Senate Ballots In Four Counties Are Seized

Tower Victory Viewed As Slap At JFK's Rule

HOUSTON (UPI) — A spokesman at state Republican headquarters today said ballots of Saturday's senate runoff election in four Rio Grande Valley counties had been seized at the request of the GOP.

The court seizure of the votes was ordered by Dist. Judge C. W. Laughlin. The counties include Duval, Jim Wells, Starr and Brooks — part of the state's 21st Senatorial District once dominated by political boss George Parr.

State GOP chairman Tad Smith said "watchdog" teams of Republicans were sent to the court-houses of the four counties "to sit on the steps until court opens to make sure the court doesn't change."

"This is no reflection on any election or county officials," Smith said. "We just want to make certain the vote in these counties does not change between now and the time it is certified by the various officials."

The four-county area where ballots were impounded gave Democrat William Blakley a 5,402 to 1,356 vote margin over Republican John Tower, but Tower won the election state-wide by over 8,000 votes.

The seizure move was made early Sunday when Dick McIntyre of Falfurrias and Neal Terrey of Alice filed a petition with Dist. Atty. Sam Burris of Alice to request the action. McIntyre and Terrey are members of the State Republican Executive Committee.

In Dallas, Republican Tower's history-making election to the U.S. Senate over Democrat Blakley touched off GOP claims today that Texas now is a two-party state.

Tower's election Saturday made him the first Republican ever to win a statewide vote in Texas. The Republicans have not had a party member in the Senate from the state since Reconstruction days when the last GOP senator was appointed by the legislature.

Tower, 35, who is considered a conservative in the style of Sen. Barry Goldwater, said he considered his victory "reflects a dissatisfaction with the new frontier in Texas."

A college professor, Tower defeated Blakley for the seat vacated by Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson. Blakley was the interim appointee to the post.

Tower will leave for Washington Wednesday for talks with Sen. Everett Dirksen, R-Ill., Senate minority leader, Thurston Morton, R-Ky., national GOP chairman, and Goldwater, R-Ariz.

Unofficial returns from the Texas Election Bureau in Dallas were almost complete. Tower held an 8,099 vote lead over Blakley with only 7,800 ballots to be counted. Tower piled up 444,718 votes compared to 436,610.

Tower sprang his upset by zapping the big city vote. He took the vote in Dallas, Houston, San Antonio, Fort Worth, El Paso, Amarillo and Galveston.

It was Blakley's second defeat (See SENATE, Page 3)

Pampa Plans Quiet Holiday

Memorial Day will be observed quietly in Pampa.

Most downtown stores, City Hall, Courthouse offices will be closed. There will be no city mail deliveries. Post office windows will be closed, although the post office will be open for the convenience of P. O. Box renters.

Various groups have planned to place memorial wreaths on the graves of service men in Fairview Cemetery.

Officials of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and American Legion said no special program had been planned for the day.

Tax Accord Move Ends In Failure

AUSTIN (UPI) — Senate conferees today for the third time rejected House pleas for a compromise tax program as the faltering and feuding 57th Texas Legislature headed for its automatic end at midnight.

The state's $350 million money problem will be the holdover liability of lawmakers when they return for a special session, probably July 5.

The 10-member conference committee met for 49 minutes before breaking up for good. Its mission was to find a tax program that both chambers and the governor could accept.

Failure to write a compromise bill sets the stage for a House vote on the sales-tax-heavy bill the Senate sent representatives two weeks ago.

Gov. Price Daniel has vowed to veto the Senate's bill if it is approved by the House.

Daniel also made it clear he would veto the bill if presented to him in a special session, and urged lawmakers to make one last attempt to compromise.

The governor will deliver his views of the 57th Legislature in a statewide broadcast some time this week.

The record of the 57th Legislature has been more notable for bills killed than for bills passed. Lawmakers had 20 more days than usual to do the job.

A constitutional amendment passed last year extended the regular session from 120 to 140 days, and established a $4,000 annual salary for legislators.

That annual salary was the first thing lawmakers passed and remains as one of the few major pieces of legislation that has cleared both chambers.

More than 1,800 bills, proposed constitutional amendments and resolutions were introduced by the 160 House members and the 31 senators.

Passage of major legislation such as a teachers' pay raise and medical care for the aged hinges on passage of a tax bill.

So does the state's record $2.5 billion budget that has been ironed out by a conference committee and can be acted on if a compromise tax program is approved.

Panhandle Area Pelted By Rain

By United Press International
A heavy rainstorm slashed the Littlefield area Sunday night, flooding streets for several hours.

A Baptist Church in the town was hit by lightning scattering bricks over a small area. Water from the rain, which measured almost two inches, was draining off today. No one was injured in the storm and the rain and flooding caused little damage to businesses.

Extreme Southwest, North Central, Northwestern and Southeast Texas stood a chance of receiving a few late afternoon and evening thundershowers.

Skies were generally clear to partly cloudy over the state today. Temperatures ranged from 71 at Galveston-Larado to 57 at Lufkin. Sunday's high was 100 at Presidio.

All sections of the state can expect warm readings today, the Weather Bureau said.

Thundershowers pelted wide areas of the Panhandle Sunday night. The Ardmore-Amarillo Texas League baseball game at Amarillo was postponed because of wet grounds resulting from a shower.

Sabotage Attempts At Communications Centers Are Probed

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The FBI, state and private authorities worked together today trying to solve the mysterious sabotage dynamiting of three important communication facilities in Utah. The explosion set off a National Guard and police alert at other key telephone installations in the nation.

The near-simultaneous explosions at two unmanned microwave stations and a cable relay station at remote Knolls, Wendover and Cedar Mountain in western Utah at about 5 a.m. Sunday was labeled deliberate by a police official.

"It is definitely not the work of a crackpot," said Supl. Lyle Hyatt of the Utah Highway Patrol. "It looks like a professional job. It was too well planned and each blast was in a critical area."

Hundreds of National Guardsmen stood watch today at American Telephone & Telegraph stations in six states—Utah, Idaho, Colorado, Nevada, Wyoming and New Mexico. State police, sheriff's deputies and private guards kept special watch at stations in California, Michigan, Arkansas, Illinois and perhaps other states where officials were reluctant to discuss the dangers involved.

There had been fears that attempts would be made to cut off communications elsewhere in the nation, but reports of bombs at Denver and Maine proved unfounded.

National defense communications affected by the blasts were switched to alternate routes immediately.

The FBI moved in on the case with a "very intensive" probe. Although 600 pounds of dynamite was stolen Thursday at Elko, Nev., officials made no mention of any apparent tie-in with the blasts.

Nine plane loads of replacement equipment were sent in from telephone supply headquarters to help the Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Co. repair the stations, which are about 40 miles apart.

Until rerouting plugged the gaps, circuits for the military, TV signals, and long distance circuits were disrupted for about an hour. The tower near Wendover was left standing after the explosion, but the one near Cedar Mountain was knocked to a leaning position. Only one wall was left standing at the booster station near Knolls.

They predicted, however, that De Gaulle and Kennedy would be able to reach enough basic understanding on broad issues and long-range objectives to strengthen the U.S. President's hand for his Vienna talks later in the week with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

The U.S. and French presidents will hold five intimate talks at the Elysee Palace between the time Kennedy arrives Wednesday morning and his departure for Vienna early Saturday. In the Austrian capital Kennedy and Khrushchev will talk for about 10 hours in two sessions Saturday and Sunday.

Engineer Named On Canadian Dam

Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall announced today in Washington that C. O. Crane has been named construction engineer for the Canadian River Dam Project, according to word from Rep. Walter Rogers.

Udall also stated, according to Rogers, that Herman Carter will be office engineer. Representative Rogers gave no further identification of the two men.

John C. Thompson, Amarillo, assistant regional director for the Canadian River Project, said recently in Pampa that construction of the dam at Sanford, nine miles northwest of Borger, is expected to start this fall.

Police said parents were notified and called to Central Station to post bond for them. None spent the night in jail.

One of the youths, taken before Corporation Judge A. J. Carubbi, pleaded guilty and each was fined $25.

One of the under-age group pleaded not guilty to the charge and trial was set for 1:30 p.m. Thursday in Corporation Court.

A 16-year-old boy was arrested on a charge of intoxication. His case was turned over to juvenile authorities for further action.

Four of the boys arrested Saturday night failed to appear in court this morning and each forfeited a $25 cash bond which had been posted Saturday night.

Police Chief Jim Conner said today the youths who failed to appear automatically entered guilty pleas and the law provided their bonds be forfeited as fines in each of the cases.

The Liquor Board inspectors, from Amarillo and Borger, arrested the youths in parked cars, police said, near the intersection of W. Francis and Hobart streets. The youths were picked up and taken to police headquarters between 10 p.m. and midnight.

PRESIDENT KENNEDY ... They Will Start Talks Wednesday PRESIDENT DE GAULLE

Difficult Roles Confront JFK And De Gaulle

PARIS (UPI) — President Kennedy's meeting here this week with French President Charles de Gaulle is shaping up as a difficult diplomatic tight rope act for the American leader.

French and American officials said today there were no last-minute signs that either President is prepared to give ground on the issues which irritate relations between the two countries and continually trouble the NATO alliance.

They acknowledged that Kennedy would need all his famed charm and political skill to get his views across without injuring French feelings on some sensitive points.

Each is located in areas of chronic unemployment where economic dislocations have resulted in high joblessness — in some cases—for as long as 10 years.

The idea is to give needy persons in the experimental areas coupons rather than cash to make sure their increased purchasing power will be used to fill the market basket.

The program will be supervised and evaluated by Agriculture Department field personnel. If it works, it may be extended to other parts of the nation.

The administration will be handled by local welfare authorities. The recipients mainly will be persons who ordinarily would qualify for public assistance.

Food Program Test Launched

WELCH, W. Va. (UPI) — An experimental stamp program to provide food for the needy is being launched today in this small West Virginia community by Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman.

The cabinet member was scheduled to supervise the opening here of the first of eight offices throughout the nation where needy persons can pick up food stamp coupon books and cash them in for food.

Freeman planned to hand out the first book in the McDowell County welfare office and then observe the recipient using the coupons to buy food at a nearby grocery.

Similar pilot projects are to be set in motion during the next five weeks in Fayette County, Pa.; Floyd County, Ky.; Franklin County, Ill.; Detroit, Mich.; the Virginia-Hibbing-Nashwauk complex, Minn.; Silver Bow County, Mont.; and San Miguel County, N.M.

God's Power In Dedicated Men Only Way To Stop Communism, Graduates Are Told

Only one power can turn back the onslaught of communism in the world today, Rev. Woodrow Adcock, pastor of First Methodist Church, told members of the 1961 graduation class of Pampa High School at vesper services held late yesterday afternoon in the High School Field House.

"That one power," the Rev. Mr. Adcock said, "is the power of God in men dedicated to freedom, justice, truth, and righteous conduct of all human affairs."

"In the face of the world situation and the complex society of which we are a part," the Rev. Mr. Adcock said, "it would be easy for us to say in despair, there is little or nothing that we can do to stop communism, make a better world, or build a good life. Yet in spite of all the changes that are taking place in the world, we need to remember that human nature is the same; God is the same; Jesus Christ is the same today, yesterday, and forever; moral and spiritual values and principles are the same. A influence over a large portion of the earth's surface and through enslavement; false promises, infiltration; murder, fear, and hate they have reached a place of power which to a great extent enables them to determine the destiny of the human race.

The Rev. Mr. Adcock pointed to the many advances in science and technology that have come about in these past 50 years. "But," he said, "we have not kept up in the field of human relations. Our world has been reduced to a small neighborhood without us knowing how to live as neighbors. At least a good part of the human race is not willing to live as neighbors and put into practice the commandment which Jesus emphasized so frequently, 'Thou Shalt Love Thy Neighbor As Thy Self.'"

The Rev. Mr. Adcock said there are four weapons which we can use to win in the great battle of the human race. (See GRADUATES, Page 3)

A similar program was in effect from 1939 to 1943. The stamp books contain government-printed coupons slightly smaller than a dollar bill in $1.25 denominations which can be "spent" at qualifying commercial food outlets.

The experiment was announced by President Kennedy a few days after he took office. It followed an executive order increasing food surplus distributions in many of the jobless areas.

The toll for the first 64 hours of the 102-hour holiday weekend neared 300 and was higher than that of any other Memorial Day on record. Traffic accidents were claiming more than four lives every hour.

National Safety Council President Howard Pyle said, "Unless our motorists show more respect for traffic law and exercise better judgment in every other way, this Memorial Day holiday will become the most tragic we have ever recorded."

A United Press International count at 10:30 a. m. EST, more than 64 hours after the holiday's start at 6 p.m. Friday, showed 292 deaths in traffic. There were 52 drownings and 48 miscellaneous deaths for a total of 392.

California led the traffic death count with 26. There were 23 in Michigan, 19 in New York State, 18 in Illinois, 13 in North Carolina, 12 in Texas, 10 in Kansas, 9 in both Kentucky and Pennsylvania, and 8 each in Minnesota, New Mexico and Tennessee.

Safety experts had hoped the death pace would slow down Monday as many Americans returned to their jobs for one day of work before embarking on the official holiday Tuesday.

"The highways will continue to be crowded," Pyle warned. "Don't let carelessness get you into a traffic accident. Take extra care to meet this extra danger and expect to arrive late but safe."

House, At Long Last, Bares 1959 Expenses

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The House was in print today with a long-promised report on expense accounts of its members in the 12 months that ended June 30, 1959. At first inspection, the 418-page book appeared likely to embarrass nobody.

For one thing, it was ancient history. A similar book on House expenses for the last fiscal year has yet to go to the printer. For another thing, the book was not indexed. Expense items were filed in chronological order. Many of the entries left something to be desired by the reader in pursuit of detail.

An unspecified number of unidentified members of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, along with unidentified and unaccounted staff members, went somewhere to investigate something in June 1958. Wherever it was, the tickets on Eastern Air Lines cost the government $1,297.62.

Members of the Merchant Marine Committee and staff—again unspecified as to name or number—conducted an inquiry about the Panama Canal Nov. 28 through Dec. 11, 1957, and brought back two bills from the El Panama Hotel totalling $1,536.10.

Individual members frequently found it necessary to investigate matters in their home states, their expense reports showed. These trips were charged to their respective committees. One member of the Foreign Affairs Committee—not identified in the report—ran up a $298.81 bill sending telegrams from India to the United States.

The House commissioned a portrait of a former speaker, not named, Painter Boris B. Gordon got $2,500 for the job.

In September 1958, members used $246 worth of ice. They bought robotypes, duplicators, mimeographs, dictaphones, calculators, addressographs, audographs, and electric typewriters. Despite the mountains of waste paper produced by these and other legislative machines, they periodically bought shredded newspaper from the Salvation Army, at the rate of $8.22 per 470 pounds.

U. S. Accuses Rebels In Laos

GENEVA (UPI)—The United States Saturday formally accused the Communist Pathet Lao rebels in Laos of breaking the cease-fire there 33 times since a formal truce agreement was signed May 13 by the three warring factions.

The hopelessly deadlocked Geneva conference itself was in recess and the United States made its charges in a statement circulated to the delegations here. The statement listing the attacks between May 13 and May 26 said many of them "reflect a pattern of premeditation."

The conference was stalled on such problems as whether to debate the opening speeches or to proceed immediately with the task of working out Laos' future, and on whether the conference should send new instructions to the International Control Commission there.

Britain, co-chairman with Russia, went over the head of the Soviet delegation here and appealed directly to the Kremlin. The British appeal was discussed Friday night in Moscow by British Ambassador Sir Frank Robert and first deputy Russian Foreign Minister Vassili Kuznetsov.

The United States, which said it would not participate in the conference unless the I.C.C. in Laos verified the cease-fire, went along with an I.C.C. report that one had been in existence since May 3. The formal cease-fire was signed on May 13.

Publication of the U.S. report coincided with reports from the battle scene by UPI correspondent Michael T. Malloy who said the Pathet Lao was subjecting Meo tribesmen in the hills of Xieng Khouang Province to heavy artillery and infantry attacks.

Water Bill Fight Won By Woman

HOUSTON (UPI)—Inez Wesley Hobbs had a right to complain. Her water bill jumped from $9.80 to $111.64.

And to add insult to injury when the leak was discovered, the water department charged her to repair it.

But the city council has sided with Mrs. Hobbs and said it was all the fault of lazy water meter readers.

The council ruled that she was not responsible for the leak because the meter was located two and one-half blocks from her home. The meters for several homes are in a cluster because "years ago lazy meter readers used to put all the meters together for easy reading," the council said.

It ordered the water department to cut her bill to the average amount, assume the cost of repairs and install a new meter next to her house.

There are about 515 billion gallons of water available every day in the United States.

Nation's Coal Industry Said To Face Revival

NEW YORK (UPI)—Coal could be making a comeback, but for how long and how far still is the economists' headache.

Some studies indicate that it may not in the foreseeable future hit the 630 million ton year the industry enjoyed in 1947, but they also show that by cutting production costs and hammering away at sales, it has a brighter future than many have believed possible.

Peabody Coal Co. one of the nation's biggest producers, even has made sounds about making a better showing in the first half of the year, moneywise, than it did in the first half of 1960 despite a drop in production.

Investornews, a publication of Francis I. DuPont & Co., has taken a look at the reasons for hope for coal, and found that intensive mechanization has made it possible.

Productivity in the last 12 years has more than doubled, Peabody's vice president S. L. Jewell noted. The American miner can produce as much coal in a day as his counterparts elsewhere in the world can produce in a week.

This efficiency in production has reached the point where steel producers in Britain have been trying to get import licenses to bring in coal from the United States despite the opposition of the nationalized coal industry in the isles. Thus far it has got them more argument than coal, but the mere fact that consumers in Britain should look to the United States for this commodity is perhaps the best indication of how far along the comeback trail the industry has come.

Investornews found that the production tons per man day have gone from 6.8 ten years ago to 13 tons now, and some forecasters say it will reach 17 tons per day before long. Furthermore, the mine price dropped 19 cents a ton, on the average, between 1950 and 1960 to a figure of $4.65 last year.

Right now, the cost factor—in the battle of coal versus nuclear reactor fuel—is in favor of coal, but for how long?

Buying Over-The Counter Stocks Often Risky, Expert Points Out

By GEORGE C. HARLAN
NEW YORK (UPI)—Mother's cookie is far from a missile stock and is not listed on any stock exchange, but it's doing just dandy.

The stock is a new issue offered to the public for the first time in March. A total of 125,000 shares was placed on the market at $15 a share and was quickly bid up to over $20.

The stock never will be a blue-chip, but it is typical of a new breed of stocks that has brought an investor stampede and raised some eyebrows on Wall St. These issues are offered in the over-the-counter market.

Unlike seasoned stocks of big companies which are traded in a market place provided by stock exchanges, this market consists of some 4,500 over-the-counter firms which make transactions primarily via a telephone network.

Generally an over-the-counter stock is something of an unknown quantity in that it does not have to pass the rigorous standards imposed on shares listed on the major exchanges.

Some of these counter stocks are of sturdy character, including bank and utility shares selling for $100, but many are of extremely speculative nature selling for as little as two cents.

In recent months the performance of seasoned listed stocks has been greatly overshadowed by that of some new issues and older counter stocks which have doubled in price in a few hours.

Behind the rush for some of these low-priced issues is the passion of most "to get in on the ground floor in buying a piece of the future."

Rep Roger Says U.S. School Aid Opposed By Many

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Rep. Walter Rogers, D-Tex., said Saturday there has been a great deal of mail from the Southwest on federal aid to education proposals and most of it is opposed to federal aid in any form.

He said the issue should not be judged purely on the economic benefits that would result from federal aid. The people should also consider the responsibility of the government to control the spending of that money, he said.

"As for me," Rogers said, "I vote for the constitutionally dual sovereignty form of government, with full separation of powers."

Sentiment Found Growing For Summertime Schools

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Well, the kids will be out of school soon and they can go to work in the fields, helping father with the crops.

If that statement strikes you as absurd, you can understand why many educators regard the nine-month school year as an anachronism.

The summer shutdown of schools, which millions of youngsters are now eagerly anticipating, is a holdover from the days when America was an agricultural nation.

Although the vast majority of American children are now city-dwellers who don't know a hoe from a haycart, the custom of releasing them for "farm chores" during June, July and August remains embedded in national practice.

The custom has its conveniences, even in an urban society. It provides a time for family vacations, for summer camps, for Bible schools and other church activities that are difficult to schedule during the regular school year.

For this reason, there is little public sentiment for compulsory, year-round attendance at school.

But there is large and growing support for voluntary school programs.

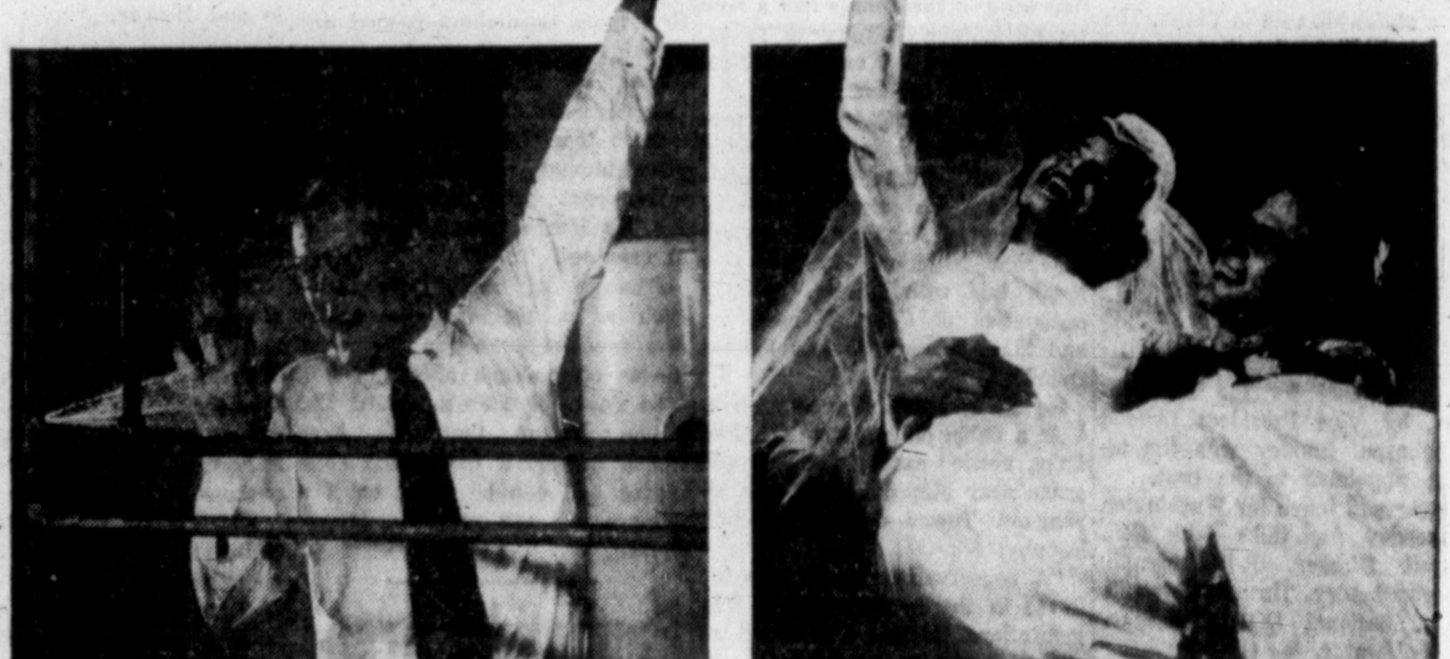

A survey by the National Education Association (NEA) indicates that about half of the urban school districts in the nation are now offering such programs. They are found in 48 of the 50 states.

While the specific offerings vary widely from one community to another, most summer programs fall into three categories:

1. Make-up and remedial courses. These are offered for children who have failed a course during the regular school term, or who need extra help in overcoming deficiencies in reading, arithmetic, or other basic skills.
2. Enrichment courses. These provide an opportunity for bright and ambitious youngsters to take extra courses, such as advanced math, laboratory sciences, foreign languages and English. They also enable students to take such courses as driver-training and typing which cannot be fitted into the regular school term without displacing more important academic studies.
3. Recreational programs. These are primarily designed to give children wholesome, supervised summer activities. They include individual and group sports, training in crafts, musical and dramatic projects.

Chess Club Plans Meet

The Pampa Chess Club will hold its weekly meeting at the Pampa Youth and Community Center at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, June 1.

The club will work with the Youth Center in an effort to provide chess instruction to boys or girls regardless of age. Members of the club will be on hand to direct and encourage all youngsters interested in chess, according to Doug Halley, Youth Center director.

The Pampa club was volunteered to provide not only the instruction and direction but also the equipment itself.

The club, Halley said, is open to any person interested in chess. Special emphasis will be to bring in new members and those who are not familiar with the game but who are interested in learning.

Any person interested in chess may call Tony Welker at MO4-8345 or come to the Youth Center at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Halley said.

Youths Will Pay For Sunday 'Fun' On Railway Tracks

"We were just having fun... we didn't mean any harm."

Four sadder, but wiser area teenagers, echoed these words today after agreeing to make retribution for damages incurred when a Santa Fe freight train smashed into their parked 1955 auto at 4 a.m. Sunday morning one-half mile west of White Deer.

The teenagers, three youths and one girl, were "joy riding east on the railroad track when their car became hung up on a railroad crossing, according to Deputy Sheriff Grady Stapp of Panhandle. Stapp, who investigated the case, said the teenagers attempted to jockey the car off the tracks, but failed.

"After failing to move the car," he said, "they fled the vehicle upon hearing the locomotive whistle."

Stapp estimated damage to the locomotive was approximately $100. The car was a total loss, he added.

L. E. Sankey, special agent for the Santa Fe Railroad, said that a railroad switch was also damaged. No estimate of its damage was given.

Stapp revealed that three of the youths were 18, with two giving White Deer as their home town and one listing Skellytown as his residence. The girl, who was approximately 18, was from White Deer, Stapp said.

The teenagers appeared before the County Attorney in Panhandle this morning but Stapp said charges would probably not be filed against them.

in an attempt to gain by popular vote a Senate post he has held by appointment.

Tower said he considered the vote a slap at the New Frontier. "I think it reflects a dissatisfaction with the New Frontier in Texas," Tower said.

Former state GOP chairman Thad Hutcheson of Houston said the victory marked the end of one-party rule in Texas.

"From this day on no major election will take place in the state of Texas without a Republican candidate," he said. "These results prove that nobody is against us but the professional politicians and nobody is for us except the people."

Republican campaign leaders issued an alert to all workers yesterday to be watchful and vigilant regarding the official canvass and certification of the election returns in the 254 counties in Texas.

Blakley still hadn't conceded. The state Democratic camps were strangely silent. Vice President Johnson refused comment on the election during a quick trip to Texas over the weekend.

Texas' other Senator, Ralph Yarborough, a Democrat, said the election should spur Texas Democrats to "reinvigorate" the party. Gov. Price Daniel had no immediate comment.

Harris County, supposedly a Liberal Democrat stronghold, gave Tower a 35,896 vote margin. Tower carried Dallas county; Blakley's home county, by 12,577 votes.

Four Governors Plan To Attend Oil Conference

AUSTIN — Four governors and official representatives of 20 other states will attend the midyear meeting of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission in Houston June 1-3, Gov. Price Daniel, commission chairman, said today.

In addition to Daniel, other state chief executives who will be present are Gov's. Matthew E. Welsh of Indiana, Edwin L. Mechem of New Mexico, and Frank B. Morrison of Nebraska. Daniel will preside over the meeting which is to be held in the Shamrock - Hilton Hotel.

Commission headquarters in Oklahoma City have reported that 394 persons already have registered for the meeting. More than 500 are expected for the business sessions.

Speakers will be Gen. Ernest O. Thompson of the Texas Railroad Commission; Edward L. Steinger, president of the Sinclair Oil Corp., New York; and John O. Hurd, president of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Assn.

Others who will attend are Frederick S. Lottm of the U.S. Department of Interior; Judge Arthur Kline, member of the Federal Power Commission; Dr. Carlos de la Cova, oil advisor to the Venezuelan ambassador; Sam H. Jones, former governor of Louisiana; W. S. Morris, president of Sinclair Oil and Gas Co.; Capt. M. V. Carson, consultant for Sinclair Oil Corp.; Hiram Dow, former lieutenant and governor of New Mexico; Warwick W. Downing, representing the governor of Colorado; and official observers from the State of California, the Canadian province of Alberta, and the U.S. Department of Justice.

Pampan Assists In Planning For State Tax Meet

Aubrey Jones, Pampa tax assessor-collector, attended a committee meeting in Abilene Saturday of the Texas Assn. of Assessing Officers to plan for the annual state-wide TAAO Institute at Austin in December.

Jones, chairman of the state board, said the third annual institute will be held in the state capital Dec. 4 and 5 under sponsorship of the Texas Municipal League and the Institute of Public Affairs at Texas University.

"Purpose of the institute," Jones said, "is to provide a tax school for city, school and county tax personnel from all over the state."

Other members attending the Abilene meeting Saturday were Truett Marshall, Austin tax assessor-collector, and Kenneth A. Waincott, tax assessor-collector from Corpus Christi.

Lynn F. Anderson, assistant director of Texas University's Institute of Public Affairs, will serve as director for the December institute.

Ruler Of Japan Sets Precedent In Rotary Talk

TOKYO (UPI)—Emperor Hirohito, in an unprecedented speech, told the opening plenary session of the 52nd annual Rotary International convention today that the record attendance indicated the high interest being shown in Asia and Japan.

It was the first time in Japan's history that an emperor had addressed a worldwide non-governmental body such as Rotary. More than 22,000 persons from 67 nations are attending the convention.

Delegates had to battle strong winds and heavy rain to get to the convention hall.

After a brief "hearty welcome," Hirohito told the delegates: "It is especially worth mentioning about the present convention of yours that it has come to be held for a first time in Asia, and that the attendance is by far greater in number than was first anticipated. The fact is considered most significant as a mark of interest and friendly sentiment entertained toward this country."

J. Edd McLaughlin of Ralls, Tex., president of Rotary International, told the audience: "We are met to get acquainted, to advance international understanding and to share our experiences of the living Rotary."

This is the biggest gathering of Rotarians in history. Previous high attendance was 15,061 in 1949 in New York City.

President-elect Joseph A. Ahey, Reading, Pa., will take office during this convention and will be president for 1961-62. Nitish C. Lahary of Calcutta, India, will be elected president for 1962-63, since he is the sole nominee for the office.

Graduates

life. These, he said, are ability to think without confusion, to love your fellowman sincerely, to act from honest motives, and to trust in God and Heaven securely.

He outlined these four things as follows: "I. Think Clearly.

"It is not easy to think clearly in this day of pressure and propaganda of all kinds. There is so much confusion that it becomes easy for us to add to the confusion rather than do constructive thinking. You remember the boy who spelled confusion with a capital K and when this was called to his attention he said that just goes to show how confused I am. But if God has blessed us with good minds we can think clearly. The best way to think clearly is to 'Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus.' There must be a hub or base for all our thinking. Let Christ be that hub or base for your thinking and your decisions. In other words make Christ the foundation of your life and judge everything by His will and His purpose. You can have the mind of Christ through prayer, worship, Bible study, and Christian Dedication. Our world is full of people who are wrapping their minds about themselves and then can't understand why they can't think straight.

"II. Love Your Fellowmen.

"Clear thinking will always lead us to love people. It sounds beautiful and easy to hear Jesus say, 'Thou Shalt Love Thy Neighbor As Thyself.' But it is not easy. We have a way of just not liking some people. We don't know why. It may be the way they talk or comb their hair. It may be they look like someone we don't like. Or it may be they expressed an idea that we don't agree with or maybe they criticized us. Yet Jesus tells us to love even our enemies. This is no easy order, yet He did it and He asks us to do it.

"We can react in three different ways when someone has wronged us. First, we can react in the Old Testament spirit of vengeance; 'An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth.' We can fight fire with fire. But this kind of vengeance begets more evil and hate and it destroys us as well as our enemies. Second, we can respond with no outward action because of fear. But this would be cowardice. Christians are not cowards.

"The third way to react to wrong is to return good for evil. To overcome evil with good. This is the Christian way. It is the way of love. The only permanent way to destroy an enemy is to make him your friend. Love is the only weapon God gave to Christ to use for the saving of the world. Love will outlive hate. It was said of those early Christians that they out-thought, out-loved, and out-lived the pagan world around them. No wonder kingdoms and empires toppled before them. The world today is dying for lack of love. Love is active good-will toward all people. It is the strongest weapon we have. Let's use it.

"III. Act From Honest Motives.

"Jesus could not stand to see people do the right thing with the wrong motive. That's why he talked about the hypocrites who prayed in public places to be seen of men. He wanted right conduct and right actions, but he wanted the motives to be pure, the heart to be right. If the spring is contaminated the water will be impure. No matter how clear it may look. We need people in Washington today who are more concerned with the future of America than the next election. You and I need to be more concerned with doing what's right than in filling our pockets with money. All of our efforts count for nothing unless we let God clean up our hearts, the source of all good conduct and action.

"IV. Trust In God.

"Finally we must learn to trust in God and Heaven securely. When we have done our best we can leave the rest to God. God is not dead. When we live and fight for what is right, God fights with us.

Russia Creates Another Crisis In Laos Parley

GENEVA (UPI)—Today's meeting of the 14-nation conference on Laos was postponed suddenly and without explanation "for at least one or two days."

A Russian spokesman made the announcement not long after the Soviet and British co-chairmen had summoned the delegates to resume their plenary sessions this afternoon after four days of inactivity because of a deadlock over procedure.

The blocking move by Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Georgi Pushkin, now in charge here for the Russians, plunged the confused and chaotic conference into a new crisis.

It was all the more surprising since Pushkin and Britain's Malcolm Macdonald, the co-chairmen, had conferred by telephone this morning and agreed to hold the first session since last Wednesday.

There still was no indication the conference could come out of its confusion. It appeared so close to collapse that President Kennedy and Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev may have to try salvaging it at their summit meeting in Vienna this weekend.

Russia has refused to allow new instructions to be sent to the International Control Commission on Laos, severely handicapping the ICC's efforts to check and control the cease-fire.

The West wants to break up into working committees but the Communists, particularly the Chinese Reds, want to keep the plenary sessions going where their propaganda would be most effective.

Dear Abby... Teen-Age Son To Secretive!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have a 15-year-old son I am having trouble with. He keeps his bedroom door locked at all times, and does not let me in there alone to clean his room. I have to wait until he comes home from school to make his bed so he can go in with me and watch me.

He says he doesn't want anyone monkeying around in his drawers. I wouldn't look in his drawers anyway.

I haven't been able to give his room a thorough cleaning in over a year. Do all teen-agers go through a stage like this? How can I get him to change his attitude?

and ask him if it is legal in this country.

DEAR ABBY: What do you do when you must attend a social function, and proud parents TRAP everyone into watching their offspring perform for two solid hours? Send help fast! Another one of those evenings is coming up, and I don't think I can stand it.

NAUSEATED RELATIVE
DEAR NAUSEATED: If you MUST attend such a function, just grin and bear the boredom.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MUSIC LOVER: Promise him anything—but give him an arpeggio.

LOCKED OUT
DEAR LOCKED: If you are taking "olders" from your 15-year-old son, prepare yourself for some king-sized headaches in the future. All teen-agers like (and deserve) some privacy, but your son has gone overboard. It is your duty as the mother of a minor to find out what he is going to such extremes to hide.

DEAR ABBY: I will get right to the point. My boy friend and I drove over the border to Mexico to get married. We didn't have any blood tests or anything. We went to a place and signed our names in a book, and the man there asked us our parents' names, occupations, ages and so forth. Then he typed out a so-called "license." That was all there was to it. It didn't seem like much of a wedding ceremony to me. I want to know if this was a legal marriage. We don't want to get married out loud yet because of financial reasons.

MARRIED OR NOT?
DEAR MARRIED OR NOT: Take the "license" to an attorney

Yes, Abby will answer your letter personally if you write to ABBY, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif., and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Altrusa Girls Tell Plans At Club Dinner

Altrusans shared high school graduation time with its Girls-of-the-Month at a dinner meeting held Monday evening in the Cibola Room of the Coronado Inn.

Special guests were Miss Karen McCarthy, recipient of the Altrusa Club Scholarship; Miss Sue Barnett, recipient of the Inez Carter Altrusa Club Scholarship; Miss Linda Gorman, Girl of the Month for September; Miss Mary Helen Ayres, October Girl; and Miss Ann Hutchens, November Girl. Unable to be present because of semester examinations and other activities were Misses Geisla-Roeper, December; Barbara Henry, February; Darla Edwards, March and Carolyn Tension April. The girls shared with Altrusans their plans for the future.

Miss Gorman, who was awarded the Woman's Society of Christian Service scholarship from the First Methodist Church, plans to attend McMurry College, where she plans to major in the religious field. Miss Hutchens plans to enter Hardin Simmons, where she will major in music. Miss Ayres plans to follow the family tradition of attending Texas Technological College, where she will major in Business Administration.

Miss McCarthy, in an appreciation speech for the scholarship award, stated that she had attended the Career Clinic for the past three years and each year had gone into the workshop planned for future airline hostesses, but she had decided to "give up her dream" and attend Texas Women's University, where she had studied to become an accountant.

Miss Barnett, after expressing appreciation for her scholarship, stated that she plans to go to Texas Tech, where she will continue her study of art.

Mrs. Thelma Bray, member of the vocational committee, introduced the program. Mrs. Bray also told the group that the final classes in charm, which the committee has been conducting for Pampa Junior High girls, held its final class on Monday with Mrs. N. J. Ellis conducting a class in costume co-ordinating. Mrs. Bray announced that in a previous class, Mrs. Rufe Jordan had discussed "Good Manners and Table Etiquette".

During the business meeting, conducted by Mrs. Clyde Vanderberg, members approved the suggestion to hold the July meeting on the fifth Monday, July 31, in stead of the fourth in order that delegates to the International Convention, which will be held in Denver, may give their reports immediately upon their return.

Discussion was held relative to the proposed changes in the district's by-laws, which will come up for vote at the Denver convention and voting delegates to the convention were instructed by members how to vote.

Mrs. Clay Coston was winner of the door prize.

Altrusans welcomed back Mrs. Vera Lard and Mrs. Ruth Sewell, who have been touring Europe and Mrs. Louise Sewell, who has just returned from Hawaii. They also bid a bon voyage to Mrs. Fidelia Yoder, who left Tuesday for a summerlength trip to Europe.

During the business meeting, Mrs. Grant Anderson read a poem written by Miss Linda Worley, junior high school student, which had been dedicated to Mrs. Inez Carter.

Attending the meeting, in addition to those previously mentioned were Mmes. E. O. Etheredge, Frank W. Shotwell, Dell Ford, L. L. Harkins, Donna Cornutt, W. F. Yeager, E. M. Davies Ideally Fitted To Be First 16-Foot Vaulter: Says Coach

By HARRY GRAYSON

Newspaper Enterprise Sports Ed.

For some strange reason, track and field is grossly under-publicized in most sections of this country.

For example, George Davies of Oklahoma State was unknown off his home grounds when he rocketed into world prominence by hoisting himself 15 feet 10 1/4 inches to break the world pole vault record in the Big Eight Conference Championships in Boulder.

GEORGE DAVIES
... "A couple of inches away"

And Davies, a 20-year-old sophomore, is just starting. It is significant that at six-three and 190 pounds, he is built along the general lines of Don Bragg, whose mark he cracked. The taller athletes get the highest reach on the pole.

"Davies is ideally fitted physically and has the right temperament to be the first to achieve the 16-foot plateau," says Coach Ralph Higgins.

Giving you a rough idea of how extraordinary this would be is the fact that for years Cornelius Warmdam was the only one who had ever done more than 15 feet. And finely conditioned young men have been throwing themselves into the air on a pole since the Ancient Romans.

Young Davies has the right approach to go on up.

"Coach says somebody will do it," he says. "We mustn't think of it as impossible and make a psychological barrier out of it. It's just a couple of inches away now."

Could the thin six of Colorado have had anything to do with shooting Davies into the ozone?

"Certainly could," says Dan Ferris, honorary secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union and foremost authority on the scantyclads. "Our national meet was held on the same field a couple of years ago and five guys vaulted more than 15 feet."

Bragg says the popular fiberglass pole used by Davies could have accounted for as much as six inches. Villanova's Tarzan employed an aluminum pole last July when he soared 15-9/4. He urges the International Federation to standardize the pole.

Although Davies was unheralded before his epic feat, Higgins has been predicting a world mark for the Phoenix lad since the season's start. Davies has been vaulting TROUBLE, NOT TEMPER — When Joe Grace, Jr. wrapped his No. 7 iron around a tree trunk on the 13th hole on the Tam O'Shanter course in Detroit, he wasn't indulging in a temper tantrum. The amateur tried to hit from behind the small fir. He took a bogey 5, but a 74 qualified him for the sectional trials for the United States Open to be held at the nearby Oakland Hills Country Club June 15-17.

Colts Rally In 8th Stymied By Brown

By JIM EASTERWOOD
Daily News Sports Editor

The craggy-faced man dressed in sport shirt and slacks wore a pleased expression on his face as he watched the game below.

"Two of the best semi-pro teams you'll find in the Panhandle," he commented.

W. A. Shufelberger, secretary of the rapidly expanding Tri-State semi-pro baseball league, was here in Pampa Sunday to see the Pampa Optimist Colts host the Woodward, Okla., nine in an exhibition game at Optimist Park.

Woodward, their team well-stocked with Oklahoma college and schoolboy stars, won the nine-inning affair, 11-6.

"Both teams have really improved over last year," Shufelberger continued. Pampa seems to have a lot more confidence and the year's experience has really helped them."

Shufelberger, who operates out of Liberal, Kansas, was just as enthusiastic about the other four Tri-State clubs: Borger, Amarillo, Spearman and the top notch Liberal team.

"I've covered a lot of miles in scouting ballplayers," Shufelberger pointed out, and the Panhandle has the best crop of outstanding young players that I've seen."

Sunday's game proved it. The Colts fielding practically an entire Ex-Pampa High School lineup, were victimized primarily by two things here Sunday afternoon: (1) The relief pitching of versatile Jim Brown and (2) the home run bats of the Oklahoma nine.

Brown, in relief of Sam West, slammed the door shut on the Colts hitters over the last two and two-thirds innings, allowing no hits. Then Bud Boyd and James Suiter, picking on Colts reliever Nick Curtis, each pounded eight inning round-trippers to put the game out of the reach of the clanking Colts, who had stamped back with four runs, in the bottom of the seventh to narrow the gap to 8-5.

The Woodward team, behind the steady pitching of fireballing southpaw Dick West, had jumped off to a quick 7-0 margin after three innings of play to give all indications they might turn the game into a rout.

Kippy Williams, who was tagged with the loss, deserved a better fate at the hands of his fans. Only two of the seven runs he surrendered were earned, as the Colts juggled the horsehide like a hot potato in the first four frames.

Nick Curtis, a righty, relieved Williams in the fifth was pounded for four runs and six hits before Newt Secrest, co-manager of the team with Henry Stephens, mopped up the last 1-3 innings. Secrest pitched creditably, allowing no runs and no hits.

The Colts first two runs — which whittled the Oklahoma team's lead to 7-2 — came with two out in the last of the fourth, Leftfielder Roy Don Stephens, 2-for-3 for the night, doubled home Ken Parker (who had singled) and then rode home on catcher Raymond Dean's booming shot to left center.

West, who received credit for the win, got one of these runs back himself the next inning with a line drive that barely cleared the right field wall.

And that was all the scoring until the Optimists ignited a rally in the seventh that had the winners hanging on the ropes, just ready for the knockout punch.

With four runs in (scored on five hits and a error), the Colts had runners on second and third with one out. Then, over from first base came Mr. Brown, and the aspirin throwing outfielder (his regular position) did things up brown. He got pinchhitter Joe (Jolting Joe) Fortin swinging and then caught Dean looking on a called third strike.

And that proved to be it for the battling Colts: In the eighth, Boyd selected one of Curtis's high hard ones for a ride over the center-field fence and Suiter followed suit (no pun intended) with a blast over the right field sector to ice it up.

Three walks and an impromptu breeze which suddenly blew up between Brown the last two frames, but then its rumored he has a habit of walking the base full and then whiffing the side, which he almost did.

Ford's Pressure Put Nips Palmer In Playoff

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Doug Ford beat both a mental and physical opponent in overtime to successfully defend a golf championship for the first time in his career as a golf pro and win $9,000 in the Speedway Open tournament.

Ford dropped a birdie putt from 12 feet on the second extra hole to defeat Arnold Palmer, and capture the first prize.

But in post-mortem discussion, Ford confessed he wasn't exactly confident he could win when the two of them teed off on the playoff.

"He was driving," he said. "After all, he'd just sunk a 30 foot putt for an eagle to get into the thing. I had thought that all I had to beat was Gary Player, and if there was any playoff, it'd be against him. Not against Palmer. And then here he is."

Ford came to the last hole knowing that Player, the leading money winner from South Africa, had finished his 72-hole test with 274, 10 under par. He knew that he needed a birdie to win and he thought he could get it.

"But I overlooked the fact that Palmer never gives up," he said. "I knew he could win with an eagle, and I knew he could get to the green in two to have a chance for one. But I didn't expect him to get it. So when he did, and I had to play him, I knew he thought he would win."

They played the first extra hole in par, but on the second, Ford drove with a 3 iron even though Palmer used a driver, and they were even going to the green.

Then Ford put in the clincher. Twelve feet from the pin, he rammed the putt home. That put the pressure on Palmer, and he made a valiant try, but his effort rolled off to the right and stopped inches short.

Tension Grips Drivers On Eve Of '500' Race

INDIANAPOLIS Ind. (UPI) — The tension of inactivity gripped the Speedway today with cars and drivers scheduled to start Tuesday's golden anniversary 500-mile auto race bared by a second straight day of enforced idleness.

The last running allowed on the track was Saturday morning when 32 of the 33 starting cars took full advantage of two hours permitted for all out speed dashes to test carburetion and try to solve pit problems of refueling and tire changing.

Sunday not a motor was started, though mechanics on many of the glistening multi-colored cars re-checked again and again some of the myriad adjustments to be made in the expensive speed vehicles.

Today's program called for more mechanical tests, all in the garages in which the cars are housed, plus the usual drivers' meeting at which the starting pilots will be briefed on the rules and get the usual warning that carelessness can cost lives.

and fair skies. Such conditions usually take less out of both drivers and cars than the blazing heat and sun which usually hits the track on Memorial Day.

KOOKIE BAKER RACES
CHICAGO (UPI) — Thomas Cukale Jr., 19, who wrecked his car at the end of a five-mile chase by 22 squad cars at up to 110 miles per hour, told police it was only a trial run.

Cukale, a baker, said he "just wanted to give you guys a free ride. I'm going to go out and get myself another car and do it all over again."

Record Total Of 37 Homers Hit Sunday

By FRED DOWN
United Press International

Major league big guns fired a record salvo of home runs Sunday to mark the approach of the pennant races' Memorial Day surpassing the previous record of milestone.

All told, there were 37 homers, 34 for a schedule of 11 games, to excite the 154,756 fans who turned out for the pre-holiday action.

And when it was all over the Detroit Tigers and San Francisco Giants were virtually occupying first place on the night of May 30—a fact which history says gives them a better-than-even chance to meet in the World Series next October.

No less than 26 homers were hit in seven American League games and another 11 were hit in four National League contests as the big men with the long, tapered bats enjoyed a field day. There were 10 homers hit during the Cleveland-Kansas City double-header and another nine belted during the Chicago-New York bargain bill. Yet, with it all, there were a few pitchers who came out relatively unscathed.

When the last baseball flew out of sight, here's how the big league picture shaped up: The Tigers, powered by three homers, walloped the Los Angeles Angels, 9-4, and took a 3 1/2-game lead in the American League. They're assured of leading the league the night of May 30 no matter what happens in the next 48 hours.

The Giants overcame Ernie Banks' grand slam homer to beat the Chicago Cubs, 6-5, and now lead the National League by 2 1/2 games. They'll have at least a share of first place Tuesday night if they don't blow three games in 36 hours to the Cincinnati Reds.

The New York Yankees scored a 5-3 victory after losing, 14-9, to the Chicago White Sox; the Cleveland Indians beat the Kansas City Athletics, 9-1, and then lost, 8-4; the Washington Senators topped the Minnesota Twins, 6-4, and the Boston Red Sox defeated the Baltimore Orioles, 5-0, in other AL games.

In the National League, the Los Angeles Dodgers shaded the Milwaukee Braves, 4-3, the Cincinnati Reds downed the Philadelphia Phillies, 4-2, and the St. Louis Cardinals whipped the world champion Pittsburgh Pirates, 8-4.

Charlie Maxwell, Norm Cash and Dick Brown hit homers to offset round-trippers by Earl Averill and Ken Hunt and enable Detroit's Jim Bunning to win his third game. The Tigers won the game with a four-run eighth-inning rally featured by the homers by Cash and Brown and climaxed when relief pitcher Johnny James of the Angels walked three straight batters to force in a run.

Jose Pagan's ninth-inning single drove in the winning run for the Giants, who handed the Cubs their seventh consecutive defeat. The beneficiary was Stu Miller, who yielded a ninth-inning homer to Ed Bouchee but nevertheless picked up his third win of the season.

Home runs by Al Smith, Wes Covington and Floyd Robinson paced the White Sox to their opening game victory that ended a six-game losing streak but the Yankees split the double-header behind Jim Coates' six innings of shutout relief and a homer by Roger Maris. Covington and pinch-hitter Bob Cerv hit grand slams in the first game and Robinson also drove in four runs. Bill Skowron singled home the decisive run in the nightcap.

Homers by Vic Powers and Johnny Romano paced the Indians to their first-game victory, behind Gary Bell's six hitter, but the Athletics squared matters in the nightcap on the wings of round-trippers by Leo Posada, Dick Howser, Norm Siebern and Joe Pignatano. Norm Bass spun a six-hitter, including homers by Romano, Woodie Held and Jimmy Piersall, to win his third game for Kansas City in the nightcap.

Gene Green's two-run homer helped the Senators complete a three-game sweep of the Twins with Marty Kutyna receiving credit for his third straight win. Harmon Killebrew homered for the Twins.

Don Schwall turned in the best pitching effort of the day with a seven-hitter embellished by eight strikeouts for the Red Sox. Frank Malzone's three run fourth-inning homer was the big blow of the game as "hard luck" Jack Fisher suffered his sixth loss for the Orioles.

Dick Farrell pitched six innings of shutout relief for the Dodgers, who beat Lew Burdette for the ninth time at Milwaukee since July, 1958. Hank Aaron drove in all the Braves' runs with a home-run and a double but the game-winning blow was a fourth-inning single by Maury Wills.

Vada Pinson hit a pair of two-run homers and Bob Purkey pitched an eight-inning for the Reds, who dealt Frank Sullivan his fifth defeat. Johnny Callison and Frank Herrera had two hits each for the Phillies.

Solon Often Directs Pointed Questions To U.S. Employees

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A group of new State Department officials recently got their opportunity to sample the interrogatory style of Rep. John J. Rooney.

Rooney, a New York Democrat, wears the title of chairman of the House Subcommittee on State Department Appropriations. It would, however, be more descriptive, or at least more picturesque, to call him a one-man obstacle course.

Witnesses schooled in the niceties and circumlocutions of diplomacy must get quite a shock the first time they try to get a budget past the subcommittee and find themselves being roweled by Rooney.

Neither can they grasp why someone who took German lessons would be sent to such places as Australia, Turkey, the Philippines and Ireland.

Two Boys Found Dead In Ravine

EL PASO, Tex. (UPI)—Two nine-year-old boys missing since they left their homes May 18 were found dead Saturday in a ravine about 100 feet from the top of Mount Franklin overlooking El Paso.

Pollack and other department officials conceded it was not always possible to assign a foreign service officer to a post where he could use his language training. But they contended that the percentage of direct hits is increasing.

Paid Peeping Toms

The man who has been trying to think of some method of keeping his wife's spending under control when they take that trip to Europe this summer has been given a very powerful assist by the Internal Revenue Service. The IRS comprises the boys who keep a cold and steady eye on your federal income tax returns, and they are forever thinking up new methods of operation that inhibit people against spending their money for anything beyond the necessities and luxuries that, for the wealthy, are commonplace. Few people can afford, after taxes, to live in anything approaching flamboyant style anymore. And of those who can, there aren't many who do, because the Great White Father is almost certain to feel that the money spent rightfully belongs to him, and he sets some very skillfully placed traps to get it. Now, according to Insider's Newsletter, the IRS has set a booby trap in practically every jewelry, fur and antique shop in Europe. Names of every big spender are expected to be checked through United States tax authorities, and those whose reported income does not jibe with their mode of travel will be kept under surveillance during their entire trip. The new quiet crackdown will go so far as to include general income scrutiny of all tourists traveling in high style," according to the Newsletter. "To beef-up, custom' tax enforcement, there has been a heavy recruitment of tipsters posted in European luxury stores. Tipsters receive 25 per cent of any fine imposed on a violator they report. "... It is safe to assume that every high price shop has a customs tipster on the premises, probably the person who waits on you," the Newsletter advised. "It is not enough to say, 'those who are honest have nothing to worry about.' Everybody can think of a case in which a taxpayer has been put to considerable expense in proving his honesty. And everybody knows that the tax laws are so complex that what is admitted as being perfectly legal - and, therefore, 'honest' - in one locality may be declared illegal and 'dishonest' in another. And besides that, free people have a right to expect some privacy. It's supposed to be only in Communist countries that that is forbidden.

The Long View

The man who is closest to the right, is always he who takes the longest view. Truth is always tested in the future by measurements discovered in the past.

The Right To Be Alone

We firmly believe in the right of the public to be informed. We could hardly devote our energies to a newspaper if we did not support this view. But there is a theme which should be developed in relation to the right of the public to know; and that is the right of the individual NOT to tell. So long as newspapers perform their proper function they will continue to inquire, to probe, to ask questions, to seek for information, just as quickly as a newspaper sides with the government at any level and begins to operate as though it were an extension of government, then the newspaper would be in a position of assisting in depriving a man of the right to say, "No comment." We have, thru the years, supported the right of a salesman to talk to a potential customer and seek to offer or demonstrate his wares. Equally, we support the right of the prospective customer to refuse utterly to buy or even to devote his time to watching the demonstration or looking over the wares. Freedom is a two-way street or it does not exist. And we are for freedom on both sides of every street. Modern communication media frequently are criticized because these marvelous devices facilitate our ability to learn and to inform others. But the ability to find out and to disseminate what has been found out, must never be accompanied by force. The more marvelous our communication devices become, the more it behooves us to abandon governmental compulsion at any and all levels possible. Ayn Rand has suggested that the love toward civilization is the love toward privacy. We are inclined to agree. And this is true: the great numbers of people do not seem to understand the value of being alone. Today, thanks to electronic equipment, certain data concerning you and your habits can be filed in the hope that this will facilitate future planning, future marketing methods, future better living. We do not object, so long as the individual retains his fundamental right not to join in and become a statistic.

Hankering

By HENRY McLEMORE

CAP D'ANTIBES, FRANCE - The International Set dresses as if it were the missionary barrel set. The main thing to remember, when visiting one of the Set's lounging places, is to leave all your good clothes at home and bring the stuff you had saved to contribute to the next rummage sale. Then you will blend in with the Set and be indistinguishable from an oil tanker tycoon, a producer, a best-selling novelist, and a movie queen.

The truth is, you wouldn't be far from right if you left ALL your clothes home, good and bad, and arrived au naturel, for if there is one thing the members of the Set like to do, it is to show their skin.

They are, let us say, pore proud. The men wander around in fewer clothes than a shipwrecked sailor, and the womenfolk wear clothes cut from patterns made of postage stamps. If they paid for their clothes by the yard, the women could buy a year's supply for $1.35, could buy a year's supply for $1.35.

When the men and women do clothe themselves a bit, they wear the most beat-up garments imaginable. Sweaters are faded and worn, trousers beginning to tatter, and shoes, if any, long past aid from the cobbler. I am as out of place here, sartorially, as a three-star general at a pacifists' rally. My things are pressed, and have buttons and buttons. My shoes are shined, the spots have been removed from my ties, and I even have a hat. And my bathing trunks actually are trunks, not a pair of blue jeans with the legs cut off and half the seat out.

When I take a stroll I attract attention, just as a man from Mars would. When I think of the old stuff I left hanging in the closet, and tucked away in the bottom drawers, I could kick myself.

I am also a trifle on the pale side to look at home. The hallmark of the International Set is a tan. Not an average tan, but a tan that is just a few seconds away from what tanners do to hides. The International Set follows the sun. They are never away from it. They follow it to Egypt, to Florida, to the North Pole if need be.

The International Set is athletic. All the members are strong swimmers. They have to be, for their yachts are usually anchored well off shore and to get back aboard in time for cocktails all have developed a strong crawl. I made a big mistake soon after getting here. I ate my lunch indoors. This marked me as an eccentric right away. The International Set likes to eat its meals under a sun strong enough to freeze a hard roll and tan a meringue glaze. To eat in the shade, or inside a room, is for those who, like myself, wear a tie and shoes with laces.

I am keeping pretty well to myself, and plan to do so until my clothes get a lot shabbier. I roll on the floor to help them along, and figure that in a week, provided I don't shave in the meantime, I'll be able to get on the outermost fringe of the Set without attracting too much attention.

I hope so, for one of my ambitions is to look like, and be accepted, as an International Playboy, if only for a minute or two. If you have an old shirt you don't want, or a worn-out pair of sneakers, send them along to me here, care of General Delivery.

Kennedy is athletic. Not long ago Marlon Brando insisted on a change in his contract which cost him $10 million but preserved his right to privacy. He says: "It's worth that - and a lot more."

Everywhere people are hurrying from urban centers to find some little cottage or Shangri la high up on a slope or in the deep woods where the INDIVIDUAL can still be himself without the eyes of the curious or the ears of the eavesdropper marring his solitude. As a matter of fact, unwarranted intrusion robs a man, not only of his right to be himself and to be alone, it will ultimately rob him of his freedom.

Judge Learned Hand once prophesied... "The loss of privacy is the opposite process of individualization. The herd regains its ancient and evil primacy... Men are lulled into the belief that because they are severally less subject to violence, they are more safe... It is an illusion. Our security has actually diminished as the demands have become more exacting... Anne Morrow Lindbergh, in her book "A Gift From the Sea," marvels at this condition. "What a commentary on our civilization, when being alone is considered suspect, when one has to apologize for it, make excuses, hide the fact that one practices it - like a secret vice."

Social psychologists, among others, have reasoned that the quickest way to weaken a man, and therefore his nation, is to rob him slowly, of his right to be alone. It is only in solitude that man can attain his greatest dignity and peace.

How Many Tractors Am I Bid?

ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON - President Kennedy is preparing a stupendous $33 billion 10-year national space program. Scheduled to be made public in June, the massive new program has a goal to overtake Russia in the exploitation of outer space including the first manned flight to the moon. The President's program calls for the boosting of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's budget to $2.6 billion for the fiscal year starting July 1, 1962 or approximately double the $1,376,900,000 that the House approved this week. The plan provides for the launching of a billion dollar development program of the nuclear rocket Rover for use in space flight by 1967, a tremendous speed-up in the development of the giant Saturn rocket booster, and the starting of a new multimillion dollar solid fuel rocket booster program. Spending is scheduled to reach $3 billion in the fiscal year starting July 1, 1963, and will stay at that peak level during the remaining eight years of the program. The President gave these and other still secret details of the new long-range space program to Representative Overton Brooks, D-La., chairman of the House Space Committee, at a private White House briefing.

The President told Brooks that he and Vice President Johnson, chairman of the National Space Council, were still studying a request by NASA for an extra $509 million in funds for the fiscal year starting July 1. Approval of these funds, according to the President, hinges on whether Space Administrator James Webb can show that the extra half billion dollars can be "usefully spent" during the next 12 months to speed up the program. Budget Bureau officials are opposing the increase now on the grounds that the Space Agency can't use such a tremendous hike in funds until next year.

NUCLEAR DECISIONS - In addition to launching the development of the nuclear power rocket Rover, the President made another far-reaching policy decision on the use of nuclear power in the space program. He approved the use of a nuclear power unit, known as Snap 3, in satellites. Technically, the decision is tremendously important for the future of the space program. The small nuclear power unit offers a solution to the critical problem of providing power for operating satellite radios and instruments over a long period.

In making his decision, the President overrode strong objections by the State Department. Top aides of Secretary Rusk warned of possible adverse world opinion if U.S. put radioactive material in space and by an accident the material lands on foreign soil. Atomic Energy Commission and Space Agency officials recommended that the nuclear power unit be used in experimental satellites. They took the position that the odds were at least ten thousand to one against any accident occurring. OTTAWA (UPI) - Liberal member of Parliament Paul Martin Thursday accused Prime Minister John Diefenbaker of "putting a gun to the opposition's head" to railroad measures through Parliament.

Looking Sideways

By WHITNEY BOLTON

NEW YORK, N.Y. - Once upon a time, nettled and grveled by the surly, officious manners of the United States Customs officers at Laredo, Tex., and I say officers because at least two were involved in the deal, I did a piece suggesting that better manners and less curtness might create a better impression both on Americans returning home and aliens making a visit to us. It is not even remotely likely that this fugitive column caused a top-to-bottom shake-up in the Custom service, but what happened at Idlewild Airport in New York, after jetting in from Germany, indicates that at least at Idlewild things are different. Courtesy is king and aliens, as a result, get a good impression of our country.

While in Germany, Heien Hayes, the actress, asked me to bring back for her two fragile pieces which she feared to keep moving during the six weeks remaining of the Theater Guild American Repertory Company tour of Europe. One was a piece of Nymphenburg porcelain in a fitted blue box with hollows and curves to hold the piece immobile and the other was a small ancient wine glass about 2,600 years old. The Nymphenburg was a gift to her from the mayor of Dusseldorf, the wine glass from the American ambassador in Lebanon. I asked her to write a short note explaining to Customs that she had asked me to bring these objects in for her, and why, which she did. The Nymphenburg is a pure white piece of porcelain statuary, a medieval knight on a horse, and beautiful.

Having shown to the Health Service that I was well vaccinated and having got my bags onto a shelf in front of a Customs officer, I said: "I have a small complication that has nothing to do with my luggage." I gave him Miss Hayes' letter and opened the statuary box. Then I opened the fruitwood box containing the ancient and horribly "glitter" wine glass. He looked at both, read the letter carefully, smiled and said: "Well, now, let's erase half of the problem. The glass is so ancient it is in the antique realm and of museum value. No duty. But I'm afraid there will be on the porcelain, I'll look."

NEW FRONTIERS - A crack British Army team is coming to the U.S. next month to advise the U.S. military leaders on anti-guerrilla warfare. The group will include veterans of the 10-year anti-guerrilla war in Malaya. Arrangements are also being made to train several hundred U.S. soldiers at Britain's anti-guerrilla warfare school in Malaya. The Central Intelligence Agency believes that the Kremlin is doing its best to wreck the nuclear-ban talks at Geneva in order to test a new anti-missile "missile" above the ground. By forcing the U.S. to walk out of the conference, the Kremlin would blame the U.S. for killing the self-imposed ban and would be free to set off the new explosion. President Kennedy has informed Democratic Congressional leaders that he will let them know next week his opinion on whether Congress should set up a committee to supervise the Central Intelligence Agency. If the President is not opposed, a watch-dog committee will be established this year. As a senator, the President voted for such a committee.

He consulted a thick book, frowned to himself, then said: "I'm afraid so. It's new, and being a gift doesn't excuse it. We'll have to guess at valuation - say about $30. It could be more. A similar piece of the same work came through here for Mayor Wagner yesterday and we put that at $50. This one seems a mile smaller, so let's say $30. The duty apparently is about 45 per cent, but I'd rather consult my superior."

His superior was a man of great charm and calm, looked at the piece and said "Yes, it is dutiable, unfortunately. It should come in at 45 per cent of value but I think there is a 15 per cent thing that just might cover and save you or Miss Hayes a little money. Also, I'd say the value is just about $30, but I'd almost be sure it's more than that. In any case, let's call it $30 and work from there."

They studied the book and then reluctantly shook their heads. "No, the 15 per cent thing doesn't cover. It's 45 per cent, all right, is that agreeable to you?"

I said, of course it was, and also I was pretty sure you could not buy such a piece for $30. They said, well $30 was a nice figure. They'd let it stand. So I gave them $13.50 and they gave me a receipt and I said: "Now, as to my bags here, I'll open them."

"Oh, no, they said. 'We've used a lot of time here on this statuary. In Germany, we've no days? You don't look criminal or like a smuggler. Anything else dutiable?'"

I said, no, all that I had purchased totaled less than my allowed $200 or under 12 days and that it was all on the declaration form. They looked at the form, smiled and waved me on. It was a correct procedure from

Pegler Says:

FDR Introduced Fascism Under Democratic Party

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Supposing that the John Birch Society is of Fascist character, how could the Democratic party and its rag-tag adherents object to it on that ground? I ask this rhetorical question to get at the fact that the Democratic party, under Roosevelt, actually introduced Fascism early in the New Deal with special reference to the National Recovery Administration under the silly sign of the Blue Eagle. And that Fascism continues in the Kennedy administration under the authority of the unions.

The Democrats never have been able to govern according to the Constitution. Wilson had to have "war powers" and soon after Roosevelt took the chair in 1933 we began to get straight Fascism from him and his wife.

Some publishers also went loco and stepped out in the hysterical NRA parades, the gaudiest of all being held along Fifth Avenue in New York. They were so scared of the crowd-sounds of a few malcontents, whipped up by the Communists, that they repudiated reason and tried to solve a political problem by emotional frenzy.

Again I hear the mutter, "there he goes on Roosevelt again," but I still remind you that this year we are celebrating the centenary of the Civil War and substituting surmise and guess for fact in wide swipes of that ugly panorama simply because in those postwar days as in these, people got sick of the subject. Thus they wiped out great areas of historic truth by refusing to tolerate recitals of undisclosed facts.

I have the least possible traffic with educators, a dishonest element on the whole, but I take it for granted that none of the high school and college classes of the last 15 years got even a smattering of the reality of Fascism in the United States according to F. D. Roosevelt. Our pedagogues have made him a holy hahmat.

Eighty-five years hence, library moles will be pounding out inaccurate histories of the first and second New Deals and the union rackets which were Roosevelt's version of Hitler's brown shirts. These terrorists whipped through the streets of Detroit and Flint in command cars wearing brassards and fore-and-aft caps adapted from the American Legion, and there are miles of old film in the cans showing them kicking American workers to bloody pulp under the eyes of the cops, and even the Michigan National Guard, to make their join unions.

Walter and Victor Reuther were field officers of one of these surreptitious armies in a war against a rival faction and the fighting in the streets bore a strong resemblance to the tumult in Berlin in 1918 and 1919 when the Communists almost delivered Germany to Soviet Russia.

We never did get rid of this Fascism or, preferably, Nazism which was a telescoped version of the phrase National Socialism. Our people were delivered by the million into the compounds of the or curtness, they were pleasant and cooperative at all times. I felt good. As I left I heard the superior say to a German woman behind me: "We are sorry to have delayed you, madam. It was unavoidable."

intelligence work in atomic energy. They hope to have the plan ready for President Kennedy to present to Prime Minister Macmillan when the two Western Leaders confer in Europe next week. The decision to push for the joint-board came after key members of the Senate-Atomic Committee warned the White House that if the British didn't take steps to tighten up their security the committee might vote to end the sharing of nuclear secrets.

Today is Monday May 29 the 149th day of the year with 216 more in 1961. The moon is full. The morning stars are Jupiter Saturn and Venus. The evening stars are Mars and Mercury.

On this day in history: In 1453 Constantinople the capital of the Byzantine Empire was captured by the Turks. Some historians say this marks the end of the Middle Ages. In 1736 American patriot and orator Patrick Henry was born. In 1917 35th U.S. President John Fitzgerald Kennedy was born. In 1953 Edmond Hillary and Tensing Norqay a Nepalese tribesman became the first persons in history to reach the top of the world's highest mountain Mount Everest.
