Nehru Predicts Ultimate Victory

Stevenson delivers a statement from the State Department in Washington concerning his position during the government's top level secret talks on the Cuban crisis. His statement was spurred by a magazine report that indicated Stevenson preferred "political negotiation" to a blockade for dealing with the missile buildup in Cuba. Stevenson did not deny this point but said the article contained inaccuracies. Today, a letter from President Kennedy to Stevenson was reported, in which JFK said he has "the fullest confidence" in Stevenson. (NEA Telephoto)

Fruit Nut Wreaths Make Sweet Gifts

Always at Christmas homemade gifts of candies and cookies and cakes take on a special character. They are a very personal expression of friendship and good will. Attractively packaged and brightly decorated, they are about the most genuine way of saying "Merry Christmas to your house from ours."

We think these fruit nut wreaths are delightful to look at and really wonderful to eat. They express Christmas particularly well, with their glistening white frosting, coconut leaves and red candy berries.

FRUIT NUT WREATHS (Makes 31/2 dezen) 1 cup butter or margarine, soft 1/2 cup firmly packed brown

sugar

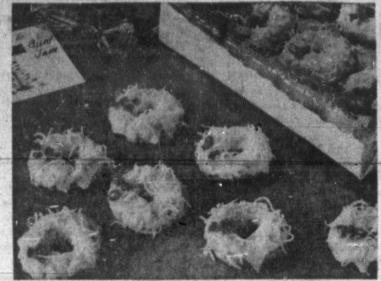

1 egg 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour 1/2 taspoon baking powder 1 cup rolled oats (quick or old fashioned, uncooked) 1/4 cup finely-chopped nut-meats 1/4 cup finely-chapped red and green candied cherries Thin confectioners' sugar

'UGGGGH!' - This is the reaction of Debbie Myers as she holds a tarantula in Salinas, Calif. She discovered the multilegged critter, whose bite is painful, crawling across the family's front lawn. Her father bottled it in an old fish bowl. The spider caused a bit of excitement because the species is foreign to this area.

the luxurious coat shapings of the season features elegant dawn pastel mink skins worked in diagonal lines to a contoured hemline.

REALLY COMPACT-The new model jaguars at Chicago's Lincoln Park Zoo are pint-sized. The youngest zoo babies are being weighed in by zoologist, Rick Tidreic. The South American jungle cats are the eighth and ninth offspring since January, 1961, of Tupi and her mate Yaqui. Already they seem to have developed a baleful glare.

JUST A LITTLE SHAVER - Two-year-old Keith Drake seems a bit awed with the lather he's in after he tried imitating his father one morning in their Odessa, Tex., home. He may not stand as tall as Dad, but he shows signs of chinning up to his height some day.

TONG TIED-Art Shea Jr. seems a bit surprised to find that his busy mother can outreach him. The 26-inch tongs have magnetic tips that clamp the target at the other end.

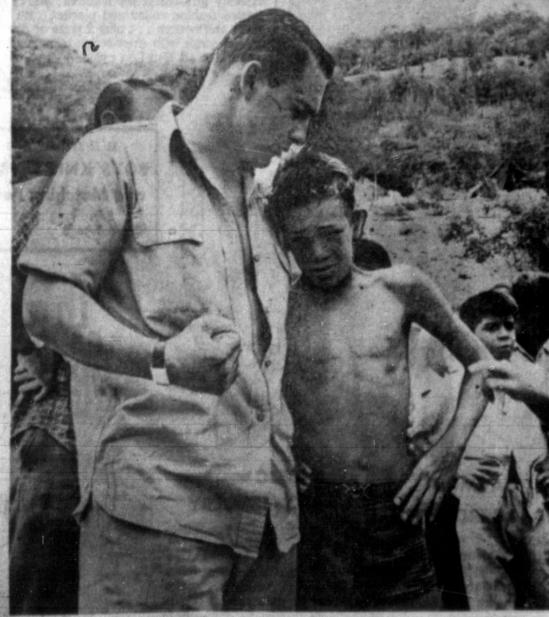

THE ART OF MASK-MAKING—Each year at carnival time, masks, such as the two above, make a startling appearance in West Berlin. The facepieces are carved of wood from the Black Forest and take many hours of labor. The technique is handed down from generation to generation.

PER-SUEDE HIM—Topping the masculine physique in a sporting air is this zippered cardigan designed by Robert Bruce. Done in a clever blend of wool and polyester fiber, it features suede elbow patches and a trimmed pocket done in a contrasting color.

AESSESSES AES

PARTING BUDDIES—Daniel Gadra, a Peace Corps volunteer, gives a pep talk to a sad-faced youngster at a camp in Caracas, Venezuela. The lad wept at the thought of leaving after a month at the Corps camp for underprivileged youths.

ROYAL GEMS—Wearing 40 pounds of pearl buttons apiece, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Tinsley enjoy a stroll on New York's Fifth Avenue. The Tinsleys are the King and Queen of the Pearlies, London Cockneys who parody Edwardian dress. They are in the United States for a visit to San Francisco's 'London Week" celebration, DISPOSABLE MASK—It's no gag! Penny Leigh is modeling Chemetron's new oxygen mask. The oxygen's own pressure inflates a "cuff" that insures a leakproof seal around the wearer's face. The Midwest, with four players, dominates the 1962 all-star aggregation, which reflected the return of the Pacific Coast, led by undefeated Southern California, to the top football power sections of the nation for the first time since before World War II.

The Pacific Coast placed three players on the first team as did the South, with the Southwest getting the other berth.

It marked the first time since 1936 that the Pacific Coast placed three players on the team. The last time the Pacific Coast placed a player on a UPI All-America team was back in 1958 when tackected.

South Places Nine

In the personnel of the first three teams, the South led with a total of nine players, followed by the Pacific Coast and Midwest with eight players each.

The balloting this year bore out the well-known fact that there was a wealth of star quarterbacks with the left-handed passing Baker leading the parade.

The voting also reflected the increasing number of players, outstanding in both offense and defense. For instance, Dave Behrman of Michigan State, the second team center, also received votes for guard and tackle as did Don McKinnon of Dartmouth, the third team center and Roy Manslist of centers receiving honorable mention. There also were a number of players who received votes for both guard and tackle positions. In all cases the players were chosen for the position for which they received the most

This year's all-star eleven features a heavy, hard-charging line which averages 220 pounds in weight and six feet three inches in height and a swift, shifty backfield that averages 190 pounds and six feet and a half inch.

Dunaway, at 260 pounds, is the heaviest of the linemen while the two ends, Richter and Bedsole, each stand 6 feet, 5 inches. Treadwell at 194 is the only lineman under 200 pounds.

the backs while Saimes is the lightest at 186. Baker, the southpaw passing wizard, is the tallest at six three.

Each player selected on the first team had substantial point margins over the players named to the second team. The closest contest - if it could be called close - was for the fourth backfield spot in which Renfro beat out Roger Kochman of Penn State by a margin of 337 points.

In addition to Behrman and Kochman, named to the second

Protests of Hiss on TV Bring Political Reaction By ED DELANEY

It is encouraging to note that a sizable segment of the American public still has some moral fibre and when the occasion demands, will display it. Proof of that is observed in the wave of public indignation that was aroused by the appearance of ex-convict Alger Hiss on a television broadcast which was dubbed the political obituary of former vice president Richard Nixon. On the other hand it is somewhat alarming to note the standcasting network stooped when presenting Hiss on the program. Moreover there appears to be no thought on the part of some, to denounce the producers of the program, but on the contrary to commend them for it.

Le Roy Collins, former governor of Florida but now president of the National Assn. of Broadcasters, is reported to have stated - when referring to the Hiss program: "I stand forcibly behind the broadcaster in this matter." He added that he did not see the program, "but I have not found any people who found anything offensive in the broadcast." He must lead a very sequestered

Apparently the former politician is still playing party politics. Perhaps if he stepped outside the find plenty of people who not only found the broadcast offensive but they regarded it as the pinnacle of effrontery to them. Collins went further astray when he reportedly said that the protest against the program is a "minority viewpoint." That is inexcusable disparagement of the people in these United States. Perhaps the president of the National Assn. of Broadcasters should glance at some of the "letters to the editor" on that subject, which have been carried in many newspapers throughout the country. They are almost universally, vehement protests against the air-most notorious ex-convict, a perjurer and a man generally regarded as a traitor to his country. It is only the "minority" in this country who speak out strongly against such TV presentations?

Collins makes unsuccessful effort to mitigate the criticism that is being heaped on the producers of the program, by saying he found nothing objectionable in the comments of Hiss. The comments had nothing to do with the protests. If he had been presented and said nothing, it would still be an insult to those whom Mr.

Perhaps the most incredible statement of Collins in this attempt to white-wash the producers of the program was that it the broadcaster was within the range of "good journalism." That is indirect libel on the newspapers of this country. It is reasonably certain the editor of this newspaper would not print an article by Alger Hiss having to do with Nixon or any other subject.

A striking similarity is noted in the tenor and title of that program with Hiss, the former communist collaborator, and two broadcasts from communist countries immediately after the Nov. 6, elections. On Nov. 8, Radio Moscow said the American voters rejected "former vice president Nixon who made anti-communism the basic issue of his campaign. He called for intervention against Cuba and asked for new repressions against Communists."

Prague's former New York correspondent, Ludvik Cermak said on Radio Prague, Nov. 7: "in the California elections the Republicans' defeat will substantially weaken the influence of that area's rightist groups. At the same time it means definite burial of the political ambitions of former vice president Nixon."

It is singular to say the least that both those Red radio stations reflected or rather projected much of the same tenor as was observed in the program with
