TAKE TIME TO COUNT YOUR BLESSINGS

"I wish, that those, who complain of the great Decay of Christian Piety and Virtue every where, and of Learning and acquired Improvements in the Gentry of this Generation, would consider how to retrieve them in the next."

THEIR FIRST THANKSGIVING — Two foreign students observed their first American Thanksgiving in Pampa today. The students are Chris Jonsson of Sweden and Miss Cathy Papanthassopoulou of Greece. Jonsson is a houseguest of the Coy Palmers, 2117 N. Russell, while Miss Cathy is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Julian M. Key, 1840 Fir, while they are senior exchange students in Pampa High School. They were dinner guests Wednesday night in the Key home at a Thanksgiving eve dinner. (Daily News Photo)

Two 'Spies' Claim Yanks Duped Them

MOSCOW (UPI) — Two West German students confessed Wednesday to spying for the United States. They told a Soviet military court U.S. agents sent them to Russia through "lying and deception."

Peter Sonntag, 22, and Walter Naumann, 29, were arrested Sept. 27 in the Soviet border city of Chernomy. They were charged with having photographed radar installations, airports, high voltage lines, and other military objectives. Both pleaded guilty.

They were among seven Western tourists, including an American, arrested this year on espionage charges in the Soviet Union.

Their defense, conducted by Soviet Attorney Mikhail Grinev, the man who defended U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers, made it appear as though the U.S. intelligence service was really in the dock.

Naumann, who followed Sonntag to the stand, repeated much the same story: that the students had been approached in Heidelberg, West Germany, by American agents, and duped into becoming spies.

The Soviet newspaper Pravda said the students were taught secret photography and how to detect rocket planes by watching for high-voltage lines and concrete roads leading to them.

The newspaper said Sonntag was given a ballpoint pen which would write in invisible ink when the regular ink holder was withdrawn.

Both Prosecutor Maj. Gen. Boris Viktorov and Defense Attorney Grinev hammered away at the theme that Sonntag had been exploited by American agents and was an innocent dupe.

The Soviet press gave extensive coverage to the case, and foreign correspondents and observers were invited to the trial. Among the observers was Harvard Law Prof. Harold Berman, an exchange professor at Moscow University.

Quail Hunter Caught After Big Boo-Boo

FRANKLIN, N.C. (UPI) — A quail hunter who went into the fields near here made quite a boo-boo, the Wildlife Commission reported Wednesday. In fact, several of them.

—The quail season wasn't open.

—He was hunting across the road from a motel where 24 uniformed state wildlife protectors were having a meeting to discuss improved law enforcement.

—He was hunting with an unplugged gun.

—He was trespassing on land owned by Wildlife Commissioner Oscar Ledford.

To save the unfortunate hunter from further embarrassment, the commission didn't report his name, but said he was arrested and charged.

Reds Erect New Berlin Road Curbs

BERLIN (UPI)—The Communists erected twin I-beam steel traffic barriers Wednesday at each end of the Berlin-West Germany Autobahn in a new threat to Allied traffic.

No immediate use was made of the baffles, however, and traffic moved freely.

In Berlin, Communist police manning the East-West barrier fired at and then arrested an East German boy who picked up a food package thrown over the dividing wall by West German friends.

West Berlin police reported erroneously Tuesday the zigzag baffles were in place when they saw Communist workers move the I-beams into position. They actually were installed Wednesday.

American officials confirmed that the Communists had erected twin I-beam barricades, about 15 yards apart, on the right and left lanes leading from the city to Helmsdorf in West Germany. A driver would be forced to slow and zigzag around the steel barriers.

They said similar baffles were erected on the lane leading from Helmsdorf to Berlin. Witnesses noted that if the steel beams were lowered into place there, the road would be sealed to normal traffic.

First Allied reaction was that the Communists had installed the steel barriers to help control

Search Centers In Wild Jungle Of New Guinea

MERAUKE, New Guinea (UPI) — Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, haggard with worry, and his tearful daughter, Mary, arrived here Wednesday to join in the search for missing Michael Rockefeller and listen to the story of his disappearance from the man who was with him at the time.

Search operations were being directed by H. J. Eilbrink Jansen, south New Guinea district governor. Some believed Young Rockefeller might have been swept westward by strong coastal currents from the Eilanden River where he vanished.

Only two things gave hope to the distraught governor: Later reports disclosed Michael began swimming a mile or two from shore instead of 15 or more miles out, and that there was no trace of the gasoline cans he was using as a makeshift raft.

The four-day-old search for Michael was concentrated along the mud flats of the southwestern New Guinea coast where the mangrove swamps present such a frightening scene that grave fears were felt for the 23-year-old archeologist.

The weather for the search was good but the area was so remote that search planes were running short of aviation fuel and there were delays waiting for more to be flown in from more civilized areas of New Guinea.

Both the Australian and the Indonesian air forces were reported standing by to join the search despite the differences between The Netherlands and Indonesia and their claims to ownership of the western half of the 1,500-mile-long island.

The Dutch navy withdrew some of its patrols because naval patrol ships cannot get near the freakish coast where mud flats stretch for miles into the sea. But the coast was alive with native canoes probing into the irregular coast lane.

Behind the mudflats of the "beaches"—swept by 12 foot tides—were impenetrable mangrove swamps filled with crocodiles and some of the most poisonous snakes in the world. Behind that, 10 miles or so, were fierce and hostile natives who have been headhunters since the stoneage.

Pampa Students In Journalism To Attend Meet

A delegation of 23 Pampa High School students will leave next Thursday morning for Denton where they will attend the annual convention of the Texas High School Press Association.

The convention, a three-day event, will run through Saturday Dec. 2.

The Pampa school journalists, members of the Little Harvester and Annual staffs, will be accompanied on the convention trip by Miss Elizabeth Hurley, school publications sponsor.

Those making the trip include Rose Webb, David Thomas, Martha Tankersley, Richard Steele, James Shelton, Mike Klein, Delbert Groves, Dorothy Forbes, Sandra Flynn, Phyllis Dalsing, Anna Christie, and Sammie McClelland of the Annual staff.

The Little Harvester will be represented by Linda Abbott, Linda Barker, Ronnie Choat, Joe Barnett, Marilyn Lillienfield, Bill Kidwell, and Jan Porter.

Chris Jonsson and Cathy Papanthassopoulou, foreign exchange students at Pampa High, also will attend the convention.

Sammie McClelland, business manager of the annual, will take part in a student panel program Saturday morning. Miss Phyllis Dalsing will be a candidate for state secretary at the annual election of THSPA officers.

Medicine Offered South Viet Nam

MANILA (UPI)—The Philippine government offered Wednesday to send non-military aid to Communist-threatened South Viet Nam. Foreign Secretary Felixberto Serrano announced the offer following a meeting here with U.S. Ambassador John D. Hickerson.

Afghanistan Buys U.S. Dump Trucks

PLAINFIELD, N. J. (UPI)—Mack Trucks Inc. Wednesday announced the sale of 79 diesel-powered dump trucks to the Afghanistan Highway Constructors. The trucks were sold through the Neely Coble Co., Nashville, Tenn.

Woman Fatally Injured As Storms Strike State

NACOGDOCHES, Tex. (UPI) — At least five tornadoes, one of them a killer, ripped through five towns and cities Wednesday in a storm front that hit parts of Texas with 65 mile-an-hour winds and hailstones as big as baseballs.

One person was killed in a twister and three other persons were seriously injured. Damage was extensive. Buildings were wrecked. Trees, utility poles and oil derricks toppled in the violent wind funnels.

High winds, hail and flooding rains added to damage in the state.

The tornadoes struck San Antonio and Kilgore and the three east Texas towns of Cushing, Looneyville and Trawick.

Heaviest tornado damage was at the Oak Flat area about two miles east of Cushing, in northwest Nacogdoches County. Five homes were destroyed and four heavily damaged.

Mrs. Blanche Collier, badly injured, died after being rushed to a Nacogdoches hospital for emergency surgery.

Her husband was seriously injured. Mrs. Marcus Sitton and Mrs. Cora Randle were severely cut by flying glass. All lived in the Oak Flats area.

One garage was destroyed and several homes damaged at San Antonio. A second funnel cloud was spotted over San Antonio about an hour after the tornado struck.

At San Antonio, Jose Rodriguez said the storm blew a 4x4 timber through the walls of a vacant house next to his home.

"It went through the house just like an arrow," he said.

The tornadoes were set off when a Pacific cool front pushed through the state and collided with warm, moist air.

Telephone Company Bares Pampa And Skellytown Expansion Plans

Further expansion in Pampa and construction of an addition to the Skellytown exchange were announced late Wednesday by George Newberry, Pampa manager for Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

Newberry said a deal was closed within the past two days for the purchase of five lots starting at the corner of Banks and Decatur Sts.

A telephone company work center will be constructed on the property which has a frontage of 300 feet and is 140 feet deep.

A one-story building will be erected on the site to house all telephone installation equipment and supplies needed by the company to service Pampa and the immediate area.

Offices of construction, repair and installation foremen also will be in the new building. Newberry said the price for the property was not disclosed and starting date of the work has not yet been set but it will be in the near future.

Southwestern Bell just recently opened its new $375,000 addition to the Pampa telephone building on N. Ballard St.

The Pampa telephone company manager also announced that a $3,000 addition will be built at the Skellytown exchange and $65,000 worth of new equipment will be added there.

The new addition will be 12 by 20 feet, making the overall Skellytown building 12 by 38 feet, Newberry said. Work on this job will be started immediately, he stated, and should be completed in about 90 days.

Most Pampa Folk Plan For Quiet Thanksgiving Day

Pampa and Gray County residents were set to observe a quiet Thanksgiving holiday today.

While many had gone to other cities to visit with relatives and friends, still others remained at home to entertain out-of-town guests.

Public offices, stores and most service places were closed for the day. Schools let out classes yesterday afternoon and will not resume until Monday. Except for special delivery, postal service was halted for the day.

Up until a late hour last night no serious accidents had been reported in the city or county as the holiday traffic picked up on the final hours of Thanksgiving Eve.

Markets and grocery stores reported a last-minute rush, in the late hours of Wednesday afternoon as householders shopped for supplies for the holiday dinner table.

Police and sheriff's officers said last night was quiet from the law enforcement angle and both departments were planning today's operations with reduced forces.

Fund Campaign Behind $13,700

The Pampa-Lefors United Fund was lagging some $13,700 short of its $88,764 goal as the Thanksgiving holiday arrived.

A total of $1,526 was turned in by fund solicitors Wednesday, George Newberry, general campaign chairman announced last night.

The new total up to 5:30 p.m. Wednesday was $55,073.29.

"We're hoping that with the holiday out of the way Friday, fund solicitors will renew their efforts to work the cards they have," Newberry said.

And then he added: "If they will just call on their prospects, we know we can put the drive over the top."

Down through the ages
Free men have battled
With those who threatened
By sabers rattled.
Never before
Has there been such need
To look to God—
For His words to heed.
In our every-day lives
We often forget
For the freedoms we have
We are in His debt.
Let's show our faith
In every way . . .
And pray to Him
On Thanksgiving Day.

Survey Reveals Third Of People Suffer Sickness

NEW YORK (UPI) — More than a third of the nation may be suffering from one of 18 "main illnesses and handicapping conditions," according to estimates compiled by the National Health Education Committee, Inc.

The estimates added up to 62,826,225 ailing or handicapped persons, or about one in every 2.86 Americans. No estimate was given of the extent of duplication through persons suffering from more than one of the listed disabilities.

At the top of the list was mental disorder "in some degree" which is estimated to affect 17 million — one in 10 — Americans on the basis of a 1956 study in Baltimore. At the bottom was in fanile paralysis with 8,425 cases reported in 1959, or one in 2,142 persons.

The figures were contained in a thick volume of "Facts on the Major Killing and Crippling Diseases in the United States Today," published by the committee — to promote increased appropriations and voluntary gifts for medical research.

Other disabilities listed, with their incidence and the source of the estimate were:

Arthritis and rheumatic diseases — 11.25 million, or one in 16 persons — estimated by the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation.

Diseases of the heart and circulation — 10,117 million, or one in 18 persons — a U.S. National Health Survey 1957-58.

Hearing impairments — 6 million, or one in 30 persons — a U.S. National Health Survey 1958-59.

Mentally retarded — 5.4 million or one in 36 persons — from National Association for Retarded Children, Inc.

Alcoholics — 4 million, or one in 45 persons — from the National Association for Mental Health.

Cerebral vascular disease — 1.8 million, or one in 100 persons — from National Institutes of Neurological Diseases and Blindness.

Diabetes mellitus, epilepsy and Parkinson's disease — 1.5 million or one in 120 persons each — the diabetes estimate from a U.S. National Health Survey 1957-59; the other two from the National Institute of Neurological Diseases and Blindness.

Cancer — 785,000 cases under treatment in 1961, or one in 230 persons — from the American Cancer Society, Inc.

Cerebral palsy — 550,000, or one in 327 persons — estimated by United Cerebral Palsy.

Multiple sclerosis and similar diseases — 500,000 or one in 356 persons — estimated by National Multiple Sclerosis Society, Ind.

Blindness — 345,000 legally

Diaper Problem Handed Railway

LONDON (UPI) — Dr. Richard Beeching, head of the British Railways, found a grimy diaper on his desk Monday along with a note: "The note from irate Mrs. Barbara Kavanagh of Crewe complained that despite four washings the diaper could not be cleaned of snot from a nearby locomotive switchyard."

Bright Holiday Doorways Cheer Yuletide Guests

A most hospitable way to greet all callers at your home during the holiday season is to dramatize your door with Christmas motifs. There are limitless ways to dress up your doorway so that friends and neighbors passing by will be greeted in the spirit of the season.

If your door is painted either red or white, one simple but effective way of creating an attractive display is to treat your door as though it were a huge Christmas present, gaily wrapped in ribbons and a big bow.

To achieve this effect, simply tack very wide ribbon across your door, both horizontally and vertically. With another length of the same kind of ribbon, fashion a large bow. It can either be a very fancy cluster or a simple bow-knot. A few sprigs of holly will complete the Christmas package look.

A spray of evergreens, high-lighted with Christmas decorations, also makes a charming motif for your door. To do this, simply cut several well-shaped, small evergreen boughs and wire or tie them together. Fasten your decoration in front of the spray.

You can use brightly colored glass balls or pine cones for this purpose. Or you might use an ordinary walking cane, wrap it with red and white crepe paper to simulate a candy cane and place it diagonally across your evergreens. Finish off the whole thing with a big bow of red ribbon.

If you have several little boxes around the house, put them to good use as decorations for your front door. Wrap them up in colorful Christmas paper and ribbons then tie them against a background of greens. They'll make a bright, cheerful display to see!

At Christmas, most stores feature pine roping that can be used to trim the lintel and sides of your doorway. A large holly wreath on the door itself will add the final festive touch to this type of display.

Whether you utilize the decorations that you already have on hand to fashion your own distinctive design, or choose your display from the wide selection offered in your local shops, you can be sure that a gaily decorated front door is the cheeriest and friendliest way to say "Merry Christmas" to everyone passing by.

Texan To Aid Search In Sea For Diamonds

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Two American oilmen are investigating a scheme to mine diamonds from the bottom of the sea off the coast of South West Africa.

The men, Emerson Kailey, of Freeport, Ill., and Sam Collins of Port Lavaca, Tex., plan to invest heavily in the $5600,000 venture. "It is a speculative venture," Kailey said. "American, British and South African interests are participating."

The men hope to mine diamonds at depths of 100 feet and up to 3 miles offshore. The site they intend prospecting borders the famed diamond coast on South West Africa, where diamonds are literally found on the beaches.

Collins said this type of mining had never been attempted. "We will put down a rubber pipe and will agitate the sea bottom with jets of air. Then we suck the soil on deck, a sort of giant vacuum cleaner," he said.

Collins is the head of a submarine engineering concern currently laying an oil pipeline from the Sahara to France, under the Mediterranean.

Living Green Tree True Symbol Of Yule Season

This year, approximately 43 million "live" green trees will go into American homes to be gaily bedecked with ornaments, lights and glitter for the holiday season. Today, as in years past, Christmas isn't Christmas without a fragrant, lovely tree.

Now Christmas tree growers are combining efforts under the American Tree Council to further the use of the traditional green, live tree. Not a preservation society, this organization seeks to further the spirit of Christmas through wider use of nature's own and inimitable live green tree.

Through impressive accomplishments in American industries,

Santa I would like a new bicycle also I would like a baseball bat and ball. Thank you so very much Santa Clause.

Your friend,
C. V.

Lefors Baptist Groups Formed

LEFORS (SPI) — A new young adult department has been formed at the First Baptist Church and a "Eatin' Meatin'" is planned by the group for November 30 to further organize.

The class includes those married through the age of 35. Mrs. Joe Archer teaches the women married through the age of 25, and Mrs. C. H. Earhart teaches those between the ages of 25 and 35. Claude Nichols teaches the men. Joe Archer is superintendent over the department.

Going Up
LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI) — The most expensive single volume purchased by the University of Kansas Library back in 1905 was "An Essay on the Early History of Carts and Sailing-Directions" by the Swedish scholar Periplus. Its price was $31.25, and some academic eyebrows went up.

The volume sells for $200 in today's book market, a librarian said. It now is considered one of the two most important late 19th Century works on the development of cartography.

countless substitutes and shortcuts for modern living have come into their own. But as W. W. Dambach, Chairman of the American Christmas Tree Council points out, "There is NO, 'instant' Christmas, simply because there is no substitute for the real thing: the live green Christmas Tree stands at the heart of our Christmas celebration — in the home, in the church and in the community."
The live green Christmas Tree stands in history as a religious symbol; its fragrance and beauty are the essence of the true meaning of Christmas.

Kennedy, Adenauer Agree On Berlin Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy and West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer declared Wednesday they have agreed on Allied strategy to negotiate with the Soviet Union on Berlin if the Kremlin is ready to be reasonable.

A joint communique climaxing three days of talks between the President and the chancellor pledged "their clear determination to insure the continuance of a free and vigorous life for the population of Berlin."

Summarizing the series of conferences, Kennedy and Adenauer said "there is substantial unanimity of view both on the substance of the problems and how to deal with them."

And further, the two Allied leaders stressed their agreement to work together to strengthen NATO should the prolonged Berlin crisis erupt into hostilities.

The communique did not spell out details of any strategic negotiating steps agreed to but stressed they would protect the "legitimate interests of all concerned."

Adenauer, departing Washington Wednesday evening, was to confer personally with French President Charles de Gaulle and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan. These talks will be followed by an Allied foreign ministers conference in Paris next month.

At the outset of the communique, Kennedy and Adenauer again blamed the Soviet Union for creating the Berlin crisis, then said that they "are in accord on the basic elements which will permit a peaceful resolution of this crisis through negotiation if there is reasonableness on the part of the Soviet Union." The communique said the 44-year-old Kennedy and 85-year-old Adenauer exchanged views "in a frank and cordial atmosphere." The conferences were held after a growing belief here and abroad that misunderstanding was endangering the U.S. German approach to the challenge posed by the Communists to Berlin.

Britain's Bingo Fever Continues At Record Pitch

LONDON (NEA) — The bingo club manager cleared his throat nervously then stepped up to the microphone and said, "Ladies and gentlemen, I regret to inform you that Russia and America have just declared war on each other."

He then stepped aside to watch the reaction. One man shouted, "Hurray." A dozen women hurriedly left the hall. As for the other 200 players, hardly a head was lifted from the cards. They went right on playing bingo as before.

This incident happened in Lochgelly, Scotland (pop. 9,103), where the club manager was evidently made the victim of a hoax. But the reaction probably would have been the same had such an announcement been made in any one of the 10,000 bingo clubs that have sprung up almost overnight from Land's End to John O'Groats.

Britain is in the grips of a bingo craze, with at least one million inhabitants turned into bingo maniacs in the past nine months. Up and down the country the words "American Bingo" and "Tele-Bingo" are emblazoned in neon. Inside countless dance halls and disused cinemas the walls echo with such strange cries as "clickety-click, never been kissed."

Three-quarters of the bingo maniacs are middle-aged women. These include many housewives whose children have grown up and left home. An elderly widow informs me that she plays bingo five afternoons a week. "It's a perfect way to spend your time when you are my age," she said. "With bingo you never feel lonely."

Nor is the craze confined to London. Blackpool, for example, has 40 bingo parlors along its Golden Mile of beach frontage. In Northumberland, special bingo buses bring patrons from remote villages to the big city parlors. Bristol is planning to open the first drive-in bingo with parking space for 500 cars.

In Bolton a hypnotist is offering to treat victims of "bingo fever."

All of this has occurred in the past nine months, for until January, 1961, bingo was chiefly a feature of church bazaars. It was played for small stakes under the names of Housey-Housey, Tom-bol, Lotto, Beano, Screeno and Po-Keno.

With the new Betting and Gaming Act, which became effective January 1, 1961, all of this changed. It became perfectly legal to operate a bingo club, providing that all players had equal opportunity to win a prize, and that all stake money was returned to the players as prizes.

Biggest bingo promoters are the J. Arthur Rank film organization and Mecca dance halls. They average just under 2,000 players at their big sessions. Both organizations clear most of their profits from catering. Special food trays have been designed to clip onto bingo chairs.

Bingo has been attacked by press and pulpit as weakening the moral fiber of the nation. Canon Fenton Morley, the Vicar of Leeds, has described bingo clubs as "mental slums," while The Times sniffs at the game as a "cretinous pastime."

Bingo - crazed mothers have been accused of neglecting their children, although no evidence has been produced to indicate that neglectful mother frequent bingo parlors more than they do bars, dance halls or movies.

"What bingo offers most people is hope," the elderly widow who plays five afternoons a week explained to me. "It gives them a mental horizon, because this week or next they may win."

Pro-Castro Gang Routed By Police In Dominican Struggle For Power

CIUDAD TRUJILLO, D.R. (UPI) Police hurled noise bombs Wednesday to break up a march on the government palace by 500 pro-Castro youths demanding the resignation of President Joaquin Balaguer.

The incident highlighted the start of a political struggle for power as the near hysteria of recent days over the end of 32 years of dictatorship subsided.

The palace marchers were followers of Manuel Tavarez of the leftist 14th of June movement. They dispersed quickly in the face of the stern police attitude. There were no casualties or arrests.

Supporters of Viriato Fiallo of the National Civic Union, meanwhile, launched his campaign for power with the slogan "Viriato, Si; Balaguer, No." Only Juan Bosch of the Dominican Revolutionary Party appeared to be bidding his time.

Balaguer met for the second time in 24 hours with a subcommittee from the Organization of American States to report on the week's developments. One observer described Balaguer's briefing on the ouster of the Trujillos as "precise and factual."

The aborted march on the palace by 500 youths, members of the pro-Castro 14th of June group, constituted the highlight of the day's excitement.

Some whistling and clapping youths, insistently sounding the "li-ber-tad" (freedom) chant, rode on car fenders around town and there was much horn-blowing. But the demonstration lacked the near-hysterical character of recent days.

Enraged Farmer Slain In Battle With 31 Officers

TANEYVILLE, Mo. (UPI) — An enraged farmer was shot to death Wednesday 12 hours after he turned his cabin deep in the Missouri Ozarks into a fortress and had held a small army of officers at bay with rifle, shotgun and pistol fire.

The Missouri Highway Patrol said the farmer, Bill Jenkins, 38, went berserk because an electric cooperative had not been quick enough in stringing power lines into his one-room cabin.

Lt. H. F. Wickham of the patrol's office in Springfield, one of 31 officers who laid siege to the barricaded cabin Tuesday night, said Jenkins was wounded seven times. "He was mortally wounded today by a rifle bullet which struck him in the back," Wickham said. Jenkins had been wounded six other times—in the legs and arms.

"The body was still warm when we entered the cabin," Wickham added.

The gunbattle began Tuesday night about 8 o'clock after Jenkins resisted arrest for abducting L. M. Speight, manager of the White River Electrical Cooperative at Forsyth, Mo. He kept officers on the defensive with gunfire from seven weapons. Speight later was released unharmed.

The siege was suspended late Tuesday night when heavy rain turned the area around the cabin into a muddy battlefield. When it resumed Wednesday, troopers moved in an armored car and an armored weapons carrier.

Several tear gas grenades were pumped into the cabin and when officers cautiously entered it at 8 a.m. They found Jenkins' body on the floor.

Moscow-Peiping Row Places Tiny Albania On Spot

By United Press International

Evidence continues to accumulate that the split between Moscow and Peiping not only is real but is proving difficult to mediate.

The latest evidence comes in Peiping's belated publication of a speech delivered by Albanian Communist strongman Gen. Enver Hoxha on Nov. 7 violently attacking Nikita Khrushchev.

The publication also provides new evidence of a curious twist taken in the quarrel between the two giants of the communist world—Khrushchev's theory of co-existence with capitalism vs. Mao Tse-Tung's insistence on violent revolution.

This makes tiny Albania the sounding board for both in a quarrel which more and more is shaping up as one over leadership of world communism.

So, when Khrushchev calls for the overthrow of Hoxha, he actually is calling for repudiation of Mao.

When Hoxha accuses Khrushchev of betraying communism and attempting to dethrone Lenin, he is speaking for Mao.

Last week there were indications that attempts were being made to patch things up.

Communist North Viet Nam President Ho Chi Minh stopped over in Peiping after a lengthy meeting with Khrushchev in Moscow.

While the Peiping talks were going on, Red China refrained from publishing Hoxha's Nov. 7 speech.

But with its belated publication, the truce was off.

The Sino-Soviet quarrel, which is one concerning method rather than the ultimate goal of world domination by communism, may be said to have started in 1956 with Khrushchev's denunciation of Stalin at the party's 20th congress in Moscow.

It began coming into the open after the meeting of world Communist leaders in Bucharest in June 1960, and became generally known after failure of a similar conference in Moscow in November 1960.

When, at the 22nd congress last October Khrushchev vented his special anger on Albania for failure to follow his anti-Stalin line, Red China rebuked him for dragging family quarrels into the open. Shortly afterward, Red Chinese delegate Chou En-Lai left for home.

Gold mines of the United States produced 1,738,352 ounces in 1958.

Briton Seeking Island Safe From A-Bombs

By HARRY FERGUSON

LONDON (UPI)—In case you have not yet made the down payment on your bomb shelter, lend me your eyes and ears. We are going to consider the case of Bernard Stanbury, 32, a real estate man. Or rather a former real estate man because he now devotes all his time to a unique plan to beat the bomb.

Six months ago Stanbury was a staid business man and a member of the Conservative party. One Sunday he strolled into Hyde Park corner, the citadel of free speech where the British set up platforms and talk about everything under the sun or fog depending on the weather.

He listened to a speech on nuclear disarmament: "I didn't agree with all that was said, but I agreed with a lot of it."

He began dropping in on meetings of the Committee for Nuclear Disarmament, but nothing much happened. People kept right on manufacturing hydrogen bombs.

Stanbury resigned from the Conservative party and joined the Labor party. The Geneva disarmament conference became deadlocked.

Stanbury decided to support the people who sit down in Trafalgar Square to protest against hydrogen bombs. Four days later Khrushchev exploded a big one.

At this point our man took stock and decided he was doomed to a life of frustration. He immediately did what every Englishman does in a moment of stress and crisis. He bought an advertisement on the front page of the Times of London for about $35. It consisted of what probably is the longest non-stop sentence outside the collected-works of William Faulkner:

"Two families convinced that government policies are more likely to lead to the eradication of Britain than not, who do not think there is time to wait for a new government who do not wish to hang around to find out whether their appraisal of the situation is correct, would like to hear from families and individuals who have a strong desire to live, who are alive enough to do something about it and sufficiently adventurous and energetic to help establish a new cooperative and self supporting community on an island comparatively safe from nuclear hazards. Please send fullest details to include number in family, ages, qualifications, abilities and other assets as the planned migration is for a limited number of persons. Write only to Stanbury, 40 South Audley Street, London, W. 1."

He got 40 replies the next day, including nurses, teachers, students, a farmer and one man who referred to himself as a "timber technologist," and doubtless sells logs for fireplaces.

Stanbury thought that would be about it, but to his surprise the letters kept pouring in until he had more than 300.

Two basic decisions have been made: (1) the Royal Geographical Society has been asked to find a suitable island which will be fairly safe from hydrogen bombs

First Yule Crib Was Introduced By St. Francis

Christmas today would seem incomplete without representations of the stable at Bethlehem, with the Babe in His crib, and figures of Mary, Joseph and the shepherds. Yet the first crib or "creche" did not come into existence until 1223.

It was in that year that St. Francis of Assisi found himself faced with a problem as the holy season approached. In the little town of Greccio, he had been laboring to revive a dead faith in the hearts of its people. So far he had had no success, and now he cast about for a way to make these people understand the beauty and meaning of Christmas.

He decided to set up the Bethlehem stable scene itself, right in the village church. After receiving permission for this unusual undertaking, he and his followers set to work.

They borrowed animals, hay and wood from helpful parishioners, and invited all the peasants of Greccio to attend church that Christmas Eve.

As the villagers arrived, they were rewarded with a wonderful sight. There, before their eyes, was the story of Christmas.

To the illiterate peasants of Greccio, that simple scene conveyed the message of Christmas far more clearly than all the sermons in the world. This "praesepe," as it is called in Italy, became an annual custom and then quickly spread throughout the rest of the Christian world.

Dear Abby.... Man Not Caught 'Til He Stops Running

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Our 19-year-old daughter has gone berserk over some fellow who lives 90 miles from here. He cannot always come here, so my daughter thinks nothing of getting on a bus and going to his house — with his approval, but neither her father's nor mine. Are we wrong to object? She claims it isn't as though she were "chasing" him, as she already has him. She thinks we are nuts. Are we?

PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: Not in my squirrel bank. Tell your daughter to stay home. She doesn't "have" him until she's married.

DEAR ABBY: I have had so much advice from friends and relatives that I am more confused than ever. I am a 36-year-old widow. I've been going with a 45-year-old, well-to-do, attractive bachelor for a year. He wants to marry me, but here is my problem:

My sons (11 and 13) do not like this man. In fact, they hate him. When he comes to the house, the boys run off and "hide" so they won't have to say hello to him. He knows the boys don't like him, but he doesn't make an issue of it. He says if we marry, the boys will be sent to boarding school because he hasn't the patience to be a father to them. Abby, I really love this man, but I love my boys, too. Can you help a confused mother choose between the man she loves and her own flesh and blood?

TORN

DEAR TORN: The instincts of your sons are probably a more dependable evaluation of this man's worth than your own feelings. If you were to marry him, your "love" might wilt faster than your bridal bouquet, knowing that you had sent your sons away to have him. Think it over.

DEAR ABBY: After a six-month engagement, Bob (24) and I (21) want to get married. We want a simple wedding with only our folks and a few close friends present. We see no reason to wait until next spring, which is what my mother wants us to do. She wants to put on a big, showy wedding with a gown and veil, and have a big wedding reception. Dad hasn't the money to pay for it, and is in debt right now, but Mom says I would get it all back in shower and wedding gifts. Abby, I know my relatives, and their gifts wouldn't total half of what the wedding would cost. I hate to disappoint my mother, but I would rather not have my folks go to all that expense for something that doesn't mean anything to me. Please help me decide.

MARRYING-FOR LOVE

DEAR MARRYING: Your judgment is sound. Your Mom may want to do right by you, but she is wrong. Do it your way.

Everybody's got a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, end a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, in care of this paper.

Decorate For Holidays With Imaginative Flair

Household treasures and travel souvenirs can set the mood for a party. Straw mats, maracas and a fruit-and-flower-decorated hat are used, above, for the holiday cruise theme.

By KAY SHERWOOD
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

The festive atmosphere and party mood at holiday time inspire the hostess to plan her luncheon, tea or dinner with greater attention to such details as table decorations.

How wonderful it would be to have the flair for creating notable decorations! I know hostesses who can, and I admire them wholeheartedly.

When asked for their "secret

One consolation is that if you're short on imagination, you can be long on adapting others' ingenuity to your own ends. I've trained my eye to take note of the decorations in homes, in store table settings, in newspaper and magazine pictures.

Some will spark recognition of things you do have and could use. Household treasures and travel souvenirs, or ceramic, wood or glass collections might leave their accustomed niches to bring new interest to party tables.

I'll give you a good example in a buffet table setting for a holiday Caribbean cruise theme:

A rakish straw hat was perched on a green-painted dowel stick planted in a small wood tub filled with fruit: grapes, small limes and kumquats. The hat was jauntily trimmed with grapes and a flower. A sunny yellow cloth covered the table. Crisp crossed maracas (gourds), straw mats for the white glass casseroles and straw baskets for bread added to the "south of the border" atmosphere.

I have similar though not identical props, mostly travel souvenirs, which could be easily assembled into a setting for a supper party featuring a spicy casserole of chili or hot tamale pie.

Sterling silver, silverplate or brass trays or plates already polished to a fare-thee-well for holiday service are often borrowed for decorative use.

A round, gleaming, silver tray makes an elegant frame for a scenic arrangement of cherished figurines and greens.

A brass tray with an embossed border was used in one garden club Christmas piece for a buffet, which featured a small live evergreen in a pot wrapped in red suede paper and decorated with rows of gold braid. The tree itself was decorated with gold foil discs. Why couldn't a tall, compact house plant, such as a philodendron I have staked to a 36-inch pole, be given a similar glamour treatment for the holidays?

PORK IN REDUCING DIET
Reports by doctors and nutritionists indicate that pork can be featured in the reducing diet. Pork contains moderate amounts of fat and is high in protein as well as other nutrients, particularly thiamine.

Sterling silver tray mirrors a ceramic statue of St. Francis, wooden birds, holiday greens.

Thimblette Club Has Dinner Meet

GROOM (Spl. — Thimblette Needle club and their husbands met at the Community Club House recently for an annual Thanksgiving dinner party.

Other invited guests included, Messrs. and Mmes. Carlos Roberts; Don Hunt; Melvin Harp; Mrs. Corrine Wheeler, and Mrs. Mahota Johnson of California.

The Club House was decorated in the Fall motif. Each table was centered with miniature leaf men standing in mounds of feed; at each place setting were cattail nutcrackers. The head table was centered with a simulated lake of water on which floated ceramic frogs on colored leaves surrounded by ceramic ducks.

Fifty members and guests attended the Thanksgiving dinner. Hostesses for the occasion were Mmes. Bob Newton, Preston Harden, Billy Cornett, and Roy Clark.

A Thanksgiving vignette . . . A single yellow tallow candle in a tuna can centered the white porcelain table. The blackened, chipped spots in the table's porcelain; the cracked dishes and bent silverware did not show so harshly in the shadowed glow. Four, brave, but bedraggled, artificial flowers encircling the flickering light added the only cheery note to the sparsely furnished room.

Standing in front of a hot-plate a lady with lined face, fading hair and shoulders showing a weight of time, stood stirring a pot of beans. Her mind was not completely taken up with her chore.

Only yesterday, a letter post-marked from West Berlin had arrived containing meager news of her son's welfare as he served his country in that distant place. Bud never was much of a one for talking, she mused, nor writing. But on this particular day, knowing that at the time the letter was written, he was safe and well was a comforting thought.

She gave a final stir to the beans and thought "as soon as dinner is over, I must get back to the hospital and be with Ellie." Brave, brave Ellie, her 16-year-old daughter. "So pretty, so sweet and so young. How many days did the doctor say were left. . . only three?"

"Dinner's ready, dad." She crossed the room, helped to adjust the crutches under his arm and then assuming more of his weight than the crutches held, to gather they walked toward their Thanksgiving Day table.

As soon as they were seated, the lady reached over and gently touched the man's arm. "You say it this time, Dad." The man entwined his twisted, gnarled hands in supplication and began. . . "On this day, Oh Lord, we give our thanks. . ."

THANKSGIVING FAVORS -- Hospital trays will be just a little brighter today due to the thoughtfulness of Brownie Scout Troop 13 of Skellytown. During troop meetings members have been engaged in making miniature cornucopias filled with candy to be placed on hospital trays today. Troop 13 members are, front row left to right, Janet Lilley, Paula Butler, Penny Geurin; Paulette Lilley; back row, left to right, Miss Beverly Heaton, program aide, Nancy Harlan, Vicky Tollison, Mrs. Troy McDonald, troop leader, Debra Nelson and Sandra Worley. ### Sharp Group To Have Yule Party

Sharp Group of First Christian Church met Tuesday evening with Mrs. L. L. Stewart, 1221 Garland and opened with prayer led by Mrs. Murray Castleberry, president, who, also, conducted the business meeting.

The group made plans to help a needy family at Thanksgiving. Report was made of the Teacher Appreciation Banquet held Nov. 16 and sponsored by the CWF.

Plans were completed for the salad supper to be held Dec. 12 in the home of Mrs. O. H. Odum.

Names of missionaries in the foreign field were drawn to be sent Christmas cards. Also, the group drew names of Senior Citizens, who are living in the church-supported Sarah Harwood Hall in Dallas. Gifts were to be sent by Nov. 30 in order to be ready for distribution at Christmas.

A thought-provoking devotional, concerning thoughts of Christmas-giving, was presented by Mrs. Murray Castleberry.

The program on stewardship was led by Mrs. Leon Howell. Refreshments were served during the social hour by the hostess.

Dinner Party For Intermediate GAs

WHITE DEER (Spl) A progressive dinner with a Spanish theme was held for the Intermediate Girl's Auxiliary of the First Baptist Church recently. Mrs. Osborne served the appetizer and the salad was served in the home of Mrs. Jim Bush. The main course was served by Mrs. Glen Robertson. The serving table was decorated with items of Spanish interest. Dessert was served by Mr. Joe Mitchell who also entertained with a foreign movie.

The G. A.'s are currently studying a mission book on five European countries and costumes and customs of the various countries were discussed.

Girls attending were Misses Louise Hammon, Carolyn Ryals, Marie Gallegly, Pamela Traylor, and Ellen Young. Mrs. Robertson is counselor of the group.

Texas Eyes Cotton Bowl...

Steers, Aggies To Meet

COLLEGE STATION (UPI)—Fifth-ranked Texas goes after a share of the Southwest Conference crown and a Cotton Bowl berth here Thursday in its 68th meeting with a Texas A&M team plagued by injury, rumors of team dissension and possible firing of its coach.

If Texas can rebound from its crushing 6-0 loss to Texas Christian last week, the title share and the bowl berth will come automatically and help soothe the pains activated by loss of its No. 1 rating.

Coach Darrell Royal's Longhorns are 13-point favorites for the nationally televised (ABC) game, but the margin may be much more than that if the flood of rumors rocking the Aggieland campus have any basis of fact.

Rumors flew thick and fast a week ago that there was inner turmoil among the A&M players and that coach Jim Myers' expiring five-year contract as head coach and athletic director would not be renewed. The players, and Myers, denied the reports and promised to "show Rice what we (the players) think of Coach Myers." Rice won 21-7.

The reports gained impetus again this week as the A&M board of directors met on the campus to decide Myers' future.

The board met in executive session Tuesday and said it would have no announcement until Saturday.

That was taken to mean either that Myers' future could swing on how his team fares Thursday before a sellout crowd of 42,000 at Kyle Field or that the die already has been cast and that the officials are waiting until after the final game to announce a possible successor.

The Aggies reported 10 men on the injured list for the traditional Thanksgiving Day classic, but only one of them, tackle George Hogan, appeared definitely out of action.

Dumas Plays Seminole Today

TIL Suspends Burk Burnett High School

AUSTIN (UPI)—Burk Burnett High School has been suspended from 1962 football competition and put on probation for 1961 because the school's coach told some game officials they had called "a very sorry game."

The Texas Interscholastic League took the action Tuesday after hearing league officials testify that coach Jack O'Brian of Burk Burnett criticized officials after the Olney-Burk Burnett game Oct. 27.

Olney won the game 35-31 on a last-second touchdown.

The officials said O'Brian in a "raucous and loud voice" told them that they had called "a very sorry game." The case was brought to the league executive committee by the Fort Worth chapter of the Southwest Conference Football Officials Association.

The action was voted at a secret session attended by seven of the eight league executive committee members.

During 1962, Burk Burnett will not be allowed to play football games with any league member schools. In 1963, they will play the full schedule and be eligible for district honors, if there are no further infractions of the league rules.

SPORTS

SWC Game Features College Grid Card

Once-mighty Texas meets Texas A&M in college football's top Thanksgiving Day game with the Longhorns seeking to rebound after last week's defeat and clinch a Cotton Bowl berth and a share of the Southwest Conference title.

Texas is a 13-point favorite in the nationally televised game over ABC-TV, starting at 2:15 p.m. (EST).

The fifth-ranked Longhorns, who were knocked out of the No. 1 spot in the United Press International ranking by a 6-0 loss to Texas Christian, are expected to be at full strength. The Aggies, however, have 10 men on the injured list, including three-fourths of their backfield. Only tackle George Hogan is definitely out.

In other leading holiday games, Bowling Green plays Fresno State in the first Marcy Bowl game at Los Angeles for the benefit of the plane victims from the California Poly football team; Colgate engages Brown; VMI tangles with Virginia Tech; Richmond meets William and Mary; Memphis State takes on Chattanooga; and Washington (Mo.) meets Washington and Lee.

Pittsburg (Kan.) State, the nation's No. 1 small college team, plays northern South Dakota State in a clash of unbeaten. The winner will advance to the finals of the NAIA playoffs.

Texas is in contention with Arkansas for the Cotton Bowl and Southwest championship. Both teams are 5-1 in league play. If the Longhorns win, they automatically gain the bowl berth, having defeated Arkansas, 33-7, earlier this season.

Regional Action Set in AA and A

By United Press International

The Dumas Demons, Class AAA's second-rated club, tangle with sixth-ranked Seminole in the feature event of a six-game Thanksgiving Day program along the Texas school-boy football front.

Dumas, which has won eight straight games since bowing to Class AAA's District 3 co-champions, Amarillo Palo Duro and Borger, in its first two starts, ruled the favorite over a Seminole team that lost to Class AA champ Denver City and to two of Dumas' District 1-AAA rivals before launching a seven-game winning streak.

The Dumas-Seminole encounter, scheduled at neutral Plainview, is the only Thursday contest scheduled in either of the two top classes.

There are two in Class AA and three others in Class A as the four divisions start whittling their fields to eight quarterfinalists.

In AA, champ Denver City goes after its 27th consecutive victory when it meets Dalhart's once-beaten Wolves at Lubbock in another afternoon game, while Quannah's undefeated-untied Indians face Ballinger's thrice-beaten Bearcats at Abilene in a daytime tilt. The winner of these two games collides in the quarterfinals next week.

In Class A, highly-regarded Wink's Wildcats meet Rotan at Midland in the afternoon, while Thursday night, Forney's perfect record team plays Mt. Vernon at Greenville and Waco Connally and Thorndale get together at Cameron.

The bulk of the activity will come Friday night, but there will be a few games Saturday and Saturday night.

Class AAA's two title favorites, Wichita Falls and Corpus Christi Ray, wait until Saturday afternoon — at the top-ranked Coyotes against Borger and Borger and Ray against Austin S.F. Austin at Austin.

The only other Saturday action will find San Angelo at Ysleta in AAAA; Nederland at Cleburne and Del Rio at San Antonio Lee in AAA.

The Lee-Del Rio game is at night, the others in the afternoon.

All other games are scheduled Friday night.

These include Dallas Wilson at Fort Worth Paschal, Denison at Texarkana, Spring Branch at Houston Milby, Galena Park at Port Neches and San Antonio Jefferson vs. San Antonio Breckenridge in AAAA; Breckenridge at San Antonio Lake View, Carleton vs. Garinthe at Denton Corsicana at Carthage, Bay City vs. Angleton at Freeport and San Benito at Port Lavaca in AAA.

Paschal, Texarkana, Spring Branch, Galena Park, Jefferson, Breckenridge, Gainesville, Carthage, Bay City and San Benito are favored.

In Class AA Friday night, Jacksboro plays Plano at Haltom City, Hooks plays Gilmer at Daingerfield, Brady meets Hearne at Killeen, Columbus is at Dayton, Sweeney plays Gonzales at Victoria and Donna is at Devine.

In Class A, Gruver meets Kress at Canyon, Albany and Crowell tangle at Stamford, Brownsboro meets Groveton at Nacogdoches, Hull-Daisetta and Sealy clash at Liberty and Three Rivers meets Rio Hondo at Raymondville.

Jacksboro, Gilmer, Brady, Columbus, Sweeney and Donna are favored in AA, while Gruver, Albany, Groveton, Hull-Daisetta and Rio Hondo are the Class A favorites.

Palo Duro Dons Capture 3-AAAA Offense Crown

Palo Duro's offensive minded Dons had a bad day against Amarillo to wind up the season, but the 3-AAAA co-champions managed to wind up as the loop's top offensive club.

The Dons averaged 314.4 yards per game. They got 245.2 per game on the ground, good for second place in the district, and 69.1 in the air — a third place finish.

Lubbock's Tom Middleton was the individual leader in total offense with 912 yards. He gained 509 yards passing, which earned him the top spot in that department.

Butch Crossland, the Pampa senior quarterback, dropped to fourth place in the final passing race. He tossed 47 aeriels and completed 18 for a 359 yard total just 10 behind third slot Ricky Nix of Palo Duro.

Two other Pampans — Kenny Hebert and Mike Stewart — grabbed top spots in pass receiving.

HEBERT FINISHED SIXTH AND STEWART CLIMBED TO FIFTH IN THE DISTRICT SCORING RACE WITH 42 POINTS AND RALPH PALMER TIED FOR SEVENTH PLACE IN THE SAME CATEGORY.

Palo Duro's Gordon Nelson was the leader with 86 points.

Ga. Tech Accepts Gator Bowl Bid

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI)—Win or lose in their last season game, Georgia Tech's Yellow Jackets will play in the Gator Bowl here Dec. 30. But Maryland will have to go through the formality of beating weak Virginia to earn the second spot.

Gator Bowl selection committee chairman Henry Kramer said Tuesday night he had called Tech coach Bobby Dodd to issue the informal invitation, "and Bobby said he'd like to come here."

A Tech spokesman in Atlanta said the Yellow Jackets had voted unanimously to accept the invitation when it is formally made following the Dec. 3 game with Georgia. Kramer said Georgia Tech will be invited even if it loses to Georgia.

Maryland Athletic Director Tom Nugent accepted the Gator Bowl bid for the Terrapins Monday, but on the condition his strongly favored team whips Virginia Saturday.

Maryland had a 7-2 record for the season, Georgia Tech a 6-3 record.

Paul Alexander Named Lineman Of Week In SLC

LAKE CHARLES, La. (UPI)—Gulf States Conference "Lineman of the Week" honors went to Paul Alexander, standout tackle for Southeastern Louisiana College.

Alexander was an offensive and defensive star in Saturday's 19-9 SLC triumph over Northwestern Louisiana.

Southwest African Crisis Nearing

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. — (NEA) — The little known territory of Southwest Africa, a country as big as Texas and Oklahoma combined, may be moving toward crisis.

Lying between the Republic of South Africa and turbulent Angola, Southwest Africa once was a German colony but it has been under strict control of the Republic of South Africa since World War I.

(South Africa officially became a republic in May, when it withdrew from the British Commonwealth after a dispute over its racial policies. It formerly was called the Union of South Africa.) The territory of Southwest Africa now is the focal point of a two-pronged legal attack pending before the International Court of Justice at The Hague. The Republic of Liberia and the kingdom of Ethiopia have brought charges against the Republic of South Africa.

It could be one of the most momentous court cases in history because:

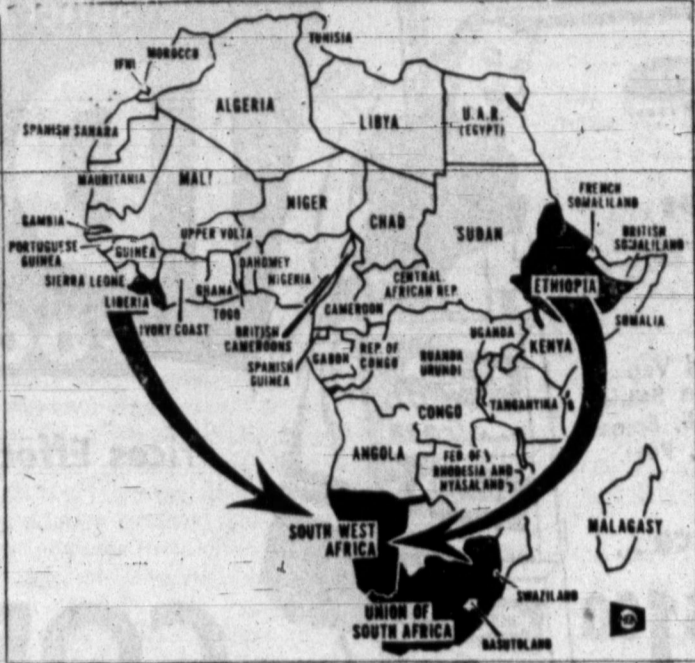

Liberia and Ethiopia jointly challenge the Republic's hold on this vast territory.

The action indirectly attacks the Republic's apartheid — white supremacy — policy.

If Liberia and Ethiopia win their case, South West Africa with its half-million native population could be brought into the "Black Africa" political complex.

Should the Republic ignore an adverse ruling by the International Court, the African native nations probably will call upon the U.N. Security Council to back up the ruling of the U.N. judicial arm.

This could mean that a U.N. troop force would be sent to drive the Republic from South West Africa.

LEGAL SQUEEZE — On South West Africa comes from the native nations of Liberia and Ethiopia. They seek to oust the Union (now the Republic) of South Africa from control over a territory as large as Texas and Oklahoma combined.

Should this pattern of events take place as described, perhaps early in 1962, the prestige of the World Court — an arbiter of international disputes — would be increased.

The Republic was given control over Southwest Africa by a League of Nations mandate. The Republic was ordered to "promote to the utmost the material and moral wellbeing and the social progress of the inhabitants."

Also, the Republic was directed to submit regular reports to the League on conditions in its mandated territory.

Ethiopia and Liberia now say that the Republic has not lived up to the terms of the mandate. They want the U.N. — as successor to the League of Nations — to assume control. South Africa has argued that international control faded when the League of Nations was disbanded in 1946.

Ethiopia and Liberia are in the legal fight because they, as well as South Africa, were members of the League. Other African nations directly interested in the case were not.

Ethiopia and Liberia submitted their case earlier this year. They are represented by a Wall Street law firm, Curtis, Mallet - Prevost, Colt and Mosle.

South Africa must answer the charges in The Hague by Dec. 15. The Republic's lawyers seem certain to challenge the right of the World Court to intervene.

Other more militant "Black Africa" nations, such as Ghana, are known to be watching impatiently from the sidelines.

A special U.N. committee has been studying conditions in South West Africa for months. Its investigation has been second hand, because the Republic has not permitted on-the-scene studies.

Testimony gleaned by the U.N. from refugees presents a picture of murder, starvation and persecution inflicted upon the natives by the 66,000 white settlers and police.

According to Mburumba Kerna, member of the Liberian U.N. mission and chairman of the South West Africa—Peoples' Organization:

"Conditions for the natives in South West Africa are worse than slavery — worse, in fact, than conditions in the Republic of South Africa itself."

A spokesman for the Republic declined to make a statement while the case was pending before the World Court.

Foreign News Commentary

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

The usually grim-faced Soviet Foreign Minister Andre' Gromyko must have laughed all the way to Khrushchev's office after telling the Finns that his government had "not the slightest intention" of intervening in Finland's domestic affairs.

For Soviet pressures have been a major contributor to the fact that since World War II Finland has had no less than 20 governments.

Having had his little joke, Gromyko went on to tell Finnish Foreign Minister Ahti Karjalainen that if Finland could produce proof of continued neutrality, then it might not be necessary to hold military talks which could end with Russian forces on Finnish soil.

President Urho Kekkonen, who of necessity has learned to read the Russian handwriting accurately, promptly dissolved parliament and called for new elections in February.

Specifically, the Russians professed to fear that Finland's minority government was not strong enough to insure its present policy of neutrality.

But the government was no weaker than it has been all along since 1958, and elections had been scheduled for next summer anyway.

Furthermore, since the war all Finnish governments have followed the "Passivite line."

This was the policy enunciated by former President Juhani Paasikivi which consists simply of cultivating the best possible relations with Russia and avoiding the slightest excuse for action dangerous to Finnish independence.

Of more immediate interest to the Russians probably were the approaching presidential elections. On Jan. 15 and 16, Finnish voters will elect a 300-member presidential election college. On Feb. 15, the college will elect a new president.

The Russians have let it be known that they want Kekkonen returned to office.

In Finland, the Soviets know they tread dangerous ground. Kekkonen has done his best to urge the cause of neutrality on NATO members Denmark and Norway and on Sweden.

But the Finns proved to the Russians in 1939-40 that they could fight, and the surest way to force Sweden into NATO would be for Russian troops to move once more into Finland.

Mighty F-1 Rocket Engine Hope Of U.S. In World Space Race

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (UPI) — America's hope for catching up in the space race is a gigantic baby that guzzles its formula at the rate of three tons a second.

The baby is the mighty F1 rocket engine and the formula is its fuel.

It stands 11 feet tall, weighs 15,000 pounds and cries with the roar of 1.5 million pounds of thrust — roughly 30 million horsepower.

The F1 rocket engine still is a space-age youngster but rapidly approaching the day it will give the United States its first powerful booster. The lack of such a booster — so far all U.S. space feats have been accomplished with modified military rockets — has left this country behind in vital areas of the technological race with the Soviet Union.

One job the F1 undoubtedly will be called on for is boosting a three-man mission to the moon as requested by President Kennedy in a $48.5 million crash program.

But for programs such as this, a single F1 won't be enough, although it develops 20 times the thrust of the Redstone rocket which sent the first two U.S. spacemen aloft.

So, say National Space Agency officials who are godfathers to the rocket, several of the F1s will be clustered together for deep space exploration where it is necessary to put perhaps a 70-ton payload in orbit around the moon.

This is like using two locomotives to pull a heavy freight over a steep grade. And in space, just as in railroading, it works.

Nova is the vehicle that eventually will land men on the moon with some way of returning them to earth. Eight F1s will be clustered together to form the booster for the 400-foot tall Nova.

That would mean the Nova booster would have 12 million pounds of thrust. In terms of horsepower, that would be 240 million and this figure compares with 12,000 horsepower for the largest five-unit Diesel locomotive. It would take 20,000 locomotives to equal the power of the eight F1s in the booster alone.

There's nothing exotic about either the F1 or the fuel it burns. The rocket is just a big brother of all the engines built by Rocketdyne, a division of North American Aviation, that played a vital part in the early stages of space exploration.

Of the first 48 satellites placed in orbit by the United States, 44 were powered by Rocketdyne engines.

The liquid oxygen and Rp-1 kerosene fuel burned by the F1 is the same fuel that powered the Redstone, Thor, Atlas and Titan missiles.

The only difference is, the F1 takes it in bigger doses. A 60,000-horsepower turbopump — housed in a 4-by-3-foot bump on the side of the engine — forces the fuel into the firing chamber, usually in a ratio of about 2-3 liquid oxygen to 1-3 kerosene.

When this ignites, the engine explodes into action with a crack like that of nearby thunder. Temperatures at the rocket nozzle — just below the firing chamber — almost instantly climb to 5,500 degrees Fahrenheit.

To help keep the nozzle cool, the propellant fuel is circulated around the nozzle before it is fed into the chamber for ignition.

In the first 19 static firings — the engine is bolted down on an 11-story-tall test stand on Rocket Ridge at this desert base — the engine performed perfectly 17 times. The other two times, it shut down prematurely because instruments showed something in the rocket was not working properly.

This insures against the engine being destroyed by an explosion.

In a 13-second test on April 6, the F1 developed 1,640,000 pounds of thrust — just two months after the first static firing — and about five years since the start of studies to determine if the rocket was feasible.

It was feasible.

"We feel the F1 will be ready when we need it," said Erich Neubert, associate deputy director for research and development at the

Use Of Tobacco Gains In Canada

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canadians are smoking more cigarettes and cigars this year than last. The Bureau of Statistics reported Wednesday that cigarette consumption, increased 7.9 per cent in the first nine months of the year and cigar sales were up 2.6 per cent.

The F1 is on schedule for a mid-1963 delivery date, if not before.

"Progress in the development of the F1 has been unprecedented," said Rocketdyne vice president J. P. McNamara. "The early decision by NASA to take advantage of proven design is paying off."

Planes That Might Have Been—Some Never Left Drawing Board

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If things had worked out differently, thousands of Americans would be flying around today in Saturns, Rainbows, DC3's, Pioneers, Boeing 174's and Lockheed 193's.

These were the airliners that didn't quite make it, for reasons ranging from technical to economic. Millions were spent in their development but only one — the DC 5 — ever carried paying passengers, and then only a handful.

The DC5 was supposed to be the replacement for the famed DC3. Actually, it was just a bigger, faster DC3 with one radical difference — the wing was located high on the fuselage instead of below. That single major revision made the plane too heavy and the DC3 outperformed it in payload and range.

Douglas built only a dozen DC5's. The original prototype was sold to William Boeing for his personal use. Four went to KLM Royal Dutch Airlines. The Navy bought three and the Marines the last four.

The military versions of the DC5 served their time honorably and eventually went to the scrap heap. The four sold to KLM compiled a history that could fill a book. KLM used them in the Pacific and when World War II broke out, the Dutch flew all four to Java. One was destroyed by enemy fire and another, captured by the Japs, apparently was used briefly as a transport. Its eventual fate is unknown.

Of the remaining two, one turned up in Australia carrying U.S. Army Air Corps insignia and was later used by an Australian airline before crashing. The last DC5 showed up in Israel early in the 1950's — and actually saw service as a makeshift bomber against the Egyptians before being grounded permanently as a mechanics' practice plane.

The stories of the other "planes that didn't make it" weren't nearly as romantic.

Lockheed spent about $20 million developing the Saturn, a twin-engine, high-wing, short-range transport designed specifically for the feeder or local service airlines in 1946. It carried 16 passengers at speeds of more than 200 miles per hour.

The plane, which looked amazingly like today's F27 prop-jet, started out as a winner. Lockheed got conditional orders for nearly 500 Saturns at a price tag of $85,000 per plane but then ran into trouble.

First, the price was too low for profit and Lockheed had to raise it to $100,000 which scared away many customers. Second, the small regional carriers encountered tougher-than-expected going in the postwar years and bought used DC3's instead of new planes.

In 1946 alone, the government sold 31,000 surplus aircraft usable in civil aviation. The market for the Saturn collapsed.

Lockheed built only two Saturns. The first proved to be underpowered, so the second carried bigger engines. But although the second prototype proved to be a beautifully performing ship, Lockheed regrettably dropped production plans. The two Saturns were scrapped in 1947.

There are a lot of pilots who would vote for the Republic XR12 — dubbed the "Rainbow" — as a plane which should have succeeded. The Rainbow was one of the most beautiful transports ever built — a sleek, bullet-shaped queen carrying 46 passengers and a crew of seven. It could cruise at 400 miles per hour at 40,000 feet, a remarkable performance for an airliner built in 1946.

The Rainbow was designed for trans-Atlantic service and had a 4,000-mile range. For shorter flights, it could cruise at 440 MPH and had a top speed of more than 450. Not until the Lockheed Electra came along years later with turbine engines did any prop-driven airliner fly that fast or that high.

Like the Saturn, the Rainbow seemed to have a rosy future. American Airlines ordered 20 of them and so did Pan American. Republic built a single prototype and tests showed the Rainbow was a promising aircraft in every respect.

But a postwar slump in commercial aviation ruined the plane's chances. American sold its overseas routes to Pan Am and cancelled its Rainbow order. With only the Pan Am order on the books and no other prospective buyers in sight, Republic reluctantly scrapped the Rainbow project and began concentrating on jet fighters.

Northrup tried to market the Pioneer, a 33-passenger tri-motor transport that could operate in and out of almost any airport, but couldn't stir up any interest among the scheduled carriers. Ten were sold to the Air Force for Arctic rescue work and a few more went into cargo service in South America.

Boeing had large hopes for a postwar twin-engine, short-range transport called the 417 and spent $14 million on preliminary designs. No customers appeared and Boeing sold the design to Fokker of the Netherlands. Today, the 417 is flying as the F27, built by Fokker for European airlines and by Fairchild for U.S. carriers.

Douglas also tried, but not very hard, to sell a twin-engine pusher transport engines facing the rear) which was a commercial version of its "Mixmaster" bomber. Another aborted project was the Super DC3, just a stretched-out model of the regular 3. Capital Airlines, at one time, flew three of the Suprs but sold them to the Navy and no other airline expressed interest.

U.S. Concerned About Foreign Common Mart

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Every so often a strange new phrase pops up and then is incorporated in the nation's vocabulary. Some have good overtones; others "Plan" and "NATO" in the plus category. There were "blitzkrieg" and "brainwash" in the minus. Now comes a new phrase with still unknown significance for this country: "The Common Market." In the following dispatch, UPI Reporter Vincent J. Burke explores this development.)

By VINCENT J. BURKE
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — Across the Atlantic a new anti-Communist giant flexes his economic muscles. And Uncle Sam looks on with mixed feelings.
 Western Europe—wearing new 20 league boots provided by its revolutionary "Common Market"—is making giant strides toward economic strength and prosperity. In the process, it is treading a path of greater and greater tariff discrimination against the United States and other outsider nations.
 In helping prod Europe into creating the Common Market, the United States took the attitude that this would be a price worth paying for the creation of a new economic bulwark against communism.

The current apprehension stems from the fact the United States is just now facing up to the tough problems which the Common Market creates for American business, agriculture and workers.
 President Kennedy's solution for these problems—a radical revision in U.S. tariffs—will touch off a furious battle in Congress.

The Common Market is composed of Germany, France, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands, and Luxembourg. They are in the process of gradually eliminating tariffs and other restrictions against trade among themselves and erecting a common tariff wall against products from other areas.

Through this economic merger the six nations are creating a mass market of 170 million consumers under circumstances which cannot help but boost their productivity. The mass market is encouraging establishment of modern production facilities and is weeding out inefficient producers.

Britain is negotiating to join the Common Market and is expected to enter by 1963. This would boost the population of the mass market to 225 million—one-fourth larger than the United States.

Manufacturers inside the market will have a big advantage over the outsiders in supplying the wants of these peoples.

For example, a resident of the expanded Common Market eventually would be able to buy a German, French, Italian and British automobile without paying any tariff. The same would be true of other products.

By contrast, tariffs on products produced outside the Common Market would amount to 29 per cent for automobiles, 18 per cent for typewriters, 10 per cent for cotton thread, 20 per cent for tractors, 19 per cent for vacuum cleaners, 13 per cent for electric refrigerators, 10 per cent for plate glass and varying amounts for other items.

Kennedy apparently has concluded that there is only one way in which the United States can lessen this tariff discrimination at the hands of our best foreign customers: make broad cuts in U.S. tariffs in exchange for similar concessions from the Common Market.

The President tentatively has decided to ask Congress next year for broad authority to negotiate reductions in the tariffs which now protect U.S. producers from competition of lower-priced products from abroad.

No more decisive economic issue could be put before congress-sional Democrats in an election year. Many are from districts where pottery, leather goods and other manufacturers are insisting that they need more—not less—protection.

The full impact of the Common Market has not yet been felt. Internal tariffs of the Common Market nations have so far been cut 30 per cent on industrial items. Another reduction on Jan. 1 may bring the overall cut to 40 or 50 per cent.

The common external tariffs generally were arrived at by averaging the high duties of France and Italy with the lower duties of Germany and Belgium. The Netherlands and Luxembourg. Each of the countries has made an initial step in adjusting their tariffs toward the common goal.

The actions taken so far have been accompanied by a rise—instead of a fall—in U.S. exports to the Common Market. Exports last year totaled $3.8 billion, an increase of $1 billion over 1958 and a boost of $1.2 billion over 1959.

This increase was attributed to an economic boom in the Common Market and it generated hopes that the United States will enjoy an increasing overall trade with the Common Market despite the tariff discrimination.

Mexico's Power Project Nearly Half Completed

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — A hydro-electric project described as "the most important in Latin America" is nearing the halfway point in construction. Total cost of the project will be about $80 million.

This French-financed irrigation and electric power network will create the largest artificial lake in Mexico, approximately 29 miles long, in a huge canyon made by the Balsas River as it races through a mountainous area on the boundary of Michoacan and Guerrero states.

Completion date for the project, on which close to 2,000 men are working, has been scheduled for June, 1964. At that time, work will have been going on continuously for more than five years.

Since the bulk of the financing came from the Bank of Industry of France, it was indicated that French equipment most likely will be used in the basic installations. Such, for instance, will be the four principal turbines in the underground power plan that will have a capacity of 600,000 kilowatts.

The turbines will be activated by a 360-foot fall of water coursing through two big tunnels that channel the flow through the turbines.

Heart of the irrigation system will be the storage reservoir, which has dam walls that rise 560 feet in height.

The power plant, to be built inside a hollowed-out area of a mountain, will be equivalent in size to a 12-story building, federal engineers said.

The project, known as "Infiernillo (Little Hell)," is located in what until two years ago was a remote mountain area, and which only a short time before that had been listed in maps as "unexplored territory."

The planning was done under direction of the Commission of the Tepalcatepec, headed by former president Lazaro Cardenas, which in 1959 opened the first road into the area in order to make preliminary studies. The site is about 68 miles from the city of Uruapan, in Michoacan state, and about 193 from Mexico City.

The meandering Balsas River is actually a junction of two large waterways, the Balsas and the Tepalcatepec, fed by a dozen tributaries. The Balsas, third largest in Mexico, empties into the Pacific Ocean at a point about 77 miles north of Acapulco, the west coast resort city. The Usumacinta and Grijalva rivers in southern Mexico are the country's largest.

A "city" of about 10,000 persons has grown up around the construction camp in the remote section of the country, and since geographical limits never have been established clearly, it is practically an autonomous community, without jurisdiction of either of the bordering states.

This typical "boom" situation has created sociological problems that the Federal Electricity Commission is trying to solve, but they have not interfered with the progress of the work.

Mexican engineers already have started taking special courses and practical training in Europe to enable them to install and provide maintenance of the equipment to be brought to this country for the project.

Humble Changes Executive Posts

TULSA — Three executive level appointments affecting Humble Oil & Refining Company's Central Region office were announced recently in Tulsa by John W. Brice, Humble vice president.

James H. Galloway, who has been serving as general manager of the company's Southwest Region, has been named general manager of the Central Region to replace R. O. Goodykoontz, who has been previously appointed vice president in charge of the Esso Standard, Eastern Region.

R. P. Ryan, Central Region general counsel, will replace Galloway as general manager of the Southwest Region, headquartered in Houston.

A. L. Deaton, area manager in Humble's Mattoon, Illinois, office, has been appointed Central Region general counsel to replace Ryan.

Galloway, the Central Region's new general manager, is a graduate of Texas A & M. He joined Humble in 1930 as a petroleum engineer and was engaged in field operations in east, south, and southwest Texas prior to entering military service in 1943.

Montgomery Ward Looks To New Prexy

CHICAGO (UPI) — Officials of Montgomery Ward & Co. hope the selection of Robert E. Brooker as president means a turning point in the company's fortunes.

"It is the most significant step we've taken in the direction of solving our problem," said John A. Barr, chairman of the giant mail order-retail store firm.

Ward's problems are many. Earnings last year fell 51 percent to the lowest point since 1937 despite higher sales. A rapid expansion program, which has seen 50 new stores opened in the last three years, has taken a big bite out of profits.

The firm is also short of management personnel, a legacy of the days when Ward officials quit by the scores in reaction to the conservative policies of the late Sewell Avery.

Barr is optimistic despite these obstacles. While declining to estimate when the firm's profits will turn upward, he said Ward is "a financially strong company."

Brooker, who resigned from a similar post at Whirlpool Corp. last week to take the Ward's post, brings to Ward 14 years of merchandising experience with Sears, Roebuck Co. before joining Whirlpool in 1958. He was with Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. prior to Sears.

Since Barr succeeded Avery in June, 1955, Ward's, the nation's third largest merchandiser, has tried to catch up but the last years are still hurting.

Avery saved the firm from financial disaster in the 1930s but he believed the nation would run into another depression after World War II. Instead of expanding and modernizing the operation as Sears did, Avery built up a huge pile of mostly cash and government securities to ride out the storm that never came.

Ward's sales held around the 1 billion mark in the late 1940's and slipped to $887 million by 1954. Meanwhile, Sears' volume soared from $1 billion in 1945 to over $4 billion today.

"Our basic problems exist because of the long retrenchment period," Barr said. "Our stores were neglected, no new ones had been opened since 1941, and many good management personnel resigned. We had no facilities to develop replacements."

Barr, a lawyer and vice president at the time, held out. When financier Louis E. Wolfson's unsuccessful proxy fight brought about Avery's departure, Ward's board of directors turned to Barr to save the company.

One of his first moves was to build up Ward's depleted management corp by bringing in people "from outside."

Barr tailored Ward's prices and products to appeal to middle class income customers. Ward's catalogs and retail store advertising, which has resembled a page in a classified telephone directory, were revamped.

Fifty new retail stores, most of them in suburban shopping centers; and 428 catalog outlets were opened across the nation. Thirteen more retail stores are planned for 1962 and 1963. At the same time, 102 old retail and catalog stores were closed or replaced. As of Nov. 1, the firm operated 531 retail stores and 650 catalog outlets. Mail order business, also rising, accounts for about one-third of total sale.

A proposed merger with Interstate Department Stores, a discount chain, collapsed late last month after agreement had seemed definite. Barr said Ward is still interested in this new concept of retailing, "although we don't have anything to announce now."

A look at the annual reports of Avery's last full year and of 1960 shows some results of the expansion program.

In 1954, Ward had $327 million in cash and securities, $147 million in receivables and $216 million in inventory. By Feb. 1, 1961, cash and securities were down to $57 million, but accounts receivables had risen to $242 million and inventories to $267 million. Total property investments rose from $31 million to $149 million last year.

Sales have turned upward since Barr became chairman. Volume last year amounted to $1,249 million, against $887 million in 1954. Sales ran 54 percent ahead of last year in the first nine months of 1961.

Earnings, however, continue to decline. The firm reported $15,053,599 on Feb. 1, 1961 against $35,844,479 in the year ended Jan. 31, 1957. The slide continued this year, with profits totaling $4,049,000 for the first six months against $5,037,000 a year ago.

Barr is the first to admit that "earnings are not satisfactory." He adds that the recent recession, which made consumer spending tighter, and growing competition from discount stores and others entering the general merchandise field, have not helped matters.

"But the outlook at Ward is very bright and encouraging," he said. "This is a strong and sound company. Many of our new stores are already learning their way."

Season Of Advent To Begin Dec. 3

The season of Advent, which directly precedes Christmas and serves for many Christians as a time of preparation for the coming of the Christ Child, this year begins on December 3rd. In many Christian homes it is often marked by lovely old customs.

The Advent wreath is one such tradition that is observed while awaiting Christmas. Although it is believed to have originated with the pagan fire wheel, it eventually came to represent the thousands of years the earth awaited the coming of Christ. It bears four candles, each of which is lighted on the four Sundays before Christmas.

Any kind of Christmas wreath may be used to make the Advent wreath and there are many ways to display it. It may be set on a kitchen or dining room table, or suspended by four purple ribbons from a light fixture in the ceiling.

Another delightful Advent custom is the "stir-up" or traditional English plum pudding, which is brought to the dinner table for family and guests to stir. Each guest makes a wish as he stirs. The pudding is then steamed and put away until Christmas arrives. Warmed brandy or rum is added and set ablaze.

Federal Agency Seeking To Make Business Loans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Small Business Administration feels these days like the cat that finally was allowed to catch mice. Freed of restraints which formerly were imposed on its lending powers, the agency is actively seeking loan applications from small business firms. Efforts also are being made to acquaint small businessmen with what the agency stands ready to do for them.

"We're being more responsive to what Congress intended," sums up Albert J. Lubin, assistant administrator for information services.

Administrator John E. Horne said in an interview that when he stepped in as agency head last Feb. 6 he found three areas in which "we needed a more vigorous effort." He listed them as: 1. Licensing of more small business investment companies. 2. Encouraging formation of local development companies. 3. Direct loans to small firms.

Horne carefully avoided any direct criticism of his Republican predecessors. But as former administrative assistant to Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., chairman of the Senate Small Business Committee, he clearly is in sympathy with a report issued by Sparkman's committee on Feb. 2. The report was critical of Republican management of the SBA. It made public a once-secret 199 memorandum from FORMER Republican SBA head Wendell Barnes. The memo directed the SBA staff to "phase off any activity that tends to attract applicants (for loans) or encourage program expansion."

Barnes explained in the memo that "any funds that are not spent" helped to hold down overall government expenditures. That was the year President Eisenhower was wrenching the federal budget into the black after a 12.4 billion deficit.

The Kennedy administration, taking office at the bottom of a business recession, has pursued an opposite policy. It moved immediately to push out more federal dollars in order to pump up the economy.

Part of that effort has been greater willingness of the SBA to make loans. Horne's mid-year report observed that in evaluating loan applications "less emphasis is being placed on collateral and more emphasis on ability to repay." In short, loan standards are less strict.

In the first half of 1961, the agency approved 6.1 per cent of all business loan applications. In the two preceding six-month periods, approval ratios were 49.5 and 51.9 per cent.

Similarly, the number of disaster loan applications received and approved approximately tripled in the first half of 1961 in comparison to the first half of 1960. In part, the increase reflected a greater incidence of natural disaster — flood, drought, tornado, etc. But, Lubin acknowledged, it also stemmed from a greater willingness on the part of the agency to declare disaster areas, thereby making residents eligible for SBA disaster loans.

The SBA has been tied in with the Kennedy Administration's program of aid to economically depressed areas. The interest rate on SBA loans in these areas has been cut to 4 per cent; 1 to 1½ points below the usual charge. The agency has assigned "high priority" to loan applications from areas of high, persistent unemployment. By liberalizing its size standards for these areas, it has increased the number of firms eligible for SBA assistance.

Horne's mid-year review claimed "tremendous impetus" had been imparted to licensing small business investment companies by administrative changes and by publicizing the program. These privately owned firms, which invest in other businesses, may borrow long-term capital from the SBA.

Similarly, Horne claimed "record progress" in approval of loans to local development companies. These companies, usually subject to some local state public regulation, borrow SBA money and raise funds locally to lend to a new or expanding firm.

The SBA also has intensified its efforts to reserve government contracts for bidding exclusively by small firms. There were 22,320 of these set-asides in the first half of 1961, up 81 per cent from the first half of 1960.

So far there has been no noticeable outcry from Republicans about SBA's increase in activity or liberalization of loan requirements.

"We've had nothing to complain of," commented an aide to Sen. Hugh Scott, Republican member of the Small Business Committee. "It's too early to determine if they're too liberal now in granting loans.

Under the Kennedy budget for fiscal 192, Horne is asking Congress to boost authorized SBA employment from 2,600 to 2,820 and to appropriate $2.8 million for salaries and administrative expenses, $2.5 million more than in fiscal 1961.

Safe Yuletide Season Urged

Every year, the holiday season is marred for many families because of fires caused by Christmas trees. Don't let this happen to you!

Follow these rules for a fire-proof, merry Christmas!

Be sure the tree you purchase is fresh! Determine this by bouncing the butt of the tree against the ground — if the needles stay on, and if the stump cut is slicking with resin, it is fresh. It's also best to select a small tree.

Before setting up your tree, saw off at least an inch of trunk diagonally, placing its base in a water-containing holder. At all times, keep the water-level well above the diagonal cut.

Locate your tree well away from fireplaces, radiators, television sets, powerful electric lights, or other sources of heat and electrical power.

When decorating your tree, use only decorations of the non-combustible type. Be extremely careful with electric lights, checking them for defective wires and loose sockets. Use only electric lights that bear the Underwriter's Laboratories label.

Never use candles for decorations! Since too many light circuits in one outlet may overload the house wiring and blow a fuse, distribute the load among several outlets.

Various Song Tunes Found Off Snatched

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Few songs have appeared in as many different forms as the one which begins "Tee-dum tee-dum tee-dum dum tee-dum dum dum tee-dum."

The basic melody was composed before the Civil War by a southerner, one William Steffe, who wrote a lot of tunes used in Sunday schools.

Later on, abolitionists seized the air and used it as the vehicle for "John Brown's Body Lies A-Mouldering in the Grave." Then the South recaptured it and superimposed new lyrics reading "We'll Hang John Brown to a Sour Apple Tree."

I have heard the refrain sung at football games as "Glory, Glory to Old Georgia." My children sing a variation called "Grasshopper Sittin' on a Sweet Potato Vine." And so on.

What is now the most widely recognized version was penned on Nov. 19, 1861, by Julia Ward Howe under the title "The Battle Hymn of The Republic." The 100th anniversary of her rendition was observed here and in other places over the weekend.

The idea of rewriting the song was suggested to Mrs. Howe during a carriage ride to nearby Bailey's Crossroads for a picnic. (You ought to try driving to Bailey's Crossroads now. Believe me, it's no picnic.)

I fell to wondering in connection with the "Battle Hymn" centennial just what is the most imitated song ever written. A number of candidates for the honor spring to mind.

There must be a dozen or more U.S. colleges that have borrowed Cornell's alma mater, and that many more that have plagiarized Notre Dame's fight song.

A well known state song, "Maryland, My Maryland," came from a German ditty about a Christmas tree, which I suspect was lifted from Beethoven's Fourth Piano Concerto. Heaven knows where Strawn, and the hostess Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Holdeman.

Several from Wheeler attended the funeral of Mrs. Verna Taylor in Shamrock Friday afternoon. Mrs. Taylor is a former resident of the Briscoe community.

Mrs. Helen Hardin of Shamrock, was a business visitor in Wheeler Thursday afternoon.

Dr. Glenn R. Walker attended the meeting of the Southern Medical Association held in Dallas recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Sechrist. Shorty Sechrist and Mr. and Mrs. H. Laycock visited the first part of the week near Stephenville, Texas with friends and relatives.

Betty Henson, Esther Hill, Mrs. L. A. McWhorter, Sylvia Brickery, John Lewis have all been patients in the Shamrock General Hospital. All are improved at this writing.

Miss Annette Hutchinson who is attending school at Abilene visited recently with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dorsie Hutchinson.

Beethoven got it. "The Eyes of Texas" is a reworking of a railroad tune. And there are countless other examples of song snatching.

According to the National Geographic Society, an oracle I frequently consult, top honors probably belong to "God Save the Queen" which serves as Britain's national anthem when "God Save the King" isn't in good form.

More than 20 countries have borrowed this tune, including the United States. We first copped it under the title "God Save George Washington." Eventually, we switched it to "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

Thus far, other countries have kept their tonsils off of our national anthem. There is a good reason for this. If they borrowed

Marathon Phone Talk Is Staged

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) — A marathon telephone conversation has been going on since noon last Friday between 80 men students and 100 University of Illinois coeds in the latest college fad.

The phone company doesn't mind, because this fad is easier on equipment than stuffing telephone booths not to mention increased revenues.

'Pink' Elephants Startle Autoists

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—Motorists on Grant Street were startled Monday by a parade of pink-tinted elephants.

The pink polka-dotted pachyderms heralded a circus which opened here last night.

"The Star-Spangled Banner" they also would have to borrow Lucy Monroe to sing it.

AN INDEPENDENT FREEDOM NEWSPAPER

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by any government, with the gift of freedom, and that it is every man's duty to God to preserve his own liberty and respect the liberty of others. Freedom is self-control, no more, no less.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guides expressed in the Ten Commandments, the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. For only when man understands Freedom and is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities in harmony with the above moral principles.

Subscription Rates: By Carrier in Pampa, 25¢ per week, $4.50 per 3 months, $9.00 per 6 months, $18.00 per year. By mail paid in advance at office, $10.00 per year in retail trading zone, $15.00 per year outside retail trading zone, $12.50 per month.

Thanksgiving Economic Base

A most interesting sidelight to the Plymouth Colony and its ultimate success will be found in a footnote supplied by S. E. Morrison in his fine volume "Of Plymouth Plantation" (Alfred A. Knopf, 1952).

In reproducing Governor William Bradford's own observations on the founding and management of the colony, Morrison comments that there was in Bradford's possession a copy of Jean Bodin's "de Republica" which has some fairly heavy gibes at Plato and the conclusions Plato reached in his "Republic."

Most educated men of that day had read Plato's great masterpiece and it is not too wide a hazard to presume that William Bradford had read it and also that the thinking expressed therein had helped to inspire the Mayflower Compact and the resultant communal life established at Plymouth Bay in the new world, back in 1620.

Fortunately, however, Jean Bodin's work was among the books Bradford had carried with him on the Mayflower. And thus when the communal idea, the "Commonweal" so idealistically portrayed by Plato, began to come apart at the seams, Bradford had recourse to other thoughts and ideas which may have been responsible for his willingness to let the colonists alone and hence to abandon communism and trust to the concept of private ownership and initiative.

In the same footnote, Morrison quotes "The Six Books of a Commonwealth," Done into English by Richard Knolles, Book I p. 11, London, 1606.

"But he (Plato) understood not that by making all things thus common, a Commonwealth must needs perish: for nothing can be public where nothing is private. Albeit that such a Commonwealth should also be against the law of God and nature, which expressly forbids us to, desire anything that another man's is."

This is surely an appropriate time to recall the first Thanksgiving. For it came about at Plymouth Colony only after the first successful harvest. And success crowned the agricultural efforts of the settlers only after the "Commonweal" was abandoned and private ownership of land and private ownership of property was relied upon.

OUR "MISTREATMENT" OF CUBA

There is a good deal of comment going around to the effect that our country has mistreated and exploited Cuba. Even the President remarked during the recent campaign: "We refused to help Cuba because its desperate need for economic progress."

We fought to free Cuba, sacrificing many lives in the process. The brief American Administration was helpful and we have assisted Cuba in many ways since granting her full independence. We have paid a price for Cuban sugar nearly double the world price. American capital invested in Cuba has raised the standard of living in that country far above what it was in most Latin American countries where less capital from our country had gone to work for the local population.

Hankerings

By HENRY McLEMORE

Whenever I get serious about world affairs, I should include a picture of my head.

An X-ray picture. This is out of fairness to my readers.

My head has been voted Most Shallow for ten years in a row. Two years ago a prominent vacuum cleaner manufacturer, using a picture of my head as a model, brought out a new cleaner that made him and his stockholders rich.

Yet, every now and then, I feel obliged to direct my head to start thinking about world affairs. Today is one of those every-now-and-then times.

Let me be off, empty-headed as I am.

The United Nations has been asked to throw out South Africa. What good will that accomplish?

How will South Africa improve by being branded as a pariah of nations? The nature of man is to get together when scorned by his fellows. People don't sulk in a crowd; they sulk alone. And sulking never made anyone better or nicer or more understanding.

The nations that asked for South Africa's expulsion should have explained why they thought the expulsion would help South Africa, would aid that country to join the brotherhood of man.

The United Nations, as I remember its founding, had as its main idea the bringing together of nations, the providing of a meeting place where rights and wrongs could be studied by sane, tolerant and patient men.

South Africa's racial policy is nonsensical. Okay, agreed. But how is the world to gain by telling South Africa it is a leper, or a junior leper, and had better go off by itself and stay by itself?

Does any sane man think that any nation is perfect? Are the nations which demanded the expulsion perfect? Do the leaders of the countries who want to throw out South Africa see no faults in their own lands?

The United Nations is based on the family precept. The older and wiser advise and help the younger and weaker. A sick child isn't thrown out of a family and told never to return, to hustle for itself.

As shallow as my brain is, I can't help but think that the United Nations, by its feelings toward the South Africans, shows its own weakness. How much finer it would be to vote the South Africans a permanent place in the United Nations until they had seen the light, had come to recognize their policy toward non-whites was completely out of step with 1961 and the Year One, when Christ was born.

The United Nations should turn attention toward educating and guiding the South Africans instead of expelling them. Expulsion is the act of a juvenile organization, not one founded in the hope of salvaging mankind.

Thrown out from world society what will the South Africans do? I don't know, but the chances are they will grow more bitter, more truculent, and more unreasonable. What's the gain in that?

man gains away, as at the moment in China, large-scale disruption and almost universal suffering will ensue.

But in the West we are, perhaps, as far removed from practicality as our Eastern brothers. For in seeking to perpetuate law rather than men, we have overlooked the obvious fact that laws are enacted by men; that though the men may not remain in power, the laws do. And many laws are as bad as the men who enact them; yet they endure, perhaps even longer than the human life of the enactor.

In short, we are subject, in spite of our reliance upon laws, to human judgment in the passage of laws, in the amendment of laws, in the enforcement of laws. And in the end we have a government of men, buttressed by many hundreds of bad rules.

Neither the occidental nor the oriental view has helped us out of the impasses. The fact is that we both have governments made of men. The corollary of this fact is that neither in the East nor West has a system been devised which could provide a guarantee of the merit of the men who aspire to political power.

The fact is that men, whether oriental or occidental, are so created that they control their own energies and can and must manage their own affairs. Governments, the world over, deny this fact and operate in contravention of it.

Editor's Note: A reader brought in a reprint of a sermon entitled "This Freedom" by Rev. Max R. Flickinger, for which he received the Freedom Foundation Award at Valley Forge's 1960 George Washington Medal, the Foundation's highest award. His sermon was delivered on July 3, 1960 at the Unity Christ Church in Pasadena, California.

Allen - Scott Report

Nuclear Explosion by Soviet in Outer Space Verified in Evaluation Committee's Findings

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union has set off the first nuclear explosion in outer space.

An atomic warhead, equal to several million tons of TNT, was detonated at a height of "more than 250 miles" above the earth.

This unprecedented blast took place in October during the Soviet nuclear test series, but the explosion was never announced by either Russia or the U.S.

Verification of the explosion outside the earth's atmosphere has just been made by the Joint Air Force - Atomic Energy Commission evaluation committee, which is analyzing the Soviet tests.

The committee's findings, now being circulated within the Kennedy Administration, reveal that the detection of the blast was made by instruments carried aloft by a satellite launched by the Air Force shortly after the Soviet experiment took place.

The highly sensitive instruments picked up telltale radioactive debris when the satellite passed over the Novaya Zemlya testing grounds from where the nuclear warhead was launched at a top Soviet ICBM.

At the time of the October test, long-range U.S. radio tracking stations picked up the flight of the ICBM and tracked the missile until it was destroyed by the detonation of its own warhead.

The nuclear explosion was not large enough to produce the spectacular auroras that the Atomic Energy Commission forecast would occur if a 100-megaton bomb were exploded in the ionosphere.

The test is believed to be a forerunner of a Soviet try to hit the moon with a nuclear warhead in the near future.

As revealed in this column on September 14, this sensational experiment will be the next stage in the Kremlin's program to put a man on the moon by 1965—or from two to five years ahead of the U.S.

BLASTING THE MOON—Stages III and IV, which are next on the Soviet moon schedule according to information in the hands of Representative Chet Holifield, D. Calif., chairman of the Joint Senate - House Atomic Committee, are probes to study the moon's surface structure.

Stage II forecasts a rocket hitting the moon with a nuclear warhead before the end of 1961. The purpose is to make possible a spectroscopic analysis of the elements which compose the moon's surface.

Data gathered by U.S. intelligence and military agencies give Russia the capability of hitting the moon with a hydrogen bomb. On September 19, 1959, the Soviets hit the moon with a rocket, and on October 4, 1959, they sent a satellite into orbit around the moon and allegedly photographed the far side.

NOTE: Euratom, the European Common Market's nuclear energy pool, now has an interest in five projects for atom-powered ships. The projects are going ahead in France, West Germany, Italy, and the Netherlands. First to be officially confirmed by contract is an agreement between Euratom and two West German firms, for the design of a nuclear marine propulsion unit.

MAKING IT STICK — Maurice H. Klein, the National Security Agency official responsible for hiring of those two cryptographers who defected to Russia, has been "fired" from his newest position — assistant to Dr. Louis W. Tordella, Deputy NSA director.

Defense Secretary McNamara asked for and received Klein's resignation this week after Representative Francis Walter, D. Pa., chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee, supplied the Defense Department with "new information" on Klein's activities while NSA personnel director.

Until this week, Klein had successfully opposed efforts by McNamara and Admiral Lawrence Frost, head of the Security Agency, to obtain his resignation.

Klein was NSA personnel director when Bernon Mitchell and William Martin, the two NSA defectors, were hired. They are now in Moscow breaking U.S. codes for the Kremlin.

LOOKING FORWARD — The Navy's commissioning of the 86,000-ton atom-powered carrier Enterprise this week-end at Newport News, Va., will be an epochal event. The Enterprise is the biggest and costliest ($450 million) warship ever built. It has eight heavy nuclear reactors that will permit the carrier to travel 140,000 miles at 20-knots without a fuel stop. Vice Admiral Hyman Rickover, the father of the first atomic submarine, is forecasting that the Enterprise will have "as great an effect on surface navies as the Nautilus" had on undersea warfare. U.S. military intelligence discloses that the Soviets have lined up as many as 100 air and rocket bases against Finland, Norway, and Sweden. They stretch all the way from Kila Peninsula (Murmansk) to Danzig. The Estonian and Latvian islands in the Baltic sea virtually are bristled with Soviet bombers and IRBMs.

Edson in Capitol

By Peter Edson NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The American Communist Party has sent its leaders throughout the United States a secret "National Plan of Work" for the "final period" of 1961.

The plan is based on "political estimates" made by Gus Hall, the party's strong man. It was adopted by the American Communist party's national executive committee.

The plan calls for concentrating the Red efforts in five key states.

"We designate for concentration Pennsylvania, Michigan, Ohio, Illinois and California," the plan says. "We shall select Harlem in New York and the South Side in Chicago for major concentration. A separate plan should be prepared for the South."

Communist District leaders throughout the United States have been told to pinpoint key target areas in their districts. They are told that these key targets are to be "the main industries" and the "Negro communities" in their districts.

In these target areas, the Communist henchmen are told, they are to give their first attention to "reaching Negro workers and youth" and told to "single out the reaching of women."

"We must," says the plan, (make) our party the party of the workers, the party of the Negro people."

Key objective of the National Plan of Work for late-1961 is the developing of united fronts with "left wing" and "progressive forces" in the "labor, youth and Negro people's movements."

"Mastery of the theory and practice of the united front policy is a key task before the whole party — before every organization, every member," says the plan.

Communists are to give "utmost attention" toward building these united fronts and "creating closest ties between Communist and non-Communist on all levels."

Communist District leaders are told that they are to see that "every" Communist unit and "every comrade" in their district must discover or case those issues "which are of concern" to the labor unions, the mass organizations and other community groups in their neighborhoods. They are to use those issues as a means of developing these "united fronts."

The plan goes into detail on the organization of Communist clubs: They shall meet twice monthly. They shall have three-man or more executive committees.

Youth membership is to be increased 50 per cent. Young people are to be made officers in senior clubs.

The plan requires a step-up in ideological education. "The World Marxist Review" and "Public Affairs and Foundations of Marxism - Leninism" will be used as texts.

"The Organization Bureau shall be responsible for regular check-up of the plan and report to the National Board."

Reports are, however, that the Supreme Court's decision that Communists must register has put a severe crimp in the Communist party's program for carrying out this "National Plan of Work."

The Almanac

By United Press International

Today is Thursday, Nov. 23, the 327th day of the year with 38 more to follow in 1961. This is Thanksgiving Day.

The moon is approaching its last quarter.

The morning star is Venus. The evening stars are Jupiter and Saturn.

On this day in history: In 1876, representatives of three Eastern colleges formed the first intercollegiate football association.

In 1903, the Italian tenor, Enrico Caruso, made his American debut at the Metropolitan Opera in New York City.

In 1930, Henry Ford, an ardent supporter of the prohibition movement, refused to permit his English workmen to drink, even in their homes.

In 1945, all food rationing in the U.S. came to an end with the exception of sugar.

In 1954, the Chinese Communists said 11 U.S. airmen arrested during the Korean War and two civilians had been convicted of espionage.

A thought for the day: American humorist Will Rogers said: "Everything is funny as long as it is happening to somebody else."

Bid For A Smile

The manager of a travel agency says he can always tell what the nationality of a man is by the way he takes off on a vacation. If he starts out with his wife and a dozen kids, he's Italian. If he goes by himself, with a golf outfit hanging from his shoulder, he's a Scotchman—if he has with him a fellow to whom he is trying to sell something, he's a 100 per cent American.

Songs And Legend Hail Story Of The Wise Men

"Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the King, behold, there came wise men from the East to Jerusalem, saying 'Where is He that is born King of the Jews?' For we have seen His star in the East, and are come to worship him."

This vivid account of the journey of the Three Wise Men who came to offer gifts to the Christ Child, as recorded by St. Matthew, is a beloved part of the Christmas story that is recalled each year in song and tableau. Over the centuries, these three have come to be known as Melchior, Gaspar and Balthazar. Melchior means "king of light," Gaspar or stands for the "white one;" and Balthazar, "the lord of treasures."

The gifts they brought with them were gold, which was the emblem of royalty; frankincense, in recognition of Jesus' divinity; and myrrh, a prophetic allusion to the sufferings and death that awaited him.

Medieval tradition named the three travelers the Three Kings of Cologne, and the Cathedral of Cologne claims to contain their relics.

Among the ancient Medes and Persians, the Magi, as they are often called, were considered members of a priestly caste, possessing great occult powers. They were believed to have come from the kingdom of Tarsus, Arabia, and Ethiopia.

Whatever their origin, even to this day Christmas would not be complete without the colorful pageantry of the Three Wise Men.

Bright Star Of Bible Based On Actual Data

Ever since the star of Bethlehem led the Three Wise Men to where the Infant Jesus lay, over 1900 years ago, scholars and laymen alike have speculated on the nature of that wonderful star.

Today astronomers believe that what the Magi saw was not actually a star, but a conjunction, or close passing, of the planets, Jupiter and Saturn.

Such a conjunction occurred in the year 7 B.C. This is also the year that many scholars have come to believe was the true date of the birth of Christ, ever since ancient tablets unearthed in 1923 near Ankara, Turkey, revealed that in the reign of Caesar Augustus there were three major tax collections.

The first was in 28 B.C., the second in 7 B.C., and the third in 14 A.D. Since it probably took about a year or so for the tax decree to reach Galilee in those days of slow travel, it is possible that Jesus was born a year after the decree went out. This date would coincide with that of the planet's conjunction.

The fact that the "star" was not really a star at all, would explain the fact that no one else but the Magi took notice of it. Without a doubt, they were Persian astronomers who would be aware of such phenomenon occurring and would attach mystical significance to it.

Gas Clock To 'Strike' Hour At World's Fair

NEW YORK — A gas clock which "strikes" the hours with bursts of flame will top the gas industry's building at the 1962 Seattle World's Fair, according to newly approved plans.

The clock will be in a tower rising from the center of the circular building. From the tower will radiate 12 big spokes, representing the hours of the day.

Time will be indicated by the number of spokes which are lit. The hours will be "struck" by bursts of flame from a central column rising higher than the other spokes.

"This is a second spectacular use of natural gas at the fair," according to William P. Woods, president of Century 21 Gas Exhibit, Inc., which is in charge of the gas industry's exhibit.

"It complements the 40-foot natural gas torch which will top the Space Needle as the symbol of Century 21," said Mr. Woods, who is also president of the Washington Natural Gas Co. of Seattle.

One feature of the exhibit which should be welcomed by parents is a "tot lot" which will be located at the main entrance, and equipped with playground equipment. Seats will also be available for weary adults.

Plans for the gas industry's $500,000 exhibit at the Century 21 Exposition were approved at a recent meeting of the board of Gas Exhibit, Inc., and a construction contract has been awarded. The circular structure will be built largely of materials that are processed with natural gas, including vinyl for the roof, brick wall panes, paint, cement, glass, steel, ceramics and plywood.

The roof of the building will have 12 radial trusses, and an upper surface of plywood re-coated with white vinyl plastic, the same cooing material used in "mothproofing" warships. The seven-foot exterior walls will be grey-beige glazed brick. Above this will be a band of glass which will make the roof appear to "float."

The building will have three entrances with ramp approaches. A series of displays will tell the story of natural gas from producing wells to present day use — and even future applications. The tower, from which the gas clock will radiate, will contain one unit to heat, cool and air condition the building with natural gas. A gas turbine model will also be located in this area to demonstrate how in the near future a small power plant, operating on natural gas, will supply all fuel and power services, including electricity.

The buildings and displays are being designed and will be constructed under the supervision of Leonard Rennie, president of Design and Production, Inc., Alexandria, Va.

In addition to Woods, members of the Gas Exhibit board who attended the meeting at which plans for the building received approval were:

Alan R. Bailey, executive vice president, Southern Counties Gas Co., Los Angeles; J. Wilson Gaw, board secretary; C. H. Gueffroy, president, Northwest Natural Gas Co., Portland, Ore.; O. Marshall Jones, president, Cascade Natural Gas Corp., Seattle; J. E. Kern, director of manufacturing services, Pacific Coast Gas Association; H. G. Laub, president, Southwest Gas Corp., Las Vegas; William T. Nightingale, president, Mountain Fuel Supply Co., Salt Lake City; B. T. Poor, executive vice president, Washington Natural Gas Co., Seattle; George W. Stevenson, vice president of West Coast Operations, American Meter Co., and Charles M. Sturkey of Seattle.

Also attending were B. Marshall Willis, director of public relations and advertising, El Paso Natural Gas Co., El Paso, Texas, and Lee Robey, director of research, American Gas Association.
