Milk Baths Suggested As Problem Solution

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI)—As everyone must by now be aware, the government is seriously concerned over the sharp drop in milk consumption in recent months.

President Kennedy called attention to the situation last week by directing that milk be served at all meals at the White House. He said most Americans needed milk's nutrition.

Then his undermanned press secretary, Pierre Salinger, gave the campaign another boost by serving milk to some journalists at a White House news briefing.

Unfortunately, however, no one as yet has more than a vague idea as to what caused the milk slump. Until the reasons for it have been ascertained, I doubt there will be much improvement.

One theory is that many people stopped drinking milk because they had heard it might contain radioactive fallout. In my opinion, this theory won't hold water.

Consider what happened after reports began circulating that heavy smoking might cause cancer. Cigarette consumption has been increasing ever since.

By the same token, it would be logical to expect that milk consumption likewise would increase if people really thought the stuff was harmful.

I believe a more valid theory might be that milk consumption has declined because it is too wholesome. Sales possibly would be stimulated if people were led to feel that milk drinking is wicked.

Maybe it would help if they bottled milk in fifths instead of quarts.

Apart from that, it seems to me that Hollywood is at least partly responsible for the drop in milk consumption.

It has been quite a while since any movie studio has turned out a sweeping historical drama which featured a sise-eyed Egyptian slave girl taking a milk bath.

I can remember a time when any director who failed to include at least one milk bath scene in an epic of that sort would have been drummed out of the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences.

Considering retakes and all of that, Hollywood in the old days probably kept a couple of dairy herds operating full time.

There's no telling how many gallons were consumed by stage-struck young girls who saw the pictures and became convinced there was something glamorous about lactic immersion.

I suggest, therefore, that Salinger seek to revive this fad at his next news briefing by dunking himself in a tub of milk—making certain, of course, that he first removes his cigar.

Foreign Commentary

UPI Foreign News Analyst

In the Middle East, where tempers flare quickly and calls to assassination are accepted strategy among feuding Arab leaders, new alignments and possible new sources of friction are emerging.

The changes emphasize the waning influence of the United Arab Republic's President Gamal Nasser and the re-emergence of Syria as a pivot in a region whose stability is vital not only for its oil but because it stands at the crossroads linking Europe, Asia and Africa.

The new alignment finds Syria linked with Iraq in a defensive agreement coordinating the activities of their armed forces.

It finds Jordan increasingly isolated.

It finds a temporary truce between Saudi Arabia and Egypt shattered by a torrent of angry words beamed from Cairo radio.

As Nasser's influence on Arab affairs has waned through the loss of Syria to the U.A.R., that of his chief rival, Premier Abdul Kassem of Iraq, has increased.

The link between Syria and Iraq, even though presently a weak one, cannot be but a blow to Nasser's pride and also a disappointment to King Hussein of Jordan.

So long as Syria remained tied with the U.A.R., relations with Iraq frequently were bitter. Now they are directly reversed.

Iraq and Syria billed their military agreement as a defensive pact against Israel, but they failed to consult Jordan which has the longest border with Israel of any Arab state.

In effect, it left Hussein on his own, sandwiched between the Syria-Iraq agreement on the one hand and hostile Egypt on the other, with Saudi Arabia his only chance of possible support.

Relations between Egypt and Saudi Arabia have been cooling ever since last September's coup by which Syria broke away from Nasser's U.A.R. Nasser accused King Saud of having contributed more than $5 million to assist the Syrian break-away.

The Soviet Union, always ready to exploit Mideast differences, is playing both sides against the middle, offering new forms of aid to both Kassem and Nasser.

Marriage Won't End Her Career, Even For Frankie

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Dancer Juliet Prowse says she "definitely" will continue her career after she marries Frank Sinatra.

"I have no idea of retiring," the 25-year-old performer told United Press International before leaving during the weekend to visit her family in Johannesburg, South Africa.

Nine days ago, Miss Prowse told a columnist that Sinatra, 46, "wants me to give up the business" and that she probably would.

What changed her mind?

"Just thinking about it," she said. "The idea of not performing any more.

"It's been a part of my life for many years, and I don't feel I can put my feet up on the desk and never dance again."

Miss Prowse, who was born in Bombay, India, said her family was "very thrilled" about her marrying the famous singer-actor.

"They know Frank and like him very much," she said. "They met him when they were here last year."

Their engagement was announced Jan. 9, and they plan to marry in June.

Fritz Kreisler, Great Violinist, Dies In New York

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fritz Kreisler, one of the world's greatest violinists and a composer of several of its best-loved violin pieces, died yesterday afternoon at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center. He would have been 87 next Friday.

Kreisler entered the hospital Jan. 13 for treatment of an undisclosed ailment.

Kreisler retired from the concert stage in 1950 after a career that spanned 68 years and three generations of music lovers. He was born in Vienna but fell in love with America during his numerous tours and finally made his home in New York. He became an American citizen in 1943.

As early as 1901, he was recognized by critics as "supreme among the violinists of our time."

As his career matured he was loved almost as much for his warm, endearing personality as for his mastery of the instrument.

He was the composer of such melodious violin numbers as "Caprice Viennoise" and "Liebesfreud" and several light operas, of which the most notably successful was "Apple Blossoms."

Negroes Attend Virginia School

LYNCHBURG, Va. (UPI)—Two Negro children yesterday became the first of their race to attend classes with white students in this 175-year-old central Virginia city of 35,000 residents.

The children, Linda Woodruff and Owen Cardwell Jr., both 14, arrived at the city's only white high school at 8:52 a.m., several minutes after more than 2,000 white students had entered. There were no incidents.

Bill Cook was the New York Rangers' top goal-getting each year from 1928 to 1934.

GETS HEART AWARD

NEW YORK (UPI)—The American Heart Association has named Clarence B. Randall of Chicago recipient of the 1962 "Heart-of-the-Year" award. The retired board chairman of the Inland Steel Co. will receive the award from President Kennedy Feb. 2. The award is for "faith, courage and achievement in meeting the personal challenge of heart disease."

Farmers Offered Chance To Take Washington Trip

WACO (Sp) — Texas Farmers Union's state president, Jay Naman, announced today that Texas farmers will have the opportunity to join the annual Washington bus trip leaving Texas for Washington, February 1st, for a five-day visit in the nation's capital. The bus, originating in Lubbock, will pick up passengers from different areas in Texas as it travels across the state, and after stopovers in Mississippi and Alabama en route, will arrive in Washington on Sunday, Feb. 4. Purpose of the bus trip is to give Texas farmers an opportunity to see first-hand the operation of the Department of Agriculture, and the behind-the-scenes activity in the Congress. Bus trippers will have the opportunity to visit with their Congressmen and discuss with them legislation which will be considered during this session, and express their viewpoint on the grass roots opinion regarding farm legislation. Some Congressmen, who have voted against necessary farm legislation in the past, may be surprised to see that their farmer constituents are "looking over their shoulders." President Naman said, National Farmers Union has planned a busy schedule for the Washington bus trippers, including two days of sightseeing around the capitol and other entertainment. The Farmers Union legislative office in Washington will act as host and brief the Texans on legislation affecting farmers, which is up for consideration in this session of Congress.

Sarnoff Defends Current System Of TV Programs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Robert W. Sarnoff, board chairman of the National Broadcasting Co., said yesterday the principal critics of television never would be satisfied under the present system of network programming. He also said a proposal by the Federal Communications Commission to regulate networks as well as individual stations was "unnecessary and unwise as a matter of principle and public policy, and unworkable as a practical matter." Sarnoff said he knew of no way to meet the demands for "special-interest" programming other than to create what he called "a supplemental television service differently structured and differently supported." The NBC executive expressed his views as the FCC resumed hearings on network programming. Sarnoff indicated that network television could not be compared to other media such as newspapers and magazines. He said these media can choose their own audience "and be chosen by it," so that those with specialized tastes have virtually no contact with publications that fail to meet their own tastes. "The opposite is true of network television," Sarnoff declared. "The 49 million homes it serves represent not one public but a complex of many different and overlapping publics, encompassing all levels of taste and interest, education and sophistication." Sarnoff said the inherent characteristics of American television — advertising support, competition and its operation as a mass medium — have been responsible for "its success." "Ironically," he added, "these very factors are also largely responsible for the complaints, real and imagined, that have filled so many pages of this inquiry's record." Sarnoff's opposition to FCC regulation of the networks coincided with testimony last week by representatives of the Columbia Broadcasting System, The American Broadcasting Co. is scheduled to be heard next week.

Fruit Supplies Good In Spite Of Texas Freeze

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department said today that despite freeze losses of Texas citrus, total U. S. supplies of fresh oranges, lemons, and apples remaining to be marketed during the first half of 1962 are somewhat larger than a year ago. In a review of the fruit situation, the department said supplies of grapefruit, tangerines, pears, and grapes are smaller than in the first half of 1961. Stocks of most classes of processed fruits are heavier than a year ago. Grower prices for the larger supplies of fresh fruits in early January averaged somewhat below a year earlier. But consumer demand for fresh and processed fruit continues good, and export demand for fresh apples and pears is better than a year ago. The department said initial indications were that damaged fruit in Florida could be salvaged, but that further fresh market citrus from Texas this year would be negligible. The department said that while damage undoubtedly was serious in individual orchards or production areas, especially Texas, the effect of the freezes upon total U.S. production has not yet been fully determined.

Real Men Just Play It Straight!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: First, I would like to say that I am ALL MAN. I have been going with a woman who owns a small beauty shop. She has been after me for a long time to let her give me a perm. She says she can give me a perm that will last for a long time. My hair is very straight and I have a good thick crop and it never occurred to me to have a curl or wave put in it. This woman claims it will not hurt my hair and I would look a lot better. Maybe I would, but just the idea of getting a permanent makes me squirm. Also, there is the problem of my showing up at work all of a sudden with a headful of waves or curls. (She said she could give me either.) Do real men do this, or is it just for sissies? What should I do?

leaving said, "Well, tomorrow I must call on another cripple." My husband didn't say anything, but I felt the stab in my heart just as I know he must have felt it in his. Why are people so cruel? Or are we overly sensitive? How are refined and intelligent people supposed to react to such remarks?

HURT
DEAR HURT: While meaning no harm, your friend was inexcusably thoughtless. Infirmities are hard enough to bear without crude references to them before the afflicted. You should have suggested to your caller (in private) that the word "handicapped" is much kinder than "cripple."

Even a two-week hospital stay can lower your morale unless you plan ahead. Take along a pretty robe, two or three bedjackets and some favorite but modest gowns. Choose your cosmetic carefully for your stay; they should be the pastel shades. This girl (left) starts the day cheerfully wearing a pretty bedjacket as she breakfasts from a tray. A small corsage (center) can be pinned to robe or jacket; not all flowers need be in vases. She uses (right) a nonsmeary type lipstick which is long-lasting and easy on the hospital linens. She both looks and feels better for taking trouble with her appearance. And her visitors are appreciative of the effort she has made.

Working Wives Isn't Key To Joblessness

Labor Secretary Goldberg's long enough to make herself—mail bag is heavy these days with letters suggesting ways to cure unemployment. The idea that everybody knows what happens in a home when the woman of the house has to be away for awhile. All the thousand and one little things that a housewife does routinely just don't get done, and living becomes pretty makeshift. Let the married working women of the country all step out of the jobs for a week — and office routine wouldn't fare much better. And that's just part of the story. Think what a recession we would have if all the two-income families suddenly became one-income families. The working wife in most families isn't tucking her pay check away in a savings account. It's going to buy all the things that give work to men — homes, automobiles, furniture, appliances and all sorts of things the family couldn't have on one pay check.

How To Be Beautiful Though Ill In Hospital

By ALICIA HART
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Viruses, infections, breaks and sprains and, of course, the happy arrival of a new baby make it necessary for many of the fair sex to spend some time in the hospital. But it takes more than a bout with a few germs to dim a girl's desire to look fresh and pretty. And if she's hospital bound because of a blessed event, she surely wants to look her best for dad and the family when they visit. Here are a few pointers to help make you an attractive patient: Don't take too many cosmetics to the hospital. You need only the essentials. Face powder, cleansing cream and lipstick head the list — and be considerate enough to use the nonsmeary lipstick that won't come off on the linens. If your skin is dry, you might prefer to take along body lotion to be used at rubdown time instead of alcohol. A lightly scented cologne is a must, too, not just so that you'll seem dainty to others, but for your own morale as well. Don't take along a lot of eye make-up. You'll look fresher without it. All you need is a pencil for your brows. A good hand mirror or a make-up case that can be propped up at the bed is invaluable. Some hospitals have beauty salons. If yours doesn't, have a manicure just before you are admitted. You won't be doing any work, so it should last for a week at least. Your hair should be shampooed and set before your date of entry, and you might take along some dry shampoo for a quick cleaning if necessary. Long hair can be attractively braided so that it will always look neat. Those flowers-by-wire gifts can add beauty to more than just your room. Snip off a bud or two and pin them to your bedjacket or robe. Or you might prefer to clip them to your hair. Either way, they'll add a touch of charm and fragrance. Many get well bouquets wired through Florists' Telegraph Delivery come with small corsages of the flowers in the arrangement. Bring with you two or three shortie nightgowns, a bed-jacket and a long robe and slippers for when you're up and about, pale blue and pink are most flattering. White can look too stark against a hospital background, and green and yellow can make all but the robust look sallow. Don't strew your discarded possessions about the room when you leave. Remove everything that belongs to you so that you'll be remembered as being thoughtful as well as pretty.

★ Polly's Quiz ★

By Polly Cramer

All those living rooms you write to me about have something in common: assorted colors and furnishings with no common bond to link them together into a harmonious whole. This comes from a lack of advance planning. Most of us can't have everything all at once, but we can plan our rooms as we would eventually like them to look, then work toward that plan. If you know it's going to take a while to complete the room, plan much more carefully. Avoid high-style colors. Choose combinations that will always be a joy to behold. Steer clear of offbeat furniture styles that so often turn out to be merely weird. Disregard casual advice of well-meaning friends if you lack confidence in your own taste. Instead take the advice of a decorator, who will help you work out a suitable plan. Dear Polly: We have made another mistake. Please help us decide on slip covers for a couch and chair. Two walls are white while two walls and a long valance board are apricot. Love seat and chair are perimmon red and draperies are solid beige. We lean toward provincial prints and usually buy one nice piece of maple furniture at a time—Mrs. D. G. G. Dear Mrs. D. G. G.: To prevent another mistake, you need change other than just slip covers. Work around the things that are most expensive to replace: the black-and-white tweed carpet, the red couch and chair. Paint the brick walls and the valance board white like the other wall. Use draperies of a provincial print that has black, red, white and blue. Pick up the blue to use elsewhere in the room. Dear Polly: Our living room walls need painting and I would like to get new drapes. I must keep gray slip covered couch and gray carpet. The room is almost too light. Walls are broken with a fireplace, two picture windows, glass blocks and some walnut paneling. What colors for stack pillows for a bench in front of one window?—Mrs. J. B. Dear Mrs. J. B.: Medium green walls would make your living room seem cooler. Because of the many broken areas, I suggest curtains in the same color. Cushions on bench could be green and two shades of tangerine for a flash of lively color. Dear Polly: My new kitchen cabinets are cocoa birch. Counter tops are white and linoleum is cocoa and white. What color should I paint the doors and woodwork? I would also like some suggestions on wallpaper and curtains?—Mrs. Z. S. Dear Mrs. Z. S.: Matching wallpaper and curtain fabric usually look well in the kitchen. An all-over design in brown, blue, white and gold should be just the thing. Paint woodwork, including doors, a soft blue. Instead of curtains, why not make roller shades of the print? Dear Reader: A heavy volume of mail doesn't permit Mrs. Cramer to answer her letters and post cards individually. But she will comment in her column on decorating problems of general interest. She cannot undertake to return floor plans or fabric swatches which are enclosed with letters.

JFK Portrait Stirs Controversy

By BOYD LEWIS
WASHINGTON (NEA) — Britian's Queen sat 16 times for Pietro Annigoni, the Florentine master, princess Margaret posed 33 times for her portrait. President Kennedy did not pose at all but permitted the artist to spend three days in his White House office sketching him in action. The result is perhaps the most controversial of a succession of disputed portraits by Annigoni — his impression in tempera of a deadly serious leader in the swirl of crisis. "I have never painted a portrait in so unusual a way," Annigoni explained to the Newspaper Enterprise Association. "I do not know what they will say of my Kennedy. I am told it will be controversial."

The artist shrugged his massive shoulders, resigned as one who has been through these things before. They said of his royal portraits: the Queen was more woman than royalty; his Prince Philip looked "sinister"; his Princess Margaret looked like the Mona Lisa.

(Annigoni's portrait was commissioned by Time magazine, which displays it on this week's cover in connection with naming Kennedy "Man of the Year.")

Annigoni said Mr. Kennedy asked him at their first meeting, "What do you want of me?" "I want you to sit still for a little while," the painter replied.

The outcome, said Annigoni, was that the President allowed him to set up a sketching easel in his office — and then proceeded with business as usual. "This very agreeable gentleman did not sit at all," said Annigoni. I drew many sketches while he moved about. He had meetings. He talked on the telephone. He received visitors. He posed for photographers. I was just a piece of furniture. But I saw him as he really is. Not smiling for the camera. That is not how I saw him.

"Then I went to my hotel room and painted my impression of this President as he did all these things. This is not how I like to work. I am not certain how it comes out."

Annigoni's Kennedy has a moody, almost glum expression. He has caught the physical characteristics of the President, especially the slanting eyelids. But the hunch of the shoulders is that of a man at work on his desk and his tie is skewed under one tip of his collar.

Annigoni, who had unhampered run of Buckingham Palace while doing British royalty, had difficulty at the White House gate.

"Each day," he related, "it was the same thing. Always different guards. Never letting me pass without explanations. I would explain, 'I am Pietro Annigoni. I am an Italian painter. I have an appointment to paint the President.'"

"The guard looks me over very carefully. (What he saw was a bear of a man of 51, with bushy sideburns, a beret, a fur-lined short overcoat and an easel under his arm.) Then he calls someone on the telephone and says, 'There is a Mr. Pilito escorted to the President's office where I set up my easel and sketch. Many men come in and sit down around his desk. They talk about the Congo. They pay no attention to me.'"

"The photographers come in and take Mr. Kennedy's picture. Smiling. They pay no attention to the painter in the corner."

"I fill my sketch pads with my felt pen. The eyes — each is different you know. The nose. The telephone. If only this man would sit still for a few minutes."

Annigoni has gone back to Florence, where he has a "bottega" or school of apprentices who grind his colors, help with backgrounds and learn his techniques without charge.

And where the sitters sit!

Collectors' Package Deal Means Dollars For Mint

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Mint is making money making money.

The money it's making comes in special cellophane packages which contain hand-made sets of freshly-minted U.S. coins.

The government charges coin collectors $2.10 for such a "proof set." It contains a penny, nickel, dime, quarter and fifty-cent piece with a face value of 91 cents.

Leland Howard, assistant director of the mint, said about 3 million proof sets will be shipped to collectors by the end of the year.

Figuring manufacturing and mailing costs at 35 cents a set, the mint estimates that its money selling operation will make a $1.9 million profit this year.

The government first began making special sets of coins for collectors almost 100 years ago — in 1863. The operation was suspended during World War II and not resumed until 1950 when the mint made 54,000 sets.

In 1961, the mint turned out 1.7 million sets and it now plans to make 3.5 million of them in 1962.

Safety Chairman Taken By Death

GAINESVILLE (UPI) — Tom R. Hickman, 75, chairman of Texas Public Safety Commission and former Texas Ranger captain, died yesterday.

The commission is the policy making board that governs the Department of Public Safety.

Hickman joined the Rangers in 1919 and served with them until 1936. He was named to the safety commission in 1956, and appointed chairman on Feb. 17, 1961.

Celestial Show To Feature Five 'Bright Planets'

By United Press International

Astronomers and soothsayers look forward to an uncommon celestial event next week.

For the first time in more than 400 years, the five "bright planets" will be roughly lined up with each other, the sun and the new moon next Sunday and Monday.

The planets, in order of distance from the sun, are Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn. The others — Uranus, Neptune and Pluto — are too far away to be seen with the naked eye by people on earth.

The lineup will see Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn grouped more closely to each other and the sun than at any other time since Feb. 5, 1524. There won't be another until May 3, 2000.

The five planets will be so near the sun in the heavens as to be overwhelmed by the solar brilliance.

But a total eclipse of the sun by the moon Feb. 5 will give the bunched-up planets a brief opportunity to put on a spectacular show in the eastern sky for persons in a geographic position to witness it.

The eclipse, according to the World Almanac, will start at sunrise over the island of Borneo. The shadow will cross the Celebes and New Guinea and cut a path most of the way across the Pacific.

Kite Champ Told To Go Fly Kite Somewhere Else

HONOLULU (UPI) — Pablo Cannote, 67, self-styled kite-flying champion of the world, isn't too well liked by Honolulu Airport officials.

A United Air Lines pilot, easing his DCs jet in for a landing the other day, sent this terse message to the airport control tower: "Hazard to air navigation" — and zoomed off again.

After scanning the skies over the downtown area, officials at the tower spotted Cannote's plastic and bamboo kite over the landing approach area.

A police officer patiently helped Cannote roll up the 4,000 feet of string and told him, "Please go fly a kite, but somewhere else."

Five Men, Dog Are Asphyxiated

BLUFF CITY, Ill. (UPI) — Five ice fishermen and their beagle dog were found dead yesterday in a lakeside cabin, apparently asphyxiated by fumes from a gas stove.

The men had come to Anderson Lake near Peoria and Manito, Ill., to fish in this conservation area along the Illinois River some 40 miles northwest of Springfield.
