

Solon Defends FHA'S 40 Year Mortgage Plan

NEW YORK (UPI) — The shoe must fit the saying goes—and so must a mortgage fit.

Much of the criticism leveled at the 40-year FHA-insured mortgages made possible by this year's housing legislation does not take into account the need to make a mortgage fit the family, according to Rep. Albert Rains (D-Ala.). As head of the housing subcommittee, Rains shepherded the bill through the House of Representatives.

"There are many home buyers for whom a 40-year loan makes little sense," the legislator said. "But for those who can put it to good use it makes a lot of sense." There is a segment of potential home purchasers for whom the newly elongated mortgage term makes the vital difference between being able to own a home or not.

Opponents of the 40-year mortgage went so far as to argue that, for all practical purposes, a house bought with a 40-year loan is little more than a house rented, in view of the slow rate of debt repayment. They argue that a house financed over 40 years costs more than twice its price tag.

Rains stressed that no one is urging home buyers to take a 40-year mortgage if they can afford higher monthly payments on a shorter term. "But if the 40-year term is indicated by a home buyer's income, then the shoe fits, and we are glad to have the right size shoe on our FHA shelf."

The primary purpose of the 40-year mortgage legislation was to provide a lending vehicle for those who would otherwise be squeezed out of the housing market.

There is a serious question, Rains said, whether these families could find adequate, let alone equivalent, rental quarters for the same monthly payment. Even if they can, he said, the government, through its housing agencies, owes them the right to choose between a stack of rent

Washington Window

By LYLE C. WILSON
WASHINGTON (UPI)—This essay will reflect the indignation of W. E. Johnson, executive secretary of the South Dakota Retail Farm Equipment Association.

RFEA headquarters is in Huron. S. D. Johnson is indignant because of a back-handed swipe by a government agency against the free enterprise system of the U. S. national economy. He identified the government agency as the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

ASCS is an arm of the Department of Agriculture whose boss is Orville L. Freeman. ASCS is one of Freeman's spending arms. Two or three billions of the taxpayers' dollars are distributed annually by ASCS in feed grain support and production control programs.

Congress considerably bolted the Kennedy-Freeman farm program at the last session of Congress. That may have contributed to the ASCS lack of faith in the generally accepted American free enterprise system. Whatever may have caused it, the lack of faith is evident in the cause of Johnson's indignation.

In a letter to a Washington friend, Johnson enclosed a photograph of the recent South Dakota State Fair exhibit of the state ASCS office which is located in Huron. The exhibit consisted of a toy electric train layout, an oval track with a couple of spurs. A train safely on the track was identified by signs as representing various farm-aid programs.

Alongside a spur lay a derailed train. Above it a sign read: "Free enterprise wrecked this train." That is what upset Johnson. He said that after a day or so the sign was changed to read: "Opponents of the farm program wrecked this train." Johnson believes the change was made at the suggestion of the Department of Agriculture.

"There were many others," Johnson wrote, "who were receipts and a salable equity in a homestead that some day—however distant—will be their own."

shocked and dismayed when they saw this sign. But I believe that this photo is positive proof of the type of thinking that we are having in the present administration. I do not intend to generalize by saying that this is the thinking of all people in our government, but certainly there should not be room for even one person thinking this way in the federal government."

Bernard Brenner is the able agriculture writer in the Washington bureau of United Press International. I asked Brenner why someone in ASCS would commit a political goof such as that reported from Huron. Right or wrong, the sign was a political baddie.

Brenner had an explanation. He said the phrase "free enterprise" was a sort of epithet in some farm areas as a nickname or synonym for Ezra Taft Benson, agriculture secretary in the Eisenhower Cabinet. They were trying to say, Brenner told me, that Benson wrecked the train. Maybe so. That isn't what the sign said.

Seeds Once Used In Drilling Oil Wells

DUNCAN, Okla. (UPI)—Imaginative drillers once wrapped seeds in cloth around a pipe and lowered the contraption into an oil well hoping that the seeds would swell when wet and seal off water-bearing formations in the hole.

That was a long time before this southern Oklahoma city became known as the "oil well cementing capital of the world." It was a typical and unsuccessful attempt to solve the problem of water in an oil well before the answer was found in cement.

Two California operators solved the problem first by dumping cement into a hole in 1883, but the idea didn't really catch on until 1903.

Early in that year, the Union Oil Co., used a bailing device to dump 50 sacks of cement into a well. It worked, and the practice spread.

The earliest successful system was to drill all the way through the water formation, pull everything out of the hole and pour cement up to the top of the water producing sand. After letting the cement set for about 30 days, the crew would drill through it and, if they were lucky, the remaining cement would seal off the water.

Drillers also discovered that cement could keep fluids from moving outside the casing, reinforce the pipe against pressure and reduce corrosion.

In 1910, Almond A. Perkins, another Californian, introduced a method of sheathing the entire outside of the pipe in cement from the bottom of the hole to the top.

With rotary rigs coming into use, it wasn't often necessary to worry about water in the hole until the oil sand was reached.

In building a sizable cementing enterprise in California, Perkins hired a young Navy veteran named Erle P. Halliburton. After two years, Halliburton urged an expansion into the booming Texas fields. When Perkins declined, Halliburton went to Burkburnett, Tex., and tried his own luck.

North Texas operators were still using cable drilling methods for the most part, and did not buy his newer system of cementing. He crossed Red River into Oklahoma where rotary rigs were coming into general use.

Halliburton got a boost when he used cement to kill a wild well for W. G. Skelly. After several others had tried and failed.

Buying a fleet of war surplus trucks, he moved to Duncan in 1920 and set up shop.

The Halliburton Co. now operates in every oil producing area in the world.

Airliner Seats Due For Change On Some Lines

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The next revolution in commercial aviation may involve what you sit in.

Namely, the airliner seat.

Continental Airlines is planning to introduce a brand-new type of seat as part of its proposed "no-frills" jet coach economy service.

Built by the Teco Co. of Burbank, Calif., the three-abreast seats are made of fiberglass and plastic. They have arm rests, adjustable head rests and foam rubber cushions, but each seat weighs 20 pounds, compared with the 34 pounds of a regular seat. They also have a "rocking chair" action instead of the conventional reclining positions and, despite their light weight, they meet all government safety requirements.

It will cost Continental $340,000 to install 375 of the new seats in its five jets. This includes modification of the aircraft's interiors, for the new seats will require removal of some of the first class and regular coach seats.

When installed, the airline's jets will have 75 of the new seats plus 36 regular coach seats and 28 first class. They now carry 44 first class and 76 coach seats, which means Continental is getting 19 additional seats into each plane.

Despite the greater capacity, however, Continental claims passengers will find the new seats as roomy as the conventional coach equipment because of a rounded structure that takes up less floor space.

American and Trans World Airlines have been testing the Teco seat for the past month but say passenger reaction has not been evaluated yet. TWA, for example, still is using nine of the seats on one of its Transcontinental jets.

Another type of new seat which has made its first appearance is one known as the "Aerobus Commuter." Manufactured by the Burns Aero Seat Co., also of Burbank, the "Commuter" is a non-reclining, lightweight affair designed for short-haul trips. Although it provides more leg room than the usual seat, it takes up less space and could increase the seating capacity of a plane by it least one-third.

Stephen J. Burns, president and founder of Aero Seat, believes this type of simplified seating will help bring low-cost air travel to millions who do not fly. He also says such seats could extend the lifespan of obsolete but still serviceable piston-engine aircraft by increasing their capacity for short haul, high-density markets like New York-Washington.

Asia possesses less than one-third of the earth's arable land although it has more than one-half of the world's population.

Continuing Responsibilities

As a rule, when your sell or lease your place, the new owner or lessee takes over responsibility for it. But you may have some continuing responsibilities.

In a recent case three small boys, playing in an old rifle range near home, found a grenade. took it home, and later exploded it, injuring themselves.

The U.S. government had leased the land to train armed forces, but later turned it back to the owner. The boys sued the government. It answered that it no longer controlled the land and should not be blamed for what happened after it gave up possession.

Still the court made the government pay the boys for the harm done.

As a rule, when a seller or lessor gives up his land, he is no longer to blame for defects in the land, buildings, or permanent fixtures.

But defects in things permanently part of the land differ from leaving dangerous things like a grenade about. It isn't a permanent part of the land. The federal government was at fault in not Property owners or occupiers have special duties to small children. They may trespass on your land and get hurt by things that are especially attractive to them. Improperly locked explosives, an easy-to-climb power station, an unlocked turntable, or sometimes a pool of water left by a construction firm, are all "attractive nuisances." An owner of such things must take great care to keep trespassing children from getting hurt.

The law imposes one further duty on sellers or lessors of property: No seller can conceal highly dangerous defects that he knows of. If he does, and they hurt the buyer or tenant later, the seller may have to pay damages, sometimes a landlord controls some of the leased property, such as halls, driveways, elevators, wall beds, or other appliances. The landlord must use care with such things.

Expert Declares Its Costly Not To Finish School

By BARBARA BUNDSCHU United Press International

Educators, business men and civic authorities are working together in many cities in an effort to keep two-and-a-half million youngsters from making a $64,000 mistake.

That is the number of youngsters now in high school who may be expected, on the basis of past statistics, to drop out before graduating. It's about 23 per cent of all present high school students.

The $64,000 is what it will cost each of them, in reduced life-time earnings, not to have that diploma, according to New York City school superintendent John J. Theobald.

There are other ways of counting the cost. A survey made by one educational firm quotes Chicago authorities as putting a $510 million price-to-the-public tag on the 17,000 who dropped out of that city's high schools last year. That hypothetical figure is what it would cost to support them all, from 16 to 56, on public welfare, presuming they are largely unemployable for lack of education.

But the highest cost isn't measurable in dollars. Dr. James B. Conant, profound shocked to find slum streets crowded with idle and aimless armies of young people, called it "an explosive situation" and "a grave danger to the stability of our society."

The non-high school graduate is finding it harder and harder to get employment in a world in which unskilled jobs are becoming fewer and educational standards are being steadily upgraded.

At the time Conant spoke, the unemployment rate among workers under 20 was 20 per cent, compared to 7 per cent for the population as a whole.

To meet the immediate problem, scores of cities have instituted high school programs which provide non-bookish students with training for specific jobs available in the community and often with paying part-time jobs at which they work under school supervision.

"The majority of drop-outs come from backgrounds of semi-literacy and poverty, sometimes crime, often neglect," said Sterling M. McMurrin, U. S. Commissioner of Education.

London Seeking Crystal Tower

By TOM A. CULLEN

LONDON (NEA) —Paris has its Eiffel Tower. Now London is shopping for a building as tall and imposing as the Eiffel Tower to serve as a British prestige symbol.

Big Ben, the Beefeaters, Nelson's Column clearly won't do. They are too closely associated with certain brands of British cigarettes and gin. What is needed is a landmark so striking as to sear the minds of Americans and other visitors with the British brand image.

A group of architect and engineers thinks that it has found

Naga Tribesmen Declare Nehru Is No Pacifist

LONDON (NEA) — The world has a picture of India's Jawaharlal Nehru as a man of peace who would rather sniff the rosebud in his buttonhole than brandish a big stick.

But the 150,000 Naga tribesmen who inhabit the hills and steamy jungle of northeast India say they have a different picture of the Indian prime minister. They accuse him of the systematic effort to exterminate their people.

The Nagas, through their spokesman in London, say Indian troops have burned their villages, raped their women, slaughtered their men. They charge that jet planes and napalm bombs have been used against defenseless villagers.

A. Z. Phizo, leader of the Naga revolt against the New Delhi government and now exiled in London, says the military drive against his tribe was launched because the Nagas refuse to bow to Indian rule and demand their own independence and sovereignty.

Phizo holds forth in grubby offices near London's Victoria station which he shares with a group of African nationalists.

I had expected to find a fiery-eyed zealot, but Phizo is a mild-mannered man with a goatee, who looks much younger than his 57 years. He makes much of the fact that he is a Baptist educated by American missionaries.

His nominal position is head of the "Federal Government of Nagaland," which is now on the run, but he is also president of the Naga National Council, now driven underground in the Indian province of Assam.

One gets the impression that Phizo can be a very slippery, even dangerous opponent. During the war he collaborated with the Japanese — in the interests of Naga independence, he claims.

More recently, he has been accused of flirting with Burmese Communists. The Indian Army at one-time placed a price of 10,000 rupees on his head "dead or alive."

"The Nagas have been made the laughing stock of the world," Phizo told me bitterly. "We are supposed to be head hunters, whatever that means. People say we run around half-naked like savages."

Phizo thus put his finger on the Nagas' sore point, the fact that they once collected scalps as trophies until the British put an end to the practice in the late 19th Century.

Whatever else they may be, the Nagas, one gathers, are not Indians. "We do not think in terms of India or Indians," Phizo told me emphatically. "In fact, we have never had social intercourse with the Indians, not even so much as to take a cup of tea with them."

The Nagas are noted chiefly as fierce warriors. Not since the dawn of time has Northern Nagaland ever been conquered by foreigners. The Southern part, the so-called "Naga Hills Excluded Area," was conquered by the British in 1879, after 30 years of intermittent warfare.

Texas Nation's Top Exporter Of Goods To Japan

WASHINGTON — During 1960 the State of Texas led the nation in sales to Japan, exporting $128 million out of the United States total 1960 exports to Japan of $1.3 billion. These shipments provided employment for nearly 34,000 Texans, according to an estimate made in "Texas: Nation's Top Exporter to Japan," a pamphlet just published by the U.S. Japan Trade Council.

Cotton was the top Texas export, with Japanese mills in 1960 consuming $66.4 million worth of Texas produced cotton. Petroleum came next with sales of $17.5 million.

Other leading Texas exports to Japan were chemicals ($11.5 million); Synthetic rubber ($10.5 million); hides, skins, grease and tallow ($2.1 million); sorghums and grains ($2 million); non ferrous metals ($5.2 million); metal undoubtedly owe their employment either directly or indirectly to these exports. I am, of course, pleased at this growth in our markets, and feel that the free exchange of trade with other countries is not only beneficial to the economy but helpful to international goodwill as well.

According to the Council present Japanese economic planning envisions a doubling of the nation's income by 1970. To achieve this goal, Japanese exports from the United States would have to triple. "As the leading state in exports to Japan," the Council pamphlet states "Texas can look forward to even greater increases in its exports to Japan provided the state does not shortsightedly impose unnecessary and burdensome restrictions upon this growing trade."

Governor Price Daniel of Texas in a message to the Council reproduced in the pamphlet, wrote "The $128 million in trade cited in your figures is certainly a substantial contribution to the economy of our State and the Nation. A considerable number of Texans

If you are to get through the winter without the addition of a wrinkle or two, give nightly care to your skin. This young woman uses (upper left) a skin cream designed to restore life to the skin and give it a new glow. She is careful not to neglect throat and chin line. For tired eyes, she uses herbal eye pads (lower left), then follows up with eye cream (right). She applies eye cream very lightly, with a deft fingertip.

Dear Abby.... Adults Should Review Attitude On Tattling

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: In our class at school we got into a big discussion about "tattling" and we would like to know how you feel about the subject. Thank you.

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS DEAR STUDENTS: For some reason, teachers and even parents teach young people that it is "unethical" or downright disgraceful for one child to tell someone in authority that another child has disobeyed, misbehaved or even broken the law. Is it any wonder we have hoodlums and vandals who count it a virtue not to "squeal"?

This is not to be confused with running to Mamma or the teacher with, "Johnny hit me!" If children are to grow up with a sense of civic duty, they cannot be taught that it is "noble" to remain silent when they know who has destroyed public property or committed other serious anti-social acts. (It is their parents, who must pay for such deeds.) Also it is unfair that a guilty child should "get by" unpunished; the next time he will try something a little bolder. I think it is time we adults reviewed our attitude on "tattling."

DEAR ABBY: When my husband and I rented this apartment, we specifically asked if we could keep our dog with us. The landlord said, "Yes, if the dog is quiet and well-behaved." Our dog is quiet and well-behaved, unless a stranger comes around. We have been here less than a month and the landlord tells us we can't keep our dog. He said, "You have a full-grown boxer and to me a boxer is not a dog, but a pony." We signed a year's lease and like this place. Can he

Simulated Radio Program Gives News Of Missionaries At WMU Meeting

Women's missionary union of the First Baptist Church held its monthly Royal Service Program and luncheon on Wednesday beginning at 10:15 a.m. in the church.

Members were greeted at the door by Mrs. Glenn Miller, and Mrs. Arthur Bullock, who presented each with a program designed with foreign countries. Each member also received a memento designed as a suitcase imprinted with the name of Mrs. Betty Jean Tension, a missionary in Portugal.

The program opened with a hymn by Mrs. Bob Allen followed by an identification game. A skit entitled, "I Am the Way" opened with Mrs. Glenn McConnell seated in her kitchen with a neighbor, portrayed by Mrs. J. M. Scott. While working on a Royal Service program, they listened to a devotional given by Mrs. E. Douglas Carver, which came by remote control in another room through a radio in the kitchen.

Mrs. McConnell and Mrs. Scott listened to missionary news highlights from the Far East and Europe including the mission fields of France, Portugal, Okinawa, Vietnam, and Sumatra. Participating in the "radio program" were Mmes. Lee Moore, Charles Bailey, J. P. Heath, Paul Turner and Harold Craddock.

Included in the program was the reading of the prayer calendar by Mrs. John Gikas. Mrs. P. G. Turner led in prayer for missionaries.

A hymn "O God, We Pray For All Mankind," closed the program which was planned under the direction of Mrs. Louis Tarpley, program chairman.

During the business meeting, plans were made for the Lottie Moon Week of Prayer planned for Nov. 27 - Dec. 1. Mrs. Adams dismissed the group with prayer.

Luncheon followed the Royal Service Program. An assortment of various foods, representing different countries discussed in the program were served; chicken chow mein from Okinawa; vegetables from Portugal; salads from Vietnam; coffee, tea and sugar from Sumatra; Pastries and French bread from France.

North America, with about 20 per cent of the earth's cultivated area, has 7.5 per cent of the world's population.

Plan Pamper Night For Winter Beauty

Alicia Hart
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

A woman's complexion seems to need constant care no matter what the season. Last summer's beautiful tan has faded into a sallow yellow. She also faces the drying effects of the winter elements and overheated rooms.

It may be a never-ending battle, but it needn't be a losing one. The first thing to remember is that no matter how dull or dry your complexion may look, it will respond to a routine of cleanliness, stimulation, a well-balanced diet, lots of water to drink, reasonable exercise, and plenty of fresh air and sleep. Diligent use of lubricating creams will do the rest.

After you've carefully cleansed your face before sleeping, apply a lubricating cream that will penetrate the pores and soften your complexion while you sleep.

There are many good creams on the market, and if you've found one that works for you, be sure to use it every night. Should you still be searching for one, you may find success with a new formula introduced by a well-known beauty authority.

Firmly believing that the most beneficial beauty ingredients have nature as their source, she offers a herb-enriched line of beauty preparations, claimed to pamper and benefit even the most delicate complexion.

There is a rich, greasiness cream, that works to beautify your skin while you sleep. And to continue the moisturizing process during the day, a greasiness emulsion can be used under make-up.

Fine lines around the eyes are easier to come by than to remove. Many of us find they've creased up this time of year. An eye cream should be used each night, gently massaged into the skin with the fingertip. One such cream, richly lubricating, contains herbal essences which, the maker says, will benefit the eyes as well.

Eye strain, too, can cause fine eye wrinkles. To soothe your eyes and bring out their sparkle, you should rest them for a few minutes each day. You can apply cotton balls, dipped in which hazel, or special eye pads, saturated with a herbal extract solution that has a soothing effect.

Herbs have for centuries been used cosmetically for their beautifying, cleansing and soothing properties. And if you plan to try their effect on your complexion, you at least have it all over the women of the past. You don't have to make your own preparations — just stop at the nearest cosmetic counter.

"Window Treatment" Given As Topic For Worthwhile HD Club Meeting

Worthwhile Home Demonstration Club met with Mrs. L. M. Bryant, south of the city on Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Shelby Hood, president, presided during the business meeting as roll call was answered with "the type of curtain that I like."

Miss Lou Ella Patterson, Gray County Home Demonstration agent, presented a program on "Window Treatment." It was demonstrated that windows have a personality and that curtains should be lined to match the outside of the house. "The inside should harmonize with the rest of the furnishings," she said.

During the meetings, Mrs. Bryant, whose club project this year has been home improvement, showed the decorations and furnishings of her home. The living room was painted in satinwood with gray tweed carpeting, brown drapes and brown and beige living room furniture. Gay-colored pillows gave the room a touch of color. Several tables had been re-done by removing the old varnish and re-doing them in pecan varnish and oak.

Miss Patterson reported on her recent trip to Boston during the social hour.

Mrs. Roy Tinsley reported that there would be a district convention here in the Pampa High School on April 12, 1962.

Announcement was also made of the Council "42" party to be held the third Saturday of each month at 7:30 p.m. in the Courthouse Annex, east of the city.

Club presidents are to give their year reports to the County Commissioners on Nov. 28 at a luncheon to be served in the Courthouse Annex.

Mrs. Boyd Brown will be hostess for the Nov. 17 meeting in her home east of the city.

Adolescent Social Life Topic For Austin PTA

Mrs. Kenneth Walters, counselor for Lee Junior High School, discussed "Are We Rushing Our Children Socially?" at a meeting of Stephen F. Austin PTA on Thursday.

Following an introduction by Mrs. Cameron Marsh, Mrs. Walters, in opening remarks, said:

"I work with the very finest group of young people. I sincerely believe they would compare favorably with any group in the United States. Most of the time, I will be giving you direct quotes from experts in their field, not necessarily personal opinions."

"Lester Davis says, 'Mrs. Walters continued, 'Parents, whose intentions are good, are rushing their boys and girls into social situations for which the youngsters are not prepared. Parents without realizing what they are doing are propelling their children into tragic early marriages; end of quote. Because of the many articles written on the problem of divorced high school students, we need to give serious consideration to the matter."

"The forces, which push our young people into early marriages, show up long before junior high school age. The U.S. Bureau of Statistics states that one third of all teenage wives are between 14 to 17 years of age. What are they doing at 15? One out of every four girls begins regular steady dating before 14 years of age. Dating is replacing dolls and baseball mitts. Not all parents approve, but authorities agree that parents have encouraged this change. The director of the Child Study Association asserts, 'Many parents are urging their children into newer experiences, just as they themselves constantly seek new vistas to solve their own dissatisfactions in life.'"

"More than three fourths of a group of high school students surveyed last year, feel they are rushed socially. The children can't be blamed for their dilemma. They are our creations. What they are, we have made them. Children are great imitators. Standards have seemed to disappear. The captain of the Los Angeles police force says it is a national malady. We have kids with no standards, he states. Your child is entitled to a good strong sense of values to see him through life."

"The average 5th grade boy prefers baseball in the afternoon and pondering the plan of a model airplane in the evening to 'rock 'n roll' and mixed parties. The average 5th grade girl prefers girl chit-chat and dolls to flirtation. If we allow a youngster to set his own pace, we will discover that there is no real emotional readiness necessary for dating until middle adolescence."

"We have moved onward and upward financially and socially," the guest speaker stated. "We want the best for our children. We tell ourselves that times have changed; that our children are growing up faster and we can't stop them anymore than we can stop jet planes. We fail to set limitations which children need and deserve."

"Robert O'Conner believes forcing boy-girl relationships before youngsters are ready seems useless and unwise and probably harmful. When interest in the opposite sex emerges with sufficient strength, we can be sure our boys will willingly wash their necks, comb their hair, clean their fingernails, and eagerly learn social skills they need in order to be attractive to girls."

"There is an increasing trend among parents, teachers and community groups to organized pre-adolescent life as preparation for adolescent social life. Parents would be wise to evaluate the trend rather than to conform to it thoughtlessly," Mrs. Walters concluded.

The program opened with Girl Scout Troop 25 leading the flag ceremony.

Mrs. M. McDaniel, unit president, expressed appreciation to the membership for making Family Night successful.

Recommendations of the executive board, read by Mrs. Jim Campbell and approved by membership: 1) that Mrs. S. B. Sybert replace Mrs. M. McDaniel, as delegate to state convention; 2) that Austin's delegates be instructed to vote approval on the proposed legislative recommendations at the state convention.

Reports were given by Mrs. Joe M. Daniel, treasurer; Mrs. Julian Key on the 19th District PTA Safety Assemblage in Pampa; Mrs. Charles Lanehart on membership which totals 489 unit members.

Following room count by D. V. Biggers, school principal, it was announced that the 5th grade had won the room count. Mrs. Robert Alexander won the door prize, a harvest basket of foods.

Huge Church Plants Stir Some Questions

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Once upon a time, not so many years ago, a church was a simple, auditorium-like building used mainly for Sunday worship services.

No more.

Today's typical church is a complex physical plant with educational, social and recreational facilities. It functions as a community center as well as a house of worship. It is likely to be in use every day, and every evening.

One result of this trend is noted by the U.S. Department of Commerce in its monthly review of the building industry.

"Construction costs of religious buildings have soared in recent years," the department says. "The construction cost for many churches today approaches the $55,000 mark."

"Some larger churches include kitchens, snack bars, craft and game rooms, libraries and rendezvous rooms. Some rendezvous rooms are even equipped with hi-fi, television sets, and radios. Church classrooms may include sewing machines and power saws. Modern lighting, heating and ven-

Lately there has been a growing tendency for large churches to install bowling alleys, basketball courts and other sports facilities. A Baptist church in St. Louis recently spent $750,000 for a three-story building which contains a complete gymnasium and skating rink, plus bowling alleys and ping-pong rooms. A church in Jacksonville, Fla., has a baseball diamond, tennis courts, shuffleboard, a croquet court and a barbecue pit.

Many clergymen feel churches are completely justified in building such facilities. They say social and recreational trimmings attract young people (and adults) to the church. There, in the course of time, they may be led into what is presumably still the principal business of a church, namely, the worship of God.

This argument apparently is convincing to the great majority of church members who put up, more or less willingly, the money necessary to finance church construction at the current rate of $1 billion a year.

But some thoughtful ministers and laymen are beginning to ask disturbing questions.

They wonder, for example, whether a suburban congregation needs a bowling alley more than an inner-city mission needs a pastor.
