Strike At GE Ends Saturday

NEW YORK (UPI)—A 29-day nationwide strike against General Electric ended late Saturday with the International Union of Electrical Workers accepting a three-year contract basically the same as the one they had rejected before the start of the walkout. The union blamed the defection of 9,000 members of the Schenectady, N.Y., local for weakening its position in the bargaining talks. The local returned to work last Monday.

New In The News

Two new features start today in The Pampa Daily News — a 24-part series on "Earth Stars and Man" and a daily comic strip, "Short Ribs." # Vessels Collide At Mouth Of Mississippi; Nine Killed

Mixed Turn Signals Believed To Be Cause

EMPIRE, La. (UPI) — An Italian cargo liner steaming up the Mississippi River veered suddenly Saturday and tore a 135-foot furrow through a row of staterooms in a passing American vessel, killing nine persons in their berths.

More than a dozen others were injured, some seriously. Most of the dead were badly mangled.

The Italian ship, the 6,100-ton Lorenzo Marcello out of Venice with cargo and 12 passengers, plowed into the side of the Alcoa Corsair, an 8,840-ton cargo-passenger ship, with a swimming pool, was bound with 51 passengers and cargo to San Juan, P.R. on what was to have been its last voyage.

Alcoa Steamship Co. owner of the Corsair, said four crewmen were dead, four passengers were known dead and one was missing and presumed dead.

An officer of the Corsair said, "we blew for a right turn and they blew for a right. We turned right but they turned left."

William Murphy, a utilities steward aboard the Corsair, said he was in the crew's quarters when suddenly "all five rooms telescoped into one."

One man, William Hamby from Mobile, Ala., the third cook, came "sailing through a bulkhead, bunk and all." Hamby lived.

The four dead crewmen were reportedly porters, caught in one of the crew's rooms.

The Lorenzo Marcello smashed into the Corsair at 5:23 a.m. est. while it was still dark. The collision occurred 77 miles south of New Orleans.

The Corsair, bloody bedding trailing from the gash in her side, reeled back from the impact and began taking on water. With three holds flooded, her master ordered his ship run aground to avoid sinking.

Among the 51 passengers on the Corsair were 30 persons on a cruise sponsored by the Pasadena, Calif., Chamber of Commerce.

The bodies were taken to Empire and lined up under gray blankets on the docks. Three bodies of crewmen were pinned in the wreckage and it took cutting torches to free them.

Congo Chief Complains Of U.N. Acts

LEOPOLDVILLE (UPI) — Congolese strongman Col. Joseph Mobutu, charging the United Nations was trying to "topple" him from power, announced Saturday he will fly to New York Tuesday to complain personally against the U.N. attitude in the Congo.

Mobutu, Congolese army chief of staff who deposed Patrice Lumumba as premier, announced he had broken off relations with the U.N. command in Leopoldville. He acted following a meeting Saturday morning with the U.N.'s chief delegate in the Congo, Rajeshwar Dayal of India.

The 38-year-old colonel charged the U.N. had refused to recognize his military regime. He cited a series of incidents which he alleged showed the world body was supporting Lumumba.

As examples he pointed to the U.N. armed protection of the deposed premier, whom Mobutu has been trying futilely to arrest, and its backing for Leopoldville Province Cleophas Kamiatu, a known Lumumba supporter.

At the same time, Kamitatu announced he was conferring with both Lumumba and President Joseph Kasavubu in what was seen as a move to effect a reconciliation between the two leaders and an attempt to return Lumumba to power.

Pampa To Press For Paving Of Lake Road

A delegation of Pampans, headed by Floyd Watson and Fred Thompson, chairmen of the Public Improvements and Highway Committees of the Chamber of Commerce, will join County Judge Bill Craig and members of the Gray County Commissioners Court in a hearing before the Texas State Highway Commission Oct. 28 to make an official request for the paving of the McClellan Lake Road from State Highway 70 to the lake.

The project has been recommended by the district office of the State Highway Department and it is hoped that the road improvement program can be placed in the next program of work to be drawn up by the State Highway Department.

The U.S. Forestry Service, which now administers Lake McClellan, will send a representative with a local group asking for the road improvement program.

The Amarillo Chamber of Commerce has joined with Pampans in requesting road improvements to the lake, since hundreds of people from Potter County use the lake each week during the vacation period.

Decision On Resumption Of Nuclear Testing Due

By EDWARD COWAN
United Press International

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (UPI) — Chairman John A. McCone of the Atomic Energy Commission, said Saturday the United States may decide within "the next several weeks" whether to resume underground nuclear testing.

He told a news conference the "time has come now" for the United States to decide whether the Soviet Union is "seriously negotiating" in the two-year-old nuclear test ban talks at Geneva, Switzerland.

McCone was here attending a meeting of President Eisenhower's Business Advisory Council, composed of 100 corporation presidents and board chairmen who are reporting on the business outlook.

McCone said the United States "cannot continue in protracted negotiations" without surer knowledge that the Russians are not trying out atomic devices "behind their high wall of secrecy."

He said there was "no firm evidence" of secret Russian tests but

Lions To Sell Bulbs For Charity

The Pampa Evening Lions Club will begin its annual light bulb sale Monday, B. G. Gordon, club president, said Saturday.

This sale is conducted to raise funds to help finance the Lions Clubs of Texas crippled children's camp at Kerrville.

A portion of the money also goes to aid underprivileged children in the city; and to aid in support of some crippled youngsters of Pampa, Gordon pointed out.

Chamber Dinner Ducats Sold Out

All ticket reservations for the Pampa Chamber of Commerce's annual membership banquet, which will be held in Robert E. Lee Junior High School cafeteria beginning at 7:30 p.m., have been sold.

E. O. Wedgeworth, chamber manager, said there may be a few cancellations and that those interested could telephone the chamber office Tuesday morning.

Two outstanding Pampans will be honored during the night. One will be cited for civic endeavor and the other for youth work.

Principal speaker for the affair will be Leonard E. Read, noted advocate of free enterprise and president of the Foundation for Economic Education, and organization which he formed. Read is from Irvington, N.Y., and is one of the more sought after speakers in the nation.

United Fund Vignettes

Where Is Brantly Hudson Today?

Where's Brantly Hudson Jr. today?

Like many people there's a good chance the head of the Pampa-Lefors United Fund Speakers Bureau has attended church and is relaxing, but don't count on that too much; Hudson is a busy man and he may be taking care of some of his duties with the Adobe Walls Council of the Boy Scouts of America, an organization which he directs.

Hudson and Melvin Munn, chairman of the fund, put their heads together several weeks ago and came up with the idea of the Speakers Bureau. It has proved an excellent idea in that the story of the United Fund has been carried to the vast majority of employees of firms in the fund area.

Bonsal Through In Cuba

Cuban Post To Remain Vacant

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Philip W. Bonsal will not return to turbulent Cuba as U.S. ambassador it was learned Saturday.

President Eisenhower, according to responsible diplomatic sources, has decided to appoint him to succeed John C. Dreier as chief U.S. representative to the Organization of American States (OAS). Dreier, a career diplomat, has resigned for "personal reasons."

In Palm Springs, Calif., where the President is making his headquarters this weekend, the White House declined to comment on the reports.

Mrs. Anne Wheaton, assistant White House press secretary, referred all queries on the subject to the State Department.

Bonsal was ordered home earlier this week for "indefinite consultation." This was soon after the United States imposed a strict trade embargo on Cuba in a frank attempt to undermine premier Fidel Castro's pro-Communist government.

The State Department denied the moves were in reprisal for Castro's mounting anti-Yankee campaign. It also said there was no intention of breaking off diplomatic relations with Castro. But it made clear that Bonsal's post in Havana would remain vacant at least until January.

This apparently will serve as a rebuff to Castro and also will give the incoming president—either John F. Kennedy, Democrat, or Richard M. Nixon, Republican, a chance to assess U.S.-Cuban relations before a new ambassador is appointed.

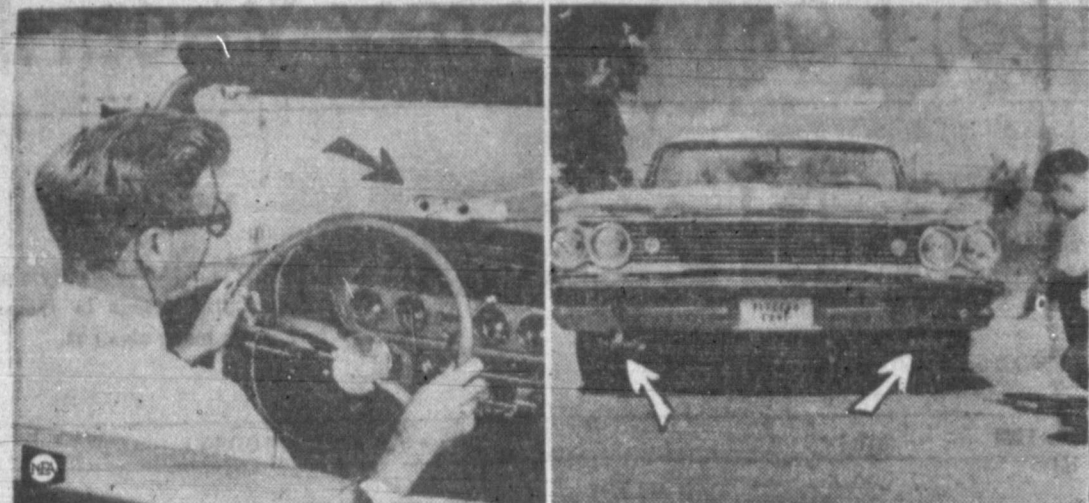

Department sources denied that the shift of Bonsal to the OAS was related to Kennedy's charge that the President and Nixon, through "inaction," had permitted Castro's regime to move into the Communist orbit.

7,000-Mile Atlas Flight A Success

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — An Atlas intercontinental ballistic missile flew 7,000 miles Saturday and the Air Force casually called it a "routine" success.

The flight was the second for the big missile at the 9,000 mile range. On two previous occasions it has bettered the 9,000-mile mark, and the Air Force has started testing an advanced model which could deliver a warhead halfway around the world.

The best known Russian effort to date was about an 8,500 mile flight in a series of tests over the Pacific early this year.

New Devices For Auto Safety Put On Market

By JERRY BENNETT
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

DETROIT, Mich. — (NEA) — Among numerous car accessories, there are at least two new ones developed by automotive safety research which may save your life some day.

The first is a flashing light set up on the dashboard to warn you when you drive too close to one of the extremes — the edge of the road or the center line.

The other is a special broadcasting system to notify you of hazardous road conditions ahead.

Both have been made ready for use by General Motors Corp. But both need components that must be built into or near roadways. So their future value probably will depend on their acceptance by federal and state highway authorities.

The flashing light to guide you to the center of your lane is triggered by a wire emitting low frequency signals in the middle of each lane.

Special coils attached to the ends of a car bumper would pick up the signals whenever a driver strays too far to the right or left. The signals then would flash on one of two dashboard lights to show him which way he is veering. Safety engineers believe the device particularly useful in rainy or foggy weather.

The broadcasting system requires antennas at various intervals along a highway. Police would broadcast news of hazardous road conditions over a special frequency that would interrupt regular radio programs, or cause the radio to go on if it were off.

Or you could have a special radio unit that picks up only these safety broadcasts.

General Motors officials estimate that the costs of installing these devices will be relatively cheap, although the exact prices haven't been determined yet.

While research develops such new safety devices for the future, engineers try to make today's automobiles as safe as possible.

Crash studies are made to find ways of further strengthening car bodies. Test models are driven thousands of miles to iron out kinks and locate mechanical hazards. For example, Ford Motor Co. this year will drive its test vehicles 17,000 miles, 2,000 more than it did last year.

Ford also offers self-adjusting brakes, and padding under arm rests to avoid serious hip injuries which can occur during quick stops and collisions when bodies are thrown against the bottoms of arm rests.

EATS WAY TO FREEDOM

MIAMI (UPI) — Bessie, the pet goat of Mrs. Flora Goldhagen, has been found alive and well, but probably still hungry in Atlanta, Ga., more than 600 miles from home.

Bessie bounced out of a trailer while the Goldhagen family was driving home from a vacation earlier this month. "She was tied down," Mrs. Goldhagen said, "but then you know goats will eat anything, even rope."

Medal Of Honor Winners' Pay Boost Sought

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — The American Legion has urged the government to pay the nation's Medal of Honor winners $100 a month instead of $10.

The Tennessee delegation to the Legion convention here introduced the resolution on behalf of ailing Sgt. Alvin C. York, 73, of Pall Mall, Tenn. York, now bedridden, is fighting a government claim that he owes about $85,000 in income taxes for money received from a 1940 movie of his life.

"This resolution would allow Alvin to live better than the poor way he does now," said Tennessee delegate Robert Summitt. "He is a great hero and it's the least we felt we could do for him."

York received the nation's highest military award for his act in the Argonne Forest in 1918 when he killed 25 German soldiers and captured 132.

Independence Sets Off Nigerian Trade

By GABE KAIMOWITZ

NEW YORK (NEA) — Alongside its independence banner, Nigeria is putting up an "open for business" sign.

As Ghana has done before, and as other African nations indicate they will do when they gain independence, Nigeria is trying to lure American trade to its shores.

And although steeped in tribal tradition, the newly independent are using good, old-fashioned American traditions in their business campaign — the sales pitch, the hard and soft sell.

In many ways, for example a Nigerian independence fete in New York was similar to an American trade convention.

Brochures were distributed which any chamber of commerce would be proud of. One is titled "What Nigeria's Independence Today Means to Your Company Tomorrow."

regions, each in various stages of industrial development.

They impress upon you that what happened in the Congo to outside business interests will not happen in Nigeria.

The speaker says:

"There is no, and there will not be, confiscation or further nationalization in Nigeria. We want to trade with you, not expropriate your property."

As the show goes on, Americans are stopped by Africans of other lands, ready to promote Africa as a continent and their own nations as prospective business sites. A man from Basutoland, a tiny British colony entirely surrounded by the Union of South Africa, in a bright blue robe, says:

"Come to Africa. We need you. We need technicians, scholarship exchanges. Africa must learn what America is; you must learn what Africa is. Personal exchange good will that will government exchange."

For further information, the Nigerian brochure informs you, you can write or call Mr. Samuel O. Oti, head of trade and investment at the Nigeria Office in New York.

And behind their bright smiles and underneath their tribal robes, Nigerians in business suits made their pitch.

They invited businessmen to a type of function that usually is graced solely by diplomats and members of the press.

Except for a complimentary toast to the British Queen, the affair stressed Nigerian-American ties. The featured guest speaker was not a Britisher, but an American Congressman, New York's Adam Clayton Powell.

Ask a Nigerian about the British Commonwealth or the Communist bloc, and he'll immediately tell you how much he loves America. To a Nigerian, the key word is not neutrality, communism or capitalism; it is "stability."

"Nigeria is one; don't talk about three separate regions please," one member of the consulate here said. Nigeria is a federation of three

NEW YORK (UPI)—When you hear an electronics engineer mentioning pots ranging in cost from 10 cents to $500 he is not thinking about the kitchen variety.

He's talking about potentiometers, the devices behind the tune knobs on your radio and TV set.

"Pots" are instruments that control the flow of power and are vital to every space-age marvel from rocket controls to computers. They also have many applications in medical and other instruments and are showing up in huge numbers in modern toys.

"Pots" control the flow of electricity just as a faucet controls the volume of water, explained Victor Mucher, president of Clatostat Mfg. Co. Inc., a leading producer of both potentiometers—technically described as variable resistors—and fixed resistors.

The heart of a resistor is a core with thousands of turns of wire, some of it a fraction of the thickness of a human hair.

Once dependent on radio sales for a major portion of their business, resistor manufacturers have found their products of increasing importance in electronics ever since the U. S. Navy in 1936 began to equip its ships with radar for detection, location and gun-sighting.

Today, Mucher noted, sales of variable pots and fixed resistors amount to more than $85 million annually and are growing.

The growing resistor had its roots in Brooklyn, where Mucher's father and two uncles founded Clatostat to make machines.

In 1924, three years after its founding, Clatostat developed a one-knob, one tube radio receiver, which led the company into the resistor field, today consisting of scores of manufacturers.

He said radio and television still represent a major market for resistors, both fixed and variable, but the big demand for the variable high unit cost types is for complex equipment such as the new devices that control the flight of aircraft.

Airlines To Cut Overseas Fares

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) is expected to approve major reductions in international air fares by early next year.

A CAB spokesman said approval probably would provide for substantial reductions in lower class rates across the North and Central Pacific, and between North and South America. There would be cuts of up to 35 percent on some Western Hemisphere routes.

The CAB was informed by the International Air Transport Association (IATA) that 90 airlines would ask their governments to approve a rate schedule for most of the world's routes for an unprecedented period of two years. "We espouse the idea of schedules for two years instead of one if adjustments are adequate and individual carriers are protected," a CAB examiner said. "I understand there are adequate safeguards in this agreement." The new fare proposal was drafted at the recent IATA traffic conference at Cannes, France.

A Grandmother's Dolls Sold For Good Cause

A grandmother whose grandson was stricken with polio several years ago now spends her days aiding other victims of polio and various disabling diseases. She is Mrs. Lewis Hillmer of Greenville, and she donates time, energy and money in making "Gonzales Dolls" for sale over the state.

The entire price paid for the dolls ($2.50) goes to the Gonzales Warm Springs Foundation in Gonzales to defray the cost of providing physical, occupational and speech therapy and many other services to the handicapped.

In Pampa the dolls have been received well, and the first shipment of 100 dolls was sold out quickly. More are on order. They have been on display at Bob Clements Cleaners. Incidentally, Clements is a director of the Gonzales Foundation, and another Pampan, Jack Skelly, is also on the board and active in promoting the center.

Mrs. Hillmer receives help in form of donations of material to make the dolls, but the work falls entirely upon her. When she runs out of material, which is often, she purchases more.

Mrs. Bill Clements said that many Pampa women donate material to Mrs. Hillmer.

The Gonzales Warm Springs Foundation is for rehabilitation, in general, and is a planned attempt, utilizing all available means, to restore or improve the health, usefulness and happiness of those who suffered an injury or are recovering from a disease.

The Texas Rehabilitation Center is a comprehensive rehabilitation center. That is, its program is made up of many specialized departments, each of which contributes to the total rehabilitation of the patient.

The center was chartered in 1937 by Texas as a non-profit non-sectarian corporation and serves people from all over Texas who have been disabled by disease and injury.

It is situated in the south-central part of the state between Gonzales and Luling.

Persons from age three months to 80 years, regardless of ability to pay, are treated at the center and the average stay for patients is about 70 days. Some patients must stay longer.

Japanese Girl Wants Pen Pals

Miss Setsuko Shihara of Yokohama, Japan, is seeking pen pals in the Pampa area.

The 16-year-old student of a private school, Tsurumi Girls' High School, says she doesn't want information "that can be found in geographies and school books, rather she'd like to know what people in this area find of interest, comparable to what she and her friends find interesting.

Miss Shihara resides at 1710 Hihashiterao-machi, Gawrumi-ku, Yokohama, Japan. Her letter came to the Daily News from Harry A. Nelson of Miami, one of the many interested in the People to People Program which has the approval of President Eisenhower. It is a move to create better understanding among the peoples of the world through personal letters from peoples of one country to those of other nations.

Miss Shihara closed her letter with, "I sincerely hope that you will accept me as a pen pal."

Another person seeking pen pals is Yo Sup Chu of 254-1 Don - Am Dong, Seoul, Korea.

Chu sent no further information on himself, but he advises that he will answer all letters he receives.

California Is Mystery In Presidential Chase

By JAMES C. ANDERSON United Press International

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — California, a rich prize with 32 electoral votes, is a mystery state in the coming presidential election.

Although new registration figures show Democrats with a husky bulge of 1,368,922 voters over Republican totals, that by no means guarantees Californians will choose John F. Kennedy, the Democratic nominee, over Richard M. Nixon on Nov. 8.

Californians, despite party registration which for a decade has run 3-2 Democratic, are an independent lot. Thousands of Democrats joined GOP votes in 1952 and 1956 to help elect Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Who is the favorite as of this moment — Nixon or Kennedy?

Proof that neither is can be found in the fact that both parties marshalled their biggest oratorical guns for a final assault on the Golden State in the last three weeks of the campaign.

Kennedy, who already whistled the length of the state in September, plans to return for a double-barreled assault on vote-heavy Los Angeles and San Francisco the week before the election.

His running mate, Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, will make his initial drive in California next week, with appearances in Los Angeles, San Diego, Fresno and Sacramento.

And that old warhorse, Harry S. Truman, will give the Kennedy-Johnson ticket a helping hand with a major speech at Berkeley on Oct. 28. Democratic bigwigs say Adlai Stevenson, still about the most popular figure in the hearts of most Californians, Democrats, is available for still another pitch in the West — and probably will be called upon.

As for the Republicans, Nixon wound up a strenuous four-day swing through his home state last week. He will return once and maybe twice in the closing weeks of the campaign, concentrating on northern and central California and probably making a quick trip to Los Angeles.

His running mate, Henry Cabot Lodge, has finished his campaign chores in California but the GOP will call on Thomas E. Dewey to give the ticket a helping hand with speeches in San Francisco and Stockton.

The new registration figures show an all-time record-breaking total of 7,464,626 eligible voters, 4,295,330 of them Democratic. Since the June primary, Democrats have gained 681,825 new voters while Republicans picked up 406,433.

Since Eisenhower captured the state in 1956 by 607,533 votes, the Democratic percentage of the total vote has increased from 55.7 to 57.5. The Republicans' share, meantime, shrank from 41.2 percent in 1956 to 39.2 for this election.

Only three of the state's 58 counties now show a GOP majority of registrants — sparsely populated Alpine and Mono counties and suburban Marin.

Los Angeles County, where 40.3 per cent of the total state vote is concentrated, shows 577,188 more Democrats than Republicans.

Yet, voter registration is no proof Kennedy will win here.

U.S. Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel, a Nixon man, said California is not "partisan-minded" and cited Eisenhower's dual victories in 1952-56 to prove it plus the fact that Earl Warren, a Republican, was elected governor three straight times in the 1940s and was followed by another Republican, Goodwin J. Knight in 1954.

No Ag Students Seek Site To Work Projects

By ED HAYES WILSON
Daily News Staff Writer

If the Pampa School Board and City Commission reach an accord for a site for a vocational agriculture farm, you may rest assured the youths of the class at Pampa High School will prepare a farm second to none in this area.

Thursday the students were talking it over when it came time to discuss the progress being made under their teacher-advisor Bob Skaggs. The talk ran to what could be done with acreage at the former air base tract, some five miles south of Pampa, that is now owned by the city. Most of the boys were pointed towards preliminary steps they would take and brought to the fore one major item: The boys can, and are willing to do the majority of the preparatory work themselves.

In the vo-ag class, one of the requirements is that a pupil take a shop course, thus a number of the boys are experienced welders, carpenters, and the like. So construction doesn't bother the fellows.

"Shucks, we'll do the job. All we need is the land," said Dale Veale, a senior and a vo-ag addict.

"The boys are all hepped up over this. They are doing a splendid job in handling their projects, and will continue to do so whether or not we receive a place to prepare a permanent farm, but they are all set to go if we receive word we have the land," said Skaggs.

And the students are doing a fine job on their projects. They have pigs, sheep and calves and all are in excellent shape.

These projects take much time. Feeding and other care is done prior to and after school hours, but the youths don't seem to mind the extra work. They are constantly seeking ways to improve on their projects, and spend much of their time discussing with their teacher ways of improvement.

Take the case of Veale: At his father's farm just outside the city he has a chapter sow with 11 pigs. He cares for them, feeding them twice daily and watching closely for any disease that might crop up. Once he gets the pigs raised he will turn two back to the FFA chapter, as will Finley Schlumburg, who is raising another litter. This will step up the chapter pig total and these gilts will be turned over to other boys in the organization. The sows and other pigs Veale and Schlumburg have will then be theirs.

Jerry Fulton, president of the local Future Farmers of America chapter at the school, a junior serving his second term in that capacity, had the other gilt club members purchased with their own money. Jerry had bad luck and his gilt died, but he has purchased another and will turn two gilts over to the club later.

Since the club had to shift its operations from the barns of the Top O' Texas rodeo grounds, the projects are spread out over the area. The sheep, which the club has primarily to improve judging by the chapter's judging teams, are penned on property owned by Mrs. Flora Enright, grandmother of Tom Folmer, who is working the sheep project with Harold Gabriel and Gerald Wright.

"We enjoy this," said Folmer, "and we're learning a lot about the animals."

The sheep appeared to be well cared for and have gained weight rapidly.

At the present the class has five calves, four lambs and 45 barrows, but next year they expect to step up the projects considerably.

Now, the business of being a FFA member and a project worker is no snap. Just like athletes, the fellows must keep their grades and three points Skaggs stresses at all times are scholarship, leadership and sportsmanship.

"When the boys finish this course I want them to be ready to accept any call to civic duty and to be able to go far in their chosen field. For this reason we conduct all meetings with parliamentary procedure, thus should they be asked to accept a task of directing a meeting of any sort they will be prepared," said Skaggs.

That the class has stirred much interest since Skaggs took over is noted in that 53 boys are in the chapter, with 48 being members of Skaggs' classes.

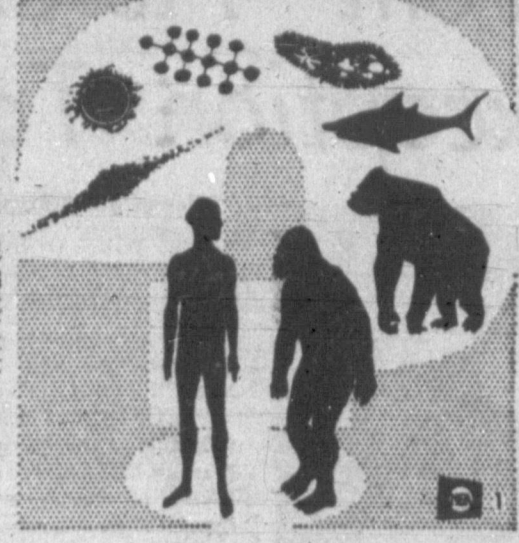

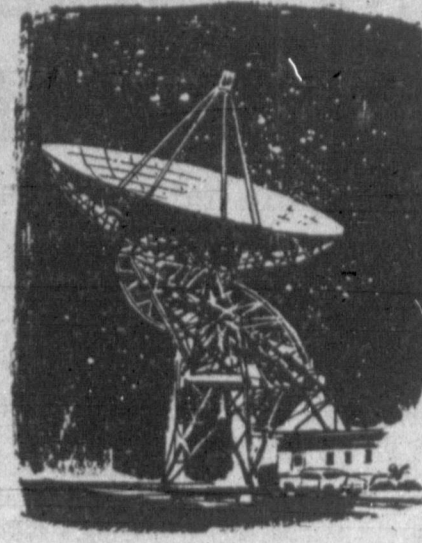

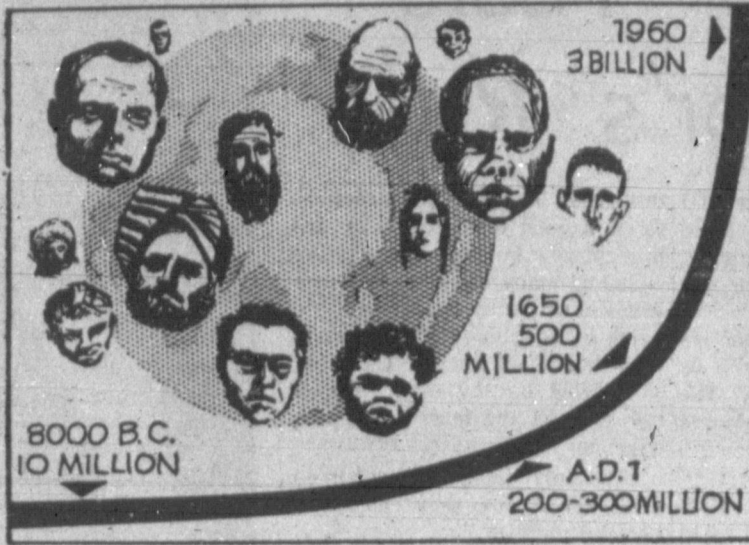

When the teacher took over in 1958 the total enrollment was but 14!

"We try to make this instruction interesting and beneficial," said the teacher, "and I believe that's what helped build up the enrollment."

The boys, though, figure Skaggs is a "good guy" and credit him

Earth, Stars and Man (1) Search for Man

by Don Oakley and John Lane

The world in A.D. 1960 teems with life. The species that calls itself man is the dominant and fastest increasing of its forms. Few parts of the globe have not been exploited by men, so varied in their types, cultures and languages.

Man is apparently the only really self-conscious animal, the only one who thinks about death and destiny. Men know their own personal extinction is certain, and wonder why. The race expands and progresses with each new generation, yet men more and more fear the extinction of mankind as a whole—self-inflicted in nuclear war.

Man considers himself the highest form of life and calls himself Homo sapiens—"wise man." But he has more questions than answers about himself. He wonders if he is unique in the universe, if perhaps "life" itself appears only on this earth.

Some men look to the past, to the origins of the world and of living things, for an answer. At the same time, others look beyond the earth. In April, 1960, at the National Radio Astronomy Observatory at Green Bank, W.Va., astronomers began an experiment (Project Ozma) that would have been ridiculed only a few years ago. They focused their latest tool, the radiotelescope, at two Sol-type stars some 60 million million miles from earth.

They hoped—but did not expect—to pick up radio messages from the vicinity of those stars. That first attempt was unsuccessful. But men will try again. And should they ever contact other intelligent life, they might well ask: "Do you know how you came to be?" For man has ever been fascinated by the riddle of his origin, and his future, and his apparent aloneness in the unthinkably large universe.

This is the story of a search—of apes and amoebae, of suns and galaxies. It is a story whose beginning is obscure and whose end is not in sight. But both beginning and end appear to meet somewhere among the stars.

Terracing Important In Farming

By DOUGLAS BARTOSH
Agriculture Engineer, SCS

A diversion terrace is an individually designed terrace. The main purpose of a diversion terrace is to intercept the surface runoff and carry it at a safe velocity to a vegetated outlet.

The most common uses of diversion terraces in the Gray County Soil Conservation District are:

- To protect cropland from runoff.
- To break up the concentration of water on a long, gentle slope.
- To divert water away from gullies.

The outlet of the diversion terrace is very important. The outlet should have a stabilized grade with a good protective cover so erosion will not take place. The outlet end of the diversion terrace should be at or near the same elevation as the outlet. If an outlet is not available it may be necessary to establish one before the diversion terrace is constructed.

Farmers and ranchers in the Gray County Soil Conservation District have made very good use of diversion terraces. The various uses of diversion terraces can be seen by stopping at the various farms and ranches throughout the Soil Conservation District.

Recent construction of graded diversion terraces can be seen on Drew Word's farm north of Alandred. Word is using his diversion terraces to divert surface runoff from cropland. An example of diversion terraces to break up long, gentle slopes can be seen on John Rapstine's farm south of Pampa. Rapstine has small gullies working their way up his wheat field. The diversion terraces will stabilize these gullies by taking the surface runoff to a grassed waterway.

Some level diversion terraces are being constructed on John Patterman's rangeland south of McLean. Their purpose is to stabilize the gullies below. They also provide better water utilization by letting the water soak into the soil.

Many other farmers and ranchers in this Soil Conservation District have constructed diversion terraces. They found terraces help

United Press International
A 44-yard pass from quarterback Ronnie Stanley to halfback Tommy Minter paved the way for the Aggies to out run all the stunted A&M defenders.

Aggie quarterback Daryl Keeling was victimized by Starr's interception. The 198-pound senior from Haskell, Tex., gathered the ball in on the run and angled for the right sidelines to out run all the stunted A&M defenders. Baylor's automatic point-after-touchdown specialist, Larry Corley, added two conversions to run his string to nine straight this year.

Peg O' Pampa

WE WERE sorry to read of the ending of the "Boots" comic strip, which we have read for years and years. Somehow the Sunday one just doesn't have the flavor of the daily one and we couldn't figure out why until we read that they are not drawn by the same man, the Sunday one was done by an "apprentice" but we guess we'll continue to read the Sunday one!

WE STUCK our noses into the equipment and tool show that was held a week-end ago along with Mr. Peg and the little Pegs and enjoyed seeing the things displayed. Women like to see these things now and then. Noticed Ggy Palmitier looking beautiful in a becoming black dress assisting the visitors with their name-cards and there were color cartoons for the children, which, to be honest, ended up watching while Mr. Peg gave the equipment a pre-than-a-once-over. The Motor Inn Auto Supply stores sponsored the affair. The star of the show was Floye Lites demonstrating the uses of the air-brush. Making the designs from stencils to an interested and surprised audience. Surprised at the effects obtained. (commercial artists use the air brush for their advertising work, and hobbyists can find many other uses.)

THE Top O' Texas Garden Club went on a Fall Pilgrimage to Canadian to see the fall colors last Monday and today, barring bad weather, there is to be a "foliage" tour of the Canadian area for artists to sketch and paint the pretty scenes. Pampa artists are going along with Amalio and other artist. and the finished paintings will be displayed in the Hi-Plains Galleries in Amarillo. Helene and Ruth Huff. Anna Lee Gordon. and Ruth Malley were among those planning to go from here, the last we heard. If any of you who read this want to go along, there will be coffee and donuts served at the meeting place in Canadian about 2 p.m. do your sketching and complete your picture of painting later for the exhibition by Nov. 5. a jury will award a certificate of merit for the best painting. the meeting place will probably be the coffee shop at the "new motel" but you can ask anyone you see in Canadian and they can tell you for sure.

DON'T FORGET that the deadline for your contribution to the United Fund is October 31st. fund chairman is Melvin Munn. those of you who get tired of being asked to contribute to so many, many different funds should welcome the chance to wrap up a number of them all in one contribution.

NOTES AND CHATTER. Marcella Hudson won second place with a juvenile short story in a contest sponsored recently by Panhandle Penwomen's organization. she has lovely children, is a Girl Scout leader of an Intermediate troop of twenty girls, Public Relations Chairman of the Pampa Parish Council of Catholic Women and of the Pampa Deaconry of the Diocese, and still finds time to write stories. are ashamed that sometimes we feel we just haven't the time to do something we'd like to do. and speaking of having time to do things. Mojunta Hills was among five who were just graduated from a special course, given to registered nurses, in teaching child care to young mothers. This is sponsored by the American Red Cross chapter here and will give a service not before available. the first class began last week. young mothers can learn just how to give their babies proper care. we think it is wonderful that busy people like Majunta will take the time to do something like this.

ALL SCENE NOTES. we got a pleasant and amused kick out of seeing one of those big oil-field trucks driving down the street last week one day. right in the midst of the machinery and the oil and grease on the truck bed was a beautiful, perfect, bright orange pumpkin. probably going its way to make a Jack O' Lantern for some happy child, perhaps to end up in a delicious pumpkin pie or two. the sight of it gave our day a lift.

NEW couple in town are Homer and Anita Krueger. from Dallas. Homer is a band director at the Pampa Junior High, and Anita is a talented musician herself. welcome to the city. Pampanos who usually go to the annual Countryitchens smorgasbord at the Borger Club will be glad to know that November 6 is the date this year. Curt and Will Beck were among Pampanos who went to see the play in Amarillo last week. and many, many, are the Pampanos who are attending the Citizenship Seminar lectures by Dr. F. W. Mattox. don't forget the next one tomorrow night.

WE ARE awaiting with interest the first broadcasting of the new FM station. hope there will be lots of good music in it. and speaking of good music, tickets for the season's community Concerts went out last week. at least we received ours. and the first one is Rise Stevens. this coming Thursday. the Board of Directors in no doubt getting everything ready for the event. we'll see you there, you are lucky enough to have tickets.

ANOTHER FALL SCENE NOTE. notice how the freshly painted curbstones all over the city match the yellow of turning leaves, adding a nice touch of color to the observing eye. and yellow leaves falling on the dark charcoal gray of the pavements are pretty, too.

GIRLS. do you know that there is a handsome young bachelor in town? you know, they are few and far between sometimes. this one has recently gotten a discharge from the armed services so that he can help his sister, Carolyn Davenport, with her toy store. and you will see him around the store. his name is Tony Boyleson. now, don't mob him, but let's welcome him to Pampa! Family Night time for various schools is in progress. Stephen F. Austin elementary school held theirs last Friday, with the traditional dinner. and Horace Mann held their annual Feast, Fun and Music Night, featuring a minstrel show written by Mrs. John Hanham. the children had booths in the school rooms, and fun was had by all, we'll bet. of course, you understand this was all written before the fact. but predictions are fun. See you next week. Peg

Wedding Vows Said By Miss Johnson, G. R. Kerr

With wedding vows repeated on Saturday evening at 7:30 p.m., Miss Clo Ann Johnson became the bride of Gaylon Russell Kerr in the First Baptist Church.

Dr. E. Douglas Carver was officiating for the double-ring service repeated before a background of candlelight provided by tree and spiral candelabra holding tall white cathedral tapers with an altar arrangement of white chrysanthemums, pompons and Jade Palms. Tall Grecian Urns of white chrysanthemums flanked the white satin prie dieu. Pews of honor, on the center aisle, were draped with white satin ribbon joining tall wrought-iron holders with tall, white tapers accented with white satin bows.

Miss Johnson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Johnson, 1001 E. Browning.

Mr. Kerr is the son of Mrs. Pauline Kerr, 500 Magnolia, and Walter Kerr of Dumas.

Escorted to the altar by her father and given in marriage with the "her mother and I" vow, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white Skinner Satin and imported Belgian Duchesse lace. The fitted bodice, of lace over tulle and satin accented with clusters of seed pearls and iridescent sequins, was designed with a scalloped neckline, repeated again with clusters of pearls and sequins, and long, petaled-pointed sleeves. The bodice terminated in points at the front and back and was closed with tiny, satin buttons.

The bouffant satin skirt was enhanced by soft pleats caught at each side by inlaid lace medallions, which also cascaded down the length of the sweeping chapel train.

Her waist-length veil of French Silk Illusion fell from a Princess Crown of cut iridescent crystals and rhinestones. Her only jewelry was a diamond pendant, a gift of the bridegroom.

She carried a cascading arrangement of white roses and stephanotis showered with white satin ribbon tied in Love Knots.

ATTENDANTS

Miss Carol Foster Says Vows With M. N. Pipkin

Wedding vows of Miss Carol Jayne Foster and Lt. Mitchell Neal Pipkin, USAF, were solemnized on October 18 at three o'clock in First Presbyterian Church with the Rev. Richard Crews, pastor of First Christian Church, officiating for the double-ring service.

Miss Foster is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Foster, 711 N. Somerville. Mr. Pipkin's parents are Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Pipkin of Matador.

Mrs. Charles Cullen of McLean organist, provided a prelude of classical selections and the traditional wedding marches. Mrs. J. P. Greenwall of Barksdale, La., soloist, sang "One Alone" (Harbach and Hammerstein II); "Through The Years" (Heyman and Woumans) and Malotte's "The Lord's Prayer" as the benediction.

Nuptial vows were repeated before an altar banked with arrangements of white gladioli and chrysanthemums. Spiral candelabra holding white votive cups flanked the satin prie dieu, where the couple knelt for the benediction. Jade Palms formed a background with floor urns of white gladioli and chrysanthemums placed on steps leading up to the altar. White satin bows marked the pews of honor.

BRIDE
Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in floor-length peau de soie fashioned with a wide yolk of re-embroidered French Alencon lace outlined the scoop neckline accented with twilight sequins and pearls which extended to a deep v in back. Tiny cap sleeves were complemented with opera-length white gloves. The voluminous skirt drifted into a chapel train. A mantilla of imported Belgium Princess lace over English Illusion framed her face. She carried a cascade arrangement of white roses and stephanotis.

ATTENDANTS
Miss Patt Cassidy of Houston served the bride as maid of honor. She wore emerald green peau de soie fashioned with a shawl collar and bell-shaped skirt complemented with a veil headpiece and contrasting green satin slippers. She carried a cascade bouquet of white feathered chrysanthemums.

Gerald Pipkin of Matador served his brother as best man. Ushers were Lt. Clarence W. Hough of Lubbock, Lt. John M. Winslow Jr. of Big Spring and Don Spencer of Dallas.

Miss Leslie Ann Pipkin, bridegroom's niece, as flower girl carried a white lace basket filled with rose petals. Mrs. Cecil Sanders, bride's sister, was wedding guest registrar.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Foster wore a rose-beige sheath with a fitted lace bolero, matching accessories and a flower petal hat in tones of rose and beige. A brown cymbidium orchid complemented her costume.

Mrs. Pipkin, mother of the bridegroom, chose an Ice Blue sheath of Chantilly lace over satin topped with a lace bolero, matching accessories and a corsage of pink cymbidium orchids.

RECEPTION

Color does strange things to complexions. That is why it is helpful to have a friend along on a shopping trip. She can tell you whether or not a color is becoming. The average person will find that chartreuse, dusty pink and ginger will bring out a green cast, turn the skin muddy or make it look coarse.

West Side Author Pulls Back Curtain On High Society, Reveals Goings On

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI)—The nation's newest authority on high society doesn't belong.

She's Lucy Kavalier, a middle-class housewife who reached status as a society expert via her first book—"The Private World of High Society."

Mrs. Kavalier said in an interview that as an authority on what makes contemporary high society tick she stands alone.

"No one has ever done a book such as mine," she said.

The 34-year-old author lives in a five-room apartment with husband and two children on Manhattan's West Side.

She tuned in on the goings-on of high society via interviews with social secretaries and friends, including many who were born into high society.

Mrs. Kavalier makes no apologies about not belonging to high society.

"There are many ways of spending your life and high society is not my ambition," she said.

"But I do not blame those who devote their life to it. My ambitions are more along intellectual lines. I have the same ambitions for my children."

Mrs. Kavalier spent a year gathering material for her book.

"Most contacted for information were cooperative," she said. "But I did run into a few difficult individuals."

For example—she asked the social secretary to one society matron for an interview with the matron.

The matron said: "Oh, no. I talked to a writer in 1940 and I never got over regretting it."

"Society used to be for an exclusive few," Mrs. Kavalier said. "But today more Americans than ever before, in communities across the country, are becoming involved in the expanding ritual of the debutante ball, the charity gala, the service league, and private schooling with its attendant obligations."

Dear Abby...

Brush - Off Creates Family Discord
ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I've gotten myself into a jam and must admit I was stupid. I got a long-distance call from my husband's daughter by a previous marriage. He hadn't heard from her in 27 years. He was divorced from the girl's mother (who has since died) when this daughter was two. She said she wanted to see her father. I gave her the brush-off, Abby.

My husband is furious with me and I don't blame him. I don't know her address or phone number (if she has one), I only know her name and the city she called from. You must have a pretty low opinion of me but that's beside the point. How can I locate her?

STUPID

DEAR STUPID: Call the public library in the city from which the call came and ask them to look for her name in the city directory. If she lives there, they'll be able to locate her whether she has a telephone or not.

DEAR ABBY: Your ignorance is showing! Don't you know that millions of people are suffering from glandular disorders which causes them to gain weight on practically no calories? This condition is incurable and those afflicted should not be blamed or shamed because they are fat. I happen to be one of those unfortunate people and, on behalf of myself and others in the same boat, I wish you would kindly lay off!

"GOOT GEEZUKT!"

DEAR "GOOT": According to an authority at a world-famous medical clinic, approximately one case in a hundred involving obesity is due to "glandular disorders." And with proper diet and treatment the condition IS controllable.

DEAR ABBY: I have a grandson 17 years of age and have been buying cars for him so he can be happy with other boys and girls his age. He has gone through four cars in 14 months teaching green kids how to drive.

I got him a '58 Chevrolet 16 days ago and now he has tore up the transmission and blowed out two tires. He don't care what happens to cars as long as it don't cost him nothing.

I love Junior but I don't want him doing me this way. Please tell me what to do now that I spoiled him so bad. He will soon have me begging bread.

GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: Put the brakes on all that giving. If Junior wants a car — let him work

For it. Then he'll appreciate it more and take better care of it. If you love him, you'll follow my advice.

CONFIDENTIAL TO LINDA: He is a graduate from the "kiss-and-tell" school of romance (magnamotta), so if you sign up for his course, don't expect to be the exception in his collection.

AAUW Panel Talks On 'Bright Girl'

The American Association of University Women held its October meeting Tuesday night in the City Club Room.

Miss Evelyn Milam served as moderator for a panel discussion of "The Bright Girl: A Major Source of Untapped Talent." Susan Kay and Gesla Roeper, the high school students answered from a student's viewpoint, while Mrs. Nicholas Kadingo, an AAUW member, and Mrs. J. B. Ayres, a guest panelist, answered from their various stations.

The discussion covered four pertinent questions: Are the bright girls really not going to college in large numbers as boys? Why should high school girls of superior achievement go to college? What are the important factors discouraging college attendance by these girls? What can we do as AAUW members as mothers, teachers, and fellow students to combat anti-college forces affecting the educational intentions of bright girls?

Hostesses for the evening were Miss Virginia Vaughan, Mrs. Kenneth Walters, and Mrs. J. A. Meek.

Art Has New Patron In American Business

Mrs. Ewert Duncan and Mrs. Wyatt Lemons presented a program on music and art at the Tuesday afternoon meeting of Twentieth Century Allegro Club held in the home of Mrs. W. G. McComas.

Upon arrival, refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. J. W. Cundith.

For her portion of the program, Mrs. Duncan's music topic was discussed under the title of "The Basic Repertoire". She gave interesting highlights of the composer's background, the composition and the background of the composition. Included in her discussion of some 20 composers and compositions were Tchaikovsky's First Piano Concerto; Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony; Sibelius Second Symphony; Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony; and Rimsky Korsakov's "Scheherazade."

"Our Newest Patrons of the Arts" was the topic discussed by Mrs. Lemons, who pointed out that "art in the traditional sense, the kind in museums and galleries, is surging to new popularity in all parts of the country today. Fine art has always needed the support of wealthy patrons. During the Renaissance, the church was an important patron, as were the royalty and great families. In the United States before the days of high income taxes, the men of wealth could build palaces, fill them with art and maintain them. Even today many wealthy individuals have accumulated interesting collections of fine art, purely out of love for real art."

In further defining the new art fields, Mrs. Lemons went on to say, "Some of the finest collections of paintings in America today adorn the walls of offices and business buildings, and it is through their corporation's efforts that fine painting is encouraged and enjoyed by many who otherwise would never benefit from it. These paintings delight the eye of employee and customer and bring valued support to artists."

"Art collection by industry has become so widespread that last Spring, the Whitney Museum of American Art sponsored an exhibit called "Business Buys American Art." Seeking paintings and sculpture, the museum wrote to 900 companies which might be considered collectors. The response was so enthusiastic that the Whitney Museum was able to include the works of many of the contemporary artists of top rank. All the exhibits were borrowed from the working offices, reception rooms, corridors and lobbies of business firms," she continued.

"The interest has been brought about in various ways," Mrs. Lemons explained. "The tax angle is one very real reason for sparking a company's interest in art. Gifts to museums are deductible expenditures on tax returns. So it is not surprising that a business should, from time to time, donate works from its collection to museums and educational institutions."

Mrs. Lemons listed outstanding businessmen and businesses, which are contributing to the promotion of fine arts such as: Abbot Laboratories of Chicago, International Business Machines Corp., Manufacturers Trust Company; David Rockefeller, vice president of the Chase Manhattan Bank; Reynolds Metals Company; Rio Tinto Mining Company of Canada; Hallmark Cards, Inc.

"As industrial designer, Paul McCobb put it, "A tour of modern American business plants reveals the executive's desire to express his own taste in his own surroundings. Why should his office, where he spends eight or ten hours a day, be less attractive than his home? Both go to make up his environment."

In concluding remarks, Mrs. Lemons brought out that "Of course, the principal beneficiaries of all this are the artists. Until recently, the United States has generally followed Europe's lead in art movements. Today America's abstract painters and sculptors have won world-wide acclaim. And for the aesthetic and financial support that has helped to make their leadership possible, America's artists owe a very real debt to American business."

At the conclusion of the program, Mrs. David Price, president, conducted a brief business meeting.

It was announced that the November 1 meeting will be in the home of Mrs. J. B. Dailey for a program by Mrs. W. G. Waggoner on South American art and by Mrs. Bill T. Braly on decorating.

Attending the meeting were Mmes. Curt Beck, John Lee Bell, W. P. Bridges, John Gentry, Carl Hills, J. W. Hugg, J. O. Miller, David Price, John R. Reeve, R. E. Reid, W. G. Waggoner and Charles Walsh Jr.

Remotivating The Mentally Ill

By WARD CANNEL
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

PHILADELPHIA (NEA)—"Evaporation," the woman suddenly tells everyone. "The water on the ground evaporates into the sky. That's how we get rain."

Just another group of citizens discussing the weather—with one big difference. These citizens are maximum security patients in a mental hospital. The woman now explaining rain has not spoken a word for 11 years.

But given enough time and opportunity to discuss the weather—or the thousand other topics in a new group therapy program called "Remotivation"—and she may be on the route to psychiatric help and release to a healthy, useful life. The theory behind Remotivation is wonderfully uncomplicated. It goes this way:

The mentally ill probably have not retreated from reality on every front. There probably are many areas in which they are comfortable.

Get them interested — or remotivate them — in these uncritical areas and you may stimulate their minds to work on their problems. In any event, you bring them closer to other people and, most important, you give them more individual, tender, loving care. It all helps even if it does not cure.

Inasmuch as Remotivation discussion groups do not touch on problem areas, psychiatrists or registered nurses are not needed to lead the conversations. Aides and attendants can do the job as well, and sometimes better.

With the blessing and supervision of the American Psychiatric Association and a fat grant from the Smith, Kline and French Foundation, the program has blossomed in three years from a pilot experiment at the Philadelphia State Hospital to 37 states.

"You ought to see the faces of the administrators and doctors in new hospitals when we bring the program in," says Walter Pullinger, supervising aide of the Remotivation program.

"Patients who haven't moved in years raise their hands to answer questions. Patients who haven't talked, talk."

Pullinger not only introduces the program to interested hospitals but instructs attendants in the operation of Remotivation groups. There are three rules.

First, stay away from obviously loaded topics like sex, motherhood, etc. The world is full of other things to talk about. Second, lead the discussion — don't ask the patients what they want to talk about. Get the discussion going and make the group feel welcome and wanted.

"Teaching attendants how to run Remotivation groups is one thing," Pullinger says. "Cutting down on attendant turnover is another thing. It's hard to keep personnel when the pay is so low and when nurses in some hospitals don't like to see attendants get too much power."

And it is a position of effectiveness for the attendants. More and more hospitals are reporting releases for patients traceable di-
