High school students have chance to check out future in Career Day

By BEAR MILLS Staff Writer

Pampa High School students got six consultants.' some help Wednesday answering the question, "What do I want to be when I grow up?"

Altrusa Club co-sponsored Career Day at PHS, bringing members of 100 professions, from as far away as Florida, to the campus for briefings on their fields and to answer questions.

Career consultants came at their companies' expense to be part of the day, which was termed by one education expert as a model for the nation. Sandy Carter of the Region XVI

Educational Service Center in Amarillo said she has viewed numerous such programs, and even organized several, but that Pampa's is by far the best.

"I don't just say that because I'm like this and what you have put together is a model that others can use to implement their career days."

Professions represented ranged from interpreting to engineering, modeling to machinist, architecture to archaeology.

Vocational counselor Donna Crow said, "We try to conform the list to reflect predominant careers and those predominant in young to explore different careers and find them. Students can attend three ses-

OPEC ministers endorse continuing high oil output

Bennett decides not to take GOP chairmanship

WASHINGTON (AP) - William Bennett today told President Bush that he would not accept the chairmanship of the Republican National Committee, citing financial reasons.

Bennett, who recently resigned as the nation's drug policy director, told President Bush in a letter that taking the job would conflict with planned outside interests, including a book contract.

Therefore, Bennett told Bush, he was turning down the offer "with the deepest reluctance." The White House released a copy of the letter.

Bennett was chosen for the top party post in November when President Bush decided to replace ailing Lee Atwater, who is undergoing treatment for a brain tumor.

The conflicts, he said, would preclude him from carrying out a Simon and Schuster book contract, as well as consulting and speaking

He said he had spoken to several lawyers in addition to Gray, including his personal lawyer Robert Barnett and his brother Robert Bennett.

"I have now determined, with the deepest reluctance, that I cannot serve his outside activities for one year.

Bennett told reporters that as both chairman of the Republican lawyers, including White House National Committee and fulfill these personal and other professional responsibilities," Bennett said in his letter.

"Among these is a longstanding contractural commitment to Simon and Schuster to write two books. They have recently advised, underestandably, that they cannot extend my commitment to them for yet another two years," he added.

Traditionally, the head of the party has been allowed to have outside income, as has the head of the Democratic National Committee.

However, the fact that Bennett would go right from government service into the party position puts him under an ethics law that limits

Daily diet of beef, pork and lamb strongly linked to colon cancer

BOSTON (AP) – Scientists today reported some of the strongest evidence yet that red meat significantly raises the risk of colon cancer.

The findings came as no surprise to health experts who have been urging reduced red meat consumption for years because of its links to heart disease and cancer, but the new study solidifies beliefs about its cancer

"Moderate red meat intake is certainly better than large amounts, but it's quite possible that no red meat intake is even better," said Dr. Walter C. Willett, who directed the study at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Another non-surprise in the study of 88,751 nurses from 1980 to 1986 was the finding that switching to fish and chicken helped reduce the risk of colon can-

Colon cancer is the second-leading cancer killer after lung cancer. An estimated 110,000 new cases will be diagnosed in the United States this year.

In the study, 150 of the women studied got colon cancer. Although all the participants were women, the increased colon cancer risk.

Dr. David Hurt, a nutritionist with the National Livestock and Meat Board in Chicago, said the study is outdated. Beef is 27 percent leaner and pork is 31 percent leaner than in 1986, when the nurses' data were gathered, he said.

"I don't see how these numbers can relate to today's situation," he said of the study. "Meat today is not the same as it was then.'

Among the Boston researchers' findings:

Women who ate beef, pork or lamb as a main dish every day were 2 1/2 times more likely to get colon cancer than were those who ate it less than once a month.

 For those who consumed meat less frequently, the between once a month and once a week had about 40 percent higher risk than the abstainers. The risk was about 50 percent higher for those who ate meat two to four times a week and 80 percent higher for those who had it five or six times.

Last plane leaves Baghdad with U.S. diplomats from Kuwait aboard

By CHRISTOPHER BURNS Associated Press Writer

After three months without adequate food or water in the besieged U.S. Embassy in Kuwait, Ambassador Nathaniel Howell and his staff left Baghdad for home today on a chartered flight that reportedly carried 25 other Americans.

Officials said the last five U.S. diplomats from Kuwait were among 94 passengers on an Iraqi Airways flight to Frankfurt, Germany. It was said to be the last charter plane carrying foreigners from Iraq and occu-

FEC: Wright failed to disclose use of S&L exec's plane

By JENNIFER DIXON Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Two fund-raising committees for former House Speaker Jim Wright have acknowledged that they accepted an illegal contribution from a Texas businessman implicated in the savings and loan scandal, according to the Federal Election Commission.

FEC spokesman Scott Moxley said Wednesday that Wright's principal fund-raising committee and his leadership political action committee have agreed to pay penalties totaling $1,500 to settle the case.

Wright, a Fort Worth Democrat who was House majority leader at the time, was on his way to Haiti Wednesday and could not be reached for comment, a spokesman said.

At issue was Wright's use of a chartered airplane that crisscrossed Texas between June 30 and July 2, 1985, to promote a "Cowtown Jamboree" in Fort Worth. The fund raiser sought to raise $1 million for Wright's principal campaign committee, the Wright Appreciation Committee, and his leadership PAC, the Majority Congress Committee.

Under the conciliation agreement, the two committees acknowledged they accepted an illegal contribution from the owner of the plane, Kenneth C. Hood, and that they failed to disclose the receipt of the contribution. The committees also acknowledged a violation stemming from the way they repaid Hood for the use of the plane 46 months later, Moxley said. Wright repaid Hood $8,050 for the use of the plane in April 1989, in the midst of a House ethics committee investigation that led to his resignation a month later. At the time, Wright said the failure to pay the bill was an "oversight."

Hood had purchased the plane from Sunbelt Savings Association, a failed thrift in Dallas, through a $1.3 million loan from Sunbelt. Hood owed Sunbelt Savings $90 million by the end of 1986, the FEC said.

Hood told the FEC that Edwin McBirney, then owner of Sunbelt Savings Association, said Wright needed the airplane, and that McBirney promised that he and Thomas M. Gaubert, owner of another S&L, would pay for the trip. After the flight, Hood said McBirney and Gaubert told him that it would be a "positive gesture" to absorb some of the costs, Moxley said. Hood then billed them $8,050, two-thirds of the actual cost, Moxley said

Gaubert told the FEC he was merely a passenger on the flight and was not connected to the campaign committee or to Hood, Moxley said. McBirney denied he forced Hood to let Wright use the jet.

Gaubert, whose S&L was closed by state regulators in 1987, had persuaded Wright to intervene with federal regulators on behalf of the Irving-based thrift, Independent American Savings Association.

FEC's general counsel had recommended that the commission find Wright violated the law because he was on the airplane, but the FEC found no reason to believe that was the case. The commission also said it had no reason to believe McBirney or Gaubert paid for any costs of the flight, Moxley said.

The commission, however, said it found reason to believe Hood made excess, illegal contributions to Hood was sentenced Feb. 15, 1990, to two years in prison and fined $50,000 for making false statements to a federally insured institution - Sunbelt Savings. He also was sentenced to five years' probation and fined another $50,000 for conspiring to defraud the Internal Revenue Service.

McBirney was indicted in July on 17 counts alleging bank fraud, misappropriation of funds, false cut its $1 billion bank debt. entries and making false statements to regulators. In another matter involving Wright, the FEC said it found no reason to believe Fort Worth businessman George Mallick and his company, The Mallick Co., violated the law by leasing office space to another Wright campaign committee, Wright's Congressional Club.

The quake struck at about 1:30 a.m. and registered 4.7 on the Richter scale, the Ministry of Civil Protection reported.

The ministry said five bodies have been recovered and 11 other people were unaccounted for and feared buried under rubble.

At least 30 people were injured,

Rescue crews were digging people out of collapsed buildings and making inspections in towns hit hardest by the quake. Many people spent the rest of the night in their cars, fearing further shocks.

The quake's epicenter was in the Gulf of Noto, about 30 miles southeast of the city of Syracuse, said the National Institute of Geophysics.

Hardest hit appeared to be Carlentini, a town of 10,000 people between Catania and Syracuse

Colleges should cut the costs of learning

Applause, please, for Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos, who is suggesting a heretical idea to American colleges: Streamline your operations before Middle America is priced out of higher education.

College tuition continues to outpace inflation; this academic year alone, reports The Wall Street Journal, tuition and fees rose an average 8 percent at private four-year colleges, nearly double the inflation rate, and 7 percent at public four-year colleges.

The lesson? Some serious cost-cutting on campus is long over-

But while Mr. Cavazos rates applause for that message, the feds need to do more than lecture on the issue. The hart fact is, their own student-aid policies have poured petrol onto the inflation conflagration on American campuses.

Federal student loans and grants to the middle class serve a perverse function similar to that of third-party payments in the nation's health-care system: They make consumers less sensitive to sky-high prices because somebody else is helping to pay the bill.

If more students and their families had to cover more of their college expenses up-front, more colleges would be run like competitive businesses, with a closer eye to efficiency and the bottom line.

Why? Because they'd feel the heat from consumers to streamline staffs, force under-worked professors to spend more time teaching and close down unneeded programs – all in order to restrain

The government also fails to help when it takes barrels full of taxpayers' money and pours them over our colleges and universities for various research projects and institutes that could be better handled, and probably more efficiently, by the private sector. If colleges and universities spent as much time on teaching students as their staffs and professors do in going after government handouts, then our education at the higher levels would receive a significant boost. The poor who have become dependent on federal aid aren't the only ones who would benefit from a leaner welfare program. If schools had to depend upon their own funding resources to fund research projects and institutes, then they would discover that the time would be better spent on the necessary projects and not on the frivolous and unproductive. And more professors would be forced to spend more time in the classroom, where their time could be better utilized for the reason they were hired - to teach.

What is inflation, but more dollars chasing a constant supply of goods or services? Should it come as a surprise that when Washington shovels greenbacks into college loan and grant programs, and the numerous research projects and institutes, the price of higher education should rocket skyward? Time to drain this spaceship of its fuel and bring it back down to earth.

Changing course in mid-air

Harvard economist Jeffrey Sachs, one of the brains behind Poland's radical economic reform; once defended it by saying that you can't cross a chasm in two leaps. The results of this month's presidential election suggest that the Polish people, suspended in mid-air between a communist past and a capitalist future, are sorely tempted to stop and reconsider their route.

In barely a year, the nations of the old Soviet bloc (including the Soviet Union itself) have succeeded at an astonishing achievement - shucking off communism and setting off on the road to free-market democracy. After that, anything else sounds easy.

But Poles have found what their neighbors will soon discover: Junking communism is simpler than replacing it. Building a new society requires sacrifice just when it seems that sacrifice should be relegated to the grim past. The temptation is to seize on palliatives that relieve today's discomfort instead of unappetizing remedies that promise a permanent cure.

Countries, unfortunately, can just as easily slide backward as march forward. If Poland can't negotiate the arduous route ahead, no one can be optimistic about its onetime communist neighbors.

Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, once Solidarity's chief intellectual and a close confederate of Lech Walesa, had the thankless duty of launching an ambitious economic reform with no assurance he would be around to savor the eventual fruits.

The transition program was drastic - slashing trols, throwing open the doors to imports, scrapping prohibitions on private businesses, shutting about as enjoyable as getting run over by a bus. The employment rate is now up to 5.5 percent – normal for a capitalist country but bloodcurdling to people accustomed to guaranteed jobs. With prices up and subsidies down, those workers who still have jobs find food and rent gobbling up most of their income. Farmers have seen the prices they pay rise much faster than the prices they get.

runaway inflation has been stopped dead and productivity has jumped. Poles see the progress, but they wonder if it's worth the price.

In new democracies as in old, leaders who preside over economic distress rarely get returned to power. Mazowiecki, who took office in 1989 with an approval rating near 90 percent, got 18 percent of the vote. He finished behind the two candidates who indulged the desire for progress without pain.

Walesa obviously owed his first-place finish the government budget deficit, lifting price con- more to his heroic leadership of Solidarity than to popular disenchantment with the economic reform. He also pledged to continue the basic program, down some factories and laying off excess workers. calling it "the only line possible if we are to catch

But he suggested that workers should be protected from excessive sacrifice, implying he would keep some unproductive factories in business. He said things like, "I can make you in a very short time both rich and wise and make Poland different." He talked about ruling by decree.

His opponent in Sunday's runoff election went beyond flirting with irresponsibility to jumping into bed with it. No one knows exactly what Stanislaw Tyminski, the Polish-born Canadian businessman who came back to run, would have done if he had been elected. But it was not encouraging to hear him denouncing the government for allowing foreign investment, proposing that Poland acquire nuclear weapons or attacking the economic reform with the promise that if elected, "things will be better within a month.'

Sound policies can yield dramatic results -Poland's already have - but they can't repeal economic reality. Unsound policies, as suggested by Tyminski and to a lesser extent Walesa, would throw away the hard-won gains of the last year and could spawn an even deeper and riskier disen-

A healthy democracy requires a healthy economic system, which raises the question whether the new democracy can weather the intense pressures on constructing the new economic system. Poles can't clear the chasm in two leaps. But what if it's too wide to cross in one?

Today is Thursday, Dec. 13, the 347th day of 1990. There are 18 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On Dec. 13, 1577, five ships commanded by Sir Francis Drake embarked on Drake's famous circumnavigation of the globe, a journey that took almost three years.

Some might scoff at the fact I consider myself quite the expert on the economy.

I am not without portfolio. I was treasurer of my freshman class in high school, and I take The Wall Street Journal at home.

I don't read it, but when friends drop by, they are impressed when they see my dog, Catfish, eating table scraps off the front page.

defendant in the murder trial of ecologist and union activist Chico Mendes stunned a courtroom Wednesday by confessing to the crime during the first day of the proceeding.

During questioning by Judge Adair Longhini, Darci Alves Pereira, 23, admitted shooting Mendes in an ambush in 1988. The young cattle rancher had denied any role in the killing during routine opening motions this morning.

As bailiffs led Pereira from the courtoom in this remote Amazon jungle town, Longhini stopped them and questioned the defendant again. Pereira paused, then looked up

Sexual abuse of children is common

DEAR ABBY: When I married Roy (not his real name), I had two daughters, ages 9 and 5, from a previous marriage. Roy began to sexually molest the older one. It was almost two years before she told me about it. She told because she was afraid that her younger sister was in danger of being molested, too.

Abby, this was a terrible shock to me. I knew things like this happened to children, but I never believed it could happen in my family.

I am now divorced from Roy, and my children are doing well after much hail before going to trial and has been missing for almost a year. It upsets me to know that he is out there somewhere, probably with a new identity, and he may be sexually abusing other unsuspecting children. I am writing this to alert

Sports Coaches expect a shootout

SAN DIEGO (AP) - LaVell = Edwards and R.C. Slocum say they don't want to see a high-scoring game when their teams meet in this year's Holiday Bowl. But they're expecting a shootout anyway.

Slocum's Texas A&M Aggies will face the challenge of stopping Brigham Young quarterback Ty Detmer, this year's Heisman Trophy

Edward's Cougars, in turn, will have to concentrate on Aggies running back Darren Lewis, the alltime Southwest Conference career Slocum said. "Being an old defenrushing leader.

Connecticut displays shutout defense

By The Associated Press

There's never been a shutout in college basketball, and no one ever expects one. Connecticut had one for almost 12 minutes against New Hampshire, and that got people heading for the exits early.

"I wanted to leave twice, but they wouldn't let me," New Hampshire coach Jim Boylan said Wednesday night after his Wildcats were held scoreless for 11:48 as the 16thranked Huskies took a 32-0 lead on the way to an 85-32 victory. "It is difficult. I'm sure everyone can imagine being in a position like that. But until you're actually in it, it's hard to imagine.'

The Huskies (5-1) had four steals in the opening 4:26 to take a 10-0 lead as their pressing defense intimidated the Wildcats. New Hampshire (0-7) began forcing shots and had no luck as several rimmed out.

The Wildcats scored their first point on a free throw by Doug Lang with 8:12 left in the half. New Hampshire's first field goal was an 8-footer by Lang with 6:20 to go in the half to make it 38-3.

In other Wednesday games involving ranked teams, it was: No. 3 Syracuse 92, Canisius 83; No. 5 Georgetown 75, St. Leo 45; No. 8 Ohio State 90, Wright State 60; and No. 17 South Carolina 93, Furman

New Hampshire shot just 15 percent for the game (10-for-65) and had just two assists against 31 turnovers. There was a 21-0 run in the second half which gave the Huskies a 75-17 lead with 9 minutes to play. "You question your abilities. You question your coaching. It's a real difficult thing to take," Boylan said. "As a player it's very frustrating. As a coach it is very hard."

College basketball

The Huskies had 14 steals and four blocked shots as they took a 51-14 halftime lead.

"I know the feeling, and once it starts it never stops," Huskies coach Jim Calhoun said. "I know the feeling, believe me. It's help-

No. 3 Syracuse 92, Canisius 83 The Orangemen improved to 8-0 with the uninspired victory, the 1.300th in school history. Billy Owens had 34 points to lead Syracuse, which led 81-65 with 4:02 remaining only to see the visiting Golden Griffins (4-2) get within 87-81 with 1:07 to play.

"They probably took us lightly," said Canisius forward Nixon Dyall, who had 21 points.

No. 5 Georgetown 75, St. Leo 45 Dikembe Mutombo, playing with a sprained left thumb, had 22 points, 14 rebounds and six blocked shots as the Hoyas improved to 6-0. But only two of the wins have been over Division I opponents.

St. Leo, a Division II school, has yet to win in eight games this season. Tyrone Graves led the visiting Monarchs, who trailed 41-21 at halftime, with 14 points.

No. 8 Ohio State 90, Wright State

The Buckeyes (5-0) were held under 111 points for the first time this season and saw their 48-point average margin of victory fall. Ohio State blew it open with a 28-2 run in the second half as its press started working after the Raiders had tied the game 39-39.

Jim Jackson led Ohio State with 20 points. Bill Edwards' 23 led visiting Wright State (2-4). No. 17 South Carolina 93, Fur-

The Gamecocks (7-1) scored 34 points off 25 turnovers as they handed Furman (3-3) its worst loss in 19 years.

Rhett and Barry Manning each had 19 points, while Chris Bass led the Paladins with nine points.

Jolly Saint Nick has great outdoors gifts

Tis the season and does the jolly little fat man have some great gifts for all the good boys and girls in the great outdoors. With less than two weeks before Christmas, you better start dropping some pointed hints to your favorite Santa.

SOME GIFTS CANNOT BE BOUGHT - The naming of a NEW PRESIDENT of WTSU is a present that promises a brighter future for our university.

What kind of a guy is DR. BARRY THOMPSON? Well, if you love the outdoors, that's an easy question to answer. HE IS OUR KIND OF GUY.

During a telephone interview, Dr. Thompson revealed that he is "a big fan of fishing, particularly bass fishing." While admitting that his time in the outdoors is limited, he is "very much looking forward to some wing shooting." Inviting him on a quail hunt sounds like a good idea.

Most of the students will identify with this West Texas native who admits that he "thought the mesquite was the State Tree of Texas" until he was 18 years old. Like I said – he's our kind of guy and we wish him good luck.

SOME GIFTS CAN BE BOUGHT - The Texas Parks and Wildlife Magazine is a perfect gift for an out-of-state friend or anyone who enjoys magnificent pictures of Texas. It is a real bargain at only $10; call 1-800-937-9393.

Honey Hole magazine is a great gift for that dedicated fisherman. Written by Texans for Texans. The cost for my favorite magazine is only $15 per year; call 1-817-738-5596

Every tackle shop, hunting store and boat dealer now has GIFT CERTIFICATES that will come in handy for those January bargains.

To help pass the time this winter, a super gift idea is HUNTING AND FISHING VIDEO TAPES. Topics range from turkey calling to rattling up trophy deer. Every fishing tape by Bill Dance is full of "secrets." Classic fishing videos are BIGMOUTH and TOP TO BOTTOM. Rent a tape for a couple of dollars or buy one for about $20.

Speaking of winter, the warmest piece of clothing that I own is called a BALACLAVA, a sheer stocking for the head. It works so well that I only wear it on the coldest days. For only $10 it is available at motorcycle stores (!) or call 1-800-BASS PRO.

The hottest item to hit the outdoors market this year is the BIG LEAGUE BASS CARDS. Similar to baseball cards except these are the FIRST edition and should become valuable. To order the 1990 collection for about $15, call Michael Jones at 1-714-244-2811.
