Militiamen Break Up Catholic Mass

By REEVE WARING
United Press International
CAMAQUEY, Cuba (UPI)—Angry pro-government militiamen broke up a Roman Catholic mass Sunday night when the priest said he would pray for ailing Premier Fidel Castro, but expressed scorn for communism.

The anti-church demonstration by jeering, insult-hurling Castro supporters was one of many that disrupted Sunday services throughout Camaguey.

Year's Preparation For Space Feat By Soviet

By ROBERT J. KORENGOLD
United Press International
MOSCOW (UPI)—Strelka and Belka, the two dogs the Russians successfully returned to earth from outer space, held their first news conference today. They wagged their tails, nuzzled newsmen and scampered about, showing no ill effects of their trip in a space ship.

The Soviet Union launched its space ship last Friday. It was returned to earth Saturday.

Congo Policy Backed By Security Council

Vote Of Confidence For Hammarskjold

By BRUCE W. MUNN
United Press International
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI)—The Security Council, ignoring Russian opposition, endorsed Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold's Congo policy early today without a formal vote.

A Russian resolution proposing the creation of a consultative committee to "aid" Hammarskjold in the Congo—the only concrete proposal advanced at a marathon council session that lasted well past midnight — was withdrawn in the face of sure defeat.

During the 9-hour-and-23-minute debate, all of the council's 11 members except Russia and Red Poland supported Hammarskjold's refusal to involve the U.N. in the Congo's internal affairs.

Ambassador Armand Berard, the council's French president-of-the-month, summed up the consensus in two sentences.

"We have heard different views and questions," he said. "We are convinced that the secretary general will have found the clarification he required, and that no doubt will help him in the continuation of his task."

Hammarskjold summoned the council to an extraordinary session when his policy of neutrality toward the secession of mineral-rich Katanga Province was challenged by Congo Premier Patrice Lumumba.

The secretary general contended that the council resolution of Aug. 9 forbade participation of the U.N. force in any internal dispute in the Congo. Lumumba, with strong Russian backing, argued that Katanga's secession was the result of a Belgian plot and therefore the case was not "internal."

Benson Says He's Become 'Scapegoat'

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Agriculture Secretary Ezra T. Benson says he has been made a "scapegoat" for the nation's farm troubles because the Democratic Congress failed to enact his program.

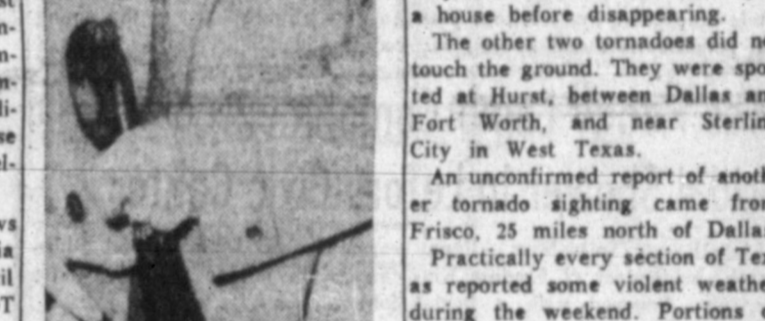

Benson, appearing Sunday on a television program (CBS - Face The Nation), did not single out by name those he accused. But he said Republican presidential candidate Richard M. Nixon was not among them.

Meg's Expecting; Tony Has A Job

LONDON (UPI)—Newspapers here marked Princess Margaret's 36th birthday with reports that she is expecting a baby and that her husband, Antony Armstrong Jones, has found a job.

The Sunday Dispatch cited "American circles in London" as the authority for its exclusive story that the princess is pregnant, saying that an unidentified American magazine editor got the story from an "unimpeachable source."

Today's Daily Express reported that Jones, who had to give up his fashionable photography studio when he married the princess, will go to work for the civic trust, a non-profit organization devoted to keeping Britain beautiful.

HEADS FOR RUSSIA—Valentin M. Ivanov, first secretary of the Soviet Embassy in the U.S., is shown as he left New York for home. He was ordered out of the country on a charge of trying to induce an American to take a federal job as a Soviet agent.

Drug Industry Said To Have 'Influence'

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Charles H. Kendall, head of a special unit investigating the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), said Saturday there is a "possibility" some of the agency's employees may have been too closely associated with the drug industry.

Kendall said in a UPI interview that "it is still too early to say" what the result of his inquiry would be but that he had the impression the FDA staff in general "is a pretty good crowd of people who have done a pretty good job."

Kendall is general counsel of the Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization. He is on loan until Oct. 1 to health and welfare secretary Arthur F. Flemming to examine congressional charges the FDA has been lax in regulating the drug industry and that its employees have been too closely influenced by it.

Flemming named Kendall to head a special three-man investigative unit following the dismissal of Dr. Henry Welch, chief of the FDA division which passes on antibiotics. Sen. Estes Kefauver's Senate drug investigators turned up the fact that Welch had earned more than a quarter of a million dollars from his side work for two antibiotics magazines.

Kendall told UPI the first step in his investigation was circulation of a questionnaire to all the FDA's top scientists and inspectors calling for detailed information on their sources of income.

Clemency Asked For U-2 Pilot

Wife In Plea To Khrushchev

By HENRY SHAPIRO
United Press International
MOSCOW (UPI)—The wife of American U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers wrote personal appeals today to Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev and President Leonid Brezhnev seeking reduction of her husband's 10-year sentence for espionage.

Barbara Powers, 25, secluded herself in her hotel room to compose her appeals seeking clemency for Powers, who was sentenced last week to 10 years' detention, including three years in prison, for piloting an American reconnaissance plane over the Soviet Union.

Without any of the relatives, advisers, lawyers and friends who have been so prominently in the limelight since she arrived here, Mrs. Powers decided to make the appeals in her own way. She composed the first drafts Sunday night, and polished them up this morning.

Her lawyers said the petition of appeal to Brezhnev and her letter to Khrushchev will be delivered in her own handwriting. Both contain only her words and ideas. The lawyers said they were not coaching her.

Mail Survey Results To Be Tabulated

The Pampa Chamber of Commerce today issued a call for hurried returns of questionnaires sent out in the survey now being conducted that could bring airline service to the city.

E. O. Wedgeworth, chamber general manager, said response to date has been good and that tabulation shows the desire of citizens for direct air service. However, he noted, some of the questionnaires are still out and "we'd like to have them in as soon as possible."

Nixon Plans Invasion Of Georgia, Alabama

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Vice President Richard M. Nixon announced today that he will make a one-day campaign swing Friday to Birmingham, Ala., and Atlanta, Ga.

Nixon and his wife will fly to Birmingham early Friday, where the Republican presidential candidate will speak at noon.

He will then attend a mid-afternoon program in Hurt Park in Atlanta before returning to Washington Friday night.

The trip will be Nixon's second foray into the normally Democratic South in little more than a week. He spoke in Greensboro, N.C., last Wednesday.

Nixon's office said he will arrive at Birmingham in mid-morning. The program calls for a reception rally at the airport and a speech at the City Hall at noon.

Weekend Weather Kills Two

By United Press International
Three tornadoes near the Dallas-Fort Worth area Sunday capped a weekend of scattered wild weather across Texas which left at least two persons dead and several others injured.

One of the tornadoes slashed through the Lake Dallas community, 15 miles north of Dallas.

The black fury injured three persons, nearly flattened a grocery and bait store and damaged a house before disappearing.

The other two tornadoes did not touch the ground. They were spotted at Hurst, between Dallas and Fort Worth, and near Sterling City in West Texas.

An unconfirmed report of another tornado sighting came from Frisco, 25 miles north of Dallas. Practically every section of Texas reported some violent weather during the weekend. Portions of North Central and Southeast Texas were under severe thunderstorms forecasts Sunday.

By early today, the weather across Texas had calmed down. Skies ranged from clear in West Texas to cloudy or partly cloudy elsewhere. A few showers continued to fall in East Texas.

The thunderstorms which killed two persons are reported to have been in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

'Full House' On Tap Today

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The House goes to work today for the first time in the pre-election congressional session after marking time last week because of a scarcity of business and members.

House leaders called up for debate a Senate-passed bill designed to open the way for the proposed Kennedy-Nixon television campaign debates. The legislation was expected to win overwhelming approval.

FOR BOYS

Keeping cool in the last hot and muggy days of summer is largely a matter of planning. Some women always manage to look cool and pretty under circumstances which have other women gasping. The woman who look cool are the ones who know the value of a leisurely, tepid bath (left) for lowering the body temperature at the end of a summer's day. This homemaker props her head back comfortably on a foam rubber pillow. The pretty-up step is next. She stays refreshed after her bath by applying cologne and cosmetics that she keeps cool (center) in a little corner of the refrigerator. Bright, clean and attractive, she is ready (right) for her husband's home-coming. This is the pretty picture he will see (and appreciate) when he walks in the front door at the end of a long, hot day.

MATURE PARENT

By MRS. MURIEL LAWRENCE

Dear Mrs. Lawrence:
"Should we force our 22-month-old boy to play with other children? He is so dependent on us he embarrasses me. Where other children of his age are outgoing and venturesome Morgan has to cling to our hand when we go out it worries us."

"As teachers we both have professional experience with children. Yet now we feel hoplessly inadequate..."

Answer: — Just like Morgan when he clings to your hand.

Are you secretly afraid that you've damaged him emotionally? If so, face the fear. Get yourself the reassurance of child psychiatrist.

In the meantime, please ponder the idea that parents with "professional" experience of other people's children can give themselves a very rough time with their own. Not only must they struggle with the usual parental craving for credit-reflecting behavior but also feel obliged to prove that their child-raising competence is superior to everyone else's.

This is the pride that is so "embarrassed" when this small boy's uncertainty and shyness challenge your image of what you think you ought to have made of him.

This pride then is the enemy. If you can stop being so scared of what you actually are — uncertain, inadequate, not knowing everything but able to wait to discover more — Morgan's uncertainty and shyness will cease to be a humiliation in which you are resentfully involved.

He'll become your small companion in uncertainty. In his reach for your supporting hands, you will see no shameful dependence but the same honest confession of weakness that inspired your letter to him.

His shyness toward other children will not longer appear strange and unwholesome because in it you've recognized your own fear of disappointing people. In place of the mysterious difficult child who threatens your pride in superior, all-knowing child-raising competence, there'll be a human like yourself.

Because you have learned how to give yourself time to develop instead of wanting all your development accomplished right now, you'll be able to give this baby boy time to develop, too.

Pride is evil because it won't ever allow us Process. It always insists we must be at the top of the mountain, by-passing the step-by-step Process that takes us there. It's parents' great enemy.

Out-Wit Dog Days With Plan For Keeping Cool

By ALICIA HART
Newspaper Enterprise
Beauty Editor

It would be wonderful if all homemaking tasks could be put aside during the dog days of August. But unfortunately, meals must be prepared, the amount of laundry seems to double, and the children often become restless and irritable.

It seems a lot to ask that a wife handle all these chores while the temperature is at the frying point, and still look cool and pretty when her husband comes home for dinner. But it can be done, and the woman who manages to do it, will feel as cool and attractive as she appears.

The first step is to plan your day's work so that the hot, steamy jobs are done early in the morning before the sun gets too hot.

Wash the breakfast dishes and mop the floors first. Then gather together the soiled clothes and put them into the washing machine. While the clothes are washing, plan and prepare as much as you can of the evening meal. It's a good idea to put your lipstick, powder, cologne and lotions in the refrigerator late in the afternoon. When you make up in the evening, you'll get a lift from their cool freshness. If there's room, you might also put in a bath towel and your clean lingerie.

When the household chores are done, lie down, even if you can only spare five or ten minutes. Then draw a tepid, sudsy bath and relax in it. While you're in your bath, you can repair any damage done to your manicure during the day.

Don't make the mistake of thinking a cool shower will be more beneficial than a warm bath. It won't.

When you get out of the tub, dry off with the towel you've cooled in the refrigerator and put on your cool, clean undies. Slip into a thin housecoat and you're ready to set the table for dinner. You might give some thought, too, to choosing table linen in a color that will lend an airy atmosphere to the dining room.

If you've planned a hot meal, put it in the oven and get out of the kitchen while it's cooking. Use the time to dress and apply your make-up.

Now spray on your favorite hot weather fragrance, and you'll feel as well as look crisp and fresh when you greet your husband at the front door.

Dear Abby... Man's Inhumanity ... To Man

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Three years ago I contracted T.B. After spending 16 months in a sanitarium, the doctor said I was cured and could go home.

I wrote to my family and told them I was coming home. They tore up my letter into little pieces and sent it back, saying "DON'T COME HOME!"

I wrote them again and even had the doctor write to them enclosing pamphlets which explained there was nothing to be afraid of, but they never answered.

Does everyone feel this way about a member of their family who has been ill and pronounced completely cured? Or are my people just plain ignorant?

CURED-BUT SICK AT HEART DEAR CURED: Everyone, thank heavens, does not feel the way your family does. Your people are more than "just plain ignorant". They are cruel, stubborn and content to stay that way. They are the losers — pity them.

DEAR ABBY: She said the plant I had sitting in my hallway was PERTUSUM and her husband said it was MONSTERA. How do you cope with people who are so nerdy?

CONSTANTLY OBSERVED DEAR OBSERVED: When neighbors necks get rubbery Better plant some shrubbery.

DEAR ABBY: I wish you would do us guys here in Korea a favor and clue somebody in. Everybody comes over here and preaches to us about how faithful we are supposed to be to our sweethearts back home. Why don't they tell the people back home to be a little more faithful to us?

About twice a week someone in our unit gets a "Dear John". I got one and I was hurt so bad I couldn't find the words to write her back and tell her off. It kind of makes you wonder.

Backers Wary Of Polls With Nixon In Lead

By WARREN DUFFEE
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon's presidential campaign strategists Saturday viewed with a wary-eye national polls showing Nixon running well ahead of Democratic nominee John F. Kennedy. They said they felt the number of undecided voters is greater than the latest major poll shows.

Robert H. Finch, Nixon's campaign director, told newsmen he felt Nixon is "ahead at this point," largely as a result of the Republican National Convention, the vice president's acceptance speech and other factors. But, Finch said, he was not taking undue comfort from the latest national poll showing Nixon running 50 to 44 ahead of Kennedy, with six per cent of the voters undecided.

"I still think the large group of undecided voters is higher than the six per cent that shows in the poll," Finch added.

Nixon has taken the position all along that about 10 per cent of genuinely independent voters may decide the election by making up their minds in the closing days.

Herbert G. Klein, Nixon's press secretary, said that while the GOP presidential nominee is "optimistic over progress made" since his nomination, the Nixon camp "still feels the election will be very close."

Also, Klein said, he expected to poll ratings of the two candidates the airport of "launching an aggression" against the Congo and demanded that they be "immediately withdrawn" from the country.

Kuznetsov, in a 30-minute session with the U.N. chief, insisted that the Congolese government must have control over all airports in the country. He said that attacks against Congolese forces by U.N. troops "contradicted" the Security Council's order that U.N. forces "render military assistance to the government of the Republic of Congo."

Hammarskjold was under fire from the Congolese as well as from the Soviets.

The Soviet statement presented to Hammarskjold charged that on Thursday Congolese troops clashed at the airport with Canadian forces "as a result of the unlawful actions of the latter."

On that day Congolese troops attacked a group of 14 Canadians, beating at least three of them so severely with rifle butts that they were taken to a hospital. Congolese officials said the Canadians were mistaken for "Belgian spies."

Russia's efforts to woo the government of Congolese Premier Patrice Lumumba deepened the crisis which led Hammarskjold to call together the 11-nation security council Sunday for a session on the Congo.

Ghana, a key unit in the Congo force and an avowed friend of all other African nations, meanwhile reaffirmed full support of the U.N. in the Congo and proposed that the world organization's troops be permitted to "attack to restore order."

With permission to open fire as warranted, said Ghana President Kwame Nkrumah, Ghana's contingent in the U.N. force alone "can bring the situation in Leopoldville back to normal within one week."

Nkrumah's pledge and recommendation came in response to a message from the hard-pressed Hammarskjold stating that actions of Ghanaian troops in the Congo from Ghana "full and unconditional support" of the Congo, actions decided upon by the Security Council.

A sudden storm at a city lake at Teague Saturday overturned a boat and two persons drowned. They were Mrs. Sylvia Faye Webb, 47, of Teague, and her daughter by a previous marriage, Doris Nell Jennings, 11.

Three other persons in the boat escaped. The group had been on a fishing outing.

The tornado at Lake Dallas leveled the Williams Fish Market and Grocery on the west side of U.S. Highway 77, damaged the home of W. W. Scoggings next door and then skipped across the highway and slammed into the Rushing Fish and Bait House.

Damage at the two businesses was estimated at $25,000 by the owners.

The Department of Public Safety identified the injured as Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Williams of Fort Worth, 50 and 45, respectively, and Williams' brother, George Williams.

Eugene Williams was the only one of the three requiring hospitalization. He was treated for a possible hip fracture at a Dallas hospital.

Midwest Farm Vote Is Target

By ALVIN SPIVAK
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. John F. Kennedy was hopeful today that his first presidential swing into the Midwest would help win him the important farm vote in the November election.

Kennedy returned to Washington at 1:35 a.m. e.d.t. from Des Moines, Iowa, where he lambasted Vice President Richard M. Nixon's farm record and outlined his own program.

Associates of the Democratic candidate were cheered by the enthusiasm with which he was greeted in Des Moines and said they were confident he would get the farm vote.

Kennedy and his running mate, Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson, combined forces before the Midwest farm conference to attack Nixon and the Eisenhower administration for declining farm income.

Kennedy said Nixon shared the blame for a "disaster" program for farmers.

The Democratic nominee, in a fighting mood, also struck back at Republican charges that his family fortune had been used to buy votes and at GOP claims that Nixon outweighs him in experience.

Both Kennedy and Johnson sought to make Nixon share the responsibility with Agriculture Secretary Ezra T. Benson for the administration's farm policies.

"I will discuss Mr. Nixon's experience in other fields on other occasions," Kennedy told a crowd of 8,000 to 9,000. "But when it comes to agriculture, I can only say that disaster has been his experience and Benson his teacher."

Kennedy laid out a Democratic program calling for "supply management to raise farm prices and incomes to parity levels," "a positive food and nutrition policy for all Americans," "a dynamic food and fiber policy for worldwide use," and "a long-range program for low-income farms."

have no other course than to follow my conviction."

Russia was specifically critical of the inclusion of Canadian troops in the Congo force, charging that Hammarskjold was allowing the creation of an Atlantic Pact "foreign legion."

Hammarskjold replied that the Canadians were needed because they were the only available signalmen who could speak both English and French.

U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge supported Hammarskjold, as did the other Western and uncommitted delegates.

"Mr. (Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vasily) Kuznetsov's suggestion that the Canadian troops should not serve with the Congo force is quite incomprehensible," Lodge said. "The secretary general has explained why he needed Canadian help. The United States cannot accept any implication that Canada, with its magnificent record, will not fully and loyally discharge its responsibilities to the United Nations..."

were postponing any final decision until they get replies from Khrushchev and Brezhnev.

Attorneys for the family said there have been indications that they may hear within 24 hours whether members of the group will be able to see Khrushchev.

Powers' sister, Jessica Hileman, of Glass Manor, Md., attended services Sunday in Moscow's only Protestant place of worship — the old wooden Baptist Church where Billy Graham went during his recent stay here.

Mrs. Hileman was accompanied to church by Carl McAfee, one of her father's attorneys, and Dr. Lewis Ingram, her mother's physician.

More than 1,000 worshippers, most of them kerchiefed, elderly Russian women, crowded the pews and jammed the aisles of the church. Several American tourists, including pianist Van Cliburn, were present.

"When the congregation stood up, it seemed as if there wasn't a single space vacant in the entire church," Mrs. Hileman said.

When she was asked whether she had prayed for her brother, she replied:

"Of course I did, but I think it's too personal to say any more about it."

Hansen May Wind Up With Coveted Prizes

Shortstop Eyeing Rookie MVP Prize

United Press International
They keep touting home running Ron Hansen as the rookie of the year but he may go whole hog and wind up with the American League's most valuable player award.

If he does, the spectacular 22-year-old Baltimore shortstop will become the first rookie in major league history ever to be voted the MVP distinction.

A lot depends on whether or not the Orioles win the pennant, of course. Hansen is doing more than his share in that department too.

Hansen moved the Orioles within 1 1/2 games of first place Sunday with his 19th homer that turned out to be the winning run in a 10-4 victory over the Red Sox. Hansen, who has lost 25 pounds since the season started, has accounted for eight of the 30 homers the Orioles have hit in their last 17 games.

The lanky shortstop also has driven in 71 runs so far and manager Paul Richards frankly confesses, "Without him we'd be dead."

Gus Triandos got the Orioles out in front Sunday with a fourth inning grand slam homer off loser Ike Delock and Hansen's sixth inning smash proved the clincher.

The victory moved the Orioles into a second-place tie with the White Sox, who lost an 8-1 decision to the Athletics. The Senators defeated the first-place Yankees, 7-4, to move into fourth place while the Tigers ran their winning streak to six games with a pair of 6-4 victories over the fading Indians.

In the National League, the Reds beat the Pirates, 8-4, and the Braves climbed to within 6 1/2 games of first place with a 3-2 decision over the Phillies. The Cardinals blanked the Dodgers, 2-0, and the Cubs beat the Giants, 5-3, in the opener of a double-header, then lost the nightcap by the same score.

Ray Herbert enabled the A's to snap a 10-game losing streak when he held the White Sox to three hits. Kansas City rapped loser Bob Shaw and four relievers for 17 hits, including homers by Andy Carey and Bill Tuttle.

Harmon Killebrew, Jim Lemon and Bob Allison, Washington's "big three," all hit homers against the Yankees. Lemon's 29th homer with one on in the eighth off loser Bobby Shantz broke a 4-4 tie.

A four-run rally in the fifth inning plus Paul Foytack's strong relief stint gave the Tigers their first game victory over the Indians despite Tribe homers by Ken Aspromonte and Jim Piersall. Then in the nightcap, Eddie Yost singled home two runs in the eighth to break a 4-4 deadlock.

Rookie Cliff Cook, Yada Pinson and Wally Post each hit homers in Cincinnati's win over Pittsburgh. Post's homer was a pinch two-run blast in the eighth after Dick Stuart had narrowed the Reds' margin to 6-4 with his second homer of the game in the top half of the frame.

FRACTURED FOOTBALL

Sloppy Show Of Pro Football

By JOE SARGIS
United Press International

The San Francisco Forty Niners won the ball game, the Philadelphia Eagles won the fight and the game officials were on the spot today for one of the sloppiest exhibitions in professional football history.

The Forty Niners, led by C. R. Roberts, Hugh McElhenny, Y. A. Tittle and John Brodie, whipped Philadelphia, 45-28, at Kezar Stadium Sunday, but the Eagles had the edge in a free-for-all fight involving more than 80 players, and the officials got the blame for letting things get out of hand.

The free-for-all broke out in the third period after the Forty Niners had built a 24-7 lead. There was a lot of shoving and pushing in the first two periods without any admonition from the officials, but it finally broke out into the "real thing" shortly after the start of the second half when San Francisco rookie end Fred Williamson of Northwestern got off the ground to slug Philadelphia rookie linebacker Maxie Baughan of Georgia Tech.

The action took place right in front of the Eagles' bench and immediately players from both teams streamed onto the field to join in.

The officials tried desperately then, to break up the many fights going on all over the field but with little success. Coaches from both teams, even white-haired Buck Shaw of the Eagles, got on the field.

In Sunday's only other game, Tom Greene, former Holy Cross star, passed the Boston Patriots of the American Football League to a 21-7 victory over the Buffalo Bills at Worcester, Mass. The victory was Boston's third in four pre-season starts and left Buffalo with a 1-2 record.

In Saturday night games, pinpoint passes by Jim Ninowski enabled the Detroit Lions to come from behind a 21-0 deficit to beat the St. Louis Cardinals, 24-21, in the NFL; the Houston Oilers scored almost at will to beat the Denver Broncos, 42-3, and Cotton Davidson ran and passed the Dallas Texans to a 38-14 victory over the New York Titans in the AFL.

Tonight, the New York Giants take on the Green Bay Packers at Jersey City, N.J.

Tommy Davis
L.A. HOTSHOT — Tommy Davis, a 21-year-old rookie, has broken into the Los Angeles Dodger lineup with a bang. He ran up a long consecutive game hitting streak and was moved to fifth from eighth in the batting lineup by Manager Walt Alston.

Houston Oilers Could Become Scoring Gusher

EDITORS: The following is the first of 21 dispatches sizing up the prospects of teams in the American Football League and the National Football League. American Football League teams will be analyzed first, because of that circuit's earlier starting date this season.

Houston Oilers of the American Football League are as unpredictable as one of owner Bud Adams' wildcat wells.

The team could turn out to be a real scoring gusher.

Or, despite a highly publicized backfield, the blue and white Texas team could become a red-ink duster.

Quarterback George Blanda, a veteran of 10 years with the Chicago Bears, is the man the Oilers are counting on to crank up the offense. At 32, Blanda still has several good seasons in prospect and is the most experienced field leader in the new league.

But the highest paid man on the team is halfback Billy Cannon, who signed a plush three-year contract for $100,000 and business benefits under the goal posts after the last Sugar Bowl game. It took a court fight against the Los Angeles Rams to nullify an earlier agreement, however, and Louisiana State to play with Houston.

Coach Lou Rymkus admits that the biggest problem his team has is a lack of experience, especially in the line.

"We've got a bunch of young fellows, and we're going to be a good football team," the former Green Bay and Los Angeles coach said.

When the Oilers lost their first two games — to Dallas and Los Angeles — Rymkus blamed fumbles and pass interceptions.

A glance at the Oiler lineup reveals only a sprinkling of veterans, with fully two-thirds of the squad first-year men.

Some of the rookies brought All-America credentials with them to Houston.

Besides Cannon, they include fullback Bob White of Ohio State, center Don Floyd of Texas Christian, and defensive end Dan Lanphear of Wisconsin.

Two rookie quarterbacks playing behind old pro Blanda show promise. They are Jack Lee of Cincinnati, the nation's second leading passer in 1959, and Charles Millsted of Texas A&M, the best Oiler punter.

Defensive platoon standouts are tackle Jerry Helluin of Tulane, playing his ninth pro season; and linebackers Dennis Morris of Oklahoma, Hugh Pitts of TCU and Hall Whitley of Texas A&I. Another linebacker, Phil Perlo of Maryland, crowded Whitley for starting rights.

Olympics Missing Bet On One Sport

By OSCAR FRALEY
United Press International

ROME (UPI)—They're talking today about reducing the size of the Olympic Games but they're missing a bet.

They should add one event.

A rodeo for taxicab drivers.

There are, in most nations around this big apple, cab drivers who could give you more thrills than all the record breaking they'll start this week and in the process make "Lucky Teeter's" death drivers' look like sissies and Clyde Beatty seem to be a momma's boy.

The Italian hack driver would be right up there in the front row among the qualifiers, too.

Race driving, is, of course, quite a sport. But these guys race everybody: The cops, the pedestrians, each other and the biggest trucks they can spot.

At major crossings in Rome they have what are known as pedestrian lanes. These are crosswalks painted in white zebra stripes. In London, once a pedestrian sets foot on the crosswalk, all traffic stops. In Rome, it's just getting started. They take dead aim on the lad crossing afoot and its Jack-be-nimble or Jack-be-dead.

They all drive in this city like they're in a hurry to join their ancestors or as if Hannibal was on his way back over the Alps, in that gay abandon, calculated probably to keep the infirm off the streets. And when you cause a guy to back water or take his foot off the gas pedal he gives you a nod, a wave of the hand which says: "Well done, signor."

But watch him at the next corner.

If the automobile had been invented back in the days of the De Medici, that well known clan of artful poisoners could have spared themselves a lot of trips to the local drugstore for such items as arsenic and old wine. They'd just throw it in high and probably get a merit badge for their efficiency.

But the Italian hackies don't have it all their own way.

The Japanese taxi driver has his specialties, too. Most of them hit the accelerator like frustrated Kamikaze pilots and their flying forte is to squeeze in ahead of a gan.

Experts See U.S. Squad Behind Russ

By HERBERT G. SPENCER
United Press International

ROME (UPI)—The experts predict the United States will take home a lot of medals but Russia will sweep to its second straight mythical Olympic team title in the games which begin on Thursday.

With most of the athletes enjoying a day off Sunday, the only activity anywhere along the Olympic village was limited to gab sessions in which the various "experts" discussed the relative merits of the U.S. and U.S.S.R. teams.

The way they see it, the United States definitely has gained strength in track and swimming—events in which it has held a virtual monopoly through the years. But its relative weakness—to Russia—in a number of lesser sports figures to give the big bear the cushion it needs to make it two straight world team titles.

Russia "won" the unofficial team championship at Melbourne four years ago with a total of 98 medals, including gold, silver and bronze ones, compared to 74 for the U.S. The Soviet total, however, included 23 medals in gymnastics alone, and the total in that sport figures to be just as high again.

Based on the opinion of observers from many lands, the United States should win up to 45 medals — of all types — in swimming and track this time around, which would be an increase of 14 over Melbourne. On an overall basis, though, this figures out to a total of 89 medals in all sports for the U.S., compared to 74 four years ago.

SERVICE WITH A SMILE—Yankee catcher Yogi Berra helps third-stringer Bobby Blanchard cool off in New York after first game of a double-header. Catching only because Berra and Elston Howard were out with injuries, Blanchard came through with a single in the 14th that won game, 3-2. Yanks also took second game, 3-2.

GIVING HER THE NEEDLE—As basketball ace Oscar Robertson watches, Dr. W. Kenneth Lane gives a polio shot to fencing champion Harriet King in New York. Robertson and Miss King, both members of the U. S. Olympic team, received the shots prior to their departure for the Olympic Games in Rome.

FOLLOWING IN DAD'S FOOTSTEPS—Sons of one of the greatest quarterbacks football has ever known, Dave Graham, 9, centers the ball to Ducey, 13, in Evanston, Ill. Their dad, Otto Graham, who starred with the Cleveland Browns, now coaches the Coast Guard Academy grid team.

HAMMERING AWAY—Martin Engel spins and spins as he practices throwing the hammer at Baker Field in New York. Engel was getting in shape to compete against a Philadelphia team later in the day.

COMING DOWN—Hitting the bull's eye is a matter of life and death for this daring fireman who plummets toward a spot-marked lifesaving net at Topeka, Kan. During their training drills, the smoke-eaters jump from a three-story tower into the net held by their fellow firemen.

SURFACE WITH A SMILE—Delirious in wetted bliss, Karin Larsson (left) and Bibi Segerstrom hug each other in a Stockholm, Sweden, pool. They had just won places on the Swedish swimming team that will compete in the 1960 Olympics, opening Aug. 25 in Rome.

NETTED—Framed by the netting of the goal, Brazilian goalie Gilmar executes a desperation swan dive trying to stop a shot in a soccer match between Brazil and Argentina in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. Despite the goalie's acrobatic effort, the ball went into the net for a goal. However, it was the only goal Argentina scored as Brazil won, 5-1.

SKITTERBUG—Skittering over the surface at Cypress Gardens, Fla., aquamaid Nancy Legant looks elegant as she sends twin mountains of spray up behind her water skis. Nancy was preparing for the National Water Ski tournament in Minneapolis, Minn. Using only one hand, the pretty lass makes this sport look like child's play.

PULLED A BONER—B. Sherman Green proudly displays one that didn't get away at Hamilton, Bermuda. Green is showing off the big bonefish he pulled in. The fisherman was wading in an area called West Whale Bay when his guide spotted the fish in the clear waters. Using a feather jig on six-pound test line, it took 40 minutes to land the fish.

MOUNTAIN REST—Resting during a mass all-woman climb of Italy's Mount Rosa, near Milan, this tired woman naps on the rocks near a group of comrades. In the unprecedented exploit, 113 women out of a starting 129 managed to reach the 15,000-foot summit.

TAKE IT EASY—At Florida's Silver Springs, Pa., Nelson is ready to whistle down any reckless boat operators. Pat urges the 40,000,000 Americans boating this summer to observe nautical safety regulations to keep boating safe.

Opportunity In Katanga

From the Congo comes reports of rape, pillage, and general anarchy. The Africans, we have been told, were not ready for independence, and the Congo has proved the point, so we have been told. But has it? From the tumult a voice of logic has been heard. Moise Tshombe, premier of Katanga, it appears, is a man who can think. Furthermore, he appears to have the courage to carry his thoughts into action. Such action came when he declared to the world that his nation is no longer a province of the Republic of Congo, but is the Republic of Katanga. A bold move. Backed by his parliament and cabinet, Tshombe served notice that Katanga was a separate and sovereign state. In so many words he declared he and his province wanted no part of the strong federal government emanating from Leopoldville, capital of the Republic of Congo and seat of the government of Lumumba and Kasavubu. Tshombe's sentiments about the government Lumumba and Kasavubu were cooking up were no surprise to anyone. For weeks prior to Belgium's turn-over of power, the premier had shouted loud and bitterly against the vision of a vast and diverse nation being ruled by a supreme power in Leopoldville. However, Tshombe's protests and appeals for provincial sovereignty were hardly heard. In the end Lumumba and Kasavubu won. Then came the strife, and later the U.N. troops. Lumumba screamed against the Belgians, broke diplomatic relations with Brussels, threatened to call for Soviet aid, and finished off with a trip to Washington. Tshombe called Lumumba and his government communistic, told the United Nations "task force" to keep out of Katanga, and asked the Belgians to remain in Katanga. Belgium was glad to remain in Katanga. The province is the base for a huge international mining corporation. The United Nations turned a cold ear to Tshombe's plea for admission as a separate state, and dispatches from the Congo still refer to his government as "secessionist." All this brings to mind memories of our nation's beginning. There was Hamilton who wanted a central super state and Jefferson who wanted a loose union with emphasis on state's rights. Tshombe wants Africa to become a federation of tribal provinces with a central government only a means of protecting individual freedom and tribal sovereignty. He protests most against Africa emerging as new nations along lines of conquest drawn by European colonial powers, which, he says, are not an ethically correct division of the continent's people. Tshombe visited the United States before the Belgium turn-over, went back to Katanga and said the key to African success was in investment and production. He has been quoted as saying: "We need Americans more than anyone else." Has a visiting African leader been more impressed with the Jeffersonian concept of the republic than American politicians who claim to be Tom Jefferson's political and philosophical descendants? It seems that an African has evaluated our Declaration of Independence and Constitution and proclaimed to the world that he intends to practice it, while our leaders use the name of Jefferson as a figurehead and blatantly proceed to write a document that is completely opposite to Jefferson's views. That of course, is the 1960 super-state Democratic platform grandiosely entitled "Rights of Man," Tom Paine's great work, on which Jefferson relied. News can only be evaluated as it happens, with consideration for past developments. At this point it seems in order to say: "Good luck, Mr. Tshombe."

Moral Intervention

People who persist in intervening between cause and effect in the lives of others, invariably create a serious problem. Nature has so designed life for us mortals on this planet that when we do some unconscionable thing, a reaction comes which pays us off in unhappy coin. This willingness of nature to exert punishment on us for improper conduct is a most useful and desirable attribute of life on terra firma. Without that reaction coming to error, how would we ever know we had been in error? How would we ever learn? Human history and experience has taught us much, but if our do-gooder friends who persist in this intervention process have their way, the value of the lessons will be lost totally or at least dissipated. And nowhere is this more important and more apparent than in tax-supported efforts, in each of our 50 states, to bring on a giant welfare program and inescapable governmental dependency. It follows, we believe, that most persons who find themselves in "need" of welfare for one reason or another, are themselves the cause of their distress. Either they did not provide for their old age or for possible hard times; they refused to work hard enough to support themselves; or, as in the case of unwed mothers, they proceeded to act in a non-responsible fashion. In every instance, some other kind of conduct was open to the persons who got themselves into difficulties. But with the emphasis upon tax-supported welfare it is made to look as though all of these follies should be underwritten by "society," as though innocent and dil-

Eliminate Khrushchev By Shortening Alphabet

What about reducing the English alphabet to 18 letters? Temporarily, at least. The eight to be laid aside for a while would be U, E, V, K, H, S, C, and R. With these eight gone, it would be impossible to spell Khrushchev. What a blessing it would be not to see the man's name in print for a while! What a relief to pick up a newspaper or magazine and not have it staring in your face from, it seems, every other paragraph. True, the loss of the eight letters would work a hardship. Veal cutlets would disappear from menus. Rock Hudson fan clubs would have to do without their banners. Electric companies wouldn't be able to mail out their bills. Those of us with such lovely names as Henry, Humphrey, Hubert, Hortense, and Henrietta, would have to adopt nicknames. The sale of knickers would decline, and letters to relatives in Ubangi would have to be re-outed. But it would be worth the trouble. No more "Khrushchev Says This," "Khrushchev Says That," "Khrushchev Threatens," "Khrushchev Objects," "Khrushchev Promises," "Khrushchev Rejects," "Khrushchev Grins," "Khrushchev Thunders," "Khrushchev Boasts." What could be nicer for a while than not to know what old bullet head is doing or thinking or where he is going, or where he has just come from, or what he thinks of the United States, India, China, France, Switzerland, or Upper Slobovia. The United States needs a vacation from the man. Seriously, to read about Khrushchev in every edition of every paper, in every issue of every magazine, and to hear his name on every TV and radio newscast could, in time, serve as a brainwash of Americans. This country could come to believe that everything the man said was of paramount importance, that his voice was the prime voice of the world, and that no nation, big or small, strong or weak, poor or rich, could make a decision without first taking into consideration how Khrushchev would react. With his name out of the news the world would surely go on, much as it has been going on, and we would gain assurance that Khrushchev didn't run, or have a hand in running, everything on earth. Much of what Khrushchev says and which is given a big play, is nonsense. Not only nonsense, but nonsense that he has said a thousand times before. Why publicize his repetitions, his bombasts, his lies? Now he wants to come to the United States again. Could you stand another visit? Please say no, and the next time you write your Congressman for seeds, let him know how you feel. In welfare, we find the exhibition of moral decline evidenced by the casual acceptance of illegitimacy and the abrogation of marriage or other marital or family responsibility, and on the other side the collapse of the character of the individual who finds it simpler to qualify for welfare than to seek assistance first from himself. Nejdly went on to point out that welfare enthusiasts had fancied that programs of state-administered aid would help knit the family together, would help stimulate desire for self-support, would encourage a high plane of moral behavior. But these high objects have not been reached, he counseled. He said the California legislature "must take a long and serious look at the direction welfare is taking. If we contemplate the continued growth of welfare at the expense of morality of the community and the individual, the continued abrogation of legislative controls is certainly appropriate." Nejdly dejectedly conceded that all that smacks of kindness and welfare is neither kindly nor an act of welfare. The ugliness and squalor of our politically-administered welfare program is becoming a major stain on our entire society. There is no substitute for individual responsibility and self-reliance. All government programs which intervene between cause and effect, are themselves evil, whether administered for noble purposes or not.

SENATE TO APPROVE LATIN AMERICAN AID IN PRINCIPLE, REFUSE 'BLANK CHECK', MONEY

WASHINGTON — President Eisenhower is in for a disappointment on his $500 million economic aid program for Latin America. The Senate won't turn him down outright, but neither will he get what he wants. Under the plan proposed by the President, in his message to Congress last week, $500 million would be authorized for unspecified economic spending in unnamed Latin American countries. No details or any other definite data have been given the legislators. This "blank check" proposal is getting nowhere in the Senate. Both Republicans and Democrats have sharply criticized it in the closed-door deliberations of the Foreign Relations Committee, where it is now under consideration. What this potent committee does about it will just about determine the Senate's final action. From the tenor of the Committee's private discussions, the President's recommendation is slated for extensive rewriting. Instead of voting a $500 million "blank check" authorization, the Committee will approve the general idea of large-scale economic aid for Latin America, but call for a specific program that spells out the major details of who is to run it, how it is to function, and where and what the money will be spent for. This will be incorporated in a joint resolution instead of a bill. Later the House will act on it. Not one cent will be voted by either chamber for this purpose this year. The President asked for no funds for his $500 million economic aid program for Latin America. What he proposed is that Congress formally "authorize" it, thus clearing the way to subsequently request an appropriation. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee is going to slam the door on that. It will resolve in favor of economic aid for Latin America, and that's all. Implementing this declaration in concrete legislation will be left for the next Administration, that takes office January 20. The President will get his cake, but won't be able to eat it. ON THE GRIDDLE — Secretary Herter made little headway, in his private meeting with the Foreign Relations Committee, trying to sell the President's program. One factor handicapping the State Department chief was his frank admission that he knows little about it. Herter explained that Undersecretary C. Douglas Dillon is handling the matter, and urged the Committee to question him. "We will," said Senator J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.), chairman, drily. "In the meanwhile, I cannot overlook this opportunity to point out to you, the Secretary of State, that exactly this kind of plan has been urged by members of this Committee for years, but to no avail. Repeatedly, President Eisenhower and other members of his Administration have rebuffed these proposals and suggestions. "These are senators sitting around this table, Mansfield (D., Mont.), Aiken (R., Vt.), Morse (D., Ore.), who have long advocated an economic aid program for Latin America, but have gotten absolutely nowhere. In fact, not only were they unable to get the White House to do anything about it, but have been criticized for proposing it. "Now that President Eisenhower is leaving office in a few months, and Castro has expropriated $1 billion in American property, and we're being denounced in South America as imperialists and money-grubbers, the Administration suddenly comes to life by asking for $500 million with no strings attached. "The President wants us to authorize the expenditure of one-half billion dollars on a completely 'blank check' basis. This is all very astounding to me, Mr. Secretary. Just how do you explain it?" Herter shrugged, smiled slightly, and shook his head. He had no answer. In answer to questions he did reveal the following: The President plans to ask for another $100 million for economic aid for strife-torn newly-independent Congo. Presumably, this additional money will be sought before Congress adjourns. General Rafael Trujillo's surprise move making himself head of the Dominican delegation to the UN is for the purpose of enabling the Central American dictator to "fight the Organization of American States," which has been very critical of him. "At first we thought Trujillo might be seeking asylum in this country by coming to the UN as chief of the Dominican delegation," Herter said in reply to a question by Senator Morse. "But after studying the matter, we now believe his real aim is to use this position to attack the OAS. In taking the UN ambassadorship, he was not resorting to a stratagem to gain asylum in the U.S. "From everything we have been able to ascertain, Trujillo is still in full control of the Dominican Republic. The new cabinet is a Trujillo cabinet, and he retains full control of the military and other agencies of power there. He is furious at the OAS, and he also knows he is widely and intensely disliked in South America. So he is apparently going to try to use the UN as a means of attacking the OAS." Senator Homer Capehart (R., Ind.) warmly defended Trujillo. "Why are we picking on him," demanded Capehart. "He's been a good friend of ours, and I don't understand why we are now kicking him around. Why this kicking of attitude?" "He conducts a very bad government," replied Herter quietly. "There are more than 3,000 political prisoners in that country, whose only crime is that they disapprove of Trujillo. He also has perpetrated many vicious deeds and acts of violence. We consider both the Trujillo and Castro regimes as highly undesirable." "Well, he stuck by us," contended Capehart, "and I don't see why we don't stick by him when he needs help." "That is not the issue," declared Herter. "That is not what we are dealing with. We did not leave Trujillo. He has left us. The United States cannot condone a vicious government, wherever it is and whatever it is."

FACES MURDER CHARGE HOUSTON (UPI) — Police held James O. Dunsby, 29, on a murder charge today after Dunsby's brother-in-law, Harold Willie O'Neal, was shot to death in the front yard of O'Neal's home Sunday. Police said Dunsby admitted he argued with the slain man but denied the shooting.

By WHITNEY BOLTON

NEW YORK — You could not really know Ferragamo unless you knew some of the fetishists. They were of all kinds. They lived almost everywhere. I never knew a woman in the Soviet Union who belonged to the cult, but then I don't know any women in the Soviet Union. It's the reverse of what the old religionist said in Christopher Fry's play, "The Lady's Not For Burning": "It's all Greek to me, but, then, of course, I understand Greek." I do not know any woman in Russia who had a compulsion to be shod by Salvatore Ferragamo, but, then, I don't know a woman in the Soviet Union. Not one. He had curly hair and a chin like the front end of a bulldozer. He had faintly mocking eyes and he rose through the genius of his hands from the tiny, goat-strewn Neapolitan village in which he was born to a 30-room villa outside Florence and a 13th Century palace which was his workshop. It was four stories tall and cost him $175,000 all of which came from American women who like to sit on sofas at parties and stretch their legs out and look down at their beautifully shod feet, thinking: "Ferragamo made those with his own hands."

The chances were excellent, unless the legs belonged to a Hindu princess or the Duchess of Windsor, women like that—then he did not make them with his own hands. He had 600 workmen in that Florentine palace and in the last years they made the shoes. He only designed them. He could, make them, you understand. He had hands built for the anvil or for taming bulls. They were square, heavy hands with powerful fingers that hung from the meat of the hand like sausages ready to burst. But they could take one ounce of hummingbird feathers from the pale amber hand of a Hindu princess and say, "Yes; of course. A pair of shoes." He had a way with textures and materials light as air. After all, he was only 33 years old in his tiny village when his weeping sister (one of seven such) was ready for her first communion and could not face it barefoot. He found some scraps of linen and a few sheets of cardboard and when he was done she was shod, comfortably and attractively. An American woman I shall not identify, because I think this kind of deed is foolish and vain, once cried out to me: "Ferragamo, I dream of golden shoes." He did not consider it bizarre (or, if he did, he never said so) if a woman ordered 100 pairs of shoes at a time from him. Nor was he stunned by orders from Windsor or Buckingham Palace, with the tiny crest worked into the lining inside. My own bride once had from him something for which he later became momentarily famed: invisible shoes. Two of the New York newspaper obituaries said he made them from nylon. That is careless nonsense. They were made from clear plastic with crystal heels and they were virtually invisible. They also were uncomfortable because the thicker plastic he used for the soles would not bend and my girl walked as though cased in steel. The Dutch, in their wooden shoes, would understand. You have to "wheel" along in an odd shuffle when the feet can't flex. He didn't look like a man who

THE UPTAPPED POLITICAL POWER

(The Wall Street Journal) When Vice President Nixon says anyone has "holes in his head" who thinks the Republicans have an edge in this campaign, he is only stating the obvious. But not all of Mr. Nixon's handicaps are the obvious ones. Plainly the Democrats begin with many political advantages. Most Southern states will go Democratic out of nothing more than force of habit. The party can count on the Democratic leanings of many large and powerful unions, many Catholics and—as of now—the farmers. In addition the Republican party organization is pretty much a shambles while the Democrats not only have a strong basic organization in every state but also the aid of extra-party organizations (such as the labor unions) that are well-heeled, skillful and determined.

Nonetheless, we do not think these are the greatest of Mr. Nixon's campaign difficulties. Bloc voting in this country is never as monolithic as it seems, and as for skill and determination in organizing, Mr. Nixon is himself no amateur. His greater difficulty lies in the political mystique that has overlain this country for a generation. Among politicians the mystique takes the form of the familiar dogma that any candidate must be "liberal" to win the Presidency. But it is not limited to politicians. Among the people too, a generation of repeated propaganda seems to have persuaded great bodies of them that the liberal philosophy—call it socialism, statism or what-you-will—is something America must embrace. This states the dimensions of Mr. Nixon's problem. The record clearly shows that a Republican cannot win merely by offering a "me-too" copy of the Democratic program. So political astuteness offer something different, a program oriented toward the ancient principles of fiscal responsibility and individual enterprise. And somehow he must persuade the people of this country that such a program is good for America. Now it is commonly supposed, in political circles, that the second of these is the greater difficulty; that it is impossible to convince people that such things as fiscal responsibility and a climate of economic freedom order the greater promise for the future. Perhaps so; certainly it will not be easy in the face of the barrage from the forces of the left. But he who would try will not be without support. There is in this country a vast middle-class that has been effectively disfranchised in many elections past; many of them within the Democratic party. Though perhaps not a majority, their name is yet legion. There is something else not without influence, and that is the deep and instinctive awareness of the sense, if you will—which tells them that no country can grow a rich future by spending what it has not, by destroying its money and by imprisoning the energy and initiative of its people. But these people, of course, cannot make shoes from a group of leathers or blocks of crystal or sheets of gold. He did not look like a man able to create platform soles and wedge heels (which he did before anyone else). He looked like the town blacksmith. But when he died at Flumetto, a few days ago, at 42, thousands of women must have mourned.

The Doctor Says:

By Dr. HAROLD T. HYMAN

I have had a flurry of inquiries about the effects on pregnancy of jet airplane travel. In general the questions asked are: "Is jet travel apt to produce miscarriage?" "How late in pregnancy is it safe to travel by jet?"

Both questions have been carefully studied and reported on by committees of the Aerospace Medical Assn., the Airline Medical Directors Assn. and the Air Transport Assn. of America. As to the problem of miscarriage, a study of 1,000 women, between the ages of 16 and 42 years, who traveled by air in World War II, failed to disclose any relationship between the flight and loss of the baby. Hence it is reasonable to conclude that a woman early in pregnancy need have no fear that airplane travel will result in abrupt termination of her pregnancy. As to the safety of travel in the later months of pregnancy the committees are agreed that commercial airlines need have no reservations about accepting healthy passengers through the first eight months of their gestation. However, they recommend that the passenger in the last month of her pregnancy be required to furnish a certificate from her obstetrician, dated within 72 hours of scheduled departure, stating that the patient has been examined and found physically fit for transportation from the take-off point to the expected landing field. The certificate must also indicate the date of the anticipated birth. Since adoption of these recommendations, there has been no record of precipitate full-term labor on any scheduled domestic run of any American commercial airliner. Although the experience with jets is still somewhat limited, the results should be equally satisfactory, even on overseas travel. The committees point out that jet travel is considerably faster, air time is appreciably reduced and the craft are pressurized at greater levels. Nevertheless, it has seemed advisable to discourage passengers from overseas travel after the eighth month of their pregnancy. I trust this information answers all the many inquiries I have received on this subject. If not, correspondents are advised to communicate directly with the medical committee of the Air Transport Assn. of America through the local offices of any of the major airlines.

stitute no clearly definable voting bloc; they can be identified neither as farmers, Negroes, Protestants, Catholics, laborers, Southerners or Northerners. They are an untapped source of political power because they are unseen. And that brings us to what we think is the heart of Mr. Nixon's problem. He knows, as he has shown, that he cannot win just by out-promising Senator Kennedy, for if the people want what Mr. Kennedy wants they will take Mr. Kennedy. Yet so powerful, so nearly all-persuasive, is the mystique of liberalism that as this campaign progresses it will require every ounce of Mr. Nixon's courage and constancy to resist its political temptations. The Republican party goes to this election with many handicaps, and they may be unsurmountable ones. But the greatest of these, and the one Richard Nixon has in his power to overcome, is the handicap of too little faith in the political power of honest principles honestly stated.
