

AMA Favors 'Peer Review' To Prevent Incompetent Doctors From Doing Harm

EDITOR'S NOTE—One of the pressing concerns of the medical profession is to keep incompetent doctors from doing harm. To achieve this doctors have set up various procedures, one of them being doctors reviewing the work of other doctors. Does it work? Following is the second of three articles on the quality of medicine in the United States.

By C.G. McDANIEL
AP Science writer

"Primum non nocere." That's Latin meaning, "Above all, do no harm."

Doctors commit themselves to this principle when they go to medical school, and for most of them it is a sacred, lifelong commitment.

As in any group of human beings, however, there are those who depart from the highest principles of their profession, and these doctors continue to see patients, just as do those who maintain the highest standards.

One way the incompetents are weeded out is through license revocation or suspension by state medical boards. But critics say this method is rarely used unless a doctor commits a crime.

The method favored by organized medicine is peer review, although there are critics of this system also. Peer review is defined by the American Medical Association as "evaluation by practicing physicians of the quality and efficiency of services ordered or performed by other practicing physicians. Peer review is the all-inclusive term for medical review efforts."

Related to peer review are medical practice analysis and "claims review," sometimes referred to as utilization review and medical audit.

Under the AMA concept, the analysis is the job of the medical society designed to coordinate all peer review efforts of a community, including application of standards for the best patient care and evaluation of the quality, volume and cost of care.

Claims review involves settling disputes over charges for services.

Under AMA guidelines, local, county and state medical societies are responsible for setting up peer review procedures. This usually means appointment of a group of physicians from within the society—a committee of peers—to check on others within the society.

Although the AMA has set down suggested procedures, these are not binding on any of the affiliate societies, and the procedures vary from place to place.

Generally, peer review procedures begin when a patient complains about the way he was treated or the bill he was charged, or an insurance company complains that a bill submitted by a doctor is out of line.

Doctors, too, may register complaints against their colleagues if they think they are hospitalizing patients too frequently or are prescribing too many drugs or are doing other things considered to be bad medicine.

In a hospital, a physician's areas of practice may be limited if his work is found to be substandard.

In the case of a patient complaint, the peer review committee may, after investigation, tell the patient the treatment he received was the best available or may find that the physician did err and advise him that he should alter his practice.

In serious cases, a medical society may censure a physician or, in rare instances, expel him from membership.

The peer review committee may tell the insurance company that a charge was the usual fee and reasonable for a particular service, or it may tell the physician his fees were out of line, or it may suggest a compromise fee.

Increasingly, computers are being used by insurance companies to determine the going rates for procedures and to provide statistical information on the procedures of physicians whose services are covered under such plans.

They also establish the period of hospitalization required for specified surgery or medical treatment, without complications.

Thus, more consistent standards may be set. Eventually, under sponsorship of the AMA, some sort of computerized national data may be available.

companies are going to have the best data available.

If a national health insurance program is adopted, as many medical and political leaders predict, efforts to develop national criteria should be spurred.

Pending in Congress are measures which would set up peer review organizations in conjunction with Medicare. Sen. Wallace Bennett, R-Utah, has proposed establishment of a Professional Standards Review Organization, to be formed by state or local medical societies.

The AMA has proposed Peer Review Organization legislation as part of its national health care financing plan. This proposal calls for a national council of 11 physicians, including the assistant secretary for health of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, who would establish administrative guidelines for peer review in matters relating to reasonableness of charges and the need and quality of services.

State PRO commissions, appointed by state medical societies, would act as tribunals of local review panels.

Membership would be restricted to physicians, a provision which draws criticism from many interested in medical care delivery, including young doctors. More and more demands are being made for consumer and community representation in assessing the quality of medicine and health care delivery.

While he acknowledged that consumers are not capable of judging all of a physician's procedures in the practice of medicine, he said consumers should be involved in other aspects of hospital operation, such as where hospitals are to be placed and who is to be hired.

Medical teams working as a unit, including doctors, nurses, clerical workers, laboratory technicians and other medical personnel, also provide for a higher quality of medicine than the doctor working alone, he said.

Price Raises Questions About Aid To Indonesia

By The Associated Press
In a letter to Secretary of State William P. Rogers, Congressman Bob Price of Pampa has raised numerous questions regarding the present program of American foreign aid to Indonesia.

"For too long our foreign aid program has been a giant Christmas tree, paid for by the American taxpayer; and there are several aspects of our current aid program to Indonesia which are most disturbing to me," Price commented.

Congressman Price questioned the use of the so-called multilateral aid approach currently in vogue.

"By pooling our aid to Indonesia with other contributing nations, we not only lose control of how the money is spent, but in addition we lost control of where it is spent. For example, why should American taxpayers pay for a program which makes use of Swedish engineers and German-produced equipment? And yet, this type of thing goes on every day in those programs operated by the United Nations and other multinational programs, where the American people pay a sizable portion of the bills but derive a disproportionately small amount of the benefits."

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The Manned Spacecraft Center said Friday it will fire 75 to 100 persons between now and June 30.

The cuts, the latest in a continuing reduction in personnel, are part of an agency-wide move by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration because of declining budgets, a center spokesman said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nuclear scientist who has studied space affairs says the proposed space shuttle program may cost up to $66 billion, more than the Apollo program.

Dr. Ralph E. Lapp said in a letter to Science Magazine published Friday: "If we add up all the costs, the shuttle-related space program will cost from $51 billion to $66 billion."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
(© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: Here is the situation: There is an obviously pregnant unmarried high school girl who is attending classes.

The principal called her in and suggested that she attend evening classes instead. The girl hired a lawyer to secure her rights. Successful in this, the pregnant but unmarried girl continues to attend regular classes. This has created quite a stir. Some of the more conservative teachers have threatened to walk out unless the girl quits.

Have you a solution for this problem? Perhaps some good pregnant answer. PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR PORT: The only problem at this point is what to do if the teachers walk out. The solution: Hire substitutes.

DEAR ABBY: My mother is 68. She's been a widow for nearly two years and she is driving me crazy. She telephones me at home and at work at least 12 times a day for absolutely no reason!

All she does is take tranquilizers and watch television. She stays in her nightgown all day long. She does no housework whatsoever. My 10-year-old runs her vacuum. [It's too hard for her to push.] I change her bed for her. [Her arms are too short.] I write her checks for her. [Writing makes her nervous.] I hope you get the picture.

Don't tell me to take her to a doctor. I have taken her to four since Dad died, and they all say there is nothing physically wrong with her. She makes such a pest of herself on the phone, no doctor wants her as a patient.

My husband says if she doesn't lay off he will quit his job and move us out of town. My mother says if we ever move she will sell her house and move with us. [She's the only reason we would move in the first place!]

She blew a lot of money Dad left her on remodeling and furnishing, but thank heavens the rest of it is tied up so she can't spend it all foolishly.

Please, please help me. I think I'm having a nervous breakdown. EXHAUSTED

DEAR EXHAUSTED: Your mother may be physically well, but she sounds lonely, bored, slightly childish, and hungry for attention.

But from your letter, I think your mother is in better shape than you are. See a doctor about your nerves, and get professional help in learning how to cope with your mother. [Family Service offers excellent counseling.] If you run away from your mother, you will feel guilty. Stay there and work it out. After all, she IS your mother.

DEAR ABBY: My husband recently told our children (elementary school age) that he "sold" his high school notes to other students. I feel that this is nothing to be proud of and I would not want our children to follow in his footsteps.

My husband maintains that it is no different from buying published notes in bookstores.

Am I stuffy, or a sucker, to feel that personal integrity is to be strived for always? Or am I all wet? MOTHER IN CAL.

DEAR MOTHER: You're all right. Your husband is all wet.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

ABWA Plans Tea Sunday

The Pampa charter chapter of the American Business Women's Association will hold its "hand of Friendship Tea," or enrollment party Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the Hospitality Room of Citens bank, according to Mrs. D. R. Elledge, chapter president.

This enrollment event is held semi-annually to introduce the organization and the local chapter to business women in this area. At the same time, similar events will be held across the country by more than 1,000 other ABWA chapters.

"The chief function of ABWA is to help women in business advance through education, increased competence, and upgrading of professional skills and business attitudes," said Mrs. Elledge.

The Association, founded in Kansas City Mo. in 1949, now has over 60,000 members. One of its projects is giving scholarships to women students. Locally, chapters awarded over $350,000 in scholarships from October, 1970, to September, 1971. During this period an additional $70,000 in scholarships was awarded from the National Scholarship Fund.

The Pampa charter chapter has awarded local scholarships to several worthy recipients.

The Enrollment Event will feature a program given by the Frank Phillips Junior College's "Music Combo," Miss Connie Sitterly, local ABWA scholarship recipient, is a soloist in this group.

Worry Clinic

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph. D., M.D.

Alex explains why the South is gaining thousands of new industries at the expense of Michigan and New England. For it offers two special types of climate. And the second one outlined below even beats that which the weatherman predicts!

CASE T-526: Alex J., age 42, invited me to address a sales convention in Georgia.

The meeting was held at a branch plant of a large Michigan corporation.

"How did you happen to locate a factory down here?" I asked during our luncheon.

"Well, Dr. Crane," he replied, "we had two strong reasons.

"One was geographical and the other, psychological.

"Under geographical, we liked the mild climate, plus the plentiful supply of water and electrical power, due to the Savannah waterway.

"But the psychological factor was even more important.

"For example, we recruit most of our workers from the small farms in the neighborhood.

"And these operators of little farms have the viewpoint of management.

"For running a farm is much like conducting a grocery or other private firm, for the owner must keep books and at the end of the year compute his 'net' profit (if there is any).

"These men thus have a broader concept of American business, so they realize that profits of a large corporation are lucky to reach 5 per cent.

"But in Detroit and other northern cities, the workers have never had to keep books or run their own little business, farm or office.

"So they take home their full pay check without having to balance books and find if there is any 'net'.

"Lacking this businessman's viewpoint, they get excited when they read that their Michigan firm's gross sales are $50,000,000.

"For they are so ignorant of business costs they tend to think the stockholders thus pocket all that $50,000,000.

"Actually, after costs of union wages, materials, taxes, depreciation of plant, insurance, etc., are debited, that $50,000,000 may not even be 3 per cent dividends on the stockholders' invested capital.

"And if the latter draw 5 per cent, that's par for the course nowadays, even in inflated dollars!

"So our workers in the South have a kindlier attitude toward management, since they formerly conducted little private businesses of their own, as farms or small retail shops.

"And this psychological climate even beats the milder weather of the South.

"That's a big reason why hundreds of Michigan firms have set up branch plants down here and some have even moved their main offices, too!"

Industrial "climate" is becoming a major factor in the location of new plants.

The South has thus been raiding New England, as well as Michigan, because there is a more sympathetic attitude between workers who have formerly operated a farm or retail store.

They realize vividly from sad experience that "gross" sales are not "net!"

Alas, the usual salaried worker and union wage earner miss this vital training in our "free enterprise" system.

Indeed, newspaper carriers are about the only youth who ever get it all!

So send for my "Tests for Employers and Employees," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane, Hopkins Bldg. Mellot, Indiana, 47958, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Peace Corps has announced that it will begin calling home some of its 8,000 volunteers unless emergency funding makes up for what Congress has failed to appropriate for the program.

Bentsen Introduces Bill To Crub Age Discrimination In Employment

WASHINGTON—Senator Lloyd Bentsen of Texas has introduced a bill which would bring state and local government employees under the provisions of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967. The Act, as presently written, exempts government employees but provides sanctions against private employees who discriminate against the elderly.

In explaining his action, Bentsen said, "Government is the nation's largest employer, with over ten million employees in state and local government and millions more at the Federal level. Moreover, government has the greatest growth rate of any sector of our society and is the source for much of the growth of private industry.

"I believe that Federal, state and local governments should be model employers," the Texas Senator said, "and I do not believe that these units of government are justified in asking private employers to do what the government will not do for itself."

Bentsen pointed to a number of instances in which government employees had been discriminated against because of their age. He said, "Many of our citizens are as productive at 60 as they were at 25; measurers taken to remove them from the work force are both callous and unrealistic."

He further noted that age discrimination may be either subtle or direct. Subtle pressures in the form of

SMU Gets Dating Equipment

DALLAS (AP) — A laboratory capable of dating geological and archaeological materials 40,000 years old has been given to Southern Methodist University by Mobil Field Research Laboratory of Dallas.

One of 100 such laboratories throughout the world, the new radiocarbon or Carbon-14 dating equipment was presented to the SMU Geological Sciences Department. Dr. C. Vance Haynes, associate professor of geological sciences, will direct the new laboratory.

Equipment for the dating process fills two rooms on the third floor of Heroy Science Hall. Included are a pre-treatment room, an apparatus for converting carbon to methane gas, proportional counters, a steel brick shield.

"This gift enables SMU to do fundamental research in Carbon-14 dating and to improve techniques in dating."

Residents Urged To Back Texas Easter Seal Plan

"Do you know a handicapped person who needs help and isn't getting it?" is the question being asked by Paul Keim, Gray County's Easter Seal representative and the person to contact for services from the Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults of Texas.

The Easter Seal Society offers rehabilitation services to help disabled persons and their families to find and make the most effective use of resources which will be helpful to them in developing their abilities and living more purposeful lives, he said.

This is accomplished through direct treatments, services, education, research, and cooperative efforts with all other health agencies, private, state and federal. The Easter Seal Society does not duplicate services.

The Easter Seal Society is carrying out its 42nd annual Easter Seal Appeal until April 2 to finance a program of rehabilitation services for crippled children and adults.

BBC Newsman To Tell Pampans About Africa

John William Hughes of Wales and "the world", is coming all the way to America and to the local Knife and Fork club to tell members something about developing Africa and the puzzling Foreign Policies of countries, including our own. The meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Coronado Inn Starlight Room.

Hughes has been both a political figure and a radio-television personality in his home district of Angley. About four years ago he was selected by the British Broadcasting Company to "air" the Olympic games.

During that same year, he traveled extensively through much of Asia and the middle East.

He has been observing international conditions for many years and has reported on them to citizens of various nations both from the platform and by other means of communications.

A veteran of World War II, Hughes on occasions has been a candidate for the British Parliament in the general elections. He was the Welsh delegate several years ago to the World Conference of English-Speaking peoples held in New York.

K and F members may obtain dinner tickets at Malone's Pharmacy in Coronado Center until Wednesday noon.

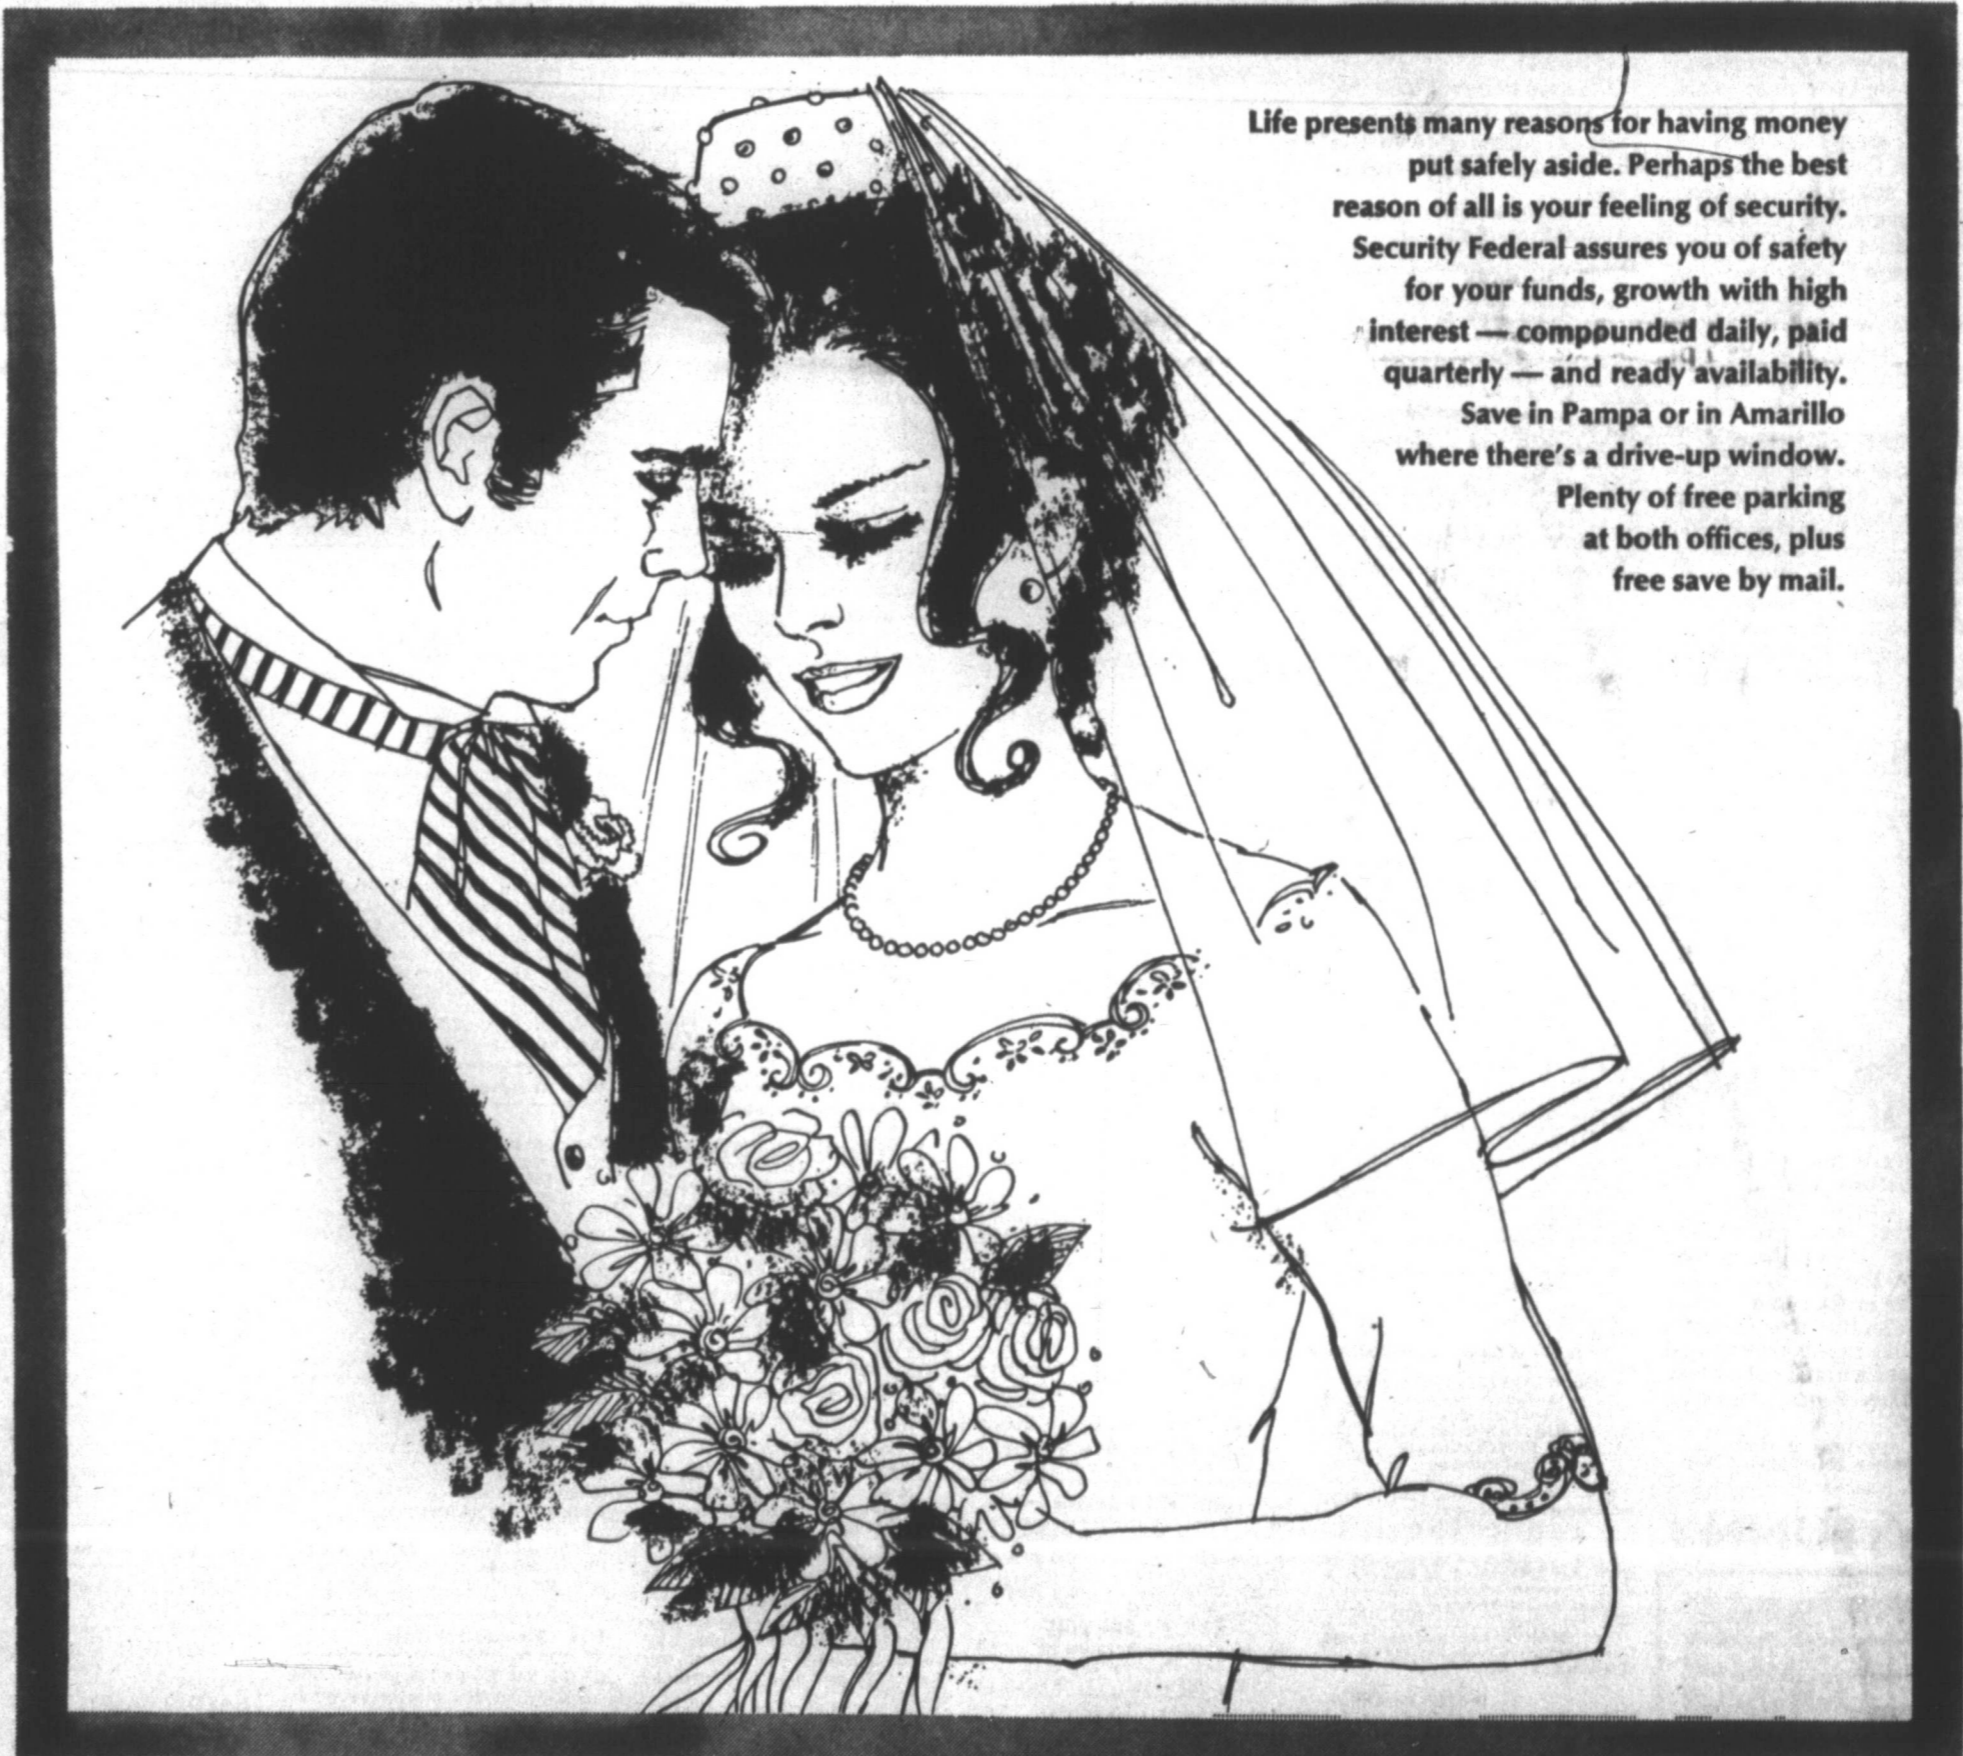

COMMERCE, Tex. (AP) — The General Business Department at East Texas State University is offering two courses this summer which will allow students course credit for jobs they hold in insurance or real estate.
