surrounding the French death.

French family members were called to Minton-Chatwell Funeral Home in Borger Sunday afternoon to identify a set of keys and remnants of clothing found near the remains.

Free said French's family confirmed the man, who was 66 at the time of his disappearance, was capable of walking for many miles.

"We didn't find any indication of foul play," Sgt. Green said Sunday. "We're going to make sure, though. He disappeared in February and right now I figure he just wandered out there and died of exposure."

"It's way down on the Canadian River bottom 20 miles northeast of Borger," Green said. "The main thing is that it's a real isolated area and was way back under brush and trees. It's back in a slough, so we had to go through water to even get to it."

Investigators are holding out slim hopes that the autopsy might shed some light regarding the mystery of a black Monte Carlo that a witness told authorities gave French a ride on Hwy. 152.

After French disappeared on Feb. 22, 1989, a caller told police they saw a man matching French's description get into such a car on Texas Highway 152 on the eastern edge of Pampa.

Hwy. 152 runs past Skellytown, near the area where French could have begun walking north.

Free and Green said no roads go near the area where the remains were located.

More hostages leaving Iraq, Kuwait, but peace signs fade

By ARTHUR ALLEN
Associated Press Writer

U.S. and British-chartered jets were set to fly most remaining Westerners from Iraq and Kuwait today, and President Bush cited stories told by newly freed hostages as proof of Iraq's "assault on the soul of a nation."

Western diplomats in Baghdad said three chartered Boeing 707 passenger jets would fly from the Iraqi capital to Kuwait City to pick up Westerners stranded there. Later, two Boeing 747s were to depart Baghdad with freed hostages: A U.S. charter headed for Frankfurt, Germany, and a London-bound British charter.

It was too early to say how many Americans would be on today's Iraqi Airways evacuation flights, but diplomats said just one more such flight would be needed, and it would come later in the week.

Not all the estimated 600 U.S. citizens still in the two countries were leaving. Diplomats said about 400 were expected to remain, mainly people with dual U.S.-Iraqi citizenship or American spouses of Iraqi citizens.

In Washington, Bush lashed out at Saddam in a speech clearly aimed at limiting the Iraqi president's publicity gains from releasing the hostages.

"What has happened to Kuwait is more than an invasion," Bush said Monday in the Human Rights Day address. "It is a systematic assault on the soul of a nation."

Iraqi Information Minister Latif Jassim, meanwhile, denied news reports that Baghdad might withdraw from Kuwait if it can keep the southern tip of the Rumailah oil field, which extends for two miles into Kuwait. Preceding Iraq's seizure of Kuwait, Saddam accused Kuwait of over-exploiting the field.

"Kuwait is Iraqi, whether in the past, present or future and we will not compromise one iota on Kuwaiti territory," Jassim said.

In his condemnation of Iraqi atrocities, Bush drew on the reports of some of the hundreds of foreigners who have departed Iraq and Kuwait in Saddam's blanket release. They included hostages held at "human shields" at strategic sites and men who hid out in Kuwait after the Aug. 2 invasion.

More than 150 Americans arrived at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington on Monday, and more than 500 other former hostages flew into London. Other flights carried foreigners to Rome and Amman, Jordan.

While Iraq says the hostage release does not mean it will leave Kuwait, Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz said compromise could be reached on the dates for upcoming high-level talks with the United States.

Aziz was quoted by The New York Times today as saying Saddam was reconsidering his demand that Secretary of State James A. Baker III visit on Jan. 12.

U.S. officials have said Jan. 12 would be too late because it falls three days before the deadline established by the U.N. Security Council for Iraq to quit Kuwait or face the likelihood of being attacked.

President Bush proposed the talks on Nov. 30, a day after the U.N. resolution, and Aziz is to travel to Washington this month for talks with Bush.

The U.S. president plans to have at least 400,000 troops in the gulf by mid-January. The multinational force arrayed against Iraq also includes about 100,000 troops from other nations.

France said Monday it would expand its 6,250-member contingent.

Some 24,000 Marines, the largest troop review the corps has formed this century, received a ceremonial send-off Monday at Camp Lejeune, N.C., as they prepared to join the U.S. force.

A Pentagon source, citing U.S. intelligence reports, said Iraqi troops in and around Kuwait have grown to about 500,000.

One killed, two injured in vehicle rollover

GROOM - One man died and two others were injured in a one-vehicle rollover near Groom Monday.

Charlie Chronister, 36, of Russellville, Ark., was pronounced dead at 8:34 a.m. Monday at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo.

Lyndol Barrett, 40, and Otis Barrett, 11, both remain at Northwest Texas Hospital early today, suffering from injuries sustained in the accident.

The elder Barrett was reported in critical condition at Northwest with massive head and chest injuries, according to a Texas Department of Public Safety spokeswoman said today. The 11-year-old is reported to be in satisfactory condition, she said.

According to a DPS investigation by Trooper Gary Davis of Groom, Lyndol Barrett was driving a 1990 Dodge station wagon westbound on Interstate 40, 15 miles west of Groom, at 6:45 a.m. Monday when he apparently went to sleep at the wheel.

The vehicle veered off the roadway and struck a guard rail, ejecting all three occupants. No seatbelts were being worn at the time of the accident, the DPS reports state.

Reinstitution of draft getting cold shoulder from key lawmakers

By DONNA CASSATA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Mention reactivating the military draft to lawmakers and they treat the term like a four-letter word.

"The last thing we need is a draft," said Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., chairman of the House Veterans' Affairs Committee and a senior member of the Armed Services Committee.

The possibility of reinstating the draft after a 17-year absence has been raised in recent congressional hearings and editorial columns.

Former military officials have suggested that if President Bush decides to use military force to oust Iraq from Kuwait, draft notices should go out immediately to avoid troop shortages.

Lawmakers questioned whether the Pentagon's decision to put a rotation policy on hold and wait before transferring forces in and out of the gulf region would require a draft.

By January, U.S. troops in the area will total more than 440,000 of the nearly 2.1 million active duty forces worldwide.

The Selective Service System remains in operation and all men must register with it within 30 days of their 18th birthdays, but actual conscription ended in 1973 with the U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam.

Members of Congress with a powerful say on the issue, however, said in interviews last week that there is little or no support for a draft among their constituents at home or lawmakers on Capitol Hill.

"It wouldn't fly anywhere. It wouldn't get off the ground," said Montgomery, a decorated Army veteran of World War II and the Korean war.

Montgomery, best known as the father of the latest GI Bill that expanded health, education and housing benefits for military personnel, said the all-volunteer force is "doing the job."

"The last thing we need is a draft. There are still a lot of units to call up. It would really put the country in uproar. It's really not necessary at all," Montgomery said.

Two weeks ago, the United Nations backed a U.S.-crafted resolution that authorized the use of military force to drive Iraq from Kuwait if President Saddam Hussein fails to withdraw his troops by Jan. 15.

Sen. John McCain of Arizona, ranking Republican on the Senate Armed Services subcommittee on manpower and personnel, suggested that those mentioning a draft are using the issue to undercut Bush's policy.

"People who are the opponents of action in the Persian Gulf are raising it as a straw man," said McCain, who believes the present U.S. force is sufficient. "I don't think the American people want reinstatement of a draft and the specter would contribute to their reluctance to support the president's policy in the Persian Gulf."

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, chairman of the manpower and personnel subcommittee, said he opposes a draft for now but that the United States must keep its options open if the crisis persists.

Rep. Norman Dicks, D-Wash., a member of the House Appropriations defense subcommittee, said another situation - a drawn-out war in the gulf - might require reactivation of the draft.

"Should hostilities break out and go on for a while, I see a scenario where people start saying consider a draft," Dicks said.

Russian parliament votes to take part in negotiations for new Union Treaty

By ANN IMSE
 Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) - The Russian parliament voted today to take part in negotiations for a new Union Treaty that Mikhail S. Gorbachev says is needed to hold the Soviet Union together, the state news agency Tass reported.

But Russian Federation President Boris N. Yeltsin cautioned the Gorbachev administration against undue haste and said it was trying to "rush the signing of the treaty."

The vote in the Russian Federation Congress of People's Deputies marked a small victory for Gorbachev.

It committed the largest Soviet republic to be "a full-fledged subject of the renewed U.S.S.R. on the basis of a new Union Treaty." But Yeltsin has insisted the national government must agree to hand over broad economic and political powers to the 15 Soviet republics before he will sign the treaty.

The resolution passed by Russian lawmakers gives Yeltsin strong leverage in negotiations with Gorbachev, because it asserts the right of each republic to self-determination and gives the central government responsibility for defense, state security and foreign policy.

The draft proposed by Gorbachev would retain broader powers for the central government, including control over transportation and energy supplies.

Yeltsin has insisted that Russia, which contains most of the Soviet land mass and has most of its natural resources, should control oil, natural gas, gold and diamond supplies on its own territory.

Other republics have made similar demands as they seek greater powers within their borders.

The Russian parliament decided to appoint a commission of lawmakers to work with representatives of the central government and other republics to work on the draft Union Treaty. No date has been set for its completion.

Gorbachev has urged Communist leaders to bolster his campaign to pass a Union Treaty, although it would drop the word "socialist" from the country's name and replace it with "sovereign."

The president, who also heads the Communist Party, urged its Central Committee on Monday to create a "strong political desire for the preservation and renewal of the union."

"What is profitable for separatists is absolutely fatal for the majority of workers," Gorbachev said. The meeting was closed to journalists, and a text of his speech was carried later by Tass.

Gorbachev's draft treaty, which would replace a 1922 document, envisions changing the country's name from "Union of Soviet Socialist Republics" to "Union of Sovereign Soviet Republics."

Several republics already have dropped "Soviet Socialist" from their names as a rejection of decades of Soviet Communism.

Hannah named for secretary of state post

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
 Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov.-elect Ann Richards and her new secretary of state appointee, John Hannah, said Texas lawmakers will pass ethics reform early in the legislative session that begins Jan. 8.

"I believe the votes are there, and the sympathy is there and we will see reform legislation pass very early on," Richards said.

Hannah, a former lawmaker who helped pass sweeping state ethics reforms in 1973, said, an ethics bill is "something that needs to mull over, comma by comma, line by line over a long period of time with a lot of people being involved before you attempt to get it passed."

But, then he added, "I think the Legislature could pass something within a month or two."

Richards said Hannah, 51, will have a hand in ethics reform legislation.

His appointment comes at a time when a Travis County grand jury is investigating one of the state's largest law firms, legislators and lobbyists.

Neither Hannah nor Richards would comment on the investigation, which includes House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth.

Hannah said he will meet with Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle to discuss problems in the current laws, which Earle has complained contain large loopholes.

Hannah, a Tyler attorney, has served as U.S. attorney from Houston and state district attorney in Angeline County.

He was elected to the Legislature in 1966 and served three terms.

In 1973, he was enlisted by former House Speaker Price Daniel Jr. and helped pass far-reaching ethics legislation in the wake of the Sharpstown stock and loan scandals.

Hannah also has served as legal counsel to the public interest group Common Cause and in 1982 lost a bid for state attorney general in the Democratic Party primary against Jim Mattox.

During the campaign, Hannah worked primarily in East Texas for Richards' election.

Hannah said he will take office after Richards' Jan. 15 inauguration.

If confirmed by the Senate, Hannah will succeed George Bayoud who was appointed by Gov. Bill Clements in June, 1989. The position currently pays $72,549 per year.

The secretary of state is the chief election officer and also enforces portions of the ethics laws.

Periodically, all elected officials and candidates must file reports with the secretary's office that list their campaign contributions and expenditures.

Some producers upset by use of 'light, sweet'

DALLAS (AP) - Oil traders' slippery use of language has made a sticky mess for them among some West Texas producers.

The nation's busiest oil market, the New York Mercantile Exchange, in August asked traders and reporters to refer to the U.S. benchmark oil as "light, sweet crude" instead of "West Texas Intermediate." The change reflects the diversity of oil traded at NYMEX, exchange officials have said.

For years, the daily price of oil has been called West Texas Intermediate, or WTI, because it is the most commonly produced U.S. grade of oil.

"People got used to hearing West Texas Intermediate and they know what it is," Glenn Brant, chairman of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and an independent producer, said Monday.

"We'd like to keep the previous designation," said Harry Spannaus, the group's executive director. "It identifies where the majority of the country's oil comes from."

NYMEX officials pressed for the terminology change because 10 crude grades, including WTI, make up the market's futures contracts.

All 10 grades meet the oil industry's standard for "light" and "sweet." The terms refer to the oil's hydrogen-carbon mix and sulphur.

A contractor who executes a trade may get any one of the 10 grades, not necessarily WTI, said NYMEX spokeswoman Nachamah Jacobovits. Seven of the 10 grades are domestic crudes that are delivered in Cushing, Okla.

"It's still for practical purposes the West Texas crude," said John Lichtblau, president of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation in New York. He said the main change is one of perception for traders, who may now think there is more flexibility in the kind of oil sold.

Many newspapers in Texas have kept the WTI designation and some oil industry representatives in the state didn't know the change had occurred.

"It didn't even dawn on me that it had changed," said Morris Burns of the West Central Texas Oil and Gas Association in Abilene. "I had not heard anything about it."

Former hostage Gary Carr hugs family friend Nancy Jones after arriving Monday at DFW International Airport.

Three Texans come home from Persian Gulf

By SUSAN HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Writer

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Three Texas hostages returned to the arms of their family and friends after being held captive for four months — thinner and grayer, but willing to return to the Middle East if their jobs demand it.

"Nobody's going to tell me what to do just because they've got a gun," said an emotional Gary Carr, 46, as he greeted a crowd of about 40 at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport shortly after 10 p.m. Monday.

"If he goes again, I'm going again," said Carr's wife, Willie. "We're going to grow old together."

Among those greeting Carr were his parents, P.C. and Edna Carr of Aspermont; sons Jarrod, 22, and Jon, 19, and 21-year-old daughter Heather LaFon; and 20-month-old grandson Trey. Carr, an OGE Drilling Co. supervisor from North Richland Hills, said he was held at a chemical plant and two different dams in Iraq.

"I was not beaten, I was not starved to death. I was held, I was not allowed to communicate with my family," Carr said. "So other than mental anguish I was treated quite well."

But he said he lost 38 pounds during captivity. "It's a great diet. A little rough on the nerves, though," he said.

When asked how it felt to be home, Carr said: "If you got your foot out of a bear trap in one piece, how would you feel?"

The former hostages from Texas were among 152 Americans who left Baghdad on Sunday. They spent the night in Frankfurt, Germany, before landing in Washington on Monday. Last week, the Iraqi parliament voted to allow the 8,000 American, European and Japanese hostages to go free.

About 45 minutes after Carr arrived on an American Airlines flight, two other Texas hostages — Charles Amos of Harmony and Rainard Walterscheid of Jacksboro — landed at DFW on a Delta flight.

A group of about 60 people, carrying flowers, banners and yellow balloons, greeted the two men as they returned from captivity.

Walterscheid, 53, a Santa Fe Drilling Co. oil worker, said he never feared for his safety, although he did lose 23 pounds. He was held with five British captives — whom he said he "aggravated the hell out of" — at a telecommunications center about 40 miles north of Baghdad.

Walterscheid's wife, Marjorie, met her husband at the airport with daughter Raina, 11.

"I'm really upset because he's skinnier than I am," said Mrs. Walterscheid. "His hair is gray."

"I never was mistreated," Walterscheid said. "What you'd call the worst part of it was being cooped up."

"I just wasn't worried. You let stuff like that worry you, you'll go crazy," he said. "You can't give up the ship."

Mrs. Walterscheid said she had no special plans for the homecoming. "We're just going to take it one day at a time, do whatever he wants."

Santa Fe Drilling Co. foreman Charles Amos, 59, of Harmony, near Tyler, said he had walked and played pool to pass his time in captivity, most of which was spent at an electric power station 60 miles south of Baghdad. He said he wasn't frightened after the initial invasion on Aug. 2, and had not been threatened or abused in captivity.

"I didn't feel like I was in any danger," Amos said. "The main concern was to get back home with the family, and we'll sort all this out later."

"He looks great. He feels great," said Amos' wife, Sarah, as she hugged her husband. "We're going to try to go back to a quiet life and not let this happen again."

But Amos' daughter, Karen Lange, 23, said she would support her father if he decided to return to work in the Middle East. "It's going to be hard, but he's a grown man," she said.

Steve Martin, 13, of Liberty City said he was glad Amos, his uncle, had returned, so the two could go deer hunting again.

"I've hardly been hunting since he's been gone," Martin said. "I was real nervous and scared that he'd be hurt."

"He's been gone so long, it's just pathetic." U.S. officials said they expected a second plane load of Americans to leave Iraq today. They had no details about the flight.

Texans Monte Darchen of Lake Dallas; Stuart Williams and wife Charlene Courte of Dallas; and John Henry Cole and wife Donna of Odessa reportedly were on the plane to Washington, but apparently did not come to Texas on Monday.

Former Texas Gov. John Connally and Coastal Corp. Chairman Oscar Wyatt brought 21 hostages, three U.S. Embassy employees and seven family members to Houston early Sunday.

Americans home after four months as hostages of Iraq

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of joyful Americans are home for the holidays today, relieved to be free after more than four frightening, boring and unpleasant months as captives in Iraq and Kuwait.

"It feels absolutely great," Jack Rinehart, 37, of Stover, Mo., said several hours after he and more than 150 Americans landed at nearby Andrews Air Force Base, Md., on a chartered Pan Am jumbo jet Monday.

"It's great to be back," said Dwight Durmon of Fayetteville, Tenn., as he clutched the hand of his wife, Cathy.

The former hostages — some of whom had been held as "human shields" at strategic sites in Iraq — left Baghdad on Sunday.

They spent the night in Frankfurt, Germany, before coming to the United States. Last week, the Iraqi parliament voted to allow the 8,000 American, European and Japanese hostages to go free.

U.S. officials said they expected a second plane load of Americans to leave Iraq today. They had no details about the flight.

"We've got one plane here and another on the way," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said. Monday's plane carried 156 people, including four Canadians. Fitzwater refused to say how many Americans remained in Iraq and Kuwait.

Ivan Selin, the State Department's undersecretary for management, greeted the evacuees. They then were whisked away — out of sight of hordes of reporters — for private reunions with their families.

The ex-hostages spent the night in the capital, and some said they expected to be debriefed by U.S. officials.

Rinehart, an electrical engineer who was on a sales trip to Kuwait when Iraqi troops invaded the country Aug. 2, was holed up at the embassy compound for his entire stay.

"I was the camp plumber," said Rinehart, explaining how the embassy staff and the private citizens inside kept themselves occupied during the siege. Some people cooked, cleaned and guarded the complex. Rinehart said he helped dig a 14-foot water well.

President Bush has announced that all Americans soon will leave the embassy in Kuwait.

"For the most part, it was boring," said Gale Rogers, a consular officer at the Kuwait embassy.

Life at the embassy also was uncomfortable. Without fresh water and electricity, the Americans were without air conditioning in the summer. The air was "hot with flies" in the summer and "cold with flies" in the winter, Rogers said.

The Americans ate mainly rice and tuna fish with different sauces, a diet that caused Rinehart to lose 25 pounds, he said.

Rogers, of Arlington, Va., said the Americans were afraid at times, particularly right after the invasion. "The threat is there all the time if you can't go home and you can't leave," he said.

But private citizens hiding in Kuwait were even more frightened because they were subject to arrest and could be picked up in house-to-house searches. "Many are afraid to sleep at night," Rogers said.

Durmon said that in Iraq, people are afraid of the secret police. "The secret police there are surveilling you," he said.

Durmon said he was in Kuwait but later was moved to Iraq. He declined to say what his job was.

Those who left Kuwait on Sunday said the country is in chaos with roads destroyed, street lights knocked out and wrecked cars everywhere. "Everything is broken," Rogers said.

Judge says state sodomy law is unconstitutional

AUSTIN (AP) — A state judge has ruled that Texas' so-called anti-gay law against homosexual sodomy is unconstitutional.

"It's great, really exciting. This is a very important day for us," said Nell Hahn, attorney for the Texas Human Rights Foundation, which helped file the suit challenging the law.

A spokesman for the state attorney general's office said a decision on whether to appeal the ruling by District Judge Paul Davis could be left to Attorney General-elect Dan Morales.

Gay men and women from Austin, Houston and Dallas challenged the 1879 law before Davis, who made his ruling Monday after an hour-long hearing, according to the plaintiffs and the Texas attorney general's office.

The law makes it a Class C misdemeanor, punishable by a $200 fine, for consenting adults of the same gender to have "deviant sexual intercourse."

The plaintiffs asserted that the law violates Texas constitutional guarantees of privacy, equal protection and due process, as well as the state Equal Rights Amendment.

Former lawman convicted in murder case

CLEBURNE (AP) — A former law enforcement officer has been convicted of capital murder in the shooting death of a Burleson man at a rest stop.

A Johnson County jury deliberated about five hours Monday before finding John Yarbrough, 44, of Decatur, guilty of capital murder in the Feb. 27 shooting death of Jerry Shaw, 29.

Jurors were returning to court today to begin hearing evidence in the punishment phase of Yarbrough's trial. He is a former Fort Worth police lieutenant and Wise County chief deputy sheriff.

Milton Brumfeld, an accomplice in the slaying, testified as a prosecution witness, saying that he and Yarbrough went to the rest stop on Interstate 35W to rob someone while on their way to Austin.

They also alleged that the law, which has not been prosecuted recently, encourages discrimination and hate crimes against homosexuals, and restricts their career and employment opportunities.

"What people do in the privacy of their own home is not anybody's business, particularly the state's," said Suzanne Wagers of the Texas Human Rights Foundation.

Attorney Tom Doyal of Austin said he was extremely pleased with the ruling. Doyal said it would allow homosexuals to go on with their lives without fear of being branded as criminals.

Texas Assistant Attorney General Harry Potter said the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and the U.S. Supreme Court have upheld sodomy laws, ruling that they "do not violate a person's privacy or other rights."

But Ms. Hahn said that case was filed in the federal court system, and noted that the latest case was brought in state court.

"Texas' constitution is really different, with a bill of rights that is even stronger," she said.

Feds indict nine in Texas' largest cocaine seizure

By JOEL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Nine people have been indicted in connection with Texas' largest cocaine seizure, more than a year after drug agents found the nine tons of cocaine in a house near Harlingen.

The organization is accused of distributing more than 11 tons of cocaine in the United States and of laundering more than $30 million in drug proceeds.

Most of the cocaine in the indictment, however, did not make it very far. The nine tons found near Harlingen on Oct. 4, 1989, was in duffel bags that were still wet. Texas Department of Public Safety narcotics agents who made the bust speculated that it recently had been floated across the Rio Grande from Mexico, about 10 miles away.

The seizure was not only the largest cocaine bust ever in Texas, it also was the second largest in the United States, according to federal agents. It was only surpassed by a 20-ton cocaine seizure in September 1989 in the Los Angeles area.

Other cocaine loads the new indictment accuses the organization of arranging include 915 kilograms seized at the U.S. Border Patrol checkpoint on U.S. 77 near Sarita in April 1989; and two Houston-area seizures in 1989 totaling 1,060 kilograms. A kilogram is 2.2 pounds.

The amount of cocaine listed in the indictment would have a street value of about $1 billion, U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agents said.

Federal officials waited until Monday to announce the 15-count indictment because they were still arresting the suspects over the weekend.

Of the nine indicted, two low-level "mules" or laborers for drug traffickers were prosecuted last spring on state charges of cocaine possession. Guadencio Garcia Garcia, 39, received an 18-year sentence in the case; Hermenegildo Sosa Rivas, 52, received a 12-year sentence. Both are in prison and will be tried on federal charges.

Five others were arrested in the Lower Rio Grande Valley since Friday, one was arrested in Houston and one remained at-large Monday afternoon.

Several in the indictment are believed to be significant figures who led the cocaine-distribution ring; they arranged for the "stash house" where the nine-ton seizure took place, Assistant U.S. Attorney Melissa Annis said.

They also arranged for transportation to drop-off points in the Houston area, "for further distribution throughout the United States," she said.

Prosecutors drop obscenity case against record store owner

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A record store owner whose obscenity charge was dropped says he'll keep selling the 2 Live Crew rap album As Nasty as They Wanna Be even though he doesn't care for the group's music.

"We've got much better music for sale at our store," said Dave Risher, owner of Hogwild Records and Tapes. Risher said, however, he believes questions of "taste and style" should be left to individuals.

Bexar County Court-At-Law

Judge Tony Jimenez III dismissed a promotion of obscenity charge against Risher Monday after prosecutors asked that the case be dismissed. The charge was a Class A misdemeanor.

Risher was charged in June after Patrick Weaver, 20, son of the president of Citizens Against Pornography, bought the 2 Live Crew album at Risher's store then complained to police that it was obscene.

Vice officers previously had visited San Antonio record stores asking owners and managers to stop selling the album.

Prosecutors said they decided not to prosecute the case after Weaver listened to the album on Friday, had the state obscenity statute explained to him again and decided the entire record did not meet the criteria for being obscene material.

Weaver was not in court Monday. Contacted at home later, his mother said he did not want to speak to reporters.

The judge criticized prosecutors for taking six months to decide to drop the charge.

"I think that the (district attorney's) office owes Mr. Risher an apology," Jimenez said. Spectators cheered and clapped.

Risher said he was ready to get back to work.

"I'm used to selling records in a record store, not being in the courtroom defending the First Amendment," he said.

Defense lawyers would not say how much the defense would cost, but Risher said the legal proceedings cost him "more money than I've got in my bank account."

Earlier this year a Florida record store owner was found guilty of misdemeanor obscenity for selling the rap group's album.

In another case in Florida, members of 2 Live Crew were acquitted of similar charges involving a live performance of some of their material.

Opinion

No need singing the buyout blues

With the purchase of the MCA entertainment conglomerate by a Japanese company, look for a lot of the Grade-B actors along the Potomac to launch into soliloquies about the horrors of investment from abroad. Their arguments have all the weight of styrofoam boulers on a Hollywood backlot.

Will the American film industry really be damaged by more foreign ownership? Not likely. On the contrary, Japan's Matsushita Electric Industrial Co., which is paying about $6.59 billion in cash and securities for MCA, boasts pockets as deep as the Grand Canyon, a fact that should promise a cascade of new capital into Hollywood. Both Columbia pictures and the Fox studios are under foreign ownership, and no one can argue that their productivity or creativity has suffered as a result.

What about the effect on the larger U.S. economy? To answer the question intelligently requires a better perspective on the foreign-investment issue than many politicians and media analysts provide. Commerce Department statistics exaggerate U.S. "indebtedness" because, while they take account of the value of direct investments when they're made, they don't record later appreciation. Thus, they underestimate the current value of foreign investments undertaken years ago by U.S. firms.

The difference between "passive" and "direct" foreign investment is also crucial. Sixty percent of foreign holdings in the United States fall in the passive category — bank loans, government debt and bonds. These debts stir the worry that America will end up poorer when it comes time to pay off the interest. A real danger, but not inevitable: Shrewd economic policies and deficit reduction can stave off trouble.

Further, passive foreign investment is hardly incompatible with economic growth. For most of the last century, the United States was a debtor nation, even as it advanced steadily toward the status of a world economic power. Meanwhile, the hand-wringing about "direct" investments also tends to be excessive. Don't foreign funds flowing into equities or real estate — or movie studios — amount to assets that reap returns only to the extent they're put to profitable and productive use, thus making our own economy more efficient?

Now it's true that debtor status isn't all wine and roses. Economist Michael Becker points out that "ideally, Americans would not enjoy the job creation and higher incomes from [foreign] investment but also the direct benefits that that come from earning profits on investments."

True enough. But posting "keep out" signs at our borders is no way to strengthen our homegrown sources of wealth and productivity. Why not, instead, try promoting saving and investment here the way they do so vigorously in Japan? Isn't that the best script for a competitive economy?

Berry's World

"As the politicians say — your 'negatives' are very high!"

Trade peace or trade war?

Stephen Chapman

The British historian Thomas Macaulay in 1824 noted two facts about free trade — that is one of the greatest blessings a government could confer on its people, and that those people almost inevitably disliked it. Those facts, as true now as they were then, explain why the current world trade negotiations are vital and why there is a real danger they will fail.

With trade ministers from around the world meeting in Brussels, they will not grip the imagination of the average person. But their business has a large bearing on the economic fortunes of the world and just about everyone in it. At stake is an economic framework that in its 43 years has fostered unprecedented prosperity here and abroad.

Trade wars working in tandem with economic depression during the 1930s pushed nations into the most destructive shooting war in history. The architects of the subsequent peace wisely acted to prevent a repetition by persuading nations to liberalize the rules of international commerce.

The mechanism was a treaty, open to all, called the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). It obliges the signatory nations to reduce trade barriers to any other participant that lowers its trade barriers; it also forbids discriminatory measures and handles disputes.

The result has been a brisk and ever-expanding parade away from protectionism. Since GATT was launched in 1947, the number of member nations has risen from 23 to nearly 100, while the average tariff has been cut from 40 percent to 5 percent. The volume of international trade has soared.

But the creators of GATT underestimated the ingenuity of protectionists. The agreement hasn't stopped the spread of noxious measures like the "voluntary" export quota — in which one country (say, Japan) agrees to limit its sales to another country (say, America) under threat of punitive sanctions. Nor has it prevented "retaliatory" measures by countries that convince themselves they are the innocent victims of unfair trade policies.

These restrictions are merely a symptom. The underlying malady is a deepening disenchantment for open trade. Countries suffering economic setbacks prefer to blame nasty foreigners rather than their own failings.

Politicians abandon the general welfare of consumers and the economy to embrace the demands of particular industries. The benefits of trade, in higher living standards, are taken for granted, while the drawbacks are endlessly lamented.

Buffeted by growing storms, GATT will either be strengthened or it will most likely disintegrate. Strengthening it is the goal of the current round of negotiations — known as the "Uruguay" round for the site of the first session — which began in 1986 and is supposed to be finished by the end of this year (though the deadline could be extended).

This month's meeting promises to make or break a new agreement. The United States and some developing countries have threatened to walk away unless the European Community agrees to drastic cuts in its agricultural subsidies, which cost Europeans a king's ransom, depress world prices and take away sales from efficient, non-European producers. But the EC has balked, rather than inflame its powerful farmers.

European protectionism isn't the only target. There's also U.S. protectionism, like that reflected in the recent bill passed by Congress (though vetoed by the president) to block textile imports.

There's also a host of anti-trade practices in restrictions on imported services like banking and insurance and in the failure of many countries to protect patents, trademarks and copyrights. These obstacles hurt American companies. More important, they hurt consumers everywhere.

Every country has something to lose from a deal: Opening one's home market exposes home countries to a greater risk of being outcompeted. But every country also has much to gain. Just as Western Europe's progress toward dismantling its internal trade barriers has spurred economic growth, a new GATT accord would serve as an engine of rising wealth around the globe.

And the likely alternative, warns Jeffrey Schott of the Institute for International Economics, is not the status quo, but a descent into trade war.

These negotiations began because trade barriers were multiplying, and failure would encourage that debilitating trend. A recession in the United States or elsewhere is bound to spawn new protectionist demands. The world could soon find itself divided into hostile trading groups clawing for a piece of a shrinking pie.

The failure of the GATT negotiations would threaten the survival of the freest trading order the world has ever known. If that order goes, it will take a good share of our prosperity with it.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Dec. 11, the 345th day of 1990. There are 20 days left in the year. Tonight marks the beginning of Hanukkah, the eight-day Jewish "Feast of Lights."

Today's Highlight in History:

On Dec. 11, 1936, Britain's King Edward the Eighth abdicated in order to marry American divorcee Wallis Warfield Simpson. In a radio address, Edward said he "would have found it impossible" to carry out his duties as king "without the help and support of the woman I love."

On this date:

In 1719, the first recorded sighting of the Aurora Borealis took place in New England.

In 1792, France's King Louis XVI went on trial, accused of treason. (Convicted and condemned, Louis was sent to the guillotine the following January.)

In 1816, Indiana became the 19th state of the union.

New ways for Eastern Airlines

As everybody who keeps an eye on the commercial airline game knows, Eastern Airlines is flat broke.

Of course, so is Donald Trump, singer Billy Joel and the United States of America.

Trump overbuilt, Joel let his brother-in-law handle his finances and the United States of America is run by politicians, so what did you expect?

There are a lot of reasons Eastern is hanging in the skies by a thread. Frank Lorenzo, whom Eastern employees would like to see hanging by a rope, is one.

But what I wanted to know is how the airline is intending to cut expenses in an effort to remain in the air.

So I contacted an Eastern source, who asked his (or her) name not be used.

Know, however, this person is a key cog in the Eastern chain of command and was willing to talk to me in order that Eastern customers would know the airline is digging in to save itself.

"What are some of the ways you are going to cut back?" I asked my source.

"Magazines," the source replied. "You just don't realize how much an airline has to spend on magazines and other reading material for passengers to peruse while in flight. From now on we'll have just one copy of USA Today aboard, and passengers will have to pass it around and take turns reading it."

"What else?" I wanted to know.

Lewis Grizzard

"We're doing away with seat cushions," was the answer.

"But what about the fact the passengers could use their seat cushions for flotation?"

"That's a bunch of baloney, anyway. Ever see anybody at the beach floating on an airline seat cushion? Of course not: Passengers are just told their seat cushions will float so they won't be nervous when we fly over water."

"What are the passengers going to sit on?"

"They'll all be asked to bring their own pillows."

"How about the oxygen masks that are supposed to fall down in the unlikely event of cabin depressurization?"

"They're gone, too," said my source. "Also, I'd suggest passengers bring their own oxygen tanks aboard from now on."

"How will the crew be affected?"

"We're cutting out navigators," I was told. "But isn't that dangerous? How would the pilot know which way to fly?"

"It'll just have to be on instinct. If a flight leaves Philadelphia for Atlanta, for instance, the pilot will know to head south and start slowing down when he sees the Stone Mountain."

"How about flight attendants?"

"We won't need any. We're cutting out all drinks and meals. Just can't afford it."

"Cutting out the meals sounds like a great idea to me," I said, "since nobody likes airline food anyway. But how can you do away with drinks?"

"We're strongly suggesting each passenger get sloshed before he or she gets on the plane, and they just might also want to bring a bottle with them for the flight."

"Why is that?"

"We're doing away with our mechanics."

"No mechanics at all?"

"If there's a problem before takeoff, we'll ask for volunteers from the passengers who might know something about repairing an airplane."

"What if nobody volunteers? Are you still going to take off?"

"We'll take a chance. Columbus did."

"Think the public will go for all this?" I asked.

"We'll be offering great discounts," said the person from Eastern. "You can get a roundtrip ticket from anywhere we fly for $24.17, if you bring along your own toilet paper."

Who does 'prior restraint' protect?

By SARAH OVERSTREET

This probably isn't the first heated editorial you've read on the Supreme Court's decision to bar the Cable News Network from airing tapes of Gen. Manuel Noriega's conversations with his attorneys. There are few subjects guaranteed to push journalists' thermostats to "Broil" faster than restraint of our freedom of report.

And with good reason. We believe our jobs are a trust, ours only as long as we agree to bring you information you have a right to know as guaranteed to you by the First Amendment to the Constitution.

It's a simple rule, but one doomed to run at odds with another profession with another set of rules: the legal profession, whose rules include facilitating the Sixth Amendment, which guarantees each of us a fair trial if we're accused of a crime.

The head-butting occurs when information we believe you have a right to know is also information members of the legal profession want to suppress. There are any number of reasons they may want to suppress it, and it's almost impossible to tell which one is operative if you don't have the information which they want to keep secret.

Sound complicated? It is. They may want to suppress information because they truly believe pre-trial knowledge may prejudice a jury against a defendant and therefore rob him of his Sixth Amendment rights. Or, depending on whether they're defense attorneys or prosecutors, they may think that suppressing information will help to acquit or convict a defendant.

In the case of a judge, it may be a zealous interpretation of the Sixth Amendment, or it may involve personal politics or power. Sometimes the reasoning can be arbitrary: A judge once tried to deny me access to a government agency's public records, because he was afraid the president of the agency's volunteer board would quit if I made him mad.

Whatever the reason in the Noriega dispute, the Supreme Court has sided with the suppression ethic by forbidding CNN to broadcast the tapes. It is the first time the high court has held the ideal of "prior restraint" of free speech to be constitutional.

Why should that make you as hot as it makes me?

Well, first, history has proven that defendants can get fair trials even when much is publicly known about their cases. We can't ensure that pre-trial publicity will not influence a jury in some manner, yet there is also no evidence that a defendant's right to a fair trial is impeded by the public's knowing the truth about a case before that truth is presented as evidence in a trial.

On the other hand, none of us have to search our memories very far to come up with cases where lawyers and judges have tried to keep crucial truth from surfacing.

The potential for abuse is multiplied when judges put themselves in the position of "screening" the news to see if the public has a right to know it, as U.S. District Judge William Hoessler did at one point in the Noriega case. How would a ruling like this have affected what we learned about Watergate, or the Iran-Contra affair?

How far will the high court go in the name of "prior restraint"? The worst-case scenario is a system where no information about a case is reported until the trial is over. Perhaps journalists could just wait by the courtroom doors for verdicts. Or we could just have court stenographers phone our newspapers after the trials are over, and we'll just report whatever they tell us.

If you haven't looked at the Bill of Rights lately, take a gander at Amendments I and VI. Does the high court's ruling make you feel more protected as a citizen, or more like your freedoms are losing out to the protection of the government's backside?

Pickens and Japanese company in dispute over stock ownership

By JOHN M. DOYLE
AP Business Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the verbal skirmishes between a Japanese auto parts maker and Texas investor T. Boone Pickens were a series of movie sequels, they'd be up to number XIV or XV by now.

On Monday, Koito Manufacturing Co. called on Pickens to disclose all the details of his arrangement with a Japanese stock speculator to acquire a large stake in the company.

Last week, a new Japanese securities law forced Pickens, who has portrayed himself as a David battling the Goliath of Japan's corporate system, to acknowledge that his 26.4 percent stake in Koito was backed — at least in part — by stock speculator Kitano Watanabe.

Koito has used the specter of Watanabe to rebuff Pickens' attempts to secure representation on its board of directors, even though he is the largest single shareholder. The company claims Pickens is merely acting on behalf of Watanabe in another attempt by the Tokyo investor to obtain "greenmail" from Koito.

Greenmail, a play on the word blackmail, is what a company pays when it buys back its own stock from a potential raider at rates above the going market price.

Koito has claimed that before Watanabe sold his stake to Pickens in March 1989, he tried to persuade carmaker Toyota Motor Corp., Koito's second-largest shareholder, to buy his stock at higher-than-market prices.

"It appears clear from your own statements that the entire transaction was an outright sham," Koito's president, Takao Matsuura, wrote Pickens.

Pickens has disclosed that he bought 42.4 million shares, or 26.4 percent of Koito, from Watanabe, who loaned him the money after Pickens put up the shares as collateral. The shares are now worth an estimated $1 billion.

Pickens also submitted an affidavit stating he will not accept greenmail.

"Now that you have acknowledged your secret arrangement with Mr. Watanabe, I must insist that you disclose the remaining details that your filing omits," the Koito president wrote.

He wanted to know the conditions of the loan and what interest Pickens' Dallas-based Boone Co. had paid on it.

But the new Japanese law does not require Pickens, who has steadfastly denied that he is fronting for Watanabe, to disclose further details about the loan.

"According to our lawyers and the (Japanese) Ministry of Finance, those are the two material agreements that we have to reveal regarding the ownership of the Koito stock," said a Pickens spokesman in Washington, Mark Helmke. "Now comes Koito, saying 'You haven't told us what your interest rate is. You haven't told us what your payment schedule is.' None of that's required."

Helmke added: "That's the game they play. If the Ministry of Finance wants to require everybody in Japan to disclose that information, we would be happy to comply. They want the Americans to disclose more than what they require of the Japanese."

FDA approves new contraceptive implant

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new contraceptive touted by family planning experts as the most effective, reversible method of birth control will soon be available to American women.

The Food and Drug Administration approved Norplant on Monday, clearing the way for Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories to begin training health practitioners how to insert the implant that can prevent pregnancy for up to five years.

"It's going to be interesting to watch what kind of reaction Norplant gets among the public and physicians," said Jeannie Rosoff, president of the Alan Guttmacher Institute, a research and policy group that focuses on reproductive health issues.

"There are going to be some women for whom this is a godsend. The numbers we don't know yet," she said. "But any new addition that is safe is desirable."

Family planning experts say Norplant is the first major new contraceptive available to American women in three decades, since the birth control pill was approved in 1960 and a new generation of intrauterine devices, or IUDs, became available around that same time.

Norplant was approved in Finland in 1983 and has been approved in 15 countries since then. Half a million women in those countries have used it, according to The Population Council, which developed the device.

Norplant consists of six thin, flexible capsules, each about an inch and a third long. They are inserted in a fan-like arrangement under the skin of a woman's inner arm above the elbow.

The minor surgical procedure is done in 10 to 15 minutes with local anesthesia in a doctor's office or a clinic.

The capsules contain a hormone that is released slowly over five years. The implants can be removed any time and fertility is quickly restored.

Norplant is 99 percent effective for women weighing less than 150 pounds. It may be less effective in heavier women, according to the council.

It will be marketed by Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories of Philadelphia and company officials expect the drug to be available commercially in February.

The company has not said what the price of Norplant will be, and women's health groups say cost will be a key factor in how widely used the method becomes.

"That's the controlling factor," said Dr. Amy Pollack, associate medical director for the Planned Parenthood Federation.

C. Wayne Bardin, vice president and director of medical research for The Population Council, said last week he had been told the price would be in the range of $200 to $300, not including the cost of implanting the device.

One group for whom Norplant is likely to be popular is women who have had all the children they want but aren't sure they want to be sterilized.

Sterilization is the leading method of birth control for married couples in the United States. In 1988, in nearly 40 percent of married couples in which the woman was between 15 and 44, sterilization was used, according to the National Center for Health Statistics.

"Many make that decision (to be sterilized) for lack of another choice," Pollack said.

Some, however, may not like Norplant's side effect. The major one is menstrual irregularities, including prolonged periods and spotting between periods. About 15 percent of the women who have the implant have it removed because of bleeding, according to the council's studies.

Other side effects include occasional headaches, mood changes, nausea and acne, the FDA said.

The contraceptive method approved by the FDA consists of six silicone rubber rods, shown above, that contain a hormone. The rods are implanted under the skin above the elbow.

Shuttle ends problem-plagued mission with rare night landing

By JOHN ANTCAK
Associated Press Writer

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Columbia glided to a rare night landing a day early after a star-gazing mission plagued by computer problems, clogged plumbing and finally the threat of rain.

The shuttle touched down Monday night, its signature twin sonic booms heralding its arrival over the Mojave Desert. The landing, seen by about 600 spectators, was moved up to avoid rain in today's forecast.

NASA officials focused on the mission's accomplishments, despite repeated problems aiming the $150 million Astro observatory. Besides the telescope troubles, the crew had to repair a clog in the shuttle's waste collection system.

"I think we've had a resounding success on the mission," said William Lenoir, NASA associate administrator.

It was the fourth shuttle landing at night.

Columbia carried Astro, made up of three ultraviolet telescopes and a separate X-ray telescope, in its payload bay.

Problems with an automatic pointing system had forced astronauts and ground crew to manipulate the ultraviolet telescopes by hand, drastically slowing the process.

During the nine-day mission, the crew succeeded in pointing the ultraviolet telescopes at only 135 of 250 targets, including a comet heading out of the solar system.

The mission, originally scheduled for 1986, was delayed by the Challenger explosion and later by repeated hydrogen fuel leaks.

The landing came the same day the space agency received a critical review by a government panel that said NASA should end its dependence on the troubled space shuttle fleet and completely redesign a planned space station.

The Advisory Committee on the Future of the U.S. Space Program also said NASA could improve by streamlining management.

NASA assembled the outside review at the request of the Bush administration after a rash of embarrassments that included the grounding of the shuttle fleet because of hydrogen leaks and a mirror flaw in the Hubble Space Telescope.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze toured the Johnson Space Center in Houston space center on Monday with Secretary of State James A. Baker III and spoke to the Columbia crew in remarks translated from Russian.

"What you are doing in space is very important. You are paving new roads in space, and I very much believe that you are paving those roads for the benefit and for the happiness of all of us on Earth," Shevardnadze said.

Astronaut Jeffrey Hoffman responded with a few Russian phrases, then said in English, "We agree with your sentiments that space travel is important for the future of all mankind."

NASA said it was the first communication between a Soviet official and a shuttle crew in space.

After the smooth landing, the seven Columbia astronauts were to stay overnight at Edwards before traveling to Houston today.

More than 1,000 telescope photographs were made during the flight. The first photographs should be ready for viewing in late December or January.

NASA scientists were encouraged by the final observation made by the ultraviolet telescopes, a study of Comet Levy. The comet could not be studied earlier in the flight because it was too close to the sun.

"What a thrilling way to go out," astronomer Paul Feldman of Johns Hopkins University said. Mission scientist Ted Gull said, "It brought tears to my eyes."

Survey: Food scarcest in big Russian cities

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The highly publicized Soviet food shortage is most acute in big Russian cities and seems milder in the countryside, smaller cities and in non-Russian republics, a survey indicates.

"The situation is better here than in Russia," said Povilas Klimas, deputy mayor of Vilnius, capital of the Baltic republic of Lithuania, which declared independence in March. "We're ready to go ahead on our own."

Officials from the 12 cities surveyed by The Associated Press said there was more food in farmers' markets than in state stores, although prices were higher. They blamed shortages on panic-buying and the collapse of the centralized distribution system, which is not getting the harvest into cities.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev has appealed to the West for food to prevent winter unrest that he says may jeopardize his reforms. Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze carried the plea Monday to Secretary of State James A. Baker III.

Gorbachev has said that much of this year's harvest has been diverted from the state distribution system and sold privately. He has called upon the KGB security police to make sure that Western food aid is not siphoned off.

An AP telephone survey found that food was plentiful in the Baltic republics and Central Asia, and scarce in Russia and two republics hit by ethnic unrest, Armenia and Moldavia.

The survey found little fear of starvation, in keeping with more thorough public opinion polls conducted by Soviet sociologists.

In a poll published this week in the weekly newspaper Moscow News, 27 percent believed that mass famine would commence this winter, compared with 57 percent who thought it unlikely.

The poll of 1,363 people by the Union Center for Public Opinion and Market Research found that 58 percent expected widespread strikes, which could aggravate the food shortage.

The AP survey found that several Soviet cities have rationed food, but it appeared to do little good where supplies were scarce, as in Leningrad, the second-largest Russian city.

Leningrad officials are trying to bypass the state distribution system and buy directly from better-supplied regions, said Lyudmilla Smirnova, a city government spokeswoman.

Food is plentiful but rationed in nearby Tallinn, capital of Estonia, another breakaway Baltic republic, said Mikhtel Pilving, head of the city council secretariat.

The monthly ration for butter is 1.1 pounds, and 4.4 pounds each for sugar and grains, Pilving said.

"Yes, we have ration cards for vodka and other alcoholic beverages," he said.

Food supplies are better than last year in the Central Asian republic of Uzbekistan, said Yuri Kukarin, editor of the Uzbek Information Agency.

"There is a shortage of meat in state shops, but a wide variety in the markets. And there is no problem with dairy products and butter," he said.

Although Uzbekistan has one of the lowest per capita incomes in the Soviet Union, there has been no need to introduce rationing, Kukarin said.

Food was also reported to be plentiful in the European republics of Byelorussia and the Ukraine, and the Caucasian republic of Georgia.

Aid agencies warn of famine in Africa

By SUE LEEMAN
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — British aid agencies say millions of people in the four corners of Africa face starvation as early as January, and some compare the situation to the Ethiopian famine that shocked the world five years ago.

John Magrath, a spokesman for the Oxfam charity, said Monday he had received a telex from a worker just back from the Ethiopian province of Eritrea:

"Terrible drought," it said. "Animals dying. People already on the move."

Oxfam has joined with six other agencies to form the British Disaster Emergency Committee, which is launching an appeal in the new year for funds to assist Ethiopia, the Sudan, Mozambique, Angola and Liberia.

The requests for help for Africa come at a time when the European Community is pulling together a $2 billion food aid program for the Soviet Union, Oxfam spokesman Tony Vaux noted.

"A problem is building while the world is looking elsewhere," he said.

The other participating agencies are the British Red Cross, Action Aid, Christian Aid, the Catholic Fund for Overseas Development, the Save the Children Fund and Help the Aged.

Announcing the appeal on Monday, the groups set no financial target but said they were appealing on behalf of "victims of a major famine now threatening millions of people in many parts of Africa."

The U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization has appealed for 1.3 million tons of food aid for Sudan — 1 million tons for relief and the rest to replenish depleted stocks. It said major and immediate relief is needed to avert calamitous famine.

Mozambique's government says half of its 16.3 million people face deprivation or death because of food shortages aggravated by a 15-year-old civil war.

Liberia is suffering food shortage compounded by the disruption of war. In Angola, an estimated 1.9 million people are affected by food shortages.

Oxfam workers John Wilding and Trish Silkin said Monday that they had found a near-total crop failure in Eritrea and severe crop failures in another civil war-ravaged Ethiopian province, Tigré.

"There will be a food crisis in Eritrea as early as January unless there is an expanded program of relief," said Wilding, who estimated that 2.5 million Eritreans are at risk of death from hunger or thirst.

In Eritrea, Wilding said, there were no crops to assess. "There is an almost complete lack of grazing, and livestock is in an extremely poor condition. Water levels are falling below the bottoms of many wells."

The situation is less severe in neighboring Tigré, Wilding said, but 2.2 million people need food aid, he said.

Ms. Silkin said the conditions in Ethiopia were similar to that preceding the disastrous famine of 1984-85, when about 2 million Africans died of starvation or famine-related ailments, about half of them in Ethiopia.

"The potential for the same situation is there," she said, but added that now there is an effective distribution system for food relief.

Mexico investigates police misconduct

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The attorney general's office has ordered an investigation of police misconduct in the arrest of an opposition party mayor and supporters in a bloody May shootout.

The attorney general's office announced the order Monday after President Carlos Salinas de Gortari directed the office to follow government human rights commission recommendations in the case.

Center-left opposition Democratic Revolutionary Party mayor Salomon Mendoza Barajas and 10 other people from the town of Aguillita, 250 miles west of Mexico City, were arrested in an anti-narcotics operation that claimed the lives of three federal agents in May.

The National Human Rights Commission recommended that policemen involved in the operation be prosecuted for murder, torture, extortion and illegal detention.

It also recommended that Mendoza and Javier Rosiles Martinez be released from jail.

The attorney general's office said Monday that it ordered charges against Mendoza and Rosiles dropped for lack of evidence.

One person arrested in May in the case was released immediately and six others were later released, the attorney general's office said.

It said two others still are being held for murder and injuries.

Industrialist Armand Hammer dies at 92

By E. SCOTT RECKARD
AP Business Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Armand Hammer, the communist's son who became an American captain of industry as well-connected in the Kremlin as he was on Wall Street, has died at age 92.

Hammer died at his home Monday night after a brief illness, said Frank Ashley, a spokesman for Hammer's Occidental Petroleum Corp.

Hammer, a self-made millionaire by the time he graduated from Columbia University medical school at age 23, was also a philanthropist, art collector and crusader for world peace.

"He was absolutely indomitable," said his attorney, Arthur Groman. "He never lost his courage or tenacity. In the last months, he was uncompromising and optimistic."

Hammer exhibited a flair for the dramatic until the end, deciding to celebrate his bar mitzvah — which marks a Jewish boy's 13th birthday — at age 92. He died the night before the ceremony.

Hammer — a global businessman who knew world leaders from Vladimir Lenin to George Bush — negotiated deals with communist countries to develop resources. For years, he urged American presidents to meet with their Soviet counterparts and encouraged the reduction of nuclear weapons, so the money could be diverted to agriculture and medicine.

"Armand Hammer was not only an observer, a witness to the decades in the history of Soviet-American relations, but also a man who actively participated in the building of those relations," said Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Yuri Gremitskikh.

Hammer made several fortunes and gave huge sums to his favorite causes, especially cancer research.

After the Chernobyl nuclear accident in the Soviet Union, he arranged visits by U.S. specialists in bone-marrow transplants, which helped save radiation victims.

Vice president accuses Democrats of playing politics with Persian Gulf

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle is taking the opening shots of the 1992 presidential election with a volley accusing Democrats in Congress of trying to use the Persian Gulf crisis for political advantage.

He would not say who he was talking about — but his most specific complaint was aimed at Senate hearings involving at least two Democrats who are among the potential challengers to President Bush in the coming campaign.

Quayle said those inquiries permitted the Democrats "the luxury of criticism without the burden of accountability."

"Congress has not even sworn in its new members, yet already it's playing politics," he told Republican governors on Monday.

The GOP governors conference was winding up today with an appraisal of the Nov. 6 elections and a look at the next campaign by pollsters and party leaders.

The vice president told the governors he is confident Republicans will be united behind Bush in 1992.

"When the president unveils our agenda, I am certain it will rally our troops and unify our growing, yet at times contentious, Republican Party," Quayle said in a reference to in-house GOP debate over the best way to shape and deliver future government programs.

"Once the president decides, it will not be Republicans vs. Republicans, but Republicans vs. Democrats," Quayle said. "The election cycle of 1992 is already upon us. The battle for this decade's political agenda has certainly begun."

Quayle complained that the first three witnesses before the Senate Armed Services Committee early this month all were critical of Bush policy.

The chairman of that committee is Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., a fixture on the list of potential Democratic challengers for the White House. Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., who sought the nomination in 1988 and says he is considering it again, is a committee member.

They have been among the critics of Bush's decision to double the U.S. force arrayed against Iraq, opening the possibility of offensive action to drive Saddam Hussein out of occupied Kuwait.

Retired military and government officials at the Armed Services Committee hearings and at companion of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee recommended a go-slow course in the gulf crisis, one in which the U.S.-led alliance against Saddam Hussein would wait for economic sanctions to take their full toll on Iraq.

But Quayle said waiting 12 to 18 months would be unacceptable.

"Patience at any price would be a failed policy," he said, amounting to appeasement of Saddam.

Farm Bureau wants U.S. to stand firm on GATT

By ROBERT GREENE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress needs to stand firm behind a March 1 deadline for an international trade agreement in order to assure that meat and grain producers have better access to world markets, the American Farm Bureau Federation says.

"It is probably imperative that the Congress agree or follows through with the administration's analysis that Congress isn't going to change the fast-track deadline unless there is reason to," bureau spokesman Donald Lipton said Monday.

He also said President Bush needed to exercise personal diplomacy to break the deadlock in international trade talks, a step the administration said Monday it was planning to take.

President Bush "undoubtedly will be talking to various leaders about the GATT situation," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, using the acronym for General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, the framework agreement for world trade.

Lipton, like many farm group representatives, went to Brussels, Belgium, last week to observe the meeting of trade ministers hoping to conclude the so-called Uruguay Round of talks with an agreement on how to conduct trade into the 21st century.

However, the delegates never came close to agreement because of a fight between the United States and the 12-nation European Community over farm subsidies.

The United States, backed by Australia, Brazil and other major farm exporters, was seeking sharp reductions in subsidies. The EC claimed the U.S. proposal would force more than 2 million of its 10 million farmers off the land.

The trade ministers told GATT Director Arthur Dunkel in Brussels to try to get at least low-level discussions started again by late January.

Under the fast-track provision of U.S. trade law, the administration has a deadline for submitting an agreement to Congress and Congress has a deadline for ratifying it without any changes.

The deadline can be extended legislatively for a two-year period.

Lipton said that without the deadline, other industry groups with an interest in the outcome of the trade proposal could lobby to weaken the agricultural provisions. But he also said he was also encouraged by what he saw last week.

"In Brussels, it was remarkable how united the various sectors were," he said, referring to U.S. groups with an interest in the other provisions, such as intellectual property, services and investments.

Other farm interests agreed with Lipton that the desirability of other provisions could help force an agreement on farm products as well.

"They've got a lot at stake over there," said Keith Heard, executive vice president of the National Corn Growers Association.

"I'm guardedly optimistic," said Marlyn Jorgensen, a Garrison, Iowa, soybean farmer and board chairman of the American Soybean Association. "I think there was, in the end, kind of a feeling by most other countries that we needed something to happen."

If there is no agreement, "then I think that we do have to turn back to Congress" and ask that a so-called "snap-back" provision under the 1990 Farm Bill be implemented, Jorgensen said.

The five-year farm bill, reflecting budget problems, cut farm supports by one-fourth, he noted. The snap-back provision allows Congress to restore supports if there is no trade agreement, but not for two years.

He said the United States could increase credit guarantees to the Soviet Union to help growers.

Meat producers want the United States to flex some muscle immediately.

"In the interim, I'd like to see the government take some action to show we're intent upon forcing our rights," said Michael Kopps, senior vice president for legislative affairs at the American Meat Institute.

He said the U.S. Trade Representative could vigorously pursue the industry's complaint about European restrictions on American meat products, including the Oct. 30 ban on pork imports and the announced Dec. 31 ban on beef. The European Community Commission said the bans were due to lack of proper sanitation in the United States.

Texas hostage details life as 'human shield' in diary kept in Iraq

EDITOR'S NOTE: Gary Carr of North Richland Hills, Texas, near Fort Worth, kept a journal of his days as a hostage in Iraq. Here is his story as told to Dallas Morning News staff writer Lee Hancock, who is in Baghdad.

DALLAS (AP) — "To whoever finds this. Please send to my family ... Thank you." — Gary L. Carr, U.S. Citizen picked up in Kuwait, Aug. 2, 1990.

I used the small, vinyl notebook for work notes at the oil rig where I was a drilling supervisor in Kuwait.

But beginning Aug. 2, this book, together with my memory, held my life as an Iraqi human shield.

Aug. 2 — My tool pusher on the rig woke me at 4:30 with word that the Iraqis were invading. I called my supervisor, who told me to stay put. Big mistake. By noon, I saw troops coming from the north as far as the eye could see.

I called my wife, Willie, and told her to get the hell out of Kuwait. We were picked up by Iraqi troops soon afterward. An Iraqi and a Palestinian on my crew helped the soldiers hunt down foreign nationals.

Aug. 3 — After a night in the desert, 35 of us rounded up from the rigs are given our first meal: a cup of water and a sweet biscuit.

Aug. 4 — We flew from Basra to Baghdad after lunch on a Russian jetliner after Iraqi Army brought in 25 British military advisers picked up in Kuwait City. They said quite a lot of expats got out.

Aug. 5 — The war in Kuwait is effectively over. The U.S. military will send a fleet to the gulf, and there is no word on our guys or our families in Kuwait.

Aug. 8 — Iraq did what everyone figured — annexed Kuwait. I hope Willie and everyone got out. No word yet. I hate not knowing.

Aug. 10 — A good news day. Willie is in London. I figure others got out. Sure hope so ... I can take most anything knowing the people I care about are safe.

Aug. 15 — Something is happening. Ted Koppel with ABC News showed up here at the hotel but did not stay long. Security guards made him leave. He said to dig in for the long haul but told us we were not forgotten at home.

Aug. 15 — At 5 p.m., we were told to pack and be ready to move, but no word on where. After five and a half-hour bus ride, we arrived at Al-Quaim Dam about 60 miles from the Syrian border.

Security guards tell us this is a resort, but I don't think so. We're surrounded by a 10-foot fence and armed guards.

And the news today is not good. Iraq wants all Western expatriates in Kuwait to check into a Kuwait City hotel for protection. President Bush has ordered 45,000 troops into the Gulf. I think this will become a shooting war. I know what Jews in World War II must have felt like.

Aug. 17 — Everyone is scared and nervous. I'm not ready to die, but I feel that God is with me and I am not terrified of death.

I pray that we will all get out. I sure want to grow old with Willie and play with our grandkids.

Anyone back home that doesn't agree with Bush on the handling of this the way he is should live here awhile.

Aug. 18 — We heard that Iraq is going to take all expats in Kuwait and put them in camps like we are in. I hope this will show the world what this government is really like.

James Baker, the secretary of state, said we were expendable. If this is what it takes to stop this type of terrorism, I agree and so does most everyone here.

Aug. 19 — They separated us. Ten of us were loaded up in cars and taken away. Bets are we'll probably be split again within the next few days. Everyone was pretty misty-eyed. It's amazing how close everyone gets in a situation like this — almost like a family.

I listened to Saddam Hussein give his reasons for holding us and conditions for our release. I hope the U.S. and Britain don't accept it. This kind of terrorism has got to stop. I want to live, but not at that price.

The embargo is working so they will probably start cutting our rations soon.

Aug. 20 — It is hard to stay up. Everyone is despondent, especially after they took some of the guys away. We need to work on picking up our spirits.

They cleaned out all shrubs and trash from around our quarters. The guards are getting nervous and are watching us closer than ever.

We keep asking to speak with embassy and to send messages home, but no luck yet.

Aug. 21 — A routine is starting to set in. Spirits are still good. We draw strength from each other, I think. We listened to Saddam Hussein's open letter to Bush tonight. I wonder if he really believes what he says. If so, the world could be in real trouble if they don't stop him now.

This place is supposed to be a civil site but sure does have a lot of defense sites around it. I wish I could let Willie and the kids and folks know I am doing fine and there is no mistreatment of anyone happening here.

I just hate the loss of my freedom and having someone watching me all the time. I pray every night for everyone being safely released and returned to their loved ones. Good night, Willie. I love you and the kids.

Aug. 22 — Security guards are restricting our movements even more. I guess they are afraid we may get a message out through the Poles. They know who we are and want to make contact. We may try later if the security gets lax ...

Aug. 23 — No one appears to be backing off from Saddam Hussein. I hope they don't. It would be bad if all hostages were injured or killed but worse yet if the world gives in to this kind of tyranny and blackmail.

Anyone back home that doesn't agree with Bush on the handling of this the way he is should live here a while.

Aug. 25 — Most everybody is of the opinion that war is inevitable ... I pray that God will give me the strength to endure whatever is to come.

I am not sleeping as well as I have before. I've been having strange dreams. Can't remember all of them, but I am waking up tired and somewhat disturbed.

The not knowing what is going to happen from day to day is the worst. You have to be careful what you say because it could affect the others. We are going to meet tomorrow and plan what to do in case of an air raid.

Aug. 25 — The U.N. security council agreed to a blockade today. Best news yet. I hate to see so many people suffer, but this man (Hussein) has got to be stopped. Hope folks in the U.S. continue to back Bush. If it comes to a shooting war, all of us here will back it.

I had a pretty good day today. I guess I'll have these up and down days for as long as we are here ... If it wasn't for the others, I would try to get out of here — especially if it turns into a long-term imprisonment like the guys in Lebanon.

Aug. 28 — The ladies and kids were moved to Baghdad this afternoon. All but three of the rest of us also were moved. We met the women at the Mansour Melia Hotel. After supper, eight of the guys with us were moved out. I don't know where they went. I guess we'll be next.

Sept. 2 — I guess we'll be split up and moved again soon. I've been reading the Bible. It sure helps. I would love so much to hold my grandson, Trey ... The hardest part of this whole thing is knowing what this must be doing to the people I love.

A wonderful thing happened. I didn't even have a toothbrush, and a lady from the Norwegian Embassy found out I had no money. She gave me money to help me out. Where is my own embassy?

Sept. 6 — They came for me again. Now I'm at Saddam Dam north of Mosul. The guards here are abrupt. For the first time I have the feeling that they'd just as soon shoot me as not. That's not a comfortable feeling.

I will plan what to do if it comes to that and put my faith in God that all will be okay.

Sept. 11 — Happy anniversary, Mom and Dad. May you have many more.

Not knowing what's going to happen next is the hardest part of this whole thing. I just hope I will measure up when all of this comes to a head. It looks more and more as if there will be war. We wonder what orders have been given the guards regarding us.

Sept. 9 — It's been 42 days. I wonder how many more to go. It gets harder every day just to sit here. I am to the point of wishing the U.S. and others would attack.

Sept. 15 — They have started to ration our food. The ration per month is one and a half kilos of rice (a kilo is about two and a half pounds), one kilo of sugar, about two ounces of tea, a pint or so of cooking oil, a bar of soap and a small box of detergent. We get one loaf of bread per meal.

I am continually amazed at the reaction of Iraqi guards to all of this. They can't understand the world reaction to the invasion of Kuwait, taking hostages, violation of embassies ... They are almost like children in their defense of Saddam Hussein.

Sept. 17 — Psychologists are wrong about sympathy between hostages and captors. It's not happening here.

Three Irishmen were caught trying to escape. Iraq says it will try them.

Sept. 24 — There is nothing new. There isn't much to write about. I almost lost it today with one of the guards. They have moved us into the dam so we'll be sure to be killed if there is an air strike.

I went up to one guard and told him I had one wish in life: to see him die before I do. It really shook him up, and I know he personally did nothing to me. It's just what he represents. How much longer can this go on?

Early November — I get my first phone call out to Willie. It was all tearful for both of us. Like everything else, I don't know why this began or when it will end. I am frightened. Willie says she heard Saddam Hussein's invitation for hostage wives and she wants to come. Something — anything — could happen to her here. And how can I come back to this empty place if she has to leave me here?

I will plan what to do if it comes to that and put my faith in God that all will be okay.

Mid-November — I lost interest in writing. Maybe I've adjusted to this. I have to — it could go on for some time. I have found something new to occupy my time. I know I don't have a job. And I can't do too much Christmas shopping in here.

I found a wooden pallet and cut it up. Now I'm making crosses. First, one for Willie, and then the kids and Mom and Dad.

Willie has made it clear: she is coming for me. I'm beginning to think there's not that much danger. But there is the problem of getting my hopes up.

I have begun some preparations in case I don't get out. I want to see Willie and tell her some of the things I should've said years ago. I want to have the chance in case I don't get out of here. For two weeks, they cut off the phone calls. It is all so random and frustrating. I told the guards it was cruel, especially with Willie trying to come. They let me make one more. As frustrated as I get, they are not unkind. They're not all bad people.

Nov. 29 — It is kind of strange. I know Willie is coming, but this week is no different than all the others. I am trying so hard to keep myself calm. I'm not sure of what could happen. She leaves Dec. 2, and I hope to see her soon after.

Dec. 3 — Nothing. No word. I don't know if she's here, if she didn't make it or when I might get to see her. I have been more than a little perturbed. I know how these people can be with something like this.

They see you exposed and they take advantage of your weakness.

Dec. 4 — The head guard told me to pack my bag for Baghdad. I said, "Have you been told?" and he said "no." But he said he knew I was going. He said, "I just know." A three and a half-hour drive between us now.

I am back at the same hotel where I was held hostage. Now it may be where I get my freedom back. I was taken upstairs, and there she was. We hugged and cried forever. We are both pretty emotional — and will be for a while.

I gave her the cross. It's got an inscription: "For Willie. My love. My Life. Gary — Iraq, 1990."

Dec. 7 — I am going home. I can play with my grandchildren and love my kids and be with my wife. I can leave this hellhole. I am a free man.

Panel recommends shuttle flight limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top-level review of the nation's space program recommended Monday that space shuttle flights be confined only to those that require human involvement and that the proposed space station be redesigned from top to bottom.

A committee of experts said some of the concerns expressed about the National Aeronautics and Space Administration are "deserved and occasionally even self-inflicted."

Their report was released after Vice President Dan Quayle and NASA administrator Richard Truly were briefed on its contents. The 12-member committee, which has been studying the space program for four months, was headed by Norman R. Augustine, chairman and chief executive officer of the Martin Marietta Corp.

NASA has received heavy criticism this year, particularly after shuttles were grounded for five months by leaks and by the inability of the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope to see the universe as sharply as advertised.

The committee was asked whether some new form of management structure was called for, but it said "changes of such sweeping scope are inappropriate."

"In spite of imperfections, by far the greatest body of space expertise in any single organization in the world resides within NASA," the report said.

"Briefly stated, the committee believes that NASA, and only NASA, realistically possesses the essential critical mass of knowledge and expertise upon which the nation's civil space program can be sustained."

The committee said NASA should start immediately to phase out some of its missions on the space shuttle and transfer them to a new, unmanned launch vehicle that would be developed.

The report said the civil space program is overly dependent on the shuttle for access to space and warned that statistically "we are likely to lose another space shuttle in the next several years."

It said, therefore, that the shuttle should be used only for those missions where human involvement is necessary.

"The committee believes in hindsight that it was, for example, inappropriate in the case of Challenger to risk the lives of seven astronauts and nearly one-fourth of NASA's launch assets to place in orbit a communications satellite," the report said.

Quayle called the report a tremendous effort and said the committee will be reconvened in six months to assess what progress has been made.

Truly said "NASA and I intend to take each of these recommendations most seriously."

There was no immediate response from NASA. Most of the top officials of the space agency met with the vice president.

NASA and Quayle, who is head of the National Space Council, have been at odds over the future of the program and the committee was set up to respond to those concerns.

Sterquell collection of antique vehicles delights visitors

AMARILLO — Smiling senior citizens stroll through the newly open Sterquell Collection of Horse-Drawn Vehicles, admire the glossy wooden and wicker conveyances — phaetons, wagons and sleighs — and share childhood recollections of these transports from the past.

Amarillo accountant U.C. Sterquell Jr. revealed his fabulous, beautifully restored treasures-on-wheels to delighted friends and neighbors recently. Long-time acquaintances had no idea that such a collection existed in Texas or the Southwest, much less in Amarillo. Nor did they guess that the hard-working "Sterk" pursued such an avocation.

Assembled over the past 30 years from across the nation and painstakingly restored, the 48 vehicles are on display in Blackburn's Building, 812 S. Polk Street, in downtown Amarillo.

An 1880s vintage Whitechapel wagon is the Sterquell family's initial acquisition. Betty Sterquell's father, Knox Wright of Houston, gave the "surrey with the fringe on top" to his granddaughter Vicki in 1960. Included in the gift was Dobbin the horse. The Sterquells enjoyed driving on family outings along Highway 66 in the horse-propelled rig, providing entertainment for cross-country travelers.

In the early 1970s, Sterk began renovating and restoring this century-old vehicle, beginning a project that has engulfed his spare hours for a quarter of a century.

Spruced up and on display are carriages for private use, including a governess cart, a Bavarian wagonette, an Irish jaunting car and a doctor's buggy, complete with authentic doctor's black bag. A gleaming black opera bus with beveled glass windows still sports its original upholstery, painstakingly restored with neat-foot oil.

Commercial endeavors are represented by a haberdasher's wagon, a Welsh hearse, a farm wagon, a fuel tank wagon that originated with Standard Oil of Indiana, a butcher's meat wagon, a photographer's wagon and a mail wagon.

A third portion of the collection includes horse-drawn sleighs. A Portland cutter sleigh was the first acquisition in this category. Sterk and his wife Betty spotted it alongside an Arkansas roadway. They purchased it on the spot and brought it home atop their car, securely tied to ski racks.

Others in this genre include a basket sleigh, a pung sleigh, a Russian sleigh and a racing sleigh.

Opportunity for the public to view the collection arose when the Sterquells began talking with others about downtown revitalization. A difficult occurrence in their own lives would enable them to offer such a gift to their community.

Sterk suffered a stroke a year ago, and his physician advised him to give up his accounting practice. Always one to keep his mind and hands busy, Sterk decided he could use the time and energy released in this change to ready the collection for viewing.

Access to the collection is a gift to High Plains residents and visitors from the Sterquell family, who lent it for exhibit by Panhandle-Plains Historical Society, operator of the Canyon museum that houses the country's best cowboy collection.

Challenge grants to the Society from the Amarillo Area Foundation and the Don and Sybil Harrington Foundation were augmented by private sponsors. The Blackburn Operating Corp. has given the Polk Street location for one year. Dozens of volunteers have prepared and staffed the display.

Visitors to the Sterquell Collection will pay a modest admission fee to defray operational expenses and utility costs. Charges may be waived for school groups and youth organizations by advance reservation. The exhibit can be viewed free of charge on the fourth Sunday of each month.

Exhibit hours are noon to 6 p.m. on Wednesdays and Thursdays; 1-7 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays; and 1-5 p.m. on Sundays. Groups of 15 or more may view the exhibit at other times by advance reservation.

The Sterquell Collection may be contacted by telephoning (806) 374-1663.

On display at the Blackburn Bldg. in downtown Amarillo, the Sterquell Collection features a wide variety of horse-drawn wagons, buggys and sleighs.

The Witching Hour

by Anne Rice

The creator of the Vampire Chronicles offers up a tale of witchcraft, seduction, and mystery traversing time and place—from San Francisco and New Orleans to seventeenth-century France and the South of the Civil War. A freak accident at sea makes a heroine of neurosurgeon Rowan Mayfair when she rescues a near-drowned Michael Curry. No ordinary brush with death, Curry's brief visit to the hereafter has awarded him with frightening sensory powers. Inexplicably drawn to Curry, Mayfair, who is unaware of her ancestry of witchcraft, begins a quest to unlock the secret of her past and of his inexplicable gift.

Jurassic Park

by Michael Crichton

Crichton's science-spiced adventure tales has reached a peak with Jurassic Park. The Jurassic Park of the title is an amusement park of a fog-shrouded island off the coast of Costa Rica with a startling main attraction: real, live dinosaurs. The people of InGen, a genetic engineering firm, have succeeded in cloning 15 species of the prehistoric creatures and believe that their designer dinosaurs cannot reproduce or survive in the wild. But they're wrong. After some accidents, the head man brings in some consultants to assess the situation. Soon his consultants and grandkids are running for their lives, pursued by Tyrannosaurus rex, insect and vicious velociraptors, and ceratosaurs. An irresistible mix of action and thought.

An American Love Story

by Rona Jaffe

Rona Jaffe's most daring and compelling novel since her classic bestseller The Best of Everything, this is a story of love, obsessions, and betrayal set in the glamorous world of the television industry. The lives of three generations of women are intertwined by their obsession with one charismatic man who seems to hold the secret to all of their dreams of love and success.

Coyote Waits

by Tony Hillerman

Tribal police officer Jim Chee and Lt. Joe Leaphorn return to unravel yet another mystery on the reservation. An Apache County sheriff—and Chee's best friend—is murdered, and the destitute Navajo shaman charged with the crime refuses to speak. As the controversial trial unfolds, Chee and Leaphorn launch their own investigations. Their separate paths lead them both to uncover a priceless hundred-year-old government payroll, as well as the enigmatic skin-walker ritual responsible for the accused shaman's inexplicable silence.

Kiss the Boys Goodbye: How the United States betrayed its own POWs in Vietnam

by Monika Jensen-Stevenson

An explosive expose in the tradition of All the President's Men. Drawing on a wealth of interviews with veterans, families of MIAs, and disillusioned government and intelligence officials, the authors contend that, since the end of the war in Vietnam, the U.S. government has deliberately and systematically suppressed evidence of American soldiers still held captive in Southeast Asia. Documents the authors' five-year investigation in a labyrinthine world of missing files, censored testimony, and alleged threats from powerful government officials. The book raises disturbing questions about the nature of democracy in America.

Sunday Nights at Seven:

The Jack Benny Story

by Jack Benny

Forever thirty-nine Jack Benny left a legacy of laughter when he died in 1974. In Sunday Nights at Seven, the only existing account of his life in his own words, Benny traces the evolution of that legacy, recounting his roles as comedian, husband, father, and grandfather. Interwoven reminiscences by his daughter Joan and anecdotes from the Marx Brothers, Cary Grant, Jimmy Stewart, Lucille Ball, Laurence Olivier, and other celebrities help illuminate the story of the Prince of the Pregnant Pause and the eternally young star from the Golden Age of Television.

The Discovery of the Bismark:

Germany's Greatest Battleship Surrenders Her Secrets

by Robert Ballard

The man who led the team that uncovered the Titanic in its ocean grave now reveals the story behind his most recent undersea discovery. Details the history of the infamous Nazi battleship, the Bismark, recreating the great sea battle in which it sank. In a first-person account laden with photographs and artwork, Robert Ballard tells how he and his crew located and explored the remains of the sunken battleship off the coast of France and unveils their dramatic findings.

Legal advice hotline for older Texans

The Legal Hotline for Older Texans has entered its second year of providing legal advice, consultation, pamphlets on legal topics and referrals, to Texans who are 60 years or older. The Legal Hotline for Older Texans has recently prepared a new brochure, condemning certain legal rights of Older Texans.

Called Alternatives to Guardianship under Texas Law, the brochure was developed to assist older Texans in knowing about the Directive to Physician ("Living Will"), Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care, General Durable Power of Attorney, Representative Payee under Social Security, and the Texas form to Designate a Guardian in Advance of Need. The brochure describes each of these matters.

Any Texan, sixty or older, may call the Legal Hotline and request, at no charge, a copy of this brochure. There is no charge for any of the services provided directly at the Legal Hotline for Older Texans. If the free advice and consultation and brochures provided by the Legal Hotline are not sufficient to resolve an older Texan's legal matter, the Legal Hotline will refer the client to a further source of follow-up assistance. Some sources of follow-up assistance charge a fee, if their services are used pursuant to the referral. It is always the client's choice, whether to use the referral. As noted, for the Legal Hotline's advice, consultation, and brochures, there is no charge.

Texans sixty or older can receive the services of the Legal Hotline by calling 1-800-622-2520, Monday through Friday, from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Persons receiving a busy signal are requested to attempt the call again.

The Legal Hotline for Older Texans is a joint project of the Texas Legal Services Center and the AARP Legal Counsel for the Elderly. The Legal Hotline receives funding from the Texas Equal Access to Justice Foundation, and general support from the Texas Department on Aging. The State Bar of Texas has issued a resolution in support of the Legal Hotline for Older Texans.

Pre-nuptial agreements wise move

DEAR ABBY: I have a question that I have not seen addressed in your column or anywhere else, in fact.

How do older couples (families raised) who marry for the second time handle their finances? What is fair? Should they share all expenses equally, or is it too old-fashioned for a woman to expect to be supported by her husband?

I would really appreciate getting some input on a question that, I think, many second-timers grapple with.

ONE OF THEM IN SUN CITY

DEAR ONE OF THEM: Wise second-timers have prenuptial agreements drawn up by their lawyers. (Yes, "his" and "hers.") The agreement should state who shall pay for what after they're married. Much depends on the financial situation of both parties. If the man is well-to-do and the woman is not, he should support her. If she is well-to-do and he is not, she should willingly support him.

If the financial status of both parties is equal, they should share all of the household expenses, cost of trips, wardrobes, etc.

Problems arise if one party saves his (or her) money and expects the spouse to spend his or hers. These matters should be discussed and agreed upon before the marriage; then to avoid misunderstandings, it should be in writing and signed by both parties.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

It may sound cold and unromantic, but it's sensible and realistic.

DEAR ABBY: Please put this suggestion in your column without mentioning where it came from.

If you are invited to someone's home for dinner and offer to bring something toward the dinner, and your hostess says, "No, thank you, I have everything planned," please believe her and do not bring anything. If you bring something, she will be obligated to serve it, which could cause a problem.

I attended a dinner party recently where a guest unexpectedly brought her specialty — chocolate mousse topped with whipped cream. The hostess had already made apple pie for dessert, but she felt obligated to serve the dessert her guest had brought, so she served two desserts. As it turned out, the chocolate mousse brought by the guest was exceptionally delicious, which made the hostess's apple pie look very ordinary by comparison.

See what I mean?

ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Yes, I see what you mean. But nowhere is it written that a hostess is obligated to serve anything brought by a guest. It's perfectly acceptable to say "Thank you," then place the offering in the freezer.

***

DEAR ABBY: I have a beautiful, bright, friendly 3-year-old child. She has always talked a lot for her age. My problem: Just lately she has begun to yell when she talks. Her normal speaking voice is becoming increasingly loud, and I cannot seem to get her to talk softly. How can I get her to tone down her voice? Please answer. It is very important to me.

RUTH

DEAR RUTH: Tell your daughter's pediatrician what you have told me. She should have her hearing tested by an audiologist. Perhaps she has a hearing loss.

***

To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

When it pays to complain

NEW YORK (AP) — The old adage that the squeaky wheel gets the grease rings true for the traveler, too. Not only are you more likely to get satisfaction, you may be healthier and happier, too.

"Often when we are dissatisfied, we feel it's useless to complain, and we continue to feel angry and helpless," says Carol Madison, clinical social worker with the Mental Health Association of Greater Dallas. "However, taking control of our circumstances and expressing our feelings appropriately and assertively results in a sense of empowerment and accomplishment."

Complaining about a travel experience can be constructive if you follow a basic process:

— Choose your battles. First, decide whether you have a legitimate complaint. If your flight is delayed on the runway after you've boarded, there's probably nothing the flight attendant can do. But if the television is on the fritz in your hotel room, the hotel will usually attend to the problem or offer you some form of compensation.

— Direct your complaint. Find the right person to hear your gripe. If your flight is delayed before you board, for example, perhaps the ticket agent can change your travel itinerary.

— Discuss and negotiate. Be clear about what you expect but remain flexible in your demands. If the airline can't re-route you immediately, it may be able to make your wait more comfortable by providing access to the airline's hospitality lounge.

If you're still wondering whether it's worth the effort to complain, keep in mind that most service industry companies want to hear your complaints.

"We encourage our guests to speak up and say what's on their minds — even if it involves complaining," says Ray Schultz, president of the Hampton Inn hotel chain which recently implemented an unconditional customer satisfaction guarantee.

"Of course, our first priority is to make sure that problems don't happen," he says. "But if any of our guests encounters a problem, we need to know about it so we can correct it. And if we can't correct it to their satisfaction, their hotel room is free."

So if you come upon close encounters of the stressful kind in your travels, "squeak up" and make yourself heard. Not only are you more likely to get your problem resolved, but you'll feel better — both mentally and physically.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In your commercial affairs today it could prove beneficial if you give equal credence to both your instincts and your logic. Collectively, they're a dynamic duo. Sagittarius, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Whether the group is large or small your leadership qualities will come to the fore in your involvements with others today. All will look your way for guidance when the unexpected occurs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your best chances for success today will be intertwined with persons to whom you have been helpful in the past. These grateful recipients will try to aid you however they can.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't ignore any unique ideas that permeate your thoughts today regarding ways to update something you've written off as obsolete. Your ingenuity has its applications.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be attentive and prepared today, because several considerate associates may make it possible for you to accomplish something that up until now you've been unable to achieve unaided.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't get rattled today if you are required to make some on-the-spot decisions. You're quick witted, your judgment is keen and you'll evaluate developments accurately.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your greatest asset today is your ability to capitalize on shifting conditions. The trends are moving in your favor, so be alert to act when you spot encouraging signals.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Alliances you establish at this time have excellent chances of achieving your collective objectives. In fact, you could be luckier than usual in partnership arrangements.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today you might be able to kill two birds with one stone owing to the linkage between two matters of importance to you at present. Each can be satisfactorily finalized.

Raiders recover for 38-31 victory over Lions

LA stays deadlocked with Chiefs for AFC West lead

By JEFF HOLYFIELD
Associated Press Writer

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Somewhere, there's a magician who wears silver and black and weaves spells to help the Los Angeles Raiders on Monday night.

The wizard had to use a special triple whammy last night when Detroit's run-and-shoot offense finally lived up to its billing and the Lions rolled to a surprising 24-14 second-quarter lead.

The spell took hold about then and the Raiders recovered to post a 38-31 victory and push their Monday night record to 29-6-1. It also helped them keep pace with the surging Kansas City Chiefs and stay in a tie for the lead in the AFC West at 9-4.

Bo Jackson, who gained 129 yards on 18 carries, began a 21-point Raider outburst with a 55-yard touchdown run down the left sideline, closing the gap to 24-21.

"I really wouldn't say that run broke it open, but it helped," Jackson said. "We've been playing pretty nasty ball out there, but we're doing enough to get the job done."

Jay Schroeder threw for two third-quarter touchdowns, a 10-yarder to Mervyn Fernandez and a 3-yarder to Tim Brown — his first TD since 1988 — to make it 35-24, Los Angeles, at the end of the period.

The early part of the matchup resembled a basketball game. It took both teams only seven plays from scrimmage to score three touchdowns in the first 3:47. They needed only seven more plays for another seven points with only 8:39 gone.

"Everybody got their money's worth," Raiders coach Art Shell said.

Detroit (4-9) scored first — on the fourth play of the game when Barry Sanders burst up the middle for 35 yards.

Then, on the next play from scrimmage, Schroeder and Willie Gault teamed up on a disputed 68-yard touchdown pass.

Gault caught Schroeder's bomb on the Detroit 20, fell down on the 15, then got up and ran into the end zone. He was given the score even though his feet appeared to touch the legs of Lion safety Bennie Blades.

The TD call stood despite a replay review by officials, drawing a chorus of boos from a sellout crowd of 80,066 at the Pontiac Silverdome.

"I will not say a word about the officiating. Nothing," said Lions coach Wayne Fontes. "I voted for it (replay review) because I thought it would help change bad calls, but I'll have to rethink my position."

Detroit came right back, however, with Sanders scoring on the 5. The 66-yard, two-play drive was sparked by a 56-yard pass from Rodney Peete to rookie Jeff Campbell.

"We felt going into the game that we were going to make some plays and they were going to make some plays. We knew we had to keep up with them and let our defense do its job," Schroeder said.

"We're happy to get out of here with a win. This run-and-shoot offense? It's a nightmare. I hate it. The best way to stop it is to fly up here and shoot Wayne Fontes," said Los Angeles defensive end Howie Long.

The Raider comeback overshadowed the play of Sanders, who went over the 1,000-yard rushing mark for the second time.

Sanders racked up 176 yards on 25 carries, giving him 1,081 on the season and making him only the 10th player in NFL history to gain 1,000 yards in each of his first two years.

and kick returner John Taylor.

The four 49ers and Webster, now with Kansas City, are the only members of the team still active.

Besides the five Steelers, the Hall of Famers elected were Green Bay coach Vince Lombardi; running back Larry Csonka of Miami; tackles Art Shell of the Raiders and Forrest Gregg of Green Bay and Dallas; guard Gene Upshaw of the Raider; linebacker Ted Hendricks of Baltimore and the Raiders; and safety Willie Wood of Green Bay.

Also elected to the offensive unit were tight end Dave Casper of the Raiders and guard Jerry Kramer of Green Bay. Dallas teammates Ed "Too Tall" Jones at end and Randy White at tackle and inside linebacker Mike Singletary of Chicago completed the defense.

Ray Guy of the Raiders was picked at the punter and Jan Stenerud of Kansas City was named the placekicker.

The team, selected from 105 players and coaches nominated by a committee of media and NFL officials who have seen all 24 Super Bowls, will be honored at the silver anniversary game in Tampa Jan. 27.

The closest vote was at defensive end where Jones beat Chicago's Richard Dent for the second spot by just over 20,000 votes of the 1.1 million ballots cast. Kramer beat Randy Cross of San Francisco by about 50,000 votes for the second guard position. Wood was about 75,000 votes ahead of Cliff Harris of Dallas for the second safety spot.

Fans select Silver Super Bowl team

NEW YORK (AP) — Quarterback Joe Montana and 12 Pro Football Hall of Famers, five of them from the Pittsburgh Steelers, were named to the silver anniversary Super Bowl team, elected in nationwide fan balloting and announced by the NFL.

Nine Steelers — all members of the team that won four Super Bowls in six years during the 1970s — dominated the squad. The Hall of Fame Steelers elected were defensive tackle Joe Greene, linebackers Jack Lambert and Jack Ham, cornerback Mel Blount and running back Franco Harris.

The other Steelers elected were wide receiver Lynn Swann, center Mike Webster, defensive end L.C. Greenwood and safety Donnie Shell. Another Pittsburgh Hall of Famer, Terry Bradshaw, finished a distant second at quarterback to Montana, one of four San Francisco players selected. Also picked from the 49ers were cornerback Ronnie Lott, wide receiver Jerry Rice

Tar Heels edge Kentucky

College basketball

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Pete Chilcutt says North Carolina's freshmen will get their day in the sun, but not before the senior class of 1991 has its turn first.

With all the talk about Coach Dean Smith's five blue-chip recruits, the seniors have assumed their customary leadership roles. Chilcutt scored the game-winning dunk with 62 seconds left to spark a 7-0 run and lead the ninth-ranked Tar Heels to an 84-81 victory over No. 18 Kentucky.

The victory snapped Kentucky's unbeaten streak at four and it also gave North Carolina temporary control of first place for all-time college basketball victories with 1,484. The two were tied before their battle in Chapel Hill.

In other games involving ranked teams Monday, No. 13 Oklahoma beat Coppin State 98-79 and No. 17 South Carolina defeated Charleston Southern 69-51.

"These guys are still coming along and they definitely have talent and they're definitely helping this team," Chilcutt said of the five newcomers. "They're helping right now."

"But this team has three great seniors that are really going to lead this team. In the second half of games, we've been in trouble and looked to Rick (Fox) and King (Rice) and myself for leadership, and we were able to get it."

That leadership was necessary in the final 13 minutes, when the Tar Heels (5-1) had to mount a comeback after John Pelphey's 3-pointer gave the Wildcats their biggest lead at 63-51.

Fox scored 10 points, Chilcutt 9 and Rice 4 in the closing 12 minutes as the trio finished with 14 points apiece.

George Lynch and Hubert Davis scored 13 points apiece for North Carolina.

Pelphey scored 24 points, half of them on 3-pointers, for Kentucky. No. 13 Oklahoma 98, Coppin St. 79.

Kermit Holmes and Brent Price led a second-half surge that carried Oklahoma to its 50th straight home victory. The Sooners (7-1) only led 44-42 early in the second half, but Holmes scored 10 points and Price added 6 in the next seven minutes as the Sooners opened a 68-52 lead and were not threatened again.

Price finished with 27 points and Holmes had 23 along with 12 rebounds.

Guard Reggie Isaac scored 21 of his 27 points in the first half to keep Coppin State (1-4) close. But Isaac didn't score in the second half until sinking two free throws with 5:11 remaining. No. 17 S. Carolina 69, Charleston Southern 51.

Jo Jo English scored 23 points and Barry Manning had 16 as South Carolina used a game-closing 17-4 run to defeat stubborn Charleston Southern for its fifth straight victory.

The Gamecocks (6-1) trailed 28-27 in the opening minutes of the second half, pulled ahead 38-35 with 13:49 left, then went on an 11-2 run to take a 49-37 lead.

Charleston Southern (1-3) came within 52-47 on David Oliver's three-point play with 5:42 left. But the Gamecocks responded with their 17-4 run in the remaining minutes for the final margin.

Oliver and Bernard Nelson led the Buccaneers with 16 points each.

LSU moves up

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A victory over Arizona pleased Louisiana State coach Dale Brown, but jumping to No. 12 in the polls didn't impress him.

"I've approached this, and I will try to do this the rest of my career, remembering that all this adulation is fool's gold," Brown said Monday night. "This game doesn't make a season or break a season. It was a great win, but it was just one."

While UNLV retained the No. 1 ranking in The Associated Press poll released Monday, LSU moved from No. 18 to No. 12 with a 92-82 victory over Arizona.

Brown said he adopted his new philosophy after last season when his team was highly ranked but finished 23-9 and tied for second place in the Southeastern Conference. LSU lost in the second round of the NCAA tournament to Georgia Tech.

"Last year wasn't any fun," Brown said. "I don't want to take the fun out of playing basketball for these kids. There are already so many pressures so I haven't once mentioned the NCAA Final Four or Indianapolis or anything else."

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — A limited study of five NCAA Division I-A schools suggests that more than a quarter of the nation's football players may have used steroids at least once.

A professor in Penn State's college of health and human development said Monday his study sets an "upper limit" of actual anabolic steroid use among college athletes, whereas an NCAA study done last year set a lower limit.

"The mean overall projected rate of use of anabolic steroids across all sports surveyed was 14.7 percent for male athletes and 5.9 percent of females," Professor Charles Yesalis said.

Yesalis, who worked with researchers from Penn State and five other schools, said the study shows that steroid use is more widespread than earlier thought. Last year's NCAA study, based on self-reporting, estimated steroid use at less than 5 percent.

"For years, a number of researchers have believed that with self-reporting there's an under-reporting of use," Yesalis said. "This represents an upper bound, and for the first time there are boundaries and somewhere in between is reality," Yesalis said.

Athletes at five schools that agreed to participate in the study were asked to estimate steroid use among their opponents. Even so, Yesalis said the athletes said a lot about their own programs.

Previous studies have shown that a significant amount of steroid use is tied to athletes' perception that their opponents are using them — in other words — "I only use them because he uses them."

"It's like going to expert informants on what's going on," Yesalis said. "It lets you project your behavior on others without endangering yourself. The literature does say that people who use drugs see more use around them."

The director of the NCAA's drug testing program said the self-reporting study probably did not detect all use and that college sports' largest governing body gave credence to the Yesalis report.

"Perceptions are very important in this area," said Frank Uryasz, the NCAA's director of sports sciences. "Athletes tell us if they were sure the guy across the line wasn't using steroids, they wouldn't."

Harvesters go for win number 10 tonight

The Pampa Harvesters host Liberal, Kan. at 7:30 p.m. tonight in McNeely Fieldhouse.

The Harvesters, 9-0, defeated Liberal, 92-80, enroute to winning the Hays Shootout earlier this month.

"Liberal has three things you don't like to see. They're well-coached, they have good athletes and they have good players," said PHS coach Robert Hale. "Liberal has as good a team as we've played this season."

Liberal has a good inside-outside combination in 6-4 1/2 sophomore post Martin Lewis and 5-10 senior guard Trey Meyer.

"Lewis is one of the best I've seen. He was all-state as a freshman last year. Meyer does a good job of running their show," Hale said. "Liberal has excellent height and excellent speed. It's going to be a good game for us."

Following tonight's game, the Harvesters get ready for the Canyon Classic in New Braunfels.

Pampa meets Del Valle at 12 noon Thursday in first-round action. The winner plays again at 12 noon Friday.

The tournament finals are scheduled for 8:30 p.m. Saturday night.

Other teams entered in the tournament are Pflugerville, Copperas Cove, Lockhart, Pleasanton, Denver City, Lake Travis, Taylor, Canyon and Sinton.

In girls' action, the Lady Harvesters meet Altus, Okla. in a second straight game at 6:30 p.m. tonight.

The Lady Harvesters defeated Altus, 61-57, Saturday for third place in the Texhoma Roundball Classic in Lawton, Okla. last weekend.

Mississippi State players impressed with Sherrill

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Mississippi State players say their first impression of new Bulldog coach Jackie Sherrill was a good one.

"He already seems like he'd be a father to us," said Tony James, a sophomore running back-kick returner from Clinton. "I like him. He says he doesn't have many rules. Just be on time."

The Bulldogs, who first met with Sherrill for about 20 minutes late Sunday afternoon, repeated words like "straightforward," "businesslike" and "confident" in describing the 13-year coaching veteran.

"I was real impressed," junior wide receiver Chris Firlie of Collins said. "I think we're all just real happy a decision has been made and we can go in the direction we all want to go."

"Coach Sherrill was real straightforward. He told us what he expected of us and asked us if we had any questions of him."

Firlie, like most of his teammates, had little knowledge of Sherrill beforehand.

"I haven't heard a lot about him," Firlie said. "I know he won at Pitt and at Texas A&M. But like he said, coaches don't win games, players do. It's his job to put the players in a position to win. He seems real confident he can do that."

Pascagoula sophomore linebacker Keith Joseph had done some research on Sherrill. Two of his hometown friends, Chris Osgood and Cornelius Patterson of Moss Point, played for Sherrill at Texas A&M.

"They say he's fun to play for," Joseph said. "They said he has a way of making you want to play hard. They say he's a motivator."

Joseph said Sherrill told the team "he was going to turn things around. He said that's what he came here for."

"He seemed very confident," Joseph said. "It was just like the first grade. You start with the ABC's and work up."

All players interviewed seemed relieved.

Said redshirt freshman guard Shea Bell, "It's been hectic trying to know who we were going to have. It's a relief now to finally have a big-name coach. We were like everyone else, just wondering who we were going to have."

Linebacker Reggie Stewart has no eligibility remaining but attended the meeting out of curiosity.

"It sounded good," Stewart said. "I'd like to have another year. It seems very positive. His record proves he's a winning coach. Chances of something good happening are real good."

Sherrill said at his press conference he always builds his offense around the quarterback. "We'll do what our quarterback can do," Sherrill said. "Whoever you have under the center dictates what you do offensively."

That sounded just fine to returning quarterback Sleepy Robinson of Jackson.

Bird leads Celtics past Rockets

HOUSTON (AP) — Larry Bird says he likes the challenge the Boston Celtics gave him when they switched him from small forward to power forward.

"I like the challenge of playing a new role," Bird said after leading the Celtics in a 15-0 run late in the fourth quarter of their 107-95 NBA victory over the Houston Rockets Monday night.

"There are new match ups and defensive assignments," Bird said after he highlighted the late five-minute run with two 3-point field goals.

"I really didn't want to shoot that far out, but 3-pointers have a way of demoralizing teams," Bird added.

"We tried for better shots, but the 3-pointers were open," said Bird, who finished with 21 points.

"We played good defense, we were scrappy, and we made some shots" in the last five minutes, Bird said.

"He steps up and takes the big shots when they have to be taken," said Celtics coach Chris Ford.

"Even though he has been struggling with his shot, he has to take them in that situation."

The game was a tight one for 43 minutes until the change in defensive strategy turned the tide in the Celtics favor.

The Celtics held Houston center Akeem Olajuwon in check most of the game by doubling up on him whenever he got the ball. This left the Rockets guards with wide open shots and Vernon Maxwell and Kenny Smith combined for 38 points, including 24 by Maxwell who also hit four 3-point field goals.

"Maxwell made us pay when we cheated on Akeem," said Celtics forward Kevin McHale, who had 23 points coming off the bench. "We tried to play more head-up defense, and then Larry hit some humongous threes."

Brian Shaw led all scorers, hitting 26 points for Boston.

In the last five minutes, the Celtics went to a man-to-man defense and the Rockets fell apart.

Maxwell gave Houston a 91-90 lead with five minutes left on his fourth 3-pointer of the game, but the Rockets didn't score again until only 18 seconds remained, and they trailed 105-91 at that point.

"Down the stretch, we played them straight up and were able to contain them and force them into a few turnovers," said Celtics guard Brian Shaw, who scored a game-high 26 points and grabbed a team-leading 12 rebounds.

"We played one-on-five basketball too much down the stretch and were not aggressive. We stood around too much," said Smith.

"That is a championship team. They are like they used to be," said Olajuwon. "Because of their experience you just can't make mistakes against them."

Trail Blazers hot team on the road

By JIM LITKE
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The Portland Trail Blazers may be better than even they know. Then again, maybe not. Consider:

There were four minutes left in Saturday night's match between the hottest teams in the East and West conferences, the Bulls' Michael Jordan was starting to cook and hostile, old Chicago Stadium was starting to sizzle.

The Trail Blazers were playing their sixth ballgame in a sixth different city in the last eight days. If ever there was a time on this trip to fold up the tent and a team against which to do so, this was it.

Catcalls were up by the thousands and Portland's lead was down, from a high of 17 points, to just 96-92. Almost half of a 60-second timeout was already gone, and no one in the Trail Blazers huddle had said a word.

Down on one knee in the middle, coach Rick Adelman rocked back and forth, adjusted his socks and read the weariness in the faces on three sides of him. He said something about Jordan, diagrammed a play on the floor using only his index finger and waited for the huddle to break up. Then, Adelman walked 15 feet up the floor, knelt, hunkered down at the end of the scorer's table and prepared to accept his fate.

This is how it went, the relevant stretch anyway, for those scoring at home:

3:50 — Jordan, hounded by two defenders, lost the ball out of bounds.

3:32 — Terry Porter, 3-point jump shot, assist Clyde Drexler, Portland 99-92.

3:24 — Jordan, airball, after crashing into teammate Bill Cartwright on drive from the top of the key.

3:13 — Drexler, layup, assist from Kevin Duckworth, Portland 101-92.

"People said, 'Wait until they go out on the road.' Well look at us now," Adelman said after Portland had secured a 109-101 win. "We've won eight in a row on the road."

"And it's obvious," he added, as though it were not, "that we can win anywhere."

So it is.

At 18-1, the Trail Blazers are off to the second-best start with one loss in NBA history. In the record book ahead of them are the New York Knicks of 1969-70, who broke from the gate at 23-1 and won the NBA championship that season. Behind them are the Milwaukee Bucks of 1970-71, who went out at 17-1 and won the NBA championship (then duplicated the fast start, but not the championship in 1971-72).

There might be a pattern developing here. If so, Adelman isn't inclined to read anything into it — yet.

"When you start like this, you hear about a lot of things. I've heard a lot about the law of percentages catching up with us, too. There's nothing to make of it. The idea is to win as many games as you can while you can."

"We know there are some other teams that can do it," he paused, "that will do it in the middle of the season or maybe at the end."

"What might be different about us right now is that we came back hungry because of what happened last year (in the NBA final against Detroit). We saw how close we got and how far we had to go. We learned the difference between winning and losing and came back hungry."

Oilers expect to be tested by Chiefs

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers don't expect to give Kansas City the same kind of treatment they gave to the Cleveland Browns.

"We just put the boot to them (Browns) for a change but Kansas City will present the real test for us," offensive tackle Bruce Matthews said.

The Oilers beat the Browns 58-14 in record fashion Sunday to get back into the AFC Central Division race with Cincinnati and Pittsburgh, all tied for the lead with 7-6 records.

But manhandling the Chiefs (9-4), who beat the Oilers 34-0 last year, will be another matter.

"They have a great pass rush and they can cover the pass as well as anybody," Matthews said.

Houston's hopes of returning to the NFL playoffs for the fourth straight year depend on their production in the next three games, beginning Sunday in Kansas City, where they've compiled a series record of 5-14.

Pardee realizes the challenge of the Chiefs is greater than that of the Browns.

"We weren't overlooking Cleveland but Kansas City was the next good team we played," Pardee said.

"Getting Cleveland behind us without overlooking them was very important. They're still a good team but they've had their problems this year."

Houston's 58 points against the Browns was a franchise record and it was also the most points the Browns have yielded in regular season.

The Oilers have had to contend with inconsistency this season. Pardee said his defense had its best game of the season against the Browns but putting good games together has been a problem.

The Oilers haven't reached 'great' status as a team, Pardee said.

"It's a team that's not great yet but it shows possibilities of being that at times," Pardee said. "It's hard to be in a position to be 7-6 and then get to the next step. It probably involves one or two players stepping up."

Lorenzo White and Terry Kinard gave Pardee what he was looking for in Sunday's blowout.

White had the first four-touchdown performance since Earl Campbell's Monday night performance in 1978 and Kinard returned a fumble 72 yards for a touchdown and had a 47-yard interception return that set up another score.

"Yesterday (Sunday) we finally got the defensive turnovers we needed," Pardee said. "Those two early turnovers (Kinard's) took the starch out of Cleveland. The way Lorenzo played allowed us to move the chains and control the ball."

Pardee says he doesn't have to remind the Oilers of the intensity of last year's game against the Chiefs.

"After last year's game, we don't have to sell the quality of the opposition on our team," Pardee said. "They are the one's who brought it up. They know if they don't really get after it, it could happen again."

The Oilers defense expects a strong test from the Chiefs' running game, led by Barry Word, 6-2, 240 (748 yards rushing) and Christian Okoye, 6-1, 260 (751 yards). Stephen Paige is the leading receiver with 53 catches for 861 yards and four touchdowns.

"We'll have 500 pounds of running backs coming at us all the time," Pardee said. "And when they don't run, they've got the speed receivers that can beat you deep. They either hammer you up front or get behind you."

Lions' Peete plays against his heroes

By HARRY ATKINS
AP Sports Writer

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Rodney Peete always wanted to play for the Raiders, first when they were in Oakland and later after they moved to Los Angeles.

He got to play against his heroes on Monday night as his Detroit Lions met the Raiders at the Silverdome.

"I grew up a Raiders fan," Peete said. "I liked them when I was still in high school. Later, when I was playing at Southern Cal, I probably knew as much about the Raiders as I did about my own teammates."

Despite an All-American career during which he set nearly every Southern Cal passing record, Peete was virtually ignored in the '89 draft. The Lions picked him up in the sixth round.

In his rookie season, Peete merely won the Lions' starting job. He completed 103 passes for 1,479 yards and five touchdowns, and it looked like both his future and the Lions' quarterback question were settled.

But the Lions drafted Heisman Trophy-winner Andre Ware this year and Peete's life has been a series of ups and downs ever since — but not because of Ware.

Lions coach Wayne Fontes said from the opening of camp that Peete was his quarterback. And Peete has started every game — when he was healthy.

But the coach, perhaps influenced by his Detroit Tigers counterpart Sparky Anderson — baseball's notorious Captain Hook — frequently has pulled Peete in favor of Bob Gagliano during games this season. It happened when the Lions met Chicago on Dec. 2; Peete started but was relieved early in the third quarter with the Lions behind 14-10.

The Lions eventually lost 23-17 in overtime.

"I'm still a little bit upset about getting pulled out of games, but that's past history," said Peete, who talked with Fontes before the Raiders' game. "He still says I'm the quarterback and I've just got to be ready to play."

Fontes said that he's likely to stay with Peete longer, now that the Lions are out of playoff contention.

"I think you'll see Rodney Peete staying in a little bit longer now," Fontes said. "I wanted him to have success and I didn't think it was happening. He knows he's the starting quarterback. He's just frustrated, like we all are."

Peete was 83 of 167 for 1,161 yards, eight touchdowns and three interceptions entering Monday night's game. Gagliano was 87 of 159 for 1,190 yards, 10 touchdowns with 10 interceptions.

"I don't think you'll see anybody let up just because we're out of contention," Gagliano said.

"We've got a lot of young guys and they're pretty enthusiastic."

Oddly enough, the most highly publicized young player — Ware — hasn't been a factor. After missing training camp in a contract dispute, Ware has played sparingly. He completed 12 of 25 passes for 150 yards and one TD through Detroit's first 12 games.

Bears' Ditka honored

DALLAS (AP) — Chicago Bears coach Mike Ditka is the 1990 recipient of Dallas All Sports Association's 6th annual Field Scovell Award, which honors outstanding morals, citizenship, integrity and dedication, as well as athletic achievement.

Nolan Ryan won the award in 1989. Ditka will accept the award in Dallas on Feb. 19, 1991, at the organization's award banquet.

"I am honored and deeply touched by this," Ditka said Monday in a release. "The Field Scovell Award means a great deal to me. Field Scovell has touched many people, and he always gives something back."

Ditka was the sixth coach honored by the award, which is given annually to a sports figure chosen on outstanding morals, citizenship, integrity and dedication, as well as athletic achievement.

Scovell formed the volunteer, non-profit Dallas All Sports Association in 1965. The organization promotes athletics and sporting events in the Dallas area.

Ditka, the Bears' coach since 1982, is a former player and assistant coach with the Dallas Cowboys. Under him, the Bears have clinched the NFL's Central Division championship this season.
