Of this number, 57,705 were turned out by the 16 gins served by Bailey County Electric Co., which compared the output with last year's 58,978 at this same time. Weather this autumn and winter has greatly slowed harvest.

'Election Year' Spurs Poll Tax Payments; Population Increase Boosts Number of Clerks to 2

This is an "election year." So, poll tax receipts are selling briskly at the county assessor-collector's office. Up to the end of the year, Jean Lovelady and her deputies had issued 250 receipts; at that same time the year before, nearly a receipt had been issued.

The difference lies in the fact that this is a year when voters select a lot of people on county, state and national levels.

Last year's total payments ran only to 1557, but in 1965 an "election year," the total hit 2514, and that year saw 673 persons marching up to the tax office before Christmas to plunk down their dollars.

In 1962, 581 persons paid poll taxes before the first of the year and 2418 by the end of January. The 1961 total was 478 by Dec. 31, and 1821 total. The 1959 total was 810 in December, and 2511 total for the year.

Of course one of the factors that has held the poll tax sales this year to only 250 is the fact that constitutionality of the poll tax system has been challenged, and is now under consideration in federal courts. However, most observers are agreed that regardless of the outcome of the pending case, poll tax receipts will continue to be required for this year at the least. Even if Texas loses the decision, the matter will be appealed and a long-drawn-out court battle is seen.

If you expect to vote in 1966, it would be much safer to pay poll taxes. Deadline is Jan. 21.

On the county and district levels, eight officials are to be named during the year, including a district judge.

Of greatest interest, however, is the clerks race. In the past, this county has had a combination district and county clerk, but during 1966 the two offices must be separated; the law decrees that when a county's population reaches 8000, a separate district and county clerks must be named.

So, this year candidates will file for district or county clerk as the case may be. Separation of the two jobs will mean an increase in the costs to the county, it was pointed out. For example, Bailey county has been getting by with an annual salary of the district clerk only $10 a year higher than Parmer county pays for county clerk's salary alone. So far, no one has announced as a candidate for either post, although filings on the Democratic ticket are expected within the next 10 days to two weeks.

A county judge also is to be selected this year. The incumbent, Glen Williams, has not yet made public his plans, but is expected by most observers to toss his hat into the ring for re-election.

A county treasurer also is to be named, and Edith Will this past week became the first person to enter the 1966 campaign. She filed for re-election on the Democratic ticket.

Two commissioners also are to be selected in the May primary. Commissioners for precincts 4 and 2, now held by

Sudan Collision Leaves 2 Dead, Two Injured

Henry W. (Hank) Austin, 44, division manager of the Prudential Insurance Co. office in Lubbock, and Mrs. Pansy Lou Brooks, Albuquerque, were killed in a head-on automobile collision near Sudan Wednesday night. Bodies of the victims were brought to Muleshoe by Singleton Funeral Home.

Two ambulances from Muleshoe answered the call for help.

Hospitalized at Medical Arts Hospital in Littlefield were Mrs. Brooks' husband, Eldon Glen Brooks, 31, and their two daughters, Sharon, 9, and Karen, 10.

Brooks was reported to have suffered a broken breast bone and severe bruises. Both girls suffered severe cuts and bruises and Karen also had a broken right leg, officers said. None of the injured was considered critical.

Both bodies were taken to Muleshoe to await transfer.

Highway Patrolman Billy Angel of Littlefield said Austin, alone in his car, was traveling west on U. S. 84 and Brooks was driving east. He said the two cars collided in the center of the west bound traffic lane.

Austin, a resident of Lubbock for the past 32 years, was a (See SUDAN Page 5)

New Books Spark Bookmobile Fare For New Season

A number of new books are pepping up the reading fare for the area's four-wheeled library, the High Plains Bookmobile, says the librarian, Georgia Pena, who suggests a New Year's resolution running like this: "To resolve to read more and become better informed in 1966."

A new shipment of books has just been received, Mrs. Pena said, and the librarian promised that the bookmobile "will surely do everything possible to help you carry out the resolution to read more in 1966."

She said the new shipment includes "good new reading for adults and children alike."

Among new books received are these new adult fiction titles: "Captain Haratia Hornblower" by Cecil T. Dorrester; "No Bugles Tonight," by Bruce Lancaster; "The Big Sky" by Alfred B. Guthrie, and "Call it Treason" by George Howe.

New books for those who enjoy non-fiction include: "John Paul Jones; a Sailor's Biography," by Samuel Morison; "Fundamentals of Carpentry," by Walter Durban; "The Mustangs," by J. Frank Dobie; "Psychology of Adolescence," by Laella Cole; "More Light on the Dead Sea Scrolls," by Miller Barrows; (See BOOKS Page 5)

The check presentation procedure is an annual affair. Next year the county should receive more money from the refuge, Evans said, since payments will be based either on 25 percent of the grazing revenues or three-fourth of one percent of the current value of the land, whichever is higher. The department figures the latter will be greater next year.

Coming in on a Laser — WALTHAM, Mass. (AP) — Two compact modulators — devices to impress information on laser beams — have been developed for the Air Force by Sylvania Electric Products Inc. here.

The units — one 18 inches long and the other three-and-a-half inches — produce rapid variations in the intense, pencil-thin beams of light that emit from lasers. This permits transmission of voice, video, teletype and telemetry signals.

In theory, the smaller modulator is capable of impressing six TV broadcasts or 3,000 telephone calls on a single laser beam and the larger unit could handle 100 TV broadcasts or more than 100,000 telephone conversations.

Today's Meditation

Ira Waddell, Pastor Richland Hills Baptist "Whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow, For what is your life? It is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away." James 4:14

The year of 1965 is now history, and 1966 is before us.

We do not know what 1966 holds for each of us, but we know the one who holds the future, that is God. This new year may well be confronted with perils of sickness, death, disappointments, and trials of life. Therefore it is important for each individual to stop and ask himself the question, "What is my life?"

It is important for an individual to first consider, "what is the foundation of my life?" David Swing once said "Be sure of the foundation of your life. Know why you live as you do. Do not in such an important matter as life build upon theory or speculation. Make it a matter of certainty. Make it a matter of science." We are warned in the Bible not to build upon certain types of foundations. Jesus said it was "A foolish man which build his house upon the sand, and the rains descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house, and it fell, and great was the fall of it." Matt 7:26-27. An individual is not to build the foundation of his life upon selfishness, greed, lust and materialism. To do so would mean a life lived in vain. Their best foundation for a person to build his life upon is the Rock of Jesus Christ. This foundation is composed of love, virtue, humility, and faith. The life that is built upon Christ will be able to stand every trial, problem, disappointment, in life, because "Christ is the solid Rock."

What is the purpose of your life? It may be well to ask the question "Why do I live?" An individual should never live for himself and the material things of this world. The Rich Farmer purposed to accumulate material wealth. He said, "And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take time ease, eat, drink, and be merry. Luke 12:19 Living for self is not the answer to life. "But God said unto him, thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee." Luke 12:20b. The purpose of every Christian should be to live for Christ, and prepare himself diligently for his life's work. We are admonished to "Study to show thyself approved unto God—" II Tim 2:15. A God expects every Christian to discharge his responsibilities in life efficiently. As Abraham believed God and walked by faith when he was called to render service to God. Enoch walked to God three hundred years. Daniel would not defile himself and live like the pagan people in Babylon. Christmas are happy and blessed of God when they find and know His will for their lives.

In 1966 let Christ be your partner as you seek your vocation, and your associates. May you seek to know God's will for your life, and then seek to carry out His will. Let each of us glorify and magnify the name of Christ in this new year.

You made the same resolutions last year... MAKE A RESOLUTION to meet your friends at our soda fountain. Enjoy a refreshing snack while shopping... a coffee break while working.

The Sandhills Philosopher

Editor's note: The Sandhills Philosopher to his Johnson grass farm has ratified Christmas again, his letter indicates.

Dear editor: I picked up a copy of a newspaper which had blown against the side of my house the other day, at first I thought it was a loose board, and could tell by how heavy it was that Christmas was bound to be getting close, so I went inside and got down my calendar and tore off September, October and November, which I had been planning on doing anyway for some time now, and sure enough it's here.

Some people say Christmas gets here too soon the other way, but I don't think it gets here any sooner than

THE FAMILY LAWYER Of Law and Love Will of Your Own

She was a well-to-do spinster, aging and lonely. He was kind and affable, ready and willing to give her the companionship she craved. In the declining years of her life, the two developed a close friendship.

Sure enough, when the woman died she left most of her money to him. Promptly her relatives challenged the validity of the will, charging that it was the result of "undue influence."

But the court held the will valid. The judge pointed out that the young man's "influence" consisted of nothing more than the woman had been vigorous and alert to the end, perfectly capable of making her own decisions.

There is nothing necessarily wrong with influence itself, in the making of a will. As one court put it: "Everyone who is conscious of family and social duties is constrained by the obligations which he thus recognizes. These obligations affect constantly his thinking and his conduct. They assert themselves when he writes his will. Only a hermit or a hobo may be said to possess a free volition."

What the law does object to is influence so strong that it overwhelms the person's independent judgment.

Thus, a court invalidated a will made by a helpless cripple, under threats by his son and daughter-in-law to abandon him.

He declined to ride it away from presentation ceremonies, saying, "I might end up doing business with myself."

Christmas Eve, or Thanksgiving or New Year's or August or the Opening of Congress or the discovery of a new world crisis.

Speaking of a world crisis, some people have the notion they ought to feel guilty about enjoying Christmas when the world is fraught with danger and is maybe on the brink of something worse, but if you're waiting till everything is just right in the world before enjoying Christmas or any other day, you'll never get to it.

There never was a time when the world wasn't on the brink of something or other, and the way it looks from this Johnson grass farm, we've got a long way to go before it isn't. Therefore, as far as I can tell things are normal, which is to say average, and everybody might as well go ahead and enjoy Christmas, if their credit holds out.

I've long contended that if the government was on its toes it'd allow a man to figure up what he spent on Christmas and if it didn't balance, if he went in the hole, the government would make up the difference, but I've never been able to get a Congressman to introduce the bill, and I have about given up on it, at least until they get the shrubbery planted around the junk yards.

Here's hoping everybody connected with The Journal has a Merry Christmas. Personally I intend to.

telltale signs, such as a bequest that seems contrary to human nature.

For instance, it was held an indication of undue influence by a man's second wife that he left her more money to her children than to his. Or, in another case, that a father left almost nothing to his invalid son and almost everything to his healthy daughter.

Nevertheless, while eccentricity in a will may justify suspicion, it is seldom enough by itself to prove undue influence. A man has the right to make an eccentric will if he so chooses. The law merely wants to be sure that he freely did so choose.

Home-Grown or Neighbor's Cotton Most Popular, Experiments Show

The largest quantity of cottonseed planted by High Plains major sources: (1) seed which the producer saved from his previous crop, and (2) that which he purchased from his neighbor. These were the results of "planter box" surveys, conducted in both Lamb and Crosby counties.

During the survey, samples of seed were collected from producers and was brought to the laboratory to test germination, determine seed treatment and certification. Over one-half of the samples collected from both counties were saw-d-limited. Most seed samples from Crosby County were tagged with a Texas As Tested Seed Lab. 1. Of the samples collected in Lamb County, 20 percent were certified.

Additional tests were performed on seed samples collected in Crosby County to determine certain fiber properties and yield levels of cotton produced from these seed. Within the same variety, relatively wide variations were found in yield fiber length, strength and fineness. This variation could be attributed, in part, to seed contamination and deterioration.

These tests were conducted at the South Plains Research Center north of Lubbock and all samples were treated the same.

A yield spread of 300 pounds of lint per acre was found within one variety. In a subsequent test, the average yield of ten lines from this variety was 16 pounds of lint per acre less than the yield where seed were obtained from the breeder of this variety. At 26 cents per pound, this differential could mean $30.16 gross return per acre. In some years, this alone could mean the difference between profit and loss.

Upper half mean, a measure of fiber length varied as much as 1/8 inch. Based on current loan rates, this could mean up to $7.75 per bale variation. Length uniformity varied from 42 to 50 which also gives indications of varietal deterioration.

Strength, as expressed in pounds per square inch, varied from 62,400 to 78,600 pounds within the same variety and produced under the same conditions. The domestic cotton mills generally discount fiber that registers a strength of less than 75,000 pounds.

(or debeneration through improper handling of planting seed. Micronaire, a measure of fiber thickness, varied 3.45 to 4.75 — a range of 1.3 micrograms-per-micronaire by domestic mill purchases reflect the relative value of cotton fiber fineness. During the marketing year of 1965, fiber was discounted approximately 82 points ($4.10 per bale) which had 3.0 to 3.49 micronaire.

In summary, the results from the "planter box" surveys indicate that planting seed do influence fiber properties of the lint harvested from the crop. The results also point out that growers are often doing a poor job of saving his own seed, but this requires careful planning and meticulous attention to detail far beyond that required for normal cotton production.

Cotton producers in the High Plains can use this information to help improve the quality of fiber which is to be harvested and marketed. Quality planting seed is just one of the many factors which help determine fiber quality — and is a starting place which is within the producer's control.

'Low Mike' Readings of High Plains Cotton Surprises Ginners, Growers

Ginners and farmers across the High Plains are more than a little concerned over the big percentage of "low mike" cotton showing up in this year's crop.

The first High Plains Cotton Quality Report, published every two weeks by Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., gave average micronaire of the season's first ginnings at 4.1 with almost 90 percent above the tenderable limit of 3.5.

Two weeks later, on the crop through November 12, cotton harvested miked an average of 4.0 with about 85 percent above 3.5.

In the latest report, covering the season through December 26, micronaire average dropped to 3.8. Only 69 percent was above 3.5.

Bearing out the accuracy of the micronaire decline shown on PGC reports are reports from USDA, individual farmers, and ginners.

Anxiety over excessive low-mike cotton this year is enhanced by the two things with a record-setting late freeze it was generally expected that the 1965 crop would be well matured and therefore be high instead of low micronaire crop.

Beginning October 31, 1965, cotton which carries a micronaire reading below 4.3 will be discounted. Cotton miking from 3.0 through 3.2 will be discounted 60 points, from 2.7 through 2.9 will carry a discount of 165 points and all below that level will lose 300 points.

As of the third PGC quality report, probably about 23 percent of the High Plains crop for the season had fallen into these discount ranges.

But cotton ginned and classified during the last two week period, from November 12 through November 26, is more likely to indicate what can be expected from the remainder of the crop. During that time, 11 percent of the crop was miked at 2.8 and below, 6.8 percent miked from 2.7 through 2.9 and about 20 percent came in the 3.0 through 3.2 range — a total of almost 28 percent in the discount ranges.

Levon Ray, Agronomist at the South Plains Research and Extension Center, Lubbock, says a variety of factors have probably worked together to cause the low micronaire readings in spite of the late freeze.

Surprisingly enough, one of those factors is the late freeze itself. He explains that the late freeze allowed many small, immature bolls to open which would have been killed and not harvested had the cotton plants been killed by a freeze in early November. And it has been noted by other observers that virtually all of the bolls which have opened in the past three weeks contain immature, waxy fiber.

Not to be overlooked is the fact that the late freeze, while helping to lower micronaire, will also increase total yield.

Ray also feels that an increase in the amount of verticillium wilt has adversely affected micronaire this season. This is especially true in the northern tier of counties on the Plains.

It is generally felt, too, that rain and cold nights in the month of September this year may have each been a factor. The rains which fell on some cotton caused increased late fruiting and a greater than normal number of late, immature bolls. And it is known that cool weather hinders the deposition of fiber and results in immaturity, which causes low micronaire.

Some ginners have called attention to the fact that in going through their green cards — a series of bales with good mike will appear, then several bales with low mike. Ray thinks this can likely be explained by a variance of water available to plants in different fields and to different varieties.

Indeterminate varieties are those which, even after they have once stopped growth and fruiting, will resume growth and put on new fruit when additional water or plant nutrients become available, according to Ray.

On the other hand, highly determinate varieties are those which, even after they have once stopped growth and fruiting, will resume growth and put on new fruit when additional water or plant nutrients become available, according to Ray.

On the other hand, highly determinate varieties will "cut out" when they become heavily fruited or because of insufficient moisture or fertility. Consequently these varieties would not carry the same proportion of late, immature bolls as would indeterminate varieties.

Ray went on to say that this year has proven that a late freeze does not necessarily mean a mature crop. And this is one of the things that will need to be given prime consideration in the development and selection of new varieties for the Plains area.

The law states that the Secretary "may" permit transfers by sale or lease "if he determines that it will not impair the effective operation of the program involved."

Since no transfers will be permitted under the law between January 1 and June 1, farmers have only until the end of this year to register such transfers for the 1966 crop. Whether transfers will be permitted between June 1 and December 31 of 1966 remains to be seen.

The price support level, paid on projected yield from a farmer's domestic allotment is also subject to revision, but with some restrictions. The loan rate plus these payments must add up to at least 65 percent of parity on domestic acreage. With the current parity price of about 42 cents, this means a total to the farmer of about 28 cents, basis middling-inch cotton at average location on at least 65 percent (domestic allotment) of his acreage.

The price support payment for 1966 is set at 9.42 cents per pound, which when combined with the 21 cent loan is about 72.5 percent of parity. So this payment could conceivably be lowered slightly in future years.

The rate of the diversion payment (on the acreage required to be diverted) must be at least 25 percent of parity. The 10.5 cent rate for 1966 is, then, at the legal bottom. But while the rate per pound can't go down after 1966, the "acreage required to be diverted" can be cut or even eliminated, thereby reducing the total amount of a farmer's payments.

Further, the 10.5 cent diversion payment is not mandatory in the law as a payment on acreage diverted voluntarily. On any acreage diverted by a farmer over the "required" diversion, the Secretary has authority to make payments at anywhere from zero up to 40 percent of parity.

These are the possibilities within the range of the Secretary's authority. But what the Secretary will actually decide and about permitting sale and transfer of allotments is another matter. His decisions will most likely be affected more than anything else by the extent to which the 1966 program succeeds in reducing the cotton carryover.

As of August 1, 1965 this surplus of cotton is expected to reach 16.2 million bales, the highest since 1936 and almost two million bales above the 1965 carryover of 14.3 million. Domestic consumption is now estimated by the USDA at 9.5 million bales during the 1966-67 marketing year. Exports are guessed in at 5.3 million for a total off-take of 14.8 million bales. And they are placing 1966 production at around 13.5 million.

Stop Government Crop Insurance?

By Oval A. Martin
Associated Press Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Government crop insurance — one of the fondest farm programs of New Deal President Franklin D. Roosevelt — is under sharp attack.

Twenty-seven years of trial have failed to put the program on the sound financial basis that sponsors envisioned for it in the 1930s.

The program has run into bitter criticism in and out of Congress. The American Farm Bureau Federation, a general farm organization claiming more farm members than all of its competitors combined has called upon the next session of congress to abolish the program. This recommendation was made at the Federation's recent annual convention at Chicago.

Critics contend that the program has been a failure because it has turned out to be little more than a farm subsidy program financed by taxpayers. In the beginning, advocates envisioned a program under which the insurance protection offered growers would pay its own way — that is, payments paid by insuring farmers would cover the years' finance indemnities and administration costs. This the program has failed to do.

Naturally, private insurance companies which offer farmers protection against hail and fire damage want the government out of the insurance business because they object to what they call competition financed by the taxpayer public.

There are no indications, however, that the Johnson administration will consent to the abolition of the program. In fact, it has been making the most of the legal possibilities to extend the program to areas and crops not heretofore covered.

Audits by the comptroller-general of the United States show that the crop insurance program has run about $220 million in the red during its 27 years of operation.

Advocates defend the program, contending that, as men experienced in risk making and in settlement of claims is gained and the area covered is expanded, the program should become largely self-financing.

They put much emphasis on reports that many farmers would otherwise have been forced to the financial wall had they been denied benefits of the insurance.

This year, investments of about $580 million in crops were protected by the insurance program, administered by the Agriculture Department. This was the largest coverage in the program's history.

Insurance is offered this year in about 1,213 of the country's approximately 3,000 farm counties.

The insurance program offers protection against losses from hail and fire. These crops are covered, including wheat, corn, cotton, soybeans, sugar beets, peaches, citrus fruits, flaxseed, dry beans, barley, soybeans, apples, potatoes, rice, peanuts, cashews, cherries, sorghum grain, raisins and tomatoes.

Elvis were made hith by the Eisenhower administration and by Congress to curtail the program during the 1950s. But since 1961, there has been a sharp increase in the crops and areas covered.

Those seeking to eliminate the program criticize not only its costs to the public but its tendencies to elicit patronage of farmers in high-risk areas. This concentration, they say, tends to doom the program to failure because of a lack of offsetting participation in low-risk areas. This means, the critics say, that the program has not been refined to a point where it offers protective benefits to all producers at rates which would encourage broad participation.

Critics also claim that government agents spend large sums on commissions, advertising, including the reported flooding of farmer's mail boxes with crop insurance propaganda.

On the other hand, the Agriculture Department says the program "cushions the impact of crop failures on individual farmers, their families and rural communities."

"It does insure a major part of the annual investments acquired to produce the crop," the department says. "Today when crop costs are high and still rising, one failure can cripple a farmer's future."

Comparing with the government program are about 32 mutual insurance concerns, offering farmers protection against losses from hail and fire. These crops are covered, including these two factors only. They claim that they are well able to provide farmers all the protection

Science Theme: Nature of God

A consideration of the nature of Deity will be the theme of this Sunday's service on "God" in all Christian Science churches throughout the world.

The sermon will consist of correlated readings from the Bible and from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science. Included will be Moses' well-known injunction from Deuteronomy: "Know therefore this day, and consider it in thine heart, that the Lord he is God in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath: there is none else." And this reference from Science and Health: "The power of God brings deliverance to the captive. No power can withstand divine Love."
