Mayor, Commissioners Decide Against Resigning Their Posts

Communications Failure Caused Air Force Alert

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI)—A communications failure during last fall's Berlin crisis gave false indications that the Air Force's Thule, Greenland, radar station might have been obliterated by missile attack, the Strategic Air Command said today.

The North American Air Defense Command at Colorado Springs denied the claim.

The SAC confirmation came following publication of a copyrighted story in the Washington Star which said planes carrying H-bombs were rushed to runways throughout the world during a four-minute alert caused by the communications failure.

While admitting that the incident occurred, an SAC spokesman insisted it was only "seconds" in duration.

"The story was essentially correct with one exception and that was the portion pertaining to the amount of time it took us to find out that this was not an attack, but merely a mechanical failure," the SAC spokesman said.

"We had an aircraft on a training mission in the Thule vicinity. We immediately contacted this aircraft and confirmed that Thule was still there. We then knew immediately that it was a mechanical or communications matter and not an attack. This took only a matter of seconds and not four minutes."

Col. Barney Oldfield, information services director for Norad, said at Colorado Springs, "We know of no failure of the North American air defense communications system as described." Norad operates the Thule ballistic missile early warning system radar station.

SAC admitted it had ordered a precautionary attack alert at its bases throughout the world because of the incident.

Man Dies In Jail Fire

TAOS, N.M. (UPI) — A Taos Pueblo Indian died early today in a smoke-filled county jail cell here as the frantic cries for help of his fellow prisoners went unheeded for two hours.

There is no jailer on duty Sunday night in this small Northern New Mexico art colony and the inmates' predicament went unnoticed until a passerby heard their screams and summoned help.

The victim was identified as Robert Espinosa, in his middle 30's.

Taos volunteer firemen labored over him nearly 30 minutes before he was pronounced dead of smoke inhalation by a physician.

Three other prisoners sharing the cell with Espinosa said the Indian started a fire in a waste can, then threw a mattress over it.

When the other men noticed what happened they started yelling for help and kept up their calls until a man walking past in the alley finally heard them and got city policeman Waldo Sandoval.

Law Firm Will Give Opinion On Legality Of Petitions Tomorrow

Pampa's mayor and four city commissioners today elected not to resign at the end of their five-day waiting period on recall petitions filed last week by the Pampa Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Instead the commission adopted unanimously a resolution to employ the law firm of Underwood, Wilson, Sutton, Heare and Berry of Amarillo to prepare a legal opinion concerning the number of qualified signers required to constitute a valid petition in each instance, the question concerning correct and legal form of the ballot to be used, and concerning the legal sufficiency of each petition on file.

Atty. Clayton Heare, member of the law firm, was in attendance at this morning's meeting of the commission and stated that he was prepared to deliver the opinion on next steps in the procedure at 10 a.m. tomorrow.

Attorney Heare said a normal fee for such service would be $1,000, but he said his firm had agreed to do the job for $500.

Heare, who also acts as legal counsel for Mayor E. C. Sidwell, was employed by the commission upon the recommendation of City Atty. Bob Gordon, who informed the commission that his part-time job as city attorney does not include or cover this special type of legal work.

Gordon, who has been city attorney since 1946, said he had on a number of occasions in the past been forced to call upon outside legal aid in assisting with city matters that came up outside of the routine conduct of the city's legal business.

At the outset of today's meeting, Mayor Sidwell called upon each commissioner to state whether he wished to resign as provided under the recall section of the City Charter.

Commissioners Lloyd Simpson, L. P. Fort, Leon Holmes and Newt Seccrest each answered in turn that they did not wish to resign.

Mayor Sidwell then stated: "It is not my intent to resign as mayor of the City of Pampa." The mayor's statement was greeted by applause from the audience.

Today's session was moved from the regular meeting room to the Palm Room of City Hall when it became evident there would be an overflow crowd in the smaller city commission room.

There was some banter back and forth between two or three persons in the audience and Mayor Sidwell and Commissioner Fort.

This was entered into principally by Paul Crossman and O. E. Shewmaker. Both are members of the Citizens for Better City Government group which took over in the recall controversy at the point where the Junior Chamber of Commerce left off when the petitions were filed.

Crossman questioned the action of the commission in letting a contract for photostatic copies of the recall petitions without competitive bidding. Cost of having the copies

Indonesia's Defense Minister Says Red-Bolstered Army Gains Strength

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI) — Defense Minister Gen. Abdul Haris Nasution said today that Indonesia's Soviet-bolstered army today to see if he can get his astronomical $500,000 bond reduced. Meanwhile, a U. S. grand jury investigated fraud charges against him.

A deputy U. S. marshal and a West Texas sheriff moved Estes, a multi-millionaire lay minister and agriculture tycoon, from a Pecos, Tex., jail to El Paso Sunday. Estes, 37, was jailed Thursday night on charges of interstate transfer of fraudulent chattel (personal property) mortgages.

The grand jury today investigated charges that Estes conspired to transport a fraudulent chattel mortgage from Hudspeth County, Tex., to Los Angeles last Oct. 15.

The grand jury also was expected to look into the financial empire built around mortgages on the steel tanks used to hold anhydrous ammonia, gas under pressure. It is used as a fertilizer in West Texas.

The charges against Estes threatened his $150 million agriculture empire.

Three associates, Coleman McSpadden, 47, of Hereford, Tex.; Harold Orr, 31, and Ruel Alexander, 36, of Amarillo, Tex., were released on bond Friday and Saturday. They may cooperate with the grand jury. The government reduced their bonds from $250,000 to $25,000.

They were asked to make available to the government records of the Superior Manufacturing Co. of Amarillo, which makes the steel tanks, in return for the bond reduction.

Deputy U. S. Marshal Ralph Gilliland and Reeves County Sheriff A. B. Nail took Estes to El Paso by automobile. He was shielded from newsmen who had no chance to talk to him.

Bill Kerr Sr. of Midland, president of the State Bar Association, will represent Estes, whose troubles have stirred financial circles

Estes In El Paso Trying To Get His Bail Reduced

EL PASO, Tex. (UPI)—Boy-wonder financier Billie Sol Estes was scheduled to appear before U. S. Dist. Judge R. E. Thomas today to see if he can get his astronomical $500,000 bond reduced. Meanwhile, a U. S. grand jury investigated fraud charges against him.

Pro-Nasser Uprising In Syria Is Reported

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI)—Syrian radio broadcasts today reported an uprising against the new military government of Syria by pro-Nasser army officers demanding reunion with the United Arab Republic.

A government communique from Damascus, appealing for Syrian unity, announced a new night-time curfew and the closing of the country's borders and harbors. With the borders closed, foreign newsmen were prevented from entering Syria.

The revolt was reported by Aleppo Radio in a broadcast monitored here. It said the uprising occurred in northern and eastern Syria, but gave no details of any fighting or bloodshed.

Aleppo Radio broadcast a communique by the "Aleppo free officers" calling on the Syrian army to obey their orders and condemning the soldiers who broke up Syria's union with the U.A.R. government of President Gamal Abdel Nasser last year.

The various broadcasts indicated that the radio in Aleppo, which is in northern Syria, was in the hands of army insurgents while the radio at Damascus, the capital, was still controlled by other army officers who seized the government only six days ago.

Aleppo is in the same general area as Homs where an outbreak was reported Saturday. Lebanese newspapers and travellers from Syria said five military men were killed in demonstrations by Nasser supporters in Homs.

It was the first report of violence since the Syrian army overthrew the conservative government of President Nazim el Kudsli last Wednesday. The Kudsli civilian regime had been installed following the army revolt which ended Syria's 3½ year union with Egypt in the U.A.R. last Sept. 28.

Cairo Radio broadcast a U.A.R. offer of aid if Syria is attacked from outside. King Hussein of Jordan also offered help after Damascus Radio broadcast reports of Israeli military concentrations along the Syrian border.

A public rally for Republican candidates for office and honoring Kellis Dibrell of San Antonio, candidate for lieutenant governor, was held yesterday afternoon in the Starlight room of Coronado Inn.

Short talks were given by Roy Whittenburg of Borger, G.O.P. candidate for governor; L. R. Vance, candidate for state representative in the 31st district; Mayor Jack Seale of Amarillo, candidate for congressman from the 18th district, and Dibrell.

The candidates were introduced by Clayton Husted, Gray County chairman.

Other candidates in attendance included Warren Fatheree and John Willis of Pampa, for state representative, and W. C. Epperon and Bill Tidwell, for county commissioner in Pct. 2.

Candidate Whittenburg told his audience that some of the issues he had injected into his current campaign for nomination as governor could be considered national instead of state issues.

"Actually," Whittenburg said, "there are no issues that do not in some manner affect the state."

G.O.P. Chairman Husted said today he is planning on releasing soon a list of voting places for the Republican primary on May 5 and also a list of G.O.P. precinct committee chairmen.

This year will mark the first time a Republican primary ever

Texas' Week End Violent Death Toll: 30

Dear Abby....

Abby Picks Name For New Book

By ASIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: A battery of attorneys advised me to change the title of my new book, MARRIAGE ON THE ROCKS. So I sent an SOS to you for some suggestions, and the response was overwhelming!

From Alaska, "Why not call it, 'How Now Thou Vow?'" From Brazil, "Marriage In Orbit," from Canada, "Wedlock Deadlock," A Captain in Korea suggested, "Betrayed and Betrayed," and from Maine to California came: "Altar Ego," "Double Bedlam," "Marriage Fallout," "How To Succeed in Marriage Without Really Trying," "The Marriage Mirage," "The Rise and Fall of Marriage," "Stalemate," "Remember the Alimony," (from Texas, natch), "A Funny Thing Happened To Me On My Way To The Lawyers," "Bed and Bored," "The Trouble With Marriage," and "How to Stay Sane in a Private Institution." And literally thousands of others.

Since my book is all about marriage, I have decided to play it straight and call it simply, DEAR ABBY ON MARRIAGE. It will be out in May. You might be disappointed with the title, but you won't be disappointed with the book. And that's a promise!

Gratefully yours,
ABBY

DEAR ABBY: It was very nice of you to tell that lady not to blame her husband for calling her another woman's name in his sleep. You said, "A man can't be blamed for what he does in his sleep."

I disagree with your advice. I would have advised that woman to give her husband a good punch in the eye because "a woman can't be blamed for what SHE does in HER sleep, either." This works because I have tried it, and my husband has never called me by another woman's name in his sleep again.

"SIXTY" DEAR ABBY: Last night I felt very blue and depressed. My parents were not home so I telephoned my boy friend, who is taking basic training in Texas. We got carried away in conversation and talked for 35 minutes. When we hung up, I called the operator to find out how much the call cost and she said $23.80. Now, Abby, I am only 15 years old and do not have that kind of money. I am afraid to tell my mother because I know she will be furious. I am terribly sorry for what I did, but that won't help now. Would it be proper for me to ask my boy friend for the money?

TELEPHONE TROUBLES DEAR TROUBLES: Don't ask your boy friend for the money. He has his own troubles. Tell your mother and ask her to take it out of your allowance (if you get one). Otherwise, offer to "work it out," somehow. Your parents were lucky your boy friend wasn't in Korea. And next time, try the pen.

CONFIDENTIAL TO O. J.: Get it in writing!

Stop worrying. Let Abby help you with that problem. For a personal reply, enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How To Have A Lovely Wedding," send 50 cents to Abby, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif.

One of the quickest ways to ease washday fatigue is a good stretch. But most of us slump instead of stretching. Slumping actually contributes to tiredness because it cramps muscles rather than relaxes them.

Style Must For Spring: A Lacy, Party Dress

By MARY BROOKS ICPKEN Newspaper Enterprise Assn. Perhaps no fabric of the spring season will be more highly favored than lace, and it is available in many lovely colors.

Lace for spring.

The dress shown has many fashion essentials — the blouson effect at the waistline, the boat neck, no sleeves, narrow belt, slightly flared skirt — making the fabric itself the all-time important thing.

Nice laces are not expensive, but only two lengths are needed to make a dress such as the one shown: 3 1/2 yards are usually ample. For shorter girls, 2 1/2 yards will do it.

Buy your lace by the yard. And, buy china silk, soft satin or crepe for lining in an exactly matching color if you can get it. Take care that the thread matches perfectly.

Cut the lining exactly the same as you do the lace. Seam separately at the sides of the skirt. Join the neck, armholes and waistline. If the neck is large enough to get into, use a zipper at the left side. If not, use a zipper at centerback. Provide a 1 1/4 the neck and armhole after the dress has been fitted, making 1/4 inch seam. Clip the seam as shown. Use the bias to face the neck and the armholes, catching the turned edge of the facing to the lining (B), never to the lace. Make a tie belt of the lace with lining inside. Cut the belt and lining 1 1/2 inches wide, stitch together on all edges, stitching as close to the edge as you can. Turn all the raw edges in 1/4-inch and stitch on all edges and on the fold.

It is best to tie the bow and use a hook-and-eye underneath to fasten. The lace is too fragile for an open tie.

Seams in lace should be caught back to the lace of the dress so they can't pull out. Do this carefully, so that stitches are not tight and so that they do not show on the right side.

The silhouette shown here is good for sheer woolsens, broadcases, for any of the lovely, firm cottons. Perhaps you'd like to perfect your pattern by making your dress in cotton before you do the lace.

Dear Mrs. Pickens: I wear a size 16 dress except for my mill-riff. Should I allow the extra width at the underarm, or slit the pattern?—L. B.

Dear L. B.: I would slash the pattern and separate it back and front, as much as is necessary for the additional amount needed. The same if the waistline was small — you would fold the pattern in half-way between center, front and side seam.

I hope these answers help you. I am so glad you enjoy the column.

Do you have a sewing problem? Send it to Mary Brooks Pickens, care of this newspaper. While Mrs. Pickens cannot answer each letter personally, letters of general interest will be answered in the column.

Cut a true bias of the lining 1 1/4 inches wide. Stitch this around to 1 1/2-inch hem at the bottom of the skirt when cutting. The top edge should not be turned — just caught to the lace.

Stitch the shoulder seams and underarm seams separately. Press them open. Now lay the lace over the lining. Stitch neck, waist, and armhole edges together, stitching 1/4-inch from the edge.

TRY A AD CLASSIFIED

Take It From Kathy

Dear Kathy: I'm less than 5 feet tall. Since I am a senior in high school, I don't expect to grow much more. Clothing presents a lot of problems. The fashion magazines all say, "Wear small patterns rather than splashy prints and plaids, carry a dainty handbag rather than a bulky satchel, wear small jewelry, buy tiny hats." When you follow all this advice, you resemble a doll-like little girl, I'm not trying to look like a slinky siren, but I would like to look my age. There must be better answers.—Lois.

Dear Lois: Avoiding huge prints and plaids doesn't mean you must look mousy or insipid. Choose colors with a lot of character so you will stand out in a crowd. If a short person doesn't dress gayly, she can be insignificant.

Start becoming aware of the vertical lines that add height. Aim for a slim silhouette via slightly flared, flat-pleated or straight skirts. A one-color costume is more flattering than a two-color contrast that bisects your figure and steals inches.

Things like patch pockets, ruffles and fancy belts may be feminine but they are eye-stoppers and interrupt a hem-to-collar glance; therefore, they tend to shorten.

Look for details in design that carry the eyes express from top to bottom. Avoid a loose fit or bunchedness at the waist that makes you look square.

If you have been careful in every other way to try for the tall look, you might be able to satisfy your yen for a plaid or larger print. Pick one in which the colors contrast subtly (greens, blues, grays) rather than violently (reds, yellows, greens). You needn't choose miniature hats when something larger can add to your height. Avoid big brims and check the total effect in a full-length mirror before making a decision.

Frequent shampoos, faithful brushing and the right style all combine to make gray or white hair a definite asset — not a liability.

Mayor

It was charged by Crossman that a section of the city charter requires that bids must be taken for "public printing jobs" that cost more than $100.

Shewmaker said he would like to have explained to him whether or not the recall election should not be ordered today under charter provisions.

City Attorney Gordon said that was one of the reasons the outside legal advice had been asked and there would be an answer to that question when they got the opinion tomorrow.

Shewmaker also criticized the commission for waiting 35 days since the charter petitions were taken out to try to find out what the charter provisions on recall mean.

Mayor Sidwell replied by saying the commission didn't get the petitions until six days ago and that the time since then has been spent in examining them to try to determine if there was sufficient cause to even consider a recall election.

"I don't think we are out of line waiting until today to see what needed to be done," the mayor said.

Frank Carter, 1324 Frederic, addressed the commission, and repeated his charge that the present controversy stemmed from the commission's action in cutting $8,000 from the budget of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce.

Carter said the taxpayers of Pampa had paid more than $200,000 into the Chamber of Commerce in the past ten years without any detailed accounting ever having been made of how the money was spent.

Commissioner Secrest asked Attorney Heare if he was not also the personal attorney for the mayor. Heare said that he was. Secrest also asked Carter where he lived. Carter said he lived outside the city but owned property in Pampa and was a city taxpayer.

Commissioner Secrest also asked Attorney Heare if he prepared the resolution which the commission adopted today.

City Attorney Gordon answered by saying that he (Gordon) dictated the resolution. Secrest said he also wondered if it was normal for an attorney to come before the commission as Heare had done this morning.

Again, Gordon said he had invited Heare to come before the commission this morning because the time was short and he wanted him to be familiar with the proceedings.

"I am sorry I didn't know about this before," Secrest said.

Mayor Sidwell said he had tried to keep all of the commissioners advised as to any meetings and as to what steps were being taken.

Just before adjournment today, Commissioner Fort asked the mayor if it would be possible to take up a matter tomorrow dealing with the operation of the city health department.

Fort said some things had come up that need immediate attention.

The mayor said if tomorrow's regular meeting of the commission is ended in time, the health department matter will be taken up at a meeting which was tentatively scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Estes

Pacific Finance Corp. of Los Angeles has filed a $4,300,000 lawsuit against Estes and the three associates.

There was talk around Pecos that the far West Texas town of 12,700 persons might be dealt a severe economic blow if Estes' financial empire collapses. Some of Estes' employes already have been laid off.

Farmers had mortgaged themselves deeply on the anhydrous ammonia tanks, which cost about $1,000 each. One farmer reportedly mortgaged his properties for $5.7 million in an anhydrous ammonia tank transaction.

Mortgages amounting to $22 million held by 12 finance companies were involved in the case.

Some heavily mortgaged farmers in Estes' fertilizer and grain enterprises, transferred land titles to their wives or to relatives and filed homestead designations. In Texas, homesteads cannot be seized for non-payment of mortgages.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner John C. White Sunday suspended the state grain warehouse license of United-Elevators of Lamesa, Tex., an Estes enterprise.

"This suspension is a precautionary measure in view of current developments," said White.

Estes was head of 40 West Texas businesses. A court order forbids him from hiding any of his property.

The scripture-quoting Estes is a lay minister in the Church of Christ. He claimed to have accumulated $38,000 by the time he was 18 and was a millionaire when he was 20.

Estes, who reportedly has many friends in Washington, spent a good deal of his time in jail, doing bookwork with a pencil and scratchpad. A steady stream of visitors filed by the jail to see him.

Townpeople were slowly recovering from the shock of his arrest. They were still reluctant to talk openly with newsmen.

Administration Calls Meeting To Talk Strikes

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Kennedy administration, concerned over a rising number of work stoppages at missile bases despite a no-strike pledge from unions, called a Pentagon meeting today to discuss the problem.

Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and Labor Secretary Arthur J. Goldberg were scheduled to preside at the assembly of labor leaders, contractors and public representatives.

They were worried over a pick-up in the amount of time lost because of strikes at missile sites since the first of the year.

"March is going to be a very bad month—the worst," said one government aide. He estimated that more than 2,500 man-days were lost last month because of walkouts.

The worst dispute was at Little Rock Air Force Base in Arkansas, the home state of Sen. John L. McClellan, whose subcommittee investigated missile base strikes. McClellan has denounced stoppages at the defense installations and introduced a bill to outlaw them.

Goldberg has told McClellan that he believes voluntary procedures worked out by the President's missile sites labor commission should be given a chance to work. Unions and contractors in the missile industry gave a no-

De Gaulle The Delineator

His Western allies often contend that they find France's President Charles de Gaulle a difficult character, and if his attitude toward conferences with the Russians is a good example of what they're complaining about, it's the reason for his reputed intransigence is easy to see.

The general's attitude makes good sense. This is in diametrical opposition to the thinking of the other western leaders, and so they dismiss de Gaulle as a stubborn man.

De Gaulle has staunchly maintained that talks with the Russians about Berlin will get you nowhere, and he has boycotted the Geneva conference, called for the ostensible purpose of discussing disarmament.

His reason for standing firm against these international word games with Khrushchev & Co. should be clear to anyone, but, unfortunately, the US and certain other western nations are so involved in worry over world opinion, how the African tribes may react and so forth that they refuse to give the general any credit for the common sense he demonstrates.

These problems—Berlin and disarmament—have been created by the Russians themselves, and they have shown no desire to settle them, maintains the general. Their single objective is to use the conferences as propaganda forums by which to influence or frighten world opinion.

The Soviet Union makes use of the United Nations in the same way, says the general, contemptuously dismissing the UN as nothing more than an organization the Russians use to maneuver people and nations.

Certainly the preponderance of evidence is on the general's side.

Freedom—All The Way

Most of us believe in freedom of speech. If it is wise for us to permit the other person to express ideas contrary to our own, why is it unwise for us to permit the other person to live his own life in accordance with his own best judgement?

How To Stay In Business

We hope that some harassed businessman will find the time to collaborate in a little effort we propose to start here.

What we are looking for is a businessman who is weighed down with state taxes in Colorado who will set up a chart of dead lines which will apprise all and sundry of the penalty dates for the payment of various stipends, assessments, excises, and other contributions to the bulging coffers of our state government.

To show that we are in good faith in the matter, we offer here with our own tax calendar for 1962 as it applies to hotels, restaurants and clubs, and other similarly regulated businesses, insofar as the federal government is concerned.

Then if some enterprising businessman will flank us with a corresponding chart respecting state taxes, and perhaps someone else come forward with a corresponding chart for county and city and school taxes, we'll have something fairly useful.

What we propose to put down are the dates in the calendar year on which you may be found to be criminal if you have failed to forward the necessary stipend to Uncle Sam. We'll do this by month.

In JANUARY, there are two vital dates, the 15th and the 31st. January 15 is your last day of grace to file an amended declaration of your 1961 estimated tax and pay up. Presumably, you've done that. If not, let us know your cell and block number.

January 31 has a number of items. It's your last day to file return in lieu of amended declaration for 1961 and send in your check. Also, return (No. 941) is to be sent in plus your pay for the preceding quarter. On income tax withheld, return Forms W-2 and W-3 with No. 941 for last quarter of 1961. Also, the unemployment tax for 1961, return Form No. 940 with full payment. Also, return Form 720 and payment for preceding quarter.

FEBRUARY: On the 10th, if your tax was deposited on time for third month, then your quarterly return is due. On the 15th, retirement tax withheld and accrued and income tax withheld are due. Deposit for preceding month if more than $100 must be sent in. On the 28th, admission, dues and other excise taxes are due, along with deposit for preceding month if more than $100 (No. 537). The 28th is also the time for you to send in annual information returns (Forms 1099-1969) including non-taxable corporate distributions.

MARCH: 15th: Calendar year tax option corporation. Information return Form 1120-a) calculation year corporation. Return Form 1120 with half of tax. Retirement tax withheld and accrued and income tax withheld. Deposit for preceding month if more than $100. Then on the 31st, send in admissions, dues and other excise taxes. Deposit for preceding month (Form 537).

APRIL: 15th: Calendar year individuals (Form 1040-1040-A) balance of tax. Declaration of 1962 estimated tax and first quarterly payment (1040-ES). Calendar year partnership (Form 1065). 20th: Retirement tax return (Form 941) and payment for preceding quarter. Admissions, dues and excise taxes (Form 720) and payment for previous quarter.

MAY: 10th: Retirement quarterly tax due if previous deposit made on time. 15th: Exempt corporation returns (Forms 990, 990-A or 990-P) for calendar year corporation. Send in previously withheld retirement tax and income tax. 31st: Admissions, dues and other excise taxes (Form 537).

JUNE: 15th: Fiscal year corporation. Return (Form 1120) with half of tax (2 1/2 months after close of fiscal year). Additional quarterly payments of 1962 estimated income tax. Deposit for preceding month of retirement tax and income taxes. 30th: Admissions, dues and excise taxes (Form 537).

JULY: 21st: Form 941 retirement tax for preceding quarter. Admissions, dues, excises for preceding quarter (Form 720).

AUGUST: 10th: Retirement tax due in quarterly payment. 15th: Retirement tax previously withheld plus income tax withheld. 31st: Admissions, dues and excise taxes (Form 537).

SEPTEMBER: 15th: Additional quarterly payment of 1962 estimated income tax. Retirement tax withheld and accrued plus income tax withheld and accrued. Corporation estimated income tax declaration (total 50 per cent of tax over $100,000) calendar year 1962. Declaration or amended declaration and payment. 30th: Admissions, dues, excise taxes (Form 537).

OCTOBER: 31st: Retirement tax withheld (Form 941). Admissions, dues and excise taxes (Form 537).

NOVEMBER: 10th: Retirement tax withheld and accrued. Deposit for preceding month. 15th: Pay quarterly retirement tax. 30th: Admissions, dues, excise taxes (Form 537).

TRUTH-FORUM

With Ed Delaney

A segment of the nation's press, many columnists, commentators and a number of spineless politicians have joined in a crescendo of denunciations against the John Birch Society and its founder-director, Robert Welch. They charge Welch with having made wholly unfounded accusations that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower had at some time or other been a conscious aid to the furtherance of the communist conspiracy in this country.

Former Vice President Richard Nixon has been particularly vehement in asserting there is not the slightest basis for such accusations against Eisenhower. Nixon should know that he was skating on thin ice.

Robert Welch was not the first to cite Eisenhower's "conscious aid" to the communist cause. Many newspapers, national periodicals, including the Saturday Evening Post, pointed out such "conscious" aid many years before there was a John Birch Society.

Just to keep the record straight, before me is a page of the Seymour, Conn., Evening Sentinel of Mar. 13, 1953, with a picture of Dr. Arthur P. Coleman and a four-column heading which reads: "Dr. A. P. Coleman Demands Eisenhower End Satellite Endowment at Columbia University."

The article under that heading reads in part: "Dr. Arthur P. Coleman, who resigned in 1948 from Columbia University in protest of its acceptance of the endowment of the Adam Mickiewicz chair of Polish studies by the communist regime in Poland has asked Gen. Eisenhower, as president of Columbia University to suspend acceptance of 'thousands of dollars annually from Soviet satellite sources'."

The newspaper mentions that Dr. Coleman was then (and still is) president of Alliance College, Cambridge Springs, Pa. Dr. Coleman airmailed a letter to Gen. Eisenhower at Paris, Mar. 7, 1952. It reads in part: "Cambridge Springs, Pa. Dear President Eisenhower: On July 12, 1948 you wrote me regarding the chair of Polish studies which is even yet (1952) being supported at Columbia University by the communist regime of Poland, as follows: (Eisenhower's letter, in part). 'You may be certain that if I ever find that the incumbent of this chair steps aside from his academic assignment to infiltrate our university with philosophies inimical to our American system of government the chair will be at once discontinued.'"

Dr. Coleman then quotes from the Literary Supplement of the London Times, Feb. 8, 1952, citing an article edited by the "incumbent" to whom Eisenhower referred, the material being put out by the Columbia University Press, and being propaganda for Marxist socialism.

Dr. Coleman's letter continues: "Gen. Eisenhower, now more than ever in view of your responsibilities to the American people and particularly the alumni of Columbia being myself the holder of two degrees from Columbia, I ask you immediately to suspend the acceptance by the great American university you still head the thousands of dollars annually from Soviet-satellite sources."

Dr. Coleman charged in 1949 that President Eisenhower's assistants did not choose the professor to fill that chair at Columbia. He cited the Warsaw communist weekly "Odrodzenie" as stating: "our government entrusted this chair to Prof. Manfred Kridl." Dr. Coleman, a professor at Columbia for 20 years, had helped found its Slavic language department.

Did Eisenhower dismiss Prof. Kridl from Columbia? He did not, but continued to accept $10,000 annually from the Red regime in Warsaw. It was not until May 1954, that Dr. Coleman's battle to get the communist-subsidized professor out of Columbia was successful. That was long before Robert Welch was known nationally or there was any Birch Society.

If keeping a professor at Columbia who was chosen by the communist regime of Poland was not "conscious aid" for the communist conspiracy in this country, then what is? I have cited but part of the documented records. There are other such instances. Mr. Nixon may take it from here and it will be interesting to read his explanations — if any.

Admissions, dues and other excise taxes (Form 537).

In between these dates, state taxes, county taxes, city taxes, special assessments and school bonds.

Meanwhile, the businessman is supposed to concentrate upon his business, hire more help than he needs and especially keep in a cheerful frame of mind.

Family Affair

ROBERT ALLEN

WASHINGTON — Romance is the last thing in the life of Governor Nelson Rockefeller right now.

Says one of his closest intimates, "He has no time or desire for it."

Those recent widespread rumors and published reports about Rockefeller remarrying are wholly without substance.

The New Yorker has the deepest respect and regard for his former wife. They are in touch with each other, and both are very close to their children whom they see frequently.

Associates describe Rockefeller as engrossed wholly in two consuming ambitions: Winning a second term this fall by an overwhelming majority, and capturing the 1964 Republican presidential nomination.

He is convinced he can readily accomplish the latter if re-elected by a margin of one million — which he confidently believes he can get.

Rockefeller's gubernatorial and presidential campaigns are being run by different managers from separate headquarters. Boss of the former is State GOP Chairman Judson Morhouse. In charge of the latter is National Committeeman George Hinman, who is also Rockefeller's attorney.

Hinman's headquarters is in the offices of the Rockefeller brothers — Suite 3600, Rockefeller Plaza, N.Y.

Morhouse and Hinman work in constant and close harmony. While chiefly preoccupied with his gubernatorial race, Rockefeller is also devoting considerable time and thought to building up his "national image" to win the support of key Republican leaders throughout the country.

He feels this is essential to capture the party's 1964 presidential nomination.

WHAT THEY ARE DOING — For that purpose Rockefeller is accepting some out-of-state speaking engagements before carefully-selected audiences. Illustrative of that is his April 16 address before a leading Detroit business organization, and his appearance the next day at the Republican National Women's Conference in Washington.

Its leaders were highly elated when he accepted their invitation, and are saying that has already assured a record attendance.

In Rockefeller's carefully-chosen and timed talks, he will stress his strong advocacy of sound money and economic policies, and insistence on preserving a free enterprise system in the historic American tradition. His outstanding record as governor of New York will be cited as concrete evidence of his basic views.

While portraying himself as an economic traditionalist, Rockefeller will make equally clear that he holds firm to the need for "social justice and welfare." He is not backing down one iota on that.

Significantly, GOP leaders throughout the country are increasingly getting in touch with the New York governor. This trend is still private, but pronounced.

It's Up To You by HOWARD KERSHNER L. H. D.

Here is a cartoon in the Washington Bulletin of a highly respected church-related organization. Facing each other in a narrow street are a Russian soldier at one end, and a United States soldier at the other. The hands of both soldiers are about to grasp rockets that swing from both sides of their bolsters. The implication is that here are two bad boys engaged in an arms race and about to destroy themselves and the world.

We are expected to believe that there is no difference in guilt or innocence as between them and that there is no distinction to be made as to which the aggressor and which is defending.

Good, but naive, church leaders are saying: "A plague on both your houses!" They ignore the causes of the present impasse and look upon both parties as equally guilty for engaging in a wicked and dangerous arms race.

No allowance is made for the fact that the Communists have boasted that they will deceive and destroy us, and use in the process, every ruse of deception known to fertile minds. They make and break agreements at will as mere tactical maneuvers to advance their cause. They have kept less than 2 per cent of their major agreements with other countries.

They foment large and small wars in many lands, and flood nearly all countries in the world with unfair, distorted and grossly deceitful propaganda concerning the advantages of communism and the wickedness of the free Western countries. They announce, and repeat endlessly, their determination to use any and every means to destroy the West.

At the close of World War II, when the West had overwhelming military power, and could have crushed communism had it chosen to do so, it chose rather to trust the Communist governments and be exceedingly generous with them. The West demobilized its armies, destroyed its munitions, withdrew from Europe and wanted and planned for nothing but peace. Such disturbance as has taken place in the world since that time is due solely to Communist aggression, to the wiping out of the freedom of one country after another to steady expansion.

The West finally realizing that this juggernaut would roll on to the extinction of all freedom everywhere in the world, in desperation began to rearm and to establish bases. Such action is definitely not aggression. It is defense in the face of persistent aggression.

Whosoever says that there is no distinction to be made between the armed aggression of the Communist powers and the armed defensive responses of the West is either wickedly misrepresenting the case or hopelessly naive. Is the thug who breaks into a man's house and seizes his wife on the same basis as the outraged husband who arms himself and hastens to the rescue? Those who maintain that the world is in grave danger because of an arms race carried on by equally guilty and equally aggressive parties are the blind leaders of the blind and the main reason that nothing can be done to win the cold war, overthrow the evil of communism and restore tranquility to the world.

If the soft-headed pacifists and appeasers would cease their efforts to hamstring intelligent and upright men who realize that the evil of communism must be destroyed if our free Christian civilization is to continue to exist, it would not be long until the right would triumph. By picturing brave patriots, who are endeavoring to defend all that is worth while in the world, as aggressors equally guilty with the communists who plot the destruction of freedom, self-government and Christianity, these misguided people are unwittingly or otherwise casting their influence on the side of Communist aggression and gravely increasing the possibility that all the values in which they claim to believe will be destroyed.

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

It has come to my attention that Jules, or Julie, Podell, president of the Copacabana Club in New York, has been put to vexation by the Bureau of Licenses of the Police Department because he admitted to his premises Frank Costello, a retired bootlegger of apparent wealth who also operated slot machines and table games in New Orleans until about 1936.

The Copacabana is a fine place to go when you want to go to that kind of place and I volunteer that I have been there many times. I have been there many times, twice with Frank Costello and his wife, Bobbie.

We are friends. The last time I was in the Copacabana with Frank and Bobbie was a few nights after he came home from Atlanta after serving three years and a bit in a position of trust for the crime of signing his name to a piece of paper. This was a complex affair in which numerous Federal judges of all ranks disagreed ingeniously for years. Mr. Costello estimated that, altogether, nineteen U.S. judges had been required to decide in a photo-finish that he did in truth commit the crime of signing his name to this piece of paper. Altogether, also, more than a hundred U.S. Attorneys, and assistants, all Democrats and thus, necessarily henchmen of Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry Truman, and countless agents of the Internal Revenue and the FBI, had been required at a public cost beyond estimation to prove by a hair-line that Costello did sign that piece of paper, to wit, a tax return. This was really unnecessary because he had admitted his signature all along. However, the signing of the paper was the false move which completed the crime.

Mr. Costello is a Democrat himself, but a conservative Democrat, heartily opposed to Communism which he regards as a menace to our Western Civilization and a festering reptile mocking the sacred heritage of how do you like that? It is true that for some year he had a common interest with Jimmy Roosevelt, the eagle of the dynasty, in their association with the Mills Novelty Company, which manufactures one-armed bandits, now felonious under certain aspects of Federal law. But Costello's parish of this undomitable force was just the slots. They were his only interest. The Eagle's seat, on the other hand, was the ten-cent slot-machine movie show entertainment, as viewed specifically in the arcades of Market Street, San Francisco, were rated below passing according to the moral standards of the Legion of Decency. Mr. Costello vehemently disowned interest in these movies. He said: "They keep saying this and saying that, but I never had nothing to do with broads. Booze and slots, that's all. I am married to Bobbie more than 40 years. She would know my brains out."

The Police Bureau of Licenses asked Julie Podell if he knew that Costello had served a term in Atlanta. Julie said he just read something in the papers. Some of his best friends are newspapermen like publishers and editors.

On my part, let the record show I flew over the Atlanta Schoolyard on my way to some freedom riots in the Deep South last year and looked for Frank, but learned later in New York that he was in the bus bound home on parole at the time. A few days later we had lunch at the Stork and Sherman Billingsley recalled a time when Dutch Schultz stuck some pickets out front and when Frank came in Sherman asked him to clean it up so Frank phoned the Dutchman and the pickets were gone in 15 minutes.

Let the record show further that I knew Franklin D. Roosevelt and his inconspicuous spouse and attended some cookouts at their spot and Heywood Brown's and George Bye's, but that I never asked the Roosevelt's my piece. I have to mess with some very undesirable people in my professional practice, but my private life is my own. I have had pleasant relations with the Costellos and Ownie Madden and her; and the Duke and Wallis, and Nancy Astor and the Lord when he was around. But I never had no truck with La Guardia nor neither with Truman except a glancing blow at a poker do in Kansas City.

As far as I know, Costello never did this country any harm. We never knew where it came from, but I drank my share of Prohibition under the 18th Amendment and it stands to reason that some of it came ashore under Frank's franchise. And I played a lot of slots when Costello was operating, but I never dropped any dime into any of those Minsky-type, Mills Novelty shows.

I think Julie Podell runs a clean spot. I have seen Joe E. Lewis there and Jimmy Durante and Sophie Tucker, always nice clean amusement recommended for drunk or sober.

But never Mrs. Roosevelt and I do not believe Julie would give her a booking.

Copacabana On Spot For Admitting Frank Costello

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

It has come to my attention that Jules, or Julie, Podell, president of the Copacabana Club in New York, has been put to vexation by the Bureau of Licenses of the Police Department because he admitted to his premises Frank Costello, a retired bootlegger of apparent wealth who also operated slot machines and table games in New Orleans until about 1936.

WORTHY OF SHYLOCK (Industrial News Review)

The latest on revision of the crazy quilt federal income tax system is a plan now before Congress to enable the government to get more of its taxes from a citizen's earnings before he receives them. It would withhold 20 cents of every dollar of dividends, interest earned on savings account in banks, savings and loans associations, etc. If more taxes are withheld than owed, the taxpayer could apply to the treasury for a refund. There are already withholding taxes on wages and salaries.

A depressing aspect of the bill is the lack of confidence shown by the government in the honesty of its citizens — it treats them all as dishonest in order to catch the few who are.

Tax revision can go one step further — require that all salaries, wages and earnings be paid to the government, and then have the government return to each individual or company whatever might be left to them after the tax-gatherers had done their work. Sounds crazy, but that would make it easier to deal with a nation of crooks.

Alou Joins Mays, Cepeda In Hits

by United Press International
 Willie Mays and Orlando Cepeda, the San Francisco Giants' answer to the Yankees' "M-and-M" boys and the Tigers' "C-and-C" twins, may have a new hitting partner in Felipe Alou.

Last year, Mays and Cepeda hit 86 homers between them and accounted for 265 runs batted in. Both figures compared favorably with the 115 homers and 270-RBI's recorded by Mickey Mantle and Roger Maris of the Yankees and the 86 homers and 272 RBI's turned in by Norman Cash and Rocky Colavito of the Tigers when you consider the San Francisco stars played in what many admit was a tougher league.

Now with the National League expanded and the pitching spread out to 10 clubs instead of eight, both Mays and Cepeda are expected to top even last year's high-water marks in homers and runs batted in.

Alou, a solid 6-footer who packs 195 pounds, rapped 18 homers and had 52 RBI's a year ago when he split outfield duties with kid brothers Matty and Harvey Kuenn.

Felipe rapped homers No. 6 and 7 Sunday, tops in Grapefruit-Cactus League play, while leading the Giants to a 7-4 victory over the Boston Red Sox. Alou, who has hit four of his homers at the Giants' training base in Phoenix, currently is batting .483. Cepeda, who hit homer No. 6, is batting .383 and Mays, who has three thus far, is batting .323.

Most training camp observers say the only weaknesses the Giants have are at second base where rookie Chuck Hiller is attempting to fill Joe Amalfitano's shoes and possibly in pitching. Hiller is not regarded a major league hitter while his fielding is only adequate, while in pitching, the Giants are banking on comebacks by Billy Pierce and Don Larsen, both picked up from the Chicago White Sox.

Alou's improved hitting, if he can carry it over to the regular season, may take care of Hiller's deficiencies at the bat, while Juan Marichal, who was 13-10 last year, looks like he is ready to bellwether the pitching staff.

Marichal, just back from his honeymoon, pitched six smooth innings in Sunday's win over the Red Sox, striking out six batters and allowing just one earned run. Juan now has worked 13 innings this spring, allowing 12 hits and two earned runs while fanning 14 and walking only four.

Elsewhere, the St. Louis Cardinals, picked by many to win the NL pennant, scored three runs in the ninth and three more in the 10th to beat the pesky New York Mets, 7-4. Rookie catcher Bill Bryan hit successive homers off Jim Bunning in the third and fifth innings to pace the Kansas City A's to a 12-5 romp over the Detroit Tigers. The Chicago White Sox defeated the Cincinnati Reds, 10-6. The Los Angeles Angels nipped Dallas-Ft. Worth, 10-9, and Oklahoma City routed the Houston Colt 45s, 14-4. The Chicago Cubs beat Milwaukee, 16-6. And the Indians nipped the Dodgers, 6-5.

Games involving the Orioles-Yankees, Pirates-Senators and Phillies-Twins were cancelled by rain.

Scribe Believes Maris Is Sincere

EDITORS NOTE: One of the big baseball stories this spring has centered around Yankee home run slugger Roger Maris and his relations with the press and fans.

In the following dispatch Milton Richman, a former minor league baseball player known throughout his 17 years as a UPI baseball writer for his inside stories on personalities in the game, tells about the Maris he knows.

"That's not my problem," he shrugs. "Just don't write anything personal."

For all his so-called trouble with newspapermen, Maris readily speaks to all of them. Or most of them, anyway.

The word "interview" is a sour one in Roger's vocabulary. But go up to him without a pencil and pad, start passing the time of day and he'll talk long enough to make you miss your train.

Following one such recent 20-minute discourse, a young, local newspaperman said to Maris: "What's all this about you feuding with the writers?"

"I don't want to have anything to do with them," Maris said. "But he does every day."

As for his Yankee teammates, all of them like Maris, including Mickey Mantle. Mickey has even tried to advise Roger to be more understanding.

"I'll try," Maris said, "but I don't know."

As for this writer, I have always gotten along well with Maris and try to understand him. I'm convinced he's sincere.

With a grin, Maris suggests that I take care of my job and he'll take care of his.

Manager Ralph Houk hopes that whoever is criticizing Maris "they keep getting him mad."

"The madder he gets, the better he plays," said Houk. "And the way he's hitting the ball now I wouldn't be surprised if he hits 75 home runs this year."

Houk's probably figuring Maris can stay angry all year. He could be right.

Tiger Wants Title Shot At Downes Or Fullmer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dick Tiger, a 33-year-old Nigerian with a left hook that shakes up rivals like a double martini, is "head hunting" today for a shot at either claimant to the world's middleweight boxing crown.

"I'll take the winner of the Terry Downes-Paul Pender (April 7) bout or Gene Fullmer," said Tiger after his status as No. 1 middleweight contender was enhanced by his unanimous 10-round decision over Henry Hank of Detroit at Madison Square Garden, Saturday night. "I'll fight either because I think I can beat either."

Downes is recognized as the middleweight titleholder in New York, Massachusetts and Europe while Fullmer is the NBA king. Both Downes and Fullmer have made tentative promises to meet Tiger.

Also on hand for goldfom's greatest challenge will be veterans Sam Snead and Ben Hogan, two of the most outstanding golfers in the Masters for two decades. Snead has won the Masters three times, Hogan twice. But neither has finished among the front-runners during the past four years.

Marr Felt He Could Win Open

WILMINGTON, N.C. (UPI) — Cool-playing Dave Marr had a feeling he would win the $20,000 Azalea Open golf tournament and the thought frightened him.

"I was scared to tee off," he said Sunday after collecting $2,800 top prize money. "I felt I could knock anything in and almost did it."

But the 27-year-old Sun City, Ariz., pro had to go one extra hole before winning in a sudden death playoff with lumbering red-head Jerry Steelsmith.

Marr hit a perfect tee shot on the first hole of the sudden death playoff while Steelsmith—who is 26 years old and still looking for a tournament victory—pushed his shot into the sandy rough. The red-head recovered with a shot 30 feet from the cup.

But the winner's shot to the par four hole was so true to its mark that it almost hit the pin and bounced four feet away.

Steelsmith ran his putt past the cup and came back with a par while Marr dropped in the birdie putt.

Marr said he had a feeling Saturday night that he could shoot a five under par 67 Sunday and win the tournament. But after seeing rain and high winds in the early morning he decided a 69 would win.

While Marr was firing his closing round 71, Steelsmith was the one burning up the course. He went out with an even par 36 over the Cape Fear Country Club course which was put in perfect shape by the early morning rain.

The sun came out by mid-morning, before Steelsmith teed off. But on the second side, the second place winner with a $1,900 slice of the purse really got hot.

Steelsmith birdied the 10th on an eight foot putt, the 11th on a 50-footer from off the green, the 12th on a 12-footer and the 14th and 15th on 15 foot putts. Knowing he was at that point leading the tournament, he bogied the par-three 16th and finished with a back side 32 and an 18-hole total of 68—four strokes below par.

Following the finish, Mason Rudolph, who captured third place one stroke off the tying pace, needed only to par the last three holes. But he bogied 16 and 17 and missed a 20 foot birdie putt on the 18th.

Masters Field Is Completed

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) — Dave Ragan of Sun City, Fla., and Phil Rodgers of LaJolla, Calif., rounded out the field of 137 golfers today for the 26th annual Masters golf tournament which begins here Thursday.

Officials at famed Augusta National issued invitations to the two Sunday. They said the pair were selected on the basis of showings on the PGA circuit during the season. The announcement came at the end of the Azalea Open in Wilmington, N.C., Sunday, the last tournament before the Masters.

Invitations have now been extended to nearly all living and past golfing greats, including Horton Smith who won the first Masters in 1934 and young Jack Nicklaus, the ex-zmateur who turned pro this year.

Among the favorites this year are Arnold Palmer, who won the Masters in 1958 and 1960 and finished one and two strokes off the pace in 1959 and 1961 respectively; defending champion Gary Player first foreigner to win the Masters; South Africa, Palmer's arch-rival. Player last year became the U.S. Open champion Gene Littler and Nicklaus also appear to be among the favorites.

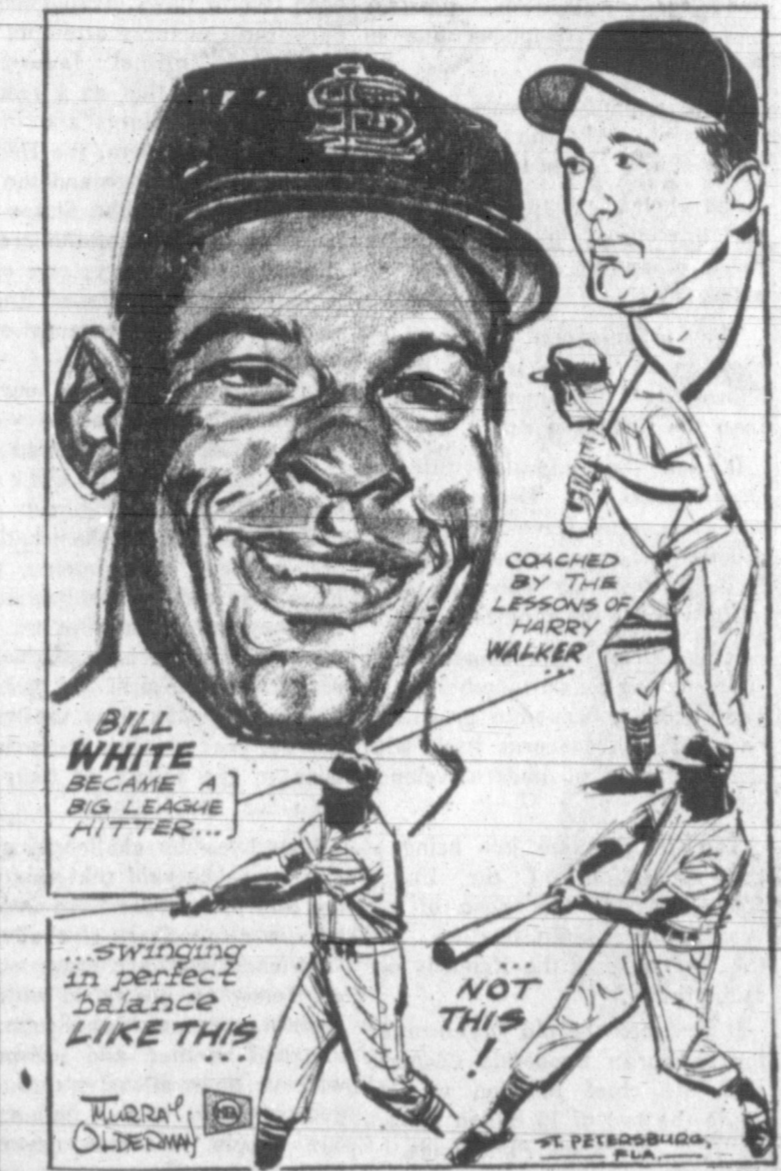

Doug Sanders, Tommy Aaron, Bo Wininger and a dozen others could upset the favorites' apple cart.

Also on hand for goldfom's greatest challenge will be veterans Sam Snead and Ben Hogan, two of the most outstanding golfers in the Masters for two decades. Snead has won the Masters three times, Hogan twice. But neither has finished among the front-runners during the past four years.

Ridan Hasn't Lived Up To Big Billings

HALLEANDALE, Fla. (UPI) — They'll ship Ridan off to Kentucky today with his reputation slightly enhanced, but it will take more than larruping a lady to make him a big man with the hardboots.

Ridan, who won all seven of his sprint races as a two-year-old, has been less than sensational this year when they sent him a distance. He had been flattened twice at a mile and an eighth before he scored a nose victory over the filly Cicada in Saturday's $100,000 added Florida Derby.

But before his followers go overboard holding an anchor it's well to take a peek at the respective times.

Ridan, who was being billed as a "wonder horse," set people really to wondering when he absolved three straight shellackings this winter. He won his first start at six furlongs and then the barn roll fell in.

He was on the head end in the seven furlong Bahamas under Willie Hartack, who is quite a rider if not the world's greatest diplomat, and finished a fading second. He was on top in the mile and an eighth Everglades under Hartack and finished a dwindling third, being set back to fourth for interference.

The stable had Hartack off him and gave Ismael Valenzuela, another top jock, a shot. Ridan got up to second in the mile and an eighth Flamingo and then faded to third. He got second money through another disqualification when they took it away from Sunrise County for allegedly logging out in front of Ridan. But something called Prego still had Ridan topped.

Then, Saturday, in a field that will never go down in history as one of the greatest ever assembled, Ridan came from third place to nip Cicada at the wire. He looked her in the eye midway down the stretch and it is highly significant that he didn't beat her off but they banged away shoulder to shoulder all the way to the picture.

The time, too, is significant. Ridan, in scoring by a nostril, was clocked in 1:50 2-5.

It was the slowest running of the Florida Derby—a fast track—in seven years.

Take into consideration, too, that Sir Gaylord collared Ridan, in both the seven furlong Bahamas and the mile and an eighth Everglades to beat him both times.

Sir Gaylord's time for the longer effort was 1:48 2-5.

Sunrise County's time in beating Ridan in the Flamingo was 1:49 flat.

Both of those clockings make Ridan's Florida Derby clocking of 1:50 2-5 look a bit waxy. In this victory, Manuel Yeza, another of the top iron artists, was handling the reins and Ridan was driving and about ridden out when they crossed the wire.

So what happens when they extend the yardage by going a mile and a quarter in the Kentucky Derby?

Well, to walk out on a limb, I doubt if Ridan can make it that far, particularly if they get Sir Gaylord back to the races. That sore-ankled dude can wig it out and there is no question that he can go a mile and a quarter and still have enough wind left over to play "My Old Kentucky Home" or a saxophone.

And, if Sir Gaylord isn't on the racing premises when they blow boots and saddles for the Rose Run, it's the guess in this corner that almost anything can jump up and collect the jackpot.

Admiral's Voyage, the West Coast hero who won the Louisiana Derby, didn't show much in the clutch—and at this limping pace. He was 11 lengths off the lead at three quarters of a mile but only five lengths back of Ridan. He came on to finish third but at that juncture was six lengths back.

All of which seems to sum up to a wide open Derby come the first Saturday in May. At that time, if he had a couple of preps under his belt, they'd all have to beat Sir Gaylord. But if he isn't, then take a hatpin, Harry, and pay off the mortgage on that sweet little nest in the West.

Phillips Wins AAU Cage Title

DENVER (UPI) — The Phillips 66 Oilers wore a familiar crown today—the national Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) basketball championship they have won 10 times.

The Bartlesville, Okla., club won the title at the 53th national AAU tournament in Denver Coliseum Saturday night with a 70-59 triumph over the Denver D.C. Truckers. Both are survivors of the defunct National Industrial Basketball League that folded after the 1961 tournament.

The third remaining amateur team from the NIBL, the Good-year Wingfoots of Akron, Ohio, defeated the U.S. Marine All-Stars, 84-74, for third place in the tournament Saturday night.

Twins Manager Predicts Higher League Showing

EDITORS NOTE: This is another dispatch on the 1962 prospects of the major league baseball clubs.

By LEO H. PETERSEN
 UPI Sports Editor

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Last year the Minnesota Twins, shifted from Washington to St. Paul, Minneapolis, soared to the heights and were leading the American League on April 27. Then they started to sink to the level predicted for them and wound up seventh—38 games behind the New York Yankees and only a half game ahead of one of the new clubs in the league, the Los Angeles Angels.

Sam Mele, who took over as manager when Cookie Lavageto was fired, maintains his ball club is better than that and predicts it will finish in the first division in 1962. That means fifth place or better and he isn't finding many baseball men who agree with him.

He has one of the league's big sluggers in Harmon Killebrew, an outstanding catcher in Earl Battey; two strong right-handed pitchers in Camilo Pascual and Pedro Ramos and an outfielder, Bob Allison, who batted in 105 runs with a .245 batting average.

Outside of those players, he doesn't have too much. First, though, back to those he does have.

Killebrew hit 46 home runs, batted in 122 with a batting average of .288. Owner Clark Griffith thinks he should play left field. Mele thinks he should play third. Killebrew would prefer to play first.

Battey hit .302 with 17 HR's and 85 RBI's and is considered one of the class catchers in the league. Pascual, with one of the best curve balls in the business, won 15 games, one less than he lost. Ramos won 11 and lost 20.

And now back to those who have to back up those key five.

Behind Pascual and Ramos as starters there are Jim Kaat (9-17), Jack Kralick (13-11), Don Lee

(3-6) and then a bunch of guys named Joe. They have the gray-haired Ray Moore (4-4) as the No. 1 relief man with Bill Pleis (4-2) and Danny McDevitt (1-2) with the Yankees and 1-0 with the Twins) behind him.

Lee could be diverted to relief duty if Al Schroll, whose overall record with Houston, Syracuse and the Twins was 11-9; Georges Maranda, 10-4 at Tacoma; or Bruce Swango, 6-5 at Nashville, could win a starting berth. Another possibility is Al Strange, 7-12 at Syracuse.

It isn't, by any stretch of the imagination, a powerful pitching array.

Spelling Battey behind the plate will be Hal Naragon, who hit .302 with his limited duty with the Twins last year, and Jerry Zimmerman, secured from Cincinnati where he batted only .206.

Allison is assured of the right field berth. It could be Lenny Green (.285) or Bill Tuttle (.246), in center with Jim Lemon, who slumped off to .258 in 1961 with only 14 home runs and 52 runs batted in, in left.

That is, if Killebrew does not play left. He may if rookie George Banks, who hit .296 at Binghamton last year with 30 homers and 108 runs batted in, doesn't win the third base job. Also if Don Mincher can't make it at first base, Mincher hit only .257 at Buffalo but rapped out 24 homers with 66 RBI's.

John Goryl, who hit .280 at Omaha, is another third base possibility.

Rookie Jim Snyder, up from Indianapolis where he batted only .252, is the leading candidate for second base.

Zorro Versalles surprised at shortstop last year and hit .280. But there were times he threatened to leave the club when he said he was homesick and didn't especially care to play baseball. The Twins managed to keep him in the fold.

They better manage to do it again this year, too, or the job will go to light hitting Jose Valdivieso, who has been around a number of years but isn't likely ever to top by very much his .195 batting average of last year.

So looking over that supporting cast for Killebrew, Battey, Pascual, Ramos and Allison, it's hard to understand Mele's optimism. Miracles have happened in baseball, however, and it would have to be classed as a minor one if the Twins should finish as high as fifth.

Wilkinson Signs Tech Application

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — Texas Tech, Southwest Conference basketball co-champion, made four lightning strikes Sunday in the schoolboy recruiting race, signing four top prep stars to pre-enrollment applications.

Those signed included Seminole's Bobby Measles, Lubbock Monterey's Rus Wilkinson, Odesa's Dub Malaise, and Arlington Heights' all-state player Norman Reuther.

Reuther, 6-6, had a 23-point per game scoring average for Arlington Heights last season.

"He's one of the blue chip boys in the state," said Tech coach Gen Gibson.

"I've always wanted to go to Tech," said Reuther. "Lubbock has a terrific basketball atmosphere."

Reuther, who hit .280 at Omaha, is another third base possibility.

Rookie Jim Snyder, up from Indianapolis where he batted only .252, is the leading candidate for second base.

Zorro Versalles surprised at shortstop last year and hit .280. But there were times he threatened to leave the club when he said he was homesick and didn't especially care to play baseball. The Twins managed to keep him in the fold.

They better manage to do it again this year, too, or the job will go to light hitting Jose Val-

Fists Fly In Battle For Big Money In NBA Cage Contests

BOSTON (UPI) — "Boys will be boys" according to Philadelphia Warrior Coach Frank McGuire, even though the boys of whom he spoke average some 6 feet, 5 inches in height and 220 pounds in weight.

The "boys" were McGuire's own players, living desperately up to their Warrior name, and the Boston Celtics.

Those two National Basketball Association teams meet Tuesday night in a sixth Eastern Division playoff game at Philadelphia after the fifth game of their best-of-seven series closely resembled a boxing show at Boston Sunday.

The teams are battling for the right to play the Western Division final for the playoff title won an unprecedented three successive years by the Celtics. Neither the Warriors nor the Detroit Pistons have been particularly cooperative thus far, however, with Boston and Los Angeles showing identical 3-2 game leads in their respective series. Both playoff series resume Tuesday night, the Pistons entertaining the Lakers in Detroit.

McGuire's summation concerned an outbreak of bare-knuckle violence in Boston's 119-104 victory over the Warriors Sunday.

"After all, this is for big money. These guys are way up for these games. They're fighting mad," McGuire said.

Boston's Tom Heinsohn was the only player ejected in Sunday's rough and tumble affair at Boston Garden.

Wilt Chamberlain and Bill Russell continued their personal duel. Wilt getting 30 points and 14 rebounds while Russell got 29 points 26 rebounds and a rare seven assists.

The Celtics jumped to an immediate eight point lead and were on top throughout, by 10 at the quarter, 23 at the half, 22 at the end of three, and 15 when it was over.

FIRE, FLOODS, AND YOU!

Did you know that careless campers and smokers start dozens of floods every year? It's true! Forest fires are a major cause of soil erosion and floods. When fire burns off the ground cover that holds the rain and protects the soil, the first heavy rain will loosen the soil and carry it down, unchecked, to silt our reservoirs, flood our towns, and pollute our streams.

Clean water and fertile soil are the lifeblood of the land. Be careful. Don't let your fire start a flood!

Television In Review

By RICK DU BROW
United Press International
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — ABC-TV Sunday night saddled itself with a difficult task: The combining of a somber appeal to fight cancer with an all-star musical-comedy show hosted by Burt Lancaster.

As entertainment, the hour special was saved by the irreverence of Bob Hope, the inspired teaming of Jimmy Durante and Bobby Darin, and the beautiful dignity of Edward G. Robinson, the only performer who successfully bridged the dual nature of the show.

The program, which included filmed messages from President Kennedy, Vice President Johnson and Eleanor Roosevelt, got off to a routine musical start. Then came Hope. He followed Green Garson, who had taken the occasion to plug her performance as Mrs. Roosevelt in "Sunrise at Campobello" and as "Mrs. Miniver" in the old movie.

"Thank you, Eleanor Miniver," Hope opened, and the show was off the ground, cutting neatly through the respectful tone of the occasion. He went on: "I'd like to thank Frank Sinatra for allowing his president to appear." He said that with all the Kennedys on television, "Ike's so mad, he won't watch 'All-Star Golf.'"

The Durante-Darin teaming was a fine surprise. Darin, who apparently is as good as he thinks he is, began with a masterful imitation of Durante—so good that Jimmy is said to want the youngsters to do his movie biography. The two performers had a wonderful time singing and dancing, and their rendition of "Bill Bailey" was rock'em-sock-em stuff.

Lancaster, Rock Hudson, Danny Thomas, Dinah Shore, Charlton Heston, Richard Chamberlain and Jack Paar helped the appeal with messages. But Robinson was the topper. His straightforward recital about the cycle of life—accompanied by poetic film clips—showed that dignity is always however heartfelt. It was an acting lesson for the nation to behold. His face is that of the theater itself.

The dignity that Robinson had built was quickly dissipated by Connie Francis, who sang a few songs. And then, after a closing message by the President, someone guessed wrong by having Harry Belafonte end the show. He sang a number so mournful, it was almost deadly. The President's ending would have been excellent. He's a pretty tough act to follow.

One other sequence should have been edited out. During the show, Paul Newman introduced his wife as "Joanne Woodward." "Joanne Woodward Newman," she corrected cutely. Oh, all right.

The Channel Swim: Raymond Massey, of NBC-TV's "Dr. Kildare" show, has signed to play Abraham Lincoln in the movie "How the West was Won" . . . he is famed for his portrayals of Lincoln on the stage and screen.

Insect Free
Iron beds first appeared during the 18th century. Early advertisements recommended them as being free from insects which sometimes infested wooden bedssteads.

Foreign News Commentary

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

PARIS—In a time-worn red brick building off the Avenue Foch in Paris, a group of little-publicized Americans presides over a direct telephone line to Washington.

These men are only slightly concerned with the twists and turns of the cold war.

But their activities have a direct bearing on the lives and well-being of nearly every person residing in the free world.

The organization for which these men labor is no better known to the general public than the men who run it.

It has the imposing title of Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development and among its duties is a watchdog attitude over the ebb and flow of free world currencies.

It encourages the expansion of trade among its 20 member countries and the economic growth of each. It also concerns itself with the problems of under-developed countries.

The OECD came into being at the suggestion of the United States just at the close of the Eisenhower administration and the beginning of the Kennedy administration.

It replaced the old Organization for European Economic Cooperation. Its chief function was to guide the use of 13 billion dollars in U. S. Marshall Plan funds.

The OECD came into being because in 1960 Washington became alarmed at the outflow of U. S. gold and began its "save the dollar" campaign.

Washington believed that resurgent European economies now were able to assume at least part of the enormous aid burden previously carried by the United States virtually alone.

Progress has been slow, but there has been progress. The outflow of U. S. gold, in the neighborhood of 4 billion in 1960, slowed to less than a billion in 1961.

West Germany agreed to step up its aid program by $1.4 billion to 38 countries. France, already extending aid to its former African colonies, agreed to extend its scope beyond Africa. Great Britain entered the program and the Netherlands, Denmark, Sweden, Switzerland and Austria took their aid and legislative policies under review.

Walter Rogers Reports

POLITICS

The word "politic" is defined in Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary as "of or pertaining to civil government." It has also been defined as the science of government, the rules of conduct by which men must live. History records many attempts in this field of endeavor, none of which has been free of flaws. Throughout the ages, most of these attempts have resulted in dismal failure. It might be said that as a result of these dismal failures and in revolution against them, the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States were born. At the time of the creation of our great country, one of the leading political lights of England gave us a life expectancy of not more than 50 years.

Others have predicted our disintegration from year to year, from decade to decade and from century to century. In a few short years, this country, under the Constitution, which has had relatively few amendments, will have survived for 200 years, and it is my prediction that the forecasters of doom, both of this generation and those of the past, will be as disappointed at the end of the 200-year period as each has been in the falsity of their own individual predictions.

Man lives by challenge, and it can never be said that this country and our people have failed to have our fair share of challenges. With each, we have grown stronger. Today we are faced with perhaps our greatest challenge. It, too, will be met and dispensed with as have all others: the greater glory of our nation and our people. We must never lose faith in our own country, in our own people and in the philosophy of government written into our Constitution.

Much has been said in recent years as to the preachings and the doctrines of those who lived in the early days of our country and who fashioned many of the concepts and the philosophies which have guided us through the years. Perhaps the two leading schools of thought were represented by two great Americans who saw eye to eye on many subjects, but who were in direct conflict on others. I speak of Thomas Jefferson and Alexander Hamilton. I thought it would be well to sum up in this newsletter a few of the beliefs of these great men as compiled by historians and presently documented in the history of this country.

On political philosophy, Jefferson believed in innate worth, rationality, ability and equality of men regardless of education or wealth, as being capable of self-government. Hamilton on the contrary did not believe in the masses and public opinion. He was a great admirer of hereditary monarchy and of the propertied classes.

On the question of minority rights and special interests, Jefferson vigorously defended the rights of the minority through proper application of a Bill of Rights. He placed great faith in the common people and vigorously opposed the entailing of estates and primogeniture. Hamilton is recorded as being little concerned with individual rights and subscribed to an aristocratic Senate to check popular assemblies.

Both men saw eye to eye on complete freedom of the press and its wide utilization.

On the general subject of government, Jefferson believed that union was essential to the safety and prosperity of the States; that government was necessary to prevent men from injuring each other, and the less government the better. He opposed government by an elite, but wholeheartedly endorsed the proposition that it should be by and for the common people. Hamilton is reputed to have believed in a strong permanent union and a strong Federal central government to insure that union.

On the machinery of government, Jefferson believed that the President should serve not more than two terms (you will remember that this is the 22 Amendment to the Constitution, adopted in 1951). He believed in a complete separation of powers and a full application of the Bill of Rights by the judicial branch of the government as an essential means of safeguarding personal liberty. Hamilton subscribed to election of the President for life and election of Senators for life or good behavior. He believed that the power of judicial review should be exercised to declare void unconstitutional acts of State and Federal legislatures. (It might be remembered, that it is this power fixed in the decision of Marbury vs. Madison by Chief Justice Marshall that is the present source of the tremendous power of the Supreme Court.) Hamilton also believed in high property qualifications for voting.

There are many other matters that are of great interest with relation to the thoughts of these two great Americans, and it would be well for those who are interested in our government to review the history of that era. It will be most revealing and will certainly point out the beginning of philosophies that were adopted after vigorous and bitter debate and argument in a country under a government of the people, by the people and for the people. It will reassure everyone that if we will proceed in accordance with the dictates of the Constitution, we need have no fear of our country disintegrating.

A Senator's Battle With Cancer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Mrs. Maurine Neuberger's husband died of cancer. Not long afterward, she too was diagnosed as a cancer victim. Her story of bereavement and battle is a dramatic one, and a significant one too, because Mrs. Neuberger now is a United States senator from Oregon. As a contribution to public understanding Mrs. Neuberger has written three dispatches describing her experiences. They are published in connection with National Cancer Month, which began Sunday. Her first report follows.)

Living With Cancer—
By Sen. Maurine Neuberger
Written for UPI

Whenever I look at the statistics of cancer cases for the past year, they have a personal meaning for me because I am one of them. When I look at the figure of 5,000, which means new cancer cases in Oregon in 1961, I see myself sitting in the doctor's office and being told that I have cancer. All banks of numbers relating to this disease now take on a new perspective.

I am neither depressed nor gloomy nor vainglorious about my affliction. In fact, I no longer think of it until I see those figures although I know there was wide publicity when I had a cancer operation in November, 1961, and I sometimes sense a desire among my friends and colleagues to question me although they feel a reticence about using the term cancer.

I have been successfully operated on. I believe my excellent doctors when they tell me that I have every reason to resume my normal life. My operation and confinement is an episode that is behind me. But I shall be glad to view myself as a cancer victim if telling you about my personal experience will help you to help yourself.

The word "cancer" is difficult for some people to utter, especially when talking to a cancer patient.

Junior Members Of PLT Will Present Play

The junior members of Pampa Little Theater will present a workshop play entitled, "Battle of the Budget" at the group's bi-monthly meeting today at 7:30 p.m. in the Holy Souls School, 612 W. Browning.

The two-scene, one-act play, which has been in rehearsal for three weeks, is directed by Mrs. Marie Jones. The public is invited to attend.

The plot is concerned with an above-average American family; mother and father, three teenage children, two of their friends, and a business associate of the father. The teenagers decide to try a little "hocus-pocus" to wheedle an increase in an allowance from their father. The father, wise to their antics, decides to do a little "plotting" himself; a plot which backfires almost disastrously for him financially.

Playing the roles of mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Prentiss, are Pat Ludeman and Chuck Worley. Their three teenage children are Pam Ludeman as Pam, Kim Wilson as Sally and Mike Miller as Corky, the Prentiss' children; their two friends, Trina Ormson as Linda, Steve Herring as Alex and Mr. Acton, the business associate, Jerry Trolinger.

Immediately following the play, cast members of "The Night Is My Enemy" by Fred Carmichael, slated for production on April 27-28, will remain for rehearsal, according to Homer T. West, director.

Crew members named for "behind the scenes work" on the April play are: BUILDING: Frank Hatcher, chairman, N. J. Ellis, Harry Rawlings, Wynne Veale, Glenn McConnell; PAINTING: Glenna Lea Miller, chairman, Sue Pope, Suzette Searle, Linda Stevens, Pat Scott; PROPS AND SET DECORATION: Ila Hale, chairman, Odovern McConnell, Shirley Allen, Jean Chisholm, Chleo Worley, Sue Stout.

COSTUMES: Odovern McConnell, chrm., Marsha McComas, Jane Groff; PUBLICITY: Doris Wilson, chairman, Pat Scott, Bob Hale, Jim Terrell; MAKE UP: Jack Miller, chairman, Chleo Worley, Marie Jones, Glenna Lea Miller; STAGE MANAGEMENT: Glenn McConnell, chairman, Wynne Veale, Frank Hatcher; TICKET SALES: Marsha McComas, Pat Scott, Pat Ludeman (student sales); HOUSE MANAGEMENT: Van Vanderberg, chairman, Doris Wilson, Trina Ormson, Kim Wilson; WARD ROBE MISTRESSES: Stena Hatcher and Sue Pope.

When I indicate that I am willing to discuss my own experience, there is an immediate outpouring of questions, but the one that leads all the rest is, "What made you go to the doctor?" These same friends had seen me active and even exuberant one day, and the next morning they read of my admittance to the hospital at the University of Oregon medical school. I was heavier than I had been for a year, so I didn't look sick and nobody could possibly say, "I suspected there was something wrong with her."

I will tell you what I told my fellow Oregonians. I have always been healthy and considered physical examinations necessary for other people. I had to be coerced into making the annual appointment by repeated reminders from my family and the family doctor. I always postponed the examination until the week before I was to return to my duties in the Senate in Washington, D.C., as the short recess in Oregon was too important to be interrupted by this event.

But this time was different. I had returned from a lengthy trip to Africa with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and was unable to overcome a persistent hoarseness that had plagued me during the last week of the trip. I went to my doctor for a throat examination, and he decided that I might as well have my complete physical examination while I was there.

His first examination was followed by a proctoscopy, which confirmed his suspicions and I knew before the report came from the laboratory that I probably had cancer. The looks on the doctors' faces were enough. In three days, I was in the hospital.

Today, as I go about my duties in the Senate of the United States, I am the beneficiary of hundreds of millions of dollars of research and experimentation. I am the product of innumerable hours devoted to a cause by men and women whom I shall never see or know.

Yearly, we spend over $7 billion on tobacco, $2 billion on jewelry, $431 million on pari-mutuel betting, but only $110 million on cancer research. Current estimates are that about 45 million people now living in this country will eventually have cancer, and at present rates, about two-thirds of those will die of the disease. Money alone will not reduce these last two figures, but it will help. You can't buy cancer research at the corner drug store. It will build a clinic that otherwise would not be built, or it will provide a scholarship to help some medical student who might otherwise never have been able to pursue a career in medicine.

The government has seen the need for more funds and the aid to cancer research through the National Institutes of Health has tripled in recent years. As a direct result of these funds, there is a greater understanding of cancer-inducing agents, of viruses, hormones, chemicals and bacteria. Each day brings advances in treatment of the many types of cancer through chemotherapy, radiation or—as in my case—surgery. These gains indicate the ability of science to put to effective use, all the resources made available.

I stress the role of the federal government in this fight against a dreadful disease because it is responsible for the health and welfare of the American people as a nation. Through your tax dollars, you support the National Cancer Institute and educational programs through the National Defense Education Act. Of course, the government is ably aided by the private foundations. The country needs the program of the American Cancer Society, which has done so much to provide the day-to-day emphasis, to inform the public and encourage the open discussion of cancer.

Radio Version 'Perry Mason' Is To Appear On TV Show By Same Name

By JOSEPH FINNIGAN
UPI Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — If you get the feeling there are two "Perry Masons" on the television screen in a forthcoming segment of that popular series, don't be surprised.

That's exactly what happens when Raymond Burr, Video's "Perry Mason," meets John Larkin, who played the character on radio from 1948 to 1955.

Larkin recently moved to Hollywood from New York, where he did the radio show. Video's "Perry Mason" was one of his first acting assignments here. He'll play the role of a businessman in a segment of the show which airs on CBS-TV April 23.

"There were two other 'Perry Masons' before I took the radio show over," said John during a break from his work on the video version. "I stayed with the radio show until the end."

Radio's "Perry" sees a difference between "Mason's" exploits as portrayed on the two mediums. "We spend a good deal more time on the radio show with the criminal element," he said. "But, we always ended up, as they do on television, in the courtroom."

Another important difference is what is accomplished. Where radio's "Mason" characters needed a script, microphone, and not much else, television must have sets, lighting, cameras and other technical facilities.

You could broadcast the radio show from a large closet. A studio is needed for television's production.

"I was here for about 10 hours yesterday and the company worked 12," said John, between scenes at the studio. "On radio we'd have done two weeks work, 10 shows, in that time. But for television we had only 29 minutes done after three days of shooting. They're very painstaking and that's why it's such a good show".

Before coming to Hollywood, John appeared everyday on a television show called "Edge of Night," a title which sounds like it came from a defunct space project.

"It's still on the air," said John, who wandered around the "Edge" for five years. "I couldn't stand it any longer. I was getting beat up working five days a week on the show, which was live."

dent Kennedy's plan for a big spending make-work program of public improvements should appease some unhappy leaders of organized labor. They have been insisting that the administration is not aggressively attacking the problem of unemployment. This appeasement easily is predictable although it may not last.

Whether, when and how many jobs will be created is not predictable at all. The President has proposed a fast-moving, 18-month $600 million program. This proposal is not part of the substance of the New Frontier.

This is a proposal lifted from that old frontiersman, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, whose basic remedy for unemployment in the 1930's was spending government money to make work and create jobs. This was part of the New Deal pump priming policy.

As a remedy for unemployment, FDR's spending was an unhappy bust. Great sums were spent. Great construction projects were put in being. The government money passed through a great many hands. And, somehow, the unemployed mostly remained without jobs.

The problem of unemployment remained acute and beyond FDR's ability to handle until the United States slipped into the role of arsenal of democracy in the late 1930's. Then came the war. War absorbs manpower into jobs, into armies and, too often, into graves. The numbers of unemployed melted away until in 1944 there were fewer than 700 thousand employables without jobs.

Too bad that these 700 thousand could not be identified adequately then or now. It has been suggested that the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics' standards are not satisfactory for determining just who is employable and who is not employed.

However that may be, there is no argument about FDR's inability to spend the United States out of unemployment. He could and did improve the situation. The peak depression unemployment was 12.4 million in 1933. That was 24.9 per cent of the civilian labor force. In 1940 the unemployed had been reduced to 8.1 million, 14.8 per cent of the civilian labor force. The arsenal of democracy jobs were beginning to take effect.

Thereafter the trend steadily was down through 1944 in the period of forced draft munitions-making an all-out war. FDR spent annually much more than Kennedy's proposed $600 million to make jobs. Kennedy's plan is to spend that sum in 18 months.

Unemployment seems to baffle JFK as it did FDR. There are about as many jobless today as when Kennedy was elected.

Lenten Message

By The Rt. Rev. Allen Brown, DD
Bishop, Albany, N.Y.,
Episcopal Diocese
Written for UPI

Mankind usually is at some moral crossroads. The contrast between the hopes of the space age and the threat of thermo-nuclear destruction, the choice between human dignity and a half dozen kinds of oppression, the promise of larger Christian understanding and the danger of short cuts which only compound our divisions make the little ways in which we used to keep Lent seem tragically insignificant.

To be sure we must be faithful in little things, but contemporary opportunities and dangers make it imperative that we see our Christian responsibility in larger terms. A few years ago a book was published with the spiritually disturbing title "Your God Is Too Small"; we must make certain that our observances are adequate to our times.

True repentance for our sins of unreality and hardness of heart, personal responsibility as citizens of the kingdom of God and recognition of the divine duties of obedience, worship and vision suggest the kind of larger disciplines appropriate to 1962 and worthier of the God to whose glory the Lenten season is observed.

People who complain about the high cost of food usually have the figures to prove it.

Foreign Commentary

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst
KARACHI, West Pakistan

When Pakistan completes its second five-year plan four years hence, United States aid will have totaled about $2 billion.

Of this amount, 1 billion already has been spent and another $500 million authorized. Other aid will come from West Germany, Britain, Japan, Canada and France.

This expression of confidence in Pakistan's future largely is due to the country's straight-talking soldier president, Field Marshal Mohammad Ayub Khan.

Ayub, a graduate of Sandhurst, Britain's West Point, addressed the United States Congress last year and talked in typically tough terms.

Of foreign aid, he told the lawmakers, "you had better not get tired at this point."

Countries such as Pakistan, he said, "are pressing against you as friends. But if we don't make the grade and, heaven forbid, will fall under communism, then we will be pressing against you again—but not as friends."

It was an unpleasant topic, but Congress gave him an ovation. Ayub came to power in a bloodless coup in 1958 and since has ruled the country under martial law.

Early this month he took the first step toward establishing Pakistan as a democracy.

He announced a new constitution placing the country under a president and a two-hour parliament. Ultimately, he foresees a presidential system on a pattern similar to the United States. But he does not see it now in a country where literacy is only about 19 per cent.

For the present he plans a "basic democracy" wherein one "basic Democrat" will be elected to represent a village. From this will pyramid district councils of "basic Democrats," provincial councils, and finally a parliament and a president.

In the end, a basic body of some 80,000 "basic Democrats" will elect the president and parliament.

An American here sized up Pakistan this way: "whether or not Pakistan is to have a democracy will depend on how Ayub feels about it."

Right now Ayub seems to approve.

A Few Suggestions Of Courses For The National Highway Academy

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Among the more eye-catching bills introduced in Congress this week was a proposal by Rep. Ed Edmondson of Oklahoma to create a national highway academy.

This one had a cinderlike effect on my pretty brown orbs because of its timing. It followed a weekend during which I spent most of my time driving about the countryside on assorted missions.

Edmondson's plan is to set up a sort of road-building school in the Commerce Department to which state highway officials might repair for courses of instruction.

I think this is a fine idea and, as a member of the great motoring public, I am prepared to offer some suggestions as to what type of curriculum the school might provide.

First of all, there should be a course on "The Theory and Practice of Watering Cement." This would be a required course and would insure that all road-builders know how to mix concrete that crumbles.

As an elective, students enrolled in the cement course could study the strategic location of potholes, learning how to make them appear in just the right place to break an axle.

They also would be provided with a textbook entitled "Asphalt Paving and How to Make It Bumpy."

Once they had mastered these basic skills, the students would move on to the finer points of highway construction. Here they would learn how to build blind curves in open country and how to find hills on flat terrain.

This would take them into post-graduate work, where they would be taught to design freeway interchanges that cause the maximum amount of confusion.

All of these courses would be offered in the engineering college. The school also should have a fine arts college in order to turn out truly well-rounded road-builders.

I recommend that fine arts instruction include a course on the placement of billboards in such a way as to best block scenic vistas.

In English class, the highway students would learn how to write direction signs that no one can understand. There likewise would be a lecture on hiding rest stops on limited access highways so that motorists don't see them until it is too late.

Road builders, like tailors, need to be style conscious. This would necessitate a course on "Narrow Shoulders and Other Trends in Highway Fashion."

Finally, and most important, would be a business course for highway contractors. I suggest that it be called "Cutting Corners for Fun and Profit."

Wall Street In Review

NEW YORK (UPI) — With investment indecision still prevalent, about the best that can be expected right here is for the Dow industrials to hold around their support level of between 700-710, according to Kenneth Ward.

However, the Hayden, Stone & Co. analyst thinks time is about to run out on the bears and the market is once again reaching a selective buying area. "Furthermore there is no change of opinion that the Dow industrials will carry to a minimum level of 750 on the next upward move."

Little can be said for any drastic change in the outlook for business and the market in the period just ahead, according to Thomson & McKinnon. Patience, the brokerage house adds, may prove to be most rewarding in the present selective climate.

Taking the present background into consideration, Investors Stock Survey believes a satisfactory settlement of the steel situation could well provide the spark to drive the market into new high territory "as hesitant sideline investors and funds would go in and buy."

Certainly not everything we see and hear in the current developments of the day is unqualifiedly favorable, says Goodbody & Co., but we are encouraged by the preponderance of favorable business news. "We continue to feel that the constructive view will in time be reflected in higher stock prices generally."

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
United Press International
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Hon. Alfred E. Santangelo represents in Congress a New York district whose boundary lines are formed by such rural lanes as Madison, Park and Fifth Avenues.

This makes him ideally suited for membership on the House agriculture appropriations subcommittee, whose main concern is food production in the United States.

Santangelo's constituents are not exactly horny-handed tillers of the soil, but they sure do like to eat.

Thus he brings to the subcommittee's hearings a perspective that the other members, who come from more agrarian regions, might fail to provide.

The subcommittee recently had before it Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman, who was plowing the familiar furrows of crop controls, acreage allotment, parity, etc.

After several thousand words of testimony on these topics, Santangelo managed to switch the discussion to the type of husbandry practiced east of Lexington Avenue.

He wanted to know what, if anything, the department was doing about meat markets who put too much fat in hamburgers.

Freeman assured him that the department frowned on the padding of hamburgers and would look into the matter. Well, then, asked Santangelo, what was the situation on "the amount of water being pumped into ham?"

The secretary replied that the issue of watered hams was still before the courts. He said the department took the position that "a ham is a ham is a ham is a ham."

Apparently satisfied on that score, Santangelo next brought up the matter of adding chemicals to sausage. In this connection, he cited a letter he had received from a meat distributor.

The letter asserted that some meat plants in the New York area "are using chemicals to maintain a very bright color which gives the product a fresh-looking appearance."

One of the chemicals, it said, also is used by undertakers as an embalming fluid.

In response to Santangelo's query, the department made it clear that it does not endorse embalmed sausage.

I doubt that the hearing would have touched on this phase of agriculture had all of the subcommittee members been from farm belt districts. That shows the value of diversification.

I wish, however, that I had not read the transcript before lunch.

DOES GETTING UP NIGHTS MAKE YOU FEEL OLD

Thousands are now discovering how much stronger and better they can feel by combining ordinary kidney or bladder irritations. These irritations often occur after 30, and may make you tense and nervous from too frequent, burning or itching urination both day and night. Frequently, you may lose sleep and suffer from headaches, backache and feel "drained" generally. In such irritations, old, tired, depressed, feeling like a "worn-out" usually brings fast, relaxing comfort by curbing irritating germs in stream, acid urine and by giving complete pain relief. Safe for young or old. Good results in 30 days. Feel better fast.

Why The Mint Must Mint More

By WARD CANNEL
PHILADELPHIA (NEA)—Chalk up another victory for The Machine vs. Man. You simply cannot go around lighting life's path-ways with vending machines without illuminating some pretty dusty nooks in the national soul.

A brief five years of unbelievable growth in coin-operated salesmanship, it turns out, has forced the U.S. Mint to double its production of minor coin.

Between 1958 and last year the Philadelphia and Denver mints raised nickel and dime production from 353 million to nearly 607 million. Penny-making leaped from 1 billion to well over 2.5 billion. And those totals are expected to be higher this year.

Well, you don't put this much coin of the realm into the American pocket without expecting change. And it has come.

Coin collecting and investing in the U.S. today has climbed to frenzied heights. A dizzying tour of coinland discloses:

—Otherwise normal men and women spending Saturday evenings (with permission, of course) in now-closed supermarkets, poking through the day's receipts in search of a vital penny.

—Small children going through pockets of parents — not necessarily their own parents — in search of a missing Indian head nickel for the collection.

—Businessmen in gray flannel suits rushing from bank to bank filling empty bags with shiny new quarters in hope of cornering the market.

And like that. One coin collector's newspaper, for example, now is published once each week—60 pages chock — full of advice on who's got what and whether you should sell your dimes in this bull market.

Fred Reinfield, probably the biggest selling authority and writer in the field, says you can't understand any of this unless you start collecting coins for fun or profit.

"A gap in your collection can drive you off your rocker," Reinfield says. "Only a collector understands the glazed eyes of another collector on the hunt."

There is without doubt, considerable money in the hunt. Proof sets — the extra — finely struck set of the year's coins which the government mints for collectors — bring lovely prices, depending on the year they were made. The 1936 proof set, for example, cost $1.81 and is worth well over $400 today.

A certain 1894 dime is worth $2,800. Depending on their condition, age, scarcity and the like. Even the commonest pennies will someday be worth dollars.

But just how good an investment you can make in coins is something else. With the madness on us, the mint is now producing well over 3 million proof sets for collectors (a four-fold increase in four years). These won't be worth much until they're scarce.

And with everybody and his neighbor's pocket now in the search, many coins are in such demand that an investment in coins comes very high.

"Who cares," the vending age American collector says. "It's not the value. It's the fun of finding, buying and trading."

"It's the fun of putting them into special envelopes in nifty cabinets under lock and key so no air, light, dirt or fingers can ruin them."

Rod Serling Didn't Like Portrayal Of Author In TV's 'Ichabod And Me'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Rod Serling, creator of "The Twilight Zone," has given us his heartfelt blessing to pan his combined dramatic debut and farewell appearance Tuesday night on CBS-TV's "Ichabod and Me." He didn't like it.

Well, the truth is, he wasn't bad at all. Serling, who accepted the part "for laughs—no one had ever asked me before," played a famous novelist who doesn't want to be interviewed by an editor, Bob Sterling, star of the series.

It seems the novelist's social companions are a beatnik-like group of non-conformists called "The Clan." And few could argue with Serling's judgment that he was more than a little self-conscious, mainly because "I never had a line that resembled the English language."

The script was undeniably banal, sprinkled with such witticisms as "Crazy, man, crazy!" and "scubie-dubie-doo"—if that's how you spell it. But Serling, a handsome, feisty little ex-paratrooper, has a natural sincerity and manliness obvious to viewers who have watched him narrate his own show.

Although he has proclaimed that he is quitting "while I'm behind," he could, if he is serious about acting, be a definite asset to an occasional quality drama with a good writer (such as Rod Serling). Elia Kazan once acted. And size is really no problem. Al Ladd has often romanced leading ladies while standing on a platform.

As for Tuesday night's show overall, I have to wince along with Rod. There must be a place for "Ichabod and Me," but not on television.

It's pretty hard to think much of an editor like Sterling who doesn't find out that the novelist — "the hottest writer in the world"—has arrived in a small town until a month after he's there.

The reason the editor hasn't found out is that Ichabod, whom actor George Chandler plays like Pa Kettle, has kept it secret. Our newspaperman figures if he can find out what the novelist's new book is about, he can have the "hottest scoop" of the year.

Sterling and his girlfriend, Christine White—both of them adept and attractive performers—go to one of the novelist's parties disguised as beatniks. And the editor tells Serling he wants to write about "civilization and all that jazz."

Anyway, it turns out the novelist knew who he was all the time. But the editor gets a good story about the writer's way of life.

"The wire services ate it up," says editor Sterling.

Oh, yeah?

The Channel Swim: Walter Brennan, star of ABC-TV's "The Real McCoys," goes into semi-retirement next season, appearing in only 13 of the show's episodes. Ann-Margret sings "Bachelor in Paradise" on ABC-TV's Oscar telecast April 9.

Dick Powell's Four Star television company had a net profit of $367,471 for the first half of its current fiscal year ending Dec. 30 a 9 per cent increase over the same period last year. Art James, host of NBC-TV's "Say When," plays the title role in "Mr. Roberts" at the Pinehurst, N.C., playhouse starting Tuesday.

Milton Berle's March 9 special on NBC-TV beat all competition in the ratings. Dinah Shore and the Telephone Hour, which appear in the same NBC slot, were unable to turn the trick.

CBS-TV has sold "I Love Lucy," "Have Gun, Will Travel," and "The Twentieth-Century" to government-owned television in Seoul, Korea.
