Tuesday night, Midas IV was given its first test when it passed through the skies above Cape Canaveral as the Air Force launched a 98-foot-tall Titan missile on an ocean-spanning voyage.

The satellite's mechanical eye was wide open. Ultra-cool detection devices aboard the multi-ton satellite picked up infra-red radiations from the litan's exhaust in a few minutes after the rocket was launched.

Midas "memorized" the information on tape recorders and continued its orbital flight around earth. When it passed again over the California base. Air Force scientists tapped its "memory" by radio signals.

Midas IV faithfully told them that a large rocket was launched at a certain time during its flight. The test proved that a sensitive station in space can detect the firing of sizeable rockets quite early in their flights.

Plan For Pampa's Ultimate Highway Needs Under Fire At Meet

City, County and State officials held a "meeting of the minds" Tuesday afternoon on how best to plan for the development of high ways in and around Pampa.

The meeting followed a luncheon in Coronado Inn attended by officials of all three branches of government and presided over by Paul Crouch, chairman of the Highway Committee of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce. Upshot of the conference was that Mayor E. C. Sidwell and the Pampa City Commission were not in accord with proposed plans suggesting that State Hwy. 273 through Pampa might be abandoned as a business route. Mayor Sidwell wanted to know how this happened and why the present City Commission was not advised of the plan.

gineer in the state highway department at Amarillo, explained that the request for the traffic survey had come from a former city commission and that he could not answer as to why the present city commission was not advised of what had taken place. "That seems to be the result of a lack of communication between the past and present city commissions," Smith said. Smith said he couldn't exactly explain why Hwy. 274 had been Department's plan.

"Maybe it was because other city planners were working on an overall throughfare plan' for Pampa at the time and we. did not give it full study, pending a report of their recommendations," Smith said

He was referring to the comprehensive plan for Pempa that was being prepared by the Dallas engineering firm of Koch, Fowler and Grafe, Inc., and which the City Commission suspended two months ago.

Smith also explained that the plan for highway development recently submitted to the mayor and city commission came after a formal request from the city in April of 1960.

"This is not a hard and fast plan that has to be followed," Smith said. "It is just a suggested plan to give everyone concerned something to start on and work with,

"The State Highway Department wants the local officials involved to point out any errors. discrepancies or changes they think should be corrected or

"The State Highway Department is open to any suggestions and wants the program to completely satisfy local officials." The district highway engineer said he wanted to give the pledge of local, district and state highway officials to work with the city and county in any way in planning for future highway development.

As for the main objection of no major improvements on Hwy. 273 immediately south of Pampa, Smith said, he wanted to suggest that the city commission immediately make its request that this not be done and make any (See HIGHWAY, Page 3)

Boss Of Albania Backed To Wall In Red Conflict

By United Press International

Albania, whose Communist leadership is on Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's blacklist, is peanut-shaped land of snowy Balkan peaks, political purges and baggy-pants peasants.

More Oriental than European Albania's estimated 1,625,000 people are mostly Moslem, although there is no official state religion.

Bounded by Yugoslavia to the north and Greece to the east and south, the 10,600-square-mile state came into being from two former Turkish provinces after World War I, but it did not have national boundaries until 1925.

The tiny country is ruled with an iron fist by Communist boss Enver Hoxha, who once was an obscure teacher of French in a 12:10 News grammar school on the Greek-Albanian border.

Its former ruler, President Ahmed Zog, fled in 1939 when Mussolini's legions leaped across the Adriatic to invade Albania.

He never returned to Albania Zog died last summer in France. Hoxha, the leader of fierce partisan resistance against the Axis, took over when Zog fled the country. A British officer who parachuted into Albania to join Hoxha's forces in 1943 described him as a man with "ambition, ability to lead, cunning and insincere when needed, and with no mercy for political rivals."

Some postwar statistics underscore this analysis of Hoxha. Of Albania's 14 leaders during World War II, only Hoxha survives. He has run the state for 20 of his 53 years. Of 31 members of the Albanian Workers Party Central Committee-the Communist party -14 have been killed and only nine have remained since the end of the war.

The party itself has about 53,-000 members, about the same as the population of the landlocked capital. Tirana.

Hoxha, who idolized Stalin and the Soviet leader's methods, feil afoul of Moscow when he sided with Peiping in the great ideologcal debate that broke into the cratic National Committee headopen last year. He supported quarters sent to the UPI office Communist China in the attacks here Monday night 44 copies of on Khrushchev's "peaceful co- the same press release existence" line, demanded a self and Stalin throughout his Communist leadership. craggy land. He also jailed 30,000 political prisoners in 14 concentration camps.

Now, observers say, Hoxha's back is to the wall. By counterattacking against Khrushchev over Radio Tirana, he has made rapproachment with Moscow impossible. Some experts say that since Hoxha was defended by Red China's Chou En-lai at the current 22nd Soviet Communist party congress, this means Hoxhawith Red Chinese backing - is Pablo Picasso celebrates his 80th birthday today as rich as a Rockefeller and probably richer than any artist ever has been in the history of the world-

The bulk of Picasso's fortune, according to his friends in the art world, is not in securities er cash although he is rich from the sale of his paintings alone. The payload is his private collection of 532 of his paintings, many of them kept in a locked room in his villa, "La Californie", near Cannes on the French Rivera.

No one knows the exact value of Picasso's hoard, which covers the entire range of the dozen periods into which his output falls. Art connoisseur and critic Alfred Frankfurter estimates that all the Picassos in existence are worth about $100 million.

Only recently the state museum in Stuttgart, Germany, paid $250,-000 for a Picasso entitled "Les Telegram and Sun) we felt that ever paid for the work of a liv ing painter. INSTALLMENT 4 "UNITED NATIONS POLICIES

AND DIRECTIVES" Early in November, 1950, General MacArthur reported that large forces were pouring across a'l bridges over the Yalu from Manchuria, and that the movement "threatens the ultimate destruction of the forces under my command." He asked for permission to bomb these bridges and to pursue the enemy's planes beyond the Yalu, President Truman, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Defense and State Departments wanted to grant one or both of these requests. But the Joint Chiefs of Staff had to warn him that it was imperative to avoid Manchurian air space and territory "because of . . . United Nations policies and directives," Mr. Dean Acheson, Secretary of State undertook to consult 13. other UN Members having combat units in Korea to see how they felt about the matter. On November 13 he reported that MacArthur's proposals were rejected by the first 6 he consulted, so that he did not pursue the matter further. Instead, he assured the world, including the Chinese Reds, that the "UN commander has strictest orders about violations (of) Manchurian territory in addition to orders to use extreme care in operations near the frontier itself to insure that hostilities are restricted to Ko-

Again, on November 28, Mac-Arthur reported that Chinese forces in overwhelming strength had entered the action in North Korea, and that the UN faced "an entirely new war." Three days later, President Truman asked Congress for more funds and warned that the Chinese Communists bear full responsibility for the "dreadful consequences" of their actions.

This apparent threat to treat the Chinese Reds less tenderly brought Britain's premier flying in alarm to Washington, A few days later, therefore, President Truman is sued a reassuring statement to the effect that he would act only in consultation with Britain, that he would try to end the conflict by negotiation, and that he would welcome UN debate of Formosa's future.

With this retraction of this threat and a hint of treachery to the anti-Communist Chinese on Formosa, Washington's efforts to win the war came to an end. When, despite restraints "without precedent in history," General MacArthur's troops once again halted the Red invaders and pushed them back across the 38th parallel, the commander who seemed determined to win had to go. Under UN pressure, the Truman Administration halted our troops' forward movement dismissed MacArthur. granted a truce in June when the Communists ren short of sunplies and badly needed a breathing spell, and thereafter confined the military effort to holding operations along the 38th parallel. After nearly two more years in which the Communists finally satisfied themselves that they could not break through again, they acceded to UN pleas for a truce. This truce agreement they continually and openly violate with impunity. It is this shameful record of appeasement and wholly needless defeat brought above by UN pressures that Ame on admirers of that Organization so often list as its outstanding achieve-

"NO SUBSTITUTE FOR VICTORY" (MacARTHUR)

Just how successful was this "police action," and what did the UN contribute to it?

By DR. V. ORVAL WATTS

It was never a secret that a leading member of the UN's "police commission" was the head of the criminal gang and the instigator of the crime. Had it not been for his temporary absence from the UN when he hired gangsters broke into South Korea, he could have blocked all UN action by his veto. When he returned he found his veto ignored, but because the other members of the commission did not want to antagonize him unduly, and because he had his hired agents in all of their departments, they stopped the police pursuit of his men just over the threshold of the "bank" they tried to rob. There these unknown criminals still wait while they defiantly prepare for the right moment to shoot their way back in again. In fact, if we go back a little in the case, we find that North Korea itself is an unrescued victim of the insolent war criminals who now possess it. Meanwhile, a i d e d by experience gained in Korea, the gangs and partners of this criminal member of the UN police commission are carrying out his plans for subjecting the entire world to his racket. His Asiatic partner in particular gained enormously in prestige and confidence from his apparent success in stopping the UN police at the bank's door and holding them there by preparations to return,

. Was it for lack of military strength that the UN failed to carry the police action in Korea to a successful conclusion? On the contrary, it would not permit use of more than a small fraction of the military might placed at its disposal by the United States Government. Was it for lack of authority that it acted so timorously? Not at all. The UN Assembly claimed complete authority to act, and more than the necessary two thirds voted in favor of the mili-

What kind of strength, then, does the UN lack? What weakness keeps it from dealing effectively with known disturbers of the peace in such a way as to end the continuing threat of war and to free us from the crushing burdens of increasing armaments?

ORGANIZATIONS MUST BE SELECTIVE

Clearly, one weakness from is that it is not selective, either in aims or membership. In political terms, it is not limited. Practical men know that a church, a college, a business or a baseball club cannot do everything or take in everybody. To succeed, such organizations must (1) focus their efforts on specific. limited aims, and (2) select their members with care according to their desire and ability to achieve the selected goals.

Unfortunately, many who know that this rule applies in business, education, religion and other fields of human action, do not realize that it applies equally in politics. Carried away, perhaps, by the notion that compulsion can accomplish more than persuasion in human affairs, they give government a blank check of authority. As a result, it becomes a destroyer of the freedom and peace it was established to defend

This defect is written into the very nature of the United Nations by its Charter. It was "planned that way," and there is no prospect that its Members will try to change it.

First of all, the UN is not selective in aims and purposes. Its founders intended it to be all things to all men. This is because they were mainly bureaucrats and professional politicians, with unbounded faith in government as an agency for promoting human welfare. Consequently, they designed the UN to serve, not only as a world police commission, world forum and world court, but as a world department of education, a worldwide social welfare agency, a world planning center for industry and commerce, a world financial agency - and anything else anyone might want. Why should it not, then, take in Communist states whose rulers, more than any others, want to make government "serve" mankind in all of these many ways (no matter how much suffering and death it takes to make people accept their benevolence)? Because the founders of the UN were in general so sympathetic with the "ideals" of the Communists, they made no effort to bar Communist governments from membership or Communist individuals from its em-

This suggests the second basic weakness of the UN. It has not been sufficiently selective in regard to membership.
