GOT A PENCIL HANDY?

Then why not divide your last electric service bill by 30 in the handy space provided. That will give you Reddy's daily wage for all of the jobs he does for you at your house.

Then check the list below to see how many of those jobs he is doing.

Quite a number, isn't it?

True, your electric service bill is higher - because it is an electric service bill, not just a light bill. But the unit cost of that electric service is less than ever before, and each of your electric service dollars buys 21% more than ever before.

Looking Sideways By WHITNEY BOLTON

NEW YORK-It used to be said in more primitive days that a man catnipped by a woman, would go through fire and water to reach her side. As a man frankly eatnipped for some five years or so by Miss M'el Dowd, although the catnip is chastely parceled as a rapt critic's professional conviction that she is one of the two most exciting actresses in the American theatre today, I want to say that I went through ankledeep slush and treacherous ice to reach her side the other afternoon in a Gaelic snug known as

This was our third meeting in all those years, which scarcely can therefore be described as a seething relationship. We met once at a catch-as-catch-can evening party, again at the lush durbar thrown by opulent hosts to celebrate the opening of "Camelot," and the other wintry afternoon.

It is strange that one can be a critic and vastly admire the working talents of a vivid young actress and so seldom be able to sit down and talk with her about herself. The late Shaw managed things much better and had no shy notions that critics and actresses should greet each other from afar. He and Ellen Terry and Mrs. Patrick Campbell and, only recently disclosed, a young American actress had a romp of it through the years and no one ever looked askance. Here, in the Broadway situ. we all are much more foolishly re-

M'el Dowd turns out to be a girl who has been assured by professional experts that she is destinued to become a great theater star-and doesn't believe a word of it. She would like to be, she would not run away from being one, but has the conviction that although her talents might achieve it for her, her personal philosophies would be a barrier.

"I don't seem to think in those terms," she said. "I don't have the flamboyance, the singularity of personality that provides the stamp of stardom, I just like to work hard and often and on Broadway, even though 'Camelot' in a true sense is my first Broadway show. I did stand by for Geraldine Page in 'Sweet Bird of Youth' and I did play the part for two weeks while she was away. But that was not creating a role for Broadway. In 'Camelot' I have done it, finally, and now that I know the taste of it I want it again predictable future in an unforseeable theatre."

Miss Dowd plays the soceress queen, Morgan Le Fey, in "Camelot" and provides the major detonto anything which indicates Jesus ation of the show. She ricochets out onto-the stage late in the sec bond act in a swirl of pink chiffon topped with a crimson burst of her own hair-hair like the inside of a furnace in January, This hair, by the way, may bring her to bald stardom, stunning though it is. The management of "Camelot" spent $10,000 alone on wigs for the ladies from Julie Andrews on down, but not one penny for Miss Dowd. She, therefore, has to "rat" her hair into spinning fragments at each performance, a tactic that removes some of it each time. She is hopeful that, before, disaster sets in for her, they will spend another $500 for a wig for her. The Doctor Says:

As if the housewife hasn't difficulty enough these days in choosing, buying, preparing and serving the family meals; certain nutritionists are now informing teen-agers that they "have the freedom of looking over what's available and selecting some foods and rejecting others" in order to develop a "personality plus" or to improve their "figures."

In one pamphlet I have before me, youngsters are told that "the food you eat can play a part in the kind of person you are now and the person you will become by its effect on your appearance, your performance and your per-

In another, they are told that, while body build is inherited, figures are "built." And the teenager who wants to build "curves where curves were meant to be' must adjust her diet to conform with her figure-requirements.

Now I am perfectly willing to grant that it would be difficult for an undernourished child "to be radiant, fun, full of pep and sparkling laughter."

This is a matter of the youngster's disposition at the moment. t is not a matter of personality if I have a correct understanding of the meaning of personality. I am willing to concede, too, the fat youngster might put in a better appearance if she lost some weight and the skinny youngster if she gained some weight, But I do not concede that stance and a weight gain in the second instance will put "curves where they were meant to be." I am willing to concede also that the child who is a victim of a dietary insufficiency would have clearer . skin, better vision and stronger bones if given a diet that compensated for deficiences of vitamins and minerals. But I am not willing to concede that administration of these vitamins or minerals, in food or in supplements, will accomplish anything for the child that grace the table set by every conscientious housewife. For myself, I do not think it in the best interests of a teenager to make her any more "figure-conscious" than she is today. Nor do I think it in the best interests of teen agers to concentrate on developing a "personality plus" that consists of a "nice smile, pretty skin and a figure set off by becoming clothes, posture and grooming."

These are not the values that will prove of much service to a generation that may be called on to fight for maintenance of the freedoms and democratic principles for which we and our forefathers struggled, bled and
