JFK's Pressure Ends NYC Strike

Major Battle Looms In Laos

LUANG PRABANG, Laos (UPI)—Major battle between pro-Western government forces and Communist Pathet Lao rebels appeared to be shaping up today 50 miles north of this royal capital.

Luang Prabang is the last major stronghold of the government north of here. It controls a long valley that leads to the Mekong River, and military authorities consider it a key to the defense of Luang Prabang.

The rebels were putting additional pressure on the city from other directions. Two rebel companies were reported to have reached the Mekong at Pak Ou, and another group was reported operating less than 20 miles to the Southeast.

(In Bangkok, it was announced that the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization council of representatives would meet Wednesday on the Laos situation. The council, whose members are far from agreement on SEATO's approach to the Laotian civil war, has not met for a week.)

The Communist New China News Agency reported that exiled Laotian Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma proposed in an interview in Cambodia that a 14-nation conference be called to settle the Laotian crisis.)

The government announced during the weekend that royal troops had recaptured the strategic airport village of Tha Thom, 100 miles northeast of Vientiane, from rebel troops, but the situation there was fluid.

Sidewalk At Lamar School Due

Wheels were set in motion at today's regular monthly meeting of the Pampa Independent District School Board in the hope of getting street and sidewalk improvements completed in front of Lamar elementary school by the start of school next September.

City Manager John Koonz told school board members the city and county have held preliminary discussions with the State Highway Department office at Amarillo concerning widening of McCullough St. to 40 feet with the city, county and school board cooperating in bearing the cost of the paving, curb and gutters and sidewalk in front of the school.

Supt. Knox Kinnard said the improvement is needed to reduce traffic hazards near the school and to provide better facilities for the students and the faculty.

Tug Boaters, Goldberg Finally Reach Accord

By CHET DI MAURO

NEW YORK (UPI)—A two-week harbor tugboat crew strike that forced the New York Central to order a complete shutdown and cut rail service for 100,000 commuters ended today with a settlement reached under pressure from the new Kennedy administration.

Labor Secretary Arthur J. Goldberg, who joined the talks at 4 p.m. Sunday at the behest of President Kennedy, walked out 14 hours later and announced a settlement.

The cost of the strike is expected to run into the hundreds of millions of dollars as a result of wage costs and the loss of freight and passenger revenues from St. Louis and Chicago to Boston and New York.

Union leaders praised Goldberg's work in helping reach a settlement. Paul Hall, president of the Seafarers' Union, said, "There is no question that if he hadn't entered the picture, the strike never would have been settled this soon. There's no doubt the others feel that way, too. It's always a pleasure to work with a professional, like Mr. Goldberg."

The Central said it could not resume operations on its commuter service until 5 a.m. Tuesday and on its long-line New York service until later because of snow removal, switch inspection and equipment placement problems.

The New Haven said it would be 24 hours before it could resume full New York operations because it depended on Central equipment in the city, including a third rail which requires recharging.

The accord between the 660 tug crewmen and 11 railroads which operate 56 tugs and nine ferries in the harbor was reached by putting off a showdown on the main dispute of tug crew size, which the employers wanted to trim the present to five men.

The tug crew issue, under the new agreement, must be submitted within 30 days to a special White House commission which already is studying railroad featherbedding.

The settlement came just a few hours after the Central, the second largest railroad in the United States in terms of traffic, ordered a shutdown of all freight and passenger services on its 12,000 miles of track from St. Louis and Chicago to New York and Boston when pickets showed up at Cleveland. Rail delivery of food to New York City already had been halted by the strike.

The Central's freight embargo threatened to have a nationwide effect. A railroad spokesman explained that other lines would not accept shipments if they were headed for eventual movement on Central lines.

Routine Work On Tap

AUSTIN (UPI)—Texas lawmakers returned to their desks from a weekend recess today with their work limited to routine business until committee appointments are made.

Once committees are named, the legislators can turn their attention to the gigantic financial problem that faces the 37th Legislature.

Gov. Ben Ramsey may have Senate appointments ready today, but there were indications he might withhold his choices until House Speaker James A. Turman selects his committees.

Turman said he didn't expect to complete his House selections until late in the week. The speaker has had less than two weeks to work on the long job of interviewing the 150 members of the House on their committee preferences.

Senate committee assignments will clear the way for the upper chamber to begin introduction of bills from the floor. House members have been filing legislation for introduction for the past week.

The two chambers quit for the weekend last Thursday after hearing Gov. Price Daniel outline his program to retire the state's $63 million deficit and raise more than $200 million for new spending in a speech to a joint session on Wednesday.

Daniel divided his program into two categories—retirement of the (See ROUTINE, Page 3)

Cuban Rebel Leaders, CIA Officials May Meet

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI)—The Courier Journal, in a copyrighted article published today, reports that a meeting is set for Tuesday between the four top leaders of the Cuban liberation army and representatives of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

The story, by reporter Sam Kinison, who has been in Miami in contact with dozens of Cuban exiles, claims that the officers of the liberation army are dissatisfied with their treatment by representatives of the U.S. government and have threatened to resign unless conditions improve.

The story claims the U.S. government, through the CIA and other under-cover agencies, definitely has been assisting the anti-Castro rebels with funds and advice.

Most of the interviews bore out earlier reports that four "liberation camps" for the eventual freeing of Cuba are in existence in Latin America.

The Miami refugees told Adkins the camps are financed with money from the United States and that the liberation army is displeased with the way they are being run. The number of men in the liberation army was variously estimated at 4,500 to 7,000.

Adkins said that the four officers plan to ask that relations between exiles opposed to the present Cuban government of Fidel Castro be "improved and regularized."

The story identified the four leaders of the liberation army as Col. Martin Elena, 55, commander in chief and former Cuban military attaché to Washington; Maj. Tomas Cabana, an army veteran who was graduated from the officer candidate school at Ft. Knox, Ky.; Maj. Benjamin Ciano, who heads E3, the Army's plans and operations section, and Lt. Col. Oscar Diaz, in charge of recruitment.

JFK Aides Eyed

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate goes to work today on a stack of committee-approved appointments to the second echelon of the Kennedy administration.

Most of the sub-cabinet nominees will pass without controversy, enabling President Kennedy to get his administration in high gear. But at least two selections face some dissenting floor debate before their eventual confirmation.

Both Undersecretary of State designate Chester Bowles and Navy Secretary-designate John B. Connally were unanimously okayed by committees — but some senators have questioned their nominations.

The Senate Saturday confirmed the entire Kennedy cabinet and U.N. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson. Only Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy had an opposing vote. Sen. Gordon Allott, R-Colo., based his negative vote on what he termed the younger Kennedy's lack of legal experience.

Awaiting action were nine members of the Pentagon's civilian high command, some top Justice Department appointees and a number of other nominees.

The Senate and House both met at noon.

Other congressional news:

Republicans — House Republicans scheduled an afternoon caucus to consider the GOP House Police Committee's recommendation that they oppose "packing" the House Rules Committee as proposed by Speaker Sam Rayburn, a Texas Democrat.

Highways — Rep. John M. Slack Jr., D-W.Va., urged that 1,000 miles be added to the proposed 41,000 mile interstate highway system with priority for the additional authorization going to economically depressed areas.

Esquire Club Aids Lorinda Wagner Fund

Mrs. Keith Wagner, mother of Lorinda Wagner, the little girl who is suffering from leukemia, died late this morning that Lorinda will enter M. D. Anderson hospital at Houston sometime Wednesday.

The Lorinda Wagner Fund was a strong upward punch over a weekend by members of the Esquire Club which is composed of members of Pampa High School.

The club, headed by Robbie Gibson, started its personal project to aid the fund at 8 a.m. Tuesday and continued until 11 p.m. Their efforts resulted in about $280 in cash and checks, food for the Wagner family, and gifts galore for Lorinda, a five-year-old child who has leukemia.

"We wanted to do something worthwhile. We felt that if we could aid the Wagners and Lorinda even a little, we'd be doing something useful for the community," said Robison.

Mrs. Don R. Stephens, who ingested the campaign to aid the little girl and her family by informing The Daily News and a station KHHH, said the boys brought the money to her 11 that "I haven't gotten it all related, but it will total close $280."

Meantime, Lorinda's physician working to build up the child's strength for the long trip she will take tonight to Anderson Hospital at Houston or to some other hospital that specializes in research in leukemia and other diseases.

The doctor said earlier that he had contacted the Houston hospital about entering Lorinda there.

Congo Crisis Looms First Test For Stevenson In U.N.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI)—An Afro-Asian move for Security Council action on the Congo loomed today as Adlai Stevenson's first test as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

Stevenson presents his credentials to Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold at noon today in a private meeting. He probably will make his first official appearance as U.N. spokesman before the 11-nation Security Council on Wednesday.

Stevenson arrived Sunday from Washington where he held a series of meetings with new Secretary of State Dean Rusk and other officials of the administration. He will hold his first news conference as ambassador Tuesday.

U.S. Security Affairs Eyed By President

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Kennedy gave top priority today to national security affairs, arranging a day-long conference with his top defense and foreign policy advisers.

The White House meeting, scheduled to start at 10 a.m. EST and continue through the afternoon, with only a brief break for lunch, was expected to center on U.S.-Soviet relations.

Called to the conference were Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Defense Secretary Robert B. McNamara and McGeorge Bundy, Kennedy's special assistant for national security affairs.

Prior to the top-level talks, the new President planned a 45-minute session with his White House staff. He held a similar meeting Saturday and apparently intends to make it a frequent practice.

Have Ambassador's Report

Kennedy and his national security advisers have before them a report from Llewellyn Thompson, U.S. ambassador to Moscow, dealing with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's views on American-Russian relations.

Rusk and Undersecretary of State Chester Bowles conferred with Kennedy Sunday on Thompson's report, which may have included a Soviet proposal for an early Kennedy-Khrushchev meeting.

Professional Girl Watchers To Have Hey-Day This Spring

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor
NEW YORK (UPI)—Methinks that men shall never see, so many women display knee—as they will this spring and summer.
Hemlines on the new clothes move to heights not reached since the flapper era of the 1920s or World War II days when the government restrictions limited the amount of cloth which could be used in a garment.
Naked knees are just part of the trend. Dresses are more often sleeveless than not. Necklines on daytime dresses bare the collar bone. By evening, they're about as demure as a Las Vegas show-girl. Coats and suits are collarless and in many cases have sleeves above the elbow to assure a chilly Easter parade.
All of which, of course, adds up to happy news for the professional girl watchers.

Hunt the Hemline
It is hard to place the hemline as a specific number of inches from the floor. In this week's previews of the new fashions, a semi-annual event sponsored for visiting reporters by the New York Couture Group, they range anywhere from 17 to 19 inches.
The "nothing" dress—a pared-down sheath both sleeveless, collarless and short—is it this season.
Some designers do provide covering in the forms of capes and stoles, an apparent concession to summer air conditioning of homes, restaurants and offices.
Sylvia Kaplan, designer for Nat Kaplan, a New York manufacturer, provided the gendarme cape in a series of wool plaids—a cape short, flared and fastening at the side like that of the French policeman.

Dear Abby...

First Come
First Seated, Lady!

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Isn't it proper for men to offer their seats on a bus to women any more? I ride to work on a bus every day and I have seen elderly (and even pregnant) women stand while men just sit there. Occasionally I will see a gentleman offer a woman his seat, but you should see the dirty looks he gets from the men who are sitting. Are gentlemen becoming extinct in our civilization?

LADY BUS RIDER
DEAR LADY: Some of the women who ride buses are in better shape than some of the men. Naturally, an elderly or pregnant woman shouldn't be made to stand any more than a feeble or handicapped man. But healthy, able-bodied women, who compete with men for jobs, shouldn't expect a busload of Sir Walter Raleighs.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have four children. Every time one was born, he'd agree on a name we both liked, take the baby to church and have it baptized with that name. But as soon as we'd get home my husband would start calling it something else.

Our Christopher he calls "Max," Marie Ann is "Cookie," Francis is "Butch" and Antonio is "Charlie." I get so mad I could throw him out. What can I do?
ONLY A WIFE
DEAR ONLY: What's in a name? I love a man who calls me "Pops." (He's my husband.)

DEAR ABBY: There is a certain boy who asks all the girls to dance and he is the world's worst dancer. He keeps going around in circles and gets all the girls dizzy. Should we tell him so he can improve, or should we skip it for fear of hurting his feelings?

THE THREE H'S
DEAR H'S: Considering the present crop of wall-flowers, a girl would have to be pretty "dizzy" to criticize a boy's dancing. Don't suggest he improve unless you are willing to teach him.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WILLING TO WORK": Be a bellhop. Money grows on trays!

Pampa Garden Club Notes Arbor Day With Presentation Of 600 Redbud Trees

In observance of Arbor Day, Pampa Garden Club is presenting nearly 600 Redbud trees to all fourth grade students in Pampa schools.

According to a spokesman for the Pampa Garden Club, "Arbor Day was first observed as such in Nebraska in 1872. The plan was conceived and the name "Arbor Day," proposed by J. Sterling Morton, then a member of the state board of Agriculture and later U. S. secretary of agriculture."

"At a meeting of the state board of agriculture of Nebraska, held in Lincoln on Jan. 4, 1872, he introduced a resolution to the effect that Wednesday, April 10, be especially set apart and consecrated to tree planting in the state of Nebraska and named Arbor Day. The resolution was adopted. Wide publicity was given the plan and more than a million trees were planted on the first Arbor Day."

The date for Arbor Day in Texas has been set to be observed annually on the third Friday in January.

The members of the Pampa Garden Club feel as John Burroughs, eminent naturalist, who wrote to the principal of a school in Pennsylvania, "I am glad to hear that your pupils are going to keep Arbor Day. If you can teach them to love and to cherish trees, you will teach them a very valuable lesson."

In presenting the trees to fourth grade students, it is felt by Pampa Garden Club members that they are old enough to be able to care for the trees. Also, these boys and girls are taught through scouting to help preserve camping grounds and have projects from time to time to keep America and Texas beautiful.

Council Plans Are Outlined At Meet

The women of St. Matthews Episcopal Church met Wednesday in the parish house for their second meeting of the month.

Mrs. Felix Vendrell outlined the plans for the annual Council of the Diocese of Northwest Texas, which will be held in Pampa on Mar. 10-11-12 this year.

The Rev. William West gave a program concerning Evangelism and urged everyone to make a special effort to welcome all newcomers to the church. "Religion is caught, not taught," Father West said, "after which it rests upon the congregation to keep the spark of interest alive."

Members attending the meeting were Mmes. Donald Beaman, C. R. Howard, Horace Watkins, William Dingus, Jack Curtis, J. R. Reeve, W. E. West, Carl Thomas, Gerald Shuts, and James Morris.

A salad luncheon is planned on the first Wednesday in February and all the women of the church are welcome.

If you are afraid that a drop in caller's visit may make you late to an appointment, the thing to do is to say frankly that you have an appointment and have to leave the house at a certain time. That is better than keeping the person you have the engagement with waiting for you to arrive.

Buckeyes, Purdue Vie In 'Crucial'

By MARTIN LADER
United Press International

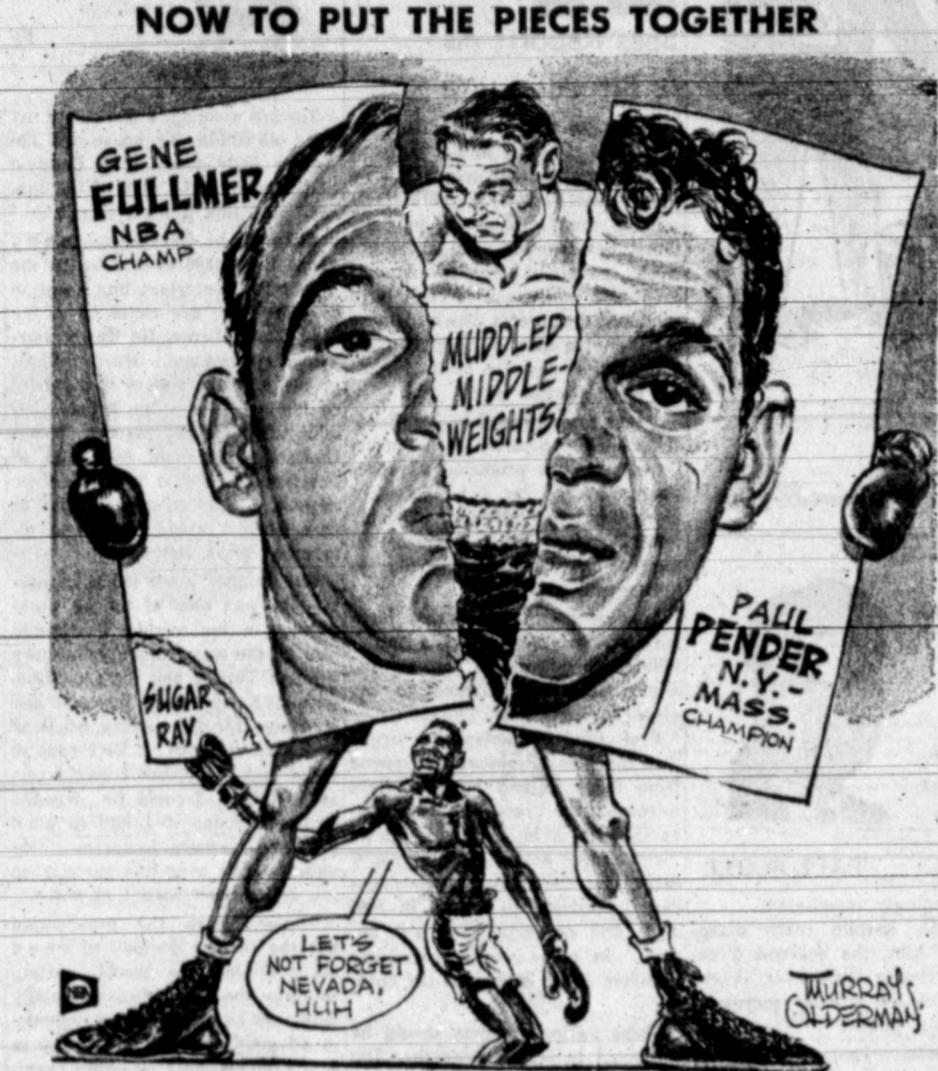

Champion's work is seldom and Ohio State once again have to prove its claim as nation's No. 1 college basketball team when it goes against unbelieving Purdue five this week.

Ohio State has won 18 straight games, including a convincing triumph over Minnesota last Friday, and boasts a destructive team which numbers Larry Lucas, everybody's All-American. The Buckeyes are also leading Big 10 champions.

Purdue, relegated to another season of obscurity in pre-season play following an 11-12 showing last year, climaxed a startling comeback to basketball eminence by whipping fourth-ranked Iowa, Saturday. Led all the way by Olympian center Terry Dischinger, the Boilermakers have won four of their last nine starts after dropping their first two games of the season.

The game between the Big 10 leaders is set for next Saturday at Columbus, although Purdue has a good chance to loosen its ties before then when it ends Northwestern (5-7) on Monday, playing with a sprained ankle injured in a practice session last week, scored 22 points against Iowa although he was handicapped with a cut in his right index finger. He was the game's high scorer with 17 points and 17 rebounds.

Other major games Saturday, and ranked St. Bonaventure beat Canisius, 96-76, by the 28 points of Tom Stith; Louisville broke through a tight defense in the second half to defeat Dayton, 63-50; Billy McCreary scored 31 points to lead Utah 72-56 victory over Montana; Mucky combined speed and a defense to down Tennessee; Washington edged Stanford 51-49; Auburn topped Georgia 78-68; Missouri beat Oklahoma, 70-62, and Wichita defeated Oklahoma City, 82-72.

PHS Travels To Plainview

Pampa, 5-11 for the year and 1-5 in District 3-4A play, embarks on the first of a two-game road trip this week when it travels to Plainview for a conference game with the Bulldogs tomorrow night.

Plainview is 3-4 in conference, defeating Lubbock and Tascosa. Losses have been to Amarillo in overtime, Monterey, Palo Duro and Borger.

The Harvesters on Friday embark on the second half of their 1961 schedule when they travel to Amarillo for a game with Palo Duro. Palo Duro is tied with Borger — both 5-1 — for the 3-4A lead and its only loss has been to Pampa.

Arizona State, Buffs Put Marks On Line

By United Press International

Arizona State and West Texas put their untarnished Border Conference basketball records on the line this week as league teams start turning again from exams to basketball.

Their Saturday night dates with Hardin-Simmons and Arizona, respectively, provide the circuit with its only league activity, although there will be three non-conference games on the program.

Ariz. State's Sun Devils, nursing a 2-0 lead built up on victories over champion New Mexico State and Texas Western, goes against Hardin-Simmons at Abilene, while West Texas (1-0) entertains Arizona at Canyon.

The two leaders, if they both are successful, then will have a face-to-face showdown at Canyon a week from tonight and Arizona will move on to Abilene against Hardin-Simmons.

Elsewhere this week, West Texas hosts North Texas at Canyon Tuesday night, Arizona stops off at Flagstaff against Arizona State College Thursday night and Texas Western faces Eastern New Mexico at Portales, N.M. Saturday night.

New Mexico State, with a 2-1 league record, will be idle all week and doesn't play again until Jan. 31 when Pasadena College invades Las Cruces.

Birdie On Last Hole Saves Day

By DON REED
United Press International

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Bobby Rosburg, a middle of the pack player since his PGA crowning two years ago, was golf's happiest pro today.

His baseball grip and hot putter earned him $5,300 in a stretch drive finish in the $50,000 Bing Crosby National pro-amateur golf tournament. He carded a 72-hole score of 282 after being seven strokes off the pace before Sunday's finals.

"Improved play off the tee was the difference," said Rosburg who expertly hit low balls to avoid raging winds that swept in from the Pacific Ocean. "Everything came my way."

The former Stanford University baseball player from Palo Alto, Calif., finished with a 14-foot birdie putt on Pebble Beach's famed 18th hole to fashion a 72 and take the crown by one stroke from Dave Ragan, Orlando, Fla., and Roberto De Vicenzo, Mexico City, each with 283.

Ted Kroll, the ex-army sergeant from Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., who had led at the end of the third round, lost his touch entirely and soared to an 81. That left only Bill Collins of Crystal River, Fla., with a chance to take the crown.

Collins, suffering from an upset stomach, gave it a try for the 35,000 fans. He went for a birdie putt on the 18th that would have put the championship in a tie, but the ball scooted by a couple of feet. Collins muffed the return putt or a bogey instead and wound up in a tie for fourth place at 284 with Kroll, Gardner Dickinson, Tequesta, Fla., and Arnold Palmer, Miami, Fla.

The pro-amateur championship went to Wes Ellis, West Caldwell, N.J., and amateur partner Frank (Sandy) Tatum, a San Francisco attorney. The had a best-ball of 252 — 38 strokes under par. For this feat Ellis collected $3,000.

Another team headed by Dow Finsterwald, Tequesta, Fla., with amateur Fred Kammer, Groesbeek Point Farms, Mich., finished in second place, which returned the pro $1,500.

Haddix Agrees To Buc Terms

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Harvey Haddix, one of the major league's top fielding pitchers, has become the Pittsburgh Pirates' seventh player to agree to a contract for the 1961 season, the club announced today.

Haddix, winner of two games over the New York Yankees in the last World Series, came to terms over the weekend; Club officials did not disclose contract terms.

The 35-year-old southpaw hung up an 11-10 record last season, and in 29 appearances last year, he pitched 172 innings and showed a 3.98 earned run average.

His National League opponents voted Haddix the best fielding pitcher in the league last year and he received the Rawlings Gold Glove annual fielding award for the third straight time.

Longhorns Pace SWC As Teams Take Loop Rest

By United Press International

This is the week of the status quo in Southwest Conference basketball circles, but when title play does resume next week the pack will be in full cry in pursuit of the front-running defending champion Texas Longhorns.

Only three non-conference games—Tulsa at Arkansas Thursday, Oklahoma City at Southern Methodist Friday and Phillips Oilers at Texas Tech Saturday—dot the schedule this week as the players continue to hound books instead of basketball.

But, starting next week the action again becomes hot and heavy with Texas sporting a half game lead over Texas Tech, a full game over the Texas Aggies and game and a half leads over Arkansas, SMU and Rice. All of these but Rice figure to have at least an outside chance to dethrone the Longhorns.

Texas (4-1) still has to face all of its major foes on the road as well as meeting SMU at Austin; Tech (3-1) has broken even in road starts against Texas and SMU but still has Arkansas and A&M to meet away from home; Texas A&M (3-2) still must face SMU and Arkansas on the road after losing to both Texas and Tech on foreign floors.

Arkansas (2-3) bowed to both Texas and A&M on the road and still has SMU and Texas Tech to face away from home, while SMU (2-2), which lost at home to Tech and on the road to Arkansas, still has to travel to A&M, Texas Tech and Texas.

It's a wide open affair as of now with Texas' four-overtime loss to TCU at Fort Worth earlier in the campaign shaping up as a key one in favor of the champions' challengers. The same is true of SMU's home floor loss to Tech.

The schedule then, seems to favor Texas Tech since the Raiders have but two more tough road games and already own a key road victory over SMU. The Raiders could drop those Arkansas and A&M games and wind up with an 11-3 record if they win all their remaining home games and also beat Rice, Baylor and TCU on the road.

Texas has had its troubles on the road, bowing to TCU and barely squeezing past Baylor 59-58 at Waco, but the Longhorns appear to have the bench strength developing to help offset the unfavorable schedule.

The title may well hang in the balance when the Longhorns and Raiders wind up the season at Lubbock March 2.

Larry Stroud, left-handed Pampa first baseman, was honored as 1960's top Panhandle baseball player. As a junior in 1960, Stroud hit .404 and paced Pampa to a third place finish in the District 3-4A baseball race.

Other athletes honored were Milt Fitts, West Texas State, basketball; Jim Parr, Amarillo and SMU, track; John Faubus, Amarillo and Texas Tech, golf; Tribby Tivens-Betty Gidden, Memphis, tennis, and Coffey, football.

Ed Lehnick, Lefors football coach, shared the Sunday spotlight as he was named the 1960 Football Coach of the Year from the Texas Panhandle.

Lehnick guided his Pirates to a district championship in 2-A after compiling a 1-8-1 record the year before and drawing the cellar spot in the 1960 race.

Other coaches of the year were Frontz Myatt, Palo Duro, track; John Parker, Palo Duro, golf; David Kent, Amarillo, tennis; Miller McGahey, Plainview, baseball; and Hanna, basketball.

Likes 'Natural Jungle' Best Tout Turns To Fishing Guide

EVERGLADES, Fla. (UPI)—An alligator slithered down a slide from the bank into the brownish water and a pelican lumbered through the blue sky overhead as the squat, boulderlike man heaved a deep sigh of happiness.

"You wonder why I wouldn't take anything for all this?" asked Rocky Weinstein. "Man, this is true peace and contentment."

Seventy odd miles away people were plunging feverishly at Hialeah Race Track. Here, on a quiet channel through the Mangrove Swamps of the Everglades, there wasn't another soul within miles.

Rocky knows both sides. Before the war he was one of those who frequented the race tracks and other spots where denizens of that man-made jungle gather. He was a pit boss at the gambling casinos in Las Vegas and a stickman in Las Vegas along the Eastern Seaboard.

Today he is a fishing guide in the Everglades.

"This is a better kind of jungle," he said in that deep Virginia drawl which he carried out of his native Richmond.

"Here you know that everything is no sham and no pretense. Out there where the humans prove they give you a little con but everybody's chasin' the mighty dollar."

Rocky pitched a plug into a tiny cavern in the undergrowth along the bank. He did it easily, with a flick of the wrist, and then jerked it swiftly twice so that the plug danced erratically along the top of the water.

"That's where the big snook likes to lay," he explained.

"Man, you get one of those on your line and for 10 or 15 minutes you think you're hooked a tiger. We got one of those; or a tarpon, and we'll have some fun."

Tucker Wins Match Title

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (UPI)—Bill Tucker is a relaxed bowler who says he hates to practice, but he proved himself a money-player in winning the $10,000 national match game title.

Tucker of Rockhill, Mo., breezed to victory in the finals here Saturday, setting records with a total of 13,924 pins and a 218.36 average in the 10-day marathon.

The women's title, good for $5,000, was won by Phyllis Notaro of Brant, N.Y.

Tucker, 34, beat out Don Weber and Ray Bluth, both of the St. Louis, Mo., area, for the title. The previous record average of 215.11 was set by Bluth in 1959.

Miss Notaro, 32, averaged 196.6 in her 32 games and beat Hope Riccilli, of Downey, Calif., by 51 Points. Shirley Garms, Chicago Ill., was third.

A Valedictory For Ike

As Mr. Eisenhower steps down after eight years, the most interesting valedictory we've read appears in The National Review, Jan. 14, 1961. Here, in part, is what the editors said: "The American people would do anything for a good man. Dwight Eisenhower is manifestly that. And if it had been he running for President last November, he'd have reduced Jack Kennedy to political dust in six speeches, syntax or no syntax. Indeed, no one could have run against Ike and beaten him. It is not that the people were satisfied with his stewardship, but that they knew politics is a grubby, cynical business, the meaning of which they cannot hope to penetrate—so vote for the man you trust. And vote a man, to his eternal credit, is Dwight Eisenhower. A man one can trust to do the good, according to his lights.

"And yet it must be said, what a miserable President he was! Said regretfully for it is painful to use such language about a good man. But if St. Francis of Assisi had been made president of the Chase Manhattan Bank, he too would have made a miserable president. Our enthusiasm for Francis might cause us to say the Chase Bank was not worthy of him, and the failure was really the institution's, not the saint's. Let us agree that the world is not worthy of Dwight Eisenhower. But the world is as it is, and Dwight Eisenhower served as one of its princes, and the world paid him no heed. None at all. And the world is worse off, by far, than when he came to power, sustained by the sentimental faith of millions of people who thought that his goodness would irradiate out to the cynical reaches of our darkening globe, and renew in the hearts of the great malefactors the spirit of goodness."

A Big Swallow

Twentieth century dictators, large and small, have made a standard practice of trumping up fears of outside invasion. But seldom have they gone to the lengths that Fidel Castro is pursuing in Cuba. We all understand the reason for stirring the fears. It is a way of distracting the citizens from the discomforts they may be suffering at home. It may encourage them to endure still more. Moreover, it is a way of solidifying popular support behind a regime. Nothing seems to cement a people more quickly than a threat, imaginary or otherwise, from the outside.

But, at the pretense he is being invaded, he would be hard to match at any time. What will Castro tell the Cubans when the invasion from America fails to come off? Naturally he will not admit the hoax. To do that is to acknowledge the crushing truth—that his whole regime is a hoax upon the Cuban people.

Presumably he will try to persuade them that his showy preparations "scared America off." But are they gullible enough to believe that their tiny island could stand against the United States if we were really bent upon subduing it? Most likely they are not. The chances are good that when the invasion doesn't materialize more and more Cubans will begin to have doubts about their hero.

Eventually those doubts will be big enough and numerous enough to be woven into a fabric of defeat for the fraudulent Castro. But, as has been noted often before, this is a fabric that only the Cuban people themselves can fashion.

★ THE DOCTOR SAYS ★

Here's What You Can Do About Air Swallowing

DR. HAROLD T. HYMAN

"What causes air swallowing," asks a correspondent, "and what can be done about it?" Everybody swallows air when it's with food or saliva. Babies have to burped after a bottle. There's no medical harm in air swallowing. So what's to be done about it comes down to a question of what's supposed to be good manners. For example, the Turks regard burping as a tribute to the host and his chef. Most of our social arbiters either frown on the burp or look the other way and pretend they've never heard it. Me, I'm a burper way down to my shoe tops. I know that accomplishment will win me the approval of those who write books of etiquette. But how come they don't object to the cough and the sneeze, that blow pathogenic microbes all over the place?"

lated to the symptoms under investigation, the radiologist reports the presence of diverticulosis. That means he's observed them and cleared them of any involvement of present importance. If a diverticulum becomes infected, it behaves like an infected appendix and may require surgical treatment. On occasions, too, a diverticulum is associated with malignant growth. Some surgeons believe there's a causal relationship and advocate removal of all portions of the large bowel that contain diverticula. I do not hold to this view. The operation is a very formidable one and I would not recommend it unless I were certain that the relationship truly existed. In my opinion, the association of the two conditions is coincidental. Hence, I favor a policy of strict conservatism. As you see, dear lady, there's no mention of nervous tension. There's no need to go to the trouble and expense of having X-rays. Surgery won't correct it unless you're willing to undergo a major operation on the basis of an unproven theory. And the condition has nothing to do with the process of growing old. About all that's really worth doing is to take nightly doses of mineral oil to prevent intestinal content from getting caked in the little pockets.

Looking Sideways

By WHITNEY BOLTON
NEW YORK — Someone with an unfettered typewriter is always courting about the world putting together prose, at $1.90 per copy, describing people in other lands, their habits, manners, politics, appetites and customs, and it would be difficult to find one such volume in which the author does not describe himself as having a window on the world. I've had a window on the world. But I have sat in a few windows in Manhattan (and Istanbul, Mexico City, Paris, Montevideo, Algiers and Dhahonega, Georgia, for that matter) and if I have come to any kind of intellectual summation about people at all it is that I never have seen a bum who was bald.

Have you? Now think about it real hard. In all your born days, friend, have you ever seen a bum who was bald? I don't know why it is, but it seems to me to earn scientific exploration. Men in white coats have sworn entire careers to the mysterious truth about baldness. Other men, after a faster braid than any scientist ever earned, have thrust anti-baldness nostrums on the world. Wait a minute. Let's pursue something here. The plural of stadium is stadia. Is the plural of nostrum nostrum or nostrum? Is there a Latin scholar in the house? All right, thank you, brother, we will take your name and address and give personal thanks to you in a totally unhelpful way to you. We don't give money for such answers. Anyway, I really don't know why it is that all bums have hair on their heads, but I believe it is worth investigation. Should I prove that being a bum with consequent blithe indifference to the goodies of life and freedom from its stresses saves a bum's hair, then we come to a secondary consideration: is it worth being a bum all your life just to have a full head of hair?

I gave this profound discovery to a learned friend the other night, expecting awe at the least as my reward, but all I got was a snarl: "So what's so great? I never saw a bald pianist, either." He must never have seen Jose Iturbide. Jose is real bald, man, real bald. In any case, my friend was so dubious about the discovery that all bums are hairy-headed that he insisted, despite the cold and a nagging wind through the side streets, that I take a walk with him and prove it by observing New York bums. I told him it was going to be a water-haul because on a cold windy day the bums hide themselves away in cellars of buildings with big, hot furnaces going. I was wrong. Between 42nd Street and 59th Street on Sixth Avenue we encountered 11 bums, 10 of whom were out mooching the populace for coins. The 11th just didn't care and was sleeping in a doorway. A vindication set in early. One by one, until all 11 had been checked, they had hair on their heads—good, thick, heavy heads of hair. Did this convince my friend and erupt an apology from him for his cynicism about bums and hair? Not at all. He still was a sneering questioner as he said: "If you really want to conduct a sensible survey, find out what kind of hashed brains cause bums to mooch on a cold day when people resent having to take their hands out of their pockets or remove their gloves to give you a coin?"

Nothing loath, I walked up to one of these hairy fellows and said: "Friend, in the interests of psychiatric science, would you tell me personally what causes you to put the arm on citizens on a cold day when they resent having to take their hands out of their pockets or remove their gloves to give you a coin?" "You crazy or sump'n?" he growled. "You work your side of the street and I'll work mine. Blow, bum!"

We abandoned that survey as evidence that the same answer, or reasonable facsimile thereof, would come from one and all and repaired to an Irish snug which specializes in Dublin prawns served in a ring of eight on a large plate in the center of which is a hearty dollop of creamed spinach into which mint-leaves have been chopped—a dish which always makes me happy that the Irish did so well with their rebellion even though it cost a few lives on both sides. And if you ever have seen a bald bum, you are in a stout position to make a sucker out of me.

Move Over, Boys

ROBERT S. ALLEN
WASHINGTON — Premier Fidel Castro is urgently appealing to Russia and Red China for large shipments of rice, beans and other food to avert widespread hunger in his country by spring. So far the bulky Cuban dictator has had indifferent success in obtaining these critically needed supplies.

The Soviet and Red China themselves are plagued with food shortages. Severe weather conditions and extensive bureaucratic mismanagement last year caused serious crop losses in both countries. So their response to Castro's increasingly frantic pleas has been considerably less than what he is seeking.

The Cuban food situation is becoming so grave that a ration-card system is being secretly set up. The plants in which this printing is being done are under heavy military guard. Also, Ernesto Guevara, economic czar of Cuba, may again, justify to Moscow to personally ask Khrushchev for more help. The Argentine-born-hard-core Communist returned from a lengthy Iron Curtain trip only two months ago with loud claims of trade and other assistance. A major factor in Cuba's rapidly developing food crisis is the drastic depletion of its once-numerous cattle herds, built up chiefly by Americans.

Last year, to offset food shortages due to sharply reduced rice and other imports from the U.S., Castro and Guevara virtually decimated these expatriated herds, including prize breeding cattle. As a consequence, this important food source was doubly hit — leaving little beef and less productive capacity. Cuba has long been a food importer, with most of it coming from the U.S., principally rice and beans. These shipments ceased months ago, and have been only partially replaced by Communist bloc and other sources.

IN A BIND — A key problem confronting Castro in seeking food supplies is lack of money and credit. Non-Communist countries could readily provide Cuba with all the rice, beans and other food it urgently needs. But the long-winded dictator hasn't the means to buy them. Cuba's main trading commodity is sugar, but on that he is hobbed in two ways: (1) The Cuban sugar crop will be appreciably less than last year, which was below previous levels. Further, for this reduced output, Castro will get a great deal less return. For one thing, he has lost the $100 million that Cuba derived from the 2½ cents the U.S. paid above the market price. (2) There is abundance of sugar throughout the world; the estimated world crop is a record high of 58 million tons. Russia has a sugar surplus, and is looking for customers. Guevara made deals with the Red bloc to barter sugar for goods, oil and plants — at prices fixed by the Communists. They will undoubtedly dump Cuban sugar on the world market. That's what Russia did with Egyptian cotton, which it didn't need after Nasser traded it for weapons.

Central Intelligence Director Allen Dulles has informed President Kennedy that Castro's "popularity in Cuba has sunk to a low of 25 per cent from 90 per cent when he came into power in January 1959. If a free election could now be held, he would be overwhelmingly repudiated. However, despite mass disapproval of him, the bearded dictator is stronger than ever before because of his greatly increased "repressive power." This massive control is due directly to the huge influx of arms he has obtained from Russia. Dulles pointed out to Kennedy that it is established Red strategy to immediately build up the military strength of its foreign minions so they can suppress popular efforts to overthrow them. That is what is taking place in Cuba. On one hand, Dulles declared, Castro's regime has sunk to a record low in mass popularity, but at the same time he is stronger than ever to combat revolts against his Red rule. Dulles also is of the opinion that it is impossible to negotiate with Castro because he is not his own master and is wholly under Kremlin domination. RED BASE — Since last July, more than 2,500 Russian cargo vessels have unloaded upwards of 50,000 tons of goods in Cuba, chiefly oil, machinery, fertilizer, motor vehicles, wheat and canned goods. More than 2,500 Cubans are being sent to Iron Curtain countries for training as technicians. In addition, several hundred are going to Red China for such training. Czechoslovakia is planning to stage a so-called "industrial fair" in Havana in May, featuring machinery and autos. Who will buy the latter is a big question. In the past week, several Greek ships have unloaded electrical and agricultural machinery, steel, glass and pharmaceuticals in Havana. Czechoslovakia is supplying Castro with rockets having an estimated range of 50 miles. They would be used against the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo. A Cuban trade delegation, headed by Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs Hector Llompart, is in Bulgaria seeking food and other supplies. Early this month this delegation signed a trade agreement with satellite Rumania.

Down South

By THURMAN SENSING
Sees Reports As A Bit Alarming

When the 1960 Democratic platform was unveiled in Los Angeles last summer, many people said that it was more a politician's scheme than a blueprint for national development. But in recent weeks, panels of so-called experts organized into "task forces" have produced documents which indicate the platform was much more than a campaign promise to be forgotten after election day.

A task force headed by Dr. Frederick Hovde, president of Purdue University, has produced a report stating a need for $3.5 billion in federal aid to education. Senator Paul Douglas (D-Ill.) has asserted there is an acute need for aid to "distressed areas."

Another group has come forth with an endorsement of a multi-billion expenditure on housing and a new Cabinet department to operate the program. Prof. Paul Samuelson has urged that the new administration spend from three to five billion dollars to combat the "recession." He states that he is in no doubt that "with proper action by the government, the contraction in business can be brought to a halt in 1961 itself and converted into an upturn." In other words, socialist spending again is seen as the cure-all.

These various reports should be subjected to study in depth. The Douglas report for example, goes far beyond what the 1960 party platform approved. Senator Douglas wants to change defense department procurement so as to make it an adjunct of foreign policy planning. He would move workers about the country in accordance with a plan prepared by the federal government. And he wants to see established a federal fuel agency with the power to make decisions as to who should use what fuels for what purpose. All these ultra-radical proposals are in addition to now somewhat standard demands for a federal public works program, a youth conservation corps, and an "emergency" plan for federal recreational facilities. About all that Senator Douglas does not seek is federal ownership of the means of production. As a matter of fact, his plan is a blueprint for a Marxist economy in the United States. The fiscal aspect of these programs contained in the task force reports is alarming enough. What these reports actually add up to is a demand for rampant inflation. If put into effect, the plans would bankrupt the country in short order and deprive private enterprise of revenues needed for continued existence. By the task forces are even more alarming in their relation to the aspect of rights. These reports look to an America in which virtually every aspect of life — from the use of coal and oil to an individual's recreation and housing — is directed by the federal government through a multiplicity of agencies. One wishes that Senator Douglas would go one step farther and be candid with the public, admitting that what he wants is state socialism. Certainly, the regimented America envisioned in these task force reports is indistinguishable from Russia — except for the Russians' frank use of terror. But the desire to plan for all Americans — and to force them to accept the plan — is amply in evidence. It is a grim situation that one sees in these task force reports — a situation wherein academic leaders are energetically pushing total government in the United States at the expense of the individual liberties of American citizens, liberties which are the crowning glory of this Republic. The country must hope that President Kennedy will do no more with the reports than file them away and forget them.

DISPLAY TOO REALISTIC
SHEFFIELD, Ala. (UPI) — Police winked when theater manager M. A. Elkins installed a moonshine liquor still at the box office to promote a film. But the officers looked again when they found a fire burning inside the distillery. Elkins was arrested on charges of operating an illegal liquor still. and Humphrey. The very act of taxing American people to support any foreign government is both immoral and invalid. A man, such as Mr. Boardman, often is on the side of validity and morality, but even this adds no credence to the validity of morality. —J. Doha Lewis

Pegler Says:

'Ole Daddy-O 'Ghosted' For Mark Hellinger

By WESTBROOK PEGLER
Toward evening, I got out to my dear old Daddy-o's house and absorb a little toddy with Daddy-o and read him the pick of the fan-mail-and-talk-a-little shop.

Although he worked in many shops from 1890 to 1936 or so, the nights that entertain him most in memory now are those on The New York Mirror. He was a marvelous rewrite man. He could still go out and get a story that others couldn't get. He wrote high-minded editorials damning bigotry (and Goddess-communism, too). And, in emergencies, could pinch-hit for anyone. I was circling around that when I asked: "Do you remember Mark Hellinger?" "Remember him? He is immortal. He was one of the 10 worst writers in the world. I ghosted him all the way from Vienna down through Turkey and the Caucasus, with side trips to Madagascar and Rangoon, for $5 a week when he was getting $1,500. It isn't easy to write that badly, but I was a versatile fellow. I could be Winston Churchill today if I had to and a Primo Carnera tomorrow. My name wasn't over this garbage so my self-respect wasn't at stake.

"I don't know the provocation but the Mirror decided to send Mark around the world writing columns about Broadway in many lands. So he got up some columns in advance and was laid away in a voluptuous suite on some carnival boat for Paris. Our promotion department gave him a wild send-off and papers across the country were holding their breath for his dispatches. "But he never quite came out of the ether after his bon voyage party. We did get a couple of post cards from Zelli's in Paris and an expense-account-to-date that would have met the payroll of our citywide for two weeks. Then there was a final, quavering contribution in pencil on the stationery of some hotel in Vienna, a watery warble as of a ship's whistle going under. We couldn't make anything of it so I took over, thinking he had just missed a mail.

"Jimmy Whittaker — and there was a great fiction man wasting genius on a lot of policy players — Jimmy maneuvered — him into the fleshpots of Istanbul and dumped him back in my lap in Outer Mongolia. Mark was having a hard time standing off a fat princess who lived by herself in a camel-skin tent with the fatty shreds of the hide on the inside. Her father, the chief, had taken a shine to Mark and the custom of the country was to encourage intimacies which, by our standards, would be scandalous. Whittaker had a place up the Hudson near Charlie MacArthur's and he went home and took the phone off the hook. He used to play piano and when we sent a messenger up he sent back word that he was writing a symphony. He couldn't be disturbed. "So I was stuck with Hellinger. We were selling billions of papers and other papers across the country were hanging on my prose. "I maneuvered Mark into the forbidden city of Lhasa, interviewed the Grand Lama, and by seven league boots got him into some never-never land around Sumatra. "It was about to resign when our editor, that fantastic Frenchman, Emil Gauvreau, picked up the phone, let out a yell and waved me over.

"It was Hellinger. He had been home two weeks and was sending down a batch of columns about Texas Guinan." "Yes, I knew Mark! How those morons loved him!"

When I passed the intersection of Via Veneto and Via Salaria, one of the busiest crossings in the city, I could have sworn I saw great, big, beautiful mattresses stretched out by the side of a traffic cop.

"There's a cop about to go to sleep in the middle of the street, I said to myself calmly, just as if it were an everyday sight. Then I realized that I had really passed a cop with a mattress by his side, so I pulled into the nearest parking place and went back to see what it was all about. I seemed to be the only one interested. Traffic flowed by the cop without a halt; and pedestrians paid him no attention. My curiosity was heightened even more when I discovered that there were a couple of bottles of wine standing alongside the mattress. "So I sat down at a sidewalk table, ordered a coffee, and questioned the waiter. "So you mean to tell me," said, "that the city of Rome so considerate of its plemency that it furnishes them with a mattress to take a rest on, when they get tired, and a bottle of wine to take their minds off their troubles?" "Nothing like that," the waiter said. "Just some 'friend of the policeman, or an office firm, a date with their Befana gifts to him. You should have seen him in Befana. He couldn't move for his Befana, which falls in January well after Christmas, is the gift-giving day in Italy. Only the past few years have people adopted Christmas as present-changing time, and it still has anywhere nearly replaced Befana. On the morning of Befana, national holiday, everyone wards policemen, milkmen, messengers, porters, etc., for their services during the year. Everyone that is, except Americans. Rome. They get twice, once Christmas and once on Befana. Italians wouldn't think of membership a policeman unobliviously, when he was off his beat. That wouldn't be any fun. So on Befana they load the vans (in the case of firms) their cars and seek out their friends, the cop."

RANGOON, Burma (UPI) — A double-decker ferry struck a submerged object and sank in a canal Saturday, killing nearly 50 passengers, officials said Sunday.

TO BEGIN DELIBERATIONS
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Deliberations were expected to begin today on the fate of Henry Adolph Busch, 29, a mild-mannered optical worker who confessed he strangled three women, including his aunt.

The defense claimed Busch — who said he had an "urge to kill" — is not insane, but is mentally inferior and cannot formulate a criminal intent.

TIME FOR VIOLENCE

By Noel M. Loomis

XXXVI

At the IJ that afternoon, Stella's body was laid out in the front room, and people sat around in the semidarkness and talked in low tones. Logan and Hepzibah were there with Ike's many children, all gotten up in pathetic Sunday clothes. Ike's face was skinned up and bruised, and he looked as if he had been run through a meat grinder, but he came down Goodnight's foreman and borrowed tobacco, while Hepzibah sat quietly in a corner.

Bart saw Hector Johnson leave the front room and get up to meet him outside. "Thanks," he said, "for helping."

"I never even fired," said Hector.

"The most dangerous gun," said Bart, "is one that has not been fired."

Hector said, "I know you're wonderin' what happened this mornin', Mr. Wagner."

"I certainly am," said Bart. "Mr. Harding sent me after Stella. I followed her to the Half Moon ranch. When I got there, a fight was going on inside. Murphy had come to force his attentions on Hepzibah, and old man Logan got his back up and started fightin' Murphy. Murphy was already crazy, and he began to cut the old man down piece by piece. Hepzibah got the kids outside, and come back to help her pa. About that time Stella came and saw what had happened, and started fightin' Murphy, too. Jealous, I reckon. Murphy shot her just as I got to the door. She fell against me, and Murphy turned tall and ran."

"It must have been a blow to you," said Bart.

Hector looked up. "I guess not too much. I was wrought up, and when I got to Clarendon, all I wanted to do was settle things with Murphy."

Bart said, puzzled, "You wanted to marry Stella, didn't you?"

Hector looked at him. "I give it up several days ago. I wasn't wrought up for him killin' Stella. She had it coming. But over Hepzibah, and what he was doing to the old man, cutting him to pieces."

"Is Hepzibah all right now?"

"She's been through so much in her life, she bounces right back. I'm going to court her as soon as this is over."

Bart shook hands. "You're using good judgment."

It was midafternoon when Bart reached the jail. Goodnight shook hands with him. "Some of the nicest gun work I ever saw. You did a great thing for the Panhandle today, Bart."

Bart shrugged.

Goodnight looked at him. "I'd like to know something. Stella Harding was telling it around that you had arranged to leave Clarendon with her, after the fight, for Kansas City. Anything to it?"

Bart looked up, thoughtful. "There was considerable to it. I was crazy about Stella, but—"

"I know what you mean. I know all about Stella."

"I saw she was going to cause her father nothing but grief, and I thought as long as she wanted to go, I could do him a good turn at the same time."

Bart rode across country until he saw the cottonwood, and heard carpenter work somewhere ahead. He thought at first that Goodnight had a crew rebuilding the shed, but there was no activity back there. He rode to the cottonwood and took off the chickens and set down the box. He unsaddled the black and turned it loose. Then two riders came over the hill—Arrington and Judge Willis. Bart waited.

Judge Willis said, "Charlie sent me over here. Said you wanted to see me."

"I never saw Charlie wrong," said Arrington.

"Captain," said Bart, "how do I stand with you?"

Arrington shrugged. "What can I do? No complaining witnesses—not even for Gentry. The carpentry sounds continued. He said, 'I'll see if Catherine is of the same mind.' He went around to the back. Catherine was on a chair, sawing out the door frame at the top."

"What are you doing?" he demanded.

She blushed a deep red. "I thought—you might be—oh, Bart!"

She fell from the chair into his arms. "You—you're staying!" she said, and began to cry again.

He heard Willis' voice. "It looks as if you two are getting practiced up for after the ceremony. If you can compose yourselves, I'll say the words."

Willis went through the words, and pronounced them man and wife.

Willis looked at them gravely. "There's a time for fighting," he said, "and a time for loving. There's also a time for riding on."

They rode over the hill, but Bart and Catherine were not watching. They were in each other's arms.

Just What Is An I.Q. Anyway?

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Everybody talks about "I.Q.'s" and everybody knows that a high one is better than a low one. But exactly what is an I.Q. anyway? What does it tell you about a child's mental capacity? Can human intelligence really be measured with the scientific precision implied by an exact numerical score?

On the sound assumption that many parents would like answers to these questions, the National Education Association is distributing to teachers and school officials across the land a little booklet entitled: "A Briefing for Parents: Your Child's Intelligence."

It was prepared by seven experts on intelligence testing, and explains in layman's language the values and limitations of the I.Q. tests which are widely employed in U.S. schools.

There are many different types of intelligence tests, and new ones are constantly being developed. All of them seek to measure the "mental age" of a child in relationship to other children.

Before a test has any value for this comparative purpose, it must be administered to a large number of children. This enables educators to determine "norms" for the test—that is, to learn the average score of children of a particular age level.

Once this average is known, the performance of each child who takes the test is compared to it. For example, if a seven-year-old gets the same score as the average score of children nine years old, he is regarded as having a "mental age" of nine.

His intelligence quotient, or I.Q., is obtained by dividing mental age by chronological age, and multiplying the result by 100 just to get rid of decimals.

Thus the seven-year-old with an I.Q. of 128.

If a child's score on a particular test happened to be exactly the same as the national average for his age level, his I.Q. would be recorded at an even 100. But educators know very well that the tests aren't that precise, so they regard any I.Q. between 90 and 110 as normal or average.

Contrary to popular folklore, there is no magic score which connotes "genius." But any score above 130 implies superior intelligence, and scores above 140 indicate very superior intelligence.

In the absence of any better tool, educators use I.Q. tests as rough approximations of a child's capacity to learn. But they do NOT regard them as infallible scientific measurements of any particular child's intelligence.

Research has shown, for example, that many children suffer severely from "test anxiety." Their fear of tests will cause them to make deceptively low scores. A child who is dependent on other people will usually make a lower score than one of equal intelligence who is highly self-reliant. A child's I.Q. may change considerably as he grows older. It is more likely to rise than to fall, and the rise probably reflects greater adaptation and emotional security in a test situation.

Perhaps the greatest misconception of I.Q. tests is the belief that they measure a single type of ability. Actually, there are many different types of intelligence. A person who is very sharp at verbal comprehension, for example, may be weak on handling numbers. And there is clear evidence that the ability to memorize has little connection with overall mental capacity. In other words, a person with a good memory (who would perform brilliantly on a TV quiz show)

Nine Killed When Plane Hits Truck

HONOLULU (UPI) — A Navy radar plane with 22 men aboard veered off the runway on Midway Island Sunday and smashed into a ground crew truck, touching off a fire which consumed the plane, wing.

Nine men, including three of crewmen on the fire truck, were killed or missing, the Navy said. Sixteen of the men aboard plane escaped unhurt or with minor injuries.

A preliminary investigation showed that the 70-ton bi-engine Constellation appeared to have veered off the runway and sheared off a landing gear, which struck two engines on the wing.

BEHIND THE SCENES OF YOUR TELEPHONE SERVICE

Richard A. Goodson

An interview with Richard A. Goodson, Southwestern Bell's Vice President and General Manager for Texas

BY DON DAVIS, TELEPHONE NEWS WRITER

Plans announced for many new telephone service improvements in Texas in '61

Technical advances, new services promise you greater convenience, more enjoyment

You may take the telephone company's good service and efficiency for granted. But not Richard A. Goodson, who heads up Southwestern Bell's Texas operations.

In fact, he sees these two things—better service and greater efficiency—as his company's main jobs in 1961. But achieving these goals is really tough. Because service already is topnotch. And because efficiency, improving at the rate of some 3 1/2% a year, already tops the U.S. business average.

Harlingen and Beeville. Work toward converting Dallas to DDD will get under way this year with the conversion of two central offices. Other offices, in Dallas as well as throughout the state, will be changed over in the next few years.

Construction will start on major new microwave routes (see photo) with completion scheduled for 1962. Microwave equipment, which transmits Long Distance phone calls, television programs and signals for communications required by business firms, will improve service on these routes: Dallas to El Paso by way of Sweetwater; Dallas to Chicago; and San Antonio to Dallas.

Construction will start in 1961 on a new Taylor central office building in Dallas. Cost of the project: $8,000,000.

A long-range program for making service more dependable—pumping dry air into phone cables to keep out moisture—completes in mid-1961.

EFFICIENCY FIGHTS INFLATION

"In 1961," Mr. Goodson said, "we'll not only give our customers better service, but we will do it more efficiently. This is important, because improvement in our efficiency is the basic reason that we've been able to keep our rates reasonable."

"This year, we'll continue to work for even greater efficiency and to give you telephone service of exceptional quality."

DALLAS ADMINISTRATION BUILDING will get a 23-story addition like that shown here. Construction starts this year, completes in 1963.

TWO TYPES OF IMPROVEMENTS

"Our job in 1961," Mr. Goodson said in an interview, "is to make telephone service even better." There are two ways, he observed, that the telephone company goes about improving service.

One is by offering things that make telephone service more convenient and enjoyable and give customers a wider range of choices. Examples are the Princess phone, color phones, special business phones such as the Call Director, and the new Home Interphone now being introduced.

The second way of improving service is by expanding the communications network, improving its quality, making it more efficient and trouble-free. Examples are:

• Direct Distance Dialing, whereby customers dial their own Long Distance calls, already in service in these Southwestern Bell exchanges: Fort Worth, Denison, Hereford, Waxahachie, MICROWAVE TOWERS, with "cornucopia" antennas like the one being installed above, will be under construction this year. Antennas transmit Long Distance phone calls, TV programs, special communications signals required by business firms.

CHARGES CONCEALED

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Frank Smith, D-Miss., charged Sunday that President Kennedy's job has been made more difficult by former President Eisenhower's concealment of the "deteriorating" world situation.

TOP PHOTOGRAPHY AWARD — Pampa's veteran cameraman Irl Smith gained signal honors in the 58th annual Texas Professional Photographers' Assn. convention at Tyler last weekend when his photograph "Rochelle," was judged the best direct color photograph of a bride from some 600 entries that were viewed by the panel of judges.
