"Square Pegs in Square Holes" Since I have always more or right when he said that every inparticular job better than anyone the book "Square Page in Square Holes" by Margarer E. Broadley. This book is a study in aptitude tests. The aptitude wats the book attempts to describe are those originally started by the General Electric Company at the West Lynn branch in Masserusetts, The original idea was to try to Economic strains always bear improve the plant efficiency and morale by using certain experimental tests to fit employes to the jobs they could do best, Johnson O'Connor was placed at the head of the movement. Finally so many people outside the plant emtested, that it was decided to open laboratories where anyone could be tested who was over the age The Stevens Institute of Technology took the responsibility of developing these aptitude tests. This institute has six different laboratories where aptitude tests can be made

This particular development has found 13 well defined aptitudes which combine in over 8000 different ways and cover over thousand different jobs, These are called by the laboratory 1. personality, 2. accounting aptitude, 3. creative imagination, 4. structural 6. analytical reasoning, 7, finger dexterity, 8. tweezer dexterity, 9. observation, 10, memory for de design, 11. tonal memory, 12 pitch discrmination, 13, number Of course the big problem in naterial success is knowing whom to believe-whether to believe oneself or what other person to believe. These aptitude tests have the objective of finding out what natural talents an individual has. One of the things that occurred to me in reading the books was that these aptitude tests might cause people to want to believe wants to do, The successful person, cation from a financial standpoint, is the willing to pay for. The book, however, constantly stresses that aptitude tests are not substitutes for

The author starts out the chap-ter entitled "Aptitudes and Us" by a quotation from Emerson as fol-"There is a time in every man's education when he arrives at the conviction that envy is ignorance: that imitation is suicide; that he must take himself for better or worse as his portion; that thoug the wide universe is full of good, no kernel of nourishing corn can come to him but through his toll bestowed on that plot of ground which is given him to till." She continues by saying, "Few of us exhaust, or even tap, the resources on this 'plot of ground'."

This thought of necessity of work is further amplified by her quotaton from Carlyle when he said "The meaning of life here on earth might be defined as consisting in this: To unfold your self, to work what thing you have the faculty for, It is a necessity for the human being, the first law of our existence."

The book goes on to point out that when people are working at-something that they have no ap-titude for, they are inclined to be ored with themselves. The author says "The very fact that so many people must experience such an urgent need to get away from people cannot lose themselves in work, that they lack selfconfidence and have no purpose in life that they would like to achieve.

"There should be no such thing as retirement in the sense of suddenly cutting ourselves off from an active life to mark time the rest of our days. If our problems are broad enough there will always be some angle yet to be solved. "Epictetus teaches us to try to put out of our minds those matters beyond our control and to something about those controllable Good Books

The author constantly stresses the importance of a vocabulary. Most of the tests take into ac count the number of words one understands. She stresses the importance of reading good books when she says "Every person with a sincere desire to improve his vocabulary and better his educa-tion, and to instill these habits Jewish youths are being re-munist documents, including the Hechalutz training of American ton, and to instill these habits cruited and trained in the United 1945 annual report of the Morn-Jewish youth for Palestine's unit the children of the family. should clear out every book of the States for the Palestine undering Freiheit Association (Communderground. As the touring golf stars left here today for Charlotte and the last open tournament of the winter schedule, lanky Lloyd Mangrum of Chicago emerged as No. 1 man of the seasonel swing.

The dapper 1946 National Open champion hiked his year's earnings to $10,838.33 by taking the $10,000 Greensboro Open yesterday.

Despite a faltering 73 finish, he had enough of a cushion huilt.

Despite a faitering 73 finish, he had enough of a cushion built up through earlier rounds of 70-66-69 to finish one stroke ahead of Lew Worshan, who succeeded him as open king a year ago.

Mangrum's 278 was two under par for 72 holes over the 6,720-yard Sedgefield Country Club course, a par 70 strip.

The victory was his third of the year, making him the only player to win more than one of the eleven $10,000 tournaments held to date.
