

How Kennedy Did It: 2

Patient Negotiations Pay Off In Ohio; Hard Decision Right One In Wisconsin

Second of three dispatches
By BRUCE BLOSSAT
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

LOS ANGELES (NEA) — When Sen. John F. Kennedy flew to Jamaica last December for a two-week holiday, he was buoyed by more than the Christmas spirit. Just before he left, he'd had an important telephone call.

On the other end of the wire that day was Gov. Michael V. DiSalle of Ohio. He told Kennedy he would announce in early January his unreserved support of the senator's presidential candidacy.

Kennedy was jubilant. The call capped a long series of personal contacts with the governor, negotiations always fraught with risk. From early 1959 the senator had eyed Ohio's 64 delegate votes. Few politicians dare dream of bucking a favorite son; but Kennedy, knowing he had great strength in the state, was ready to take on DiSalle.

Some advisers wanted to leap into Ohio's primary and be done with it.

Yet, contrary to many accounts, the senator never tried to bulldoze. Patiently he kept the talks going, confident the two could reach accord. The mid-December call was his reward.

A few days after Kennedy's formal entry, DiSalle dropped his bomb. The shock wave hit every politician from coast to coast. Until that moment, many professionals felt Kennedy's evident popularity wouldn't convert to delegates. They expected the big states to hang back in doubt over his three big strikes: his religion, his youth, and his money.

But there it was, a big "Ohio—64 votes" hung up on the Kennedy scoreboard. The bold stroke imparted momentum to his campaign everywhere. Stunned professionals shook their heads in admiration.

The January day Kennedy returned from Jamaica, he found a fresh report on his desk which weighed favorably his chances of winning the Wisconsin primary in April against Sen. Hubert Humphrey.

Shortly afterward, walking down the Senate office building corridor with this reporter, he said casually: "I think I'll go into Wisconsin. It looks as if I'll do all right there."

Up to that point, the arguments against going in had been weighty. Wisconsin was "Humphrey's backyard." He was figured to take the state's western sectors—rural and Protestant. Kennedy men worried that a loss there would be viewed as proof the senator, as a Catholic couldn't get votes in Protestant farm areas. Humphrey also enjoyed major-labor backing in the eastern industrial tier of Wisconsin.

Gradually, however, the notion jelled in Kennedy's mind that entry in Wisconsin was inescapable. His whole case was founded on entering the primaries and daring all challenges. To stay out would mean facing the charge of "ducking."

Yet, even with the decisive favorable report in hand, Kennedy held off announcing entry until his brother Bobby and others had a chance to dramatize the hazards of the Wisconsin encounter.

Though Kennedy on April 5 defeated Humphrey by 107,000 and won two-thirds of Wisconsin's 31 delegate votes, Humphrey took the western zones as forecast. Most professionals across the country found Kennedy's triumph solid. As feared, however, there were many published interpretations loss of the Protestant farm sectors.

Nevertheless, when he jumped into the West Virginia primary a week later, Wisconsin in retrospect looked like a light sparring match. (Next: The decisions that staved off disaster, and the one NOT to act.)

New Concept Of Political Campaigning Opened Up

By WILLIAM THEIS
United Press International

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Sen. John F. Kennedy didn't capture the Democratic presidential nomination with just mirrors and money.

He did it with daring, personality, a lot of money — and the most effective political organization since the heyday of James A. Farley.

That added up to a powerhouse effort. And if there is anything that commands political respect—however reluctant—it's power. The Massachusetts senator had some rough party terrain to cross on the long road to Los Angeles. But, like the Army engineers, he had a "Bailey bridge" to carry him into the camps of the political pros.

His "bridge" from the Senate and Cape Cod to the operating levels of the Democratic "pros" was bald-pated, cigar-smoking John M. Bailey, Democratic state chairman of Connecticut. Bailey not only knew the party professionals and where to find them—he's one himself.

Ribicoff—Man in Ranks Kennedy's man in the ranks of Democratic governors was Abraham A. Ribicoff, the suave governor from Connecticut.

Together and apart, they worked the grass roots and the state capitals, the regional and national political sessions, for Jack Kennedy.

Kennedy's brothers, Bobby and Ted, startled the old pros with the drive they displayed in the long series of presidential primaries won by the senator.

Bailey in particular has been criss-crossing the country in behalf of the 43-year-old New Englander for many months. He is as well known among state leaders and political writers as Jim Barley was at his New Deal peak.

If that sounds like an exaggeration, the convention outcome is as good an answer as any.

Sample of Effectiveness One sample of Bailey-Kennedy effectiveness: Who was it who met and rode from the airport into downtown Los Angeles with Pennsylvania's Gov. David L. Lawrence? John Bailey.

"I'm here to meet an old friend," was Bailey's soft explanation. And the point is, he was. Another impressive thing was Kennedy's use of a new political "mix." He used the lick-in-the-open primary approach, the public image television pitch and the smoke-filled room.

The mistake of the Johnson, Symington and Stevenson supporters appears to have been in not recognizing the punch in the Kennedy effort sooner. The warning signs have been flying since 1956. They've been flapping in the opponents' faces since Kennedy won his first primary in March.

Johnson, who had been hinting broadly all week that Kennedy was too young and inexperienced for the presidency, promptly declared himself "proud to stand beside and stand behind the next president of the United States, Jack Kennedy. He promised to 'stump the country, from coast to coast' to help Kennedy defeat Richard M. Nixon in November.

Hotel lobbies and corridors were buzzing today with three questions:

Why did Kennedy choose Johnson?

What will be the political effect of the Kennedy-Johnson ticket?

Why did the ambitious and sensitive Johnson agree to take a crack at a job which officially has little but ceremonial trappings when he already is safely entrenched in one of the most powerful political posts in the country?

To Strengthen Ticket

Kennedy's move clearly was an attempt to cement in the party together and to strengthen the Democratic national ticket in the South, which he gave little attention in his pre-convention campaign for the presidential nomination. Johnson was backed almost unanimously by Southern delegates for the presidential nomination.

Govs. Ernest Vandiver of Georgia, Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina and J. Lindsay Almond of Virginia and Terry Sanford, Democratic nominee for governor of North Carolina, were among the Democratic leaders whom Kennedy consulted Thursday on the vice presidential choice.

They urged the nomination of Johnson to help strengthen the ticket in the South. Other Southern leaders applauded the choice, although Gov. Ross G. Barnett of Mississippi said he doubted that Mississippi would support the party's presidential ticket next November.

When he announced the selection, Kennedy told a news conference that he had consulted leaders of all segments of the party.

"I have said many times that in these days of great challenge, Americans must have a vice president capable of dealing with the grave problems confronting this nation and the free world," the Massachusetts senator said.

"We need men of strength if we are to be strong and if we are to prevail and lead the world on the road of freedom. Lyndon Johnson has demonstrated on many occasions his brilliant qualifications for the leadership we require today."

"I am sure he would be very willing to do that," replied McCormack. "I will give him your suggestion at once."

In the meanwhile, Kennedy's father had called on Johnson and urged him to run with his son. Johnson declared he preferred to stay in the Senate.

"A vote is a lot more important than a gavel," he pointed out. The elder Kennedy contended this was a "narrow view," and that as vice president, Johnson would exercise much more influence than "one voter." In the end, Johnson remarked:

"The thing for Jack to do is to make up his mind who he thinks would be best for the country and for the party, and ask him to be his running mate. I don't think any patriotic American would refuse such a call."

Knight's dispatch said Sen. Kennedy "couldn't believe his ears" when his brother reported the conversation and called on Johnson himself. Johnson, the dispatch said, repeated his request directly to the presidential standard bearer.

The dispatch said Kennedy reacted to the "ultimatum" by saying he would like to discuss the idea with several state leaders.

Kennedy then reported Johnson's demand to Mayor Richard Daley of Chicago Gov. David Lawrence of Pennsylvania, Gov. Mike DiSalle of Ohio, all of whom were "equally astonished," according to the account.

Johnson's demand, the Knight dispatch said, kept Kennedy and the other leaders in conference from 10:30 a.m. p.d. until 3 p.m. p.d. Thursday.

"Eventually," it said, "all agreed that they couldn't risk a fight with Johnson without endangering the party's chances in November.

They had been doubled-crossed by Kennedy, who won the presidential nomination with their support.

Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan called the choice a "mistake." Some other members of his Michigan delegation spoke bluntly. Mrs. Elsie Smith of Detroit called it a "double cross" and said "We are all burned up." Horace Sheffield of Detroit said, "I wish now I had voted for Stevenson." Walter Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers, was "unhappy."

Adults Accept Or Reject Faith, But Don't Really Understand It

REV. AND MRS. CHARLES ISBILL
... Jehovah Witness Missionaries

Two Former Pampans Choose New Guinea

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Isbill, formerly of Pampa, will graduate from the Watchtower Bible School of Gilead, South Lansing, N.Y., during a two-day program July 23 and 24. They completed a five and one-half month course which highlighted missionary service and have been assigned to work in New Guinea.

Mr. and Mrs. Isbill are originally from Boerne. He has been active as a full-time minister of Jehovah's Witnesses since 1952. Mr. Isbill served as minister of the local congregation in 1959, and it was while here that the Isbills were invited to attend Gilead School.

Since the school's beginning in 1943, it has graduated 3,500 students who are now serving in over 100 countries. The 35th class is composed of 84 students from Canada, Denmark, Australia and the United States.

Millions of American adults have accepted or rejected the Christian faith without bothering to learn much about it.

This fact is well known to clergymen of all denominations. They find in their own congregations men and women who are very active in church work, but who have never read the New Testament. Outside the church, they encounter many otherwise-intelligent people who repudiate Christianity on the basis of infantile concepts of its doctrines.

A major effort to remedy this situation is now underway. Churches, which have long concentrated their religious training efforts on children, are beginning to give high priority to adult education.

Many different methods are being tried to attract adults to a serious study of religion.

Another approach, steadily growing in favor, is to bring a group of adults together for an intensive weekend of worship and study in a secluded place—a retreat house or conference center—away from the distractions of home, job and family. This kind of experience can be very rewarding. But it is difficult for many adults to take a weekend leave from their domestic responsibilities, however much they may need and want it.

For adults who are willing to expend as much intellectual sweat on their religion as they do on their hobbies, there are two excellent routes to a more mature faith.

One is to take a formal course of religious instruction under a trained teacher. Such courses are being offered on the adult level in many communities. They are sponsored by individual churches, by denominational bodies, and by interdenominational church councils. The classes customarily meet one or two evenings a week for periods ranging from six weeks to several months.

Another approach, steadily growing in favor, is to bring a group of adults together for an intensive weekend of worship and study in a secluded place—a retreat house or conference center—away from the distractions of home, job and family. This kind of experience can be very rewarding. But it is difficult for many adults to take a weekend leave from their domestic responsibilities, however much they may need and want it.

The other solution, universally available, is reading books. Within the last few years, denominational and commercial publishing houses have issued hundreds of books, written by outstanding scholars and aimed at the intelligent layman who has had little or no previous exposure to religious teaching. Many of them are obtainable in inexpensive paperback editions.

How do you know which books to read? Ask your pastor—or any clergyman in whom you have confidence—to suggest a reading list. If you belong to or lean towards any of the major denominations, you'll probably find that it has published its own series of books especially designed for the systematic self-education of adults.

To cite just a few examples, the Episcopalians have their five-volume "Church's Teaching Series" (Seabury Press); the Presbyterians their "Layman's Theological Library" (Westminster Press); the Methodists their "Know Your Faith Series" (Abingdon Press); the Catholics a 150-volume library called "The Twentieth Century Encyclopedia of Catholicism" (Hawthorn Books). There are many others.

There is, finally, the great of all religious books. Nearly everyone has a copy or it, but few people read it more.

It is called the Bible.

which meet informally on Sunday mornings while the children are in church school classes, or perhaps on week nights in someone's home.

With interested participants and a good leader, a discussion group can stimulate some hard and helpful thinking about religion. But if the participants are long on opinions and short on factual knowledge, and if they are unwilling to do any homework for their meetings, as often is the case, a discussion group can quickly degenerate into a kaffeeklatsch with little educational value to anyone.

Success Of Big Picnic Depends On Planning

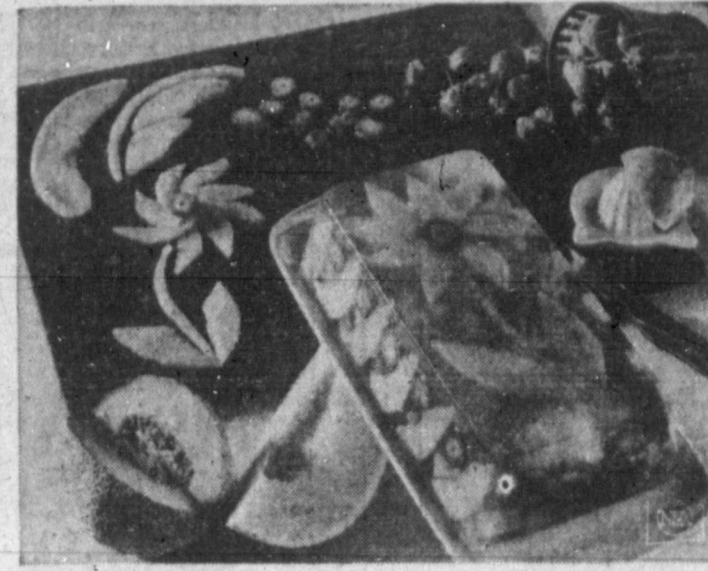

For big group picnics sandwiches may be prepared in quantity by the production line method above.

By KAY SHERWOOD
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
The BIG picnic to gather the an, honor an anniversary of celebrate an annual club outing is an american summertime institution that's relished with as much gusto today as it was a half century ago. Fresh air, plentiful food and a names combine to make happy memories and fond memories. But back of a successful group outing is careful planning. If you've been put in charge of a large picnic you may find these suggestions helpful as I have. These are ideas researched from government and private sources by a friend of mine who plans a pamphlet on the subject.
First step is to set up your planning committees, with yourself as chairman and with three other volunteers who will head preparation, serving and clean-up committees. Each picnic presents different problems but an outline of committee responsibilities might serve as a guide.

The planning committee will choose the picnic refreshments, organize their packing and transportation. The picnic site should be inspected and its facilities checked. In some towns a permit is required if you plan to take over a part of a municipal park for a big picnic.
When planning the menu try to include dishes that have the most appeal to the majority of people, young and old. It's wise to avoid foods that are likely to crumble, dry out or become soggy.
To be on the safe side, avoid foods with creamy fillings, cream, egg or mayonnaise dressings which may under certain conditions cause stomach upsets.

If outdoor grills are available, broilable foods such as frankfurters or hamburgers might be included.
A menu which permits advance preparation will be a help for that committee.
For example, cold broiled chicken, peanut butter and pineapple sandwiches, brownies or cup cakes are popular foods and they could be prepared and frozen a week ahead of time.
For the picnic additional food could include hot dogs, hard-cooked eggs, tomatoes, celery and carrot sticks, dill pickles, assorted fruits and beverages, all of which are easily prepared at the last minute.
When planning beverages, bear in mind preferences of young and old. You might want hot coffee, for example, and cold fruit juice punch.
If your menu includes sandwiches, use the "production line" method of fixing them. This simply means lining up slices of bread in orderly rows; spread softened butter on one row, filling on the next. Fit slices together, stack three completed sandwiches and cut in halves with a sharp knife. Wrap in double thickness of waxed paper if they are to be frozen.
The serving committee should see that there are plenty of paper cups, plates, napkins, tablecloths and flatware.
These girls should also supervise the packing of the containers so that foods that are to be eaten first are easy to get out. Time saving method is to list contents on the lid of the container.

Dear Abby... Empty Tank Cheaper Than Drained Energy !!

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN.

DEAR ABBY: I have a husband who always manages to get us lost whenever we take a motor trip. He is very stubborn and would rather go miles out of his way than to stop and ask for directions. Why are some men like this, Abby? And what can I do about it?
EXASPERATED
DEAR EXASPERATED, Some men feel that if they don't know everything there is to know, it is a reflection on their intelligence. Let him drain his gasoline tank and wear out his tires. It's cheaper than draining your energy and wearing out your patience.

DEAR ABBY: Please print this for mothers of daughters: Some time ago we all laughed over one of your answers. You said, "What good does it do a girl to come in at a reasonable hour when she goes out with an unreasonable fellow?" I wish I would have paid more attention to that, Abby, because our lovely 17-year-old daughter was never out past 9 on school nights or midnight on week-ends and we thought she was safe. But we should have paid more attention to the company she kept, for now she is in trouble and we are —
HEART-BROKEN

DEAR ABBY: I married into a family that's one for the books. My husband, fortunately, is nothing like the rest of the clan. But we live in the same city and are constantly being thrown together at family gatherings.
Abby, I have never heard people rip others apart the way his mother and sisters do. One afternoon I sat there and counted. They talked about 42 people and didn't have a good word to say about any of them. All of it was hearsay and gossip of the nastiest kind.
I am new in this family and want them to like me — but I just can't take it. Should I tell them what I think of them and suffer the consequences? Or should I remain silent while they crucify the whole town?
READY TO BURST

DEAR READY: If you love your husband, forego the pleasure of telling them "what you think of them". Instead, each time they start to cut someone down, chime in with a defending word of praise. (You can always find something good to say about everyone.) When Heavyweight Fight For Dallas?

Name-dropping while wondering what ever happened to the abominable snowman:

Look for the next Floyd Patterson-Ingemar Johansson title fight to take place at the Cotton Bowl in Dallas about mid-October.

Bill Fugazy, president of the promotion firm Feature Sports Inc., which handles the bouts, has said he personally favors Dallas over such territories as Los Angeles, New York and Chicago.

There's only one hitch, and it shouldn't louse up the works.

Since Dallas has never been host to a big time fight, Fugazy wants a guarantee from someone in the city, just in case it doesn't draw a crowd.

The man he's been talking to in Big-D is Lamar Hunt, the young millionaire who got mad at the National Football League because it wouldn't sell him a franchise and built his own league.

Hunt could guarantee just about any figure Fugazy dreamed up, and never lose any sleep over it.

When Hunt first announced his plans of forming the American Football League, he told a press conference he was prepared to lose a substantial amount of money to get the loop off the ground.

When asked how much, Hunt coolly replied: "Up to $50 million."

Larsen Wins First AA Start

Don Larsen, who became the first pitcher in baseball to ever serve up a perfect game in World Series competition, won his first game since being sent down to the Dallas-Fort Worth Rangers. He tossed a three-hitter at the Indianapolis Indians.

but had a brief stopover with the Gold Sox last season.

The Chicago White Sox were the hottest team in the majors at the all-star game break. The Pale Hose had won 14 of 20 games since June 21 for a torrid .700 percentage.

Bill Heneske, a Texas Ranger by profession, was once quite a football player at the Knights of Pythias Home in Weatherford.

Famed Possum Dog Returns

Jersey City's new entree in the International League plays its first home game tonight, and a crowd of 7,500 is supposed to be on hand.

Haute Doggett is happy today. His possum dog has returned from the Davis Mountains with a possum the size of an ironing board.

It's a 95-page magazine named "1960 Texas Football," and it should be on the news stands in the near future.

This isn't a history of football in Texas. It's an outlook-type magazine which deals with the prospects of 20 college teams and all 574 Texas high school teams.

Sammy Lee, who will coach the United States diving team in the Olympics at Rome this summer, is quite a diver in his own right.

He won gold medals at the London games in 1948 and at Helsinki in 1952.

Yet he can only swim well enough to keep from drowning.

3 Texans Card 69s

DETROIT (UPI) — It was a great day for the West in the 57th annual Western Open.

Three sons of Texas and a native Californian shot three under par 69's Thursday to share the first round lead in what promises to be one of the wildest scrambles of any professional golf chase.

Jackie Burke, Fred Hawkins and newcomer Butch Baird — all from the Lone Star State — and Bob Rosburg, who learned his fairway maneuvers on the shores of the Pacific, lead the field of 159 into today's second round.

But their advantage is a shaky one. Ten more contenders are hot on the quartet's heels just one stroke back while 18 others are only two strokes off the pace at 71.

Bob Rosburg, the 33-year-old former Stanford University baseball star who now plays out of Overland Park, Kan., fired three birdies on the front nine and then turned in 10 straight pars for his 69.

That gave Rosburg, tuning up for the defense of his PGA title next weekend, the early advantage and it stood up most of the afternoon.

Breathing down the necks of the four leaders one stroke back were Gay Brewer Jr., Walter Burkemo, Pete Cooper, Bob Gosby, Jon Gustin, Lionel Hebert, Tommy Jacobs, Dave Ragan, Retief Walters, and Burt Weaver.

And at 71 were such formidable threats as Sam Snead, Jack Fleck, Bill Collins, Ken Venturi, Jerry Barber, Cary Middlecoff, Art Wall Jr., and 11 others.

The field will be cut to the low 70 scorers after today's second round and only the low 50 will play in Sunday's windup round.

7500 To Greet Jerseys Tonight

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Some 7,500 fans were expected to welcome International League baseball back to Jersey City tonight when the transplanted Havana Sugar Kings play their first home game at Roosevelt Stadium.

The team, now called "The Jerseys," meets the Columbus Jets at 8 p.m., e.d.t. The Jerseys are fifth in the league standings and the Jets are tied for last.

Probable pitchers for the opening game were Howie Nunn for the Jerseys and Alvin Jackson for Columbus.

Jersey City, which had been in the International League for 45 of the loop's 77 years, got back into the league this week after a 10-year absence. IL officials, fearing for the safety of American ballplayers, shifted the franchise from Cuba because of the turbulent political situation there.

The last IL team to play at the 25,000 capacity stadium here was the Jersey City Giants, in 1950. The old Brooklyn Dodgers of the National League played some of their regular games at the stadium during the 1957 and 1958 seasons.

Wisner Attacks Dallas Practices

Rozelle Seeks End To War

By NORMAN MILLER
United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI) — While the commissioner of the National Football League appealed for an end to the shooting between the old and new pro leagues, one American Football League owner took a few pot shots at two of his fellow magnates.

Pete Rozelle, NFL commissioner, told a press gathering Thursday that his biggest disappointment since taking office last February was the inability "to establish harmony with the American Football League."

Charges Unethical Practices
A few hours later, owner-president Harry Wisner of the New York Titans in the AFL protested to his league commissioner, Joe Foss, that the Los Angeles and Dallas member clubs were guilty of "unethical practices."

Wisner complained that the Los Angeles Chargers and Dallas Texans had "jumped the gun" on the start of pre-season practice, in violation of the league rules.

Wisner charged that Sid Gillman, coach and general manager of the Chargers, did so because "he has to make good."

"He knows that all of Los Angeles will be focused on his new team, especially after his switch-over," Wisner charged. (Gillman formerly coached the Los Angeles Rams of the NFL.)

Both Gillman and Lamar Hunt, owner of the Texans, said they would reserve comment on Wisner's charges and leave it up to Foss.

"Foss is the only one that would have any authority to act on them," Hunt said in Dallas.

He also declined to comment on Wisner's comment that "rules are rules and they shouldn't be broken regardless of the owners involved," which some members of the Texans staff took as a direct dig at Hunt.

The young oil millionaire perhaps did more than anyone else to get the AFL off the ground.

At Orange, Calif., Gillman said: "Wisner is a very interesting person. You never know what he is going to do or say from one day to the next."

Transfer League Headquarters

Meanwhile, back at the NFL lunch, which marked the transfer of the league headquarters from Philadelphia to New York, Rozelle said that until there is mutual respect of player contracts by both leagues, "we won't have harmony."

Landry Tough On Cowboys
FOREST GROVE, Ore. (UPI) — Tom Landry, coach of the Dallas Cowboys, believes in separating the men from the boys early.

For the second straight day Thursday afternoon, he sent his squad through a full-speed scrimmage and scheduled another one for this afternoon.

In both the morning and afternoon session, rookies went through extensive work on pass attack and pass defense. During the morning work, when the newcomers to pro ball were in light gear, they worked on play assignments, ball handling and other elements of the game to sharpen them up for the afternoon's heavier work.

G-Sox Launch Upward Surge

By United Press International
Make way for Amarillo's Gold Sox.

The Sox, which have occupied the Texas League cellar most of the season, climbed into fourth place Thursday night and it couldn't be sweeter. They made the move up whipping league leading Valley 7-1 on Don Thompson's four-hitter.

Austin, meanwhile, dropped into last place scant percentage points behind Tulsa losing to the Oilers 4-3 in overtime. It was Julio Gotay's 10th inning solo homer that did the trick.

Second place San Antonio moved to within six and a half games of the Giants beating third place Victoria 5-2. Layton Ducote and Sam Drake led the Mission attack with home runs. John Goetz got the win, but needed help from Dave Gerard to hold the Rosebuds to six hits.

Either Way, You Lose

We would most certainly uphold the concept that an election campaign is a fine educational effort. Vast sums of money will be spent; issues will be manufactured and supported with greater or lesser enthusiasm, and opposed similarly. Great heat and small light will be engendered.

But the American public will go to the polls and someone will move into every available office. When it is all over, the condition will be approximately what it is at the moment. Those who are fearful of the direction our country is taking, will be even more fearful.

But regardless of this, conditions continue to be much the same. We do not wish to impugn the motives of those participating in these pleasant pastimes. People can actually work themselves into a mental attitude which leads them to believe the world will be safe from socialism if only the people vote the right way.

What is so difficult for many names and not in practices. And a mind to grasp is the fact that socialism cannot be defeated by governmental action. Socialism is governmental action. Because in recent times we have been witness to a regression of the concept of freedom, many people seem to feel that the advance of socialism thru government can be offset by an advance of anti-socialism thru government.

First Class Mail

The folly of turning to the government to solve problems is illustrated day by day, endlessly, it seems.

Recently, we have learned that a bill is now pending in Congress for the removal of discretionary powers on the part of the postmaster general respecting his selection of certain types of transport for first class mail.

Many years ago the railroads asked and got governmental subsidy. They have lived to regret it. For although the subsidy looked real good when it came, it ended, as such things always do, with the railroads being excessively regulated, bound and chained to stacks of laws and reports and regulations.

The Pampa Daily News

YOUR FREEDOM NEWSPAPER We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from the government. Freedom is not license. It must be consistent with the truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Rule, The Ten Commandments and the Declaration of Independence.

Looking Sideways

NEW YORK — This is a piece I have wanted to write for a long time about a man whose time I have often claimed. He was never too busy, never uncooperative. He never had other persons answer the telephone for him. He has made suggestions that were useful, and not always those which show he represented. And, finally, like me, he is a man deeply, irrevocably, passionately in love with the theater.

Arthur Cantor is a press agent. He is also a producer of a hit, the head of a play-investing syndicate which he has guided so sagaciously that it earns 10 per cent on its money. If Cantor did not sit in Wall Street he'd be known as a wizard. He also owns an advertising agency, a photography studio and is bending his head into the complex gears and works of an electronic ticket-selling machine when not otherwise occupied.

There has been a small mystery about Cantor that we might as well clear up right here. People have wondered how he became co-producer of one of the season's major hits, "The Tenth Man." The answer is simplicity itself. Paddy Chayefsky, the author, asked him. Saint Subber is the other producer. I don't know if Chayefsky asked him, or not. He did ask Cantor.

"Yes, it was," he said. "It was my first experience as a producer and we had no major crises. There was no major writing problem. It was all there. Just a little pruning, tightening and polishing. The path of any play and much easier in this case than most. Chayefsky is a professional's professional. Even the movie came easily."

Changes, if any, will be in names and not in practices. And we can almost hear in advance of their coming, the wailing voices of those who were so certain that political action was the ONLY way to accomplish something, be it a regression of the concept of freedom, many people seem to feel that the advance of socialism thru government can be offset by an advance of anti-socialism thru government.

Anyhow, with the post office having discretion here, and with airlines operating at less than capacity on each plane, a lucrative arrangement developed which helped fill up cargo space on planes, helped clear up postal congestion, and did it at regular postage rates to the profit of all concerned.

All concerned? Not quite. The railroads began to find that fewer of their first class mail were traveling over the high iron. And, as we get the story, it is the railroad men who are now seeking to intervene so that the P. O. will be compelled to ship first class mail by rail, and only airmail, paid for as airmail, will ever get off the ground.

We can understand why the railroad men are making this move, if they are. We can also understand why the airlines are fighting it, since it means money out of their pockets.

But what neither rail men or air men seem to be willing to do is to face up to the basic facts involved, to wit, that government shouldn't be in the post office business to begin with, let alone helping to regulate and thus to limit and impair either rail or air line service or development.

Instead of having this hassle develop between rail and air, we'd like to see both of these competent giants get busy in an effort to cause the government to get out of the post office business. Off hand, we'd suggest that both airlines and railroads are ideal handlers of mail. Each could handle his particular segment of it. Each could do it profitably at a fraction of what we are presently paying the government. Both would improve service, eliminate subsidy and lower costs of postal reception, sorting and delivery.

We could get real excited about a campaign to divest the government of the post office and to split its operation between these two giant carriers. We suspect this would eliminate all subsidies to all three, would free all of them of their loss junkets and would improve service and facilities, all around.

Night Fight From L. A. Arena

Fair Enough

Television Pleaded For Two Armed Anarchists By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NBC recently undertook to persuade its audience that two murderers who were put to death in Massachusetts in 1927 were innocent men and that public officials who did their sworn duty did wrong. In short, NBC damned due process and justice under law.

The murderers in question, Sacco and Vanzetti, were anarchists, but their political principles were not weighed against them although many fakery of the communist and Roosevelt cults have insisted that this was the case. They were arrested when they were arrested for a payroll stickup and murder, and both guns were loaded. They explained that as political enemies of the nation they needed these weapons to defend themselves against patriotic Americans.

NBC and Columbia have become openly aggressive as manipulators of public intelligence and revisers of history. When a Jack Paar makes a public head as play investment counselor and put it on the line, I told them about the play, who had written it and of my unshakable faith in it. The money was pledged immediately. It took me four minutes to get together $175,000.

I reminded him that one of his employers, a man of signal stature in the theater as a producer, had required seven months to do the same—and for what became a big hit several seasons back. And still is. A musical.

Cantor smiled and said, "Well, things break that way in the theater," which is about as embracing an answer as you sometimes get. Graduated from Harvard, Cantor came to New York to do exactly what he has done: become a press agent with sidelines. He never believed that the sidelines would become as large as they have.

"The fact is," he said, looking out the window across the grimed rooftops of mid-town Manhattan, "I didn't come here to be a press agent. With, hopefully, a little business or two going for me on the side. That is what I told myself... and others. The real, secret yen still exists: I want to be a playwright. I find that almost everybody in the theater in any category wants to be a playwright. I'm no exception. I keep remembering that classic story Mark Hellinger once wrote of a man who wanted to be a playwright but who became an actor. Every year, just after Jan. 1, affix with ambition, he'd take paper and pencil and carefully write: 'Act One, Scene One, In a garden.' That went on for 30 years and was as far as he ever proceeded. Meanwhile, he became a great star, amassed a fortune, bought an estate and died. His widow had him buried on the place—in a garden; and that's all it said on his stone: 'In A Garden.' I'm starting a play next summer. Positively."

The overparticular guy who takes infinite pains with everything usually gives them to everybody else.

Hankering

By HENRY MCLEMORE

Do we want a President who can stand up to Khrushchev? The candidates seem to think so. Each one, in his own modest way, has made it clear that he, and he alone possesses the qualities necessary to slug it out with the Soviet premier.

But are the qualities required for an even fight with Khrushchev the qualities one looks for first in a President of the United States? I don't think so.

The more I read about Khrushchev, the more I want our President to be as different from him as is possible.

Who wants a rude President? Not just ordinarily rude, but globally rude. No one, I imagine, but in order to hold his own with Khrushchev a President would have to have a rudeness as high as an Alp, as bottomless as the Philippine Deep.

For one of Khrushchev's weapons is rudeness, as he proves every time he makes one of his so-called goodwill tours. His latest exhibition in Austria was a typical.

Who wants a liar for a President? Not just a common, garden variety liar, but a liar whose untruths know no bounds. To play on even terms with the Soviet premier, the President couldn't allow truth to stand in his way. This would be the same as lying one of his hands behind his back, because one of Khrushchev's most formidable weapons is the bald-faced lie.

Who wants a ruthless President? And by ruthless I don't mean a man who would shoot sitting ducks, but sitting people — not one who would dynamite fish, but one who would cheerfully blow up an entire population.

And Khrushchev is ruthless. People are less than numbers to him. Countries are something to be broken. "We'll bury you" is more than a slogan with him—it's an objective. And to reach an objective, no means are too violent.

To match Khrushchev in ruthlessness we would have to have a President who would not mind having, say, a Hungary on his hands—or a Poland or a Czechoslovakia.

Who wants a ranting, raving, frantic, frothing President? Who wants a President whose chief means of communication is the direct insult? Who wants a President who looks with favor on such inhuman institutions as the Red Chinese communes? No one. Certainly no American. Let those who seek the presidency abandon their talk of their ability to give the Soviet premier tit for tat, jive for jolt, blow for blow.
