Wall Street In Review

NEW YORK (UPI)—L.O. Hooper of W. E. Hutton & Co. gets the impression from the annual convention of radio engineers at New York's Colosseum that "electronics is still the one most promising growth industry."

However, he said it appears that the industry is "going through a shakedown in which many weak companies which have no reason to exist will be eliminated or merged."

As far as electronic stocks are concerned, he says none of them look "cheap" — but they are getting cheaper.

Martin Gilbert of Van Alstyne, Noel & Co. says the normal stock market procedure in recent times has been for prices to drop back to a base where a new attack could be built up. He says the action on Tuesday and Wednesday suggested a sizeable technical rally.

The oil statistics bulletin says it is staying with its advice to investors to avoid the oils. "The yields are good and dividends well protected but for capital gains-minded people, the industry still has too many problems that must be solved."

Those who thought they had just about timed a swift change in the machine-tool and heavy machinery cycle have been disappointed and may have to exercise more patience, but there still seems little doubt that a more favorable tax base is in the making which will at least encourage capital spending for new plant and equipment, according to Thomas & McKinnon. Meanwhile, the house adds, "it is probably unwise to dump such cyclical but laggard equities."

Lenten Message

The Rev. Samuel A. Jeanes
Pastor

Merchantsville, N.J.
And Legislative Chairman
New Jersey Council of Churches
Written For UPI

"Be of good cheer," Jesus often said. To the man struggling with his paralysis he said, "Son, be of good cheer, thy sins be forgiven thee." To the disciples contending with a tempestuous sea, our Saviour said, "Be of good cheer, it is I, be not afraid." To followers of every age confronted with the tribulations of an unfriendly world, our Lord said, "... But be of good cheer, I have overcome the world."

This was not the ordinary "good cheer" of the world... the sunny disposition... the optimistic outlook... the Pollyanna kind of lubricant that keeps the machinery of life well oiled. This is good, but it is not good enough!

The world's "good cheer" is "worked up" by human beings.

The "good cheer" of Jesus is "sent down" from heaven. The paralytic could be cheerful only when he knew who forgave his sins. The disciples could be cheerful only when they knew who it was walking on the water. The oppressed follower in every age can be cheerful only when he knows who has overcome the world.

Who is it that bids us to be of "good cheer?" who forgives our sins? Who quiets the turbulent sea? Who overcomes the world? The Christ of the empty cross and the empty tomb! He is ready to hear the cry of all in need and will answer as of yore, "Be of good cheer."

36 Buildings In County Prospects In Fallout Survey

Bill Leonard, county civil defense director, announced today that 36 buildings in Gray County were recently surveyed for possible radiation fall-out shelters.

Leonard said a three-man team of building contractors from Amarillo were in towns throughout the county the second week of March, surveying buildings.

The men, Leonard said, represented Townes McAdams and Associates of Amarillo, awarded the building contracts for cities in the Panhandle area by the United States Government through the Corps of Engineers, U.S. Army.

Towns in Gray County which have been selected for further study as having prospective buildings for fall-out shelters are Pampa, Lefors and Kingsmill.

Leonard said the reports from the Amarillo firms are now in Washington at the civil defense and mobilization headquarters where they will be processed further before any final announcement will be issued.

The shelters will consist of existing buildings and there will be no construction. The only change will be that each building accepted will be furnished with a supply of emergency equipment such as food, water, medical supplies and emergency radio equipment. A sign will be placed on each building accepted to indicate it is a shelter building.

Purpose for the shelters, Leonard said, is for persons caught away from home or persons on the street at the time of an attack.

Leonard pointed out that this program is in no way discouraging home owners to build fall-out shelters.

A final announcement as to which buildings of the 36 surveyed will meet the government qualifications to protect persons from radiation fall-out will be made soon.

Commission

should continue to serve as Mayor of Pampa.

"I regret the expense and inconvenience it will cause, but I ask this Commission to pass a resolution calling such an election, and the sooner we can have it, the better it will suit me."

The recall election on the Mayor was called at the commission's meeting this afternoon. Earlier, the group had voted against setting a recall election on the Mayor but a clarification of some points brought out in the afternoon session caused a change of approach.

In this morning's session, the Mayor asked the commissioners to go ahead and pass the resolution calling for an election to decide on his recall.

There was silence for awhile, and finally Lloyd Simpson, apparently in a gesture to comply with the mayor's request, made the motion. Commissioner Secrest, who had commended the mayor for his offer to have the election called, seconded the motion to get it before the commission for a vote.

When the vote was taken on the motion it lost, 3 to 2. Simpson and Mayor Sidwell voted for it and Commissioners Secrest, Fort and Holmes voted against it.

The meeting was adjourned until 1:30 this afternoon, when it was announced further consideration would be given to the next step to be taken by the commission.

According to the city charter, denial of the four petitions and failure to order a recall election as requested in the petitions, would mean that the County Judge of Gray County "shall discharge any of such duties herein provided to be discharged by the governing authority of said city."

The opinion of Attorney Heare to the commission this morning said in substance that 743 signatures were needed in order to set up an election for the recall of each ward commissioner, the same number as required for a recall election on the mayor.

The petitions submitted for each commissioner fell far short of that number. But the signatures on the mayor's petition totaled 768 which was 25 more than the required 743.

At one point during this morning's session, Mayor Sidwell called Joe Tooley, acting chairman of the Committee for Better City Government, and asked that he be sworn in.

Tooley was sworn in by City Attorney Bob Gordon and upon questioning by the Mayor said that he had been head of the group since last Friday and that the group was made up of a number of interested citizens. The Mayor asked Tooley what he thought about the recall petitions. Tooley said he thought that the entire commission should be recalled, not just one man. He said he thought there ought to be a clean slate all the way through.

Mayor Sidwell asked Tooley if he had ever attended City Commission meetings and offered his help for solution of City problems. Tooley replied that he didn't feel he was qualified to tell the City Commission what to do. Mayor Sidwell replied, "But you do feel you're qualified to act as head of a committee for better city government?" On that note the questioning ended.

torney Robert M. Morgenthau, are charged, with having used their position as specialists in the Swann-Finch stock to control its price on the American Stock Exchange (AMEX) and to distribute the Birrell holdings publicly. Other sources said they were accused of taking considerations from Birrell for their activities in manipulating the stock.

In June 3, 1957, the Res and others were enjoined by federal court order from distributing unregistered Swann-Finch stock in violation of the SEC Act. In February, 1960, the AMEX took action which led to their expulsion from the exchange.

Last May 25, the Justice Department issued a criminal complaint charging them with conspiring to violate federal laws by undertaking an illegal brokerage transaction.

Morgenthau explained that in the current proceedings, for which April 10 was set for pleas, the Res were accused of getting rid of about 600,000 shares of stock for Birrell through their own accounts and through accounts under other names, which they opened and managed. Birrell, it was charged, arranged for issuance of more than 2.5 million shares of common stock, and arranged to use about 1,700,000 shares for public distribution and as collateral for loans.

'Keystone Cops' Had Nothing On Congressional Security System

By DICK WEST
United Press International
WASHINGTON (UPI)—The U.S. Capitol maintains a private police force which is probably the nation's most unusual constabulary.
I think the best way to describe the force is to say that it is the keystone of the congressional security system. That is more polite than saying it is composed of keystone cops.
Any similarity between the Capitol pendarms and an old Mack Sennett movie is purely coincidental and stems largely from the fact that the security system is intertwined with the patronage system.
Most of the brave lads in blue got their jobs through some benefactor in Congress and have only a secondary interest in police work.
Their duties are more likely to involve the shepherding of tourists than the apprehension of felons. But they can usually rise to the occasion when an occasion arises. I recall a case a few years ago that was handled with professional aplomb.
Discovery was made that Zachary Taylor's marble bust, which graces the Senate wing of the Capitol, had been removed from its pedestal and placed on the pedestal of James Viscount Brice. Brice's bust, in turn, had been placed on Taylor's pedestal.
Advised of the crime, Capitol police quickly deduced that it was the work of amateur pranksters rather than hardened bust switchers.
The culprits were never caught, but the case stands as a monument to the detective prowess of the force.
Some sort of high water mark probably was reached recently with the disclosure that a Capitol employe listed on the payroll as a telephone operator had suddenly been promoted to the rank of police captain.

A reporter seeking an interview with the new captain, identified as Ephraim Harris, found that other Capitol policemen were mysteriously unaware of being under his leadership.
"Who the --- is Capt. Harris?" one of them asked.
It turned out that they had due cause for bewilderment. Harris had never been in uniform. He had merely been given his police title temporarily as a reward for faithful service in driving a limousine for the Senate sergeant-at-arms.
This incident illustrates why I think it is unfair to compare the Capitol police with the "keystone cops." Mack Sennett in his heyday could never have dreamed up a plot like that.
A more accurate counterpart, I believe, can be found on television, as suggested by the question "Who the --- is Capt. Harris?"

You Can't Buy Cancer Research At The Drug Store On The Corner

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Sen. Maurine Neuberger, who succeeded her cancer-stricken husband as senator from Oregon when he died of a cerebral hemorrhage, describes her own experience with cancer research in the following dispatch. This is the second of three articles by Mrs. Neuberger, herself a cancer victim, published in connection with NATIONAL Cancer Crusade Month.)

Living With Cancer—II

By Sen. Maurine Neuberger
Written for UPI

You can't buy cancer research at the corner drug store. Far from the glass counters and the rows of bottles with their mysterious elixirs, there are men and women working with animals and with human beings, with isotopes and with cobalt beams, so that you and I and our loved ones may be free from the scourge of cancer.

A primary goal of our society is the preservation of our natural resources, human as well as physical. The single, most important human resource is the health of our population. People are what count. Cancer attacks not only the old, but the very young, and is one of the most insidious enemies of our society.

Although the rate of death by disease among children is declining, more children die from cancer than by other cause, except accidents. The spectre of leukemia, a form of cancer, still haunts every mother as polio once did. She has reason to shudder, because leukemia can be neither prevented nor cured now. Because it affects the blood-forming tissues, an operation is impossible; however, vast research is being conducted in the use of chemicals to combat leukemia, and the American Cancer Society is investing $2 million in a broad program of leukemia-related research.

I shall never forget my visit to Children's Hospital in Boston with my husband while he was a member of the United States Senate, working for government

VELL TRAINED
CHICAGO (UPI) — Patrolman Milton Blackburn's motorcycle may be a bit ornery at times but appears well trained in safety.

The motorcycle unseated Blackburn Sunday when it struck a hole and overturned. Then the bike righted itself, putted down the street, turned into a garage where it threaded its way between 30 parked taxis and came to rest against a concrete pillar.

aid to research in cancer therapy. Dr. Sidney Farber, director of the clinic's program, told us about the great advances being made in the use of chemicals, took us to visit the tiny patients in the hospital, and escorted us to the outpatient clinic where patients faithfully and regularly brought their children for treatment in the hopes their lives would be saved. I was deeply moved by the parents. They were so hopeful, although they knew the cure had not yet been found. Leukemia causes more deaths of children—4 to 14—than any other disease; it is one of the foremost killers of children between the ages of one and three. Though infant mortality from other diseases has been lowered considerably, much remains to be done to save the lives of countless children from that still mysterious disease, cancer.

Consulting Work Grows In The Business Field

By Jesse Bolge
UPI Financial Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — If your firm has had long experience in the traditional fields of management consulting, it follows that it is in position to grow as the consultant field expands, Kenneth Axelson said today.

This, he said, was the thinking behind the action of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co., one of the world's largest accounting firms, in affiliating recently with Caywood-Schiller Associates, operations research consulting firm with headquarters in Chicago.

Axelsson is head of the management consultant department of Peat, Marwick, Mitche. Although an accounting firm, its experience in advice to management goes back 86 years; a department was setup in 1906, with one man.

"General consulting work has grown," said Axelsson, "and at the request of our clients. Our affiliation with Caywood-Schiller is designed to bring us something more: The use of advanced scientific and mathematical techniques in the approach to management problems.

"Our work in the past was in the traditional fields, the application of accounting techniques, industrial engineering, marketing, and others. Now we're in a position where we can draw on the skills which Caywood-Schiller has developed, through operations research. For example, the use of simulation on determining a future course is a growing one and our new affiliate is able to work with it."

The concept of operations research grew during World War II; scientific research techniques were applied to military operations, as in the use of the Royal Air Force against the Luftwaffe during the battle of Britain.

In the case of the RAF, Britain needed to get maximum use in minimum time of its air force against a numerically greater enemy. The technique succeeded, as history has shown.

ents faithfully and regularly brought their children for treatment in the hopes their lives would be saved. I was deeply moved by the parents. They were so hopeful, although they knew the cure had not yet been found. Leukemia causes more deaths of children—4 to 14—than any other disease; it is one of the foremost killers of children between the ages of one and three. Though infant mortality from other diseases has been lowered considerably, much remains to be done to save the lives of countless children from that still mysterious disease, cancer.

No one can know when his own life or that of a loved one may be totally dependent upon medical research. As John Glenn orbited the earth three times, we skeptics could no longer say that it was impossible. Those who have failed to support the American Cancer Society, or their own welfare with a checkup, may take heart that there are now more than one million Americans who have been cured of cancer. But, despite the forward strides which we have made in cancer research, the causes and cures of some forms of the disease still elude us.

As we have seen, cancer is not solely an individual or local problem. It is a national problem, for the solution of which we must marshal all of the resources at our disposal as a nation. The federal government, together with foundations and private societies, can provide the weapons by which we will ultimately defeat cancer.

But the individual must share the responsibility for making certain that these resources are fully utilized.

The federal government, working through your elected representatives, can achieve little without your active, informed support. Similarly, the work of the foundations and private societies must be encouraged and supported. As a United States senator who has had cancer, I am the recipient of much mail from people seeking advice and comfort. It is gratifying to be able to tell them of my own experience, and to refer them to a competent agency like the American Cancer Society.
