Dream Ship Visioned for Service Between U. S. and Europe

Fast as a speedboat, a quarter of a mile long, accommodating 7000 passengers, capable of making the round-trip to Europe in a week—there are specifications for the superliner shown above in an artist's drawing made from the plans now being studied by the U. S. department of commerce. Representing the combined experience of marine, automotive, aviation and naval designers, the ship was designed primarily to be a self-supporting naval vessel, which, in time of war, would be used as transport and airplane carrier. An airplane landing area 150 by 150 feet is provided on the clear top deck. Such a ship would be far the largest afloat and, completely streamlined, would be capable of nearly 50-miles-an-hour speed. It could operate on a $60 fare. That rate, however, would not include meals, as is customary on present-day liners. Low price—cafeteria and restaurants would be provided to suit passengers' purses.

Morgan Gave Assurance France And England Wouldn't Go Back On Debt

Testimony Is Heard In Munitions Probe

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (AP)—Evidence that some American munitions makers pledged themselves to fill British orders regardless of United States needs was introduced in a senate investigation today amid protests by J. P. Morgan that his banking house was "not to blame."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (AP)—Assurances which J. P. Morgan gave in 1915 that France and England could never afford to go back on their debts in this country were brought to light today in the senate investigation of war-time finance. With the elderly banker steadfastly denying that booming war trade led the United States into the world conflict, an investigator suddenly questioned the fairness of methods used in marketing a $500,000,000 issue of British and French bonds here.

Morgan termed his company's efforts for the bonds an "educational campaign" and insisted it was conducted properly.

A speech he delivered to the syndicate which floated the bonds was placed in evidence.

"The bond being the only external debt of the two countries (France and England) is substantially, as is always understood with external debts in countries that make them, the first charge on the revenues of the country," the Morgan speech said.

"It is absolutely imperative for the country to make good the external bonds, no matter what arrangements it has to make as to internal affairs, because it may want to come again, and without incurring the worst form of bankruptcy and disgrace, it can not abandon its external debts; not that there is any thought of doing so or of coming again."

"Is that your belief now?" asked Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.). "It was my belief then and it is now," the witness replied firmly.

WOMAN IS SHERIFF

HEREFORD, Jan. 13 (AP)—Mrs. John Miller today had been appointed sheriff of Deaf Smith county to fill the unexpired term of her husband, who was killed in an automobile accident near Canyon last Monday. Mrs. Miller said J. M. Murcherson and J. O. Newell would continue to serve as deputies.

YOUTHS ASKED TO SIGN UP FOR JOBS IN PARKS

Registration at NRS Office in City Hall Begins

Jobless youths of Gray, Ochiltree, Potter, and Wheeler counties are being asked to register at NRS offices to obtain employment on highway park projects. It is proposed to give work to 4,475 youths in Texas within the next 10 days as part of the NYA movement. Projects call for an expenditure of $176,540, or a little more than $1,650 for each park. Youths selected will draw from $1.06 to $4.32 for each day worked, being paid at the same wage scale as adults for similar work. They cannot work more than 46 hours in any one month. Only youths from the relief families who are registered with NRS are eligible. Their wages will be in addition to that of the security wage for the head of the family.

About 20,000 youths already are employed in high school, college, and WPA work. The new projects may be still further supplemented. All eligible youths of this county are urged to register at once at the NRS office in the city hall.

SCOUTMASTERS, COMMITTEEMEN WILL HOLD MEETINGS TONIGHT

Two Boy Scout meetings of interest will be held here this evening. The first will be the monthly round-table gathering for scoutmasters and committeemen, and will be held at the Sam Houston school as a covered dish luncheon, with wives of the men serving the meal. The second will be the executive board meeting of the Adobe Walls council. The round-table will meet at 6:30 p. m. and the executive board at 7:30 p. m. The latter at the city hall headquarters of the Boy Scouts. Scoutmasters will plan their observations of Boy Scout week, February 7-13, while the board will talk finances and general plans.

DETROIT GIRL 'IS SLAIN BY GOD'S POWER'

Neighbors Pray for Young Girl Now in Trance-Like Religious Sleep

DETROIT, Jan. 13 (AP)—Members of the "full salvation union" religious sect, kept up almost unbroken series of prayer services today about the couch of 17-year-old Shipley Tapp, unconscious since last Wednesday in what a physician said was "auto-hypnotic" state into which she entered at a meeting of the group.

The Dearborn high school girl still lay on a couch in the living room of her home, respiration and reflexes apparently normal, but in a trance-like sleep. At intervals, as the exhortation of the worshippers reached its heights, she would extend her clenched hands rigidly into the air, holding that position until the prayer ended.

Her father, Lawrence Tapp, automobile factory worker, said the girl was "slain by the power of God" in her effort to attain a greater sense of religious grace. He explained she had been deeply religious since she was "saved" at a meeting of the sect, but the "sinful nature" which remained had been "slain" by the trance-like sleep. He said she would awaken on the seventh day of her trance.

Dr. Edward F. Fisher, the Tapp family physician, examined Shipley yesterday before a prayer service at the home, and said she appeared "perfectly normal physically." He described her condition as "auto-hypnosis, in which the mind responds only to religious stimuli."

Ross Kilgore, leader of the sect, said the prayer services at the home would continue unabated until the girl awakened, describing her condition as "a manifestation that God's power is as strong as ever."

Under belief of the members, the unconscious girl is "suffering for the whole world" while her natural impulses are subdued or "slain" by the unconscious state.

ESSAY PRIZES WILL BE GIVEN GRAY STUDENTS

Four County Divisions Are Announced By Duncan

An essay contest for pupils of Gray county schools, involving 16 prizes and based upon historical events, places, or persons in the development of the county, was announced today by Judge Ivy E. Duncan, chairman of the Centennial advisory board for the county.

It is a portion of the Walter Woodford historical essay contest being sponsored throughout the state. There will be four divisions in the county as follows: Rural elementary schools, and independent district high schools. The essay subjects are to be based upon the home counties in each instance. They must not be more than 500 words in length and the titles must not contain more than five words. All essays are to originate in the history and English classes of the schools. Contests will first be held in the schools and the winning paper in each school will be submitted to Judge Duncan for the county contest. Four sets of three judges each will select the best papers, using the rules found on page 42, section 7, of the Interscholastic League Bulletin for the Ready Writers contest.

When the county contest is finished the first place essay in each division will be typed and labeled for the state contest, in which there will be cash prizes of $200, $100, $50 and $25 in each division. The state contest is being directed by Mrs. Elithe Hamilton Beal, director of the public school division, state department of publicity, at Centennial headquarters, Dallas, Texas.

School contests are to be concluded during Texas week, March 1-7, and county winners announced early in April, or before. All winning county manuscripts must be in the Dallas office by May 1. State winners will be announced after May 15.

It is expected that the research necessary in writing the essays will

BANKHEAD ACT IS NOT PASSED ON BY JUDGES

MAIN POINT AT ISSUE IN TAX CASE NOT DECIDED

BY JAMES W. DOUTHAT. WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (AP)—The supreme court ruled today that $200,000,000 of processing reimposed by the courts must be returned to the taxpayers, refused to pass the validity of the Bankhead cotton act at this time and adjourned without ruling on the constitutionality of the Tennessee valley authority act.

The tax decision did not go into whether processors had to prove they had not passed the tax on to consumers before they could recover, a main point at issue. The decision was unanimous.

The nine justices all agreed also that the review of the Bankhead case, which was allowed only a six to three vote, had been "improvidently granted."

It was handed down in the case brought by Louisiana rice millers. The result had no immediate bearing on the prospects for suits by processors to recover the $1,200,000,000 taxes already collected under the defunct AAA. This question remains to be fought out in the lower courts.

Another case involving this law, filed by Governor Eugene Talmage of Georgia, a Roosevelt administration foe, will give the court another opportunity to rule on it. In the rice millers' opinion, read by Justice Roberts, the court held the changes made by the new AAA law enacted at the last session did not "cure" the infirmities of the original act which it held unconstitutional last week.

"The exaction still lacked the

11 KILLED ON TEXAS ROADS IN WEEK-END

Many Others Injured; Four Die in One Collision Near San Antonio

(By The Associated Press.) Traffic accidents took 11 lives in Texas over the week-end. Many others were injured.

A collision near San Antonio yesterday took four lives and seriously injured five others. Capt. James Albert Wharton, 44, of the San Antonio fire department, his wife, 42, and Mrs. Emma Estelle Walters, 37, and her daughter, Margie Ellen Walters, 15, were killed.

Jessie Halbert, postoffice clerk at Uvalde, was killed in a collision near Castroville last night.

Two Oklahoma women lost their lives yesterday when the automobile in which they were riding overturned near Gainesville. They were Mrs. J. E. McCright, 55, and her daughter, Mrs. R. B. Clements, 30, of Tulsa.

L. C. Sifton, 27, of Cushing, Nacogdoches county, was injured fatally yesterday near Dallas when he fell out of a moving automobile when the door came open as the machine hit a rough place. J. H. Mullins of Kemp, driver, said Sifton was asleep when the door was jarred open.

Marshall Flint, 22, of El Paso, student in the Texas College of Mines, was injured fatally when an auto in which he was riding just over in New Mexico overturned yesterday.

George Schuehle, 17, was killed Saturday night when his car overturned near his home at Honda.

Dr. W. E. Graham, pastor of the Whitesboro Presbyterian church, died Saturday of injuries received in a traffic accident the previous Tuesday.

Fisher Skeptical. Pinnegan decided to come here after Governor Hoffman said he was interested. An arriving at the Camden, N. J., airport, the lawyer, talked by telephone with C. Lloyd Fisher, chief of Hauptmann's counsel.

Fisher said any new evidence was welcome, but he added: "I'd rather see the ransom money."

Hoffman, informed of the lawyer's arrival, said: "It's always been my understanding that all the money was recovered."

Dodds and Burkinshaw were retained by a group of prominent Washington citizens to act as ex-prosecutors for Charles Harris, sentenced to die in January, 1935, for the slaying of Milton Harris, a Washington gambler. He had been convicted on circumstantial evidence.

They won a reprieve and subsequent commutation to life imprisonment from President Roosevelt.

Burkinshaw was a cub reporter on the Washington Times under Marvin H. McIntyre, now a secretary to President Roosevelt. He served in 1915 on the Ford peace ship as aide to William C. Bullitt, now American ambassador to Russia.

Dodds practiced law in Michigan until 1924 when he became special assistant to the attorney general in Washington. Burkinshaw was an assistant district attorney for a time.

Anna Hauptmann Prays. Fisher would not explain why they have been engaged. He also declined to say if he would seek a writ of habeas corpus in federal district court at Newark today, but such an action is one of the three remaining means by which the execution can be stayed.

While lawyers drafted their last minute plans, Anna Hauptmann knelt in the Trinity Lutheran church.

Jail Terms for Drunken Driving Are Given Here

Jail sentences of 30 days were assessed in two cases in 31st district court today, involving indictments for driving while intoxicated.

The defendants, Joe Vernon and M. O. Poinier, also were profited from driving a motor vehicle upon the public highways for two years. They pleaded guilty and waived trial by jury.

It was the first local application of the revised statutes concerning drunken driving.

The jury panel was recessed until 1:30 p. m., when a civil jury case will likely be started.

HIRE LAWYERS FOR NEW PLEA IN HIGH COURT

GOVERNOR UNCERTAIN WHETHER TO GRANT REPRIEVE

(By The Associated Press.) Employment of two Washington lawyers by defense seen as indication of new move in United States Supreme Court.

Chicago attorney tells Governor Hoffman a prisoner's story of three men possessing part of the Lindbergh ransom money.

Governor Hoffman uncertain whether to grant reprieve; sees "plenty of precedents" for action. Warden reports Hauptmann remains calm; wife prays for husband's life.

Former state senator says governor using case to bolster chances for national GOP nomination.

BY DALE HARRISON. (Copyright, 1936, by The Associated Press.) TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 13.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's lawyers, suddenly augmented by two Washington attorneys and bolstered by possible new evidence, swung vigorously today into a last ditch fight against his Friday night date with death.

Retention of Attorneys Nugent Dodds and Neil Burkinshaw, who a year ago saved a condemned man, was accepted as an indication that a new move was contemplated in the United States supreme court.

They were employed after the New Jersey court of pardons had refused Saturday to grant clemency to the condemned kidnap-slayer of the Lindbergh baby.

Bernard M. Finnegan, a Chicago lawyer, flew here to tell Governor Harold G. Hoffman a story of three men who he said possessed $22,000 of the Lindbergh ransom money.

He got the information, he explained from a prisoner in a Chicago jail who said his conscience had been torturing him.

The prisoner asserted, Finnegan said, that he paid $2,000 toward purchasing ransom bills at 40 cents on the dollar, but he did not get the money because he would not raise the rest of the price before his own arrest on a worthless check charge.

Fisher Skeptical. Pinnegan decided to come here after Governor Hoffman said he was interested. An arriving at the Camden, N. J., airport, the lawyer, talked by telephone with C. Lloyd Fisher, chief of Hauptmann's counsel.

Fisher said any new evidence was welcome, but he added: "I'd rather see the ransom money."

MEANING OF WORD, "TAXPAYER"

The word, "taxpayer," is misleading. It is doubtful if any other word in the English language is more confusing and has done more bewildering, caused more suffering, misery, poverty, than has the word, "taxpayer."

When the word is used, one naturally thinks of one who pays taxes. This, by the same natural conclusion, leads the individual to conclude that there are those who do not pay taxes. Such conclusion causes the voters to encourage government extravagance and results in the voters' desire that the government do many favors for everyone, the voters believing the cost will be paid by someone besides themselves.

If every voter realized that he paid indirect taxes and that the poorer he is, the greater the sacrifice he is obliged to make in his personal living expenses because of an extravagant government, we would not be in the plight which now confronts us.

The poor man pays indirect taxes by being unable to buy as much with his wages, or by being out of a job entirely. In the long run it is the weak, mentally and physically, who suffer most when protection of the government fails. They are first to perish.

The man with limited means who is forced to do without, let us say, a bath-tub, is much more inconvenienced, and suffers much more, than the rich man who has to do without the second, third or fourth bath-tub. The same rule applies in all lines of consumption. As we have said before, even the man in the poor-house has his living standards lowered when society as a whole gets poor enough.

Instead of using the word, "taxpayer," thus greatly confusing the thinking of the average citizen, it would be better to use "direct taxpayer" when it is intended to convey the idea that an individual pays direct taxes. The phrase "indirect taxpayer" should be used when a man is not a direct taxpayer. Everyone pays taxes.—Clovis News-Journal.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Probably you missed the U. S. Supreme court's decision in the case of Colgate vs. Harvey the other day. But lawyers who do business before the court believe the verdict may prove as significant as any the justices have handed down in years.

This case didn't involve any New Deal legislation. It concerned the right of the state of Vermont to exempt from the state's income tax such interest as is received from loans made within the state.

The background was a problem which long has afflicted the New England states—export of capital to New York and other sections. Wealth produced by New England workers has been skimmed off in large gobs and invested in other fields which seemed more profitable, instead of being plowed back into New England enterprise.

After investigation and recommendation by two legislative committees, Vermont decided to do something about it. The tax exemption was designed to encourage investments in Vermont.

But one of its residents, James C. Colgate, sued to have that exemption declared invalid. Colgate is a New York broker with large New York investments.

By a vote of six to three the supreme court held that the exemption violated the Constitution. To do that it dragged out an almost forgotten provision of the Constitution—the part of the 14th amendment which says, "No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States."

The amendment itself was framed to protect legal and political rights of negroes in the south and its "due process" clause has since been used chiefly to kill social legislation. But this was the first time the court ever discovered that a state law violated the "privileges and immunities" clause.

The court had hitherto been so zealous in guarding states' rights that most lawyers were amazed to hear Justice Sutherland declare that, "As citizens of the United States, we are members of a single great community consisting of all the states united, and not of distinct communities consisting of the states severally."

Justice Stone, speaking also for Cardozo and Brandeis, pointed out that "Since the adoption of the 14th amendment, at least 44 cases have been brought to this court in which states' statutes have been assailed as infringements of the privileges-and-immunities clause. Until today none has held that state legislation infringed upon that clause."

Some very able experts suggest that the decision indicates a tendency of the court's majority to protect investors at all costs, even to the point of denying states the right to look after their own economic well-being.

All of which has opened up to corporation lawyers a new vista of fat fees and litigation over state laws which was never apparent to them before.

The government's lawyers, on the other hand, are more than ever worried about the fate of New Deal legislation before the court, since they are reimpressed with the belief that no matter how cleverly they demonstrate "constitutionality" the court will knock them down in accordance with its economic beliefs.

BARBS

Nothing seems certain these days but death, taxes, and war debt defaults.

According to President Roosevelt, most Americans want to give something for what they got. If necessary.

Cuba is resentful at cancellation of the Joe Louis-Isadore Gastanaga bout because of political conditions. After all, what is one more assassination to Cuba?

Townsend Plan Advocate Will Run for Senate

FORT WORTH, Jan. 13 (AP)—Joseph H. Price of Fort Worth, advocate of the Townsend recovery plan, today announced his candidacy for the United States senate post now occupied by Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas.

Price, farmer and real estate investor, said he favored: Immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus; early enactment of the Townsend recovery plan; a plan whereby young workers shall contribute to the purchase and receive a retiring annuity; perpetuating the profit system with federal control of individual ownership of wealth, and a larger share of material profits going to labor; improving and perfecting orderly democratic government to guarantee recovery, prosperity and security.

In connection with the Townsend plan, the candidate said he favored "an increased purchasing power by retiring four and one-half million men and women over 60 years old from active and painful employment at $200 per month and replacing them with young men and women, while eight million men and women allotted $200 per month make jobs for seven and one-half million."

"This, he said, would create buying power and prosperity, the results of forced circulation of money and regulated labor."

Arkansas And Rice Cagers Battle Tuesday, Wednesday

Longhorns Will Play Mustangs During This Week

BY BILL PARKER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Strength meets strength Tuesday and Wednesday in the Southwest conference basketball race when Arkansas clashes with Rice at Houston.

The pre-session consensus gave the Longhorns the Arkansas victory quite a margin over the five other conference members.

These will not be the only combats this week but certainly the most important because both teams will be struggling to escape the dreaded elimination process that this series could easily plaster on either team.

Two Arkansas wins would erase Rice since the Owls lost a 41 to 32 game to Texas last week after starting the season with a 35 to 33 decision over Baylor. Rice victories would not completely eliminate Arkansas but would definitely remove the Owls' most dangerous rival because these two teams do not meet again this season.

Under the Pampa, sky-scraping center Howard E. Barker, Arkansas invaded Texas last week and grabbed conference honors from Texas A. and M., 22 to 18, and 34 to 27. Barker turned in a stout exhibition Saturday night with six field goals and one gratis shot for 13 points to be high scorer of the game.

The Razorbacks claim the nation's tallest cage unit. Rice is also blessed with extremely tall timber, and both teams boast artists at the crisp, arch, mid-court and shove-in spot.

In spite of their impressive victories over the Aggies, the Razorbacks find themselves tied for the conference lead with Marty Karov's surprising Texas Longhorns. Not only did Texas rock the critics with a win over Rice, but whipped back Saturday night to take Baylor, 24 to 22.

Texas is depending mostly on inexperienced sophomore loopers, and it does not figure it should keep step with Rice and Arkansas, but it must be admitted that the Longhorns have turned back two of the conference's strongest teams. Karov will send his cohorts against Southern Methodist Wednesday night at Austin and against Baylor Saturday night at Austin.

The conference calendar:

Team	W	L	Pct.
Arkansas	2	0	1.000
Texas	2	0	1.000
Texas Christian	1	0	1.000
Rice	1	1	.500
Southern Methodist	0	1	.000
Baylor	0	2	.000
Texas A. and M.	0	2	.000

This week's schedule:

Tuesday night—Arkansas vs. Rice at Houston.

Wednesday night—Arkansas vs. Rice at Houston; Southern Methodist vs. Texas at Austin.

Saturday night—Baylor vs. Texas at Austin; Rice vs. Texas Christian at Fort Worth; Texas A. and M. vs. Southern Methodist at Dallas.

Results last week:

Rice 33, Baylor 33, at Waco.

Texas 41, Rice 32, at Austin.

Arkansas 22-34, Texas A. and M. 18-27, at College Station.

Texas 24, Baylor 23, at Waco.

Texas Christian 29, Southern Methodist 23, at Fort Worth.

PLAINVIEW, Jan. 13. (AP)—The Lubbock Westerners defeated the Bulldogs 32 to 21 here Friday night in a basketball match that was anybody's game from start to finish.

Porter Miller, playing a heads-up game all the way through, started the scoring with a shot from under the basket and followed up with a 3 to 2 lead that grew into a 7 to 3 margin before Lubbock opened up to tie the score 9-all. The half ended 12 to 11, Westerners.

Yant, Westerner forward, buried a pair of charity shots in the first minute of the last half to boost Lubbock's lead to 14 to 11. Reddell and Chisholm were good for free shots and field goals to bring the Bulldogs ahead by two points. In the next few seconds Venable tied the count on the 16th notch with a long toss.

Late in the final half Lubbock led 23 to 17 where the Bulldogs unceremoniously brought them a tie on the 23 count. A Miller tying the score from a corner.

The score stood 30 to 29, Lubbock in the last five seconds of play when A. Miller sank one to give the Bulldogs a lone point lead. Yant, slammed a field shot home as the whistle blew to give the Westerners the tilt.

The Bulldogs outplayed their opponents on the offensive but struck a tight defense when they approached the basket. The Westerners missed the backboard and over shot passes throughout the game. They kept up in the game by sinking long shots when the Bulldogs covered only the danger zones. The Plainview five were decidedly weak on free throws.

The Bulldogs return the game Tuesday, January 21.

The Perryton five managed to shake loose for six more points before the Black Hawks were able to come again with field shots forward, hitting for a field goal and a free throw. Ogle, center for the Phillips club poked two field goals through the knot to score at 21 all.

PRO FOOTBALL SEASON BEST OF ALL TIME

OPEN TYPE OF PLAY ATTRACTS LARGE ATTENDANCE

(This is the ninth of a series, written especially for the Associated Press by national sports leaders on 1935 results and 1936 prospects.)

BY JOE F. CARR
President, National Professional Football League

(Written for the Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 13. (AP)—The National Football League enjoyed the best season of its history during 1935. Not only was the attendance the largest, but many outstanding critics thought the play by all teams was superior to any preceding year.

This was due largely to the fact that the rules operative in the National League were becoming more thoroughly used by the coaches, and the players who had served in the league, together with the newcomers, seemed to have a finer grasp of the game.

The open type of play and the revival of the field goal kicking brought about through restoration of the goal posts to the goal line has proved the wisdom of the changes made by the professional league, and it is because of increased interest and attendance in every city in the circuit.

Those changes, such as forward passing from any place behind the scrimmage line and the recovery of a fumble at any point, tend to open up the game and make possible the use of players who may not be giants in stature but have stamina and speed.

The race in the National League was fairly close in both divisions until about midway of the season, when the New York Giants won the league championship in 1934, forged ahead of the other contenders in the eastern division.

Several other clubs of this division had quite a number of new players on their rosters and with a season's experience behind them the race this year in the eastern division should be exceedingly close.

The race in the western division was so close that a club winning or losing a game on a particular Sunday toward the end of the season might find its position changed from first to last or vice versa. The winner of this division was not decided until the closing day, when the well-balanced Detroit Lions emerged victorious.

In the final playoff between the winners of the two divisions for the championship Detroit emerged as new world's champions.

I am happy to state that during 1935 our friendly relations with the colleges became more apparent when the Western conference re-instituted a rule which prohibited a professional player from being a coach or athletic employee in the conference.

LOUIS CLAIMS HARDEST LICKS WERE PULLED

BROWN BOMBER SAVES HIS 'SUNDAY' PUNCH

BY CHARLES DUNKLEY.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

CHICAGO, Jan. 13. (AP)—Joe Louis, the most versatile end, is a rarity in this day. And yet without the help of Moe'spica's education it is extremely doubtful if the Stanford Indians would be prepared for their third successive Rose Bowl engagement.

Other Ties Save Games.

Ken Sanbach of Princeton is another handy man to have around when three points are needed. He was dealt with his kicking of the post after touchdown all season. And against Yale he proved he was just as accurate from the 15-yard line. Actually, his field goal in that game had to carry over 25 yards.

Marty Peters of Notre Dame came in mighty handy when his field goal gave Elmer Layden's team a victory over the Pitt Panthers.

Another law of the gridiron likely to come up for attention at the rules committee meeting is the one which provides that the ball be brought in from the sideline after it has been kicked or carried out of bounds. The pros have found that their practice of bringing the ball in an additional five yards permits greater freedom of action and have convinced many of the coaches that the ball should be brought in 15 yards if it is to fully accomplish the purpose of the rule.

College football coaches are giving plenty of attention and study to the pro game and the manner in which the pros are working out their problems. And wisely so, for the average pro football player boasts at least 10 years of active experience in the game. That's why, in many cases, the pro rules are more practical and often less confusing.

WILLIE HOPPE WINS WORLD'S 3-CUSHION CHAMPIONSHIP

CHICAGO, Jan. 13. (AP)—Willie Hoppe, the boy wonder and the grand old man of billiards at the same time, seems to be getting better as he grows older.

At the age of 48, when most men in sports are through, Hoppe today keeps achieving the ambition of his life—winning the world's three cushion billiard championship, the only title that ever eluded him, from Walker Cochran in a challenge match. He is the first billiard player to hold three titles at the same time, the American, the world's life-winning the world's three cushion billiard championship, the only title that ever eluded him, from Walker Cochran in a challenge match. Hoppe was jubilant over his victory over Cochran, whom he defeated 300 to 208 in a challenge match ending Saturday night. He's been trying for the title for eight years and made five attempts to win it, fourth one.

Arthur Hendrix Defeats Grant In Net Tourney

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Jan. 13. (AP)—Arthur Hendrix met a fellow Floridian for the Miami Biltmore tennis title today after his amazing defeat of the nation's No. 1 and No. 3 players on successive Sundays.

The 23-year-old collegian from Lakeland won his way to the finals yesterday by conquering Bryan M. (Bibby) Grant of Atlanta, ranked No. 3. The scores were 2-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-2.

His opponent today was Charles Harris of West Palm Beach, who beat Weston Painter of Minneapolis 6-3, 6-4, 6-2.

Hendrix's triumph over Grant came just a week after the Floridian took the New Orleans Sugar Bowl title by defeating Wilmer Allison, national singles champion and No. 1 player of the nation. Hendrix is listed 17th nationally.

Grant and Russell Bobbitt, also of Atlanta, reached the final round in the doubles here by defeating J. Gilbert Hall of South Orange, N. J., and Hal Surface of Kansas City, 6-4, 6-3, yesterday. Other finalists in the doubles were Charles Harris and Martin Busby of Miami, who defeated Hendrix and Gardner Mulloy of Miami, 6-3, 6-1.

Rideout Twins At Illinois Race Hand In Hand To Fame

TEXAS SEEKING RACE HORSE LEADERSHIP OF THE NATION

AUSTIN, Jan. 13. (AP)—Texas, where they ride 'em fast and rough and play polo for relaxation, is shooting for a horse-racing reputation as rival of Kentucky. With a centennial celebration this year the Lone State state will 'shoot the works' for its growing stable.

The year 1935 saw Texas' biggest racing season. Racing officials' reports for the state show more than $5,000,000 paid in purses and stakes to horsemen. An estimated $20,100,000 was wagered in 185 days of major race meets, compared with $19,652,000 in 182 days of 1934.

J. E. McDonald, commissioner of agriculture and a racing commissioner, said, "Texas and not Kentucky should be the leading ground for raising fine horses in a few years."

"There are more good horses in Texas now than it ever has had. Some of the finest horse flesh in the country is in Texas now. These have been several good breeding farms established. Weather conditions here are advantageous."

The spacy side of racing was snipped in the bud in this state. Doping of horses threatened last winter. R. B. Anderson, tax and racing commissioner, said some of the 11 persons implicated were ruled off Texas tracks for life. The commission obtained its own chemist to make tests.

Horse-race betting at the four major tracks netted the state an estimated $31,000 in taxes and $16,000 in license fees.

Dead Heats Are Run In Five Meets In Fall

BY ROBERT WALTON.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Jan. 13. (AP)—Hand in hand, stride for stride, the Rideout twins are racing to fame at the University of Illinois.

The remarkable 19-year-old sophomore Blaine and his brother Wayne Rideout, ran "dead heats" in no fewer than five cross-country meets last fall. They won but neither can claim an individual victory because they always cross the finish line together, hand in hand.

"Who do we do, first?" Blaine asked the spokesman for the pair, in answer to the question concerning the "brotherly" finish.

"It's this way. We've always worked together and played together on every team. In fact, we've been lucky enough not to have an opponent very close to us at the finish. So we just end up stride for stride. In fact, we've been running the entire distance this way. It helps us set our pace and keep it."

Their cross-country victims included Purdue, Wisconsin, Iowa, Loyola barrier meet.

In their junior year at Illinois, Blaine set a new state high school record at the mile in 4:25.2 and Wayne kept pace by setting up a half-mile mark of 1:59.4. That same season Blaine won the mile in 4:24.4 at the national interscholastic while Wayne was nosed out in the half, finishing second in 1:58.8.

All competition was postponed for them the following year when both were laid low by measles. As a result, they were forced to don spectacles and they wear them now off and on the track.

Wrecked Fresh Records.

At Illinois last year freshmen indoor records fell before the onslaught of the twin brothers. Blaine ran the mile in 4:28.4, and Wayne out the time for the half to 1:57.4. Outdoors, Wayne ran the mile in 4:29.4, and Blaine the two-mile in 9:56.4, but neither was a record-breaker.

Although the boys stick together like fly paper, they say they've been apart only a single week in their lives—a checkup of their physical specifications does show some slight disparity.

Wayne is the lighter of the two, tipping the scales at 145 pounds, and is 5 feet, 10 1/2 inches tall. Blaine weighs 148 pounds, and is 5 feet 11 1/2 inches tall.

So far there's never been any "love interest" to separate them.

"We don't have many dates. We stick to running," says Blaine. They wait table at their fraternity house and are up every morning at 6 o'clock to set tables for breakfast.

"They don't carry any rabbits' feet with them, but they do share one pet superstition."

"We always put our left shoe on first," says Blaine, "and we demand that the trainer always tape our left ankle first."

49 FOULS ARE ASSESSED IN ONE STRUGGLE

ABUSE FROM COACHES IRKS OFFICIALS

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—It's not hard work that makes basketball referees grow old young—it's the abuse they get from coaches, says Stanfeize, veteran Big Ten official.

Feeze, at 40, says he is going to hand in his whistle after this season and attend to business.

"This is an awful business and a terrific strain on the nerves," he says. "Just when you think you've done a good job some coach whom you've counted as a friend sends you on your way with the feeling that you've robbed a bank."

"I don't believe a Judge would be any tougher on a bank robber than some of these coaches are on the officials."

Feeze defends himself and all referees against attacks by fans who charge that too many fouls are called.

"I call 'em close and try to be uniform about it," he says. "No official can afford to let a basketball game get very rough. I don't want to blow the whistle unless I have to, but there are rules which must be enforced."

Recalling the Wisconsin-Purdue game last year when he called 49 fouls, he says there were 75 violations but "we simply couldn't get them all."

This year he journeyed east during the Christmas holidays and handled the Purdue-New York university game in Madison Square Garden, and the Purdue-Temple game.

From now until the season ends he'll have from three to four games a week, often having to travel several hundred miles between jobs. After that—peace and quiet.

Lawson Little Put on 'Carpet' About Articles

NEW YORK, Jan. 13. (AP)—Lawson Little and other amateur golfers who wield a typewriter as a side-line must keep their writings on the amateur side of the fence hereafter, according to John G. Jackson, new president of the United States Golf association.

Although Little made certain of his status before he undertook to conduct the syndicated newspaper column formerly written by Bobby Jones, he has been skirting the ragged edge, Jackson said.

In his first article he suggested that a golf swing could be improved by pausing at the top of the backswing. He is reported to have come close to giving instruction in other articles.

Some time this year, Jackson plans to add to the definition of an amateur a clear-cut interpretation with regard to writing articles.

There is no objection, he said, to an amateur golfer writing about personalities or experiences in the sport or to his describing how he saw another player make a certain shot, as long as the description is only an incident in the article.

Jackson said Little had been called in after a few of his early columns and had been requested to refrain from writing advice-giving articles. He has complied "to some extent."

"We understand that some of the good amateur players all over the country are writing the same kind of articles—the type Bob Jones did six years ago—and we're anxious to put a stop to it," Jackson said.

Turkey Defeats Quataque 33-16

TURKEY, Jan. 13. (AP)—Coach Al Duncan's Turkey Turks gained ground in their race for basketball honors when they defeated the defending champion Quataque team, 33 to 16, Friday night. Bass, a new light on the Turk team, led the way with 15 points. Coker, center, followed with seven points.

Quataque sent two men on the floor to watch Captain Young, sensational forward. They succeeded in keeping the scoring down to five points. Bedwell and Kelley of the visitors were Young's guards for the night. While they were watching Young, the newcomer broke through nicely.

Turkey and Matador are the only undefeated quintets in the conference to date. They play later in the

Revival Brings Large Crowd to Christian Church

Sunday was a big day in the revival at the First Christian church. The Sunday school attendance was 42, a gain of more than 100 over the Sunday before. The revival will continue with daily services this week.

A chorus choir of 50 voices, under the direction of R. L. Allison, led the congregation in singing at the evening service. Other special numbers included the crayon picture, "Whiter than Snow" by Howard House who painted the picture while Betty Jo Townsend and Mr. Allison sang. The song "Pass Me Not" was played on the vibraphone. The sermon by George Davis was on the subject, "Have We Outgrown Our Faith."

"In this old world of ours today with its corruption and misery, I wonder who would happen if the religion of Jesus Christ was taken away," he said to part.

"I believe in Christ because He came to a dad who is a bad example to his children, a drunkard, one who won't work, and make a new man out of him. Christ can give the business man a new heart so he will become honest in every way."

"When Jesus came into the world, men were not startled because He was like them, but because He was different. I am glad He is not like me. I want to see Him in all His purity to see His holiness, higher than mine, calling me on and on."

A great crowd filled the church to capacity last night. Baptismal services were conducted at the close of the services.

"THE SOUND WAGON," by T. S. Stripling (Doubleday, Doran). It is doubtless indicative of something when two of our best known male novelists become socially conscious within three months. Sinclair Lewis' caustic and perhaps prophetic "It Can't Happen Here" was the first indication of the change; T. S. Stripling's less caustic and perhaps more bitter "The Sound Wagon" is the second harbinger of increasing social-mindedness among novelists.

Mr. Stripling hangs his sermon on the peg of one Cardius, who when the story opens is candidate for the lower house of congress in Megapolis, running on a platform which promises honest elections among other things. Before election day is finished, Cardius has been bought out by the big boss of Megapolis. He had hoped to make evidence of corruption on a small scale, and its careful exposure of the civilization this corruption produces.

Stripling has deliberately sacrificed one thing to gain another, and the sacrifice is not in vain.

This is a very curious world, it seems. Spoofed over and over again, it still comes back for more. Look at Gertrude Stein.

Miss Stein is the ponderable spoofer Paris. She has for many years written quite ordinarily though so madly that a certain type of person feels bound to take them seriously. It will be news, however, that Thornton Wilder is a member of this group.

Miss Stein's really funny and utterly meaningless "Four Saints in Three Acts" earned her a great amount of publicity in the United States. For the first time in 30 or so years, Miss Stein felt she could venture to return home. She did, was snapped up for lectures all over the United States, and for them Prof. Wilder has written a perfectly serious introduction. Prof. Wilder calls the lectures "models of artistic form." It will be enough to quote one choice paragraph to indicate the "form."

"Let me do that again. The inside and the outside, the outside which is outside and the inside which is inside are not when they are inside and outside, are not inside in short, they are not existing, that is inside, and when the outside is entirely outside that is not at all inside then it is not at all inside and so it is not existing. Do you not see what a newspaper is and perhaps history?"

No, Miss Stein, we do not. Furthermore, we can find 300 persons within a radius of 100 yards who don't believe you do either.

"Philip Hale's Boston Symphony Program Notes," edited by John N. Burk (Doubleday, Doran): some of the best, and least pedantic, writing on music that has been done in the United States.

"Murder on the Tropic," by Todd Downing (Crime Club): standard production in a slightly different setting; Mexico it is.

Baby Secretary

If congressmen are judges of beauty, there'll be a rush of callers at the office of Rep. Gardner E. Withrow, Wisconsin Progressive. The reason is the Badger lawmaker's pretty secretary, youngest in the house, shown above. She's Miss Dorothy Wood, 19, of Neilsville, Wis., and she's enjoying Washington very much, thank you.

PARK BUILDER OF TEXAS DIES OF PNEUMONIA

SERVES 12 YEARS AS PARKS BOARD CHAIRMAN

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 13 (AP)—Miles of Texas highways and acres of state parks stood as memorials today to E. Colp, first chairman of the Texas Parks board, who died yesterday in a Temple hospital.

For 26 years the former cowhand and mule-drawn street car driver had devoted his efforts to highway and park improvement in Texas. He served 12 years as parks board chairman and recently became Bexar county parks superintendent.

That work was cut short by double pneumonia which attacked the 66-year-old builder, January 1.

Funeral services were arranged at San Antonio for this afternoon with the Rev. Edgar Hubbard, pastor of the Denver Heights Presbyterian church officiating and former Gov. Pat M. Neff of Waco making a short talk.

It was Neff who appointed Colp chairman of the park board when it was created 12 years ago. Six years later, Dan Moody, then governor, reappointed Colp for another 6-year term which ended recently.

Governor James V. Allred appointed Wendell Hayes of Brownwood to succeed Colp.

Born on a farm near Paris, Lamar county, Colp, at the age of 14, moved with his parents to a ranch near Hondo, where he became a cowhand and later a railway ticket agent and assistant postmaster.

He moved from Hondo to San Antonio, where in the early 80's he drove a mule-drawn street car. He later was in the contracting and transfer business at Smithville, Lockhart, and Fort Worth.

Survivors include the widow, two sisters, Mrs. Gertrude Decker of Smithville and Mrs. W. J. Snow, wife of Lockhart, and a brother, C. J. Colp of Corsicana.

QUINTA HOUSE WAS SCENE OF 1813 MASSACRE

300 Rebels Shot to Death; General Gets Slapped

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 13.—For historical interest, one of the outstanding buildings in America is the famous Quinta House in San Antonio. It was the prison of 300 women who saw their husbands, brothers, and sons ruthlessly slaughtered by the Spaniards, the first post office of the Republic of Texas in San Antonio, and the place where a proud Spanish general had his ears boxed and his pride demolished by a brave woman who spat in his face and dared him to fight.

She slapped his face until his ears rang, and that slapping by a woman whose name has been lost to posterity revived a seemingly dying rebellion, and brought about the end of Spanish rule in Texas.

The building's sturdy walls still stand in the middle of historic San Antonio. The bloodstains are gone from them now, but the memory still remains of the seizure of the Quinta House in 1813—the evacuation by the invading Spaniards, and the flight of the women to a mission southward to the Rio Grande.

Several million persons from outside Texas who will visit the Texas Centennial celebrations this year will find it one of the most interesting of historic spots, identified not only with the history of Texas, but with the winning of the United States for the Anglo-American. San Antonio will appropriately observe the one hundredth birthday of Texas independence this year, and will welcome visitors to its interesting landmarks.

Formerly the home of a prominent Spanish family, it was taken over by General Arredondo when he entered the city on August 20, 1813, to crush a rebellion. He was in command of the Fifth company of Spanish soldiers. Spanish Governor Delgado, in sympathy with the rebellion, had taken refuge after being heading Antonio Cordero, a loyalist. Bexar succeded, in sympathy with the crown, then managed to take control and he seized Delgado and cut his head off. To avenge their friend, Delgado the rebels then laid San Antonio to waste, took stumps and decapitated him. The heads of all three were mounted on poles in the center of the city, at a spot which now is Military Plaza, when General Arredondo took over the town. With the heads of three British officers that were sent for the public to see, it was apparent that there was a rebellious spirit in the land, and the general determined that he would deal with the rebels with a heavy hand.

En route to the city from the coast, he had captured 175 rebels. These men were taken to a place called the graves, they were seated on logs rolled up beside them, and in groups of ten massacred and allowed to drop off into the hole in which they were buried. All 175 were massacred.

300 Massacred.—An overwhelming army of Spaniards under Arredondo had no trouble capturing the 300 rebels defending San Antonio. They were given a night's respite before being executed, and jammed into a building that would hardly hold them all. Eighteen died from suffocation during the night. The rest were placed on the edge of trenches in groups of ten to twenty, and shot and dumped into them. Not a man was spared, and none escaped.

The made population exterminated completely, the women who survived them were driven into the Quinta House. For days and nights, the Spaniards ate and drank and celebrated their victory. There were no more rebels sight, so they had a good time. They made the widows of the men they had slain cook for them and wait on them.

But the word spread of their ruthless slaughter of San Antonio's 300, and of their imprisonment and enslavement of the women. Rebels from throughout South Texas began to drift toward San Antonio. One day, General Arredondo, swaggering amid the imprisoned women in the Quinta House, got a complaint from one of them for an insult which she said had been offered by one of his soldiers. His answer was to raise a welt across her shoulders with his sword.

Attacked by Woman.—Blazing with anger, she upbraided him for his conduct, and offered to have one hand tied behind her and fight him a duel to the death. He reddened in the face, and started to back away. The other imprisoned woman surrounded him. Before he could escape, they spat in his face, pulled his hair, clawed the skin from his face and neck, and bit and kicked him. He broke loose and fled, and never returned.

That incident, reports of which reached the ears of the slowly advancing rebels, spurred them to action. Actually, it revived the revolution which apparently had been thoroughly suppressed. They surrounded the Quinta House, killed the dozen soldiers guarding it, and sent a demand to Arredondo that the women be released or that he would be attacked.

With the blood of five hundred men killed within a fortnight dripping from his hands, and living in mortal fear of assassination, Arredondo yielded, and soon evacuated the city. The influence of Spain departed with his army, and no doubt it was the courage of an outraged woman who slapped his face that resulted in the expulsion of the tyrannical invaders.

Freedom from Mexico came 23 years later, and the Quinta House became the home of John Bowen, first postmaster of the Republic of Texas in San Antonio, and the post office. He lived in one part of the building, and handled the mail in another part.

NEVER MIND THE LADY

by David Garth

Chapter 18
FLIGHT AGAIN
Her father always had been able to do that—distort things with polite sarcasm. Made them appear silly and valueless and theatrical.

Allaire said nothing. He picked up his tumbler and sat back, viewing her keenly.

"I suppose this new-found ambition has something to do with your turning up your little nose at Steve Perry. Well, you'd better think again. We're going broke and if real estate values and market securities don't pick up there won't be an awful lot in the old stock for you."

"What's the matter with Steve? Just because he probably wouldn't be caught dead in a covered wagon."

"Aside from the fact that I don't love Steve," she said tranquilly, "that has a lot to do with it. Marrying Steve would be a nice easy way for us both to go to hell. I've seen what happens to those marriages made in heaven."

"Look at you and Nell. Your marriage wasn't founded on anything but society headlines. You were the best of your respective crops, but that was all you brought each other."

"And in those days while I was being shuttled back and forth between you and Nell, you must have married unless I was certain my marriage was going to last. Oh, I though I was in love several times, but there was never much of a glow about it."

"Value yourself pretty highly, don't you, Allaire?"

She nodded untroubledly.

"Pretty, Ray."

"Proud as Juno," he commented.

"And now, you wait for the glow? You'll wait a long time."

"She looked past him, smiling to herself.

"I've had it. The glow of rivers to cross, and battles to win, and something to accomplish in life."

He paused with his drink near his lips.

"You mean you fell in love with somebody?"

"No," she said with swift surprising fierceness. "I didn't say that."

In the silence that followed this brief outburst her mouth seemed to curve in something like angry scorn, and her father watched her, touching off his drink with quick short sips.

"I have an idea," he said finally, "your pride went for a slight bump. Something got under your skin. Don't tell me somebody snubbed the queen at the tourney."

"Put it any way you like," she said with a shrug of her usual calm. "I learned something and I'm still fancy free."

"I think," Rayburne West said decisively, "that you got to end up with a mouthful of fog. You're too hard to please. You want men to cross rivers and fight battles and you won't let any man fill. You're beautiful, my dear, and you'll always get a play for men, but life's too short to sweat."

He nodded to her and refilled his tumbler from the decanter. Allaire watched him as though he was a fairly capable amateur magician. He set his tumbler down empty, pulled loose his dress tie, and opened his collar.

"Pardon me," he said. "Feel that last one."

Allaire wouldn't let him shake her. She knew what she wanted, had known ever since her return from South America.

A sense of breathless tingling life that she'd seen that night in the Legation club gardens when a tall young man came striding down a path and George Fox got set to wave the lamp of reason.

That tall young man had run out on her, ruined an idea; a victorious invader who with the castle ready to surrender had blown a tin bugle and ridden away, and she detested him for it.

Yet she had seen enough of the real underlying values of life that night to have made her existence since seem like a ride on a tinsel-bedecked merry-go-round. But one session in this house and she felt as though there was nothing genuine and permanent in the world. There was an atmosphere of decadence and defeat here that ruined tradition. She felt she had to get away.

"I can't do anything about it?" she repeated. "I can do a great deal. Snap out of it before you're licked. Take it easy for a while."

She stood up, drawing on her driving gloves.

"Where the devil are you going?" her father asked, staring.

"Back to Washington. Another shuttle trip. My name may be played a sucker by every art dealer east of the Mississippi and flirt with half the stuffed shirts of Christendom, but George Fox is due on leave soon and I want to be there. He reminds me of things. I just wanted to say hello to you on my birthday."

She drew her coat about her and turned toward the door.

"To Eleanor West's for cocktails?" she proclaimed. "The war cry of half of Washington every afternoon at half-past four."

With a hasty wave of her hand she took her leave, and never thereafter her car roared back down the drive.

Happy Birthday!

Rayburne West fingered the brandy decanter and felt irritated with her partly because he was losing her to Nell and partly because he had never been able to tone down her speed.

He had always been a little afraid of his daughter. She had a strange capacity for anger and action that gave him pause—made him think. And the more he thought of her, the more artificial and faded Tala appeared, and the older he felt.

Old Age! He stumbled over to the mirror and stared at his reflection. Licked! He suddenly felt sick of this place.

Change of scene, that was it. Change of scene. Go up to New York and stay at one of his clubs for a while until he felt better. He mustn't get old—anything but that.

Before he went to bed he left word to have arrangements made to have his private car "Debutante II" picked up by the "Old Dominion," crack train northbound for Washington and New York.

The town of Cartaret was more than just distance removed from revolution and jungle, gunrunners, merciless sun and yellow ryer. It was on another plane of existence entirely and the engineer didn't live would build the Bridge of Transition.

Resting in the heart of a blue grass region of hunt clubs, racetracks, and fine old colonial estates, it seemed forever pervaded with the cares of Virginia sky and old gardens redolent of lilac, mimosa, and ancient rose.

And on ways of the Virginia Hunt or Apple Blossom carnival the sleepy old town became a sportsman's Mecca. Fashionable society flowed through the wide tree-shaded streets in shining motors, gay tallyhob, and brightly beedecked wagons.

Another world?—yea, verily. A world of silken racing colts, velvet-nosed thoroughbreds, men and women riding to hounds, fast little ponies chasing a polo ball on wide level greensward.

The tradition of the town was symbolized by a bronze statue of Revolutionary patriot in the historic square. It perpetuated the memory of a tall young officer who had on that spot recruited one of the first companies of Virginia volunteers.

The officer's name was Captain Richard Willett, and anybody who had been interested. For example, Terry Willett in town to bring his father back to the beginning of the trail didn't give a hang for all the statues on the face of the earth.

The kindly and patriarchal Cartaret diviner was interested by the paradox of an unsmiling young man who asked nothing, yet, as sure as the world was made, wanted something that he probably could not have defined himself.

So interested, in fact, that as the young man started down the walk toward the white church, he stepped after him and laid a hand on his shoulder.

"What are you going to do now, my son?"

"I don't know, Sir. Join the navy," he grinned briefly, "and see the world make sense."

"Have you no ideas in mind? Your career—?"

"I'll carry on," said Willett. A warm soft breeze blew across his face as he stood bareheaded by the entrance to the churchyard. "It's a stinking life, but I'll carry on."

The old minister thoughtfully rubbed his prince-ness with a handkerchief, his faded blue eyes blinking in the afternoon-sun.

Chapter 19
INTUITION
The venerable rector, who had both christened and buried Lawrence Willett, was disturbed—this powerful bronzed son was getting ready to ride again. He tried to arouse in him some softening sense of family by pointing out the various inscriptions in the little churchyard.

He showed Willett where lay the ancestor who had been killed in the fighting around Fort Duquesne in the Year of Our Lord seventeen hundred and forty-five. The marker was of red stone, weathered, cracked, and nearly undecipherable. There was the Willet who had come home to die from the rigors of the Lewis and Clark empire-building expedition, and the three sons of Judge Nathaniel Willett who had galloped hell-for-leather with "Beauty" Stuart's cavalry into lines of belching guns.

Quite an illustrious cavalcade to ride behind alone, but Terry Willett had been knocking around the world too long to have assimilated any sense of family. He listened coldly and then looked at his wrist watch.

"Good-bye, sir," he said. "I'll be pushing along."

"Tereence," said the minister, "haven't you thought you might have a duty to—all of them here?"

Willett gave him a long straight glance.

"Duty," he said. "Don't talk to me of duty, sir. I'm a bust as an engineer and a worse bust as a son. Let it go at that."

The minister didn't want to let it go at that by any means, but there was nothing he could do about it.

"At least you might be interested in seeing your old home," he urged, putting his stiff aged fingers into Willett's firm and youthful clasp.

"A graceful courtesy to your father, Tereence?"

"Where is the governor's place?" The minister furnished explicit directions. Willett nodded.

"Might take a look it if. Thanks for everything; you were damn decent."

He strode off. "You were damn decent." The minister shook his head slowly, put his prince-ness back astride his nose, and reflected sadly that divinity schools have their limits.

The historic town square was protected by an iron fence—there was some sort of a statue—Willett walked through the town of his forefathers with the attitude of a man waiting for his train to get through a tunnel.

But he stopped to look at the house where his father had been born—a big white house with six columns rising to the roof cornice. There was a drive through an avenue of locust trees and at one side of the house were the overgrown remains of a terraced garden.

Nobody had lived here for some time—the house was boarded up, the grass needed mowing, and a weatherbeaten sign stuck in the lawn announced the property was for sale or rent and referred to some bank.

His face was a study as he looked searchingly at the place, as if to drink in a picture that would last because this was a day of last farewells before the world moved on. Some day he might want to remember this place.

A train whistle sounded down the valley. Willett snapped to. Good-bye, Dad, here's how "Old Dominion" dislaid to stop in Cartaret for the sake of passengers, but the little matter of a water tank was accepted as a necessary evil.

Clouds of steam issued from the hot boxes, a condenser waited in hand on the platform for the flash, and two little barefooted negro boys stood near the observation platform of a long silver-gray private car named "Debutante II," their eyes popping out of their heads.

Terry Willett arrived at the station on the jump.

"That was the New York train?" he asked the station agent.

"Yeah, but it ain't the local," said the agent. "This train don't stop for passengers."

"Whatever it's doing now," said Willett, "is all right with me."

He walked over to "Debutante II" and swung up on the observation platform.

"Hey!" yelled a brakeman. "That's a private car."

"Whatever it's doing now," said Willett, "is all right with me. What's private about it?"

"I'm tellin' you you can't ride there."

"If you don't like it," said Willett, "there are any number of things you can do with it."

"Do tell me in white servitor's coat came out on the platform."

"This is a private car, huh," he warned. "You can't ride heah. Ah'm telling you."

"Listen, you," said Willett. "You can't tell me anythin'."

"Tough guy, huh?" commented the brakeman from the station platform.

"Come on up here, flunky," invited Willett, "and find out for yourself."

The brakeman decided it didn't really make any difference anyway, but the negro began an officious protest. Willett inquired if he'd like to be tossed right the hell off the train entirely.

The inquiry was attended with an unmistakable eagerness and put an end to further argument. The train began to move, and Willett brushed him aside and went into the car.

It was a private car all right—big club chairs, a small mahogany bar, thick grey carpet and soft-toned curtains—a blend of luxurious comfort and modernistic beauty.

A pretty girl and two men were shooting dice on the floor. Tall glasses reposed perilously close to their heels, and a nearby buffet table was laden with a parade of bottles and bowls of cracked ice.

"Listen," the girl was saying spiritedly. "I left a six here and you can't put me behind the eight ball with Snake Eyes. A woman has some rights, you prates."

Her indignant pronouncement met with an exception from one of the men, a young army officer.

She leaned weakly back on her heels and looked at Willett.

"Well, well," she observed, "look what wandering boy saw the light in the window."

Davis Declares Utility Law Is Unconstitutional

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Jan. 13 (AP)—The new deal's utility holding company act was described today by John W. Davis as "a manifest violation of the constitution."

In a brief prepared for the circuit court of appeals and made public by the committee of utility executives, the New York lawyer called the act an attempt to "seize" new and "sweeping" powers. The brief was prepared in support of the decision of Federal Judge Coleman at Baltimore, November 7, holding the law unconstitutional.

The case arises from an appeal by trustees of the American States Public Service company as to whether they should register as required under the act.

The brief prepared by Davis and James Piper of Baltimore contends that "no section of the constitution gives congress power over holding companies any more than over any other class of corporations."

The government's case will be presented by John J. Burns, counsel for the securities commission, and by Thomas G. Corcoran and Benjamin V. Cohen.

Paid student guides are provided University of Texas visitors at Austin, Tex., to explain extensive development in recent years of the school's physical properties.

Hines Wins Los Angeles Open

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 13 (AP)—Touring golfers turned toward northern California today, with young Jimmy Hines, newly crowned king of the Los Angeles $5,000 open leading the brigade.

Hines, a strapping, free swinging professional from Garden City, Long Island, won the Los Angeles trophy and what was probably more important to him, $1,500 in cash, with a par 72-hole score of 280.

It was his second straight win in Southern California winter tournaments. The Sunday before he took the Riverside $3,000 open.

Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., tied with Hines at the start of the championship round, finished with a 281 to tie for second and third place money with Jimmy Thomson, Long Springs, who finished second on Ridgewood, N. J. They split $1,300.

The traveling pros will compete in the Sacramento open beginning Jan. 16 and the big San Francisco open Jan. 25.

Babies Sold and Stolen at San Antonio, Claim

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 13 (AP)—Assisted theft and sale of infants at birth in "baby farm" operations at San Antonio were under grand jury investigation today.

A reported increase in the racket led State Rep. J. Franklin Spears to arrange to attend the inquiry to obtain information to help frame legislation against the practice.

The San Antonio Express says the practice has existed here several years and that reports were current that some maternity homes and midwives attending unvetted mothers tell them their babies were dead and then sell the infants.

In some instances, one source said, the babies are disposed of by their mothers but that it is a usual practice for homes to admit women after accepting fees in advance and then stealing the children and selling them.

Another asserted angle of the racket was described as the practice of filing false information to the

PAMPA FARM LOAN ASSOCIATION WILL HOLD MEETING JANUARY 14

The Pampa National Farm Loan association is planning to hold the largest and best annual stockholders' meeting in its history Tuesday, January 14, at 3 p. m. The by-laws of all National Farm Loan associations in Texas provide that the annual meeting shall be held on this date. National Farm Loan associations are farmers' cooperative credit institutions and these annual meetings give an opportunity for the borrower-members to keep informed of the operations of their associations and to help select directors who manage the affairs of the associations for the ensuing year.

According to I. B. Hughey, secretary-treasurer of the Pampa association, this meeting is very important and every member of the association who can arrange to do so should attend. Members will hear reports of the operations of the association in 1935, will elect directors for the coming year, will transact other necessary business and will hear a special radio program.

A feature of the meetings will be the radio address at 3:30 p. m. to the 70,000 borrower-members of the 365 associations in Texas, by A. C. Williams, president of the Federal Farm Loan Board and general agent of the Farm Credit Administration of Houston. Radio stations listening to receive the message, Mr. Williams will speak to the various groups present at the shareholders' meeting through the cooperation of the Texas Quality Network which includes radio stations KPRC, Houston, WBAP, Ft. Worth, WFAA, Dallas, and WOAI, San Antonio.

Negro Executed—As He Desired

HUNTSVILLE, Jan. 13 (AP)—Henry Carr, negro, who said he had rather die in the electric chair than finish serving a 50-year sentence in the Louisiana penitentiary, was executed at the Texas prison early today for murdering his wife.

Carr escaped from the Louisiana prison before he killed his wife in Tyler county, Texas. He told prison officials he preferred the electric chair to the long term in Louisiana. He admitted slaying his wife.

PLANE DROPS BOMBS DAILY ON ETHIOPIA

500 BOMBS FALL ON FORT BUT ONLY SIX KILLED

ADDIS ABABA, Jan. 13. (AP)—Italian planes are bombarding Ethiopian camps and villages on the southwestern front daily. A European observer reported today after flying back to the capital from a visit to Ras Desta Demtu.

The greatest recent aerial assault was an attack a fortnight ago on Negelle, 190 miles northwest of Dolo, where 15 planes dropped 500 bombs, but only six persons were killed and 40 wounded, this neutral source said.

The fascist squadrons are flying and down the Gambia river every day between Fatick and Senegambia, but their bombing is ineffective because the natives are fully prepared for them.

This was the first authentic news to reach here of aerial activities in the south since the bombardment two weeks ago near Dolo, in which the Swedish Red Cross Unit was destroyed.

The observer was on the southwestern front for a fortnight.

Army Is Hidden

He said most of Ras Desta's army was concentrated in the vicinity of Malga Ladir, 45 miles up the Gannale range from Dolo, headquarters of Gen. Ruffalo Grandani's main fascist forces, but that Ras Desta and his principal lieutenants were hidden safely in ravines.

He said the aerial attacks were directed at the camps and villages of the Ethiopian front lines, and 250 miles northwest of Dolo far behind the Ethiopian front lines and near the sources of the web of rivers converging on Dolo.

His reports of mounting activity in the southwest accompanied the arrival of the "little rainy season" in the northern front and unreasonable rains apparently hampering Italian activities in the southeast.

The observer said terrific heat, lack of water and widespread malaria in the southwestern desert sector made a real Italian offensive in that region unlikely, although such a campaign was predicted widely after the eastern Ogaden province drive apparently was abandoned.

British Ships Sail

Four British ships steamed southward today from Portsmouth en route to the Mediterranean ports being vacated by four others.

The battleship Nelson, flying the flag of Admiral Sir Robert Backhouse, led the destroyers Westminster, Wrestler and Windsor to replace the warships Hood, Orion and Neptune. The families sailed northward yesterday.

The British spring cruise strength when finally collected, is to include four first line craft and nine destroyers. Two squadrons of 29 ships will fly French flags on a Mediterranean cruise.

The naval movements of both Great Britain and France, authorities emphasize, are technical maneuvers entirely unrelated to activities of the League of Nations council which meets at Geneva Jan. 20 to consider additional sanctions against Italy.

Thirty-five hundred more troops embarked in two steamers from Naples for East Africa.

The crash of an Italian bomber on a hillside near Amara took the lives of three fascist soldiers headed by Lieutenant Lanza, pilot.

"INFO" RETIRES

HOUSTON, Jan. 13. (AP)—Marcellus E. Foster today relinquished his post as editor of the Scripps-Howard Houston Press and Allan C. Bartlett, former editor of the San Diego (Calif.) Sun, succeeded him. Foster, who has been an active newspaperman here for more than 40 years, retired on the advice of his physician. He was named editor emeritus and will write a daily column for the press.

AI Smith Seen As Active Foe Of Roosevelt

By E. C. PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

AI Smith's return to the open arena of politics has energized the democratic scene greatly, although opinions differ as to the ultimate importance of the event.

It is beginning to be understood generally that Mr. Smith's objections to Mr. Roosevelt and his policies are fundamental, deep-seated, earnest and tinged with a personal exasperation which almost surpasses the bounds of ordinary language.

The conviction that the break between the two is complete and enduring on Smith's side at least, arises from several great and small causes.

One is the comparatively minor incident of the rejected White House invitation. Another is Smith's constant devotion to the aims and activities of the Liberty League, now the most active engine of organized effort against Roosevelt. The strong cause, perhaps, is the now widely-disseminated knowledge of private and semi-private remarks Smith has made about the "new Political circles believe they have arrived at a perfect four, denoting clearly that Smith is out to make active and perhaps desperate battle against the administration, and particularly against the head of the administration.

What such an opposition may amount to, measured in terms of final results, is a question about which the politicians do not agree.

Talk that Smith may try seriously to head off a Roosevelt renomination, perhaps by becoming a candidate himself, has encountered much skepticism among party leaders.

Those who speak of a possible Smith candidacy must know that experience has shown it virtually impossible to break any President's hold on the machinery of his party.

They must recall that even the astute, virile and popular former President Theodore Roosevelt was beaten decisively in just such a battle by the discredited, politically inept President William Howard Taft.

No one calls the present President Roosevelt inept politically, or without popular appeal; in fact, it is Smith whose recent record is most severely judged by the voters. This is his great public following suffered greatly in 1928, when he not only lost his own state, but saw the Republicans break the solid south.

Four years later he fought a pitched convention battle with his old friend Franklin Roosevelt, and was again defeated. The tradition of his great public following suffered greatly in 1932, when he not only lost his own state, but saw the Republicans break the solid south.

What then? Obviously, there are several other courses open to Smith—none of them pleasing to the Roosevelt camp.

While the 1928 nominee may not be the political "strong man" he once was, even his political foes scarcely regard him as a wholly negligible quantity.

They argue that most of the voters who will listen to him already are against Roosevelt anyway, but they concede that he is a wily and dangerous opponent, always ready to work rather hard with them than against them.

His personality, his experience, his connection with the important Tammany organization, and his rank in the party as a former presidential nominee all suggest that his dissent cannot exactly be ignored, nor laughed off.

The precise character of his future activities must await further clarification from Smith himself. If he knows just what he will do, and whether he will go the length of bolting the party ticket, he is telling no one.

The one clear conclusion, on the basis of all the facts, is that Smith is capable of making a great deal of trouble of one kind or another for Roosevelt, and evidently intends to.

FARMERS WILL PICKET HALLS OF CONGRESS

A NEW FARM PROGRAM IS DEMANDED BY GROUPS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13. (AP)—The capital became a camp of "embattled farmers" today as determination spread among agricultural groups to "picket" legislative halls until congress enacts a new farm program.

A poll of agricultural representatives from virtually all sections of the country revealed arrangements to maintain congressional contacts on a larger scale than ever before.

Moreover, there were signs that when congress gets down to the actual drafting of a new farm bill, some farm representatives may fight for ideas not contemplated by farm administration officials.

The proposal being pushed by administration men, and incorporated the ordinary sense, with placards, but their presence will be felt in the deliberations leading to actual legislation.

L. J. Taber, master of the national grange which always has been known among major farm groups as a friendly enemy of AAA, said the action of farm leaders in adopting the principles of the agricultural adjustment act as a foundation for substitute legislation was "good psychology."

He intimated opposing ideas had been subordinated to the interest of harmony but that they would be given full play when drafting of the new act got underway.

Gasoline Prices

Advanced a Cent

CORSICANA, Jan. 13. (AP)—Texaco and Humble Oil company filling stations here posted advances of one cent a gallon retail on all grades of gasoline at the start of business today.

Other major companies were expected to follow suit. Advances last week in crude oil prices were largely responsible.

The new prices posted by Texaco and Humble were 15, 18 and 20 cents per gallon for the three grades.

East Texas gasoline, produced by independent refiners, was selling at 13 cents.

Army Is Hidden

He said most of Ras Desta's army was concentrated in the vicinity of Malga Ladir, 45 miles up the Gannale range from Dolo, headquarters of Gen. Ruffalo Grandani's main fascist forces, but that Ras Desta and his principal lieutenants were hidden safely in ravines.

He said the aerial attacks were directed at the camps and villages of the Ethiopian front lines, and 250 miles northwest of Dolo far behind the Ethiopian front lines and near the sources of the web of rivers converging on Dolo.

His reports of mounting activity in the southwest accompanied the arrival of the "little rainy season" in the northern front and unreasonable rains apparently hampering Italian activities in the southeast.

The observer said terrific heat, lack of water and widespread malaria in the southwestern desert sector made a real Italian offensive in that region unlikely, although such a campaign was predicted widely after the eastern Ogaden province drive apparently was abandoned.

British Ships Sail

Four British ships steamed southward today from Portsmouth en route to the Mediterranean ports being vacated by four others.

The battleship Nelson, flying the flag of Admiral Sir Robert Backhouse, led the destroyers Westminster, Wrestler and Windsor to replace the warships Hood, Orion and Neptune. The families sailed northward yesterday.

The British spring cruise strength when finally collected, is to include four first line craft and nine destroyers. Two squadrons of 29 ships will fly French flags on a Mediterranean cruise.

The naval movements of both Great Britain and France, authorities emphasize, are technical maneuvers entirely unrelated to activities of the League of Nations council which meets at Geneva Jan. 20 to consider additional sanctions against Italy.

Thirty-five hundred more troops embarked in two steamers from Naples for East Africa.

The crash of an Italian bomber on a hillside near Amara took the lives of three fascist soldiers headed by Lieutenant Lanza, pilot.

Gasoline Prices

Advanced a Cent

CORSICANA, Jan. 13. (AP)—Texaco and Humble Oil company filling stations here posted advances of one cent a gallon retail on all grades of gasoline at the start of business today.

Other major companies were expected to follow suit. Advances last week in crude oil prices were largely responsible.

The new prices posted by Texaco and Humble were 15, 18 and 20 cents per gallon for the three grades.

East Texas gasoline, produced by independent refiners, was selling at 13 cents.

$100 FOR ONE BUCK

COLBY, Kan. (AP)—Harvey Flipse scarcely could believe his eyes when he came upon a deer while hunting near here—not in 25 years had a wild deer been seen in this section. He brought down the four-point buck and boasted of his exploit—until a game warden caused him to pay a $100 fine under an old game law. Where the deer came from remained a mystery.

AI Smith Seen As Active Foe Of Roosevelt

By E. C. PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

AI Smith's return to the open arena of politics has energized the democratic scene greatly, although opinions differ as to the ultimate importance of the event.

It is beginning to be understood generally that Mr. Smith's objections to Mr. Roosevelt and his policies are fundamental, deep-seated, earnest and tinged with a personal exasperation which almost surpasses the bounds of ordinary language.

The conviction that the break between the two is complete and enduring on Smith's side at least, arises from several great and small causes.

One is the comparatively minor incident of the rejected White House invitation. Another is Smith's constant devotion to the aims and activities of the Liberty League, now the most active engine of organized effort against Roosevelt. The strong cause, perhaps, is the now widely-disseminated knowledge of private and semi-private remarks Smith has made about the "new Political circles believe they have arrived at a perfect four, denoting clearly that Smith is out to make active and perhaps desperate battle against the administration, and particularly against the head of the administration.

What such an opposition may amount to, measured in terms of final results, is a question about which the politicians do not agree.

Talk that Smith may try seriously to head off a Roosevelt renomination, perhaps by becoming a candidate himself, has encountered much skepticism among party leaders.

Those who speak of a possible Smith candidacy must know that experience has shown it virtually impossible to break any President's hold on the machinery of his party.

They must recall that even the astute, virile and popular former President Theodore Roosevelt was beaten decisively in just such a battle by the discredited, politically inept President William Howard Taft.

No one calls the present President Roosevelt inept politically, or without popular appeal; in fact, it is Smith whose recent record is most severely judged by the voters. This is his great public following suffered greatly in 1928, when he not only lost his own state, but saw the Republicans break the solid south.

What then? Obviously, there are several other courses open to Smith—none of them pleasing to the Roosevelt camp.

While the 1928 nominee may not be the political "strong man" he once was, even his political foes scarcely regard him as a wholly negligible quantity.

They argue that most of the voters who will listen to him already are against Roosevelt anyway, but they concede that he is a wily and dangerous opponent, always ready to work rather hard with them than against them.

His personality, his experience, his connection with the important Tammany organization, and his rank in the party as a former presidential nominee all suggest that his dissent cannot exactly be ignored, nor laughed off.

The precise character of his future activities must await further clarification from Smith himself. If he knows just what he will do, and whether he will go the length of bolting the party ticket, he is telling no one.

The one clear conclusion, on the basis of all the facts, is that Smith is capable of making a great deal of trouble of one kind or another for Roosevelt, and evidently intends to.

Rudyard Kipling Is Seriously Ill

LONDON, Jan. 13. (AP)—Rudyard Kipling, Britain's famous bard of adventures in India, became seriously ill suddenly today and underwent an emergency operation in a London hospital for a gastric disorder.

The poet, who observed his 70th birthday anniversary just two weeks ago today, was stricken in a suite of Brown's hotel and in a semi-conscious condition, was taken in an ambulance to the Central Middlesex hospital this morning.

The first hospital announcement said "an urgent operation was performed." The noon bulletin said the patient was "doing as well as could be expected."

He arrived at the hospital at 8:00 a. m. and his condition was so critical that an emergency operation was decided on. He was taken to the operating theatre at 9:15 a. m.

The operation, requiring almost two hours, was performed by Dr. Alfred E. Webb-Johnson, honorary surgeon of the Middlesex hospital. An assistant secretary of the hospital said:

"It was a very urgent, complicated operation, but the patient's condition is fairly satisfactory now."
