

FLOOD OF WOOD—Like so many other things in American life, old-fashioned log drives are becoming a thing of the past, victims of truck and rail transportation. Only in remote areas of Maine and Idaho do loggers continue the practice dating back to Colonial days. Scene above shows a harvest of pulp wood logs bound for a mill in Maine. The logs are held at a standstill behind a log boom for storage. At the right time, the river boss will give the signal and the logs will be freed to continue down the river to the mill where they will be made into paper.

Most Americans Don't Need Help To Get Rid Of Their Cash Assets

NEW YORK (UPI)—From the past fortnight's news it could appear that the stock market could be used to lose money as well as to make it, but a survey discloses that many Americans today don't need any help in shedding cash.

Their money disappears at home, at the office, on the road, at work and at play before it's spent. Someone may help it disappear; fire, flood, mice may do away with it.

But while the paper values of losses or gains in the stock market are figured usually in billions in a single day's trading, cash losses according to the survey come to about $700,000,000 a year; money that disappears before the owners have time to spend it or put it to work.

The survey was made at the request of the American Express Co. by the Gallup organization in association with Opinion Research Corp.

"In most instances," it said, perhaps unnecessarily, "carelessness is a factor... it can be said that virtually every person who handles money is subject to some loss at some time or other."

The findings did not concern themselves with children; the survey was conducted among adults, and it reported that one out of 11 adult Americans, or 9 per cent of the population of 21 years or over, lost a sum of cash during the year—average, $75. Nearly 1,250,000 persons lost $300 or more.

"College educated men and women seem most loss-prone," the researchers found. "More than one out of every six had a loss during the year." Their losses were more than twice as frequent as those among persons educated only in grammar schools, and a little less than twice those with high school educations.

The interviews showed that persons who reported losing cash showed there are about as many ways to lose it as there are to carry or hide it.

Some of the answers:

"I was working on a bulldozer and my pocketbook fell out of my pocket."

"Lost $1,700 in a fire in a house."

"Wednesday before Christmas of '60 my billfold containing $530 disappeared in Newport, Vermont, store while I was buying groceries."

"I pulled out a diaper to wipe the baby's nose and evidently pulled money out which was loose in purse."

A Degree For Bob Hope

By DICK WEST

United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI)—At its 163rd commencement exercise Monday, Georgetown University bestowed a "litterarum humaniorum doctorem, honoris causa" on a scholarly chap identified as Leslie Towns.

But since the yellow tassel dangling from his black academic cap didn't hide his ski-slide nose, the audience was able to recognize him as Bob Hope.

Towns was the name that Hope signed to his English themes back yonder when he was struggling to finish high school. He didn't make it, so he enrolled in dancing school instead.

He wasn't a very good dancer, either, but that didn't stop him from reaching the top in the academic world. At the tender age of 49, which he must have reached about the time he quit high school, he already has received two honorary degrees.

The one presented to him by Georgetown U. was in recognition of his ability to make people laugh which isn't taught in schools.

The citation inscribed on his scroll as an honorary doctor of humane letter noted that he had "consistently lent his considerable talents to innumerable humanitarian causes for the relief of the needy and the assistance of the afflicted."

The citation was written in Latin, and Hope said "I can't wait until I get home and have my son read it to me."

This was a reference to Anthony Hope 22, who was graduated with honors as a bachelor of arts at the same ceremony.

"I'm very proud of Tony," Hope said. "He can write home for money in five languages."

As for himself, Hope acknowledged that he was a bit unaccustomed to the scholarly environment.

"I feel as out of place as President Kennedy at a meeting of the American Medical Association," he said.

In fact, Hope said he was surprised to learn that Georgetown U. was located in Washington. He said he had the impression "that Harvard was the nearest school."

The only way he could account for his being honored with an honorary degree was that the Catholic educators who operate the university "specialize in miracles."

He said his advice to the young graduates about to go out into the world was "don't go." He said he "went out last week, took a look at the stock market and came right back."

Steel stock dropped so low that "even President Kennedy bought some," he said.

I would have thought that Hope's remarks to the graduates were impromptu except that before the ceremony he disclosed that he had a script hidden under his black robe.

I suspect that he had a gag writer hidden under there, too.

MYSTERY SOLVED

CHICAGO (UPI)—Police Tuesday solved the mystery of how a six-foot king snake got into Dr. William J. Monilaw's seventh-floor apartment.

They found an empty snake cage in the eighth-floor apartment of a vacationing tenant, who neighbors said kept a "queer assortment" of pets.

TRADE OR FADE?—While U.S. imports of raw materials have declined overall during the past ten years, they still account for a large percentage of all imports (42 per cent in 1961). Imports of crude and semimanufactured goods in 1953 and 1960 are compared in chart above. The U.S. imports all of its natural rubber, diamonds and 99.9 per cent of its tin. Percentages on other important items are also shown. Petroleum imports had the highest dollar value of $1.5 billion—and made up 20 per cent of 1960 supply.

FACE OF THE ENEMY—Accused of being a spy for the Communist Viet Cong guerrillas, a 16-year-old Vietnamese girl is taunted by soldiers after being captured in a battle near the South Vietnamese village of Truong Hoa, 100 miles southwest of Saigon. She was later questioned by an officer.

Graham Urges Man Return To
The Scriptures

CHICAGO (UPI) — Evangelist Billy Graham urged mankind Wednesday night to halt its rejection of the Scriptures because it is either "back to the Bible or back to the jungle."

In holding his longest service since his crusade here, the evangelist told a crowd estimated at 20,000 as he held out a Bible. "I used to say this was the world's best seller. Up to a few years ago it was. Now the writings of Lenin are the world's best seller."

Continuously holding up his leather-bound Bible for all to see, Graham warned that the world would experience anarchy and savagery such as it has never known if the Bible were allowed to be defiled by its critics.

"There is in America," he said, "a movement designed to take away our traditional concept of God, to take the Bible out of our national life. If this movement succeeds, then 'In God We Trust' will be removed from our coins, our future presidents will be sworn with their hands upon the Constitution and chaplains will disappear from the Congress and armed forces."

Graham invited the audience at the McCormick Place Convention Hall to make "decisions for Christ." About 251 persons answered his plea.

The service marked the half way point of Graham's three-week crusade that ends with an afternoon rally in Soldier Field.

Sign Economic Pact

CAIRO (UPI) — The United Arab Republic, Syria, Jordan, Kuwait and Morocco signed an economic unity agreement Wednesday designed eventually to establish an Arab common market.

The agreement provides for the setting up of a joint economic council which will work to lift tariff barriers, allow freedom of work movement and capital investment, and free use of harbor facilities.

Spires Rites
Are Held On Wednesday

Rites for Mrs. Florence Belle Grear Spires, former Pampa resident, were held at 10 a.m. Wednesday in Garden Grove, Calif.

Mrs. Spires, born June 10, 1884, in Henrietta, Tex., died Sunday in Los Angeles, Calif., where she had been visiting with her son, Ernest.

Interment will be in Portales, N.M., at 2 p.m. Friday. Survivors are her husband, Lester C.; two sons, George of Lovington, Ernest of Los Angeles; a daughter, Mrs. Mary Brown of Albuquerque, N.M.; six grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Spires spent most of her girlhood in Central Texas. At the age of 14, she became a member of the Methodist Church in Santa Anna.

On Jan. 22, 1905, she was married to Lester C. Spires in Fisher County. From 1914 to 1942, Mr. and Mrs. Spires lived in Roosevelt County, where they raised their family. Pampa had been their home for the past 20 years.

Until recently, they've made their home with their daughter in Albuquerque.

Mrs. Spires was preceded in death by three children: two in infancy and a son, Clyde, in 1947.

Interment was to be held in the Alameda Cemetery under the direction of Lamb Funeral Home.

No Raise For Lone Star's
Steel Crew

DALLAS (UPI) — Lone Star Steel Co. told its 3,000 unionized workers Wednesday that they cannot have the economic benefits that the big steel companies granted their employes. This move immediately drew fire from the United Steel Workers' of America.

Lone Star President E. B. Gorman said the workers have had 14 raises since 1948, bringing the average wage from $1.05 to $3.18 an hour. During the same time, he said, the company's stockholders have "never been paid a penny for the use of their money."

Germany announced the decision in a letter to Martin Burns of Houston, district director, of the steelworkers union.

In the letter, he took a swipe at the Kennedy administration, which blocked an effort by steel companies to raise prices $4 per ton.

"Profit should not be an ugly word, although recent events would seem to indicate that some people in high places so regard it," Germany said. "We still believe in profit."

Burns said he was "very disappointed."

"They have done this before and we're always disappointed when they refuse to go along with what everyone else gets."

Asked what action he thought the union might take, Burns said, "that's all I have to say at this time." The union represents about 3,000 of the 4,500 employees of Lone Star Steel. Under a four-year contract, the union may not negotiate and that it wants to negotiate and 60 days after that can strike.

Liberals Expect
New Weapon On Tax Reform Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate liberals today felt that the House had given them a new weapon to help force action on President Kennedy's controversial tax reform bill.

The weapon was a $4 billion tax - extension bill the House passed Wednesday. It would extend for another year the excise taxes on liquor, beer, cigarettes and telephone calls and maintain the Korean War corporate tax levy of 52 per cent.

It was learned that some Democratic members of the Senate Finance Committee were considering using the House measure to pry the tax reform bill out of committee.

Republicans, on the other hand, urged the administration to set aside the reform bill until next year when the administration plans to ask for a general overhaul of the tax structure, with cuts.

President Kennedy was expected to announce at his news conference this afternoon his views on the GOP proposal, and whether he will ask Congress for an immediate tax cut.

Although Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon said three days ago that tax cuts would be proposed for next year—not now — rumors have been rife that the administration would urge an immediate reduction to spur the economy.

The bill the house passed would keep the excise taxes going beyond their June 30 deadline. In addition, it would repeal the 10 per cent tax on bus, rail and water travel and cut the tax on air travel from 10 to 5 per cent, effective Jan. 1.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Senate Joint Resolution No. 12 is a proposal to amend the Constitution to break the backs of the political pressure groups which unfairly dominate the selection of presidential nominees and their election.

The proposed amendment, notably, would diminish the political muscle of the dynamic left wing, the political influence in presidential elections of big labor, of racial groups and of big cities in the big industrial states.

S. J. Res. No. 12, therefore, invites the support of conservative-minded Americans, regardless of party. The resolution was sponsored by Sens. Karl L. Mundt, R-S.D., Strom Thurmond, D-S.C., Thurston B. Morton, R-Ky., Hiram L. Fong, R-Hawaii, Roman L. Hruska, R-Neb., Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and John L. McClellan, D-N.J.

The resolution has been approved by a subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee. The purpose is to establish the election of presidential electors as congressional delegations are elected: two from each state at large, as U. S. senators are elected; the others to be elected each from a congressional district as members of the House are elected.

The present system (the general ticket system) is that all electors are elected at large. This is deemed by sponsors of the resolution to be unfair.

A pamphlet of the American Good Government Society of Washington, D. C., seeks to explain why the present system is unfair, in this way:

The general ticket system has given the large pivotal states with big blocs of electoral votes a practical control over the nomination and election of presidential candidates. This system gives to organized pressure groups within a single big city the voting power to determine the outcome of the election in that state when the major party strength is closely divided.

The 1960 popular vote for major-party electoral states in New York State was Republicans 3,446,419 and Democrats 3,423,900, giving a Republican plurality of 22,519. The Liberal party electoral slate, however, polled 406,176 votes. Liberal and Democratic elector slates were identical. The Liberal vote combined with the Democratic vote elected all of the Liberal-Democratic slate and defeated all of the Republicans. More than 70 per cent of the Liberal vote was cast in New York City.

Small states and small cities suffer in such a situation. In fact, each voter under the general ticket system has as many votes in a presidential election as his state has electors. In New York State, each voter had 45 votes in the 1960 presidential election.

Returns in California and Pennsylvania reflected the distortion of the 1960 election. Each state had two U. S. senators and 30 representatives. Republican Nixon won California, Democrat Kennedy won Pennsylvania. But Democrats elected 18 representatives in California; Republicans elected 16 in Pennsylvania. Yet, neither minority party could elect a single elector in either state.

That is why the present general ticket system is deemed to be unfair.

Wall Street In Review

NEW YORK (UPI)—Alexander Hamilton Institute says general purchases of common stock at this time would be most unwise.

However, it adds that "moderate commitments" in good issues which have been forced down to a level where attractive yields are available is recommended.

Oil Statistics Co., Inc. says over the near term it would appear that the best buying opportunities in the oil group might be in the big companies that have been unduly depressed. It says it will take longer for the smaller companies to come back.

E. F. Hutton & Co.'s market outlook for June says it now seems evident that, regardless of the general direction the market will take for the balance of 1962, more emphasis is going to be placed on fundamentals rather than technical considerations and unsubstantiated hopes for the future. Under such conditions, it says it is well to look now for these better values which might have been neglected in the heyday of the special situations and glamor issues.

The near term development of the market is difficult to predict due to the emotional and violent fluctuations of last week, says Oppenheimer, Neu & Co. It says many stock traders have been badly burned and may avoid the market from here on; on the other hand, it adds, the publicity the market has had recently "may very well attract a new crop of investors."

Still Plenty Of Room In Colleges

EDITOR'S NOTE —A high number of this month's crop of high school graduates faces a common problem — how to go to college. United Press International bureaus through the nation were asked what problems high school graduates face in obtaining entrance to a university or college. This is their report.

By DAVID SMOTHERS

There's still plenty of room in the nation's colleges for the high school senior who wants a higher education.

Even the teenager who has a sprinkling of C's — or even a few D's — on his report card can find a college berth.

But the boy or girl who let the marks slip a little in favor of football or Saturday night dances could find the going rough, particularly in the East.

So could the youth whose family simply doesn't have the money to finance a college education without the assistance of a scholarship.

This was the consensus of UPI reporters who talked to high school counselors and college and university registration offices in key cities and states just before high school graduation time this month.

The reporters came up with these tips for college-minded teenagers:

—If you want to go to a "prestige college" your marks had better be high and you should act quickly. The freshman quotas in such schools fill up quickly.

—It is easiest to start out on a college education in the West, a little more difficult in the Middle West, and hardest in the East.

—There are agencies which can help place a high school graduate in a good college, even though the school may be located some distance from home.

—There are a good number of schools which base their acceptance of a new student on their belief in what he is capable of, not merely on what his high school record says.

—Don't be ashamed of going to a second choice college. You might wind up better off.

SKELLYTOWN (Sp.) — Officers for the 1962-63 year for the Skellytown Lion's club will be installed at the last regular meeting night in June.

New officers are F. C. Horner, president; Creed Smith, first vice-president; Melvin Norris, second vice-president; Bill Price, third vice-president; Kenneth Crawford treasurer; L. E. Jordan, secretary; L. K. Guerin, tail-waiter; E. A. McCreary, lion-tamer.

Board members to be installed are Everett Huffines, Lee Thomas, J. C. Jarvis and Neal McBroom. E. A. McCreary is the out-going president.

JOB FOR SLIDE RULE

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The U.S. Post Office Department advised business firms Tuesday that "envelopes having a ratio of width (height) to length of less than 1 to 1.414 (1 to the square root of 2) are not recommended."

In plain language it said the envelopes of standard sizes are more easily and quickly handled through the mail.

INTERNATIONAL FLAVOR—The 19th annual Mid-South Spelling Bee at Memphis was enhanced by the presence of these four young Chinese entrants among the contestants from 68 counties in five states. The bee was sponsored by The Memphis Press-Scimitar. Shown enjoying cold drinks (instead of the traditional cup of tea) are, from left: Lena Lum, Tunica County, Miss.; Sonya Chu, St. Francis County, Ark.; Jean Jew, Leflore County, Miss., who took second place in the contest; and Lillian Moy, DeSoto County, Miss. The bee was won by 13-year-old Mark Keating of Panola County, Miss. He will represent the Mid-South in the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C., June 6.

Robert Stack Puts Shoulder Holster Aside

By JOSEPH FINNIGAN
UPI Hollywood Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Robert Stack has put aside his shoulder holster, parked his roaring 20s style automobile and taken a movie role for the first time since becoming one of television's "Untouchables" three years ago.

"I've been off the screen for three years and that is one reason I wanted to get back," said Bob in a dressing room off "The Caretakers" movie set.

Stack, who plays federal agent Eliot Ness running down gangsters in "Untouchables," portrays a mental hospital psychiatrist in "Caretakers."

It was the first day before cameras when Bob talked about his movie comeback, and he admitted that scenes involving a young mental patient were emotionally difficult.

"This is one time I can say it's a picture that should be made," he said. "I think so primarily because it's a progressive idea, the idea that mental disturbance is an illness and group therapy treatment."

Stack's movie role is a departure from the character of Ness, a calculating, legally rigid man defending society against an unscrupulous underworld.

"It's all just the opposite of Ness," Stack explained. "The psychiatrist is the central figure in a sanitarium for women. This is different for me, scenes of poignancy with women."

Stack recently completed his third year on "Untouchables." There was talk of the show going off but Stack signed for another season and next season's production gets underway in July.

"We'll approach it like a new show," said Stack of "Untouchables'" fourth season. "Our approach is going to be kind of different and we'll shake up the whole show."

"The big danger is to fall into a kind of formula, non-dimensional pattern."

Not only will the show be changed, with more emphasis on what Stack describes as "the period and living habits of the people," but Ness himself will "open up."

"By focusing on the heavies, Ness has become a kind of judge advocate general," he explained. "Ness is made to appear godlike. It's gotten so Ness is a guy on a white horse. But he and his people were not only human, they were in jeopardy."

Whatever changes "Untouchables" undergoes in the fall, they won't be too radical.

"You can't go too far or the show goes off the air," Stack concluded.

More Mysteries As Marshall's Jury Recesses

By WILLIAM CLAYTON
United Press International
FRANKLIN, Tex. (UPI) — A state grand jury trying to decide if Henry H. Marshall was murdered or committed suicide was in recess today until June 14 with mystery piling upon mystery and a rift between the Texas Rangers and the FBI.

Marshall, an agricultural stabilization and conservation service official, was the first farm agent to investigate Billie Sol Estes. He was found shot five times June 3, 1961.

Texas Ranger Capt. Clint Peoples, apparently nettled, announced Wednesday that FBI agents had found Marshall's hat and rushed off to Washington with it. Presumably, the FBI wanted to see if a hole in the brim was caused by a bullet.

"If we (the Texas Rangers) had gotten hold of the hat, we would have the information on it back by now from (Department of Public Safety laboratories) in Austin," Peoples said.

"As it is now, I have no information on the condition of the hat. We would have liked to have gotten the hat so we could have made the information available to the grand jury."

The FBI got the hat from L.M. Owens of Franklin, Marshall's brother-in-law. Owens was one of the persons who found Marshall's body on a farm near Franklin June 3, 1961. There has been no report of a bullet wound in Marshall's head.

The grand jury emphasized it was not terminating the investigation. This recess "is taken to permit continued investigation by all law enforcement agencies and to permit time to correlate all known facts that have come before this body," the jury foreman, Goree Matthews, said.

The grand jury questioned a deputy sheriff and a service station operator Wednesday.

Nolan Griffin of Hearne, Tex., told reporters before he testified that a stranger asked him how to find the Marshall place the day Marshall died.

Griffin said the stranger returned hours later and told him he had directed him to the wrong Marshall place. The stranger said something about a deer hunting lease.

Dist. Atty. Bryan Russ said Wednesday he believes the jury is about ready to stop questioning witnesses and start deliberating.

Three Rescued As Grain Shifts

CORPUS CHRISTI (UPI) — Three grain elevator workers were buried up to their heads Wednesday when a shipment of milo maize shifted. Rescue workers freed them in three hours.

There were five workers in the tank, but two of them were buried only up to their knees. They freed themselves quickly and spread the alarm.

The two workers, Myron Cooper and Virgil Dillard joined a group of about 20 rescue workers in shoring up the grain to free the other three trapped men.

Dust from the grain hampered rescue operations, and air was piped into the elevator. Photographers were not allowed to take pictures with flash equipment because of the highly explosive nature of the dust.

The trapped men, Alexander J. Caldwell, Herman Timan and Glen Atchley, were rescued separately.

Two were hospitalized. Herman Piennan, 25, of Corpus Christi, the last person to be freed, had a foot injury. Glen Atchley of Portland, Tex., was treated for inhaling grain dust and was dismissed.

The other trapped man, Alexander J. Caldwell, was released after examination. The men were employed by the Corpus Christi Public Elevators.

Fruit Favorites Frozen For After Frost

STRAWBERRIES IN THE SNOW: There is nothing quite as refreshing as the taste of your favorite berries in the middle of winter. The pleasure can be yours if you take a little time to freeze some of this season's best fruits.

In five or six months, when yearning for the glorious fruits you enjoy now at the peak of freshness, surprise the family. Step to the freezer and bring out blushing peaches, juicy melon balls or bright ripe berries. With only a little preparation now, any of your favorites can be there awaiting enjoyment long after the first frost.

Perhaps you have always intended to freeze some of summer's best fruits, but just haven't stopped to try it before. You'll find it's one of the easiest of kitchen activities. These suggestions from Imperial Sugar Company will be helpful.

Although most fruits can be freezing any product helps retain quality.

Some fruits, such as peaches, apricots, and pears tend to discolor when cut or peeled. It is best to prepare enough fruit for only a few containers at a time. To guard against discoloration, use one of the following methods:

Dissolve 1/4 teaspoon powdered or crystalline ascorbic acid in 2 cups of cold syrup just before pouring over fruit. If fruit is packed in dry sugar, dissolve 1/4 teaspoon powdered or crystalline ascorbic acid in 1/4 cup cold water for each quart of fruit and sprinkle solution over fruit just before adding sugar. Use same proportion for unsweetened packs.

Use this guide in freezing the fruits of your choice.

STRAWBERRIES — Wash and remove caps. Leave whole or slice into shallow dish and sprinkle with Imperial Granulated Sugar, using 1/4 cup to every 4 cups of strawberries. Turn berries over until sugar is dissolved and juice forms. Pack in containers, placing small piece of crumpled parchment paper on top of berries and pressing them down into juice.

PINEAPPLE — Choose firm, ripe pineapple with full flavor and aroma. Pare and remove core and eyes. Slice, dice or cut the pineapple into sticks or cubes. Pack tightly into containers and cover with 30-percent syrup.

PEACHES — Select mature peaches that are firm-ripe. Wash, pit, peel and slice into containers. Treat to prevent discoloration (see methods above) and cover with 40-percent syrup. Or, use dry sugar pack — 1 cup Imperial Granulated Sugar to each 3 cups of fruit.

PEARS — Select pears which are well ripened, firm but not hard. Wash, peel, cut in halves or quarters and remove cores. Heat in boiling 40-percent syrup for one to two minutes. Drain and cool. Pack and cover with cold 40-percent syrup, dissolving 1/4 teaspoon crystalline ascorbic acid in each quart of cold syrup used.

MELONS (Cantaloupe, watermelon, honeydew, Persian) — Select firm-fleshed, well-colored ripe melons. Remove seeds and peel. Cut into slices, balls or cubes. Pack into containers and cover with cold 30-percent syrup.

APRICOTS — Select firm, ripe, uniformly yellow apricots. Wash, halve and pit. Peel and slice, if desired. (To keep skins of unpeeled apricots from toughening during freezing, heat apricots in boiling water for 30 seconds, then cool in cold water and drain.) Pack and cover with 40-percent syrup to which 1/4 teaspoon crystalline ascorbic acid has been added to each quart.

To pack apricots in sugar, treat for darkening as in the usual dry sugar pack method. Then mix 1/2 cup Imperial Granulated Sugar with each quart of apricots. Stir until sugar is dissolved. Pack apricots into containers and press down until fruit is covered with juice.

GRAPES — Select firm-ripe grapes with tender skins. Wash and stem. Leave seedless grapes whole. Cut grapes with seeds in half and remove seeds. Pack into containers and cover with cold 40-percent syrup.

Proper packaging of fruit is essential to preserve texture, flavor, color, food value and to prevent drying or evaporation. Use moisture- and vapor-proof or resistant materials such as cellophane bags, heavily waxed cartons, tin cans, glass freezer jars, plastic cartons, aluminum cartons, aluminum foil, cellophane, polyfilm, polyethylene, and laminated freezer paper.

Pack foods tightly to cut down on amount of air in the packages. Keep sealing edges free from moisture or food so that a good closure can be made. Then seal carefully and date each package. Freeze at 0 degrees F. or below. Most fruits maintain high quality for 8 to 12 months of 0 degrees F. or below.

Roast Beef, Fresh Corn, Watermelon Perfect Fathers' Day Outdoor Menu

By GAYNOR MADDOX
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

It's hard to think of an outdoor grill menu more perfect for Father's Day — or any day — than beef, corn and watermelon.

SPICY BEEF KABOBS
(Yield: 20 kabobs)

2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon chili powder
1/2 teaspoon ground thyme
1/2 teaspoon oregano leaves
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
1/2 teaspoon garlic salt
1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper
1 bay leaf, crumbled
2 tablespoons instant minced onion

3 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1 tablespoon cider vinegar
1/2 cup salad oil

2 pounds boneless sirloin beef
Combine seasonings with lemon juice, vinegar and salad oil. Cut beef into 1 1/2-inch cubes. Add to marinade. Let marinate at room temperature 4 to 5 hours or overnight in refrigerator. String meat on skewers. Broil over a charcoal fire or in an oven broiler 15 to 20 minutes turning skewers frequently to brown on all sides. Serve between soft frankfurter rolls.

ROASTED CORN IN HUSK
(Allow 2 ears per person)

Loosen husk on ears of fresh corn only enough to remove silks. Pull husks back in place and tie in place with a strip of the shuck. Place over grill and cook 20 to 25 minutes, turning to cook uniformly. If desired, cook corn by this method in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.). The baking time is the same as for barbecue grill.

MOUTH-WATERING combination for outdoor grill menu is beef kabob, sweet corn roasted in the husk and watermelon.

Peach Buttermilk Ice Cream Peach Of Treat For Sunny June Afternoon

There's fun in store for the whole family when you make Homemade Peach Buttermilk Ice Cream. It's a wonderful family pastime for a sunny June afternoon. Dad and the boys in the family can locate the crushed ice and rock salt and set up the ice cream freezer while you and the girls prepare the delicious ice cream mixture. If you use a hand freezer everyone will want to give it a few turns.

Making homemade ice cream is an old American custom that is now being revived, thanks to the growing popularity of ice cream freezers and do-it-together family projects.

You'll find this recipe for Homemade Peach Buttermilk Ice Cream will become your favorite. The addition of buttermilk gives it a truly unusual, deliciously different flavor that you've never before enjoyed in ice cream.

PEACH BUTTERMILK ICE CREAM
Yield: 2 quarts

Ice cream freezer, 4 1/2 quart
1 tablespoon (1 envelope) unflavored gelatin
1 cup sugar
2 cups buttermilk
2 egg yolks, beaten
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 pints whipping cream
1 tablespoon vanilla
2 cups diced freestone peaches (1-lb. 4-oz. can, or fresh)
Crushed ice
Rock salt

Mix gelatin and sugar in saucepan; stir in buttermilk. Simmer over low heat, stirring slowly until gelatin is dissolved. Gradually add hot buttermilk mixture to eggs, stirring constantly. Blend in salt, whipping cream and vanilla. Chill thoroughly. Proceed with freezing, according to manufacturer's directions. Add peaches after the freezing process and before hardening, mixing just enough to blend well.

Sauce Enlivens Turkey's Flavor

Since outdoor cooking has become the great American pastime during the summer months, Barbecued Turkey is a "natural" with a sauce to enliven its flavor.

BARBECUED TURKEY
8 to 8 1/2 lb. ready-to-cook turkey
1/2 cup salad oil
1/4 cup lemon juice
2 tablespoons wine vinegar
1 teaspoon Kitchen Bouquet
1 teaspoon onion salt
1/2 teaspoon thyme
1 clove garlic, minced

Truss turkey using strong white cord or "butcher's" twine to make a well-balanced, compact roast. Tie wings and drumsticks tightly to prevent striking coals while roasting on spit. Mount bird in center spit, tying securely to spit at both ends if necessary. Combine other ingredients and brush turkey generously with sauce. Brush bird frequently with sauce while roasting. Roast over moderate heat for 2 hours or until meat thermometer inserted into thickest part of thigh registers 190 degrees. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Strawberries Are Rich In Vitamins

By GAYNOR MADDOX
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Q — Do strawberries have any important food value?

A — Yes. They are a rich source of Vitamin C, like oranges and grapefruit. They contain other vitamins and minerals, too.

Q — What is the best way to keep strawberries in good condition?

A — Give them the gentle treatment. When you get them home, remove soft and spoiled berries. Store the others in a shallow storage tray in refrigerator. DO NOT WASH. Just before serving, wash berries without removing caps. Wash gently and quickly in cold water. After they are clean and nearly dry, then remove caps.

Food Sense □ Not Nonsense

Bring on the Tape

To a boy, there's no good way to measure how big a piece of cake should be. But nutrition scientists, striving to divide their cake — what America eats — have a strong measure in research. In the face of growing evidence that too much fat in the diet may bring on heart disease, they are using research to decide how large a portion of food's calories should come from each of the calorie-carrying nutrients: Fat, carbohydrate, protein. Recent U.S. Department of Agriculture research points to this conclusion: Carbohydrate — if in the form of starch — deserves a bigger share of the cake than was thought before.

Scientists have learned, through animal studies, that the kind of carbohydrate in food markedly affects the way our bodies handle fat. Each kind affects differently the amount of a fatty substance in the blood, called cholesterol, which is implicated in heart disease. Substituting the starch kind of carbohydrate — in bread, cereals, potatoes — for the simple carbohydrate — of table sugar and the sugar of milk — causes a drop in the amount of cholesterol in the blood. On the other hand, adding a sugar to the diet raises the amount of cholesterol in the blood.

To explain what this research means in terms of coronary heart disease, U.S. Department of Agriculture nutritionists are looking suspiciously at the way America's food habits have changed in the last 50 years. At the marked decrease in our consumption of cereal foods and potatoes... at the marked increase in our consumption of sugar and fat.

The final answer on how to divide the food America eats will come with research on humans now underway.

Jiggs Would Like This Corned Beef

Remember "Jiggs" in the comic strip "Bringing Up Father" and his devotion to Corned Beef even though he could well afford broiled pheasant under glass? Jiggs would really have gone for this:

BROILED CORNED BEEF
2 cans (12 oz.) corned beef
1/4 cup fat
2 teaspoons Kitchen Bouquet
1/4 teaspoon celery salt
1/4 teaspoon onion salt
1/4 teaspoon ground ginger

Chill cans of corned beef in refrigerator for at least 4 hours. Remove both ends of can with opener, leaving smooth edges. Gently slip corned beef out of the can onto a cutting board. With sharp knife cut into 4 thick slices. Blend together fat, Kitchen Bouquet and seasonings. Spread over the tops and sides of each slice of corned beef. Place slices on greased, preheated broiler pan. Place 4 inches under moderate heat and broil until surface of meat is crisp and brown, about 10 minutes. Remove to hot serving platter and garnish with sprigs of parsley. Serve with a rich parsley white sauce. Makes 4 servings.

Coconut Drops Idle Away June Minutes

Drop cookies ideal for idling away a few May minutes are Cocoa Krispies Coconut Drops. A batch is quick to bake, for you needn't chop nuts or spend time on other lengthy tasks. The cocoa sweetened toasted rice cereal gives the cookies crunch, and the coconut touch is provided by coconut flavoring.

COCONUT DROPS
1 1/4 cups sifted flour
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup soft butter or margarine
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1/2 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
1 egg
1 teaspoon vanilla flavoring
1 teaspoon coconut flavoring
2 cups Kellogg's Cocoa Krispies

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Blend butter and sugars. Add egg and flavorings; beat well. Stir in sifted dry ingredients together with Cocoa Krispies. Drop by teaspoonfuls on to greased baking sheets. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) about 12 minutes.

Yield: about 2 1/2 dozen cookies, 2 1/2 inches in diameter.

Right To Exercise Your Tongue

The Light Side
By DICK WEST

United Press International
WASHINGTON (UPI)—The recent controversy over alleged "muzzling" at the Pentagon has which might be defined as "babbling."

It involves the tendency of congressional witnesses to open the floodgates of prolixity when they are invited, or obtain permission, to testify at committee hearings. The problem has become so acute as to induce one toy company to design a "witness doll." You wind it up and it bends your ear.

It is my theory that many witnesses work on space rates. That is, they are paid to present the views of various groups under a scale based on the number of words they can get into the printed record.

Be that as it may, there is no doubt that babbling is burdensome to the committees. Over the years, some of the best minds in Congress have grappled with the question of how to curtail it.

Suggestions have been made for building trap doors under the witness chairs and for installing devices that would automatically signal a fire drill when testimony exceeded a certain length.

These proposals, however, seem inconsistent with the basic right of a citizen to exercise his tongue, and none has been adopted.

Now along comes Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, an ingenious Democrat from Minnesota, with what I regard as the ideal cure for galloping verbosity.

While talking with a group of reporters the other day, McCarthy noted that the Senate Finance Committee, of which he is a member, is preparing for hearings on President Kennedy's trade program.

Past experience indicates that the hearings will run for several weeks. But McCarthy has devised a plan which if adopted, unfortunately, however, McCarthy's plan doesn't deal with the related problem of committee members who question witnesses at great length and then disappear.

To be truly effective, it would have to be expanded to require that each member sit through the questioning by all the other members who would shorten them by as much as 75 per cent.

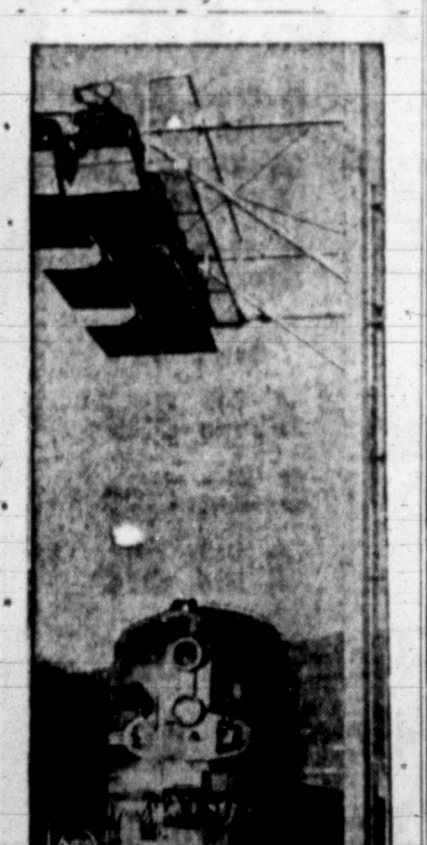

Simply stated, it would require each witness to sit through the testimony of all the other witnesses.

McCarthy figures that if witnesses were forced to listen to each other they would voluntarily begin to fetter their vocal cords.

WETS WIN OUT
MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI)—Milwaukee Braves fans probably will be shouting louder for the home team now that they don't have to worry about dry throats.

Baseball fans Tuesday won a year-long battle with the county board of supervisors over the right to carry canned and bottled beer into County Stadium.

CLEAR TRACK—An old winter problem of railroads—frozen switches—may be licked with a new device hanging over Santa Fe track in picture above. It's an infrared heater, fueled either by natural gas or propane, which warms the switch without warming the surrounding air. Mexico And Brazil Said 'Social Models'

By T. M. FAGRELL

United Press International
MEXICO CITY (UPI) Mexico and Brazil today represent the only dynamic elements in the depressing panorama of Latin American reality, the government Bank of Foreign Commerce reported Tuesday.

The bank described the countries as "models" of social thought for Latin America.

A report in the bank's monthly bulletin under the title "Economic relations between Mexico and Brazil" describes the two nations as economic leaders of Latin America and discusses recent concrete trade developments between them.

Industry and Commerce Minister Raul Salinas Lozano was expected to leave early today for Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo heading a delegation of 17 Mexican businessmen of "the mechanical industry."

The minister said "Mexico was invited to inaugurate a Brazilian national exposition at Sao Paulo on mechanical industries."

He added that delegation members would "take advantage of the opportunity to discuss Brazilian-Mexican trade ties within the Latin American common market" and said he looks forward "to improved commercial relations between Mexico and Brazil."

The bank report described the current "Latin American reality" as "characterized by growing social tensions, as well as economic stagnation and the lack of purpose and courage with which the ruling classes face national problems."

"In our area," the bank said, "Mexico and Brazil constitute the best examples of countries that instead of wasting their energy in fruitless internal conflict, concentrate on the labor that promises a pleasanter future.

"At the same time, in spite of their differing political structures they are the models of Latin America for their continuity of social and economic thought."

Both nations, the bank continued, believe "that rapid industrialization is the only possible path for bettering the living standards of the masses." The bank foresees future joint economic activity toward improving raw materials prices, saying "It is vital for them to extend their economic relations into the rest of the world in order to counteract the persistent recession in the traditional raw materials market."

Foreign Commentary

By PHIL NEWSOM

UPI Foreign News Analyst
VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI)—Life is leisurely in Vientiane, and in its dusty streets there is no hint that this is a center of world tensions.

Along its two main streets, pedicab drivers lean into their handbars, towing passengers on errands which have no urgency, and in their open-front shops the Vietnamese, Thai or Chinese merchants flick their mops in a tolerant war against the dust which drifts over floors, counters and merchandise.

Coconut palms rustling in the hot wind, the brilliant red blossoms of the flame trees and the neat, high-peaked, white stucco houses of former French colonial administrators create the atmosphere of a colonial city at the turn of the century. They add to the illusion of a people living in a more peaceful, less urgent time.

Nor is it all an illusion, for the Laotians are a people to whom urgency is foreign, whether it be in work or war.

In contrast to the terrorism which occasionally breaks out in Saigon and is a way of life in Algiers, there is none of that here.

If there are Pathet Lao in Vientiane, they come only as Laotians, perhaps only to purchase small transistor radios, which are favorite equipment among the guerrillas. Hotel room doors are left unlocked, for thieves is not a sin of the Laotians.

The United States has little to show for its $300 million investment in Laos. Open sewers run along Vientiane's streets and the city has no water supply. Buildings still show the scars of machinegun and mortar fire which erupted in the coup of 1960, depositing neutralist Souvanna Phouma and installing Prince Boun Oum.

But to the people of Laos these no more than the communism which threatens to engulf their country by force, are matters of small concern.

Of more concern is the new fountain which the government has built in the center of the sun-baked city square. When it is running in the evening, they gather by the score to watch the play of the water.

By nature the Laotian is a neutral.

When Phoumi or Boun Oum speak of a war to the death against communism or accuse the United States of deserting them, the Laotian couldn't care less.

Let the Indians, the Thais or the Chinese become the merchants and let others fight the wars.

Dear Abby....

Five Minutes Of Waiting Enough!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I want to know if I am wrong in feeling very much annoyed over this incident. I recently called on a friend (by invitation) and I had only an hour to spend with her. While I was there (I hadn't been there ten minutes), her telephone rang. It was a mutual friend and not a long-distance call. My hostess hung on the phone for twenty minutes, making small talk, while I just sat there twiddling my thumbs and getting madder by the minute. She knew I had only an hour to spend with her. What should I have done?

something terrible, Abby. I don't have the nerve to write and tell her not to come, and yet I know if she were to come it would not work out. What should I do?

NERVOUS
DEAR NERVOUS: Let your husband tell her. It's his sister.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "MISSING SOMETHING": What you are missing you can live without. Count your blessings. No woman has everything.

How's the world treating you? For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to ABBY, care of this paper.

Swimming Party Given For Class

WHITE DEER (Sp) — The eighth-grade graduating class entertained with a hamburger fry and swimming party recently in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pete Richardson with Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Powers, assisting.

The swimming party was held in the pool at the Richardson home. Attending were Sammy Jo Boughan, Maureen Reid, Julia Puckett, Cinday Hubbard, Tommy Dittberner, LeRoy Haiduk, Darrell Wyatt, Bob Richardson, Danny Russell, Sam Tipton, Joel Smith, Rondal Alexander, Alston Thoms, Johnnie Mooney, Monty Hawpe, Charles Smith, Penny Powers, Pat Freeman, Nancy Ulrich, Ida Mae Powers, Jeanie Hughes, and Nancy Dow.

New Officers Are Installed For Club

LEFORS (Sp) — New officers for the Lefors Art and Civic Club were installed at a dinner meeting held recently in Civic Center. Mrs. Edythe Watson, using the wheel as a symbol for the ceremony, installed Mmes. Earl Atkinson as president; L. R. Spence, third vice president; Carl Hall, recording secretary and federation counselor; Charles Roberts, reporter; Dan Watson, treasurer; C. C. Mullins, parliamentarian.

Husbands of members attended as guests. Guests were Messrs. and Mmes. Jack Thacker; Alex Swann; G. N. Mounger; Jerry Jacobs, R. H. Barron; Harry Garrison; Keith Geisler; Paul Walden; Earl Atkins; Danny Goode; Ray Chastin; Joe Dan Watson; Carl Hall; Bud Cumberland; Mmes. Floyd Hines, Charles Roberts, L. R. main in the house with us. If he wants the mingled fun and risk involved in play with other children, he will leave us and return to them.

If you don't mind my saying so, you seem to be trying to turn your little girl into an ally in the battle you are waging with her playmate's mother. This is pretty silly. Such domination didn't work for the Capulets and the Montagues and it doesn't work for us. Fight your own fight. Dear Reader, and let the kids have theirs.

Miss Jan Waters Feted At Luncheon

CANADIAN (Sp) — Miss Jan Waters was honored at a pre-nuptial one o'clock luncheon recently in the home of Mrs. George Carver and Miss Vera Tepe.

Guests included members of the house party, mothers of the bride and groom and other relatives and friends. Those present were Miss Waters; Mmes. Jim Waterfield, Dick H. Barton, Rainford Stainback of Greenville, Garnet Reeves of Lubbock, Joe Bill Barnard and Jimmy Nickell of Amarillo, Ted Kloock of Dallas, John Waters, Oliver Waters, Charles W. Beck of San Angelo, Morris Bennett, Miss Sandra Waters, Mrs. J. D. Raymond of Albuquerque and Frank Carver.

Guests were served at a table for eight and at two quartette tables which were decorated in the bride's chosen colors of orchid and white. The chandelier over the larger table was decorated with sweet peas and orchids. An arrangement of white flowers in a silver bowl flanked by candelabra with white candles centered the larger table. A single white candle in a silver holder was used on the smaller tables. Individual favors of orchid nosegays were at each place.

Paper Wedding Anniversary Party Can Be Celebrated With Low Cost

More than one million American couples will celebrate their first wedding anniversary in 1962. Here's an easy way you can give an amusing and low cost party for a "paper anniversary" couple.

Paper accessories are so well designed today that they suggest many ideas for games, gifts and general decorations. First, you'll want to decide on a color scheme. Then buy a paper table cloth or paper mats and matching napkins in one of the chosen colors.

For your centerpiece, you might have a lovely floral grouping of colored paper roses. They're fun and inexpensive to make yourself. Here's how: Open a Kleenex casual napkin flat, then fold it into a triangle. With the folded edge at the top, begin rolling the napkin very loosely along the edge, from the right hand corner to a point three inches from the left corner. Grasp the napkin one inch below the fold. Separate the two corners at the bottom carefully, then raise them to the folded part (the bud) to form the petals. The left corner becomes the third petal. Bind the flower below the petals with a pipe cleaner and they will stay in place. You may add green by using floral tape. Set the arrangement in a low bowl or styrofoam disc. You can also decorate candle holders by pasting paper roses to them. You'll want to serve buffet style if you're expecting a large number of guests. It's easy and appropriate to set the table with paper plates; paper cups and small paper forks and spoons.

If your guests like games you can tie in the paper theme with a paper hat contest. Provide a large supply of paper flowers, paper napkins, ribbons and the like. Ask your guests to make their conception of the latest fashion in hat design. After 15 minutes, ask them to model their creations. Award a paper corsage to the best.

The Mature Parent

Parents Advised To Shun Children's Tifts

Dear Mrs. Lawrence: There's a vicious 4-year-old boy on my block, the son of a woman who once told my little girl to tell me to fall dead. He has run his wagon over my child's hand and will ride his tricycle at her until she screams and gets out of the way. How can I keep her away from him? She is only 3½ and forgets what I tell her about not playing with him.

ANSWER: Maybe she forgets because she likes him. Maybe he has assets that outweigh the danger of his wagon wheels. Maybe the screams in which you hear terror are actually shouts of delight in a game that offers infants joys you no longer appreciate.

How can you know? You can't. No parent can know what really goes on between two children. A youngster will come shrieking to us about the evil conduct of a playmate, and minutes after we have solicitously affixed the adhesive tape, we look out of the window to see him happily riding on the back of the enemy's tricycle.

Do you want me to advise you to lock your little girl in the house? To supervise all her play? To move from your neighborhood? I can't, you know. Only witches lock children up. Only reformatories supervise all their play. And it may not be possible for you to move from your neighborhood.

So let me remind you that the best we can do for a child who has developed the use of leg muscles to run toward friends and away from enemies is to permit him to discover which is which.

Certainly to a child whose playmate has affronted him we can say, "You're safe with me as long as you want to stay with me." We have to make the Safety we represent always available. But when he's finished with needing it we have to let him go. He has to learn that when he leaves Safety to seek out the mingled fun and risks offered him by other children, we cannot follow him. We're not his Siamese twin able to preside over every moment of his life. He has to discover that he's on his own, that it is his job, not ours, to decide whether the fun he gets from a playmate is worth what he has to pay for it.

When we say, "Don't play with Jimmy again" we are making the decision for him. When we say, "Fight Jimmy back" the fight is made by us and on our order. So we have to mind our own business, keeping our hands off what we don't know enough about to order, contenting ourselves with our parental part of always-Available Protector. Then the child can begin to take responsibility for himself. If he wants Safety, he will choose to

Custom Suit Luxury Item In Men's Closet

While sis offers a word of advice, this young college graduate is fitted by John Reyle for a modest, but adequate custom-made wardrobe that will launch him on his business career.

By HELEN HENNESSY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
The woman who thinks her husband can never experience the excitement she feels over a luxury item in the clothes closet is much mistaken. When he tries on his first custom-made suit, the moment for him is comparable to her own delight in her first designer gown.

He has seen it grow from a bolt of rich cloth to the suit he has always wanted, down to the last tiny detail. It fits with perfection and ease, for it was made not for any man of his particular size, but for him. He knows he's at his sartorial best.

All this was clear to me as I chatted with John Reyle, well-known custom tailor, in his New York shop. For as we talked, I examined expertly tailored suits in the making, fingered lengths of handsome fabrics, and breathed in the satisfying aroma of fine cloth.

"It stands to reason," he told me, "that nothing that has been altered to fit can look as perfect as something that's been custom-made to begin with." As proof of this pudding, he humorously recalled men who bought suits in Europe and Hong Kong "to prove they're world travelers" — and then had to have them altered by their own tailors at home so that they would be fit to wear.

The cost of a custom-tailored suit can be greater than that of a ready-made one but when the style is not extreme, it can be worn for years and years, since the perfect fit takes the strain off the suit, giving it longer life. So, if you want to give dad an elegant gift that will eventually pay for itself, send him to a custom tailor.

Since John Reyle numbers among his clients men in public life, industry and the entertainment world, I thought his ideas on the wardrobe for a college man starting his business career might prove of interest. He believes the initial wardrobe can be based on one Oxford gray suit, with two pairs of pants, and a sports jacket that co-ordinates with the trousers.

He suggests white, yellow or financially able to increase his clothing expenses. It seems modest enough, whether custom-tailored or off the peg!

NEW WAY TO BE SUDDENLY SLIM

Are you a woman whose figure is on the good side but might look perfect? You'll be thrilled by the new easy way science has discovered for you to become Suddenly Slim. If you're more than 15 pounds overweight, then this idea is not for you. If your weight problem falls within this range, then you can realize a new, smoother figure today, without diet or exercise.

Suddenly Slim is an all-new kind of 4-oz. girdle constructed of science fibers. A startling innovation is the sheer front panel. This is permanently stiffened by a science process and cannot give or sag. It's surrounded by a slimming action border. A featherstitched panel down each side of this girdle will contour your hips if they are a problem. The girdle itself is of "wonder" Lycra spandex fiber. It feels like nothing on but has such slimming strength it gives your figure everything that's possible with a foundation.

"Suddenly Slim" is the peak achievement of the designer-genius, Olga.

How You Can Help Your Child Start To School

You, Your Child and School
By DAVID NYDICK
UPI Education Specialist

Thousands of parents will be registering their children for kindergarten this spring and fall. How can they be prepared to get the most out of the new experience? Schools vary by location, aims, hours, and philosophy. This does not mean that you, as a parent, cannot do many things to help your child adjust. It does mean that you should observe the following suggestions in relation to your school and your child.

The most important aspect of preparation is a smooth and gradual adjustment. The unknown is the basis for many disturbing experiences for children and adults.

Plan to visit the school with future kindergarten. Prepare him to walk or take the bus. Recommended routes are patrolled by police. Take the trip several times. Walk around the building and become familiar with the layout. Visit the kindergarten. Meet the teacher and principal. Know the procedures regarding hours, absence, money for milk, snacks, and incidentals. Many of these matters will be clarified during an orientation period. If not, make it your business to find out. Many sources of information are available such as the school staff, PTA, and neighbors.

It is neither too late nor too early to start preparing your child. He will be expected to do many things for himself. Teachers are trained to be aware of your child's limitations but crowded classrooms will place a strain upon individual attention. It will be most helpful if your child is able to dress himself. Purchase clothing which he can easily manipulate (snaps, etc.). He should be able to tell his name, address, and telephone number. He should be able to go to the toilet of his own accord.

Experience with other children is most helpful. Willingness to share and wait a turn is valuable. His world should be expanded by spending time away from his parents. Encourage visiting with neighbors. Use baby sitters. Your child may have difficulty realizing that separation from you is only temporary. He will gain assurance of your return as he is increasingly exposed to these experiences.

An atmosphere leading to good school adjustment should exist in the home. Talk about your own interest in education. Don't joke about "bad" teachers. The child takes it seriously. Refer to the many interesting activities in kindergarten. Spend time reading together. Answer his questions seriously. Encourage curiosity. Visit the zoo, park, museum, etc. Talk about these activities. Experience recognizing differences between various objects is the beginning of learning.

Generally, start thinking about kindergarten now. Create an atmosphere which respects and enjoys education. Make sure there is understanding and awareness of what will happen... no surprises. Train him to do little

Olmstead Might Be Harvey's Successor

MONTREAL (UPI)—Bert Olmstead, the balding 35-year-old wingman who once was booed lustily by New York hockey fans, was a member of the Rangers today and a good bet to succeed Doug Harvey as player-coach.

Olmstead, who has played the past four seasons with the Toronto Maple Leafs, was one of nine players drafted by National Hockey League clubs Wednesday for a total of $180,000 at the wind-up of the league's three-day meeting.

At his advanced age, it appeared hardly likely that the Rangers had drafted him for a coaching job. But general manager Muzz Patrick of the Rangers admitted that Olmstead was high among the New York coaching prospects, along with Red Sullivan and Emile (Cat) Francis.

"We need a take-charge guy," Patrick said.

Harvey, who guided the Rangers to their first Stanley Cup playoff berth in four years last season, resigned Monday night because he did not want to take his family away from Montreal again.

Olmstead, unpopular in New York during his eight playing seasons with the Montreal Canadiens and four with the Leafs, has been ready to quit hockey for the past three years. He runs a successful wheat farm in Scepter, Sask.

The Boston Bruins and Detroit Red Wings, neither of whom reached the playoffs, each selected three players from other clubs.

The Bruins drafted forward Jean Guy Gendron and defenseman Irv Spencer from the Rangers and defenseman Warren Godfrey from Detroit. The Wings drafted center Alex Faulkner from Toronto, forward Floyd Smith from New York and defenseman Barclay Pliager from Montreal.

The Rangers, in addition to taking Olmstead, also drafted center Bronco Horvath from the Chicago Black Hawks, and the Maple Leafs selected defenseman Ed Van Impe from Chicago. Toronto was expected to send Van Impe to Springfield of the Eastern League in exchange for defenseman Kent Douglas.

The Bruins also announced that they had traded goaltender Ed Chadwick and defenseman Barry Ashbee of Kingston and loaned other unidentified players to Hershey of the AHL for goalie Bob Perrault.

Olympic Committee Gives Racial View

MOSCOW (UPI)—The International Olympic Committee (IOC) has given the South African delegation another year in which to persuade its government to revise its policy of racial discrimination in accordance with Olympic principles.

A suggestion by Finnish delegate Eric Von Frankel thus averted a serious showdown at this meeting on the touchy question of discrimination in sports.

After the assembly heard a report initiated two years ago on alleged racial discrimination in sports in South Africa, the Soviet delegate, Alexei Romanov, proposed that the South African Olympic Committee be suspended immediately.

A suggestion by Finnish delegate Eric Von Frankel averted a serious showdown at this meeting on the touchy question of discrimination in sports.

Score Hurls Indians To Top Again

By United Press International

Lefty Herb Score hurled Indianapolis to a 4-3 victory over Oklahoma City Wednesday and boosted the Indians into undisputed possession of first place in the American Association.

Omaha, which had shared the lead with Indianapolis, fell to Louisville, 5-1.

Score went all the way for the Indians, whiffing nine 8ers and scattering five hits. The Indians got the winning run in the last of the ninth, when Ramon Conde cracked a single to score Len Johnston.

Omaha dropped a full game behind the league leaders when Louisville pitcher Bob Hartman held the Dodgers to five hits. Gene Snyder took the loss for Omaha, his fourth defeat against no wins.

All the fireworks, however, were at Denver, where fourth-place Denver and fifth-place Dallas-Fort Worth exploded in a doubleheader for 53 hits and 44 runs.

Dallas thought they had the Bears beaten in the first game when they clobbered Denver with nine runs in the fourth inning. But the Bears came back for 12 runs on 10 hits in the sixth, and went on to drub Dallas-Fort Worth, 15-10.

The Rangers, Texans to the core, had to outdo Denver and did, rapping 20 hits and defeating Denver 16-3, in the nightcap.

Tonight, Oklahoma City again plays at Indianapolis. Dallas-Fort Worth and Denver will square off at Denver, and Omaha, trying to regain the league lead, will host Louisville.

Gottlieb Is New GM Of Warrior Five

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Eddie Gottlieb rejoined the transplanted Philadelphia Warriors today as general manager only two weeks after selling out as their owner, but the status of coach Frank McGuire remained in doubt.

Gottlieb checked into town Wednesday night with some of the San Francisco Warriors' new owners and the club's most prized asset — Walt Chamberlain.

During a press conference, club chairman Matty Simmons unveiled Gottlieb as the general manager. Gottlieb, a Warrior owner and coach during his 16 years with the team, holds a one-year contract in his post with the pro basketball team.

Houston Bellaire, El Campo Are Schoolboy Champions

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI)—Houston Bellaire and El Campo reigned as state schoolboy baseball champions today. Bellaire whipped Odessa Wednesday 8-4 to capture the Class AAAA title and El Campo whipped Seminole 4-1 for the Class AAA crown.

Five errors in the sixth inning proved fatal for Odessa as Bellaire scored three runs to clinch the game. Bellaire pitcher John McDonald took the win and Larry Jernigan suffered the loss. Bill Sullivan smacked a home run with no one on in the fifth inning for Houston.

El Campo scored single runs in the first and third, then pushed across two runs in the fourth to ice the game. Billy Gerberman was the winning pitcher.

Lufkin, edged Corpus Christi Carroll 2-1 to capture the third place spot in Class AAAA. The winning run came in the eighth when losing pitcher Hector Salinas walked home the winning pitcher Rocky Thompson.

Richardson downed San Antonio Lee 7-4 for third place in Class AAAA. A seven-run outburst in the second inning nailed down the victory. Bill Bain led Richardson with a triple and a single.

GIANTS SIGN END

NEW YORK (UPI)—Del Shoffner, whose pass-catching helped the New York Giants to the National Football League's Eastern Division title, has signed his 1962 contract. He was third in the league with 62 receptions last season.

Yankees Regain Top Spot In American Loop Race

By FRED DOWN
UPI Sports Writer

It's official today that the New York Mets have dragged Casey Stengel to the lowest point of his 30-year career in baseball.

The suspicion that this might happen had been growing on people for some time, but it wasn't until Wednesday night when the Philadelphia Phillies extended the Mets' losing streak to 17 games with 2-0 and 2-1 victories that it became as plain as 7-1-year-old Casey's drooping shoulders.

No team that Casey ever managed or played for ever lost 17 in a row before and it doesn't help the old man, either, when he glances over at the American League standings and notes that the New York Yankees — the club which fired him after the 1960 season — are right up there in first place as usual.

Things could become worse before they get better for Stengel, too, because now the Mets are only six losses short of the modern big league record of 23 straight suffered by the 1961 Phillies. The 17 straight defeats are also the most ever suffered by any New York big league team.

Cal McLish pitched a seven-hitter to blank the Mets in the first game of Wednesday's twin-bill and then Art Mahaffey turned in a four-hitter to complete the sweep. Tony Taylor figured in both Philadelphia runs in the opener and Wes Covington singled in the ninth inning to drive in the decisive run of the nightcap.

Meanwhile, back at Casey's old stand in The Bronx, the Yankees regained the AL lead with a 5-0 triumph over the Cleveland Indians. Ralph Terry's four-hit pitching and back-to-back sixth-inning homers by Roger Maris and John Blanchard paved the way for the Yankee victory which tagged Jim Grant with his first defeat of the season.

The Los Angeles Dodgers moved to within a half-game of first place in the National League when they completed their suspended game of Tuesday night with an 8-3 win and then downed the Pittsburgh Pirates, 5-3, in a regularly scheduled night game. The Chicago Cubs defeated the San Francisco Giants, 4-3, the St. Louis Cardinals downed the Cincinnati Reds, 4-3, and the Milwaukee Braves beat the Houston Colts, 6-3, in other games.

In other AL games, the Detroit Tigers beat the Boston Red Sox, 3-2, after a 2-1 loss, the Washington Senators edged out the Baltimore Orioles, 2-1, the Los Angeles Angels shaded the Chicago White Sox, 1-0, and the Minnesota Twins topped the Kansas City Athletics, 7-0.

Ron Fairly's two-run seventh-inning homer snapped a 1-1 tie and greased the way for Joe Moeller's fourth win of the season and the Dodgers' 17th victory in their last 19 games. Sandy Koufax wrapped up Don Drysdale's ninth win with a hitless, two-strikeout ninth inning that completed the suspended game.

Don Larsen walked four men in the ninth inning to force in the Cubs' winning run and end the Giants' five-game winning streak. The Giants had tied the score in the top of the ninth on Jim Davenport's triple and a single by Jose Pagan. Don Ellsworth picked up his fourth win.

Larry Jackson scattered nine hits to win his fifth game for the Cardinals, whose winning run was forced over the plate by Joey Jay in the eighth inning.

Stan Musial had two hits for the Cardinals and Vanada Pinson and Don Blasingame two each for the Reds.

Hank Aaron drove in two runs with a double and a triple and scored two himself to power the Braves' Lew Burdette to his third win. Burdette allowed 12 hits but didn't walk a batter.

Frank Malzone's ninth-inning homer gave the Red Sox' Bill Monbouquette his fourth win and tagged Detroit's Phil Regan with his third defeat. The Tigers won the nightcap, however, behind the six-hit pitching of Jim Bunning when Dick Brown squeezed over the winning run in the 11th.

Joe Hicks, subbing for slumped Jimmie Piersall, hit a homer and triple and scored both Washington runs to deal Robin Roberts his second loss with his third defeat. The Tigers won the nightcap, however, behind the six-hit pitching of Jim Bunning when Dick Brown squeezed over the winning run in the 11th.

Joe Hicks, subbing for slumped Jimmie Piersall, hit a homer and triple and scored both Washington runs to deal Robin Roberts his second loss with his third defeat. The Tigers won the nightcap, however, behind the six-hit pitching of Jim Bunning when Dick Brown squeezed over the winning run in the 11th.

Ken McBride's seven-hitter and pinch-hitter Tom Burgess' ninth-inning sacrifice fly with the bases filled enabled the Angels to spoil a fine pitching effort by Chicago's Ray Herbert, who struck out six and yielded only four hits in all.

Jim Kat's five-hitter and a two-run triple by George Banks led the Twins to their easy victory. Jerry Walker, tagged for six runs and eight hits in 4-2-3 innings, lost his third game against six victories.

Pros Vie For Rich Golf Prize

CLIFTON, N.J. (UPI) — The golfers who are expected to battle it out for the U.S. Open championship next week went after the year's largest links purse today—the $25,000 first place money in the $100,000 Thunderbird golf tournament.

Because of that fat purse, the tournament drew practically every top name golfer in the country. Usually many of the top Open contenders skip the tournament a week before the Open to devote all their time to practicing on the Open course.

As usual, Arnold Palmer, who already has banked $59,871 this year, was favored in the field of 130, which included 11 U.S. Open champions, 14 PGA champions and nine Masters champions.

Although he did not play well at Memphis last week when he was suffering from a cold, Palmer could attain one of the two goals he has set for himself this year — break his own all-time money winning record. The $25,000 first place money would put his 1962 earnings well above the record $75,262 he set in 1960.

Palmer's second goal is a sweep of the four major titles—the Masters, U.S. and British Opens and the PGA. He won the Masters in April so he has the other three to go.

"So long as I play the game, I'll always be trying to win all four the same year," Palmer said.

To win the Thunderbird he will have to beat the same golfers who figure to give him his toughest competition in the Open at Oakmont, Pa., next week — Billy Casper, Gary Player, Gene Littler, Jerry Barber, Jay and Lionel Hebert, Doug Ford, Mike Souchak, Dow Finsterwald, Sammy Snead, Tommy Bolt, Cary Middlecoff, Julius Boros, Jack Fleck, Claude Harmon and all the touring pros.

It is by far the best field to compete in a golf tournament this year.

After single rounds Thursday and Friday, the field will be cut to the low 90 and ties for Saturday's third round. For Sunday's final round, which will be televised by NBC from 5 to 6 p.m.,

Officials Of Epsom Downs Course Checking Tactics

LONDON (UPI) — Stewards of the Epsom Downs course and the Jockey Club today were investigating allegations of rough riding tactics which jockeys said caused the disastrous crash in Wednesday's derby.

Another inquiry was ordered by the "League Against Cruel Sports."

Women screamed and fainted as horses tumbled and jockeys were trampled in the most sensational pile-up in the 183-year history of Britain's No. 1 racing classic.

It looked more like the Grand National Steeplechase or a battle EDT, the field will be trimmed to the low 60 and ties.

field after a cavalry charge, observers said. The disaster, which changed the carnival atmosphere of the annual event to horror, came as the field of 26 three-year-old colts approached the famed Tattenham corner.

One tripped and stumbled, then in a disastrous pile-up six more hit the turf. Riders were scattered over the course as the rest of the field, pushed, scrambled or jumped to avoid the tangled mass of horses and jockeys.

Six jockeys were taken to the hospital and all but two were detained. A seventh escaped unhurt. One horse, outsider King Canute, had to be destroyed. The French colt's trainer, Ryan Price, said the horse's leg was "smashed to pulp."

Of the four jockeys in the hospital today, Harry Carr, the queen's jockey, who was riding the Derby favorite, Hethersett, appeared most severely injured. He suffered a broken collar bone, a concussion and a suspected back injury.

Wally Swinburn, whose mount, Romulus, was one of the first to fall, has a concussion and back injuries.

Aussie jockey Neville Sellwood rode the 22-1 winner, Larkspur, owned by Raymond Guest of New York.

Orioles, Mets Swap Catchers As Trade Deadline Approaches

BALTIMORE (UPI)—The Baltimore Orioles and New York Mets decided to trade a catcher Wednesday night and wound up in a fiasco worthy of three men on a horse.

The original deal was simple: The Orioles obtained catcher Hobie Landrith from the Mets completing a May 9 deal which sent Marv Throneberry to the New York club.

Then the fun began. The Orioles tipped writers that they would assign catcher Charlie Lau outright to Rochester of the International League Thursday morning. In the meantime, the Mets revealed that they are recalling catcher Chris Cannizzaro from Rochester.

At that point the Orioles discovered that catcher Darrell Johnson is suffering with a bad back, and announced that they had decided to keep Lau "until the extent of Johnson's injuries are determined." Then the Mets announced that Cannizzaro has an injured finger that will be examined in New York before he joins them.

Landrith, who did not learn of the maneuvering until after he played both games against the Phillies Wednesday night, is supposed to join the Orioles in New York Friday. He has an odd explanation he must make to his son, whom he took with him to Philadelphia on his first road trip.

Wednesday night he was on the road with New York in Philadelphia, and Friday he'll be in New York but on the road with Baltimore.

Both teams have until Friday to straighten out the roster messes and reach the 25-player limit.

Tulsa, El Paso Deadlocked For Lead In Texas League

By United Press International
If you have been in a cave for the past month and would like to know what is new in the battle for the Texas League leadership, the answer is—nothing.

Tulsa and El Paso are deadlocked for the top spot. They have been see-sawing back-and-forth for the lead since the season began.

The Oilers dropped into a tie Wednesday night in untypical fashion. Tulsa, noted for its "late-inning lighting," fizzled out in a 11-inning struggle won by San Antonio, 1-0. El Paso nipped Austin, 5-1. In the other league game Amarillo pounded Albuquerque, 10-2.

The Tulsa-San Antonio contest was a pitching masterpiece. Bill Wakefield, hurling for the Oilers, gave up five hits but was still the loser. Harvey Branch allowed just seven hits and was the winner.

Tonight's schedule is the same.

AN INDEPENDENT FREEDOM NEWSPAPER

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by any government, with the right of freedom, and that it is every man's duty to God to preserve his own liberty and respect the liberty of others. Freedom is self-control, no more, no less. To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guides expressed in the Ten Commandments, the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities in harmony with the above moral principles.

Press's Great Responsibility

In this issue we are running an article that appeared in "Editor & Publisher." It is a speech made by a great editor, Jenkin Lloyd Jones, of the Tulsa Tribune. It is under the heading of "The Stomach-Turning Point. How About Raising Hell?" Mr. Jones recognizes the responsibility of the press as few editors do.

If we had more editors who would take a stand for principles and had the courage to express them and would permit their stand to be challenged by their readers, we could turn the trend from drifting toward socialism and decadence, to a belief in the inalienable rights that belong to each and every man.

Mr. Jones doesn't go quite as far as is needed. He seems to think it is possible for tax-supported schools to teach principles. But we cannot understand how any school that is based on the theory that the state has a right to do things that no individual has a right to do, can really teach the youth of the land to discipline themselves and to be responsible and to believe in private property.

When people believe that the state has a right to do things that no individual has a right to do, they are advocating a double standard, which is no standard. At any rate, it is a splendid article that should arouse the interest of the public as to what is taking place and how we are losing our morality and our integrity and are not treating our children fairly.

The article is worth reading, even if it is long. Turn to Page 17.

Two-Way Application

Minor Controversy On The Power Grab

There's a minor controversy rolling up in Washington these days over whether a President should be empowered to name his own chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank when the President takes office.

We call it a minor controversy because, in point of fact, the President names the chairman anyhow. And, as has been demonstrated in the famous Tennessee Valley Authority case, a President who appoints a chairman of a federal agency, such as the Federal Reserve Bank, is in an excellent position to fire the chairman if he doesn't approve of him. And he could make it stick, too, as President Roosevelt demonstrated.

The real question is whether or not the President should automatically fire the incumbent who will follow his rulings and wishes, without the necessity of some kind of disagreement publicly. That is the bone of the argument. The Federal Reserve Board has enormous power and the directors of it, including the chairman, are appointed by the President. They serve for a term of four years. But, as many a banker or financial expert points out, if the President has this power automatically when he assumes the purple, it would follow that the Federal Reserve Board would even more closely follow the political dictates of the supreme chief than it presently does. And this would mean a further centralizing of power in the hands of the executive.

The Federal Reserve Board can, virtually instantaneously, decide whether we will have a hard or soft money system. It can lower or raise discount rates which will immediately affect the entire money and credit structure of the nation.

Bid For A Smile

A conservative tailor was retained by a new tropical republic to design its military uniform. The first request he received was for an outfit with a green jacket, royal blue trousers with a red and gold stripe on the sides of the legs, and a canary yellow cap with a white ostrich feather.

The tailor blinked with astonishment and said: "Tailor — I assume this uniform is for the guards at the presidential palace." "Military Chief — Not at all. It's for our secret service agents."

Quotable Quote by Walter Lippman: "The final test of a leader is that he loves behind him to other men the convictions and the will to carry on."

the law went into effect (1913) he was willing to take on his shoulders the enormous responsibility of making an open break with the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. It is an open secret that President Kennedy does not approve of the present chairman, William M. Martin. But if Mr. Kennedy were to oust Martin, a power he doubtless has although it is not spelled out in the Federal Reserve Act, the already shaky business establishment of the nation could conceivably come to grief.

What Kennedy wants, therefore, is the power to get his hands on the full control of all money and credit in the nation without risking the loss of prestige involved in a hostile firing procedure. If the firing were made automatic, then a change in administration would bring the change in Reserve policies and that would be that.

Of course, had this occurred with the advent of Kennedy to office, it is possible, and indeed likely, that we would have a far worse dollar picture right now than we do. Martin, whatever else he may be, is a man of some stature and native intelligence. He doesn't necessarily go along with everything the White House thinks is proper. And there has been a growing standoffishness manifested between him and the Chief Executive.

But the thing most desired in this nation of the field of money and credit is a divorcement of political influence from the money supply, not an increase of that influence. And, the Kennedy proposal is calculated, as nearly all of his other proposals are, to provide a further amalgamation of power.

The tragedy here is that Martin, himself, seems to favor the shift. Perhaps he is tired of bucking the trend and honestly feels that it would be better all around if the President had a rubber stamp in the office he heads. At least, were this the case, the damage a given President could do would be traceable at once to the presidential office and not blamed on the Federal Reserve Board.

But we hope the final appearance of autonomy will not vanish. A man who holds presidential power in this country, who can command the armed forces, issue personal decrees, establish new bureaus, command and obtain any legislation desired, punish those who oppose him and otherwise conduct himself in a completely arbitrary way has too much power.

Giving him even more power is certainly no cure.

Near that section of the brain, the hypothalamus, which controls one's eating is another area that controls the appetite and acts as a stimulus to eating. If this mechanism is faulty, and is set too high, a person will eat more and want to eat more than necessary for his growth and activity. And that person must always watch his diet. The U. S. Bureau of Engraving & Printing produces 1.7 billion pieces of currency a year, and some defective banknotes are bound to get into circulation. Examples are a $10 bill with pictures of Alexander Hamilton on both sides, or a bill with $5 printed on one side and $10 on the other. Collectors have paid from $500 to $5000 for a single faulty dollar bill.

Culinary note in the Bolton (Mont.) Eagle: "In making Swiss steak, add salt and pepper to the floor before pounding the steak." Research at the Institute of Pathology revealed that the skin temperature of women runs about two degrees lower than for men. But when a sizzling heat wave comes along, the fair sex goes into reverse and has a skin temperature as much as four degrees higher than for the stalwart males. If Mars has inhabitants, the sun appears to move North to South in their sky, instead of East to West in ours, during the planet's revolution around the sun. And because its axis is tipped away from the pole of its orbit at about the same angle as the earth's, Mars has seasons much like our own.

Thoughts while shaving: 1. Henry C. Wallace, the father of former Vice President Henry A. Wallace, was a staunch Republican and served as Secretary of Agriculture in the Harding administration, just as the son was for a time Secretary of Agriculture under Franklin D. Roosevelt. . . 2. But when the elder Wallace was in the Harding Cabinet (1921-23), he got off this stirring pronouncement: "If it cannot be stopped in any other way, Congress should enact a law imposing very severe penalties upon any government official who undertakes to influence either crop production or crop prices." (Those seem like mighty strange words today.) . . . 3. Come to think of it, the do-it-yourself movement is far from modern, and was started years ago by those fellows who made miniature ships to go inside glass bottles.

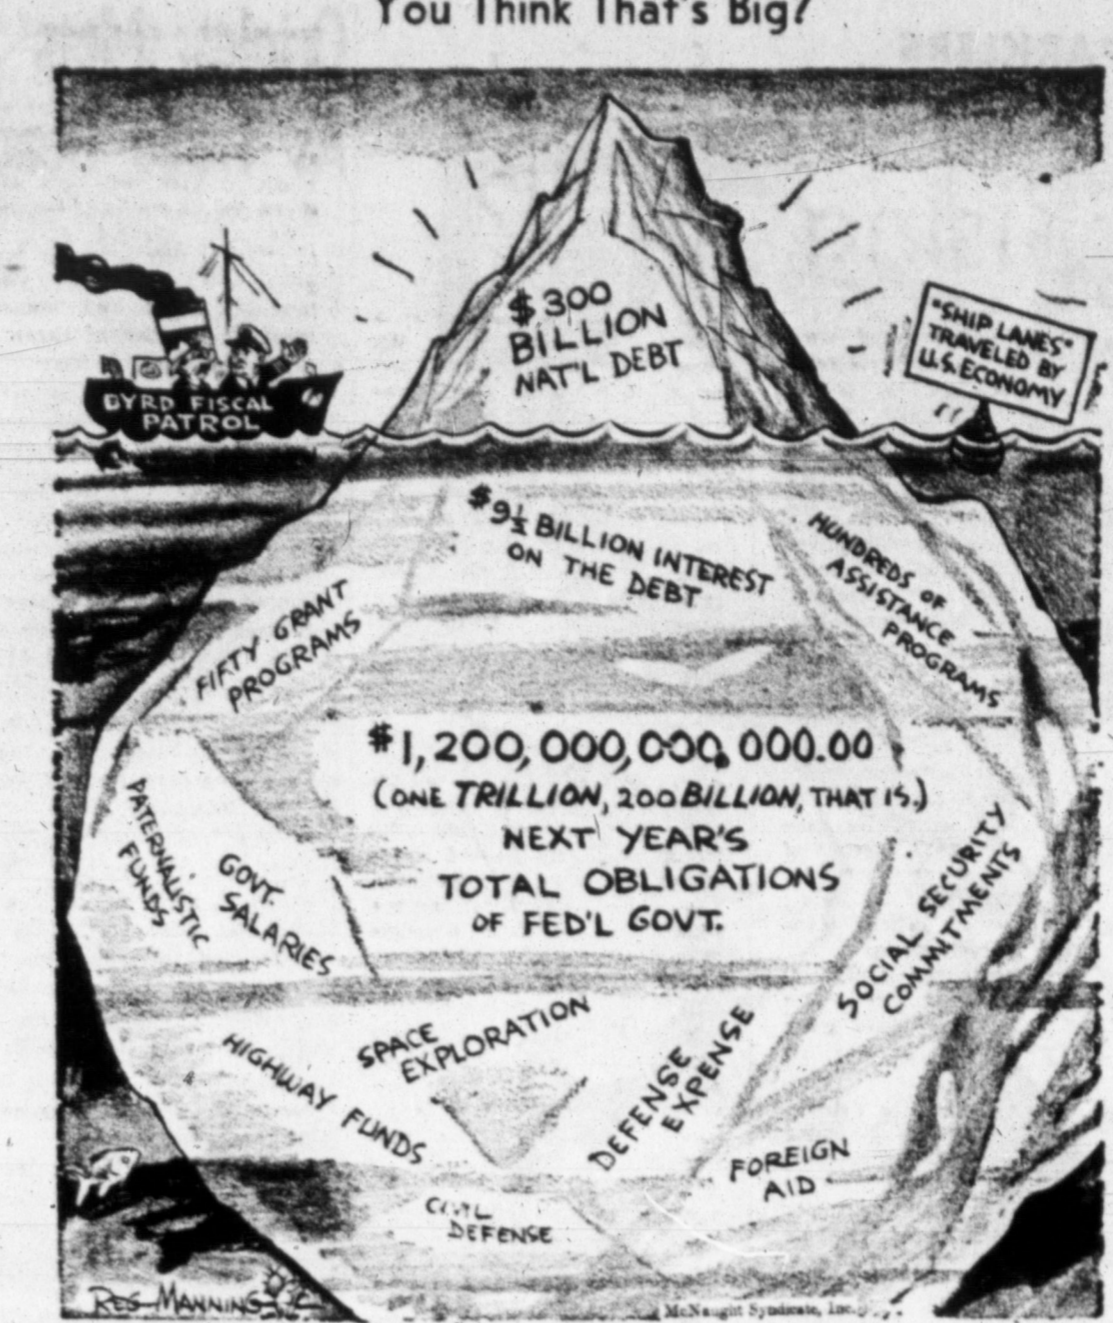

Instead of depending on ship builders or glass blowers, those old fellows just went ahead and did it themselves. . . 4. And the do-it-yourself idea extended to the kids of half a century ago. With a jackknife, twigs and some rubber bands, they made their own weapons — slingshots, and mighty powerful ones, too. They also fashioned their own bows and arrows, out of supple tree branches and wooden splints. Phooey to the manufacturers of archery sets!

No Cure for Congenital Baldness Except a Toupee

Q—I am 27 years old and almost completely bald, in fact, my father tells me he was a "skinned head" before I was born. I find my condition very embarrassing. Many girls in the office in which I work say they don't want to date an old bald head. Isn't there some cure for baldness?

A—I'm afraid you'll just have to buy a toupee. Hair growth is an all-or-none proposition. If hair loss is due to some cause that is temporary (infection) or to drugs or poisons that can be eliminated, hair will re-grow naturally provided that the roots are not destroyed.

In the case of congenital baldness, such as you are afflicted with, there's just nothing to do but resign yourself to the fact that you have a more extensive forehead than your contemporaries. In a recent report, the Food and Drug Administration expressed the opinion that "the search for a real hair grower still goes on." The administration also seized 750,000 vitamin capsules because their promotional literature falsely asserted that they "promoted hair growth on bald or thin areas, grew hair faster, conserved hair that was too fine, prevented falling hair, promoted waviness of hair, promoted a feeling of well being, increased energy and prevented dandruff!"

While on the subject of falling hair, I was gratified to receive the following letter: "Some time ago you mentioned that a certain drug would be the cause for falling hair. At the time, I was taking the drug to reduce blood pressure and blood cholesterol. Immediately after I stopped the medicine, my hair stopped falling out and also I stopped losing weight. Many thanks for your up-to-the-minute information."

Here's another letter with a practical suggestion for relief of mouth sores resulting from medication: "I am an epileptic and am well controlled with regular doses of Dilantin and Mebroin. However, every once in a while, the inside of my mouth got very sore just like that of the reader who recently wrote you to complain of this condition. "I noticed that the soreness was apt to be worse on weekdays when I just swallow my capsules while at work so that no one knows of my dependence on drugs. Over weekends, when I'm home, I always wash the capsules down with a cup or glass of fluid. I decided to follow the same course while at work and within a week and ever since I have had no trouble with my mouth. I wish you would pass this information on to someone else who, like me, has to take medication for the rest of her life."

Please send your questions and comments to Dr. Harold Thomas Hyman, M.D., in care of this paper. He will answer letters of general interest in future columns. Edson in Washington Population Growth Paces Recreation Facility Demand

By PETER EDSON

WASHINGTON (STEW) — Secretary of Interior Stewart L. Udall was the big wheel of the two-day White House Conference on Conservation, held in the State Department. The big idea was to whip up public support for the administration's broad natural resources development program, now stymied in Congress.

The late Gifford Pinchot ran one of these conferences for President Theodore Roosevelt back in 1908. The Udall job was supposed to top that, look farther ahead.

The one new item in the 1962 program that seems to have the best prospects in Congress is recreation.

Udall has just set up a new Bureau of Outdoor Recreation to co-ordinate all federal programs in this field, now scattered among 20 different agencies. Dr. Edward C. Crafts, former assistant chief in the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Forest Service has recently been sworn in as bureau head. His top assistant is Lawrence N. Stevens, director of studies for the "Outdoor Recreation for America" report submitted to President Kennedy last January after three years of preparation.

It was this comprehensive report from a commission of four senators, four representatives and seven private citizens headed by Laurance S. Rockefeller that formed the basis for the administration program. In essence, the Rockefeller commission found that while the population of the country will double by the year 2000, the need for recreation facilities will triple. The trouble is, the commission found, that most of the recreation areas are in the wrong places, too far away from the big centers of population. So an organized and orderly expansion of recreation facilities was recommended, with a Bureau of Outdoor Recreation to co-ordinate the effort.

Pending before congress, therefore, is a bill which would authorize the BOR to allocate $50 million in matching grants to the states to plan new recreation areas. National Park Service, Forest Service, Army Corps of Engineers, Bureau of Reclamation and other federal agencies which publicly-owned lands provide recreation services would then co-ordinate their new area planning through BOR.

Acquisition of new recreation areas will be left to the state and federal agencies, with funds provided by Congress and the legislature. Bureau of Outdoor Recreation will thus be a small planning center — the way they all begin. Crafts has taken on his new assignment with several misapprehensions to overcome. He says he is not to be a czar of the great outdoors. Nor will he try to teach people to dance around the Maypoles and have organized fun.

"Recreation is a lot more significant than just playing," says Dr. Crafts. "Getting the right understanding of the use of leisure time for constructive recreation will benefit the American people physically, culturally, morally."

To the charge that government planning for recreation is federal paternalism and a further development of the welfare state, his assistant, Larry Stevens, points out that there is a public demand for more recreation that has been growing steadily since the end of World War II. Population has increased, leisure time has been increasing, people have had more money to spend, they have become more mobile as means of transportation have improved.

"Shot in the Arm" Tax Cut Probable by Mid July; Backstage Pressures Coming from Several Quarters

WASHINGTON — There will definitely be a cut in personal and corporation taxes this year. President Kennedy and his top fiscal and economic advisers have positively decided on that — notwithstanding some vague public disclaimers to the contrary. These are solely to keep the opposition from grabbing the initiative. Only two questions remain to be agreed on: The nature and extent of this "shot-in-the-arm" tax reduction; and the timing of its announcement.

Most likely date is by the middle of July. Also, the President will probably make this announcement himself in a radio-TV broadcast to the nation. He has discussed that with Democratic congressional leaders, who strongly approved it. The President told them he contemplated presenting a comprehensive analysis of the country's basic economy and its prospects.

Determination of the amount of the tax slash and its timing rests largely on a study being completed for the President by his Council of Economic Advisers. This was launched a month before the jarring stock market crash. Even then the President and his inner advisers were uneasy over the economic trend. While immediate conditions appeared promising, the long-range outlook was uncertain at best and decided black at worst.

Some of the President's experts argued that the underlying economy was "sluggish" and "stagnant," and that unless it was "jolted out of its rut" there would be another serious business slump in 1963.

The possible far-reaching political effect of such a business upset on the 1964 election was not lost on the President. It was not necessary to point out to him that it takes upward of a year for a massive recovery program to become effective. This realization was what prompted him to ask Congress for a multi-billion dollar public works plan, and to put his Council of Economic Advisers to work on a penetrating survey of the national economy for possible other stimulative measures — such as individual and corporation tax cuts.

WHAT IT WILL BE — Plan currently most favored by the President's counselors is a "shot-in-the-arm" tax reduction for this year, as follows:

- Individual income — 25 per cent cut across the board; that is, on all rates from top to bottom.
- Surtax — 91 per cent maximum slashed to 65 per cent, and all others in similar proportion.

into accepting stalemate rather than victory in Korea. We cannot stand any more such defeats. Our leaders must sharpen their wits and steel their determination to defend the right of the West to survive at whatever cost may be necessary. Moreover, we cannot continue to live under a strategy of mere defense. We must move over to aggressive prosecution of the cold war until communism is destroyed. The alternative is our own destruction. Believing as we do that Western civilization is incomparably better than communism, we must implement our

The Nation's Press

Another Defeat (Christian Economics)

Three and one-half years ago the United States was well ahead of Soviet Russia in its knowledge of nuclear science. The Kremlin devised a strategy to overcome this lead. It agreed to a moratorium on testing and entered into a long discussion with the Western powers on the subject of nuclear disarmament. Meanwhile, Russian scientists were perfecting their plans for making an elaborate and extensive series of nuclear explosions designed vastly to increase their knowledge of the subject.

When all was in readiness, the Soviet Government renounced the moratorium and quickly completed a series of about 50 atmospheric tests. It is believed that important information was obtained as a result of this great variety of tests including bombs of heretofore unheard of strength.

It now appears that the long moratorium was arranged by the Soviet Union to stop the free world from perfecting its knowledge of nuclear science while the Communists endeavored to catch up with and to surpass the West. The talks provided the time necessary for the extensive preparation and it stopped Western progress in nuclear science.

Western civilization depends upon keeping ahead of the Communist countries in this desperate race. To stop is to allow them to overtake us. When and if they do, we shall be faced with an ultimatum: to surrender or else! Nuclear warfare is horrible to contemplate, but surrender, with the blotting out of the values developed by Western Christian civilization is even a greater catastrophe.

The false moratorium has been of great advantage to the Kremlin. Our government was duped by it just as it was duped

"BUILDING BLOCK" ROCKET—Segmented section of a solid propellant booster rocket is lifted into place before test firing at United Technology Corp.'s development center near Morgan Hill, Calif. When two main segments were mated, the rocket stood over 40 feet high. Using the "building block" concept, rockets ranging from a few thousand to millions of pounds thrust can be assembled. Rocket above was "tailored" to develop half a million pounds of thrust.

Television In Review

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — My favorite fat entertainer was the late W. C. Fields, who is reported to have responded thusly when informed he was dying: "On the whole, I'd rather be in Philadelphia."
I have also admired Edward Arnold and Sidney Greenstreet. But few of these lamented stout souls and their compatriot fustians could surpass the range of their bearded heir, Sebastian Cabot. Wednesday night he carried off his criminologist duties again on CBS-TV's "Checkmate," and one week from today he plays the title role in Igor Stravinsky's television dance-drama, "Noah and the Flood."

It's true that Cabot didn't have much competition on "Checkmate," which has been cancelled. One of his detective companions, a blond type, name of Doug McClure, looked at all times — including Wednesday night — as though he had just stepped out of the college shop at Saks Fifth Avenue. The other detective, Anthony George, is sort of a poor man's Dane Clark, who was a poor man's John Garfield to begin with.
"Checkmate" made Cabot a star, and that's good. Also, in contrast to being populated by the hip chicks of the other private eye ventures, it provided a haven for the most sizzling mature blondes in the business as leading ladies: the likes of Dina Merrill, Joan Fontaine and Nina Foch. And that's good.
But without Cabot, "Checkmate" would have been reduced to the level of "Hawaiian Eye." And the truth is, all three Checkmates — including Cabot — were laughable as investigators. The private eyes I know would sell their mothers and couldn't tell the difference between a 1929 burghundy and an extract from a Skid Row bathtub.
At last report, McClure was promoted to being a cowboy in the new series "The Virginian." And George was threatening to make a movie.
